

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

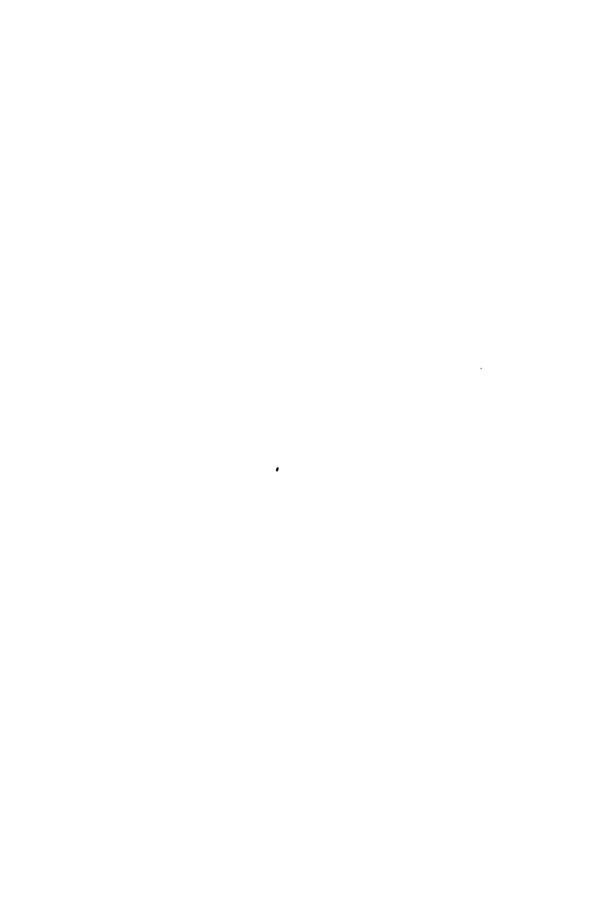

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

		·

		·
	·
٠		•

GLOSSARY;

OR.

COLLECTION OF WORDS, PHRASES, NAMES, AND ALLUSIONS TO CUSTOMS, PROVERBS, ETC.,

WHICH HAVE BEEN THOUGHT TO REQUIRE ILLUSTRATION,

IN

THE WORKS OF ENGLISH AUTHORS.

PARTICULARLY

SHAKESPEARE AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES.

BY

ROBERT NARES, A.M., F.R.S., F.A.S., archdeacon of stafford, &c.

---- "cadentque
Oum nunc sunt in honore vocabula."—Hor.

A NEW EDITION.

WITH CONSIDERABLE ADDITIONS BOTH OF WORDS AND EXAMPLES,

RY

JAMES O. HALLIWELL, Esq., F.R.S., &c.

AND
THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., F.S.A., &c.

VOL. I. A-J.

LONDON:

JOHN RUSSELL SMITH, 36, SOHO SQUARE;

MDCCCLIX.

10 K 19.

PREFACE OF THE EDITORS.

ROBERT NARES, the author of the following Glossary, was during his whole life an active man of letters, though the great mass of his labours have not left any very permanent mark on the literature of his day. He was born at York on the 9th of June, 1753, and was the son of Dr. James Nares, the celebrated composer and teacher of music, and organist to George II and George III. The Doctor's brother, and the uncle of Robert Nares, was sir George Nares, who sat during fifteen years on the bench of Common Pleas. Robert Nares received his first education in Westminster School, where, in 1767, at the early age of fourteen, he was at the head of his election as king's scholar. In 1771, he was elected to a studentship of Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1775, and his master's degree in 1778, and entered holy orders. From 1779 to 1783, he held the situation of tutor to the two Wynns (sir Watkin and Charles Williams), residing with them at Wynnstay, and during the season in London. During this period he wrote prologues, epilogues, and light pieces, for the private dramatic fêtes at Wynnstay, as well as a considerable number of essays on various subjects for periodicals. In 1782, Christ Church presented him with the small living of Easton Mawdit in Northamptonshire, and soon afterwards he received that of Doddington from the lord Chancellor. In 1784, Nares published his first philological work, the 'Elements of Orthoëpy.' same year he married Elizabeth Bayley, the youngest daughter of Thomas Bayley, of Chelmsford, who died in child-bed in 1785. He resumed his connection with the Wynns from 1786 to 1788, while his pupils were at Westminster School, and he acted as assistant-preacher at Berkeley Chapel. In 1787, he was appointed chaplain to the duke of York, and in the year following he was chosen assistant-preacher to the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn, a post which he held during fifteen years. He had now become the centre of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, by whom he was respected not only as a gentleman and scholar but as a sound divine and sincere Christian, and to whom he was endeared by many social qualities; and he produced a considerable number of political as well as other essays and pamphlets. This literary activity led, in 1793, to his starting that well-known periodical, the 'British Critic,' in conjunction with Beloe. Nares conducted this journal until its forty-second volume, when he resigned it. He was about this time appointed assistantlibrarian in the British Museum, and was subsequently librarian of the manuscript department in that institution during twelve years, in which capacity he edited the third volume of the 'Harleian Catalogue.' In 1794. Nares lost his second wife, a Miss Fleetwood, of London, who also died after the birth of a son, who lived only a few weeks. In 1796, lord Loughborough gave him the living of Dalby in Leicestershire, and in 1798 that of Sharnford; and bishop Cornwallis made him a canon residentiary of Litchfield. Bishop Porteus gave him the small prebend of Islington in St. Paul's; and, in 1800, the bishop of Litchfield made him archdeacon of Stafford, with which his ecclesiastical preferments end. In this year (1800), Nares married the daughter of the Rev. Dr. Smyth, head master of Westminster School, who survived him. In 1805 he resigned his vicarage of Easton Mawdit, and also his situation in the British Museum, and went to reside at the vicarage at Reading, where he lived till 1818. In this year, his desire for a more free enjoyment of London society led him to exchange to Allhallows, London Wall, the duties of which he continued to discharge until within about a month of his death, with an absence usually of two months in the year at Litchfield. In 1822, Nares published his 'Glossary; or Collection of Words, Phrases, Names, and Allusions to Customs, Proverbs, &c., which have been thought to require illustration, in the Works of English Authors, particularly Shakespeare, and his Contemporaries.' This was his last and his most important work, though he still continued to mix actively in literary society, where he pleased by his agreeable and unassuming manners. He was one of the founders of the Royal Society of Literature, and one of its earlier presidents, and he contributed to its transactions. Robert Nares died on the 23d of March, 1829, at the age of seventy-five.

It is to his 'Glossary' that Nares owes chiefly his literary fame. An experience of thirty-six years, during which the class of studies to which it especially belongs has made great advance, has established its reputation as the best and most useful work we possess for explaining and illustrating the obsolete language and the customs and manners of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and it is quite indispensable to the readers of the literature of the Elizabethan period. It is a necessary companion to the dramatic writers. The numerous criticisms on the difficulties of the text of Shakespeare, scattered throughout this work, are characterised by a degree of soberness and good sense, as well as by a profound knowledge of the literature of his age, which are by no means common among the commentators on the great bard. In spite of these recommendations, Nares's Glossary has hitherto only passed through one edition in this country. It was published in an inconvenient form, a large quarto volume, and had become sufficiently rare and expensive to place it beyond the reach of a large proportion of those who now take an interest in the literature of the period which it illustrates and require it as a book of reference. It was, therefore, to supply an absolute want, that the present edition was undertaken. The field in which Nares laboured, though wide in his time, has been considerably enlarged since, and there are few students in the literature of the Elizabethan period who, in using his work, have not been able to add to it words and phrases which had not fallen under his notice, or new and valuable examples illustrative of those which he had given. The editors had made a large collection of such additions, and with this advantage it was thought desirable to give something more than a bare reprint. It is evident that a work like this can never be complete; but it is believed that by these additions Nares's Glossary may be made somewhat more so, and at all events it cannot but be rendered more useful. additional words and examples are distinguished from those in the original text by a + prefixed to them. The principle followed in the selection of these additions has been to give words and phrases from books popular at the time when they were published, which have become now very rare, tending to clear up difficulties in writers of that age who are more generally known or who are better deserving of general attention. From these illustrations, some words and phrases only partially understood before, will now receive new light; while others are given because they are rare and curious, and may explain difficult passages in authors of this period which have not yet been brought into discussion. It is for this reason that some new words, the meaning of which could only be given by conjecture, have been left with no other explanation than that furnished by the passages in which they occur; future researches may fix their meaning more exactly. To these additions, and to a correct reprint of Nares, the editors have almost limited themselves. The errors of his book are comparatively so few, and of so little importance, that it has been thought advisable to interfere as little as possible with his text. A few necessary corrections only, with some slight modifications of what he has written, have been added within brackets [], to keep them distinct from the rest. It remains only to add that a few additional words have been contributed by friends; and among these the editors cannot but acknowledge their obligations to the Rev. Richard Hooper, to whom the public owes so excellent an edition of Chapman's Homer.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

THE compilation of a dictionary has not been improperly compared to the labours of the anvil or the mine; an allusion which Johnson might feelingly recollect, at the close of his mighty work. Even his worthy editor, Todd, must have had much of laborious hammering and digging, before he could send forth his augmented and improved edition. The present Glossary, however, has occasioned no such toil. Its materials were sought and collected entirely for amusement; and the task has been continued and completed, so far as it can be called complete, exactly in the same manner: with perseverance, indeed, through a long series of years, but uniformly at leisure hours, and only in the intervals of more important occupations. It was not till the press had commenced its operations, that any serious labour was bestowed upon it; then, indeed, in revision, correction, and the supplying of palpable deficiencies, it became a task, of which the author is glad at length to have seen the end.

The common reflection, that our admirable Shakespeare is almost overwhelmed by his commentators, and that the notes, however necessary, too often recal us from the text, first suggested this undertaking; the primary object of which was, to enable every reader to enjoy the unencumbered productions of the poet. The specimen of a glossary subjoined to Richard Warner's Letter to Garrick (1768) still further encouraged the attempt; in the prosecution of which, it soon appeared desirable to extend the illustration to all the best authors of that age. Attention being thus fixed upon a given period in the progress of our language, it could not fail to happen that many useful illustrations of its history must be developed in the search.

Early attached to the study of our native language, and, consequently, an admirer of those authors by whom its powers were first displayed and best exemplified, I proved that disposition so long ago as in the year 1784, when I published a book, called, 'Elements of Orthoëpy.' Three divisions of that work were employed in ascertaining the actual pronunciation of the English language, as then correctly spoken; but the fourth contained a miscellaneous view of variations and changes made by time or caprice, in its orthography and uation, some parts of which sufficiently evince an inclination to that if inquiry, which has here been further pursued. I particularly noticed nodes of accentuation employed by early writers, which had since been we disused.

ì

ius prepared, when I began to take notes of words and phrases requiring ation, in Shakespeare, and writers near his time, I was still upon my te ground; and it may easily be supposed that, in reading for that se some writings which otherwise, probably, I might not have read, enjoying an amusement very congenial to my inclinations. The perusal e best authors of those times was, indeed, its own reward, without nee to any other object; but still the contemplation of another purpose to swered by it, was a further motive to encourage perseverance.

had made some progress in my collections, and even in the arrangement em, when occupations came upon me which soon left me no time to y in such amusements. The undertaking, therefore, was of necessity side; and occasional reading, in a desultory manner, with hasty memoms of passages, was all that could, for many years, be made subservient

At length, comparative leisure gave an opportunity for resuming the n. The materials collected were finally arranged; and being thought me competent judges to be such as would be welcome to the public, etermination to give them to the press was formed without reluctance.

will be found, I fear, after all, that the Work has many deficiencies: the mode of its compilation may explain, but cannot entirely excuse. nly defence is, that my attempt was not to collect all that could possibly id, but to preserve and arrange all that I had been able to collect. The r would have been a serious task; the latter, as it was at first, so it always nued to be, an amusement. If what I have collected prove worthy of the e of the public, the public is welcome to it; and should any more saful compiler be able to supply its defects, his full share of the credit by me be readily conceded. Many works I have certainly read, belonging e period here comprehended, but not always with the minute attention would have been necessary for noting every peculiarity. red through all the productions of that time would have been a task er suited to my taste nor compatible with my occupations. fore avoided the title of Dictionary, which seemed to me to imply a more ct collection. Much, however, the volume does contain; and much that I trust, entertain the reader, no less than it has amused the writer.

have carefully abstained from inserting the words and phrases of an reperiod than the reign of Elizabeth, except where the writers of her time affected the phraseology of Chaucer; which affectation, in my opinion, nost the only blemish of the beautiful poems of Spenser. My reason was that to complete the rational view and knowledge of our language, warate Dictionary must be required for the works of Chaucer, Gower, Lydgate, Occleve, and all those writers who can properly be called English; that is, who wrote when the language was no longer Saxon. A Saxon Dictionary of the same form, with all the examples at length, would complete the historical view of our national speech. The British, and its dialects, belong to another family.

Verum hæc ipse equidem, spatiis exclusus iniquis, Prætereo, atque aliis post me memoranda relinquo.

I have neither length of life, nor perseverance in study remaining, to undertake either of those tasks.

Our illustrious countryman, Johnson, has shown us that no Dictionary can be satisfactory without a copious selection of examples, and has given us the most convenient form; his plan and method have, therefore, been followed here, as far as seemed necessary in a work less scientific. The Chaucerian and the Saxon Dictionaries, whenever formed, ought surely to adopt a similar arrangement.

If such a plan should ever be completed, it may then, perhaps, be advisable to throw out from Johnson's Dictionary all the words not actually classical in the language at that time; so as to make it a standard of correct phraseology. Johnson has no small number of words which were completely out of use when he compiled his Dictionary. That number has been greatly augmented by his editor, Todd; with the very laudable design of comprising the whole history of our language, if possible, in that one work. The inconvenience arising from this method is certainly not great; and chiefly affects foreigners, who may sometimes be puzzled to decide what words are actually in use, and what are obsolete. The separation of the Dictionaries, as here suggested, would make all clear; but, perhaps, it is a plan more specious in theory, than likely to be realised in practice.

It may be objected, that, according to this notion, I have not even perfected my own link of the philological chain. This I shall not attempt to deny; but, probably, enough is here done to encourage others to complete the undertaking; enough, too, for immediate use, till something more perfect shall appear. To diversify the work, I have not confined it to words, but have included phrases, proverbial sayings, with allusions to customs, and even to persons, when something of their history seemed necessary to illustrate my authors. I have also made it occasionally a vehicle for critical observations on the text of our general favorite, Shakespeare; especially in such passages as have been most disputed by his commentators. I have thus endeavoured to make it not merely a book of reference, but also an occasional amusement for literary leisure. The authors most studiously illustrated are those who are most likely to attract the general reader; and if others are occasionally quoted, t is chiefly for the sake of the light they throw upon those of primary consideration.

It will readily be supposed that, in compiling this Glossary, I have taken advantage of all those indexes which have lately been subjoined to the editions of our early authors; the assistance of which has rendered this volume much more copious than otherwise it could have been made, in the mode of collection above described. Prior Dictionaries have been consulted to a great extent. and in the improved edition of Johnson, by my friend Todd, I have often found myself anticipated, where I thought I had made a discovery. Jamieson's admirable Dictionary of the Scottish language, has also been of great use: many of the words which are disused in England being completely preserved in that dialect, which is a legitimate child of the same Saxon parent. To etymology I have not paid anxious attention, except where it seemed clear and undeniable: well knowing the extreme fallaciousness of that science when founded on mere similarity of sound. But I have particularly avoided deriving common English words from languages of which the people who employed them must have been entirely ignorant: a method which some etymologists have pursued to a very ridiculous extent.

Collections of provincial dialects would often have been extremely useful; many words esteemed peculiar to certain counties, being merely remnants of the language formerly in general use. But these collections are unfortunately few and scanty; nor can I name any one in which I have found so much use, as in what Mr. Wilbraham very modestly terms "an attempt towards a Glossary of words used in Cheshire." Had I been earlier acquainted with this performance I should doubtless have derived much more advantage from it. County histories, which have long received the most extensive encouragement, should always contain a careful compilation of this kind, from certain and correct authorities: and from these, digested together, the history of our language might ultimately receive important illustration. I apprehend, however, that little has hitherto been done towards this design. The Cornish words collected by the diligence of Mr. Polwhele, belong chiefly to a still more ancient dialect.

Having said thus much of the origin and mode of execution of this work, I willingly leave the public to decide upon its value. This is a point which can seldom be determined by an author, or his friends; the former being disqualified by partiality to the work, and the latter to the workman. My expectation is, that it will be deemed more amusing than useful, more various than profound; a decision which, however harshly expressed, I shall never make an attempt to controvert.

A GLOSSARY

A.

A. This letter prefixed to a participle, to denote an action still continued, is certainly not at all obsolete, To go a fishing, a begging, a walking, &c., are expressions as current still, in familiar and colloquial use, as they ever were: and though it is difficult to define the force of a, in such phrases, every one by use comprehends it. It is something like a preposition, yet it is not exactly either at, to, in, or anything The force seems to be its own. But it is no longer so prefixed to nouns; and these instances are properly obsolete language. Thus, in Mr. Todd's examples,

He will knap the spears a pieces with his teeth.

More, Antid. ag. Atheirm.

There it seems to have the force of to.

As prefixed in composition, without changing the sense of the word, it was formerly more common than it now is. Hence we find in Shakespeare,

I gin to be a weary of the sun. Macheth. [It is hardly, perhaps, necessary to remark that a is often used in popular language for have, for on, and sometimes for I.]

A, the Article. Sometimes repeated with adjectives, the substantive having gone before, and being understood.

A goodly portly man i'faith, and a corpulent. Hen. IV.

Wast death in t you desire for Amalchides?

A sudden, and a subtle. Witch, by Middleton.

See more instances in Mr. Steevens's note on Macbeth, act iii, sc. 5.

2. Prefixed to numeral adjectives.

There's not a one of them, but in his house I keep a servant feed.

Chaucer has, "a ten or a twelve."

Squiers T., 10,697.
Having with her about a threescore horsemen.
Pembr. Arc., 1623, p. 181.
'Tis now a nineteen years agone at least.
B. Jon., Case is Alt., i, 5.

So a near.

All that comes a near him,
He thinks are come on purpose to betray him.
B. f. Fl., Noble Gent., act ii.
Sometimes it means on.

The world runs a wheels.

B. Jun., Vis. of D.

For on wheels.

t per se, or A per se A. That is, a by itself. A form which appears to have been applied, in spelling, to every letter which formed a separate syllable. Thus a clown, in Dr. Faustus, spelling to himself, says,

A per se a; t, h, e, the; o per se o, &c. Anc. Dr., i, p. 39.

The expression and per se, and, to signify the contraction &, substituted for that conjunction, is not yet forgotten in the nursery. The earliest trace of A per se is in Chaucer, who calls Cresseide "the floure and a per se of Troie and Grece;" where it is meant to imply pre-eminent excellence.

So also in the following passage:

Beholde me, Baldwine, A per se of my age,
Lord Richard Nevill, earle by marriage,
Of Warwick.

But we have also several other letters per se, thus:

And singing mourne Eliza's funerall,
The B perse of all that ere hath beene.

H. Petowe, in Restituta, iii, p. 26.

Also, I per se:
Therefore leave off your loving plea,
And let your I, be I per se. Wit's Recr., 1663, Q. 7, b.
Decker uses O per se O, for a cryer, in the titles to two of his pamphlets:

Oper se O, or a new crier of lanterne and candle-lights. 1612, 4to; and Villanies discovered by lantern and candle-light, and the help of a new crier, called Oper se O. 1616, 4to. Thus Shakespeare has even used a man per se, in evident allusion to the same form :

They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone. Tro. & Cress., i, 2. ABACK. Compound of back. Back-

They drew aback, as half with shame confound.

Spens. Shep. Kal., June, 63.

†ABADE. The past tense of to abide.

Pump bullies, carpenters, quicke stop the leake.
Once heave the lead againe, and sound abaffe,
A shafnet lesse, seven all.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To ABAND, v. Contracted from abandon, in the same sense.

On, in the same sense.

And Vortigern enforst the kingdom to aband.

Spens. F. Q., II, x, 65.

ABASHMENT. The state of being abashed.

Which manner of abaskment became her not yll.

Skellon, p. 38.

To ABASTARDIZE. To render illegitimate, or base.

mate, or base.

Being ourselves

Corrupted and abastardised thus,
Thinke all lookes ill, that doth not looke like us.

Daniel, Queen's drc. sub.

To ABATE. To cast down, or deject the mind.

Till at length
Your ignorance deliver you, as most Abated captives, to some nation,
That won you without blows. Coriol., iii, 8. To contract or cut short. To contract or ear sales...
O weary night, O long and tedious night,

Abate thy hours; shine comforts from the East.

Mids. N. Dr., iii, 2. Used also, as Mr. Todd shows, by Drvden.

†ABBATESS. A not unusual form for abbess, the principal of an abbey of s. See Whiting, 1638.

and at length became abbatesse there.

Holiushed's Chron., 1577.

To ABEAR. To behave or demean one's

So did the Facric knight himself abcare. Sp., F. Q., V, xii, 19. ABEARING, or ABERING, also Abearance, joined with the epithet good. A regular law phrase for the proper and peaceful carriage of a loyal subject. So that when men were bound over to answer for their conduct. they were said to be bound, to be of good abearing.

And likewise to be bound, by the vertue of that,
To be of good abering to Gib, her great cat.

Gamm. Guet., O. P., ii, 74.

Or they were obliged to find sureties for their good abearing.

Herbert, Hist. of Hen. VIII. See the Law Dictionaries under good abearing.

ABHOMINABLE for ABOMINABLE. A pedantic affectation of more correct speaking, founded upon a false notion of the etymology; supposing it to be from ab homine, instead of abominor, which is the true derivation. Shakespeare has ridiculed this affectation in the character of the pedant Holofernes.

This is abhominable which he [Don Armado] would call abominable.

Love's L. L., v. 1. The error, however, was not uncommon.

And then I will bring in Abkominable Lyving Hym to beguile.

Lusty Juv. Or. of Dr., i, p. 138. Abhominable Lyving being a personage in that allegorical drama.

T. Aye, for thy love I'll sink; sye, for thee.

M. So thou wilt, I warrant, in thine eddominable sins.

Untrusting of Humorous Poet, iii, 140.

Decker probably thought, like Holofernes, that this was the true

To ABHOR, v. a. To protest against, or reject solemnly; an old term of canon law, equivalent to detestor.

Therefore, I say again I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you as my judge. Hen. FIII, ii, 4. Taken from Holinshed: And therefore openly protested that she did utterly abhor, refuse, and forsake such a judge. Abhore was once common See Spens., F. Q., I, vi, 4. Supported, abided. The +ABIDDEN. part. of abide.

In times past verily we endured hard travaile and most irkesome to be abidden, even through snowes and the pinching cold of bitter frosts. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

ABJECT, n. s. A base, contemptible, or degraded person.

Yea, the very abjects came together against me unawares.

I deemed it better so to die,

Than at my focusen's feet an abject lie.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 30.

† adj. To be rejected. "I will not use an abject word," i. e., a word deserving of rejection.

Chapman, Hom. Il., ii, 317. +ABILLIAMENTS. A common form, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, for habiliments, and applied generally to armour and warlike stores.

And now the temples of Janus being shut, warlike abilliaments grew rusty, and Bellona auton masking-attire.

Wilson, Hist. of James 1.

To ABLE, had two distinct senses.

1. To make able, or to give power for any purpose.

And hife by this [Christ's] death abled, shall controll Death, whom thy death alew. Donne's Divine Poems, 6th.
2. To warrant, or answer for.

None does offend, none; I say none; I'll able 'em Lear, iv, 6.

Admitted! aye, into her heart, I'll able it.

Widow's Tears, O. P., vi, 164.

Widow's Tears, O. P., vi, 164.
Also in the same play:
You might sit and sigh first till your heart-strings broke, I'll able it.
Constable, I'll able him; if he do come to be a justice afterward, let him thank the keeper.
Changeling, Anc. Dr., iv, 240.
To sell away all the powder in the kingdom,
To prevent blowing up. That's safe, ile able it.
Middl. Game at Chesse, D. ii, b, act ii.

This latter sense is the most remarkable.

To ABODE. To forebode, to prognosticate, to bode.

This tempest Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on't.

Hen Hen. FIII, i, 1. The sudden breach on't.

Hen.
The night-owl cry'd, aboding luckless time. 8 Hm. PI, v, 6.

ABODEMENT. Omen, prognostic. Abode is sometimes used as a noun in the same sense.]

Tush, man, abodements must not now affright us.

8 Hen. VI, iv, 7.

+ABOMINOUS, adj. Abominable. Yet here's not all, I cannot half untrusse

Etc. it's so abominous.

Cleaveland, Character of a London Diurnall, 1647. +ABOTSERED. An old term in painting, which is explained in the following extract.

Ing extract.

These colours are likewise used to give the lusters and shinings of sattens and silkes, being altered from their naturall colours, when they are wrought upon the abotered or grostly layed colours, which custome hath so prevailed with many, that respecting onely vaine shewes, without any regard of the precepts of arte, they use it not onely in the above named appartels, but also in drapery of contrary stuffes, which is no sort require the luster of silkes.

Lonatinu on Painting, by Haydock, 1598.

ROVE. The physics above the vest

The phrase above the rest was not unfrequently used in the sense of especially, in particular.

one might above the rest (her good fortune having made her bold) she tarrying a little longer than her houre.

Westward for Smells, 1620.

ABOUT. Very singularly used, in the phrase about, my brains, signifying, brains, go to work."

Fie upon't! foh!

About, my brains! Haml., ii, ad fin. Which is explained by a similar passage in Heywood:

My brain, about again! for thou hast found New projects now to work on. Iron Age Iron Age, 1682.

†ABOUT. Out of the way. The word is still used in this sense in trivial language.

I have bettered my ground, as you say, and quite rid me of my wandering guests, who will rather walk seven mile about, than come where they shall be forced to work one half hour.

Metamorphosis of Ajaz, 1596.

ABRAHAM-MEN, or TOM OF BED-LAM'S MEN, or BEDLAM BEG-GARS. A set of vagabonds, who wandered about the country, soon after the dissolution of the religious houses: the provision for the poor in those places being cut off, and no other substituted.

And these, what name or title e'er they bear Jarkman, or Patrico, Cranke, or Clapper-dudgeon, Frater, or Abramman; I speak to all That stand in fair election for the title B. Fl., Begg. Bush, ii, 1. Of king of beggars. See note on O. Pl., ii, 4: and Lear.

Hence probably the phrase of shamming Abraham, still extant among sailors. See Roderick Random.

+ABRAHAM'S-EYE. A magical charm to render a thief blind, if he will not confess. This word occurs in a manuscript on magic of the sixteenth century.

ABRAID, v. a. To awaken. To rouse one's self. Sax.

But, when as I did out of sleepe abray, I found her not where I her left whileare Spens., F. Q., IV, vi, 38.

Used also actively:

For feare lest her unwares she should abrayd.

Spens. F. Q., III, i, 61.

But from his study he at last abray'd,

Call'd by the hermit old, who to him said.

Pairf. T., xiii, 50. Perhaps cor-ABRAM-COLOURED. rupted from auburn. Over all

A goodly, long, thick, Abraham-colour'd beard. Blurt Master Constable. See note on Mer. W., i, 4, and Cor., ii, 3; in which latter place the folio reads Abram for auburn. "Our heads are some brown, some black some auburn," &c. See Abron, infra. †ABRICOT. An apricot. The common form of the word in the old writers.

ABRIDGEMENT A dramatic performance; probably from the prevalence of the historical drama, in which the events of years were so abridged as to be brought within the compass of a play.

Say what abridgement have you for this evening. Look where my abridgement comes.

In this place, however, the sense is disputable. But this interpretation is strengthened by a subsequent passage, in which Hamlet calls the players "the abstract, and brief chronicles of the time;" (1015, b,) abridgement, however, is not repeated there, as is erroneously said in a note of Mr. Steevens on the first passage.

ABRON. For auburn.

ON. FOR BUULLI.

A lustic courtier, whose curled head
With abrow locks was fairly furnished.

Hall. Sat., B. iii, 8. 5.

+ABSCESSION. An abscess. A form in use among the physicians of the Shakesperian age.

SDAKESPETHIN age.

If truly it doth turne into abscessions, and that it cannot be that the gathering together and eruption of the matter should be letted, it shall be lawfull to use medicines which can both matter, open, and cleanse the ulcer.

#ABSINTH. Wormwood.

TABSINTH. WORTHWOOD.

Seeing my injurious fortune,
Hath so remov'd me from my greatest blisse,
In teares I alwaies will delighted be,
And greeve to laugh: about and poyson be my sustenance. The Passenger of Bensemuto, 1612.

†ABSTERGIFIE. To cleanse.

ABSTERGIFIE. 10 Cleanse.

Specially, when wee would abstergifie, and that the huske remaine behind in the boyling of it; but though it refrigerates and dissecates without the huske, yet be it as it will, I finde it no wayes friendly to my selfe.

The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1613.

†ABSTERSIVE. Cleansing. "Abster-sive, cleansing, or wiping away." Cotarane.

+To ABSUME. To take from; to destroy. From the Lat. absumo.

He then (for hope of flight was quite expell'd)
Belcht from his throat (most strange to be beheld)
Huge smothering smoak, which fill'd the rooms with

And from their eyes all light did quite absume. Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

+ABURNE. For auburn.

His head short curld: his beard an aburns browne, Tho. Heywood, Great Britaines Troy, 1609.

The river Humber. ABUS.

> Foreby the river that whylome was hight Foreby the river that whylome was hight The ancien Men, where with courage stout He them defeated in victorious fight, And chas'd so flercely, after fearful flight, That first their chieftain, for his safeties sake (Their chieftain Hember named was aright), Unto the mighty streame him to betake, Where he an end of batteill and of life did make. Spens., F. Q., II, x, 16.

Hence Drayton:

Hence Dray was.

For my princely name,

From Humber king of Huns, as anciently it came.

Polyolb., 28, p. 1206.

But he does not mention the more ancient name.

ABY, v. For abide; to stand to, or support the consequences. | This explanation is not correct; aby is derived from the A.-S. abicaan, and signifies to pay for, to atone for.]

For if thou dost intend Never so little shew of love to her, Never so little suc.
Thou shalt aby it.
But he that kill'd him shall abuy therefore.

Harringt., driost., svi, 54.

Generally used with dear, or dearly. Lest to thy peril thou aby it dear. See Todd. O. Pl., iii, 26.

ABYSM. Abyss. From the old French abysme.

What see'st thou else In the dark back-ward and abyam of time.

And brutish ignorance, yerept of late
Out of drad darkness of the deep abysm.

Sp., Tears of Muses, 188.

ACADEMY. This word anciently had the accent on the first syllable.

Being one of note before he was a man, Is still remember'd in that Academy.

B. f. Fl., Cust. of Country, ii, 1.
The fiend has much to do that keeps a school, The fiend has much to do that are or or is the father of a family; Or governs but a country Academy.

Ben. Jon., Sad. Shop., iii, 1.

has

Dr. Johnson, in his Dictionary, has quoted Love's Labour Lost for this accentuation, but the editions now have academe in that place.

Love's L. L., i, 1.

ACATER.

CATER. A caterer; a purveyor.

Go bear them in to Much
Th' acater, let him thank her. B. Jon., Sed. Skep., ii, 6.
He is my wardrobe man, my acater, cook,
Butler, and steward.

Bes. Jon., Des. an Ass., i. 8. This is also read cater, which word is not without authority. You dainty wits? two of you to a cater, To cheat him of a dinner. B. & Fl., Mad. Lov., ii, 4. ACATES. Often contracted to cates.

Provision, food, delicacies. I, and all choice that plenty can send in; Bread, wine, acates, fowl, feather, fish, or fin. B. Jon., Sad. Shop., i, 3. A sordid rascal, one that never made Good meal but in his sleep, sells the acates are sent him, Fish, fowl, and venison.

B. Jon., Steple of Nose, ii, 1. In the above passage I have transposed the word but, which evidently restores the true sense. The editions have Never made

Good meal in his sleep, but sells, &c.
Not to make a good meal in his sleep would certainly be no sign of avarice. since such meals cost nothing; but the consequence of starving by day may be dreaming of good meats at night.

The Mantuan, at his charges, him allow'th All fine acates that that same country bred.

Harr., Ariost., xliii, 139.

+ To ACCEND. To light up.
While the dark world the sun's bright beams accend,
The shadow on the body doth attend.
Owen's Epigrams, by Harrey, 1677.

†ACCEPTATION. Acceptance.
Sir, could my power produce forth anything
Worthy your acceptation, or my service,
I would with hazard of my life performe it.

Marmyon's Fine Companion, 1633.
That your lordships acceptation may shew how much you favour the noble name and nature of the poet and book. Sir J. Harington's Epigrams, 1633.
†ACCEPTIVE, adj. Accepted, or agreed

But myself will use acceptive darts,
And arm against him.

Chapman, R., vii, 84. ACCESS. Accented on the first sylla-

> I did repel his letters, and deny'd Heml. ii. 1. His access to me.

+An attack of a fever.

And in this sitenesse symmen fallen down to grounde as thou; thei hadden the fallyng yvele, and liggen y-swollen, and this accesse durith eitherwhiles ij. daies or iij.

†ACCISE. Excise.

Twere cheap living here, were it not for the mon-strous sccies; which are impos'd upon all sorts of commodities, both for belly and back; for the retailer commodities, both for belly and back; for the retailer payes the states almost the one moity as much as he payed for the commodity at first, nor doth any nurmur at it, because it goes not to any favourit, or private parse, but to preserve them from the Spaniard.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.
Lastly, who would have imagined that the accise would have taken footing heer? a word I remember would have taken footing heer? a word I remember in the last Parliament save one, so odious, that when Sir D. Carleton, then Secretary of State, did but name it in the House of Commons, hee was like to be sent to the Tower; although hee nam'd it to no ill sense but to shew what advantage of happines the peeple of England had o're other nations, having neither the gabells of Italy, the tallies of France, or the accise of Holland laid upon them.

[18. College of Holland laid upon them.]

ACCITE, v. To call, or summon.

Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state. 2 Hen. IF, v, 2.
To ACCLOY, v. To choke, or fill up. The mouldy moss which thee accloyeth.

Spens., Shep. Kal., Feb., 135.

Hence CLOY. Hence CLOY.

4 Phlegm beeing by nature sharp, and of a brinish quality, is the offspring of all diseases which consist of a fixaile humor; and according to the diversity of places whither this brackish humor doth insinuate itself, the body is teend and accloid with divers and manifold maladies.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

ACCOIL. To be in a coil, or bustle

To ACCOIL. of business.

About the cauldron many cookes accords
With hooks and ladles. Spens., F. Q. II., ix, 30.
ACCOMBRE, or ACCOMBER, v. To encumber, perplex, or destroy.

Happiye there may be five less in the same nombre; For their sakes I trust thu wilt not the rest accombre O. Pl., i, 20. See also 92.

ACCOMMODATE, v. This word it was fashionable in Shakespeare's time to introduce, properly or improperly, on all occasions. Ben Jonson calls it one of "the perfumed terms of the time."-Discoveries. The indefinite use of it is well ridiculed by Bardolph's vain attempt to define it: monodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be,—accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

2 Hen. IV, iii, 2.
See also Ben. Jons. Poetast., iii, 4, and Every Man, &c., i, 5, where he calls it one of the words of action : Hostess, accommodats us with another bedstaff— The woman does not understand the words of action

B. Jon., Ev. M. in H., i, 5.
Will you present and accommodate it to the gentleman.

Id., Poetaster, iii, 4.

To ACCORAGE, v. To encourage. But that same froward twaine would accorage, And of her plenty adde unto their need.

Spens., F. O., II. ii. 38. +ACCORDING. In accordance: snit-

They fayrie chose, as fitst for recreation,
The tyme accordings, for it was Regation.

The News Metamorphosis, 1600. They favrie chose, as fitst for recreation

+To ACCOAST, or ACCOST, v. To ap-"Aborder. To approach, accoast, abboord." Cotarave.

†ACCOSTABLE. Approachable, easy of access.

The French are a free and debonnaire accetable pee-ple, both men and women. Howelf's Fam. Letts., 1650. To ACCOY, v. To dishearten or subdue.

ACCOY, v. To dishearten or suddue.
Then is your careless courage accoyd,
Your careful herds with cold be annoyd.

Spens., Shep. Kal., Feb., 47.
†What? thinkest thou my jolly peacocks trayne
Shall be accy'd and brooke so foule a stayne?

Draylon's Shepherd's Garland, 1593.
†Thou foolish swaine that thus art overjoyed,
How soon may heere thy courage be accoyed?
If he be one come new fro western coast,
Small cause hath he, or thou for him, to boast.

Peele's Eglogue, 1589.

ACCREW, v. To increase. Do you not feel your torments to accrese?

Spens., Ruines of Rome, 207.

To accrue, now demands to after it. or from.

†ACCRUMENT, s. Increase.

For conferring, I doe passe it over, as that wherto I seldome have beene beholden, yet much affecting it, and knowing that it brings a great accrument unto wisedome and learning. Optick Gl. of Hum., 1639.

† ACCUSEMENT. An accusation.

Whiche neverthelesse by untrue suggestions and forged accusements, * * were condemued, &c. Holinshed's Chronicles, 1577.

†ACCUSTOM, v. To fashion; to form in manners.

In accustome or bringe one up in maner, je morigine. He is well accustumed, il est bien moriginé. Palagrave. CCUSTOMABLY. By custom; +ACCUSTOMABLY.

usually; in constant practice. Whose sweares deceiffully, abuseth Christian fidelity.
Whose sweares idlely, abuseth the credit of a faithfull oath. Whose sweares accustomably. God will plugue him. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†ACE. To bate an ace, to hesitate, or show reluctance in doing anything. But as most whores are vicious in their fames, But as most whores are recovered in their annex, 80 many of them have most vertuous names, Though bad they be, they will not bate an ace To be cald Prudence, Temp'rance, Faith, or Grace.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. ß

+ACHATE. The agate.

These, these are they, if we consider well,
That suphirs and the diamonds doe excell,
The pearle, the em'rauld, and the turkesse bleu,
The sanguine corrall, ambers golden hiew,
The christall, jacinth, ackate, ruby red,
The carbuncle, squar'd, cut, and pollished.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

ACHES. The plural of ach; was undoubtedly a dissyllable, pronounced aitches, and continued to be so used to the time of Butler and Swift, which last had it in his Shower in London, as first printed.

Can by their pains and ack-es find All turns and changes of the wind. Hudibr., III, ii, 407.

The examples are too numerous to be quoted. Mr. Kemble was therefore certainly right in his dispute with the public on this word; but whether a public performer may not be too pedantically right, in some cases, is another question. Yet ach was pronounced ake, as now; for proof of which see AJAX.

ACOP. See Cop.

†ACQUAINTANCE. The phrase to be of acquaintance was used commonly in the sense of to be intimate.

Ill the Bellie Of to de the some after he landed and came on the shoare; for he and I have beene of very great acquaintance alwaics from our childhood.

Terence in English, 1614.

+To ACQUISE. To acquire.
Late to go to rest, and erly for to ryse

Honour and goodes dayly to acquyse.

Entertude of Acoryse, n.d.

+ACQUISITITIOUS, adj. Acquired:

not innate.

It was a hard question, whether his wisdom and knowledge exceeded his choler and fear; certainly the last couple drew him with most violence, because they were not acquisititious, but natural.

Wilson's History of King James I.

†To ACQUIT, or ACQUITE. To re-quite.

His harte all vowed t' exploits magnificent

Doth none but workes of rarest price endite,

Midst foes (as champion of the faith) he ment

Midst foes (as champion of the faith) he ment
That palme or cypress should his paines acquite.

Carew's Tasso.

†ACROOK. On the decline.

The flies credit standth acrooke even as far.

Heywood's Spider & Plie, 1558.

ACROSS. Used as a kind of exclamation when a sally of wit miscarried. An allusion to jousting. See BREAK-ACROSS.

I would you
Had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy; and
That, at my bidding, you could so stand up.
King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,
And ask'd thee mercy for't.
Lafen. Good faith, across!

All's Well, ii, 1.

ACTON. Hoqueton or Auqueton, Fr. A kind of vest or jacket worn with armour. From which, by some intermediate steps, the word jacket is derived.

ACT

His acton it was all of black,
His hewberke, and his sheelde,
Ne noe man wist whence he did come,
Ne noe man knewe where he did gone,
When they came from the feelde.

Percy Rel., i, p. 53. See Glossary.

It is there defined, "a kind of armour, made of taffaty or leather, quilted, etc. worn under the habergeon, to save the body from bruises." But if it was worn under the coat of mail, how could its colour appear? Roquefort defines it, "Espece de chemisette courte; cotte d'armes, espece de tunique." He adds, that in Languedoc it was called jacouti, and that Borel says, thence comes jacquette, a child's dress. Glossaire de la Langue Romane.

ACTRESSES. It is well known that there were none in the English theatres till after the Restoration.

Coryat says, in his account of Venice, Here I observed certaine things that I never saw before. For I saw women acte, a thing that I never saw before, though I have heard that it hath been sometimes used in London; and they performed it with as good grace, action, and gesture, and whatsoever convenient for a player, as ever I saw any masculine actor.

Crudities, vol. ii, p. 16, repr.

A prologue and epilogue, spoken about June, 1660, turns particularly on this subject. These lines are a part of the former:

I come unknown to any of the rest, To tell you news, I saw the lady drest; The woman playes to day, mistake me not, No man in gown, or page in petty-coat's, A woman to my knowledge, yet I can't, (If I should dye) make affidavit on't.

Some French women, however, acted at the Black Friars in 1629.

Histriomast, p. 315. The circumstance may also be traced from passages in the old dramatists. In the epilogue to "As you like it," which was spoken by Rosalind, the player says, "If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defy'd not."

Gayton censures foreign theatres for permitting women to act. "The permission of women personally to act, doth very much enervate the auditory, and teacheth lust, while they would but feigne it."

Fest. Notes, p. 272. They did, however, appear in the theatres of antiquity (See Cic. de Offic., i. 31; Plat. de Rep., p. 436. Fic.; Hor. Sat., II, iii, 60); but Shakespeare. who, like his contemporaries, attributed to all times the customs of his own, certainly thought of nothing more, when he gave these words to Cleopatra:

The quick comedians

Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
1' the posture of a whore.

Hart, Clun, and Burt played female parts when boys. See Historia Histrion., O. Pl., xii, 340, &c. James Duport, who translated the Psalms, &c., was much offended at the scandal of introducing actresses, and wrote some indignant Alcaics on the subject, which he entitled "In Roscias nostras, seu Histriones fœminas."

They begin:

Nec femininum nomen hypocrits,
Nec histrio, si grammaticse fides,
Et Prisciano, nempe solos
Esse viros decet histriones.
Hos tantum habebant pristina secula,
Dum castitas salva, atque modestia, &c. He concludes by giving a very singular piece of advice to these ladies:

Sin dramatis pars esse pergas,
Non nisi nuddr agas spórusrov.

Muse subsectue, p. 15. To make active. +To ACTUATE, v.

Let me rejoyce in sprightly sack, that can Create a brain even in an empty pan. Canary! it's thou that dost inspire, And actuate the soul with heavenly fire. Witts Recreations, 1654.

ACTURE. Apparently, for action.

All my offences that abroad you see

Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:

Love made them not; with acture [i. s. in action] they

Where neither party is nor true nor kind.

Sk., Lover's Compl. Suppl., i, 751. Nor is for or in the last line.

ADAMANT. The magnet; a very common usage in old authors.

As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant. Tro. & Tro. & Cr., iii, 2. As true to thee m steel to adam Green's Tu. Q., O. Pl., vii, 107.

Dr. Johnson has remarked this sense, and given other examples. This is decisive:

As iron, touch't by the adament's effect,
To the north pole doth ever point direct. Syls. Du B., p. 64.
The adament and beauty we discover
To be alike; for beauty draws a lover,
The adament his iron.

Brown, Brit. Past., Song 1.

The mutual repulsion of two magnets. which takes place in some situations, is alluded to here:

Away
We'll be as differing as two adamants;
The one shall shun the other. White Devil, O. Pl., vi, $15. Lyly, in a foolish sentence, founded on an error, has joined adamant in the sense of magnet, with the mention of a diamond. Euph., L. 2, b, and Euph., Eng. R. I, b.

Adamant is thus used so lately as in the English translation of Galland's Arabian Nights; and, what is more extraordinary, it stands unaltered in Dr. J. Scott's corrected edition (1810). In the story of the third Calendar we

To-morrow about noon we shall be near the black mountain, or mine of adamant, which at this very minute draws all your fleet towards it, by virtue of the iron in your ships; and when we approach within a certain distance, the attraction of the adamant will have such force, that all the nails will be drawn out of the sides and bottoms of the ships, and fasten to the mountain, so that your vessels will fall to pieces and sink.—Vol. i, p. 254.

As the word is now not current in this senses it ought to have hear this sense, it ought to have been changed to loadstone.

+ADAMANTINE, adj. Intensely hard; impossible to be broken.

Quoth he, My faith, as adamantine
As chains of destuny, I'll maintain:
True as Apollo ever spoke,
Or oracle from heart of oak.

Had

Hudibras, II. i. ADAM BELL, a northern outlaw, so celebrated for archery that his name became proverbial. Some account of him, with a ballad concerning him and his companions Clym of the Clough and William of Cloudesley, may be found in the Reliques of ancient Poetry, vol. i, p. 143, and in Ritson's Pieces of ancient popular Poetry. Shakespeare is thought to have alluded to him in the following passages:

Bened. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me let him be clap'd on the shoulder, and call'd ddam. Much Ado, i. 1
Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so him. Rom., ii, 1.
See also O. Pl., vi, 19; viii, 413. A serjeant, or bailiff, is jocularly called Adam, from wearing buff, as Adam wore his native buff.

Not that Adam that kept the paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calves-akin that was killed for the prodigal. Com. Err., iv, 3. +ADAUNTRELEY. A term in hunting. At last hee upstarted at the other side of the water which we call soyle of the hart, and there other hantsmen met him with an adassateley: we followed in hard chase for the space of eight hours, thrise our hounds were at default, and then we cryed thrise our hounus were at a slaine, streight so ho.

The Returne from Parnassus, 1606. ADAW, v. To daunt, or to abate. Spenser.

But yielded with shame and grief adaw'd.
Shep. Kal., Feb., 141.

+ADAYES, adv. By day.

You doe demaunde, my deare, beside, What mates adaies with me abide. Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

ADDICE. An adze or axe. I had thought I had rode upon addices between this and Canterbury.

Lyly, Moth. Bomb., C. 10 b.

ADDICT, part. For addicted. To studies good addict of comely grace.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 175.

†ADDICTION. Inclination, will. His addiction was to courses vain. Shakesp., Hen. F.
Try their addictions. Chapman, Hom. R., ii, 60.
ADDITION. Title, or mark of distinction.

They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase Soil our addition. Haml i 4 Soil our addition.

This man, lady, hath robb'd many bears of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, clurilish as the bear, slow as the elephant. Tr. § Cr., i, 2. One whom I will beat into clamorous whiming, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition. Lear, ii, 2. See Todd, No. 4.

ADDOUBED, part. Armed or accoutred. Adouber, old French. Roquefort.

was hotter than ever to provide himselfe of horse and armour, saying, he would go to the island bravely addoubed, and shew himself to his charge. Sidm. Arcad., p. 277.

The 8vo. ed. of 1724 writes it addubed. Hence dubbed, as a knight. ADDRESS, v. To prepare, or make

I will then address myself to my appointment Mer. W., iii, 5. So please your Grace, the prologue is addrest. Mids., v, 1.

It is a word frequently used by Spenser, thus:

Uprose from drowsie couch, and him addrest
Unto the journey which he had behight. Sp., F. Q., II, iii, 1.
ADELANTADO, Spanish. A lord president or deputy of a country; a commander. From adeluntar, to excel or precede.

Invincible adclantado over the armado of pimpled-faces. Massinger, Virg. Mart., ii, 1. Open no door; if the adalantado of Spain were here he should not enter. B. Jon., Ev. M. out of H., v, 4. Also Alchem., act iii.

ADHORT, v. To advise, or exhort. Julius Agricola was the first that by adhorting the Britaines publikely, and helping them privately, wun them to build houses for themselves. Store's London, p. 4.

†By and by these make readic the things for he that shee might wash; 1 adhort them thereto, an they make readic with speeds. Torence in English, 161: ADJOINT, s. A person joined with another, a companion, or attendant.

Here with these grave adjounts. These learned maisters) they were taught to see Themselves, to read the world, and keep their points.

Dan. Civ. Wars, iv, 61

Help, assistance. +ADJUMENT, s.

†ADJUMENT, s. Help, assistance.
Now if thou wilt to warre, if here th' art bent,
What e're my art can adde for adjument,
(Cease needlesse prayers) distrust not thine own strength
Tis all for thee. Virgil, translated by Vicare, 1631
The perfect and sound estate of the body (as we may constantly asserer of the soule) is maintained b the knowledge of a mans owne body, and that chiefl by the due observation of such things as may eithe bee obnoxious, or an adjument to nature.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639

+ADJUTRICE. A female assistant.

For, as I hope, Fortune (the adjustice of good per poses) will give the same unto me, seeking diligently (so much as I am able to effect and attaine unto after a temperature and moderation.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1601

+ADMIRAL OF THE BLUE, was ar old popular term for a tapster, from the colour of his apron.

As soon as customers begin to stir, The Admiral of the Blue, crys, Coming, sir. Or if grown fat, the mate his place supplies, And says, 'Tis not my master's time to rise. Of all our trades, the tapster is the best, Of all our trades, the tapster is the cest, He has more men at work than all the rest. Poor Robis, 1731

+ADMIRE. As a n. s. for admiration. JUNIAUE. As a reserved with wonder Man's imitation of Jove's dreadfull thunder, He thus concludes his censure with admire.

Rowland's Kness of Hearts, 1613

†ADMITTANCE, was used by Shake speare to signify the custom of being admitted into the presence of great Merry Wives, ii, 2. personages. +ADMIXT. Mixed up with.

Her pure affections
Are sacred as her person, and her thoughts
Soaring above the reach of common eyes,
Are like those better spirits, that have nothing
Of earth admixt. Cartwright's Royall Slave, 1651.

+ADOE. Difficulty, or reluctance.

With much ado, unwillingly.

And did enjoy her for an hower or two,
But then departed, yet with much adoe.

The News Metamorphosis, 1600.

+ADOLESCENCY. The age between fourteen and twenty-one.

For till seven yeeres be past and gone away,
We are uncapable to doe or pray.
Our adolescency till our manly growth,
We waste in vanity and tricks of youth.
Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†ADOORS, adv. At the door, by the door.

Which (first) may I say's worst? Nor Juno faire, Nor father Saturn hath of me least care. Oh, where's firm faith? I took him in adoores, A stragling beggar, outcast from his shor Virgil, by Vicers, 1630.

Downe high Olympus, Jupiter Went in adoores, not minding her. Homer a la Mode, 1665. +ADORNATION. An ornament; a decoration.

If I my self to thee
In hunting have augmented thine oblations,
And on thy scutchion hung due adornations,
Great gracefull gifts on sacred posts made fast.

*Firgil, by Vicars, 1630.

ADOPTIOUS. Adoptive. That which is adopted.

With a world
Of pretty fond adoptions christendoms
That blinking Cupid gossips.
ADORE, v. To gild, or adorn.
Like to the hore

And those true tears, falling on your pure crystals, Should turn to armlets, for great queens t'adore.

B. J. Pl., Eld. Bro., iv, 3.

Theobald, not recollecting the word in this sense, altered the passage to "for great queens to wear." In the above reading, which is the original, the for is however a vile expletive.

ADORN, s. Adorning; ornament. Without adorne of gold and silver bright, Wherewith the craftesman wonts it beautify

Spens., F. Q., 111, xii, 90. †ADOWN, adv. Down.

†ADUWN, adv. DOWN.

With that the shepheard gan to frowne,
He threw his pretie pypes adorne,
And on the ground him layd.

Draylon's Shepherds Garland, 1593.

ADRAD, or ADREDD, part. Frighted.

Seeing the ugly monster passing by,
Upon him set, of peril naught adred.

So. P. Q., VI., v. 16.

As present age, and eke posteritie

May be adved with horror of revenge.

O. Pl., i, 154.

Also, Terrified, v. The eight whereof the lady sore adrad.

Spens., F. Q., V, i, 22.

ADREAMT. I was adreamt, for I dreamed.

Wilt thou believe me, sweeting? by this light I was advant on thee too. O. Pl., I was advant last night of Francis there. O. Pl., vi, 851.

I was advesme last night of Francis there.

† Qui ement ipri sibi somnie fingunt: hee is advesme of a dry sommer. Withely Dictionary, ed. 1634.

† Then said he, for I was advesmed that I kill'd a back in such a place, and that thou didst see me where I did kill him, and hide him; and thinking thou wouldst betray me, I thought to kill thee; but I am glad (said he) that it was but a dream.

Lambou's Thousand Notable Things.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things. ADULTERATE is used for adulterous.

sometimes, by Shakespeare: Th' adultorate Hastings, Rivers, Vanghan, Grey.

Bick. III, iv, 4

Aye, that incestuous, that adultorate beast. Ham., i, 5.
Thoughts, characters, and words, merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

Lover's Complaint, Suppl., i, 751.

[It is also used for adulterated.]

thow hath that false conventicle of Trent Made lawes, which God or good men never meant, Commanding worshipping of stones and stockes, Of reliques, dend mens bones, and senalesse blocks,

From which adultrate painted adoration
Men (worse then stocks or blockes) must seeke salvation?
Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+ADVAUNCER. The second branches of the horn of a stag.

Good forresters and skilfull woodmen, in beasts of venerie and chase, do call the round roll of the horne, that is next to the head of the hart, the bur: the main horne itselfe, they call the beame: the lowest antlier is called the brow antlier, or beas antlier: the next, roial: the next above that, surroial: and then the top. In a buck they say, bur, beame, braunch, adeauncers, palme, and spellers.

Mannood's Forest Lances.

+To ADVENE, v. To come to; the Latin advenire.

Venus (saith one) spontan'ous doth advene Unt' all things: doth he not unt' all men mean?

Congealed drops, which do the morn adors.

Spens., IV, ii, 46. ADVENTURERS. It was common in the reign of Queen Elizabeth for young volunteers to go out in naval enterprises in hopes to make their fortunes, by discoveries, conquests, or some other means. These adventurers, probably making amorous conquests a part of their scheme, vied with each other in the richness and elegance of their dresses. Sir Francis Drake, in his expedition against Hispaniola, had two thousand such volunteers in his fleet. To this Ben Jonson alludes under the name of the Island

I had as fair a gold jerkin on that day, as any worn in the island voyage, or at Cadix.

Epic., i, 4.

ADVENTURERS UPON RETURN. Those travellers who lent money before they went, upon condition of receiving more on their return from a hazardous journey. This was probably their proper title. See PUTTER-OUT; and the quotations there from Taylor the water poet.

†ADVENUE, s. A passage, or avenue.
Then the lady made me rise, and (through an advenue that conveyed the light into the cavern) led me by the hand into a spacious hall, the walls of which were hung about with wanton pictures, that represented the soft sports of love in many vary'd postures.

History of Francies, 1655.

†ADVERSACION, s. Contention; opposition.

And of Englyshe with Peightes, I understand, And Britons also did gret adversacion. Hardyng's Chronicle, fol. 79.

In Orthoepy, p. 227, it is ADVERSE. said that Shakespeare always accents this word on the first syllable. The following exception has been since remarked:

Though time seem so adserse, and means unfit. All's W., v, ADVERTISE. This word anciently had the accent on the middle syllable.

I therefore Advertise to the state, how fit it were,
That none, &c.
B. Jon., Fox, iv, 1.
I have advertis'd him by secret means.
3 Hcn. VI, iv, 5. See more examples in the Elements of Orthoepy, p. 327. ADVICE. Consideration, or information

How shall I doat on her with more advice, That thus without advice begin to love her. 2 Gent., ii, 4. Neither this word, nor the verb to advise, are quite obsolete in this kind of acceptation.

+ADVISEFUL, adj. Attentive. Which everywhere advisefull audience bred, While thus th' inditement by the clerke was read.

The Beggar's Ape, c. 1607.

+ADVISEMENT, &. Care; resolution. †ADVISEMENT, s. Care; resolution.
And had not his wise guides advisement let,
And made him from those corps-lesse soules to fly,
And passe in peace, those thin shapes subtilitie
He had assail'd, but vainly beat the aire.

*Virgil, by Vicare, 1633.
And so with more bast than good advisement, they set up cries amaine, and prepared to encounter.

*Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

†ADVOCATION. Plending.

Alas! thrice gentle Cassio, My advocation is not now in time. Othello, iii, 2.

ADVOWTRY, or AVOWTRY. Adultery. Avoutrie, old Fr.
This staff was made to knock down sin. I'll look

There shall be no advowtry in my ward There shall be no associately in my waru O. Pl., x, 299. At home, because duke Humfrey aye repined, Calling this match advoutrie, as it was.

Mirror for Mag., p. 342.

The word is used by Butler in Hudi-hraa

+ADUST, adj. Parched; burnt.

The cars are ingendred of abundance of matter, and such men have commonly a little neck, and fair; They be sanguine, something adust. And those men are very unpatient and prone to anger. When the ears be great, and right beyond measure; it is a sign of folly.

Arcandam, bl. l.

of folly.

Arcandam, bl. l.

†ADUSTION. Burning; drying up.

Melancholy, may be easily commixed with bloud. Therefore if melancholy be mixed with bloud, it is called phlegmone scirrhodes: if choler (which then is conflated of both kinds) it is called phlegmone expesipelatodes: if fleame, it is termed phlegmone expesipelatodes: if fleame, it is termed phlegmone expended. But of bloud, which is filthy and corrupted through the adustion and corruption of his owne proper substance, according to the manner of the thinnesse or thicknesse thereof.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

When adustion is to be used. Furthermore if (not-withstanding these burning medicines) the evill shall yet remaine, you must burne that place which is betweene the whole and corrupted member. But all these remedies are wont sometime to profit nothing at all, and then this is the onely helpe, although (as Celsus saith) it be a miserable helpe, that is, to cut off the member, which by little and little waxeth dead, that so the other parts of the body may be without danger.

ADWARD, for AWARD. Judgment:

ADWARD, for AWARD. Judgment; sentence.

And faint-heart fooles whom shew of peril hard Could terrify from fortune's faire advard.

Spens., F. Q., IV, x, 17. To ADWARD, v. To award.

For death t' adward I ween'd did appertaine
To none but to the sea's sole soveraine. Ibid., IV, xii, 30. Peculiar to Spenser, as far as I have

+ÆMULOUS. For Emulous. And you your self, faire Julia, do disclose Such beauties, that you may seem one of those
That having motion gain'd at last, and sense,
Began to know it self, and stole out thence.
Whiles thus his amulous art with nature strives,
Some think h' hath none, others he halt two wives.

Carterials's Progres. It

Cartwright's Poems, 1651. To reduce to a +ÆQUIPARATE, v. level; to raze.

vel; to raze.

Th' emperial citie, cause of all this woe,
King Latines throne, this day I'le ruinate,
And houses tops to th' ground equiparate.

Ficars' Virgil, 1633.

AERY. See AIERY.

+ÆSTIVE, ÆSTIVAL. Belonging to Æstival solstice, the sumsummer. mer solstice.

Auriga mounted in a chariot bright,
(Else styl'd Heniochus) receives his light
In th' estirec circle.
In which at the time of the estiral solstice, when the sunne southward stretcheth to the uttermost his summer race. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+ÆSTURE. Rage. From the Latin æstura. It is a word often used in Chapman's Homer.

1. To AFFEAR. To terrify.

Each trembling leafe and whistling wind they heare,

And ghastly bug, does greatly them afterer.

Sp., F. Q., II, iii, 20.

Hence the participle affear'd, for which afraid is now used, but which is very common in Shakespeare. Be not affear'd; the isle is full of noises.

Temp., iii, 2. The spelling varies, as in other cases, sometimes with one f, and sometimes with two.

2. To AFFEAR, or more properly AF-An old law term, for to settle or confirm. From affier.

Wear thou thy wrongs, His [Macbeth's] title is affeard. Hence affeerers, in our law dictionaries, are a sort of arbiters, whose business was to affirm upon oath what penalty they thought should be adjudged for certain offences, not settled by law.

+AFFECTATE, adj. Affected, conceited.

Accercitum dictum, an oracion to muche affectate, or, as we saie, to farre fet. Eliotes Dictionarie, 1559. †AFFECTED. Beloved.

—in all the desperate hours
Of his affected Hercules. Chapman, Il., viii, 318. AFFECTION. In the sense of affecta-

No matter in the phrase that might indite the author of affection.

Ham., ii, 9.

Pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection.

L. L., v, 1. How did she leave the world, with what contempt! Just as she in it liv'd! and so exempt From all affection.

B. Jone.. Underwoods. El. on Lady Paulet. But it certainly means sympathy, in the following well-known, but difficult passage:

Yor affection. Master of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes or loaths.

Mor. Fem., iv. k.

In a similar sense: AFFECTIONED. affected.

An affectioned ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swarths.

Twok, ii, 3.

+AFFECTIOUS, adj. Affectionate. Therefore my deare, deare wife, and dearest sonnes, Let me ingirt you with my last embrace: And in your cheekes impresse a fare-well kisse, Kisse of true kindnesse and affectious love.

AFFECTS. Affections; passions.

Mooing poor craftsmen, with the craft of smiles, And patient underbearing of his fortune, As 'twere to banish their affects with him.

Rick, II, i, 4

Rachel, I hope I shall not need to urge
The sucred purity of our affects.

B. Jon., Case is Alter'd, act i.
Not to comply with heat, the young affects
In me defunct.

Oth., i, 3.

Mr. Gifford proposes to read here, parenthetically,

(The young effects in me defunct)

Massing., vol. ii, p. 30.
†Sturring the affects of admiration and commiseration.
Sir P. Sydney's Apology for Poetry.

It is certainly to be found in the singular, in the sense of inclination:

So her chief care, as carelesse now to pro-Her own effect, was care of people's case.

England's Eliza, Mirr. M., p. 853.

Shut up thy daughter, bridle her effects.

O. Pl., iii, 16.

+AFFINES, s. Relations, kinsmen. Affinity degenerating in honesty is like foule scabs in a faire skinne, such affines brings as much credit and comfort to their friends, as do lyce in their clothes; and they are much like of a lousie condition; they will cleave close unto you, while you have bloud to feede them, but if you begin to die or decay they goe from them that breed them.

Rich Cabinet furnished with Vericlie of Excellent Description 1818.

Descriptions, 1616. †AFFIRMANCE, s. An assertion.

Sir, mine affermence in thaffirmative, In law and reason, is much more credible.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

AFFRAP, v. n. To encounter, or strike down.

They beene ymett, both ready to affrap. Sp., F. Q., II, i, 26.

Also active. See Todd. AFFRAY, v. To frighten.

KAI, v. 10 111ginous.

Or when the flying heavins he would affray.

Spenser.

AFFRAY, s. In the sense of confusion, or fear.

Without tempestuous storms or sad affray. Who full of ghastly fright, and cold affray, Gan shut the dore. Sp., F. Q., I, iii, 19.

+AFFRAYER, a. One who raises alfrava or riota.

As namely, the statutes made for huy and cry after felons; and the statutes made against murtherers, robbers, felons, night walkers, affrayers, armor worne in terrorem, riots, forcible entries, and all other force and violence; all which be directly against the peace.

Dallon's Country Justice, 1620.

AFFREND, v. To make friends; to reconcile.

And deadly foes so faithfully affrended.
Sp., P. Q., IV, iii, 50. AFFRET, s. Rencounter; hasty meet-

That with the terror of their fierce affret, They rudely drive to ground both man and horse. So., F. O., III. ix. 16.

Also violent impression:

The wicked weapon heard his wrathfull vow, And passing forth with furious affect. Pierst through his beaver quite into his brow

Sp., F. Q., IV, iii, 11.

A threat: a +AFFRIGHTMENT. s. frightning.

But here was your cunning; it appears most plainly, that you, thinking her to be of the trade, thought to that you, thinking her to be of the trade, thought to make a prey of her purse; but since your diplatment could not make her open unto you, you thought to make her innocency awart for t.

Richard Brome's Northern Lass.

AFFRONT, v. To meet : encounter.

AFFRONT, v. To meet; encounter.

That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
Affront Ophelia.

The men, the ships, wherewith poor Rome affronts him,
All powerless, give proud Cœsar's wrath free passage.

O. P., ii, 164.

A thousand hardy Turks affront he had.

Aspruce neate youth: what, yf I affront him?

Play of Timon, p. 12.

AFFRONT, s. A meeting.

AFFRUNT, s. A meeting.

Only, sir, this I must caution you of, in your affront, or salute, never to move your hat.

Green's Tu Q., O. Pl., vii, 95.

This day thou shall have ingots, and to-morrow Give lords th' affront.

Ben. Jon., Alch., ii, 3.

AFFY, v. To betroth.

And wedded be thou to the hags of hell, For daring to affy a mighty lord Unto the daughter of a worthless king.

3 Hen. FI, iv, 1. m. FI, iv, 1.

Sorano, 'tis ordained, must be affect
To Annabella; and, for aught I know,
O. Pl., viii, 57.

Also to trust or confide:

O trust or comment.

Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity.

Tit. And...i. 1. †Bid none affic in friends, for say, his children wrought his wracke. Warner's Albion's England, 1592.

Equipped or dressed in a +AFLAUNT.

showy manner.

showy manner.

Hee that of himself doth bragge, boast, and vaunt,
Hath ill neighbours about him to set him aflanat.

Withalt Dictionaris, ed. 1608, p. 219.

A meric gentleman seeing a gallant that was bound for the Indies walke the streets, his hat all aflaunt, and befeathered with all kinde of colloured plunes, said: When a Gods name will this woodcock file, for well I see he hath all his feathers about him.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Practice, 1614, p. 29.

†AFORE was commonly used for before.

E. Goe afors, for I know not the way.

7. I doe observe you, sir, and therefore you may follow, if you please.

The Passenger of Benzenuto, 1618.

+AFTER-DAYS. Future times.

I meane to sing thereof, that after-dayes, Seeing Gods love to us, may tell his praise. Wither's Abuses Stript and Whipt, 1622.

+AFTERMATH. A common provincial word for a second crop of grass; sometimes used metaphorically.

Then raise the siege from falling on
That old dismantled garrison.
Rash lover speak what pleasure hath Thy spring in such an aftermath!
Who, were she to the best advantage spread, Who, were she to the best auvaning appears, Is but the dull husk of a maiden-head. Cloveland's Poems.

+AFT-MEAL. An after or late meal. At aft-meales who shall paye for the wine?

†AGAIN. "To and again," i. e. to and fro. See Autobiog. of Sir S. D'Ewes, vol. ii, p. 353.

Again was sometimes used as an exclamation of impatience.

Abil. Haplesse man, to run into this lunacie! Ter. Agen, agen. Wil no man give me credit?

Chapman's Revenge for Honour, 1654.

†AGAINST. Against the world, i. e. in preference to everybody else.

At night I met with my lord, who told me that I need not fear, for he would get me the place against the world.

Pepys' Diary, 1860.

+AGAMBO, adv. A-kimbo.

To set the arms agambo or aprank, and to rest the turned in backe of the hand upon the side, is an action of pride and ostentation.

Butwer's Chironomia, 1644, p. 104.

In the following passage it is written akemboll.

AGAR. A sea monster: perhaps formed from the higre, or bore of the tide. Hee [Neptune] sendeth a monster called the agar, against whose coming the waters roare, the fowless file away, and the cattel in the field for terrour shunne the bankes.

Lilly's Gallattea, act i, a. 1.

See HIGRE.

AGATE. Used metaphorically for a very diminutive person, in allusion to the small figures cut in agate for rings.

Il was never mann'd with an agats till now: but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master for a jewel.

2 Hen. IV. i, 2.

If low, an agat very vilely cut. Much Ado ab. N., iii, 1.

Where the other passages show that there is no occasion to change the reading to aglet, as has been pro-

Queen Mab, as a very diminutive figure, is expressly compared by Shakespeare to an agat stone.

She is the faries midwife, and she comes In shape no bigger than an agat stone On the fore-finger of an alderman. Rom., i, 4. Of the Italian word formaglio, Florio gives this account :

Also onches, brouches, or tablets and jewels, that yet some old men weare in their hats, with agath-stones, can and graven with some formes and images on them, namely, of famous men's heads.

A-GATE. Agoing. From gate or gait. a way.

I pray you, memory, set him a-gate again. O.P., v, 180. †AGEDNESS, s. The quality of being aged; age.

Nor as his knowledge grew did 's form decay, He still was strong and fresh, his brain was gray. Such agedness might our young ladies move To somewhat more than a Platonick love. Cartoriakt's Poems, 1561.

To AGGRACE. To favour. Add that which all faire worket doth most aggrace,
The art, which all that wrought, appeared in no place.

Sp., F. Q., II, xii, 58.

Also as a substantive, favour. O AS A SUUSTAILLY, and aggrace.

Of kindnesse and of courteous aggrace.

Sp., F. Q., II, viii, 56.

AGGRATE, v. To please or gratify.

From whom whatever thing is goodly thought
Doth borrow grace, the fancy to aggrate.

Spens. Tears of Muses, 408.

AGHAST. Did frighten. Used as the pret. of to agaze.

That seemed from some feared foe to fly, Or other griesly thing that him aghast.

Sp., P.Q., I, ix, 21.

Its usage as a participial adjective is not vet laid aside.

†AGILITE is used as an adjective in Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing.

&c., 1577.

If it be, as I have sayd, moderately taken, after some weightie businesse, to make one more fresh and agilite.

†AGITAGIOUS, adj. Quivering, shaking. His words and speare together cleave the ayre,

The golden-headed staffe as lightning flew,
And like the swiftest curror makes repayre
Whether t'was sent, and doth his message true,
Ajax huge shield hath interpos'd the bare,
Which Hectors agitagious still pursue:
Through sixe tough hydes it pier'st without respect,
But the sharp point upon the seaventh was check't.

Heywood's Trois Britanica, 1609.

CLIFT: The trace of a lace a vo of the

The tag of a lace, or of the points formerly used in dress; from aiguillette, Fr.

any utilicity, r...
In a brace, a man must take hede of three thinges, that it have no buckles, that it have no buckles, that it be fast on, with laces, without agglettes.

Asch. Turoph., p. 137.

Sometimes formed into small figures, alluded to here:

Why, give him gold enough, and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby.

Tam. Shr., i, 2. The robe of Garter King at Arms, at Lord Leicester's creation, had on the sleeves "38 paire of gold aglets." Progr. of Eliz., 1564, p. 58. Sometimes they seem to mean span-gles, as Junius explains them:

And all those stars that gaze upon her face, Are aglets on her sleeve, pins in her train. O. Pl., iii, 194. The little stars, and all that look like aglets.

B. J. Fl., 2 Nob. Kins., iii, 4.

Aglet was also used as a botanical term, for the chives, or antheræ, of flowers. Kersey.

See AIGULET.

+AGNAIL. s. A sort of corn in the toes.

A corne in the toe of the foote: an agnaile.

Nomenclator, 1885.

The 7. chapiter doth shewe of agnalles in a mans feete.

Lanus is the Latin word, and some do name it papule.

In English it is named cornes or agnale in a mans feete or toes.

Bord's Physick, ed. 1875.

AGNES, ST. To fast on the eve of her festival, Jan. 21, using certain ceremonies, was esteemed a certain wav for maids to dream of their future husbands.

And on sweet St. Agnes night, Please you with the promis'd sight, Some of husbands, some of lovers,

Some of husbands, some of lovers,
Which an empty dream discovers.

If she keepe a chambermaide she lyes at her bedd's feete, and they two—will both be sure to fast on St.
Agnes night, to know who shall be their first husbands.

Picture Loo. by Saltonstall, Char. 19.
Upon St. Agnes night you take a row of pins, and pul out every one, one after another, saying a paternoster, sticking a pin in vour sleeve, and you will dream of him or her you shall marry. Aubrey's Miscell., p. 136.

Burton says St. Anne's night, but he is wrong. Anat. of Mel., p. 538. GNIZE, v. To acknowledge.

AGNIZE, v.

I do agaiss

A patural and prompt alacrity. Oth., i, 8. I find in hardness. I find in hardness.

In thee they joy, and soveraigne they agaise.

Southeell's Maonia, 1595.

Also, to know:

The tenor of your princely will from you for to againse.

Cambuses. +AGNOMINATION, s. A surname derived from some act or circumstance connected with the individual or family. Minsheu.

Alluding by way of agnomination to castrensis, i. militarie.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

It appears here to mean alliteration. Amongst other resemblances, one was in their prosedy and vein of versifying or riming, which is like our bards, who hold agnominations, and enforcing of con-sonant words or syllables, one upon the other, to be the greatest elegance. Housel's Familiar Letters, 1650.

A-GOOD. In good earnest, heartily.

And, at that time, I made her weep a-good,
For I did play a lamentable part.

And therewithal their knees would rankle so,
That I have laugh'd a-good.

O. P., viii. 839.
This merry answer made them all laugh a-good; so downe the hill they came laughing.

North's Plut., 200, E.

†AGRIEVANCE, s. An injury, or vexation; a grievance.

The duke my lord commands your speedy presence,
You answering agreements late urg'd
Agninet you by your mother.

Beaumont and Fletcher.

AGRIZE, v. To dread; or to astonish.

Yet not the colour of the troubled deep,
Those spots supposed, nor the fogs that rise
From the dull earth, me any whit agrise.
Drayt., Man in the Moon.
†Fear made the wofull childe to waile and weep,
For want of speed, on foot and hand to creep:
All where was nothing heard but hideous cries,
And pitious plaints, that did the harts agrise.
Du Bartas, by Sylvester.

AGROUND. To the ground.

And how she fell flat downe
Before his feet aground.

Romeus and Juliet, Suppl. to Sh., i, 347.

13

AGUISE, v. To adorn, or dress.

And that deare crosse upon your shield devi'd,
Wherewith above all knights ye goodly seem aguis'd.

Sp., F. Q., II, i, 31.
Then 'gan this crafty couple to devise
How for the court themselves they might aguise.

Spens., M. Hubberd's Tale, 656.

AJAX. Pronounced Ajax (with the a long). The name of this hero furnished many unsavoury puns to our ancestors, from its similarity in sound to the two English words, a jakes. In some of the passages the allusion is rather obscure, as in this:

A stool were better, sir, of Sir Ajax his invention.

B. Jon., Epic., iv, 5.

It is plainer in Shakespeare: Your lion, that holds his poll-ax, sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax. Love's L., v, 2. The cause of all this vein of low wit was, perhaps, Sir John Harrington, who in 1596 published his celebrated tract, called "The Metamorphosis of Ajax," by which he meant the improvement of a jakes, or necessary, by forming it into what we now call a water-closet, of which Sir John was clearly the inventor. For this offence to her delicacy, queen Elizabeth kept him for some time in disgrace.

Used directly for a necessary house:
Which (like the glorious ajax of Lincoln's-Inno,
I saw in London) laps up naught but filth
And excrements. Cotgrav, Bay, Treasury, p. 16.
Adoring Stercutio for a god, no lesse unwoorthily then shamfully constituting him a patron and protector of Ajax and his commodities.

Hosp. of Incurab. Fooles, p. 6.
To the above work of Sir J. Harring-ton's, B. Jonson seems to allude, as a masterpiece in its way, when, at the conclusion of a dirty poem, he says,

And I could wish for their eternix'd sakes,
My muse had plough'd with his that sung A-jax.
On the famous Popage, vol. vi, p. 390.
The rhyme here proves that the pronunciation of the time was suited to the English meaning. See also the quotations of Mr. Steevens on Love's L. Lost. Even Camden condescends to play upon this word. Speaking of the French word pet, he says, Inquire, if you understand it not, of Cloacina's chap-lains, or such as are well read in Ajas. Remains, p. 117. We meet with a new personage in Healey's Discov. of a New World, namely, "John Fisticankoes, Ajax his sonne and heyre," p. 159. But I have not met with him elsewhere. See JAKES.

+AID. A sort of tax formerly raised in England. It was sometimes to a certain extent voluntary. The records of the City companies frequently mention aid-money, money granted to the crown for specific purposes.

+ Aid-forces, or aid-soldiers, auxiliaries. †Aid-forces, Oratd-soldiers, auxiliaries. The enemies having this advantage, that they knew the coast of the countrey, traversed a crosse crooked way behind Cersars backe, and charging upon two legions as they were gathering their armour together, they had put them all well neere to the sword, but that a suddaine outcrie made, caused the sid-forces of our associates to assemble themselves. Holland's Amminum Marcellinus, 1609. But when certaine of them secretly suggested, that Silvanus late colonell of the footmen, passed venturously, though hardly, with eight thousand sid-soul-the colones of the sootens, passed venturiously, though hardly, with eight thousand aid-soudiers by more compendious and shorter waies.

†AIDFULL, adj. Ready to help.

Christs night-desciple aidfull did agree

To take his body from that guiltie tree.

Rowlands' Betraying of Christ.

AIERY. Spelt also aery, and eyery. The nest of an eagle, hawk, or other bird of prey. But sometimes, also, the brood of young in the nest.

And like an eagle o'er his airry tow'rs,
To souse annoyance that comes near his nest. K. John, v. 2. Certainly not "towers over his nest to defend his nest;" but "towers over his young, to souse." &c.

Our aiery buildeth in the cedar's top, And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun Rich. III. i. 3.

And yet more plainly:
Your aiery buildeth in our aiery's nest. That is, your brood settles in the nest of ours.

Yet the commentators quote only the passages that prove it to mean a nest, and so explain it. According to which the meaning here would be, "your nest buildeth in our nest's nest." So in Hamlet, "a little aiery of children' (ii, 2) means a little brood of children. Here also,

For as an eyeric from their seeges wood, Led o'er the plains and taught to get their food, By seeing how their breeder takes his prey. Brown, Britan. Past., ii, 4. †But vain are all these fears, his eagle sight ls born to gaze upon no lesser light.

Then that from whence, all other beauties in
The same sphear borrew theirs, he else had bin

Degenerate from that royal airee, whence He first did spring. Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

Here it signifies a hawk's nest:

That air of hope hath blasted many an aiery Of castrils like yourself. B. Jon., Staple of News, ii, 2. Also a certain broad of hawks:

On his snowie crest The tow'ring falcon whileme built, and kings Strove for that cirie, on whose scaling wings Monarchs in gold refin'd as much would lay,

Monarchs in gold renn'd as much would be.

As might a month their army royal pay.

Brit. Past., i. 1. A few lines after it is again used for the brood. Eyrey is the right form of the word: the origin being ev. which, in Saxon and old English.

means an egg. AIGULET, or AYGULET. The tag of a point. Often contracted into AGLET.

Which all above besprinckled was throughout
With golden aygulets, that glistred bright,
Like twinckling starres. Sp., F. Q., II, iii, 26.

AIM. To cry aim, in archery, to encourage the archers by crying out aim, when they were about to shoot. Hence it came to be used for to applaud or encourage, in a general sense.

It ill beseems this presence to cry aim

To these ill-tuned repetitions. K. John, ii, l.

Now, to be patient, were to play the pandar

To the viceroy's base embraces, and cry aim,

While he by force or flattery, &c. Mass., Reneg., i, l.

To it, and we'll cry aim.

B. § FI., False One. It seems that the spectators in general cried aim, occasionally, as a mere word of applause or encouragement. To give aim was an office of direction and assistance.

AIM, to give. To stand within a convenient distance from the butts, to inform the archers how near their arrows fell to the mark; whether on one side or the other, beyond, or short of it. The terms were, wide on the bow hand, or the shaft hand, (Ascham once uses the drawing hand for the right. Toxoph.) i. e. left and right; short or gone: the distances being estimated by bows' lengths. This was in some measure a confidential office; but was not always practised. Ascham does not quite approve ofit

Of gevings ame I cannot tell well what I should says. For in a straunge place it taketh awaye all occasion of foule game, which is the onlye prayee of it, yet by my judgement it hindereth the knowledge of shootinge, and maketh men more negligent, which is a disprayee.

Toxopà., p. 221.

Though I am no mark, in respect of a huge butt, yet I can tell you great bubbers [qu. lubbers ?] have shot at me, and shot golden arrows; but I myself give sim thus: wide, four bows; short, three and a half. Middlet., Span. Gyps., act. ii. Anc. Dr., iv, p. 138. †Am I a kinge und beare no authoritie? My loving kindred committed to prison as traytors in my pre-sence, and I stand to give sim at them. True Tragedy of Richard the Third, p. 27.

Maria gives gim in Love's L. Lost, when she savs,

Wide o' the bow hand ! I'faith your hand is out,

I am the mark, sir, I'll give aim to you,
And tell how near you shoot. White Dev., O. Pl., vi, 285.
For who would live, whom pleasures had forsaken,
To stand at mark, and cry a bow shot, signeur.
B. & Fl., Valent., ii, 2.

So Venus assists Cupid:

While lovely Venus stands to give the sim, Smiling to see her wanton bantling's game.

Drayt. Ecl., vii, p. 1420. Cry aim is well conjectured, in a corrupt passage of Shakespeare; where the old reading is cride game.

I will bring thee where mistress Anne Page is, at a farm house, a feasting; and thou shult woo her: cry sim,—said I well?

Merry W. W., ii, S. That is, "Applaud, encourage me! do I not deserve it?" This suits the speaker (the host) and the occasion; in the other no sense can be found. Capell reads, " Tried game."

Mr. Gifford first accurately distinguished crying aim, and giving aim, which Warburton and others thought synonymous. See his note on Massinger, ii, p. 27.

AIM. Guess.

But fearing lest my jealous aim might err. 2 Gent., iii, 1. t fearing lest my jealous and mag.

Also as a verb, to guess.

That my discovery be not simed at.

Yet still went on, which way he could not sim.

Fairf. T., vii, 23.

AIM-CRIER. A stander-by, who encouraged the archers by exclamations. Hence died for an abettor or encourager.

Thou smiling eim-crier at princes fall.

English Arcadia. While her own creatures, like aim-criers, beheld her mischance with nothing but lip-pity.

16.

AIRLING. A light airy person; a coxcomb.

Some more there be, slight airlings, will be won With dogs and horses.

B. Jon., Catil., i, 3.

AIRY, for AIERY. Eagle's nest.

Sir, excuse me,
One siry, with proportion, ne'er discloses
The eagle and the wren. Massing., Maid of Honour, i, 9.
The editor of 1759 says, this passage is difficult, and then explains it: "One airy with proportion," "one puffed up with a high opinion," &c., taking one for a person, and airy for the adjective: the error is manifest. It should have been printed aiery.

"One nest, preserving its proportion, never produces an eagle and a wren."

ALAMORT, adi. Half-dead: in a dving state; drooping. A French word: but often adopted.

Whose soft and royal treatment may suffice To heal the sick, to cheer the alamort.

Pansh. Lusiad. v. 85. Sometimes written all amort, but erroneously. See Anc. Dr., i, 362.

ALAND. For on or to land; analogous to other compositions with a, as aboard, afield, &c.

The Dane with fresh supplies
Was lately come aland. Drayt. Polyolb., xii, p. 903. Used even by Dryden. See Todd's †ALATE, adv. Lately.

Then he retooke his tale he left alate,
And made a long discours of all his state. Du Bartas.

ALB, or ALBE. The white dress of a bishop, differing from a surplice in having regular sleeves. As worn by Protestant bishops, it is distinct from the sleeves, and only appears in front. Holmes's Acad. of Arm. B. III. ch. iv.

D. 194. Each priest adorn'd was in a surplice white, The bishops donn'd their albs, and copes of state. Fairf. Tusso, xi, 4.

+ALCAMY. See ALCHYMY. Nor for this purpose here to talke come I, How silver may be mock't with alormy. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

ALCATRAZ. An American bird; a name given by the Spaniards, and by Fernandez, Hernandez, and Nieremberg, to the pelican of Mexico; and erroneously, by Clusius, and others after him, to the Indian hornbill, or Most like to that shortsighted alcatras,
That beats the air above that liquid glass;
The New World's bird, the proud imperious fowl
Whose dreadful presence frights the harmless owl;
That on the land not only works his wish,
But on the ocean kills the flying fish.

Drayton's Owl, p. 1304.

ALCHYMY. This delusive, but once fashionable art, is thus well defined:

Libavius sets down this rime of Alchimy: Alchymia est ars sine arte, Cujus scire est pars cum parte, Medium est strenue mentiri, Finis mendicatum iri. Healy's Disc. of New World, p. 169, marg. From Hall's Mundus alter et idem.

A certain compound metal, supposed originally to have been formed by the art of the alchemist, obtained thence the name of alchemy. It was a modification of brass.

16

Four speedy cherubims
Put to their mouths the sounding alchemy.

Milt., Per-Lost, ii, 517.

Such were his arms, false gold, true alchymic.

Fletch., Perple 1st., c. vii, s. 30.

They are like rings and chaines bought at St. Martin's, that weare faire for a little time, but shortly after will that weare faire for a little time, prove alchimy, or rather pure copper.

Minshull Essay, p. 23.

It was afterwards corrupted into occamy, which is not yet quite disused, among some classes.

ALDERLIEFEST. Dearest of all; from alder, aller, or alre, used as the genitive of all: and lief dear. Chaucer has alderfirst, alderlast, &c.

With you, mine alderliefest sovereign. 2 Hen. VI, i, 1. Thus:

3 : And alderfirst he bad them all a bone. Chauc., C. Tules, 9492. See other instances in the notes upon the above passage of Shakespeare.

†And alder-nest was the fresshe quene;
I mean Alceste, the noble true wife,
And for Admete howe she lost her lyfe;
Aud for her trouthe, if I shall nat lye,

And for her trouthe, if I shall not lye,
How she was turned into a daysye.

Lydgate's Temple of Glas.

†ALDERMAN'S PACE. A slow stately pace. "Pas d'abbé, a leasurely walking, slow gate, Alderman's pace." Cotgrave.

+ALDGATE. The Pye was formerly a celebrated inn in this neighbourhood:

One ask'd a friend where captain Shark did lye;
Why, sir, quoth he, at Algale at the Pie;
Away, quoth th' other, he lies not there I know 't;
No, says the other, then he lies in his throat.

A Book of New Epigrams, 1659.

ALE. A rural festival, where of course much ale was consumed. Other etvmologies have been attempted, but this is the most natural, and most probable.

There were bride-ales, church-ales, clerk-ales, give-ales, lamb-ales, leet-ales, Midsummer-ales, Scot-ales, Whitsunales, and several more.

Brand's Popular Antiq., 4to ed., vol. i, p. 229, &c.

Also some of these separate articles.

ALE, for ALEHOUSE.

O, Tum, that we were now at Putney, at the ale there.

Thom., Lord Cromwell, iii, 1. In the folio of 1623, ale is read for alehouse, in Two Gent. of Ver., ii, 5.

+ALEBERRY, s. Ale boiled, with spice and sugar, and sops of bread.

After that, cause an alcherry to be made for her, and put into it powder of camphire, and give it to her to eate.

The Pathony to Health, f. 54. pht into it powner or The Pathway to Health, f. 54. Indeede it was never knowne to be so farre out of reparations, that it needed the assistance of cawdle, alchery, julep, cullisse, grawell, or stewd-broth, onely a messe of plaine frugall countrey pottage was alwayes sufficient for him.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

ALECIE, s. Drunkenness; the state of being influenced by ale: a word coined in imitation of lunacy, which means being under lunar influence.

It he had arrested a mare instead of a horse, it had beene a slight oversight, but to arrest a man, that hath no likenesse of a horse, is flat lunasie, or alecie.

Lyly's Mother Bombis, cc. 9.

ALECONNER. Explained in Johnson and Chambers's Dictionaries to be an officer in the city of London, which is true; but he is not peculiar to that place. Better explained by Kersey; "Aleconner or ale-taster, an officer appointed in every court-leet, to look to the assize and goodness of bread, ale, and beer." Thus it is said of the celebrated Captain Cox (q. v.) that

Of very great credite and trust in the toun heer, for he haz been chozen ale-cwaser many a yeer, when his betters have stond by; and ever quitted himself with such estimation, az yet, too tast of a cup of nippitate, his judgement will be taken above the best in the parish, be hiz noze near so read.

Progr. of Eliz., vol. i, an. 1875.

In some parishes, the aleconner's jurisdiction was very extensive. In that of Tottenham, Middlesex, it is thus described:

titus described:

It is the custom in most manors, for the lord to appoint the ale-conners at the court-leet; but there not having been a court-leet for some years held for the manor of Tottenham, these officers have been regularly appointed by the parishioners in vestry. The aleconners are authorized to search for, destroy, seize and take away all unwholcsome provisions, false balances, short weights and measures; to enter miles had backed the search for and save if any about and bakehouses, to search for and seize (if any should be found) all adulterated flour and bread; and also to be found) all adulterated flour and bread; and also to enter into brewhouses, and examine the quality of beer, ale, &c., and the materials of which it is made. All persons coming into the parish, with carts or otherwise, with peas, potatoes, &c., from London, are subject to the inspection of these officers, and liable to all the penalties attached to the selling with short weights and measures.

Robinson's Hist. of Cottenh., p. 241. An herb: the same as ALECOST. Costmary.

+ALE-DRAPER. A humorous term for keeper of an ale-house.

keeper of an ale-house.

I came up to London, and fall to be some tapster, hostler, or chamberlaine in an inn. Well, I get mee a wife; with her a little money; when we are married, seeke a house we must; no other occupation have I but to be an ale draper.

Henry Chettle, Kind-Harts Dreams, 1592.
Two milch maydens that had set up a shoppe of alegenery.

1b.

ALEĠĠE, or ALEGE, v. To alleviate; alecgan, Sax.; alleger, Fr.

The joyous time now nigheth fast, That shall alegge this bitter blast, And slake the winter sorrow.

Spens., Shep. Kal., iii, 4. Dr. Johnson has it aligge, in his dictionary, and supposes it to be derived from a and lig, to lie down; but the reading and etymology are both erroneous.

+ALE-KNIGHT. s. A haunter of ale-houses; a tippler.

Come, all you brave wights,
That are dubbed als-knights,
Now set out your selves in fight:
And let them that crack
In the praises of sack,
Know malt is of nickle might.

Witts Recreations, 1654. †ALE-STAKE. A stake set up for a sign at the door of an alchouse. GOOF OF All ALCHOMAN.

He and I never dranke togyder,
Yet I knowe many an ale-state.
Hawkins's Old Plays, i, 109.
The beare

The beare He places with men, who (like doggs) feele his force, That at the alestate baite him not with beere. Davies, Scourge of Folly, 1611.

†ALESTANBEARER is thus described: An alestan-bearer: porters that carry burthens with slings, as we see brewers doe, when they laye beere into the seller. Nomenclator, 1585.

ALEW. Howling, lamentation, outcry; probably only another form of halloo. Yet did she not lament, with loude aless
As women wont, but with deep sighs and singults few

Sp., F. Q., V, vi, 18. ALFAREZ, or ALFERES. A Spanish word, meaning an ensign; contracted, according to Skinner, from aquilifer.

Commended to me from some noble friends

For my affere.

Jug here, his alfares:

An able officer, gi' me thy beard, round jug.

B. Jon., New Inn, iii, 1.

The heliotropeum or sunflower, it is said, "is the true afferes, bearing up the standard of Flora."

Embleme, to the Parthenian Sodalitie, p. 49.

It may be said to have been adopted for a time as an English word, being in use in our army during the civil wars of Charles I. In a MS. in the Harleian collection, No. 6804, § 96, among papers of that period, it is often repeated. "Alferes John Manering, Alferes Arthur Carrol," &c.

ALFRIDARIA. A term in the old judicial astrology, which is thus explained by Kersey: "A temporary power which the planets have over the life of a person."

I'll finde the cuspe, and alfridaria.

Album, O. Pl., vii, 171.

ALGATES. By all means.

And therefore would I should be algates slain; For while I live his right is in suspense.

Pairf. T., iv, 60.

Also, notwithstanding. Maugre thine head; algate I suffer none. O. Pl., x, 284.

And Spenser, Ind Spenser,
Which when Sir Guyon saw, all were he wroth,
Yet algates mote he soft himself appease.
P. Q., II, ii, 12.

ALGRIM. A contraction of algorism, an old name for arithmetic.

Methought nothing my state could more disgrace. Methought nothing my state count more ung. Than to be are name, and in effect to be A cypher in algrim, as all men might see.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 838.

ALICANT. A Spanish wine, formerly much esteemed; said to be made near Alicant, and of mulberries.

You'll blood three pottles of alicant, by this light, if you follow them.

O. Pl., iii, 262.
r brats, got out of alicant.

B. & Fl., Chances, i, 9. Your brats, got out of alicant. means, "your children, the consequence of drunkenness." This is what is meant by allegant, in the Fair M. of the Inn, act iv, p. 399. [See ALIGAUNT.]

To ALIEN. To alienate; to wean. What remains now, but that he alien himselfo from the world, seeing what he had in the world is aliened from him.

Clitus. Whimz., p. 63.

A'-LIFE. As my life; excessively. I love a ballad in print a'-life.
Thou lov'st a'-life Wint. T., iv. 3.

Their perfum'd judgement. A clean instep,
And that I love a' life.
B. & Fl., Mons. Th., ii, 2.

The editor of 1750 very wisely altered it to "as life:" and the same emendation he has offered in B. and Fl.'s Wit at several Weapons, act iii, p. 292.

He loves a-life dead payes, yet wishes they may rather happen in his company by the scurvy, than by a battell.

Overbury's Char., fol. K., 8. A not uncommon mode +ALIGAUNT. of spelling alicant, the name of a wine.

See ALICANT.

Thirtie rivers more
With aligaunte; thirtie hills of sugar;
Ale flowed from the rockes, wine from the trees
Which we call muscadine. Timon, ed. Dyce, p. 39.
The ambassador receiving the cup from his princelye hand, returned againe to his owne place, where all of us standing, drank the same helth out of the same cup, being of fayre christall, as the emperor had commanded, the wine (as farre as my judgement gave leave) being alligant.
Sir Thomas Smith's Voyage to Russia, 1605.
Vinum atrum, Plaut. rubeum. Tinture. Redde wine or allegant.
Nomenclator, 1835. Thirtie rivers more

ALIGGE. See ALEGGE.

Although. ALL. And those two froward sisters, their faire loves, Came with them eke, all they were wondrous loth Sp., F. Q., II, ii, 34.

For exactly. All as the dwarfe the way to her assyn'd.

Spens., F. Q., I, vii, 18.

+ALL. The universe.

When there was neither time nor place, nor space, And silence did the chaos round imbrace: Then did the archwork-master of this all Create this massic universall ball,
And with his mighty word brought all to passe, Saying but, Let there be, and done it was.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Very.
It may be this my exhortation
Seems harsh, and all unpleasant.
Marlowe's Tragedy of Doctor Faustus. +ALL.

+When all comes to all, i.e., in the final result.

Parturiunt montes, nascetur ridiculus mus: he spake of a foxe, but when all came to all, it was but a ferne-brake. Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 574. brake. +A/l along, prostrate.

The bishop going into his study, which only could get into but himself, found his own picture lying all along on its face, which extremely perplexed him, he looking upon it as ominous. Heylin's Life of Archbishop Laud. +All one, all the same thing.

Olinia, you take your love otherwise then shee is: for shee lives after the old use and custome, and her mind towards you is all one that it was before, as farre as by the thing itselfe we two could conjecture.

Terrace in English, 1614.

But all's one, let him doe his worst, shee is confidently

But all's one, let him doe his worst, shee is condentity arm'd with innocency; and the threats or danger of the bad cannot affright her, but that shee will attempt to recreate the good.

Taylor's Worker, 1630.

It is all one, sir, where you open the book, his rhetorical humour is so very much the same.

Rachard's Observations, 8vo, 1671, p. 138.

†To throw or push at all, to risk the A term in gambling.

At dice they plaid for faieries; at each cast
A knight at least was lost: what doe you set? This knight cries one (and names him), no, a lord This knight cries one (and names nim), no, n ford or none; its done,—he throwes and sweepes the bord; His hatte is full of lords up to the brimme;

The sea threw next at all, won all and him.

Decker's Whore of Babylon, 1607.

Think not to please your servants with half-pay: Good gamesters never stick to through at all. Cotgrave's Wits Interpreter, 1671, p. 164.

Colgrase's Wits Interpreter, 1671, p. 164.
And so be all suspected: wondrous good.
Go bravely on then, Dampierre, push at all,
Honour attends th' attempt, tho thou shouldst fall.
Honour attends th' attempt, tho thou shouldst fall.

At all, quoth Rufus, lay you what you dare,
1'll throw at all, and 'twere a peck of gold;
No life lies on't, then coyn I'll never spare;
Why Rufus, that's the cause of all that's sold?
For which frank gamesters it doth oft befall,
They throw at all, till thrown quite out of all.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

ALL AND SOME. One and all; every one; everything.

Thou who wilt not love do this, Thou who wilt not love do this,
Learn of me what woman is;
Something made of thread and thrumme,
A mere botch of all and some. Herrick, p. 84.
In armour eke the souldiers all and some,
With all the force that might so soon be had.
Mirr. for Mag., p. 91.
LEGGE, ALLEGANCE. See

ALLEGGE. ALEGGE.

ALL TO. Entirely; very much. The to seems to have an augmentative power, so as to increase the force of the word following. Thus all-to-torn means very much torn. [Nares has apparently mistaken the origin of this form: to belongs to the following word, being a particle answering to the German zu-. To-broken, means broken to pieces; _to-frozen, intensely frozen; to-brake, broke to pieces.]

That did with dirt and dust him al-to-dash, Harr. Ariosto, xxxiv, 48. Now, forsooth, as they went together, often al-to-kissing one another, the knight told her he was brought up among the water aymphs. Pembr. Arc., p. 154.

Mercutio's yey hand had al to frozen mine.

Romeus and Jul., Suppl., i, 285.

It occurs even in the authorised version of the Bible:

And a certain woman cast a piece of a millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to brake his skull. Judges ix. 53.

Where it has sometimes been ignorantly printed "all to break." See Newcome on Versions, p. 303.

It is used also by Milton, in a very beautiful passage; and this, being the last known instance of it. has been much misunderstood.

Where, with her best nurse, Contemplation,
She [Wisdom] plunes her feathers, and lets grow her wings,
That, in the various bustle of resort,
Were all to ruffled, and sometimes impair'd. Comms. i, 376.

This has been read, "all too ruffled, as if to be ruffled in some degree was allowable, which the author certainly did not mean. Warton says, that the corruption began with Tickell: but it is so quoted at the end of No. 98 of the Tatler, whether in the original editions or not, I cannot say. I find it so in the London edition of 1797. All-to-be is also met with, but rather in a ludicrous way, and was so retained for a long time in jocular language, after beginning to be obsolete.

I'll have you chronicled and chronicled and cut and chronicled, and all-to-be-prais'd, and sung in sonnets.

B. & N., Philaster, act v.

The editors of 1750 unnecessarily changed this to "sung in all-to-beprais'd sonnets." It was right before. We find it in one of Swift's letters to Pope:

This moment I am so happy as to have a letter from Lord Peterborow, for which I intreat you will present him with my humble respects and thanks, the he all-to-be-Gullivers me by very strong insinuations. Letter 21.

I wonder my Lord of Canterbury is not once more all-to-be-traytor'd for dealing with the lyons, to settle the commission of array in the Tower.

Clevel., Char. of a dinra. Wr.

+ALL-BONES. A nickname for a thin bony fellow in How a Man may Chuse a Good Wife from a Bad, 1602.

+ALL-CIRCUMFERENCE. cumference of the universe.

cumference of the universe.

Th' eternal spring of power and providence,
In forming of this all-circumference,
Did not unlike the bear, which bringeth forth
In th' end of thirty dayes a shapeless birth
Die Bartas.

+ALLECTED. Enticed.

Tooke great booties and riche prayes both of goodes and prisoners, and allected with the sweetnesse of such spoyle.

Holinsked's Chronicles, 1577.

†ALLECTIVE. A bait; an allurement. For what better alective coulde Satan devise, to allure and bring men pleasantly into dammable servitude.
Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

Wherein ar comprysyde many and dyvers solacyons and ryght preguant allectypes of syngular pleasure, as more at large it doth apere in the pres flowyrge.

British Bibliographer, 1v, 390.

+To ALLEGATE. To allege.

Why, belike he is some runnagate, that will not show his

Ah, why should I this allegate? he is of noble fame.

Peele's Works, iii, p. 68.

ALLESTREE. Richard, of Derby, a celebrated almanac-maker in Ben Jonson's time.

On's time.

A little more

Would fetch all his astronomy from Allestree.

B. Jon., Magn. Lady, iv, 9. ALL-HALLOWN Summer, i. e., late summer; all-hallows meaning All Saints, which festival is the first of November.

Farewel, thou latter spring! farewel, all-hallown summer | 1 Hen. IV. i. 2. In the ignorance of Popish superstition, all-hallows was worshipped as a single saint; or at least this ignorance was imputed to them.

Frendes, here shall ye se evyn anone Of all-hallowes the blessed jaw-bone, Kisse it hardely with good devocion.

Four Ps. O. P., i. 74. †And least (quoth he) you deeme it were presumption, thad least (quota he) you deeme it were presumption, If I should offer you my hare assumption, I sweare all-hallows, I will make repayment, I see though I pawn mine armour and my rayment.

Sir John Harington's Epigrams, 1633.

+ALLIANT, adj. Akin to.

Thys they toke so muche the souner, bycause, it is sumwhat ally sunts to them. More's Utopia, 1551.

sumwhat altyaunte to them. More's Utopia, 1881.

Ts. A kinsman; a relation.

Wherefore Jesus, thoughe he were almyghtye, and desyrous to save as many as myght be, yet could he not there among his countreymen worke many myracles, for that he was letted so to dooe by the unbelefe of his acquayntaunce and kynsfolkes. For where as being among alyeuntes, he had casely cured very many of all kyndes of diseases, caste out dyels, and healed leapers, here in his owne countrey, he oneley healeth a fewe sicke folkes, and that with the lavine of his handes upon them. laying of his handes upon them.

Paraphrase of Brasmus, 1548.

ALLIGARTA. The alligator, or crocodile. In Spanish lagarto.

It appears by the following passage, that the urine of this creature was supposed to render any herb poisonous on which it was shed.

And who can tell, if before the gathering and making up thereof, the alligaria hath not pisa'd thereon?

B. Jons., Bart. F., ii, 6.

†ALL-NIGHT. A wick set in the middle of a large cake of wax. Johns. & Stev. Shak., vii, 146.

ALLOW, v. To approve.

Ober'ns,

O bear'ns,

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway

Allow obedience.

First, whether ye allow my whole device—

And if ye like it, and allow it well.

O. Pl., i, 114. See also, ii, 149.

†In the time of Romulus, all heads were rounded of j his fashion: in the time of Cæsar, curled of his manner. When Cyrus lived, every one praised the hooked nose, and when he died, they allowed the straight nose. And so it fareth with love.

Lylie's Euphus and his England, 1623.

†To ALLUDE, v. To compare.

In which respects having spoken of a few, He skip over the rest to avoid tediousnesse; and to free my selfe from the imputation of partiality, He at land allude her to a water-man. Tajor's Works, 1630.

ALLOWANCE. Approbation.

A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant.

Tro. # Cr., ii, 8.

Spenser has very licentiously accented this word on the first syllable.

Through fowle intemperance Frayle men are oft' captiv'd to covetise But would they thinke with how small allowance Untroubled Nature doth herself suffise. Such superfluities they would despise F. Q., II, vii, 15.

ALMAIN-LEAP. A dancing leap.

And take his almain-leap into a custard.

B. Jon., Dev. an Ass, i, 1. Almain, or allemande, by the testimony of Skinner and others, meant a kind of solemn music. So in Tancred and Gismunda, Introductio in actum tertium, "Before this act the haubois sounded a lofty almain." O. Pl., 230. The connection between music and dancing is so intimate, that there is no wonder that it should signify a dance also. Allemands were danced here a few years back.

Also, a German:

Your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander, are nothing to your English—he drinks you with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander, &c. Oth., ii, 8.

Of Almains, and to them for their stout captain gave The valiant Martin Swart.

Drayt. Polyolb., S. 22, p. 1102. †ALMAN, or ALEMAN. A German.

Chonodomarius and Vestralpus, Aleman kings, after they had put to flight Barbatio, colonell of the Romane footmen, and chased part of the armie with a puissant army, sat them downe neere unto Argentoratum, and by their embassadours insult over Julianus.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. Tis good to be and have, a Greek, I think, Tis good to be and have, a Greek, a boom, Once said; an Alman added, and to drink.

Oncen's Epi

+ALMAN-RIVET. A sort of light armour derived from Germany.

The 2 of July, the citizens of London had a muster afore the queenes majestic at Greenewich in the parke, of 1400 men, whereof 800 were pikemen all in fine corselets, 400 harquebuts, in shirts of maile, with morins, and 200 halberters in alman-risets, which were furnished and set foorth by the companies of the Store's Chronicle. citie of London.

ALMAINY, or ALMANY. Germany.

Allemagne, Fr.
And walk with my petticoats tucked up, like
A long maid of Almainy.
O. Pl., viii, 438.
Now Fulko comes, that to his brother gave
His land in Italy, which was not small,
And dwelt in Almany.

Harr., Ariost., iii, 30.

†ALMERIE, s. A cupboard; the low Latin almariolum.

> Into the buttrie hastelie he veede. And stale into the almerie to feede.
>
> Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

†ALMONDS were very extensively used in a variety of preparations for the Almond-milk, composed of almonds ground and mixed with milk or other liquid was a favorite beverage, as were also almond-butter and The antiquity of almond-custard. the practice of serving almonds and raisins together at dessert, seems to be shown from the name almonds-andraisins being given as that of an old English game, in Useful Transactions in Philosophy, 1709, p. 43. Almond-cakes were perhaps what we now call a macaroon.

A. Give me then some crummes of bread, or of my powder of almond cakes, with beane flower, and the powder of asmona little sheeres also.

M. Heere they are.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612. +ALMOSE, s. Alms.

ALMOSE, s. Alms.

Be yt then established and enactyd, that the governor of any such monastery, which at any tyme shall be voyde of religious persons, shall bestow the money, wherwyth he was befor chargyd, for the fynding and stypending of the sayd religeous persons in the almose and releft of the poor people of the same town, or yter, wheryn the sayd monasterys standyth, yf ther be sufficient nomber to be cheryshed, or elle yn the townys nex adjoining therunto, by the discretion of the sayd governor and surveyor of the sayd lands, and provost of the sayd cort of Centenar.

Old Monast. Rules. A nobleman sent a gent of his, in great diligence, about some especiall affaires, and such was his diligence that he kill'd his lords horse by the way. Being returned home, it pleas'd the nobleman to make him pay fifty crownes for the horse, saying that he was content to reward him so well as to forgive him the rest. The gentleman thought himselfe hardly dealt withall, and answered: Sir, this is neither reward nor almose.

Copley's Witk, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

ALMES-GATE, s. The gate at which the alms of the house were distributed the alms of the house were distributed to the poor.

Tarlton called Burley-house gate, in the Strand towards the Savoy, the lord treasurers almes-gate, because it was seldom or never opened.

Tarlton's Jests.

†ALMUTE. A governing planet.
Without a sign masculine? Dem. Sir, you mistake me: You are not yet initiate. The all Of the ascendent is not elevated The almutes Above the almutes of the filial house:
Venus is free, and Jove not yet combust.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646.

†ALMS-PENNY seems to mean what

We should call a lucky penny.

Father, here is an alms-penny for me, and if I speed in that I go for, I will give thee as good a gown of grey as ever thou diddest werr.

Pent's Old Wines Tale 1505

Pecle's Old Wives Tale, 1595. Upwards. †ALOFT, adv. To come aloft was used in the sense of to rise, to prosper.

Diogenes having seen that the kingdom of Macede which before was contemptible and low, began to come aloft, when he died, was asked how he would be buried, he answered, With my face downward; for within a while the world will be turned upuide down, within a while the worm with war within a while the world with and then I shall lie right.

King James's Witty Apothegus.

I wyll, said Wyll, clyme hye alought; Such folke, said Wytte, fall muche onsought. MS. Coll. Corp. Christ., 168.

ALONELY, adv. Merely; only.

I speak not this alonly for mine owne.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 367.

Alonely let me go with thee, unkind. Fairf. T., xvi, 47. Mr. Todd has found examples of it as an adjective. But the derivation is surely from the English word alone. and not from a foreign source.

†ALONGST. Along. LONGST. Along.

And as alongst 1 did my journey take,
I dranke at Broomes-well, for pure fashions sake.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

He that, still stooping, toghes against the tide
His laden barge alongst a rivers side,
And filling shears with shouts, doth melt him quite;
Upon his pallet resteth yet at night.

Du Bartas, by Sylvester.

ALOW, adv. Low down; the common correlative to aloft, but used without it in the following instance.

Not the thousandth part so much for your learning, and what other gifts els you have, as that you will creep alone by the ground.

For: Life of Tindal.

See Wordsw. Eccl. Biog., ii, 266, and the note. Todd has aloft and alow together, from Dryden.

ALOYSE. A word, of which the meaning and etymology are both uncertain.

Aloyse, aloyse, how pretie it is! is not here a good face?

O. Pl., i, 298.

Chaucer uses alosed for praised, but that seems not to afford any illustration. Perhaps it may be for alas! alas! There is much corrupted language in the same scene.

ALS. At the same time. And the cleane waves with purple gore did ray, Als in her lap a lovely babe did play.

Sp., F. Q., II, i, 40.

ALSATIA. A jocular name for a part of the City of London, near Fleet Street, properly called the White Friars, from a convent of Carmelites formerly there situated. "In the year 1608," says an account of London, "the inhabitants [of this district] obtained several liberties, privileges, and exemptions, by a charter granted them by King James I; and this rendered the place an asylum for insolvent debtors, cheats, and gamesters, who gave to this district the name of Alsatia;" but the inconvenience suffered by the city from this place of | +AMARITUDE. s. refuge, at length caused it to be suppressed by law. Shadwell's comedy of The Squire of Alsatia alludes to this place; and it is mentioned also by Steele, where he says, that two of his supposed dogs (i. e., gamblers or sharpers) "are said to be whelped in Alsatia, now in ruins; but they," he adds. "with the rest of the pack, are as pernicious as if the old kennel had never been broken down." Tatler. No. 66, near the end.

ALSO, with accent on the last syllable, was not unfrequently used.

Lest as the blame of yll succeeding thinges Shall light on you, so light the harmes also.

O. Pl., i, 113. See also 117.

+ALTOGETHER.

LTOGETHER. Entirely.

Hereupon it cometh that they which have this disease, are neither like the frenticke altogether, nor like them that have the lethargy. This disease is caused some-time of abundance of bloud flowing to the head and replenishing it. Borrough, Method of Physick, 1624.

+ALTRICATION. Altercation: squabbling. "I love not to fall into altrication." Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 394.

That is tit for tat in this altrication.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556. TALUFFE. More nearly to the wind; aloof. An old nautical term.

Sound, sound, heave, heave the lead, what depth, what Fadom and a halfe, three all; [depth? Then with a white the winds againe doe puffe, And then the master cries aluff, aluffe. Testor's Workes, 1630.

+ALVARY.

LVAEL.

An alway for the spleene.

Take a pinte of als clarified, and put therein a crust of bread, then take the powder of gentiana, spignard, gallingul, of each two pennyworth, let them have a boying or a walme, then take it off the fire, and drinke thereof morning and evening, and it will cure the spleane.

The Pathwey to Health.

ALWAY. This too is not uncommon [with the accent on the last syllable.] Thereby a crystall streame did gently play,
Which from a sacred fountain welled forth alway.

Spens., F. Q., I, i, 34.

AMAIMON. The supposed name of a Amaimon sounds well! Lucifer, well; &c. but cuckold!

Her. W., ii, 2.

He of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, made Lacifer euckold, &c. 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. Amaymon, says R. Holmes, "is the chief whose dominion is on the north part of the infernal gulf." Acad. of Arm., b. ii, ch. 1. But he gives AMBERGREASE, Amber gris. Lite-Sidonay or Osmoday the rank above him, 6 5.

Bitterness. The Latin amaritudo.

As sweet as galls amaritude, it is;
And seeming full of pulchritude, it is.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†AMASS, s. A heap. From the French.
This pillar is nothing in effect but a medlic or an awasse of all the precedent ornaments, making a new kinde by stealth.

Wotton's Elements of Architecture, 1624, p. 88.

AMATE, v. To daunt, or dishearten; to astonish. See To MATE.

Upon the wall the Pagans old and young Stood hush'd and still, amated and amaz'd. Pairf. T., xi, 12.

No more appall'd with fear
Of present death, than he whom never dread
Did once assate.

For never knight, that dared warlike deed, More luckless dissadventures did amate.

Spens., F. O., I. ix. 45. Which, when the world she meaneth to amate, Wonder invites to stand before her there.

†Through which mischaunce the residue of the Cumys were so amated. Holiusked's Chronicles. †That I amazed and amated am

That I amazed and amated am
To see Great Britaine turn'd to Amaterdam.
Taylor's Mad Fashions, Od Fashions, 1642.
†A crew of armed men breaketh forth: and . . . entred into the palace, plucked Silvanus forth of a little chappell, whither hee was fied all amated and breathchappen, winther nee was ned an amatea and oreath-lesse, and as he was going to a congregation of the Christian religion, with many strokes of swords slew him outright. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. Also, to bear company; which is only mate with a prefixed. See A.

+AMATORIOUS, adj. Amatory.

Any secret sleight, or cunning, as drinkes, drugges, medicines, charmed potions, amatorious philters, figures, characters, or any such like paltering instruments, devises, or practices.

Newton, Tryall of a Man's owne Selfe, 1602, p. 116.

AMBAGE. Circumlocution. From the Latin ambages.

Epigramma, in which every mery conceited man might, without any long studie or tedious ambage, make his frend sport, and anger his foe, and give a prettie nip, or shew a sharpe conceit in a few verses.

Puttenham, Art of Poesie, L. i, ch. 27.
†Umh! y'are ful of ambage.

Decker's W hore of Babylon, 1607.
†Thus from her cell Cumman Sibyll sings

Ambiguous ambages, the cloyster rings
With the shrill sound thereof, in most dark strains.

Wirgil, translated by Vicars, 1632.

†AMBASSADE, and AMBASSAGE. An embassy. From the French.

These Scottish men being thus troubled in Irelande, finally addressed an ambassade unto Metellus, . . . requiring him of ayde and succour agaynate theyr enimyes.

Holinske's Chronicles, 1517. quiring him of ayue and success. Aronicles, 1577. The 8. of Octob. being the 4. day after our coming to Musco, the prestaves came to his lordship to let him understand they heard he should goe up the next day, wherefore they desired his speech and ambassage to the emperour.

Sir Thomas Smith's Voyage to Russia, 1605. When she saw opportunity, she asked me whether the Italian were my messenger; or if he were, whether his ambassage were true, which question I thus answered.

Lytie's Emphuse and his England.

rally gray amber, from its colour and perfume. Long known, and formerly much used in wines, sauces, and perfumes. It is found floating on the sea in warm climates, and is now generally agreed by chemists to be produced in the stomach of the physeter macrocephalus, or spermaceti whale. There is no doubt that it is an animal secretion. Various other conjectures of its origin were formerly suggested. Thoms. Chem., V.

Tis well, be sure

The wines be lusty, high, and full of spirit,
And amber'd all.

B. J. Fl., Cust. of Country, iii, 2.
I had clean forgot; we must have ambergrise,
The greyest can be found.

O. Pl., vii, 167. This is for furnishing a banquet. Milton has inverted the word; in the banquet produced by the devil to tempt our Saviour, he tells us,

OUT DAVIOUS, and Meats of noblest sort, &c.

Par. Reg., ii, 341. Gris-amber steam'd. It was considered also as provocative:

Or why may not
Your learn'd physician dictate ambergrease,
Or powders, and so obey him in your broths?
Have you so strange antiputhy to women? O. Pl., ix, 49.
And to maintain his goatish luxury, (i. e. lewdness)
Eats capons cooks at fifteen crowns apiece,
With their fat belies stuff'd with ambergrise.

Dray!. Mooncalf, p 483.

It was sometimes called merely amber. See Warton on Comus, 1.368.

AMBES-ACE. See AMES-ACE.

+AMBODEXTER. One who keeps fair with both parties, who is the friend of whoever is uppermost.

But at this word me thought a number new, Some others wishte them fishes in the sea:
An other sorte began to hyde their head,
And many other did ambodezter play.

Golden Mirrour, 1589.

AMBREE, MARY. An English heroine, immortalised by her valour at the siege of Ghent in 1584. The ballad composed to her honour is in Percy's Reliques of ancient English Poetry, vol. ii, p. 218. She is mentioned also by Beaumont and Fletcher in the Scornful Lady, act. v; and several times by Ben Jonson, who, in his masque of the Fortunate Isles, particularly mentions the ballad:

That Mary Ambres
Who marched so free To the siege of Gaunt, And death could not daunt, (As the ballad doth vaunt,) &c.

Her name was therefore proverbially applied to women of strength and spirit.

My daughter will be valiant,
And prove a very Mary Ambry i' the business.
B. Jons., Tale of a Tub, i, 4.

tOh, Mary Ambres! good, thy judgement, weach; Thy bright elections cleere; what will be proove? Marston, Anton. & Mellida, Part I, i, l. AMBRY. Corrupted from almonry. A street in Westminster is so called. being the place where the alms of the abbey were distributed: it is situated to the west of the Broad Sanctuary. +AMEBLY. Apparently means a simpleton.

Hea. Till that you have undone yourself you mean.

Mo. Ey save you both: for derne love sayen southly.

Where is thylk amebly, Francklin, cleped Meanwel?

Hear. Hee's gone abroad.

Mo. Lere me whylk way he wended.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1881. Enamelling. AMEL.

Heav'ns richest diamonds, set in amel white. Fletch. Purple Isl., x, 33.

Marke how the payle is curiously inchased,
In these our daies such workes are seldome found.

The landle with such anticks is imbraced, Inc nance with such antices is imbraced,
As one would thinck they leapt above the ground;
The ammell is so faire and fresh of hew,
And to this day it seemeth to be new.

An ould facioned love, by J. T., 1594.

A husband like an ammel would inrich

A husband like an ammel would inrich
Your golden virtues. Dutchess of Suff., A. 4.
†Inriching, with such change
His powerfull stile; and with such sundry ammel!
Paynting his phrase, his prose or verse enumel.
Du Bartas, by Sybester.
†Then he admires his silver-boots most light,
With gold and ammell wrought, and well refin'd.
Virgil, by Vicars, 1653.
†He seemes a full student, for hee is a great desiret of contraversies hee argues abstraly and carries his

of controversies, hee argues sharpely and carries his conclusion in his scabbrd, in the first refining of mankind this was the gold, his actions are his samed.

Overburg's New and Choise Characters, 1816. Amelled for enamelled. See Todd.

AMENAGE and AMENAUNCE. Carriage; behaviour; conduct. And with grave speech and grateful amenancs Himself, his state, his spouse, to them commended.

Ph. Fletcher's Purp. Is., xi, 9.

To manage. To AMENAGE, v.

MENAUE, v. 10 insump.

With her, whose will raging furor tame,

Must first begin, and well her amenage.

Sp., F. Q., II, iv, II. †AMENDSFUL. Atoning; making amends. He said, and his amendaful words did Hector highly please.

Chapman, Il., iii, 63.

AMERCE. To punish. Originally to punish by fine, and so still used. Where every one that misseth then her make Shall be by him amers! with penance dew.

Sp. Sonnet, 70. Now, daughter, see'st thou not how I amerce
My wrath, that thus bereft thee of thy love,
Upon my head.

O. Pl., ii, 228.

AMES-ACE, or AMBS-ACE. Two aces on the dice. Ambesas, Fr. being the old French for both. See Roquefort, Glossaire.

I had raum-for my life. May I I had rather be in this choice, than throw sme-All's W. ii, S.

May I

At my last stake, when there is nothing else
To lose the game, throw ames-ace thrice together!

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 238.

This expression was already current in Chaucer's time [and long before]:

O noble, O prudent folk, as in this cas
Your bagges ben not filled with smbes as,
But with sis ciak, that renueth for your chance.

Man of Lawses Tale, 1. 25.

And it has been used so lately as the time of Wollaston:

No man can certainly foretell that sice ace will come up upon two dies fairly thrown before ambs-ace: yet any one would choose to lay the former, because in nature there are twice as many chances for that as for the other. Religion of Nature, sect 3, prop. xvi.

+AMIDMONGE, adv. Meanwhile.

Myne ended welth now turnde to endles wo,

Amydmonge hir false flaterie proveth so.

Heywood's Spider & Flie, 1556.

AMICE, or AMIS. Properly a priest's robe, but used also for any vest, or flowing garment.

Aray'd in habit blacke, and amis thin Like to a holy monk, the service to begin.

Sp., P. Q., I, iv, 18.

A word not quite obsolete, being used d in habit blacks, and smis thin by Milton, and even by Pope.

AMISS. Used as a substantive. fault or misfortune.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is, Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss. Ham., iv. 5.

See Sh. Sonnet, 35.

Thou well of life, whose streames were purple blood
That flowed here, to cleanse the fould amizes

Fairf. Tasso, iii, 8. Soul, for foule, is a mere error of the press in the reprint of 1749. In the edition of 1624, it stands as above.

Let slip such lines as might inherit fame And from a volume culs some small amisse.

Browne's Brit. Past., ii, 2, p. 44.

Yet love, thou'rt blinder than thyself in this, To vex my dove-like friend for my amiss.

Donne, Bleg., xiv, 29.

+To AMIT. To admit: to restore. Kynge Edwardys tyme were anullede, and kynge Herry was amitted to his crowne and dignite ageyne, and alle his men to there enherytaunce. Warkworth's Chronicle.

+AMNER. An almoner.

For the rich are but Gods amners, and their riches are committed to them of God to distribute and doe good, as God doth himselfe. Smith's Sermons, 1609.

+AMONG. To and among was equivalent to here and there.

Shee travels to and among, and so becomes a woman of good entertainment, for all the follie in the countrie comes in cleane linen to visit her.

Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1615.

†AMORET. A form of poetical composition; a love sonnet.

Observe one thing, there's none of you all no sooner in love, but he is troubled with their itch, for he will be in his amorets, and his canzonets, his pastorals, and his madrigals, to his Phillis, and his Amaryllis.

Heywood's Love's Mistress, p. 27.

AMORT. All amort, in a manner dead, spiritless. Fr.

Spiritiess. Fr. llow fares my Kate? what, sweeting, all amort?

Tam. Shr., iv, 8.

What, all amort? what's the matter? do you hear?
O. Pl., v. 448. See ALAMORT.

Ambiguous. +AMPHIBOLOGICAL.

Hortensius replyed, that, on every demand that should be propounded to him, he would provide him with such amphibological answers, that although they were nothing but the truth, yet they should conduce much to prove that which he desired.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

+AMRALL. An admiral.

Whan with their seete in goodly aray, the Greekish armies

From Tenedos were come (for than full friendly shone the In silence great their wonted shore they tooke, and then a

Their amrall ship for warning shewed, whan kept all Gods to shame.

Phace's Virgill, 1600.

+To AMUSE. To divert.

And all this you must ascribe to the operations of love, which hath such a strong virtuall force, that when it fastneth upon a pleasing subject, it exte the imagination in a strange fit of working, it imployes all the faculties of the soul, so that not one cell in the brain is idle, it busieth the whole inward man, it affects the heart, amuseth the understanding, it quickneth the fancy. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

ANADEM. A crown of flowers or other materials, apparently distinguished by Drayton from a chaplet.

Oy Drayton from a chapter.
Upon this joyful day, some dainty chaplets twine:
Some others chosen out with fingers neat and fine
Brave anadems do make: some bauldricks up do bind.
Drayt. Polyolb., song 15, p. 945.

Yet he elsewhere speaks of anadems of flowers:

And for their nymphals building amorous bowers, Oft drest this tree with anadems of flowers.

Dr. Works, 8vo, p. 1320.

The lowly dales will yield us anadems

To shade our temples.

Browne's Brit. Past., ii, 1, p. 80. Chapman concludes his Hymns of Homer, †Make me of palm, or yew, an anadem.

+ANASTOMIZE, v.

That too inferiour branch, which strove to rise
With the busillick to anastomize;
Thus drain'd, the states plethorick humours are Thus drain'd, the state process of the Reduc'd to harmony.

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

+ANATOMY. A skeleton.

I verily did take thee for some sp'rite:
Thou lookst like an anatomy.
Timon, ed. Dyce, p. 53. ANCHOR. An abbreviation of anchoret, a hermit. ermit.

To desperation turn my trust and hope,
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope.
Ham., iii, 3.

This couplet is wanting in the first two folios. The phrase is used also by Bishop Hall.

y Bishop man.
Sit seven yeares pining in an anchor's cheyre.
Sat. B. iv, s. 2.

From the expression sit in, it seems that an anchor's chair, or seat, is meant, in the latter passage. But that would make nonsense in the former, and therefore was injudiciously proposed by Mr. Steevens as the probable reading. In the chair of an hermit there is nothing characteristic, but in his cheer or fare there †ANCHOR. A Dutch liquid measure. See the notes of the commentators on Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 3.

j

ANCIENT. A standard, or flag. Ten times more dishonourably ragged than an old fac'd ancient.

1 Hen. IV, 1v, 2.

Also the ensign-bearer, or officer now called an ensign. Thus, Pistol was Falstaff's ancient or ensign.

Are you not, bawd, a whore's ancient? and must I not follow my colours?

O. Pl. iii. 481. Skinner says the word ancient is only a corruption of ensign.

A kind of boil, sore, or ANCOME. foul swelling in the fleshy parts. Kersey's Dict.

Swell bigger and bigger till it has come to an ancome. O. Pl., iv, 238.

AND. The participial termination, prior toing. [More correctly a dialectic form.] His glitterand armour shined far away.
Sp., F. Q., I, vii, 29.

It is very common in that author.

ANELE, v. To anoint, or give extreme unction; from ele, Saxon, for oil.

So when he was houseled and aneled, and had all that a Christian man ought to have.

Mort d'Arthur, p. iii, c. 175. Cited eneled by Capel, School of Sh.,

p. 176.
The extreme unction or anclyage, and confirmacion, he sayed be no sacraments of the church.

ats of the church.

Sir Thus. More's Works, p. 345.

with promise.

16., 879. Also, encyling is without promise

To anoyle was also used:

The byshop sendeth it to the curates, because they should therwith annoynt the sick, in the accument of anaging.

Sir Thos. More's Works, p. 431.
Also children were christen'il, and men houseld and annoyled thorough all the land. Holinsh, vol. ii, n. 6. See UNANELED, and Housel.

ANENST. Against. A Chaucerian word.

ST. Against. A dog snarling-er.

B. Jon., Alchem., act ii. ANGEL. A gold coin worth about ten shillings. Shakespeare puns on it:

You follow the young prince up and down like his Not so, my lord; your ill engel is light; but I hope he that looks on me will take me without weighing.

2 Hen. IV, i, 2.

So Donne too:

O shall twelve righteous angels, which as yet
No leaven of vile solder did admit; &c.
Angels which heav'n commanded to provide
All things for me, &c. &c.

Elegy, xii, 9—22.

It appears from the following epigram, that a lawyer's fee was only an angel: Upon Anne's Marriage with a Lawyer; Anne is an angel, what if so she be? What is an angel but a lawyer's fee? Wit's Recreations, Epigr. 594.

†There spake an angel, was a common phrase of approval of a proposal made See the Play of Sir by another. Thomas More, p. 6.

+ANGEL-GOLD. Gold used for coining angels was so termed, being of a finer kind than crown gold.

+ANGELICA. The virtues of this plant are constantly alluded to by Elizabethan writers. Gerard, p. 147, says, "The rootes of garden angelica is a singular remedie against poison, and against the plague, and all infections taken by evill and corrupt aire; if you do but take a peece of the roote, and holde it in your mouth, or chew the same betweene your teeth, it doth most certainly drive away the pestilentiall aire."

Angellica, which, eaten every meale,
Is found to be the plagues best medecine.

The News Metamorphosis, MS. temp. Jac. I.

ANGELOT. A kind of small cheese made commonly in France. Kersey. So also Skinner.

Your angelots of Brie, Your Marsolini, and Parmusan of Lodi.

angelots.

O. Pl., viii, 483. The following are receipts for making

angelots.]

†To make angelots. Take a quart of milk and a pint of cream, and put two spoonfuls of runnet to it, and when it curdles, put it into a fat by spoonfuls, and then let it remain till it is stiff, so spinkle it with a little salt, and let it dry for use.

†To make angelets. Take a quart of new milk and a pint of cream, and put them together with a little runnet, when it is come well take it up with a spoon, and put it into the vate softly and let it stand 2 days till it is pretty stiff, then slip it out and sail it a luttle at both ends, and when you think it is sult enough, set it a drying, and wipe them, and within a quarter of a year they will be ready to eat.

A True Gentlescoman's Delights, 1676, p. 21.

ANGELS. The fanciful division of the celestial angels into nine hierarchies, adopted by Heywood and others, and even by Milton, was derived from a Latin work, entitled, Dionysius de Cælesti Hierarchia.

+ANGEL-TOUCHE. An earth-worm. Sometimes written angle-twitch or angle-twache. From the Fr. anguille. Take angell-lowchis, and grinds them small, but first wash them as cleane as ye may, then put thereto a quantity of neates-foote oyle, and a quantity of vineger, drinke this medicine cold three times, and it will cause you to cast out all the sickness in your body presently.

The Pathway of Health, bl. let. +ANGEL-WATER. A very fashionable perfume in the seventeenth century.

Cans. I met the pretty'st creature in New Spring. Garden! her gloves right marshal, her petticoat of the new rich Indian stuffs, her fan colambor: angel-mater was the worst sent about her.—I am sure she was of quality.

Sedley's Bellamira.

The following receipt for making it is given in the Accomplished Female Instructor:

Angel-meter, an excellent perfume; also a curious wash to beautify the skin. Prepare a glar'd earthen pot, and put into it 16 ounces of orange-flower-water, quarter of a pound of benjanine, two ounces of storax, half an ounce of cinnamon, and a quarter of an ounce of cloves growly bruised with three drams of calamus aromaticus; set them over hot embers, or a calamus aromaticus; set them over not empers, or a gentle fire to simmer or bubble up well; when about a fifth part is consumed, add a bladder of musk, and a few minutes after take it off, and let it cool, pour it of by inclination from the settlings, and put it into a takek glass bottle, and of the dross, you may make perfused cakes, or sweet bags, to lay amongst cloahs.

+ANGINE. The quinsey. Lat. angina. But as they say of great Hyppocrates,
Who (though his himbs were numm'd with no excess,
Nor stopt his throat, nor vest his fautasie;
Knew the cold cramp, th' angine, and lunacy,
And hundred els-pains, whence in lusty flowr
He lived exempt a hundred yeers and foure.

Sylvester's Dn Bartas.

+ANGLING-WAND. A fishing-rod.

I dowt not but though you shall be farr off, you will use a long anglyng-wand to catch some knowledg.

Letter dated 1565.

+ANGRINESS. Inflammation of the

They yeeld great substance, and their sweate by reason of the usuall heate, takes away the angrinesse and rednesse of skars, as doth fresh virgin parchment. The Passenger of Bensenuto, 1612.

ANGRY BOYS. See Boys. AN-HEIRS. This uncommon expression of Shakespeare has puzzled all the commentators. Nothing can be made of it without alteration. The best conjecture seems to be, that it should be, Will you go aneirst? a provincial term for the nearest way, or directly. This makes the sense perfect. The passage is,

Will you go an-heirs? Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Mer. W., ii, 1. The conjecture of Dyce, which seems now to be the approved reading, is mynheers.]

AN IF. Used for if.

IIF. USCU 101 sp. No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak. S Hen. FI, v, 5 The expression is very common in old writers.

+ANIMALLILIO. A diminutive animal; an animalcule.

As I was musing thus, I spyed a swarm of gnats waving up and down the syr about nie, which I knew to be part of the univers as well as I, and me thought it was a strange opinion of our Aristotle to hold that the leas: of those small insected ephemerans should be more noble than the sun, because it had a sensitive soul in it, I fell to think that the same proportion which those animalillios bore with me in point of bignes, the same I held with those glorious spirits which are near the throne of the Almighty.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+ANNIVERSE. An anniversary.

Hence sweep the almanack; Lilly, make room, And blanks enough for the new saints to come, All in red letters; as their faults have bin Scarlet, so limbe their anniverse of sin. Fletcher's Poems, p. 149.

+ANNOISE.

25

Thus Panthus: straight my heaven-spurr'd spirit me threw threw
Into the hottest flame, and fight; I view
Angry Erinnys, noise, ansoise; me guide
Rhipheus and valiant Iphitus, beside. Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

ANNOYE. Annoyance.

For Helen's rape the city to destroy
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy.

Shak., Rape of Lucrece, p. 551.
But pin'd away in anguish, and self-will'd annoy.

Duty in a sway in angulan, and seri-win a annoy.

Sp., F. Q., I, vi, 17.

When his fair flocks he fed upon the down.

The poorest shepherd suffered not annoy.

Drayt. Ect., 6, p. 1414.

+ANNULET. A ring.

Who can conceive, or censure in what sort
One loadstone-touched ann'let doth transport Another iron-ring, and that another,
Till foure or five hang dangling one in other?

Sylvester's Du Bartas.

ANON, SIR. Immediately, or pre-The customary answer sently, sir. of waiters, as they now say, "Coming, This appears not only in act ii, scene 4, of the first part of Henry IV, where it is the constant reply of Francis, the waiter, when called, but in these lines:

Like a call without anon, sir, Or a question without an answer, Like a ship was never rigged, &c.

And again,

Th' anon, sir, doth obey the call.
Speak in the Dolphin, speak in the Swan,
Drawer; anon, sir, anon.

Witts Recreations, sign. T. 7; it is there incorrectly printed non-sir, but the meaning is plain.

+ANOPTICAL. Dim-sighted.

But as touching the shaddowes above our eie in the anopticall sight, I holde, that howe much the more the pictures sceme to be shortned, and their inward parts to rise higher and lower, that the lights and shaddows may be seene, so much the more or lesse light they have towards their upper parts.

Lomatins on Painting, 1598.

+ANOTHER. To become another man ; i. e. to reform.

He is nowe become another man, he hath nowe re-covered himselfe againe. Terence in English, 1614. covered himselfe againe.
ANOTHER-GATES.

Another sort. And his bringing up another-gates marriage than such a minion.

Lyly's Mother Bombie, act i.

See OTHERGATES. +ANOTHER-GUESS. Another sort.

Whereas at present I am constrained to make another guesse divertisement, for that I cannot light upon any one author that pleaseth me, unlesse I could passe by his extravagance.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

O ANSWER. To agree with what +To ANSWER. has been foretold.

This put me in mind of a story in the legend, &c., of king Edward the Confessor being forewarned of his death by a pilgrim, to whom St. John the Evangelist revealed it, for which the king gave the pilgrim a rich ring off his finger. And the event answered.

Autrey's Miccellanies, p. 86.

A meal best de-+ANTE-SUPPER. scribed in the following extract:

And among these the earl of Carlisle was one of the quorum, that brought in the vanity of ante-suppers, not heard of in our fore-fathers' time. The manner of not heard of in our fore-fathers' time. The manner of which was to have the board covered at the first entrance of the ghests with dishes as high as a tall man could well reach, filled with the choicest and dearest viands sea or land could afford: and all this once seen, and having feasted the eyes of the invited, was in a manner thrown away, and fresh set on to the same height, having only this advantage of the other, that it was hot.

Osborne's Works, ed. 1673, p. 533, MINING DODDIA CINIAN.

ANTHROPOPHAGINIAN. A mock word, formed for the sake of the sound, from anthropophagus, a maneater, a canibal.

Go knock, and call; and he'll speak like an anthrop phaginian unto thee.

Mer. W., iv, The anthropophagi are mentioned also in Othello.

ANTICKS. Odd imagery, and devices.

All bar'd with golden bendes, which were cutayled

With curious antickes, and full fayre aumayld.

Sp., F. Q., 11, iii, 27.

†ANTIDOTARY, s. An antidote.

Of Astidotaria: And first of such as be made in a solide forme, by taking whereof the principall parts of the body be comforted and strengthened.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1612.

+ANTIKE. Ancient.

Whereon was graven in golden worke the stories all by row,
And deeds of lords of antike fame a long discourse to know.

Firgil, by Phaer, 1600.

ANTIKE, adj. Grotesque.

A foule deform'd, a brutish cursed crew,
In body like to autike work devised Of monstrous shape, and of an ugly hew.

Harr. Ariost., vi. 61.

ANTIMASQUE. Apparently a contrast to the masque, being a ridiculous interlude, dividing the parts of the more serious masque. Yet Jonson himself gives it antick-masque, in the Masque of Augurs. They were, in effect, antick; and were usually performed by actors hired from the theatres, the masque being often by ladies and gentlemen (Gifford). But the court was fond of them.

Sir, all our request is, since we are come we may be admitted, if not for a masque for an antick-masque.

Vol. vi, p. 124.

contend: then Mercuric, for his

†They meete and contend: then Mercurie, for his part, brings forth an anti-masque all of spirits or divine natures.

The Masque of the Inner Temple and Grayes Inne, 1619.

Jonson has given his opinion of these devices, and at the same time some insight into the nature of them, in another passage, speaking of antimasques:

Missques:

Meither do I think them

A worthy part of presentation,

Being things so heterogene to all device,

Mere by works, and at best outlandish nothings.

Neptune's Triumph, vol. vi, p. 100.

Lord Bacon has best elucidated them: LOTO DACON HAS DEST CHUCICATED THEM:

Let anti-masks not be long, they have been commonly of fools, satyrs, baboons, wild men, antiques, beasts, spirits, witches, Ethiops, pigmies, turquets, nymphs, rustics, cupids, statuas moving, and the like. As for angels, it is not comical enough to put them in astimasks; and anything that is hideous, as devils, giants, is on the other side as unfit. But chiefly let the musick of them be recreative, and with strange changes. Some sweet odours suddenly coming forth, without any drops falling, are in such a company, as there is steam and heat, things of great pleasure and refreshment. Essey 37. refreshment. They resembled the exodia of the Romans. The editors of B. and Fl., 1750, vol. ix, p. 247, say that the true reading is ante-mask; but this is a palpable mistake. ANTIPHONER, or ANTIPHONARYE. An anthem book, in the Popish service. It contained also "the invitatorics, hymns, responses, versicles, collects, chapters, and other things pertaining to the chanting of the canonical hours." Gutch. Collectan. Curios., ii, p. 168. Anthem, originally ant-hymn, is of similar derivation; a responsive hymn.

ANTIPHONS. Alternate singing: from άντὶ and φωνή.

In antiphons thus tune we female plaints. O. Pl., vii, 497. +To ANTIPODISE. To turn upside down.

This shewes mens witts are monstrously disguis'd, Or that our countrey is antipodis'd. Taylor's Mad Fashions, Od Pashions, 1643.

†ANTIQUATION, s. A rendering ob-

You bring forth now, great queen, as you foresaw An antiquation of the salique law. Cartwright's Poems, 1561.

ANTIQUE. Ancient. Accented on the first syllable.

Show me your image in some dutique book. Shak. So I see their dutique pen would have express'd Even such a beauty as you master now. Is., 106.
Not that great champion of the dutique world.

Spens., I, xi, 37.

ANTIQUE, or ANTIC. A burlesque and ridiculous personage, such as are mentioned above in ANTIMASQUE, which meant, in fact, an antic-mask:

or one performed by ridiculous characters.

ANTLING, SAINT, for ST. ANTHOLIN. or rather ANTONINE. A church in Budge Row, Watling Street, is named from him. The accounts of London in general say, corrupted from St. Antony: but Stowe expressly calls it

S. Anthonine's, pp. 200 and 201.

Sh' has a tongue will be heard further in a still morning than St. Antling's bell.

O. Pl., vi, 37. There was a lecture at that church early in a morning, much frequented by puritans, who are therefore called sometimes, "disciples of Saint Antling." In Randolph's Muses' Looking Glass, Mrs. Flowerdew, a puritan, says,

But this foppishness
Is wearisome; I could at our Saint Antlines,
Sleeping and all, ait twenty times as long. O. Pl., ix, 210.
The feast of St. Antonine was May 10.

†I do hope We shall grow famous; have all sorts repaire As duly to us, as the barren wives Of aged citizens do to St. Antholins.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

ANTRE. A cavern; antrum, Lat.

Wherein of astres vast, and desarts idle,
Bough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak.

Oth., i, 3.

+ANT-WART. A painful kind of wart. An ant-wart, which, being deepe-rooted, broad below, and little above, doth make one feele, as it were, the stinging of ants.

Nomenclator, 1585.

+To ANVIL. To form on the anvil. O ANVIII. AVAILABUTE OF THE SUPERIOR OF THE SUPERIOR AND ASSESSED OF THE S

+ANVILD, s. An anvil. Anglo-Saxon

She was sette naked upon a smythes colde ansylde or stythie.

Holinshed's Chronicles.

+ANY-TIME. In the sense of continually.

He has been at me for a bit out of my master's flock, any time these three weeks; I'll pleasure him with her for ready mony.

Richard Brome's Northern Lass.

APAY, or APPAY. To pay, satisfy, or content. Usually with well or ill. [Well apaid, glad; ill apaied, sorie." Rider's Dictionarie, 1640.

Rider's Dictionarie, 10411.]
Till thou have to my trusty ear
Committed what doth thee so ill apay.
Spens. Dophnaida, 69.
Glad in his heart, and inly well appaid
That to his court so great a lord was brought.
First. T., ix, 5.

They buy thy help: but sin no'er gives a fce, He gratis comes; and thou art well appay'd, As well to hear as grant what he hath said.

As well to hear as grant what he hath said.

Shak Rape of Lucrece, p. 526.

The Christians contenting themselves to have distressed the chiefe cities the Turkes held in Hungarie, and the Turks no lesse apaied to have relieved the same.

Exceller' History of the Turks, 1603.

tHowbeit, as bloudie and mortall as this conflict was, it ended with the day: and when as many as could any waies make shift departed in disorder, the rest every one recovered their tents again, heavily appayed.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

tFor plenteousnes is but a naked name,
And what sufficeth use of mortall men
Shal best apay the meane and modest hearts.

In solutum accipere, to compte a thing a-paied.

Eliote's Dictionarie, 1559.

APE, for a fool. To put an ape into a person's hood or cap was an old phrase, signifying to make a fool of him.

Two cies him needeth for to watch and wake, Whom lovers will deceive. Thus was the app By their faire handling put into Malbeccoes co Spens., F. Q., III, ix, 31.

Chaucer had used it before: Aha, felowes, beth ware of swiche a jape, The monke put in the mannes hode an ape, And in his wife's eke, by Saint Austin.

Prioresses Prologue. tape. A familiar word very commonly used in proverbial phraseology. It is hard making a horne of an apes tayle.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634.

+APERNE.

PERNE. Apron.
Semicinctium, Martial. quod et succinctorium.
indoua. Tablier. A womans opene; an artificers of handicrafts mans opene.
Nomenclator, 1885.

APERNER. One who wears an apron; a drawer.

We have no wine here methinks; where's this aperner? Draw. Here, sir. Chapm. May-day, Anc. Dr., iv, p. 74. tApron-man is sometimes used in the same sense.

Ragne sense.

'We had the salute of welcome, gentlemen, presently:
Witt please ye see a chamber? It was our pleasure, as we answered the apron-man, to see, or be very neare the roome where all that noise was.

Rowley's Search for Money, 1609.

+APERTION. An opening; an incision. An old surgical term.

Sion. An Old Surgical term.

The seventh, that apertion being made, the place be wiped very cleane, and filled with flesh againe, and brought to a scarre, after the manner of ulcers. But Siden, ilb. xini, Therap, warneth us chiefly to marke two things in the incision of a suppurated abscession, writing after this manner. (Two things considered of Galen in the apertion of a mattered tumour. Marg. note.)

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

+APERTIVE, adj. Opening; aperient.

4. Let us then cate some almouds, or sweet almonds. A. Let us then cate some almonus, or sweet almonus,
P. They are hot and moist in the first degree: the bitter ones are dry in the second, and are more abstersive, and more apertine, and doe therefore better purge the passages of the bowels in rectifying the grosse humours.

The Passenger of Bensenulo, 1612.

+APERTLY, adv. Openly; without concealment.

He durst not aperily contradict him.

Knoles' History of the Turks, 1608.

And they of Genus no lesse cunning than the rest, supplanted the strongest factions, by giving aid both aperily and covertly unto the weaker.

APIECES. For to pieces.

Or daughter, pinch their hearts epieces with it.

B. & Fletch., Island Princess, iv.

Nay if we faint or fall spieces now

We're fools.

Toid., v, 1.

+APIZE, v. To turn into the resemblance of an ape.

Ance of an apc.

Thus opising in shape and hew the spiry fire,
Like stying doth to his like element aspire.

A Herrings Tayle, 1598.

†APOLLO. A banqueting-room.

We moved slowly towards the sultan's pallace, all the way passing through a ranck or file of archers and musquetiers on either side doubled, and being alighted, usherd him into his Apollo, where upon rich carpets was plac'd a neat and costly banquet.

Herbert's Travels, 1638.

APOSTATA. An apostate. Before such words were completely naturalised, it was common to write them in the original form. But the practice was not uniform. Lord Bacon. in his Essays, sometimes writes statua, and sometimes statue. Mr. Gifford would restore apostata, in all the passages of Massinger where the modern editors have changed it to apostate; and in most instances the verse requires it, as

To punish this apostata with death.

Unnat. Combat., act i. But in the following the effect is the contrary:

Had'st thou not turn'd apostata to those gods

Had'st thou not turn a aposimic.

That so reward their servants.

Virgin Martyr, act iv. Here, therefore, I would read, with the modern editors, apostate.

the model in editors, a postate, who had a flood of invention, although that whole flood could not wash or rinse away that one spot of his atheisme.

Opick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

Ho an epostata. 1. An epostata can not make a testament. 2. An apostata woorse than an heretike.

S. Who is an opostata. 4. The state of the heretike and of the opostata damanble.

Seriaburas on Willes 1801

Swinburne on Willes, 1591. APOSTEM. An abacess, ἀπόστημα. The regular word, but now corrupted into imposthume.

A doyful casual violence may break
A dangerous spostem in thy breast.

Donne, Progr. of Soul, ii, 479.

+APOSTLES'-LOTS. An old method of divination.

Or dake hede to the judicial of astronomy—or dyvyne a mans lyf or deth by nombres and by the spere of Pyctagorus, or make any dyvyning therby, or by songuary or sompnarye, the boke of dremes, or by the boke that is clepid the Apostics lottis.

Dialogue of Dives and Pauper, Pynson, 1493.

APOSTLE SPOONS. Spoons of silver gilt, the handle of each terminating in the figure of an apostle. They were the usual present of sponsors at christenings. Some are still to be seen in the collections of the curious. It is in allusion to this custom that, when Cranmer professes to be unworthy of being sponsor to the young princess, the king replies, "Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons." Hen. VIII, v, 2. These spoons are often mentioned by the writers of that time.

And all this for the hope of two spostle spoons, to suffer! and a cup to eat a caudle in! for that will be thy legacy.

B Jons. Bartholomes Fair, i, 3. thy legacy. See SPOONS.

+APOSTOLICON. A universal remedy. For to make a white treate, called apostoticom. Take oyle olive, litarge of lead, golde and silver, stampe it, and put it in the oyle through a cloth, and stirre it til it be hard, and this is a good treate for to heale all manner of wounds, be they new or old: this kind of treate hath often bin prooved good.

Pathway to Health, bl. l. +APPARENCE. Probability: credible evidence.

And with such apparence
Have prov'd the parts of his ingratefull treasons,
That I must credit, more then I desir'd.

+To APPART.

Neverthelesse, there are some brothers, cousins, and nephewes so tedious in speech, so importunate in visiting, and so without measure in craving, that they make a man angry, and also althorre them; and the remedy to such is to appart their conversations and succour their necessities. Rich Cabinet farmined with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

APPEACH. To impeach, or accuse. Now by mine honour, by my life, my troth, I will appear the villain. Rick. II, v, 2. And again in the same scene.

She, glad of spoyle and ruinous decay,
Did her appeach.

APPEAL. To accuse.

APPEAL. To accuse.

We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come;
Namely t' appeal each other of high treason. Bick. II, i, 1.
He gan that lady strongly to app. le
Of many haynous crimes by her enured.

Sp. F. Q., V, ix, 39.

This was the proper forensic term; whence the accuser was called the appellant.

+APPEAR. "Do I now appear," i. e. am I now understood. Cotgrave.

+APPENDANCES. Accessaries.

Where if they were forced by necessite to raise an habitacle, it might be so marshalled in discretion, that it should not exceed the qualitie of the person, neither stand without such supply of all convenient appendances, as might both argue the party provident, and adde means unto all necessaries for a like families reliefe.

Norden's Surveiors Dialogue, 1610.

To APPEYRE. To impair or make worse; empirer, Fr. I do not find that appirer was ever in use. Himself goes patched like some bare cottyer, Lest he might ought the future stock appeyre. Bp. Hall's Sal, iv, 2.

See APEIRE, in Tyrwhitt's Glossary to Chaucer.

+APPLAUSEFUL, adj. Laudatory. And yet to see beyond all expectation
All France and Britaine ring with acclamation,
And with applaces full thankes they doe rejoyce,
That great Ravarre, and Burbon, and Valoyes,
Guize, Loraine, Bulleine, all the Gallian peeres, Like fixed starres, are setled in their spheares.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

The same writer uses the adverb applausefully.

Queene Guendoline was allowed the government in her sonne Madan's minority, whose prudent reigne is applausefully recorded in histories.

+APPLAUSIBLE, adi. Deserving of

His wise-seeming and spplausible raigne, till the late demaunde made by Demetre, when he had go-verned 8 yeares, and therupon his sudden death and other occurrents.

Sir Thomas Smith's Voiage in Russia, 1605.

+APPLAUSIVE. Applauding; lauda-

For which the souldiers, as you heard, my lord, Did fill the ayre with their applausive shoutes.

Weakest goeth to the Wall. 1618.
None of these (I say) are limed out, as if there were None of these (1 say) are limed out, as it there were the like in eminence and dignity, but either for affection, or a fume of glory, by their applausive description, or else for a debre, to shew what they ought to be.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

†APPLE. There is an allusion to some superstitious practice with apples in the following passage:

The 10110Wing passage:

This is the poyson, Philautus, the inchantment, the potion that creepeth by sleight into the minde of a woman, and catcheth her by assurance, better then the fond devices of old dreames, as an epple with an Arc-Mary, or a hasell wand of a yeere old, crosses with sixe characters, or the picture of Venus in virgin waxe, or the image of Camilla upon a moulwarps skin. Lylie's Euphuse and his England, 1623.

APPLE-JOHN, or JOHN-APPLE. good-flavoured apple, which will keep two years. Kersey. It will, consequently, become very withered.

Tam wither'd like an old apple-John.

Is me wither'd like an old apple-John.

Tis better than the pome-water or apple-John.

O. Fortun. Anc. Dr., iii, 192.

It is well described by Phillips:

Nor John-apple, whose wither'd rind, entrench'd
By many a furrow, aptly represents

Decrepid age.

Cider, B. i.

+APPLE-MONGER. Literally a dealer in apples; but applied to a dealer in fruit in general. The sellers of fruit seem to have been not unfrequently employed in love intrigues, and hence apple-monger is sometimes used in the sense of a bawd, or apple-See Costard-monger Pomarius, Horat. διαμροπώλης, διαμρώνης, Demost. qui poma venalia prostituit. Fruitier. An applemonger; a pearemonger; one that selleth fruite; a frutarer. Nomenclator, 1866.

+APPLE-PEAR. A kind of pear which is not very clearly defined.

Pirum ampullaceum, Plin. colla ampullæ instar tu-mido. A tankard peare, so called of his likenesse; or an English apple-peare.

APPLE SQUIRE. A cant word, formerly in use to signify a pimp.

And you, young apple squire, and old cuckold maker, I'll ha' you every one before a justice.

B. Jon. Every Man in his H., iv, 10.
Together with my lady's, my fortune fell, and of her gentleman usher I became her apple squire, to hold the door and keep centinel at taverns.

O. Pl., ix, 162. See also, xi, 290.

See Squire of the Body, which was a synonimous term. There is an obscure allusion to this term in B. Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, where Littlewit encourages Quarlous to kiss his wife, upon which Quarlous himself remarks "she may call you an apple-John, if you use this." Act i, Here apple-John evidently means a procuring John, besides the allusion to the fruit so called. Apple-squire is used also for a kept gallant. Hall, Sat., iv. 1. 112. Apple-wife perhaps sometimes meant bawd. See Cos-TARD-MONGER, where it is conjectured that apple-sellers, being frequently assistants in intrigues, the title of apple-squire was first applied to them.

them.

Are whoremasters decai'd, are bawds all dead,
Are pandars, pimps, and apple-squires all fied?

Taylor, Disc. by Sea (Works, ii, 21).

†And so I leave her to her hot deaires,
'Mongst pimps and panders, and base apple-squires,
To mend or end, when age or pox will make her.

†And even of stocks and stones enquire
Of Atys, her small apple-squire,
Is such a thing (my graceless son)

As certainly was never done.

*Burlesque upon Burlesque, 1675.

†Munday trenchers make good hay,
The lobster wears no dagger,

The lobster wears no dagger, Meal-mouth'd, the peacocks powle the stars, And make the low bell stagger; Blew crocodiles foam in the toe, will follow the Lancashire dire. Poor Robin, 1715.

Blind meal-bags do follow the doe, A rib of apple-brain-spire, Will follow the Lancashire dire. Poor Robin, 1713.

Now to conclude our judgment upon the four quarters, they do all in general predict more plenty of knavery than honesty, that little truth will be found amongst cut-purses, liars, bawds, whorea, pinps, panders, and apple-squires; only the pimp pretends to something more of truth than the other, for if he promise to help you to a whore, he will be sure that she shall not be an honest woman. Poor Robin, 1738.

+APPLIABLE. Capable of being applied.

But yet when the worlde framed contrary (peradven-ture) to his purpose, he didde his best to advance Edward, trusting to beare no small rule under him, being knowne to be a man more appliable to be governed by other than to trust to his owne wit.

+To APPLIQUATE. To apply. The filth of a mans care, called carewaxe, being ep-

†APPLY. To visit.

And he applied each place so fast.

Chapman, R, xi, 61.

APPOINTED. Armed; accoutred; furnished with implements of war.

What well appointed leader fronts us here?

30

Naked piety,
Dares more than fury well appointed.
O. Pl., x, 206. It is generally used with well or ill, and is sometimes considered as forming one word with them: well-appointed, ill-appointed.

+APPORTION, v. To give as a share.

Divided the Turkes kingdome: aportioning unto Mesoot, &c.

Knolles' Hist. of the Turks, 1603. +APPOSE. To dispute with, or object to.

How on the sixteenth day of August last

How on the sixteenth day of August last King Fredericke to his royall army past, How fifty thousand were in armes araid, Of the kings force, beside th' Hungarian ayde, And how Bohemia strongly can oppose, And cuffe and curry all their daring foes.

For the apposing each other, as I have directed in the end of the second booke, emulation and feare of discredit, will make them eny who shall excell. By this means also exery one in a higher forme shall be unerceut, win make them enty who shall excell. By this meanes also every one in a higher forme shall be well able to helpe those under him, and that with-out losse of time, seeing thereby hee repeateth that which hee lately learned.

Coote's English Schoolemaster, 1632. APPREHENSIVE. Quick of apprehension; of a ready understanding. Agood sherris sack—ascends me into the brain—makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes.

Thou art a mad, apprehensive knave; dost think to make any great purchase of that?

O. Pl., IV, 343.

APPRENTICE AT LAW. A counsellor, the next in rank under a serjeant.

He speaks like Mr. Practice, one that is The child of the profession he is vowed to, And servant to the study he hath taken,

See Fortesc. de leg., c. 8; Du Cange; Minshew in Sergeant; Coke's Inst.; and note also that the preceding line contains the technical expression for a serjeant, who was called Serviens ad leyem, a servant to the law; or one who was serving his time to the law.

Nowe from these of the same degree of councellors, (or utter barrester) having continued therein the space (or uter barrester) having continued therein the space of fourteene or fifteene years at the least, the chiefest and hest learned are by the benchers elected, to increase the number (as I said) of the bench among them, and so in their time doe become first single, and then double readers to the students of those houses of court, after which last reading they be named apprentices at the laste, and in default of a sufficient number of sargeants at law, these are (at the pleasure of the prince) to be advanced to the places of sergeantes.

Stone's Survey of Lond., p. 60.

pliqualed to our nostrels, serve insteade of dormitories and provoketh sleepe.

The Theatre or Rule of the World, n. d. the French.

They likewise made theyr apprestes to meete with them in the field, and thereupon raysing theyr powers.

Holimshe's Chronicles.

All the winter following, Vespasian laye at Yorke, making his apprestes agay nate the nexte spring to go against the Scottes and Pictes.

APPRINZE. Capture, apprehension. From apprins, for appris, in old Fr. From apprins, for appries, in old Fr.

I mean not now th' appriese of Pucell Jone,
In which attempt my travail was not small
Though Burgoyne duke had then the praise of all.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 341, ed. 1610.

†APPROACHMENT. An approach.
Such an expectation, approachment, readinesse to fail, imminentia. Withals' Dictionaris, ed. 1608, p. 384.

APPROOF.

ROOF. Approbation.
So in approof lives not his epitaph
As in your royal speech.
A man so absolute in my approof
That nature hath reserv'd small dignity
Copid's Revenge.

To APPROVE. To try.

The eager anguish did approve his princely fortitude.

Chapman, R., xi, 231.

To APT. To dispose, or render fit.

And some one apteth to be trusted then,
Though never after.

B. Jon. Forest Ep., xii. Though never after. B. Jon. Forcet Eg., xii.
And here occasion opicith that we catalogue awhile.

Warner, Alb. Engl., ix, 44, p. 212.

Though birth hath given me
The larger lopes and titles, 'twer unnatural,
Should he not strive t' indow thee with a portion
Apted to the magnificence of his off-spring.

Chapman's Revenge for Honour, 1654.

AQUA-VITÆ. Formerly in use as a general term for ardent spirits.

In Beaum. and Fl. Beggar's Bush, iii, 1, it is evidently used for brandy; or, as it is there termed, brand wine: for the cry of the aqua-vitæ man is, "Buy any brand wine, buy any brand wine!" and the boors who drink it say, "Come, let us drink then, more brand wine." In the following passage it may be supposed to mean usquebaugh, or perhaps whisky:

I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, parson liugh the Welchman with my choese, an Irishman with my aqua-rite bottle, &c.

Mer. W., ii, 2. See also O. Pl., iii, 481.

AQUA-VITÆ MAN. A seller of drams. See the above passage of Beaum. and Fl., and Ben Jons., Alch., i, 1. Sell the dole beer to aqua-vita men. +ARBORAGE. An arbour.

The scene, an arborage of palms and lawrels, consisting of nine arches, environ'd with flotoons of flowers, bound with ribbons of gold, and held up with flying cupids.

The World in the Moon, 1697.

+ARBORIST. A gardener.

As for grafting, it is accounted the nicest peice of skill belonging to an arborist or gardener; but by good instruction and practice becomes casie, and is done with much success. Meagor's Now Art of Gardening.

ARCADIA. Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia was, in its time, as much the model for refined conversation as Lilv's Euphues. She does observe as pure a phrase, and use as choice figures in her ordinary conferences, as any be i' the dreadis.

B. Jons. Every Man out of H., ii, 3.

See EUPHUISM.

Will you needs have a written palace of pleasure, or rather a printed court of honor, (says Gabriel Harvey) read the countesse of Pembroke's Arcadia, a gallant legendary, full of pleasurable accidents, and profitable discourses.

Pierce's Supererogation, 1693, p. 53.

ARCH. A chief, or master.

The noble duke my master,

My worthy srea and patron, comes to-night.

Poole, that ere's for truth and honesty.

ARCH-DEAN, seems to be put, by Gascoigne, for archdeacon.

For bishops, prelates, arch-desss, deans, and priestes.

Steel. Glas. Chalm. Poets, ii, 558, a

ARCHES, Court of. The chief and most ancient consistory court of the archbishop of Canterbury in London; being held at Bow Church, in London, called St. Mary de Arcubus, or St. Mary le Bow, from being built on arches. It is alluded to in the following rather obscure witticism of Beaumont and Fletcher:

If he be civil, not your powder'd augar nor your raisins ahall persuade the captain to live a coxcomb with him; let him be civil and eat in the arches, and see what will come on't. Scornf. Lady, iv. It seems there was a prison belonging to this court:

Let me alone, sweet heart, I have a trick in my head shall lodge him in the arckes for one year, and make him sing peccavi, e'er I leave him, and yet he shall never know who hurt him neither.

B. & Pl. Knight of Burning Pestle, act iv. In Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair. Littlewit, the proctor, is called "one o' the arches." Induction. Hence the pun of civil, alluding to the profession of a civilian.

ARCHITECT, for architecture, or building.

To find an house ybuilt for holy dead,
With goodly architect, and cloisters wide.
Browne, Brit. Past., i, 4.

+ARCH-TYPE. A chief model, or type. Yet some there are beleeve their wits so ripe,

That they can draw a map of the arch type,
And with strange opticks tutor'd they can view
The emanations of the mystique Jew.

Carteright's Poems, 1651.

ARCHY, or ARCHIE. The court fool in the year 1625, and before. real name was Archibald Armstrong. Of his jests see an account in Granger, ii, 399, 8vo, 1775.

Archie accompanied Charles prince of Wales into Spain in 1624; hence, in the masque performed on his return. Jonson jocularly calls him a sea-monster.

That all the tales and stories now were old Of the sea monster Archy, or grown cold. Neptune's Triumph, vol. vi, p. 159.

We learn from Howell that this illustrious personage had more privileges at the court of Spain than any other Englishman.

Our cosen Archy hath more privilege than any, for he often goes, with his fool's cost, where the infanta is with her merinas, and ladies of honour, and keeps a blowing and blustering amongst them, and firts out what he list.

31

The instance subjoined shows rather the wit than the good manners of

Archy:

One day they were discoursing what a marvellous thing it was that the duke of Bavaria, with less than 15,000 men, after a long toylsome march, should dare to encounter the Palsgrave's army consisting of above 25,000, and to give them a total discomiture, and take Prague presently after. Whereunto Archy answered, that he would tell them a stranger thing than that: Was it not a strange thing, quoth he, that in the year 88 there should come a feet of 140 asils from Spain to invade England, and that ten of these could not go back to tell what became of the rest?

Letters, I, § 3, L. 18. Cousin was a customary appellation for such personages from those of equal age. Persons older than himself the fool called uncle. See Lear. Archy is called Archee Armstrong by Sir A. Weldon; and another court fool, David Droman, is mentioned with him. Curios. of Lit., vol. ii. p. 286, 5th edit.

Archy is honorably mentioned in a passage where B. Jonson gives a specimen of the art of well apparelling a lie:

That an elephant, in 1630, came hither ambassador from the great Mogul, who could both write and read, and was every day allowed twelve cast of bread, twenty quarts of canary sack, besides nuts and almonds the citizens wives sent him. That he had a Spanish boy to his interpreter, and his chief negotiation was, to confer or practise with Archy, the principal fool of state, about stealing Windsor Castle, and carrying it away on his back, if he can.

Discov., vol. vii, p. 80.

He is also mentioned with Garret by Bp. Corbet:

Although the clamours and applause were such As when salt Archy or Garret doth provoke them And with wide laughter and a cheat-loafe choake them.

See GARRET.

It has been conjectured that arch, in A cabal

Found out but lately, and set out by Archie,
Or some such head, of whose long coat they have heard,
And being black desire it. (Margin) Archie mourn'd then.

Rom Jon. Stepte of News, iii, 2.

AREAD, or AREED. Declare; explain.

Therefore more plain aread this doubtful case. Spenser, Daphuaida, l. 182.

Me all too meane the sacred Muse areeds. P. Q., I, Prol.

e all too meane the sacred Muse arced. F. Q., I, Prol. And many perils doth to us arced. In that whereof we seriously entreat. Drayt. Moses B., ii, p. 1581. †A gentleman that had beene iong in the Indics, being returned home with a great scarre in his face, went to visit a friend of his, who knew him not of a good while, till at last the gent discoursing unto him his name and kindred, in the end he called him to minde, and said. Sir, you must nardon me for I assure you.

name and kindred, in the end he called him to minde, and said: Sir, you must pardon me, for (I assure you) your superscription being blar'd I could not well aread you.

*Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancie, 1614.

*Jocast. Brother, aread, what meanes his gratious favour?

*Mop. It signifies you beare the bell away.

*From all his graces nobles. *Randolph's Amyntas, 1640.

*He sees and knowes (for us) what's bad or good,

And all things is by him well understood;

*Mens weake conjectures no way can areed,

What's in th' immortall Parlament decreed.

*Taulor's Workes. 1630. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+To read.

†Come sit we downe under this hawthorne tree, tCome sit we downe under this hawthorne tree,
The morrowes light shall lend us daie enough,
And tell a tale of Gawen or Sir Guy,
Of Robin Hood, or of good Clem a Clough.
Or else some romant unto us areed,
Which good olde Godfrey taught thee in thy youth,
Of noble lords and hadies gentle deede,
Or of thy lave, or of thy lasses truth.

Drayton's Skepkerd's Garland, 1593.

+To counsel, or advise.

And stood before the steeds
Of old Neleides, whose estate thus kingly he areeds.

Chapman, Il., viii, 85.

AREARE, or ARREAR. Behind; in default.

To tilt and turney, wrestle in the sand,
To leave with speed Atlanta in arrar.
Fairf. T., ii, 40.

But when his force gan faile, his pace gan wex areare.

Sp. P. Q., III, vii, 24 +To ARERE. To raise.

Saith, Is your master waking, gentle swaines?
If not, arere him, tell him all the plaines.
Scots Philomythie, 1616.

+AREST. To stop.

Constraining them by word and deede to tarrie and arest. A. Hall's Homer, 1581, p. 20.

AREW. In a row. Her hew

Was wan and leane, that all her teeth arese And all her bones might through her checkes be red.

Sp. F. Q., V, xii, 29.

+ARG. To argue.

Ile arg, as I did now, for credance againe.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

ARGAL. A vulgar corruption of the Latin word ergo, therefore.

But if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

Ham., v, 1. Also a name for the tartar of wine. Jonson's Alchem.

†Argo was sometimes used similarly. Our countrie is a great eating country; argo they eate more in our countrey than they do in their owne.

The Play of Sir Thomas More, p. 44.

+ARGENT. Silver; and, in a more general sense, money.

general sense, money.

Plowers were framd of fints, walls rubies, rafters of argent;
Pavements of chrisolite, windows contriv'd of a chrisolit;
Vessels were of gold, with gold was each thing adorned.

Barnefield's Affectionate Shepherd, 1594.

The helhound whelpes the shoulder clapping serjant,
That cares not to undoe the world for argent.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Her full broad eye did sparkle fire,
Her breath was sweet as kind desire,
And in her beauteous crescent shone,
Bright as the argent-horsed moone.

Lovelace's Lucasta, 1649.

+ARGENTIER. A silversmith.

And some said (how truly I cannot assert) the ambassadors horse was shod with silver-shooes, lightly bassadors horse was shod with silver-shooes, lightly tackt on; and when he came to a place where persons or beauties of eminency were, his very horse prancing, and curveting, in humble reverence flung his shooes away, which the greedy understanders scrambled for, and he was content to be gazed on, and admired, till a farrier, or rather the argentier in one of his rich liveries, among his train of footmen, out of a tawny velvet bag took others, and tackt them on, which lasted till he came to the next troop of grandies: and thus with much sido he reached the Louvre.

Wilson's History of King Jense J.

Wilson's History of King James I.

Silver work; plate. +ARGENTRY.

No medalls, or rich stuff of Tyrian dy,
No costly bowls of frosted argentry,
No costly bowls of frosted argentry,
No curious land-skip, or som marble piece
Digg'd up in Delphos, or else-where in Greece.
Hisself's Familias Letters, 1650.
Having preserv'd count Mansfelts troups from disbanding, by pawning his own argentry and jewells, be pass'd this way.

[bid.]

ARGIER, or ARGIERS. The ancient English name for Algiers.

Pros. Where was she born? speak; tell me.

Ari. Sir, in Argier.

Could with the pirates of Argiers and Tunis Acquire such credit, as with them to be Made absolute commander. Trmp., i, 9.

Made absolute commander.

Massing. Unnat. Comb., act 1.

He toke his way unto Affrique, towards the towne of Argiere. A Tract of 1542: reprinted in Harl. Misc, iv, p. 852, ed. 1809.

†ARGIN. An embankment, or rampart. From the Italian.

It must have high argins and cover'd ways, To keep the bulwark fronts from battery. Marlowe's Works, i, 128.

+ARGIVE, v. To argue.

Hereupon, the philosopher comparing the Grecians with the Africanes, and those of Europa, he argives that their customes were divers, through the remotion that their customes and distance of place.

The Passenger of Benvennto, 1613

ARGOSIE. A large ship, either for merchandise or war. Of this sense there is no doubt, but the etymology is very obscure. Sir Paul Rycaut supposed it a corruption of Ragosie, for a ship of Ragusa, but this seems a mere conjecture, and rests on no other known authority (as Mr. Douce tells us) than Roberts's Marchant's Map of Commerce. Besides, we want proof of the Ragusan vessels being particularly large. Pope and others have, with much more probability, supposed it to come from the classical ship Argo, as a vessel eminently famous. Which is confirmed by the use of Argis, for a ship, in low Latin. See Du Cange.

Du Cange.

Your mind is tossing on the ocean,
There where your argories, with portly sail,
Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood,
Or as it were the pageants of the sea,
Do overpeer the petty traffickers. Merch. Ven., i, 1.
See also 3 Hen. IV, act ii.
Who sits him like a full-sail'd argorie.

Who sits him like a full-sail'd argorie.

That golden traffic love,
Is scantier far than gold; one mine of that
More worth than twenty argosies

More worth than twenty argosies
Of the world's richest treasure.

Rowley's New Wonder, Anc. Dr., v. 238. Drayton uses it for a first-rate man of war, which favours the classical etv-mology:

My instance is a mighty argosic.
That in it bears, besides the artillery
Of fourneore pieces of a mighty bore,
A thousand soldiers. Noak's Flood, iv, p. 1539. Sandys also speaks of it as a ship of Describing the boldness of pirates in the Adriatic, he observes, that, from the timorousness of others, Gather such courage, that a little frigot will often not feare to venter on an argosis: nay some of them will not abide the incounter, but run ashore before the pursuer, as if a whale should flie from a dolphin. Travels, p. 2.

Ragozine has been shown by Mr. Douce to have no reference to it. See Illustr., i, p. 248. Argousin is a French term for an officer of the galleys, who superintends the slaves; but is supposed by Menage to be a corruption of the Spanish alguazil.

+ARISE, n. s. A rising, or getting up, applied especially to the sun-rise.

Expell'st the clouds, &c.

Drayton's Shepherd's Garland, 1593.

Her starry lookes, her christall eyes,
Brighter than the sunnes arise.

Greene's Never too Late, 1621.

+ARISTIPPUS. A kind of wine.

TIPPUS. A many
O for a bowl of fat canary,
Bich Aristippus, sparkling sherry!
Some nectar else from Juno's dairy;
O these draughts would make us merry!
Middleton's Works, ii, 423.
The original

A chest or coffer. The original and etymological sense.

Then first of all forth came sir Satyrane,
Bearing that precious relick in an arks
Of gold, that bed eyes might not it profane.
Sp. P. Q., IV, iv, 15.
ARMADO. Properly armada, Spanish.

A fleet of war; a fleet of merchants being flota. Not known here, probably, before the Spanish invasion in 1588.

So by a rearing tempest on the flood

A whole armado of collected sail

Is scatter'd and disjoin'd from fellowship. John, iii, 4.

Spread was the huge armado wide and broad. The whole armado coming often in view, yet not so hardy as to adventure the armado. The whole armado coming other in, hardy as to adventure the onset.

Sandys' Travels, p. 51.

B. Jonson spells it correctly, armada. It is now rarely used, except historically, in speaking of that one fleet.

ARM-GAUNT. A word peculiar to Shakespeare, of which the meaning has been much disputed. Some will have it lean-shouldered, some lean with poverty, others slender as one's arm; but it seems to me that Warburton. though he failed in his proof, gave the interpretation best suited to the text. worn by military service. This implies the military activity of the master: all the rest of the senses are reproachful. and are therefore inconsistent with the speech which is made to display the gallantry of a lover to his mistress. The passage is this:

So he nodded, So he nouded,

And soberly did mount an arm-gennt steed,

Who neigh d so high that what I would have spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Ant. & Cl., i, 5.

A beggar; made from the Dutch arm, poor, to suit an assumed Dutch character.

O hear God!—so young an armin!

f. Flow. Armin, sweet heart, I know not what you mean

M. Prov. Armin, sweet heart, I know not what you mean By that, but I am almost a beggar.

London Prod., Supp. Sh., ii, 519.

†ARMING-COAT. A coat of defence.

Armed with an anima of steele, made with scalloppe shelles, shining like the sunne, and upon that an arming coate fringed round about. Plutarch, 1579.

†ARMING-GIRDLE. A soldier's belt.

Baltheus, Liv. Militare cingulum. Coorno. Baudrier, ceinture d'espee. An arming girdle, or girdle for warre.

Nomenciator, 1585.

†ARMING-SLEEVES. Defensive sleeves. The habit of the masquers was close bodies of carna-tion, embroydered with silver, their arming sleeves of the same. Britannia Triumphans, 1637.

+ARMING-SWORD. A large twohanded sword.

Xiphomachæra, romphæa, Nebrissensi. ξιφομάχαιρα, Polluci. Espee à deus mains. A two hande sworde:

Polluci. Espec a ucus manufacture an arming snord.

But comming neere them, they weaved to leeward with their bright arming snords, and we the like to them, they saluted us with a whole broadside.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

Take a fayre bright sword with a crosse like an arm

ARMLET. An ornament encircling the arm; a bracelet.

APM; a DFRCEIGL.

Not that in colour it was like thy hair,

Armiets of that thou still mayst let me wear.

Donne, Eleg., xii, v. 1.

ARMOUR. The principal pieces of a knight's armour are thus enumerated in verse, by Warner-

The burgonet, the bever, buffe, the coller, curates, and The poldrons, grangard, vambraces, gauntlets for either hand

The taishes, cushies, and the graves, staff, pensell, baises, all

The greene knight earst had tylted with, that held her love his thrall.

Alb. Engl., B. 12, p. 291. See those several words.

ARMS. Stabbing or daggering of arms, is an expression founded on a curious piece of romantic gallantry. To show their devout attachment to their mistresses, young men frequently punctured their arms with daggers, and mingling the blood with wine, drank it off to their healths. The drinking a liquor mixed with blood was in very liquor mixed with liquor mixed with blood was in very liquor mixed with liquor mixed with blood was in very liquor mixed with blood was in very liquor mixed with liquor mixe a liquor mixed with blood was in very ancient times esteemed a rite of high solemnity, as may be seen in Sallust and Livy: of such ceremonials this seems to have been an imitation. This explains an obscure passage in the Litany to Mercury, at the end of Cynthia's Revels:

From stabbing of arms, flap-dragons, healths, whiffs, and all such swaggering humours, good Mercury deliver us.

Have I not been drunk to your health, swallowed flap-dragons, eat glasses, drank urine, stabb's arms, and done all the offices of protested gallantry for your sake?

Marston's Dutch Courtezan. sake? Marston's Dutch Com
How many gallants have drank healths to me
Out of their dagger'd arms?

Out of their dagger'd arms:

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 299.
I will fight with him that dares say you are not fair;
stab him that will not piedge your health, and with a dagger pierce a wein, to drink a full health to you.

Green's Tu Quoque, O. Pl., vii, 81.

In a character of England, written by a French nobleman in 1699, it is said: Several encounters confirmed me that there was a sort of perfect debauchees, who style themselves Hectors, that in their mad and unheard of revels, pierce their veins to quaff their own blood; which some of them have done to that excess, that they died of the intemperance.

Harl. Misc., x, p. 194, Park's ed.

ARNDERN. Evidently used by Drayton for the evening.

When the sad arndorn shutting in the light. Ood, p. 1818. Connected therefore with aandorn, merenda, in Ray's Glossarium Northanhymbricum, p. 105, and Orndern "Afternoon's drinkings," Cumb. Coll. of Engl. Words. p. 47. the specimen of Mr. Boucher's Suppl. to Johnson, it stands under aardorn, orndorn, or orn-dinner. Also aunder, Chesh. Afternoon. Ray. N. C. Words, p. 15. It must therefore be fully distinguished from Undern. See that, and ORNDERN. See also Jamieson's Dict., v. Orntren.

To them in compleat armour seem'd the greeze knight AROINT, or AROYNT THEE. A word of aversion, to a witch or infernal spirit: of which the etymology is uncertain: though some critics subjoin Dii averruncent, The gods forefend! as if they thought it might probably be deduced from thence. occurs only twice in Shakespeare, and in an old print in Hearne's collections, cited by Johnson, where it is written aronat, but in no other author vet discovered.

Mr. Pope seems to have thought that it might be of the same original with anaunt.

A lady well acquainted with the dialect of Cheshire, informed me that it is still in use there. For example, if the cow presses too close to the maid who is milking her, she will give the animal a push, saying at the same time, 'Roint thee! by which she means, stand off. To this the cow is so well used, that even the word is often sufficient; the cow being in this instance more learned than the commentators on Shakespeare. Boucher has given the same explanation in his Specimen.

+AROMATIZATE, v. To spice. Let it be boiled upon the coales without any smoaks long time together, wringing the reubarbe strongly, being bound in a peece of linnen cloth, clarific it, and aromatizate it. Barrough's Method of Physick, 1634.

AROW. In a row, successively. The same as Spenser's arew.

My master and his man are both broke loose, Beaten the maids arow, and bound the doctor

See Elvira, O. Pl., xii, 212. Dr. Johnson quotes Sidney and Dryden as using it. It is also in Chaucer's Wife of Bathes Tale and Rom. of Rose, 7609.

To come off twice a-row
Thus rarely from such dangerous adventures.

AROWZE, v. Mr. Seward interprets this bedew, from the French arroser.

The blissful dew of heaven does arouse you.

B. & Fl. 2 Noble Kinz., v. 4. But unless some other instance of such a use can be brought, this can hardly be admitted; and the word must be taken, however singular the construction, in the common sense, excite, awaken.

+ARPENT. A French acre.

AFFEIN 1. A French acre.

Acre. An aker of land; Norm. (It is most commonly larger than the arpent.)

Cotgrave.

We have 4 or 5 horses, or 2 or 3 yoke of oxen, to 12.

But the French have another kinde of sore, which they call an arpent, which amongst them different in quantity, as ours doe differ in several kindes of poles: and their arpent is 100 pole, howsever the poles do differ.

Norden's Survivors Dialogue, 1610. Sometimes written arvine.

If he be master Of poor ten arpines of land forty hours longer, Let the world report me an honest woman.

Webster's Devil's Law Case.

+ARRANT. An errand.

Goe, soul, the bodyes gueste, Upon a thankless arrante, Fear not to touche the beste, The truth shall be thy warrante.

Poems of 17th cent.

ARRAS. The tapestry hangings of rooms, so called from the town in Artois, where the principal manufacture of such stuffs was. Dr. Johnson thought that Shakespeare had outstepped probability in supposing Falstaff to sleep behind the hangings, on account of his bulk (2 Hen. IV, ii, 4); but an author quoted by Mr. Malone proves that still larger bulks might be concealed there. "Pyrrhus, to terrify Fabius, commanded his guard to place an elephant behind the arras." Braith. Survey of Histories, 1614. Denham, in his Sophy, conceals a guard there. Hamlet suspects the king to be behind the arras; and other royal personages have been thus concealed. In an interview between Queen Mary and Elizabeth, Philip of Spain was hid behind the tapestry. Nichols's Progr. of Eliz., vol. i, p. 13. Thus it is clear that there was often a very large space between the arras and the walls.

ARRAUGHT. Reached; seized by violence; from arreach; which however is not met with.

His ambitious sons unto them twayne Arranght the rule, and from their father dre father drew. Sp. F. Q., II, x, 85.

ARREAR, adv. Behind.

To leave with speed Atlanta in arrear.

Fairf. Tasso, ii, 40.

Ne ever did her eye-sight turn errer.

Sp. Virgil's Gnat., v, 468.

When he hath gotten ground (the kennel cast errer). Drayt. Polyolb., xiii, p. 917. To ARRET. To decree, or appoint; from arrêter, French. I believe peculiar to Spenser, but often used by him. and always with the final letters pronounced as in English; rhyming to set. &c. See Todd.

ARRÍDE. An affected Latinism, for to please; from arrideo.

If her condition answer but her feature,
I am fitted. Her form answers my affection,
It arrides me exceedingly.

O. Pl., x, 32. It is here used in ridicule, and is introduced also by B. Jons. in Cynthia's Revels, and Every Man out of his Humour, but only to be ridiculed in both places. I do not know that it has been seriously used anywhere. Yet we may cite the following examples :]

tYour opinion arrides me, following more the spirit, the other sense and vaineglory of no moment, but opposing myselfe to you before, I understood it of certaine observations and rules of diet.

Passenger of Bensenuto, 1618.
†Thine amphitritean muse growes more arrident,
And Phosbus tripos stoopes to Neptunes trident. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Taylor's Workes, 1
†Riders Library.
What means arrided Riders book, thus stil'd
A library, sith but one book's compil'd,
And that of words? It therefore should not carry

The name of library, but dictionary.

Owen's Epigrams.

ARRIERE. The hinder part, Fr. This foreign word was formerly in use as a military term, instead of rear. See Johnson. Rereward also was used in the same sense. [It is also used for arrear.]

the criterians thee how to pay this debt, and leave Me in arrier: get dancers, and this evining Make me a serenade, its onely a round Well-danc'd, and a short song or two.

The Slighted Maid, p. 37.

To ARRIVE, v. In an active form.

But ere we could arrise the point propos'd,
Cassar cry'd, Help me, Cassius, or I sink.

Jul. C., i, 9.

See also 3 Hen. IV, v, 3. Milton has adopted this form: Ere he arrive

The happy isle. ARRIVE, s. Arrival. Often used by Drayton.

Whose forests, hills, and floods, then long for her arrive
From Lancashire. Drayt. Polyolb., song 28, p. 1192.

†Before I speake to my most sacred lord,
I joyne my soft lipps to the solid earth,
And with an honord bennison I blesse
The hower, the place, the time of your arrive.
The Tragedy of Hoffman, 1681.

ARSEDINE, or ARSADINE. A vulgar corruption of arsenic: sometimes made into orsden. It is spoken of as a colour, and in that case means orpiment, or yellow arsenic. Poor Ritson, who could neither be right nor wrong with good humour, sneered at Mr. Lysons for so explaining orsden in his Environs of London. See Mr. Gifford's excellent note on the following passage:

36

Are you pufft up with the pride of your wares? your arsedine.

B. Jon. Barth. Fair, ii, 1.

Mr. G. quotes also:

A London vintner's signe, thick jagged and round fringed, with theaming areadine.

Nath's Lenten Staff., p. 172, Harl. Misc.

†ARSIE-VERSIE. Upside down.

Oh, but there's great difference betwirt in deed and being so reputed. Dost thou not know that from the beginning the world goes arrie versie? The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

+ARTED. Constrained.

+ARTHUR-A-BRADLEY. One of the old popular heroes of the Robin Hood class. A song which went under this title seems to have been very popular, and is often alluded to by old writers. One of the oldest references to it which we have met with occurs in the play of the Marriage of Witt and Wisdome, p. 49 (edit. by Halliwell).

For the honour of Artrebradis,
This age wold make me swere madly.

ARTHUR'S SHOW. An exhibition of archery by a toxophilite society in London, of which an account was published in 1583, by Richard Robinson. The associates were fiftyeight in number, and had assumed the arms and the names of the Knights of the Round Table. Drake's Shaksp., &c., i, 562. See DAGONET. ARTICHOKE. Formerly supposed to be of an inflammatory nature.

Of forage in your lusty pye
Of artichoks or potatoe.
O. Pl., ix, 49. But Langham, in his Garden of Health, imputes no such quality to the plant, though he allows it many Among other things, he others.

says,
Artichokes, eaten raw, do amend the savour of the Few perhaps will try the experiment. They were, however, much esteemed. ARTICULATE. To exhibit in articles. To end those things articulated here By our great lord the mighty king of Spain, We with our counsel will deliberate. e. O. Pl., iii, 161.

See also 1 Hen. IV, v. 1. Also, to enter into articles of agreement:

Send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate The best, with whom we may arresent.

For their own good and ours.

And o're we do articulate, much more Grow to a full conclusion, instruct us.

Mass. City Madam, ii, 9.

Mass. City Madam, ii, 9.

How to give laws to them that conquer'd were, How to articulate with yielding wights. Dan. Civ. Wars, v, 20.

†ARTSMAN is used in the sense of artificer in Chapman's Homer.

ARVAL, or ARVIL. A funeral supper. or feast, of which examples are cited within a few years past, as happening in Yorkshire. See Douce's Illustr., ii, pp. 202, 203. Baily derives it from the French. It seems to have no relation to the arvales fratres of the Romans.

ARVIRA'GUS. This false accentuation prevails throughout Cymbeline, which, say the critics, is a proof that Shakespeare had not read Juvenal's "Aut de temone Britanno excidet Arviragus." Sat., iv, 126.

The younger brother, Cadwal, (Once Arvirdgus) in as like a figure Strikes life into my speech. The mistake, however, was not peculiar to Shakespeare:

Windsor a castle of exceeding strength
First built by Areirdgus, Britain's king.

R. Chaster's Meeting Dialogue-wise, fc.
From this composition Shakespeare is thought to have borrowed some other names in that play. Suppl., i, p. 247.

So Warner in his Albion's England: Duke Arrirdgus using then the armor of the king, Maintained fight, and won the field. B. iii, ch. 18. Was currently used by

AS, conj. ancient authors in the sense of that. Johnson has given some instances under 3 as, but does not observe that this usage is obsolete, which it is.

Divers Roman knights So threaten'd with their debts, as they will now So threaten'd with their debts, as easy war. Run any desp'rate fortune for a change.

B. Jon. Catiline, i, 3. My five years absence has kept me a stranger So much to all th' occurrents of my country, As you shall bind me for some short relation To make me understand the present times.

B. J. R. Begg. Bush, i. 1.

In both places we should now say that. Such instances are very frequent.

†ASAILE. To sail away.

SAILE. 10 SRII away. Sere Jhon Veere, eric of Oxenforde, that withdrew-hym frome Barnet felde, and rode into Scottlonde, and frome thems into Frances assisted, and ther he wa-worschinduly received. Warkworth's Chronicle.

worschipfully received. Warkworth's Chronicle.

ASCAPART. The name of a famous giant, conquered by Sir Bevis of Southampton, the subject of a legendary ballad, alluded to in the following passage:

Therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow, as Bevis of Southampton fell upon Accepart.

2 Hen. VI, ii, 3.

Ascapart, according to the legend, was "ful thyrty fote longe;" and when he became servant to Sir Bevis, carried him, his wife, and horse, under his arm. These combatants. we are told, are still to be seen on the gates of Southampton.

Donne alludes to him and his size:

Being among Those Askaparts, men big enough to throw Charing-cross for a bar.

Sat., iv, 288. Drayton speaks of his overthrow. in relating the exploits of Sir Bevis, but calls him Ascupart.

And that (Goliah like) great Ascupart inforc'd To serve him for a slave, and by his horse to run. Polyolb., S. ii, p. 694.

Polyoth, S. ii, p. 694.

†ASCAUNCE, adv. Obliquely.

At this question Rosader, turning his head ascence, and bending his browns as if anger there had ploughed the furrowes of her wrath, with his eyes full of fire, hee made this replie.

ASCAUNT, prep. Across. This use is not noticed in the dictionaries.

of noticed in the directors.

There is a willow grows ascessed the brook

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream.

Ham, iv. 7.

I have observed no other instance of it. ASCENDANT. A term in judicial astrology, denoting that degree of the ecliptic, which is rising in the eastern part of the horizon at the time of any person's birth: supposed to have the greatest influence over his fortune. Commonly used metaphorically for influence in general, or effect.

Tis well that servant's gone; I shall the easier
Wind up his master to my purposes;
A good ascendant.

O. Pl., vii, 137.

A good ascendent.

† ASCERTAINED. Assured; certain.

But the neares we approach'd, the more ascertain'd

I was that he must have it under his arm. Whither carry you that child? (said I to him) Whose is it?

The Comicall History of Francian.

+ASHE-CAKE. Explained thus:

Panis subcinericius. An askeake, or bread baked under asles or hot embers.

Nomenclator.

†ASHIED. Made white, like ashes. Old Winter, clad in high furres, showers of raine
Appearing in his eyes, who still doth goe
In a rag gowne, askied with flakes of snow.

Heymood's Marriage Ivinumphe, 1613.

And mock the fondling for his mad aspire.

Chapman, Hymns of †ASSAIL. An assault, or attack.

†To go ASIDE. To absent one's self.

Phedra being overcome by the flattering speech of Thais, promiseth to gos saids for the space of two daies, that Thraso in the meane while might have her company.

Terence in English, 1614.

ASINEGO. See Assinego.

ASINEGU. See ASSINEGU.

†ASKEW. Awry.

But as one scabbed sheepe a flocke may marre,
So there's one man, whose nose did stand a jarre,
Talk'd very scurvily, and look'd accus,
Because I in a worthy town-mans pue
Was plac'd at church. Taylor's Works, 1630.

His bodie was well brawned, musculous, and strong, the haire of his head shining bright, the colour of his complection cleere and faire: he had with his gray area aclesse cast at all times, and looked sterne. eyes a-skew cast at all times, and looked sterns.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus.

ASKILE. Askew; aslant; obliquely.

What the the scornful waiter looks askile.

And pouts and frowns and curseth thee the while.

Bp. Hall, Sat., v, 2.

To ASLAKE, v. To slacken, or mitigate. This word was used by Spenser and others, but Drayton shows us when it became obsolete. In the first 4to edition of his Matilda (1594) he had written.

Now like a roe, before the hounds imbost, Who overtoyl'd his swiftness doth aslake. In the second (1610) he banished that word as obsolete, and wrote worse lines to avoid it:

When like a deere before the hounds imboste, When him his strength beginneth to forsake.

ASPECT. Almost always accented on the last syllable in the time of Shake-Speare.

And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Save in applet have all offence seal'd up. John, ii, l.
Seems it no crime, to enter sacred bow'rs;
And hallow'd places, with impure asplet:
Most lewdly to pollute? B. Jon. Cynth. Res., v, 11.
From hand to hand by stealth, she heard men talk
Of gracious favours, and asplets, cast on her
By noble persons, and by men of honour.

Phyllis of Seyros, 1655.
The following expectation coccurs in a

The following exception occurs in a poem by Markham, entitled "Devereux," &c., 1597:

reux, ``&c., 1997; Under whose gracious ispect I did hope My lawes should take new vertue, larger scope. St. 30.

Much good remark, founded upon this now obsolete accent, may be seen in Farmer's Essay on Shakespeare, pp. 26-8, 2d edit.

ASPERSION. Sprinkling. The primitive sense of the word, but not now used.

No sweet aspersion shall the heav'ns let fall
To make this contract grow.
Temp., iv, 1. Mr. Todd quotes Lord Bacon for it.

+ASPIRE, n. s. Aspiration. And mock the fondling for his mad aspire.

Chapman, Hymns of Homer.

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun, Who disciplin'd and dieted in grace, Believ'd her eyes when I th' assait begun. Shaksp. Lover's Complaint.

+ASSAULTABLE. That may be taken by assault.

The Englishmen perceyving they were too rash in assaulting the towne, beeing not assaultable.

Holinake's Chronicles.

ASSAY. See SAY.

+ASSAYE. At all assayes, i. e., by all means, at all risks.

Means, at all risks.

When up the stranger ryseth, and thus sayes:
Madam, for your sake was I hither guided,
Whom I will freely serve at all assayes,
For you this dyet have I here provided,

Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

For that is vile idolatrie, farre from a learned lore,
Which thing we ought at all assayes to lothe and to althorn

Stubbes, Two Wonderfull and Rare Examples, 1581.

ASSASSINATE, s. Assassination; the act of assassinating.

What hast thou d one To make this barbarous base assasinate
Upon the person of a prince? Das. Cis. Wars, iii, 78.
Touching the foule report
Of that assassinate.

1bid., iv, 29. Mr. Todd notices this sense, and gives other examples.

ASSECURE, v. To make certain or safe.

And so hath Henrie assecur'd that side, And therewithall his state of Gasconie. Dan. Civ. Wars, iv, 9.

Mr. Todd has the word from Bullokar, but without an example.

†ASSEVERE, v. To assert.

So I assevere this the more boldly, because while I maintaine it, &c.

ASSINEGO, more properly ASINEGO. A Portuguese word, meaning a young ass: used for a silly fellow: a fool. BBS; USECI 107 & SHIY ICHOW; a 100...

Thou hast no more brains than I have in my clhows; an assing of may tutor thee.
Tro. f Cress., ii, l.
When in the interim they apparell'd me as you see.
Made a fool, or an asinigo of me, &c. O. Pl., x, 109.
All this would be forsworn, and I again an asinego, as your sister left me.

B. f Pl. Scornf. Lady. your sister left me. B. J. F. Score, Lady.
B. Jonson has a very unjust and illiberal pun against Inigo Jones, couched in this word:

Or are you so ambitious 'bove your peers,
You'd be an ass-inigo by your years.

Epigrams, vol. vi, p. 290.

ASSOILE, v. To absolve, acquit, or set at liberty. From the old French assoilé, or absoilé; absolutus. Roquefort.

I at my own tribunal am assoil'd, Yet fearing others censure am embroil'd. O. Pl., xii, 64. Soon as occasion feit herself unty'd, Before her son could well assoyled be Spens. F. Q., II, v, 19. Here he his subjects all, in general, Assoyles, and quites of oath and fealtie. But secretly assoiling of his sin,
No other med'cine will unto him lay.

Mirror for Mag., p. 544.

Pray devoutly for the souls, whom God assoyle, of one of the most worshipful knights in his dayes.

Britank, in Canaden's Rem., p. 331.
†Notwithstanding I will assoile myself, and make answer unto thy former either secret surmises or open cavils.

Optick Glass of Humors, 1639.

open cavis.

Once used by Spenser for to decide.

In th' other hand

A pair of weights, with which he did assayle

Both more and lesse, where it in doubt did stand.

Both more and lesse, where it in doubt did stand.

And you among the rest, because you would be accounted courtly, have assoiled to feele the veine you cannot see, where you follow not the best phisitions.

Lylis, Buphuse and his Buyland, 1833.

ASSOILE, s. Confession.

When we speake by way of riddle (enigma) of which the sonce can hardly be picked out, but by the parties owne assoile. Puttenk., iii, p. 157, repr. owne assoile.

Puttenk., iii, p. 157,
ASSOT, v. To besot, or infatuate.

word used by Spenser, though obsolete in his time, and therefore explained by him in the glossary to his eclogues. He uses it, also, for the participle assotted.

Willve. I ween thou be assot. Ecl. March, v, 26.

+ASSUETUDE. Custom.

A. Why they doe not follow temperature, neither doth this stand with them by nature, but they are in our owne power, and are obtained by use and assetute.

The Passenger of Bessenute, 1613.

†ASSUMMON. To call, to summon.

TASSUMMON. 10 call, to summon.
Some other pastimes then they would begin;
And to locke hands one doth them all assummon.
Barleybreaks, or a Warning for Wantons, 1807.

†ASSUMPT, n. s. A taking up.
Only I say now that the assumpt or addition of a witch hath deprived me of the compassion I should otherwise have. History of Don Quizots, 1675, 146.

ASSURANCE. Affiance; betrothing for marriage.

The day of their assurance drew near.

Pembr. Arc., p. 17. But though few days were before the time of a ance appointed. Johnson has not this sense.

ASSURE, v. To affiance, or betroth. The following passage has it both in this and in the common sense:

Young princes close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too, for I am well assur'd.

That I did so when I was first assur'd. John, ii, 2.

Called me Dromio, swore I was assur'd to her.

+ASTAT. Estate.

Incontynent after the birth, Te Deum with procession was songe in the cathedrall chirche, and in all the chyrches of that citie; great and many fiers made in the streets, and messungers sent to al the actas and cities of the realme with that comfortable and good tydynge, to whom were geven great giftes. †ASTE. An old cant term for money. These companions, who in the phisionomic of their forchead, eyes, and nose, carry the impression and marke of the pillerie galley, and of the halter, they call the purse a leafe, and a feece; money, cuckoes and aste, and crownes.

The Passenger of Beneensto, 1619.

ASTERT, or ASTART, v. From start or startle; to alarm, or take unawarea.

No danger there the shepherd can estert.
Spens. Ect. Nov., ver. 187.
"Befall unawares." Spenser's own glossary. In Mr. Todd's excellent edition, it is misprinted assert, which seems to have escaped the notice of the very accurate editor. Yet he has it correctly in his dictionary, and illustrates it.

ASTONIED, part. Astonished.

The rest,
Wondring at his stout heart, astonied stand
To see him offer thus himself to death. O. Pl., ii, 215. Also stunned:

Gave him such a blow upon the head as might have killed a bull, so that the emperour therewith astonied fell down from his horse. Exoller Hist. of the Turks. The verb to astony was also used.

This word was often used in our authorised translation of the Bible (as in Dan. v, 9, &c.), but has been tacitly changed for astonished in the more modern editions.

+ASTONYING, or ASTONNING. Astonishing; stunning.

Astonying with the sudder friends and their enemics. ith the sudden Knolles' Mist. of the Turks.

By the astenning terror of swart night.

Antonio and Mellida, 1602.

pesse thereof, both their †ASTONISHABLE. Astonishing.

Heere this lodging-power was more dreadful to the devil, and astonishable to the people, by ods then the dispossessing was.

Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1603.

ASTOUND, or ASTON D. Astonished. Th' elfe therewith astown'd

Upstarted lightly from his looser make Spens. F. Q., I, vii, 7.
Aston'd he stood, and up his heare did hove.

+ASTRAL. Derived from the stars. What astral vertues vegetables drew From a celestial influence.

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659. ASTRINGER, or AUSTRINGER. falconer. In All's Well that ends Well, act v, sc. 1, the stage direction says, "Enter a gentle astringer."

We usually call a falconer who keeps that kind of hawks, an austringer.

Construction They were called also ostregiers, the derivation being ostercus or austercus, a goshawk, in low Latin. See Du Freene in Astur. A goshawk is in our records termed by the several names of asterioum, hastricism, estricism, asterioum, and austurcus, all from the French astour. Blount's Tenures, ed. 1784, p. 166.

ASTROPHELL, or ASTROFEL. A bitter herb; probably what the old botanists called star-wort. Lyte's ATONE, or ATTONE, v. a. To recon-Dodoens., p. 41.

My little flock, whom earst I lov'd so well, And wont to feed with finest grasse that grew, Feede ye henceforth on bitter astrofell And stinking smallage and unsaverie rue.

Spens. Dapkn., 844. It seems to be carefully described by a contemporary of Spenser, who celebrated Sir Ph. Sidney, under the name of Astrophell:

The gods, which all things see, this same beheld, And pittying this paire of lovers trew, Transformed them, there lying on the field, Into one flowre that is both red and blew: It first growes red, and then to blew doth finde, Like astrophel, which thereinto was made. And in the midst thereof a star appeares, Acfaithed, the second as the star appeares. As fairly form'd as any star in skyes :--

That hearbe of some starlight is cald by name, That hearbe or some startight is cale by name, Of others Penthia, though not so well:
But thou, where ever thou doest find the same,
From this day forth do call it astrophet;
And when so ever thou it up doest take,
Do pluck it softly for that shepheard's sake.

Todd's Spenser, vol. viii, p. 60.

ASTUN, v. To stun.

Who with the thundring noise of his swift courser's feet Astun'd the earth.

Dray. Pol., xviii, p. 1011. Also in the Mirr. for Mag., &c. See Todd.

†On the solid ground He fell rebounding: breathless and astunn'd His trunk extended lay. Somerville's Hobbinol.

†A'TER. A popular contraction of after.

And being you to your parish a'ter,
In the mean time pray free my daughter.

Homer à la Mode, 1665.

+A-TILT.

-TILT. At a tilt.

He that does love would set his heart a-tilt,

Ere one drop of his lady's should be spilt.

Butler's Works.

†ATOE-SIDE. On one side.

Thus wandering out of the right way, unto the path of equitie, as oftentimes sober and peaceable governours have done, but himselfe also followed him, winding atos-side and going crosse.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

An atom.

Drawn with a team of little atomies Drawn with a team of little atomics.

Athwart men's noses, as they lie asleep. Rom.,
That eyes that are the frail'st, and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomics.
Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers. Rom., i, 4.

And freely men confess that this world's spent,
When in the planets and the firmament
They seek so many new; they see that this
Is crumbled out again t' his atomies.

Donne, Anat. of the W., i, 209.

Also, a corruption of anatomy: Dol. Goodman death, goodman bones.

2 Hen. IV, v, 4. Otamy was also used by old writers, without any design to burlesque their language. Anatomy is used itself for skeleton, in King John. Speaking of the ideal personage of death, Constance says, cile; from at one. So in Acts vii,

26. "He showed himself to them | †ATTEND. To wait. as they strove, and would have set them at one again," or, have reconciled them.

The present need

Speaks to atone you.

Nay if he had been cool enough teel us that, there had been some hope to attone you, but he seems so implacably enraged.

B. Jon. Epicane, iv. 51. Also v. n. To come to a reconciliation; to agree.

Then there is mirth in heav'n When earthly things made even Atone together.

As you L. it, v, 4
He and Aufidius can no more atone Than violentest contrariety.

But lie with woman, or class lodge alone.

Heywood, The Golden Age, act ii, sc. 1.

ATONE, adj. United; agreed.

So beene they both atone, and doen upreare
Their bevers bright each other for to greet. Sp. F. O., II. i. 29.

ATONEMENT. Reconciliation. I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence to make atonements and compromises between voience to make atonements and compromises between you.

Mer. W., i, 1.

If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Be stronger for the breaking. 3 Hen. IV, iv, 1.
Since your happiness,
As you will have it, has alone dependence
Upon her favour, from my soul I wish you
A fair atonement.

Mar Todd has well as a martifact at: Mr. Todd has well exemplified this sense in all this class of words, from writers of prose as well as poetry; but he has omitted to say, what might be necessary for some readers, that it is an obsolete sense.

†ATOP, prep. On the top of.

Alop the chappell is a globe (or steele mirrour) pendant, wherein these linx-eyed people view the deformity of their sinnes.

Herbert's Travels, 1638. formity of their sinnes. Herbert's Travel ATTACH, v. To join.

Ten masts attack'd make not the altitude

Which thou hast perpendicularly fallen.

This however is only the conjectural correction of Pope; the old editions have at each. The sense of attach. however, is right.

ATTAINT, s. Taint; or anything hurtful, as weariness.

But freshly looks and overbears attaint With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty.

Hen. V, iv, Chor. I will not poison thee with my attaint. Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses. Shakesp. Raps of Lucr., p. 535.

†ATTAME, v. To tame; to overcome. Let not the greede of gaine your hearts attame, To leave the right, preferre not feare to shame.

†ATTEMPERED. Moderate.

Among all the humours the sanguine is to be preferd, saith the antiquary; first, because it comes necrest unto the principles and groundworks of our life, which stands in an attempered heate and moisture.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

Du Bartas.

Clo. Shall I ever see
That day, when I may see him once again?

Mel. Thou shalt, if thou wilt but atlend the time. Phillis of Serros, 1655.

+ATTERR. To overwhelm; to overthrow. From the French atterrer. Great Strong-howe's heir, no self-conceipt dath cause Mine humble wings aspire to you, unknowns:
But, knowing this that your renown alone (As th' adamant, and as the amber drawes:
That, hardest steel; this, easie-yeelding strawes)

Atterrs the stubborn, and attracts the prone.

Sylvester's Du Bartas, Dedic. Sounet.
To entice; to draw to. +To ATTICE. The dampable just of cardes and of dice

The damnable just of cartes and of the And other games prohibite by lawe.
To great offences some fooles doth attice.
Northbroak's Treaties against Dicing, 1577.
And to expresse my minde in short sentence,
This vicious game oft times doth attice By his lewde signes chast heartes unto vice. Ibid.

ATTONCE, adv. Once for all; at once. And all attones her beastly body rais'd
With double forces high above the ground.

Sp. P. Q., I, i, 18.

ATTONE, adv. Altogether. And his fresh blood did frieze with fearfull cold, That all his senses seem'd bereft attons.

Sp. P. Q., II, i, 49. reconciliation. +ATTONEMENT. A See ATONEMENT.

In very truth Chremes too-too grievously afflicteth the young man, and dealeth too-too unkindly. Therefore I am comming forth to make afforcment betwirt them.

I am comming forth to make attonement betwirt them.

Torence in English. 1614.

Affinity setteth whole families many times at variance, even to the drawing of strangers to take part, but when an attonement is contrived, the rest are not only condemned but pay for the mischiefe, when a mans bload returnes, and feare of overthrowing the whole family keepes malice in restraint.

Eich Cabinet Furnished with Farieties of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

ATTORNE, or ATTURNE, v. To perform service. They plainly told him that they would not atturne to him, nor be under his jurisdiction. diction. Holingsk. Rich. II, 481.

Here we see the origin of the word attorney. See Du Fresne in attornare and atturnatus. Warburton conjectured, with some show of probability, that this word should be substituted for returned in the following passage:

I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best part should have return'd to him. Tim. d., iii, 2.

However, it is common to speak of the returns of money and income for their regular produce.

†ATTRACTIVE, n. s. A thing which attracts, or causes attraction.

Ith' van of a wel-orderd troop rides forth Lov'd Aminander, whose unquestiond worth, That strong attractive of the peoples love, That strong assessed Exspung'd suspicion.

Chamberlayne's Pheronnida, 1656.

To attract. †ATTRACK. So the smalle needle of my heart Mov's to her maker, who doth dart s of love, and so attracks affections which like sparks ap, and guid my soul by this he tru centre of her bliss.

Howell's Familiar Latters. R. v. This accentuation on yllable, which is now con- +AUCUPATE. e noun. was anciently given b also.

: but faulty men use oftentimes r their folly unto fate.

Sp. P. Q., V, iv, 28.

Fn accentuation is however ie author:

stiribute to yourselves as kings.
Id. 1, Cant. on Mulab., st. 49. Profit: value.

I charge thee, a shall work in me for thine cocil.

a shall work in me for thine seess,
s trally.
Shakesp. All's W. that ends W., i, 3.
he marriage cannot be craved but at the of the apparent heir, because he cannot but by giving security of his landes.
Hope's Minor Practicks.
AILB, or AVAYLE, v. To ing down.

he welked Phoebus gan areile y wain. Spens. Skep. Cal., Jan., 1, 73. >re commonly used in this sey counte not in the numbre of men, atl analed the hyghe nature of his sowle of brute beastes bodies.

More's Utopia, 1551.

eys, fixt on his frowning brow, w Grecian shield in's an-all bow. Firgil, by Ficars, 1632. IRD. The van-guard.

nt out, or goeth before an armie to defie he enimy, the scowt, or avant-gard, the Nomenclator.

EABLE. Advantageous. witholden by any respects from attempting to be attempted any most hie and an and mischiefes against our soversigned assuming against our soversigned source of assuming against Papistes, 1569.

Perhaps for avaunte. hem selfes to have verye often gotte the and masterye of your news made and oldiours. More's Utopia, 1551.

To boast, or vapour in a nanner; being only vaunt prefixed.

i prenxed.

sating in great bravery, has his painted plumes doth pranck,
courser in the trembling flanck.

59. F. Q. II, iii, 6.
ad assesse themselves yf they vanquyshe their enemyes by crafte and deceyt.

More's Utopia, by R. R.

uasi ALBURN, from whitecolour inclining to white. nation of this etymology, . Todd has suggested, the passage is strong:

His faire auberne haire—had nothing upon it but white ribbin.

Pembr. Arcadia, p. 469. Modern ideas of auburn are very fluctuating and uncertain; often taken for brown.

To hunt after anything. Some till their threats ake cry slowd and hollo, To ancupate great favors from Apollo. Taylor's Workss, 1630.

A hearer. This word +AUDIENT. occurs in the History of Don Quixote. 1675, p. 70.

 75, p. /U.
 To speake to your coactors in the scene,
 You hold interlogations with the audicuts.
 Brome's Antipodes, 1640. +AVENARY. The office of him who has care of the provender for the horses.

The master of the horse preferres to the avenurie, and other clarkeships offices and places about the stable. Tom of all Trades, 1631.

AVENTRE, v. To throw a spear; clearly from aventare, Ital., which means the same. Peculiar to Spenser, I believe.

Here it seems to signify to push.

And aft assafring his steele-headed launce, Against her rode.

F. Q., 1V, vi, 11.

†AVICED. "The bryde was very much aviced as ever I saw." Letters of James Earl of Perth, p. 24. editor explains it "full of life."

†AVISO. An information, or piece of

According to promise, and that portion of obedience I ow to your commands, I send your lordship these few seriese, som wherof I doubt not but you have received before.

Howell's Passilier Letters, 1850.

AVIZE, AVISE, or AVYSE, v. advise; also to consider or bethink one's self.

A word used by Spenser, both as an active and a neuter verb. See Todd.

AUMAYL'D. Enamelled or embroidered; emaillé, Fr.

dered; emaillé, Fr.

In gilden buskins of costly cordwayne,
All bard with golden bendes, which were entayld
With curious antickes, and full fayre assess?

Sp. P. Q., II, iii, 27.

†AUNCIENTIE. Antiquity. The Scottish men, according to the maner of other nations, esteeming it a giorie to fetche their beginning of great associatie.

An exact draught of things memorable in Ægypt: and first as touching the suncientic of the people, the site and limits of the kingdome, then the heads, courses, mouthes, or issues, and strange wonders of Nilus. Millens's Ammianus Marcellinus.

A cant term for a woman of bad character, either prostitute or procuress.

procuress.

The lark that tirra-lirra chaunts
With, hey! with, hey! the thrush and the jay,
Are summer songs for me and my sants,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.
While we lie tumbling in the hay.
W Tale, iv, S. Also Mids., ii, 1.
To call you one o' mine sants, sister, were as good as
O. Pl., iii, 260. To call you one o' mine assats, sister, were as good as to call you arrant whore.

O. Pl., iii, 260.

Naming to him one of my assats, a widow by Fleetditch, her name is Mistress Gray, and keeps divers gentlewomen lodgers.

O. Pl., vii, 410.

And was it not then better bestowed upon his uncle, than upon one of his assats? I need not say bawd, for every one knows what assat stands for in the last translation. Middleton's Trick to catch the Old One, ii, 1. Aunt was also the customary appellation addressed by a jester or fool, to a female of matronly appearance; as uncle was to a man. This appears in the justice's personification of a fool, Barth. Fair, act ii, I, where he by no means intends to provoke the old lady. nor does she take offence.

AVOID, v. n. To go, depart, or retire: as in the translation of the Bible, 1 Sam. xviii, 11.

Let us avoid. W. Tule, i, 2.

Thou basest thing, avoid, hence from my sight.

Cym., i, 2.

Saw not a creature stirring, for all the people were aroughed and withdrawen Holinsked. asoyded and withdrawen
†Master Lieutenant gives a straite commaund,
The people be asoyded from the bridge.
The Play of Sir Thomas More, p. 87.
†Moreover 'tis a handkerchiefes high place

To be a scavenger unto the face, To clease it cleane from sweat and excrements,
Which (not apoyded) were unsavory scents;
And in our griefes it is a trusty friend,
For in our sorrow it doth comfort lend.

Taylor's Workes, 1680.

AVOUCH, s. Proof; testimony. Before my God, I might not this believe Without the sensible and true arouse Of mine own cycs. Ham., i, 1.

Shakespeare uses avouchment also.

AVOURE, s. Confession; acknowledgment.

He bad him stand t' abide the bitter stowre Of his sore vengeance, or to make asours Of the lewd words and deeds, which he had done.

Sp. F. Q., VI, iii, 48. AVOURY, s. An old law term, nearly equivalent to justification. Not exemplified in Johnson.

empined in Johnson.

Therefore away with these evouries: let God alone be our assourie, what have we to doe to runne hither and thither, but onely to the Father of heaven?

Latimer, Serm., f. 81, b. †When Troy was destroyed by the Greekes, and most of their nobilitie slaine, Aeneas beeing sonne to prince Anchiese, and begotten of Venus, a man of most valiant courage and vertue (after great slaughter made on his encumes) was forced to fice his country, and taking with him his images and gods, whom he then worshipt for his anouries, withdrew himselfe to the sea. Virgil, by Phaer, 1600.

AVOUTRY. See ADVOWTRY. †AUSPICATE. Auspicious.

UNITUATE. AUSPICIOUS.
They puffed up (as their usuall manner was) the emperour, of his owne nature too high minded, ascribing whatsoever was in the world fortunatly exploited unto his suspicate direction and happing government.

Holland's Americana Marcellinus.

+AUSTRICH. Austria. The French form of the name.

Where it on Italy doth next confine,
Closing with Hungary, doth Austrick rest:
Renowned Austrick, whose prince-branching the Stretcht through the yielding and declining west.
Zouche's Dove, or Passages of Cosmography.
AUTEM MORT. Cant language, a married woman. Jovial Crew.

AUTHENTIC, seems to have been the proper epithet for a physician regularly bred or licensed. The diploma of a licentiate runs " authentice licen-So says Dr. Musgrave, on the following passage:
To be relinquished of Galen and Paracelsus—
And all the learned and suttentic fellows.

All's Well that ends W., ii, 3.

The accurate Jonson also uses it, in the person of Puntarvolo, who, though pompous, is not incorrect:

Or any other nutriment that by the judgment of the most authentical physicians, where I travel, shall be thought dangerous.

Beery Man out of H., iv, 4.

+To AUTHOR. To be the cause or author of. Frequently used by Chap-

And charge ingloriously my flight, when such an over-Of brave friends I have author'd. Chapman, Il., ii. 99.

AUTHO'RIZE. This accentuation was anciently prevalent.

One quality of worth or virtue in him
That may authorize him to be a censurer

Of me, or of my manners.

B. 4 Fl. Spanish Curate, act. i, sc. 1.

All men make faults, and even I in this All men make sauts, and even a in visit Authorizing thy trespass with compare.

Sh. Sonnet, 35.

AUTOR. An author; a beginner.
The serpent autor was, Ere did proceed:
Adam not autor, auctor was indeed.
Oncen's Epigrams.

To AWAY WITH, v. To bear with. It seems originally to have meant, to go away contented with such a person or thing.

She could never away with me.

Of all nymphs i' the court I cannot away with her.

B. Jon. Cynth. Revels, iv, S.

And do not bring your eating player with you there:

I cannot away with him.

I cannot away with an informer.

Cure for a Cuckold, sig. F.

†Away the mare, i. e., begone.

Adew, swetcharte, Christe geve the care!

Adew to the, devil! Assay the mare!

MS. Corp. Christ. Coll. Cantab., 168.

MED. Wearied, or tired. wands fathers of the spiritualtie, and other a addict to vertue, sweeryd and abhorring is madnesse.

Holinshed's Chronicles.

for lawful; or under due awe hority.

ame within our captul banks again,
limit our powers to the arm of peace.

2 Hos. IV, iv, 1. as the fury of ungovern'd youth at from the company of aurisi me

2 Gent., iv, 1. usage is perhaps peculiar to speare. It occurs, however, in pubtful play of Pericles, which ably his:

prince and benign lord,
I move swful both in deed and word. E, or AWAPE, v. To terrify found. Saxon.

y dear gossip, answered then the ape, y do your sad words my wits swhaps. Spens. Moth. Hub. Tale, 71. ord is used by Chaucer.

On work; into work. See A. ting merit set swork by a reprovable badness

So after Pyrrhus' panse rengeance set him new awork. Ham., ii, 2. so Rape of Lucrece, Suppl., i, this burning nose once more s-work all where I remov'd it.

B. Jon. Case is Alter'd, ii, 5.

this I have already set a-works.

Dun. Queen's Arc., iii, 1, p. 357.
od face on't, and afront him; and I'll set my od face on t, and seems presently.

Holiday's Technogamia, iv, 5. ME. Respectful; having refor. by are wise and wittie, in due place swsome; so the other: a man may know their free national and the when you will you may reheat.

Terence in English, 1614.

ask. This word, which now for a mere vulgarism, is the al Saxon form, and used by er and others. See Tyrwhitt's ury. We find it also in bishop God's Promises, ir syane vengeaunce axetà continuallye.

O. Pl., i, 18. n the four Ps by Heywood: w them this question than. O. Pl., i, 84. ring is used by Chaucer for a it. Ben Jonson introduces it rly:

. man out of wax Masques, vol. vi, p. 85. E, for AXLE-TREE.

Such a noise they make,
a sunder heavin's huge as-tree brake.

Drayt. Mooncalf, p. 476.

haden. The axeltree, or the axetree where Nonemalator. s wheeles turne. Nomenclator. AY-MEE. A lamentation; from crying ah me. or ay-me!

No more sy-mess and misereris, Tranio, Come near my brain. B. & Fl. Tumer Tum'd, iii, 1. Misereris is a correction of the editor. 1750. for mistresses, which in the first edition was miseries: his conjecture was nearly right, but misereres would be more intelligible. misereres Would De more assessed thanks, f. A deletall crie, lamentation, sy-mes.

Cotyruse.

I can hold off, and by my chymick pow'r
Draw soundts from the melting lover's brain,
Ay-mees, and elegies.
B. F. Women Hater, act ii, p. 241.
To be transform'd, and like a puling lover
With arms thus folded up, echo ay-me's.
Mass. Bashf. Lover, iv, 1.

Cupid is called,

Hero of his-hoes, admiral of sy-me's, and monsieur of mutton lac'd Heywood's Love's Mistress.

AYE, or AY, adv. Ever. Saxon.

E, or AY, aav. Ever.

Whiles you doing thus
To the perpetual wink for sy might put
This ancient morsel, this sir Prudence.

Temp., ii, l.
Her house the heav'n by this bright moon sys clear'd.

Fairf. T., ii, 14.

The word is hardly yet obsolete in poetry.

AYGULET. See AIGULET, and AGLET. AZYMENE. An astrological term.

As I MENT. An astrological term.

Asot. And can there be no weddings without prodigies?
This is th' impediment the deymence
Or planetary hindrance threat'ned me.
By the Almutes of the seventh house,
In an aspect of Tetragon radiation,
If Luna now be corporally joyn'd,
I may o'recome th' aversenesse of my starres.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646.

B.

To know a B from a battledoor.

A cant phrase, apparently very senseless, but which probably depends upon some anecdote now forgotten. Used for having a very slight degree of learning; or for being hardly able to distinguish one thing from another. Perhaps only made for the sake of the alliteration, as we still speak of knowing chalk from cheese. Battledoor was properly the name for a hornbook, from which children learnt the alphabet, and this is no doubt the origin of the phrase.]

You shall not needs to buy bookes; no, scorns to distinguish a B from a battledoor; onely looke that your cares be long enough to reach our rudiments, and your eare made for ever.

For in this age of criticks are such store,
That of a B will make a battledoor.

J. Taylor's Mutto. Dedic.

To the gentlemen readers that understand a B from a battledoor. Ibid., Dedic. to Odcomb's Compl. †Againe, I affirme that thus being no scholler, but a simple honest dunce, as I am, that cannot say B to a battledore, it is very presumptuously done of me to offer to hey-passe and repasse it in print so.

King's Halfpenmyworth of Wit, 1613, ded. †Neque nature neque literas novit: hee knoweth not a B from a battle-dore.

Withale' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 567.

BABIES IN THE EYES. The miniature reflection of himself which a person sees in the pupil of another's eye, on looking closely into it, was sportively called by our ancestors a little boy or baby, and made the subject of many amorous allusions. Thus Drayton:

But O, see, see we need enquire no further,
Upon your lips the scarlet drops are found,
And in your cye the boy that did the murder.

Idea 2.

Thus also an anonymous writer, in an ode which Mr. Ellis inserted in his beautiful compilation from the old English poets:

In each of her two crystal eyes
Smileth a naked boy;
It would you all in heart suffice
To see that lamp of joy.
Specimens, lat ed., p 7.
Quoted also by Warton, Hist. P., iii, 48.

And Herrick:

Or those babies in your eyes,
In their christall nunneries.
P. 138. Also p. 150.
Shakespeare is supposed to have alluded to this notion in the following

Joy had the like conception in our eyes,
And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.
Timon of Ath., i, 2.

As it requires a very near approach to discern these little images, poets make it an employment of lovers to look for them in each other's eves. See To LOOK BABIES, &c.

BABION, or BABIAN, the same as BAVIAN. A baboon. "Our old writers," says Mr. Gifford, "spell this word in many different ways; all derived, Dutch." however, from bavaan, He adds, "We had our knowledge of this animal from the Hollanders, who found it in great numbers at the Cape." Note on the following passage.

I am neither your minotaur, nor your centaur, nor your satyr, nor your hyana, nor your sation.

B. Jon. Cynthia's Revels, i, 1.

See BAVIAN.

Of all the rest, that most resembles man, Was an o'ergrown ill-favourd babian. Drayt. Moonc., p. 500.

For which he afterwards uses baboon. as equivalent. See p. 503.

In the reprint of Marston's Satires by J. Bowle (1764) we read,

Fond affectation

Befits an ape, and mumping babilon.

Bat. ix, b. 3, p. 318 This error arose from ignorance of the word babion. Omit the lin babilon, and all is right.

Befits an ape, and numping betion.

†And is it possible so divine a goddesse
Should fall from heaven to wallow here in sin
With a betion as this is?

Randolok's Joalous Lovers, 1646. BABLE, the same as BAUBLE, q. v. In the edition of Drayton's Works printed in 1753, 8vo, this word is ignorantly changed to Babel.

changed to Babel.

Which with much sorrow brought into my mind
Their wretched souls, so ignorantly blind,
When ev'n the great'st things in the world unstable,
That climb to fall, and damn them for a bable.

The Ool, Drayl, vol. iv, p. 1990.
Mean while, my Mall, think thou it's honourable
To be my foole, and I to be thy bable.

Barring. Epig., i, st.

BABLE, adj. Empty; chattering;

+BABLE, adj. frivolous. As a n. s., idle talk; in which sense the word bablery was also used, and babblement. It seems to be only another form of bauble, and was also used to signify glass or metal ornaments of dress.

Inexas Ornaments of dress.

Languard, babillard. A babbler: a pratter: a tatler: one that is full of vaine talke. Nonenclater, 1886.

I list not write the babble praises
Of apea, or owles, or popinistics,
Or of the eat Grimmalkin.

Taylor's Workes, 1680.

That woorthie Booke of Martyrs made by that famous father and excellent instrument in God his church, maister John Fox, so little to be accepted and all other cood books little or nothing to be reversemed, which maister John to, white w we excepted and an ease good books little or nothing to be reverenced; whist other toyes, fantasies, and believies, wherof the world is ful, are suffered to be printed.

Stubles' Anatomic of Abuse.

The word babelavant, which occurs in the following passage of the Chester Plays, is probably from the same source.

Sir Cayphas, harcken nowe to me, This babelavante our kinge woulde be. Whatsoever he sayes nowe before the Whatsoever he sayes nowe before the I harde bym saye full yore That prince he was of such postee, Destroye the temple well mights he, And builde it up in dayes three, Righte as it was before.

BACCARE. A cant word, meaning, go back, used in allusion to a proverbial saying, "Backare, quoth Mortimer to his sow;" probably made in ridicule of some man who affected a knowledge of Latin without having it, and who produced his Latinized English words on the most trivial occasions.

he most trivial occasions.

Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too:

Baccare' you are marvellous forward.

Tam. Shr., ii, 1.

Tam. SAr., 1, 1.

The mascaline gender is more worthy than the feminine. Therefore, Licio, backars. Lyly, Mydas, v, 2.

It is often used by Heywood the Epigrammatist, as.

Shall I consume myself, to restore him now;
Nay Backers, quoth Mortimer to his sow. Posms, p. 34.

Upon this proverb the same author made several things that he called This word was unproepigrams. pitious to the conjecturing critics, who would have changed it to Baccalare, an Italian term of reproach.

BACHELOR'S BUTTON. A flower: the campion, or lychnis sylvestris of Johnson's Gerard, p. 472.

Now the similitude that these floures have to the jagged cloath buttons, antiently worne in this kingdom, gave occasion to our gentlewomen and other lovers of floures in those times, to call them backslor's

Supposed, by country people, formerly, to have some magical effect upon the fortunes of lovers. [They practised a sort of divination with them, to try whether they should marry their mistresses or not. Perhaps alluded to in this passage:

Master Fenton,—he will carry't, he will carry't: 'tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

Mer. W., iii, 2. It seems to have grown into a phrase for being unmarried, "to wear bachelors buttons," in which probably a quibble was intended:

He wears backelors buttons, does he not?

Heyw. Fair Maid of the West. [Bachelors' buttons are described as having been sometimes worn also by the young women.]

Thereby I saw the batchelors' buttons, whose virtue is to make wanton maidens weepe when they have worse it forty weekes under their aprons, for a favour.

Greens's Quip for an Upstart Courtier, 1620.

BACK AND EDGE, phr. for completely, entirely; the back and the edge being nearly the whole of some instruments.

By the influence of a white powder, which has wrought so powerfully on their tender pulse, that they have sugged themselves ours, back end edge.

Lady Alimony, act iii, sign. II, 1.

*To set one's back up, to provoke his indignation.

That word set my back up, and I said, As master had not brib'd to be close, so I hop'd he would not betray his trust.

Dems Huddle's Letter, 1710. + To ride on one's back, to deceive him successfully.

Thy father made an asse off, wilt thou goe? And I in triumph riding on his back. The Wisard, a Play, 1650.

+ Back bear, an old term of forest law. Back bears is, where any man hath slaine a wild beast in the forrest, and is found carying away of the same, this the old forresters do call back bears. Manucod's Treatise of the Lauce of the Forrest, 1598.

+BACKNAL. In the Mock Songs, 1675, p. 123, is one "to the tune of the new French dance called backnal."

BACKRACK, or BACKRAG. A sort of German wine, sometimes mentioned with Rhenish. The name is corrupted from that of the place of its growth. In a modern book of travels I find the following account:

following account:

The finest flavour is communicated by soils either argillaceous or marly. Of this sort is a mountain near Backarach, the wines of which are said to have a muscadine flavour, and to be so highly esteemed, that an emperor, in the fourteenth century, demanded four large barrels of them, instead of 10,000 florins, which the city of Nuremberg, would have paid for its privileges.

Mrs. Radcliff's Journey in 1794.

Also in Dr. Ed. Brown's Travels, 16×7:

On the 19th we came to Baccharach, or ad Bacchi aras, belonging to the elector palatine; a place famous for excellent wines.

P. 117.

excellent wines.

P. 117.

I'll go afore, and have the bon-fire made,
My fireworks, and flap-dragons, and good backrack,
With a peck of little flahes, to drink down
In healths to this day.

B. f. Fl. Beg. Bush, v, S.
I'm for no tongues but dry'd ones, such as will Give a fine reliah to my backrag.

City Match, O. Pl., ix, 283.

A beautiful view of Bacharach is given in some late views on the Rhine.

BADDER, from bad. This analogous. but unauthorised comparative, is used by Lyly, in his preface to Euphues.
But as it is, it may be better, and were it badder, it is not the worst.

Euph, B. 1, b. Mr. Todd found baddest, in Sir E. Sandys.

BADGE. In the time of Shakespeare, &c., all the servants of the nobility wore silver badges on their liveries, on which the arms of their masters were engraved. To this Shakespeare alludes in the following passage:

To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery. Rape of Lucrece, p. 534.

The colour of the coat was universally blue, which made this further distinction necessary. See Blue.

A blue coat with a badge does better with you.
Gr. Tu Quoque. O. PL, vii, 33.
That is, a servant's dress. It was also called a cognizance; and vulgarly corrupted into cullisen. See Cullisen. Attending on him he had some five men; their cogni-sance, as I remember, was a peacocke without a tayle. Greene's Quip, Harl. Misc., v, p. 412.

inveterately maintained, by many who have sufficient opportunities of informing themselves better, that this animal has the two legs on one side shorter than those on the other. It is noticed as an error by Brown, Pseudodox .. It is alluded to as a b. iii, ch. 5. supposed fact, by W. Browne, in Britannia's Pastorals, b. i, song 4: Drittillia 8 I haddrais, U. 1, 8011g 4:
And as that beast kath legs (which shepherds feare, Ycleep'd a badger, which our lambs doth teare)
One long, the other short, that when he runs
Upon the plains he halts, but when he wons
On craggy rocks, or steepy stills, we see
None runs more swift, nor easier than he. Drayton also calls him "th' uneven legg'd badger," and speaks of his halting, in Noah's Flood, p. 1534. We are not badgers,
For our legs are one as long as the other.

Lyly, Midas, i. 2. BAFFLE, v. To use contemptuously; to unknight. It was originally a punishment of infamy, inflicted on recreant knights, one part of which was hanging them up by the heels. In French, baffouer or baffoler. It is thus described by Spenser:

8 described by opener.

And after all for greater infamie
He by the heels him hung upon a tree,
And bafful'd so, that all which passed by
The picture of his punishment might see.
F. Q., VI, vii, 27.

The coward Bessus, in King and no King, confesses that he had met with this treatment:

In this state I continued, 'till they hung me up by th' heels, and beat me wi hasle-sticks, as if they would have bak'd me. After this I railed and eat quietly: for the whole kingdom took notice of me for a heefled and whip'd fellow.

Act ii, sc. 2.

There is a passage in Hall's Chronicle, Hen. VIII, p. 40, wherein the practice is spoken of as then retained in Scot-The word occurs in Shakespeare, Rich. II, i, 1, in the more general sense; but in the following passage seems to refer to the particular species of ignominy:

An I do not, call me villain, and baffle me. 1 Hen. IV, i, 2. Something of the same kind is also implied, where Falstaff says,

If thou do it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, heag see up by the heels for a rabbetsucker, or a poulter's here.

Ibid., ii, 4. The subsequent allusions are added, only by way of contrast to the figure he would make when thus baffled. See also Muses' Looking Glass, O. Pl., ix. 183.

It is a vulgar error, still BAG, to give the, to a person; a colloquial phrase for to cheat.

You shall have those curses which belongs unto your craft; you shall be light-footed to travel farre, light witted upon every small occasion to give your masters the bag. Greene's Quip, fc., Harl. Misc., v, 411.

To BAG, v. To breed, to become pregnant.

Well, Venus shortly bagged, and ere long was Cupid bred.

Alb. Engl., vi, p. 148. +Bag and bottle, a common phrase for provisions.

provisions.

Arise, arise, said jolly Robin,
And now come let me see
What's in thy sag sad bottle, I say?
Come tell it unto me.

Ballad of Robin Hood and the Shepherd.

An ill contriving rascal, that in his younger years should choose to lug the bag and the bottle a mile or two to school; and to bring home only a small but of Greek or Latin most magisterially construed.

Balana's Observations, 1671.

†BAGATELL. A thing of small worth. Fr. A word which is hardly obsolete. Your trifles and bagatells are ill bestowed upon me, therfore heerafter I pray let me have of your best sort of wares. Howell's Familiae Letters, 1650. I rummag'd all my stores, and search'd my cells, Wher nought appear'd, God wot, but bagatells. Isid.

+BAG-PUDDING. A pudding made evidently of flour and suet, with plums, and of an elongated shape, as it had two ends. It probably represented our rolly-polly puddings, and seems from the frequent allusion to it to have been a very popular dish at the tables of the middle and lower classes.

> A big bag-pudding then I must commend, For he is full, and holds out to the end; Sildome with men is found so sound a friend. Davies, Scourge of Folly, 1611.
> First to break fast, then to dine,

First to break fast, then to dine,
Is to conquer Bellarmine:
Distinctions then are budding.
Old Sutchiff's wit
Did never hit,
But after his bag-pudding.
Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.
Since the first putting of plumbs into bag-puddings.
Since men first wore perriwing.
Since the pay was first invented.

Page Robin 1899.

Since the pox was first invented. Poor Robin, 1699. There are several reasons to be given, that the grocer's trade will be current this year; a fig for care, their calling will never be out of date so long as men est plumbs in their puddings. Were it not for their trade, we should have no Christmas pies, and a posset without sugar, would look like a bag-pudding without sugar.

suct.
True love is not like to a bag-pudding; a bag-pudding hath two ends, but true love hath never an end.

Ibid., 1709.

+BAGGAGE. Apparently synonymous with scum.

Fill an egg-shell newly emptied with the juice of singreen, and set it in hot embers; scum off the green baggage from it, and it will be a water.

Lapton's Thousand Notable Things.

+BAGGAMMON. The game of backgammon.

That's not well, though you have learnt to play at Suggestion, you must not forget Irish, which is a more serious and solid game.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+BAILIWICK. Stewardship.

We shall come to give an account of our bailistick, and to be reckoned withall for the employment of our talents.

Dent's Pathway to Heaven, p. 178. BAINE, s. A bath. Bain, Fr.

And so sir Launcelot made faire Elaine for to gather And hath him in the beine

Of his son's blood, before the altar slaine.

Of his son's blood, before the altar slaine.

Mirr. Mag., p. 268.

†Vallet de bain. A boy or servant attendant about such businesse as belonged to the baynes or stuves.

Nomenclator, 1886.

†To conclude, as the old walls of Chalcedon were in

To conclude, as the old walls of Chalcedon were in pulling downe, for to build up a baine in Constantinople, when the raunge and course of the stone-worke was loosened, upon a foure square stone which lay couched in the middle of the worke, these Greeke verses following were found.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

BAINE, v. To bathe. Baigner, Fr. Hoping against hope, and fayning by and by some joy and pleasure, wherein he beined himself with great poy and pleasure, wherein ne ossime numbers with great contented minde.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii.

To being themselves in my distilling blood.

Wounds of Civil Wer, P. Lodge.

BAISEMAINS. Compliments salutations. Fr. Spenser.

BAIT, v. Term in falconry. See BATE. +BAITING-STOCK. An object to be baited by everybody. Analogous with laughing-stock.

Whereby my credit hath been blemished, the good opinion which many held of me lost, my name abused, and I a common reproach, a scorne, a bye-word, and bayting-stocke to the poysonous teeth of envy and alander.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†BAKE means, apparently, a wanton boy.

How unequall judges be fathers against all yong men:
who think it meete, we should of little bakes by and by become sage olde men.

†BAKER'S-DOZEN. Thirteen. It was originally called a devil's-dozen, and was the number of witches supposed to sit down at table together in their great meetings or sabbaths. Hence the superstition relating to the number thirteen at table. The baker, who was a very unpopular character in former times, seems to have been substituted on this account for the devil.

Pair-royall headed Cerberus his cozen; Hercules labours were a baker's dozen Cleaveland's Poems, 1651.

That all the prodigies brought forth before
Are but dame Nature's blush left on the score.
This strings the baker's doses, christens all
The cross-legd hours of time since Adam's fall.
Fletcher's Poems, p. 131.

BAK'D-MEAT, means generally, meat prepared by baking, but in the common usage of our ancestors it signified more usually a meat pie; or pertion has been a good deal overlooked. Dr. Johnson says only "meats dressed by the oven;" yet the very quotation he employs, from Bacon, leads to a suspicion of the truth: for there they are classed with sweet meats. In Romeo and Juliet, as soon as the nurse has

They call for dates and quinces in the pastry; Capulet exclaims.

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica,

Spare not for cost. This also suggests the same idea. But R. Sherwood puts it out of all doubt: by whom, in the English part of Cotgrave's dictionary, bak'd meats are rendered by pastisserie, i. e. patisserie; and, on the other hand, pastisserie is translated "all kind of pies, or bak'd meats."

You speak as if a man
Should know what fowl is coffin'd in a bak'd meat
Afore it is cut up.

White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 312. Coffin'd means incrusted. See Coffin. Prior speaks of bak'd-meats, in an imitation of Chaucer:

Full oft doth Mat with Topaz dine. Eateth bak'd

But whether he meant it in this sense is not so clear.

BALDRICK, or BAULDRICK, s. A helt.

But that I will have a recheat winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, the ladies shall pardon me.

Much A., i, 1.

Athwart his breast a basidrick brave he ware.

Sp. F. Q., I, vii, 29.
The zodiac is called by Spenser the bauldrick of the heavens:

That like the twins of Jove they seem'd in sight Which deek the bauldrick of the heavens bright.

Prothalamion, 174. +BALDUCTUM. A mediæval word meaning literally buttermilk, but it was used apparently in a burlesque sense for a paltry affected writer, and also for his compositions.

And because every balducium makes divine poetrie to be but base rime. I leave thee (sacred eloquence) to be defended by the Muses ornaments, and such (despised) to live tormented with endless povertie. Polimanteia, 1595.

BALE, s. Sorrow. Sax. Bome and her rats are at the point of battle, The one side must have bale. Co Let now your bliss be turned into bale.

Let now your bliss be turned into bale.

Spens. Daphneids, 390.

BALE OF DICE. A pair of dice.

For exercise of arms, a bale of dice.

Or two or three packs of cards to shew the cheat,
And nimbleness of hand.

A pox upon these dice, give's a fresh bale.

Greens's Tu Quoque, O. Pl., vii, 50.

ADALISCO. Political hands.

hape any other pie. This significa- | +BALIST. Ballast, both as a n. and v.

And when he comes there, poor soule, hee lyes in brine, in balist, and is lamentable sicke of the scuryes.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

And as a wolfe, beeing about to devoure a horse, doth balist his belly with earth, that he may hang the heavier.

+BALISTIER. A crossbow-man.

And, because no delay might impeach this project, taking with him none but the men of armes and balistiers, unmeet souldiers to protect and defend their ruler, passed the same way through, and came to Autosidorum. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

BALKE, s. A beam, or rafter.

Many a piece of bacon have I had out of their balkes.

Gammer Garton's N., O. Pl., ii, 7.

In its swift pulles off the men withdrew
The tree, and oft the riding balk forth threw.
The mighty beam redoubled oft its blows.

Print. T., xviii, 80.

Also a ridge in ploughed land, or rather a space left between the lands in a common field; still used in the midland counties.

And as the plowman when the land he tils
Throws up the fruitfull earth in ridged hils,
Between whose chevron form he leaves a balke;
So twirt those hils had nature fram'd this walke. Browne's Brit. Past., i 4.
No griping landlord hath inclos'd thy walkes,
Nor toyling plowman furrow'd them in balkes.

Ibid., ii, 2, p. 61.

See Junius and Minshew.

BALKE, v. To raise into ridges: to Minshew has this word, "to balke, or make a balk in earing (i. e. plowing) of land." Thus some explain this passage of Shakespeare:

Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty knights

Balk'd in their own blood did sir Walter see

On Holmedon's plains.

1 Hen. IV, i, 1. Others would change the reading to bak'd in the sense of incrusted, which is not without authority from Shakespeare himself. See Hamlet, ii, 2. There however the blood is bak'd by the fire of the houses, not the person bak'd in blood. The following quotation from Heywood is more apposite:

Troilus lies embak'd In his cold blood. Iron Age. +To BALKE. To relinquish; to pass off a bargain; to overlook.

Oh a Dargann; to Overlook.

Learn'd and judicious lord, if I should balke
Thyne honor'd name, it being in my way,
My muse unworthy were of such a walke,
Where honor's branches make it ever May.

Davies, Scourge of Folly, 1611.

How? let her go? by no means, sir. I shall never be read in chronicle, that sir Arther Addel (my renowned friend) besch'd a mistress for fear of rivals.

Canal Sir Salorem 1801

Caryl, Sir Salomon, 1691.

This was my man, but I was to try him to the bottom; and indeed in that consisted my safety, for if he salfed, I knew I was undone as surely as he was undone if he took. undone if he took me.

*Fortunes of Moll Flanders, 1729.

†BALLETRY, or BALLATRY. A song.

From the Ital. The word is used by

Were their stuffe by ten millions more Tramontani or Transalpine barbarous than balletry, he would have prest it upon Wolfe whether he would or no. Mash's Have with you to Saffron Walden, 1896.

BALLIARDS, for BILLIARDS, from a mistaken opinion concerning the etymology, which has been adopted by Dr. Johnson. It is really from billiard, Fr.

Mith dice, with cards, with balliards far unfit,
With shuttlecocks miseeming manly wit.
Spensor, Moth. Hub. Tale, 803.

+BALLINGER, or BALINGER. A sort of small sailing vessel.

For in the same haven two balyngers and two great carickes laden with marchandise wer drouned, and the broken maste of another caricke was blowen over the wall of Hampton the wall of Hampton.

Hall's Union, 1548, Hen. V, fol. 26.

That by such a daye every port town do furnish in commun, at the charges of the town, so many fisher boates or ballingers.

Balloon, or Balloon, s. A large inflated ball of strong leather, used in a game of the same appellation. The game was French.

While others have been at the balloon, I have been at Ben. Jon. For., ii, 2. While others have seen Ben. Jon. Fax, n, ».

All that is nothing, I can toss him thus.

G. I thus: 'tis easier sport than the balloon.

Four Prentices of Lond., O. Pl., vi, 497

C. Ram Jonson.

In the above passage of Ben Jonson. the word is erroneously printed balloo, in Whalley's edit. In the game of balloon, the ball was struck with the arm, like the follis of the ancients. Minshew in Bracer, speaks of a wooden bracer worn on the arm by baloone players. Bailey says, " Also a great ball with which noblemen and princes use to play." In the play of Eastward Hoe, Sir Petronel Flash says, "We had a match at baloon too with my Lord Whackum, for four crowns:" and adds, "O sweet ladv. 'tis a strong play with the arm."
O. Pl., iv, 211. This game is thus described in a book entitled Country

A strong and moveing sport in the open fields, with a great ball of double leather filled with wind, and driven to and fro with the strength of a man's arm, armed with a bracer of wood. Strutt, who quotes this description. adds that it was the same sport which was revived not many years ago at Pimlico under the title of the Olympic game. Vol. iii, p. 148. That the balloon was filled with wind, appears in this quotation:

The more that ballones are blowen up with winde, the higher they rebounds.

Defence of the Regiment of Women, Harl. MS., 6257, fol. 30.

Packe, foole, to French baloone, and there at play Consume the progresse of thy sullend ay.

R. Anton. Phil. Satyres, p. 30.

It is described by Coryat as played at Venice. Crud., ii, 15, repr. †Mounsieur de Gallia writes all night till noone, Commending highly tennis or *saloone. iloone. Tavlor's Works, 1630.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

†Yet lose we not the hold we have,
But faster graspe the trembling alare;
Play at baloon with's heart, and winde
The strings like scaines, steale into his minde
Ten thousand hells, and feigned joyes
Par worse than they, whilst like whipt boys,
After this scourge hee's hush with toys.

Lovelace's Lucasta, 1649.

BALLOW, adj. Explained in the margin, gant; that is, bony, thin.

Whereas the ballow mag outstrips the wind in chase.

Drayton, Polyolb., iii, p. 704.

I do not find the word elsewhere. +BALL-STELL. A geometrical instrument.

Radius, Cicer. Tusc. 5. Virgil.

qua linearum ductus judicant.

A geometricall staffe
Nomenclator, 1585.

BAN, s. A curse; from ban, a public sentence of condemnation. Germ.

Take thou that too with multiplying beans,
Tim. A., iv, 1. Take thou that too wish manager, — Tim. A., iv, 1.
Timon will to the woods. Time. A., iv, 1.
setime with lunatic beas, sometime with prayers.
Lear, ii, 8. The word banning is used in the same sense.]

18he used no other wourdes but cursynges and ban-singes, criying forthe plague and pestilence.

Riche hie furewell to Militario Profess., 1881.

To BAN, v. To curse.

BAN, v. To curse.

All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits

Beaming his boisterous and unruly beast.

Beaming his boisterous and unruly beast.

And here upon my knoes, striking the earth,
I sess their souls to everlasting pains.

Marlow's Jow of Mella, O. Pl., viii, 189.

†Stud. Bead be those cosening arts that wrought our wos.

Making us wandring pligrimes too and fro.

Phi. And pligrimes must we bee without reliefe,
And where so are we run there meetes us griefe.

The Returns from Permanut, 1606.

BANBURY. This town in the beginning of the 17th century, was much infested with Puritans. Zeal-of-theland Busy, the puritanical Rabbi in Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, is called a Banbury man, and described as one who had been a baker, but left that trade to set up for a prophet.

Quer. I knew divers of those Benjurians when I was in Oxford.

Act. i, sc. 3.

was in Oxford. Act. i, sc. 8.

She is more devout

Then a weaver of Bendury, that hopes
To intice heaven, by singing, to make him lord
Of twenty looms. Wile, by Siv Des., O. Pl., viii, 410.

From the loud pure wives of Bendury, &c.

Bless the sov'reign and his hearing.

B. Jon. Masque of Gipnics, vol. vi, p. 118.

Banbury has been celebrated for its cakes ever since the time of queen Elizabeth.]

BAND was formerly synonymous with bond.

See Jonson's Staple of News throughout, where Band, an allegorical personage, is one of the attendants on Pecunia.

Sister, prove such a wife

As my thoughts make thee, and my utmost band
Shall pass on thy approof.

Ant. F. Cl., iii, 2.

That is, "such as I will pledge my utmost bond that thou wilt prove. The expression is rather obscure. See also Com. of E., iv, 2, and Rich. II, i. 1.

Since faith could get no credit at his hand.
I sent him word to come and sue my bead.

Churchyard's Challenge, p. 152.
I knew his word as currant as his band,

And straight I gave to him three crowns in hand.

Harringt, Epig., iv. 16. We should doubtless read band for bond in the following stanza:

The bloudie Jow now ready is

With whetted blade in hand,
To spoyle the blood of innocent
By forfeit of his bond.

Reliques of Anc. Poetry, vol. i, p. 215.

Band is, by Fairfax, licentiously used for bound:

r DOUILU:
Erotimus prepard his cleansing gear,
And with a belt his gown about him band.
Tusso, xi, 71.

See also Spanish Tragedy, O. Pl., iii. 202.

BAND, as an article of ornament for the neck, was the common wear of gentlemen. The clergy and lawyers, who now exclusively retain them, formerly wore ruffs. The assumption of the band was, doubtless, originally a piece of coxcombry, as was the wearing of large wigs, though both are now thought to be connected with professional dignity. See Todd. Buffs of the bar,

By the vacations power, translated are To cut-work bands.

Habington, p, 110, and Cons. Lit., vii, 407. That is, the lawyers were turned fine gentlemen. See Cur-work.

See CUT-WOER.

Then his send
May be disordered, and transformed from lace

Bessen f. F. Coron., act i.

that what, It is rather remarkable, that what, from the old usage, was within these forty years called a band, at the universities, is now called a pair of bands, probably from a supposed resemblance to a pair of breeches.

+BAND.STRINGS. Tassells or strings to the band of the neck.

to the band of the neck.

Unlesse I should be dumbe!—sob,—sob, Asotus.

Sob till thy buttons break, and crack thy bendstrings.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646.

You have put me upon such an odd intricat peece of busines, that I think ther was never the like of it; I am more putch, and entangled with it, than oft times I use to be with my bendstrings when I go hastily to bed, and want such a fair femall hand as you have to that the mutth of the semilar Letters, 1650.

No foceign buttons, &c., shall be imported, upon pain of such penalties and forfeitures as are mentioned in 14 Car. 2. Entituled, An Act prohibiting the importation of foreign bone-lace, cut-work, embroidery, fringe, band-strings, buttons, and needlework.

Kilburn's Choice Presidents, 1708.

A NDELEER.

BANDELEER. A broad belt of leather, worn by a musqueteer, over the left shoulder, to which were hung, besides other implements, ten or twelve small cylindrical boxes, each containing a charge of powder. Bandouillere, Fr.

My cask I must change for a cap and feather, my bandilero to a scarf to hang my sword in.

Heyso. Royal K., &c., Anc. Dr., vi, 808.

Sylvester calls the zodiac a bandeleer.

What shall I say of that bright bandoles?
Which twice six signs so richly garnish here?

Dis Barl., p. iv, day 3, week 3. According to Minshew and Kersey, the charge boxes were also called bandeleers.

aball order them too—1'll teach 'em to roar and bully up and down the town. Get their coats and bende-leers on. Woman Captain, 1680.

BANDOG. Properly band-dog, or bounddog. A dog always kept tied up on account of his fierceness, and with a view to increase that quality in him, which it certainly would do. Coles and others render it canis catenarius. The early vocabularies explain it by the Latin molossus. In French chien bandé, which in the following passage is played upon: chien meaning also the cock of a gun or pistol.

Le chien bands qui les guettoit,
En s'abbattant les attrapoit.

Townley's Hudibr., canto i.

These were the dogs kept for baiting bears, when that amusement was in vogue: and therefore were probably the same as those by which bulls also were baited, the true old English bulldogs, than which a dog of greater courage cannot exist. Mr. Gifford seems to think they were German mastiffs. From the word being usually written and spoken bandog, it has been sometimes supposed, but erroneously, to be formed from to ban, or curse. From the terrific howling made by such large dogs. they are occasionally introduced in descriptions of night, to heighten the horror of the picture:

horror of the picture:

The time when scritch-owls cry, and *sendogs howl,
When spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves.

A man had better, twenty times, be a *sendog and barke,
Than here, among such a sort, be parish-priest or clarke,
Gammer Guri, O. Pl., ii, 50.

With warrens of starv'd fiess that bite like *sendogs.

B.  FR. Wit w. M., iii, 1.

In the following passages I find it spelt according to its etymology: Hush now yee band-dogs, barke no more at me But let me alide away in secrecie.

Walking late in the evening he was assaulted by band-dogs, and by them worried and torne in pieces.

Heywood's Hierarchie, p. S3.

On the queen (Eliz.) going to Kenil-

A great sort of bandogs were there tyed in the utter court, and thirteen bears in the inner. Progr. of Elic. BANDORE. A musical instrument. very similar in form to a guitar, but whether strung with wires like that, or with catgut, like the lute, we are not told. It is figured in Hawkins's Hist. of Music, vol. iii, p. 345. John says, on the authority of Stowe (Ann., p. 369), that it was invented by John Rose, or rather Ross, a famous viol-maker; but, as it so much resembles the Italian pandura, both in form and name, it is most probable that Ross worked from an Italian model; though he might not choose to disclose the fact to his English customers. See Hawk., iv, p. 111. Minshew describes it as "a musical instrument with three strings;" but, if the figure be right, he is very wrong; for the strings there are numerous. Howell, in his vocabulary. translates it Pandura, Ital.

One Garchi Sanchez, a Spanish poet, became distraught of his wits with overmuch levitie, and at the time of his distraction was playing upon a bandors.

Wits, fits, and fancies, K. 4, 1614.

BANDY, v. Originally a term at tennis; from bander, Fr., of the same signification.

Had she affections and warm youthful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would beady her to my sweet love, And his to me. Rom., That while he had been bendying at tennis, He might have sworn himself to hell, and struck His soul into the hazard. Rom , ii, 5.

The other senses seem to be metaphorical: and if so, Skinner's interpretation totis viribus se opponere, and his derivation from se bander contre, fall to the ground.

[Perhaps the modern game is alluded to in the following:]

thur was the prettiest fellows,
At basely once and cricket.

D'Urfey's Rickmond Hoiress, 1693.

†BANDY-BALL. A Yorkshire game, played with a crooked bat and a ball. It is the same as the Scottish game of golf. It is uncertain whether the following passage relates to this sport. See Stowe's Survey, ed. 1720, i, 251.

Justinian ordeyned certaine kinds of playes, as throwing a round ball into the aire, which play is at this day much used among my countrymen of Devon-shire. Northrook's Treaties, 1877.

+BANES. The bans of marriage. It appears to be the subject of a pun in the following passage. The original meaning of the word bane was a proclamation.

Clambuon.

Andr. Would that were the worst.

Posc. The very best of our banes, that have prov'd

Wedlock—Come, I'le sing thee a catch I have Made on this subject.

The Women's Conquest, 1671.

+BANGLED, part. Embarrassed; cumbered.

Derreu.
I doe not like th' assurance of thy lands,—
Thy titles are so bengld with thy debts,—
Which thou wouldst have my daughters portion pay.

Sampson's Fow Breaker, 1686.

+BANKET. An old form of banquet.

Accumbo, to lie downe, to lie by, to lie or sit downe at feastes or benkettes.

Abligario, to consume goodes in bankettyng and faryng delicately. Bliote's Dictionarie, 1559. BANKBOUT, or BANQUEROUT, s. A bankrupt.

Time is a very bankrout and owes more than he's worth to season.

Nor shall I e'er believe or think thee dead,
Though mist, until our bankrout stage be sped, &c.

Leon. Digges. Prolog. to Sh., p. 233.

Of whom, I think, it may be truly said,
That hee'll prove banquerout in ev'ry trade.

Hon. Ghost, p. 4.

Also bankruptcy:

An unhappy master is he, that is made cunning by many shipwracks; a miserable merchant, that is neither rich nor wise, but after some bankrouts.

Ascham, Scholem., p. 59.

To BANKROUT. To become bankrupt. He that wins empire with the loss of faithe Out-buies it, and will bankrout.

Byron's Conspiracy, by Thorpe. BANKS'S HORSE, or CURTALL. A learned horse, whose name was Morocco (see Drayt., ii, 186), more celebrated in his time than even the learned pig in ours. He has the honour to be mentioned by sir Walter Raleigh in his History of the World:

If Basks had lived in older times, he would have shamed all the inchanters in the world; for whosever was most famous among them, could never master or instruct any beast as he did his horse.

Part i, p. 178. She governs them with signs, and by the eye, as Basks breeds his horse.

Parson's Wedd. by Killegrew, O. Pl., xi, 507. †Employment is the drudge of prodigalitee, made saweie through the mud of their owne minds, where they so often stick fast, that Baskes his horse, with all his strength and cunning, cannot draw them out.

Armin, Nest of Nianies, 1608.

One of his qualifications was dancing. for which reason he is supposed to have been alluded to in Love's Labour Lost, act i, sc. 2, under the title of The dancing horse. Many quotations concerning this horse are collected in the note on that passage, in Johnson and Steevens's Shakespeare; where one of his exploits is said to have been going up to the top of St. Paul's church. This feat is alluded to in some verses by Gayton, from Bancks his horse to Rosinante:

Let us compare our feats; thou top of nowles
Of hils, hast oft been seen, I top of Pauls (pron. Powles),
To Smithfield horses I stood there the wonder.
Pastic. Notes, p. 289.

If we may trust the chronology of the Owle's Almanack, this happened in 1601:

Since the dencing horse stood on the top of Powles, whilst a number of asses stood braying below, 17 yeares, P. 6, publ. in 1618.

It was given out that he was a spirit. See CURTAL.

The first mention of Banks's horse occurs about 1590. In 1595, a supposed dialogue between Banks and his horse appeared under the title of Maroccus Extaticus. The horse was exhibited not only in England, but abroad, where it became suspected that the horse was a demon, and his exhibitor a sorcerer, and it is said that eventually both were burnt at Rome by the Inquisition. 1

BANKSIDE. A part of the borough of Southwark where were once four public theatres, the Globe, the Swan. the Rose, and the Hope. Of the first, which was famous for being the original stage on which most of the plays of Shakespeare appeared, there is an account in the Prolegomena to the edition of Shakespeare, by Mr.

The Bank-side was also a noted place for ladies of more complaisance than virtue:

Come, I will send for a whole coach or two Of Bank-side ladies, and we will be jovial. Randolph's Muser L. Glass, O. Pl., ix, 908. I fear our best zeal for the drama will not authorise us to deny that these circumstances are too often combined. Covent-garden and Drury-lane have succeeded to the Bank-side in every species of fame.

In the time of Shirlev the theatres on the Bank-side seem to have been considered as of an inferior order, chiefly fit for noise and show. Thus the prologue to his Doubtful Heir begins:

All that the prologue comes for is to say, Our author did not calculate this play For this meridian; the Banck-sides, he knows, Are far more skilful at the obbes and flows Are far more skilful at the obbes and flows
Of water than of wit, he did not mean
For th' elevation of your poles this scene.
No shows, no dance, and what you most delight in,
Grave understanders, (those in the pit) here's no target fighting
Upon the stage, all work for cutters barr'd,
No bawdery, nor no ballets; this goes hard.

BANQUEROUTE. See BANKBOUT.

BANQUET, what we now call a dessert, was in earlier times often termed a banquet; and Mr. Gifford informs us that the banquet was usually placed in a separate room, to which the guests removed when they had dined.

We'll dine in the great room, but let the musick And banquet be prepared here. Massing. Unnat. Comb. The dishes were ruised one upon another As woodmongers do billets, for the first, The second, and third course; and most of the shops Of the best confectioners in London ransack'd To furnish out a banquet. Mass. City Madam, ii, 1.

"The common place of banqueting, or eating the dessert," the same critic says, "was the garden-house or arbour, with which almost every dwelling was furnished." To this Shallow alludes, when he says,

Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an ariso
we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own grafing, 8

Heat 7 raffing, &c. 2 Hes. IV.

Every meals foure long tables furnished with all varieties: our first and second course being threescore dishes at one board, and after that alwayses a beagest.

J. Taylor's Pennilesse Pilgr., p. 137, a.

Tor beagusting stuff (as suckets, jellyes, sirrups.)

I will bring in myself.

Middl. Witch, act i, p. 9.

Evelyn used it in this sense so late as in 1685:

The besquet [desert] was twelve vast chargers pil'd up so high, that those who sat one against another could hardly see each other. Of these sweetmeats— the ambassadors tasted not. Messoirs, vol. ii, p. 630. It must be observed, however, that the distinction marked in these passages is not always made by authors of that time. Banquet is often used by Shakespeare, and there seems always to signify a feast, as it does now. Massinger himself uses it so in the latter part of the City Madam. It was not uncommon to have the performance of a play, or some other amusement, between the dinner and the banquet. See the play of Sir Thomas More.]

†Oh, easy and pleasant way to glory! From our bed to our glass; from our glass to our board; from our dinner to our pipe; from our pipe to a visit; from a visit to a supper; from a supper to a play; from a play to a banquet; from a benquet to our bed.

By. Hall's Works.

+BANQUIER. An old name for goldsmiths in London.

The basquiers commonly call'd goldsmiths, are in Lombard-street, about the Boyal-Exchange, and on each side of Temple-Bar. They may very property scall'd basquiers, rather than goldsmiths, for they keep all the private cash of the nation; and in every shop you will see daily receipts and payments made as in a bank.

Journey through England, 1724.

+BARATHRUM. An abyss, or bottomless gulf. The old poets frequently apply the word to a gormandiser.

BARB, v. To shave, or to dress the hair and beard.

and beard.

Shave the head and tie the beard; and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so barb'd before his death; you know the course is common. Meas. for M., iv, S. R. And who barbes ye, Grimball?

G. A dapper knave, one Rosko.

Promos f. Cassandra, v, 5.

Hence also metaphorically, to mow: The stooping scythe-man, that doth sare the field Thou mak'st wink-sure.

Marst. Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 63.

See also UNBARBED.

You lusty swaines, that to your graxing flockes
Pipe amorous roundelayes; you toyling hinds,
That berbe the fields, and to your merry teames
Whistle your passions. Carseo's Calsus Brit.,
4Thrise the sunne
His yearly course hath runne, thrise the greene fields
Hath the nak'd sythman berb'd; and three times hath
The winter rob'd the trees of their greene lockes.

Amista. 1626.

BARB, s. A kind of hood or muffler. which covered the lower part of the face and shoulders.

But let be this, and tell me how you fare, Do 'way your barts, and shew your face bare. Chaucer, Tro. & Cr., ii, 159. Hence the following reading, proposed in a difficult passage of Shakespeare:

For those milk-paps
That through the widow's ber's bore at men's eyes.

Tim. A., iv, S.

Perhaps window'd barb might be the true reading. The old text is window barne; the modern reading windowbare. Barbula is explained in Du Cange, "tegminis species, quâ caput tegebant milites seu equites in præliis:" also, "caputium magnum sine caudâ," a great monk's hood.

BARBASON. The supposed name of a fiend.

Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devile' additions, the names of flends: but cackold! wittel! cackold! the devil himself hath not Mer. W., ii, 2. such a name. I am not Barbason; you cannot conjure m Hes. V., ii. 1.

The commentators give us Barbatos, from Scott and R. Holme; but that Shakespeare is hardly the same. must have found Barbason somewhere: which will probably be discovered.

Used by corruption for BARBE. s. barde; the general name for the several pieces of defensive armour with which the horses of knights were covered in war.

Their horses were naked, without any barbs, for albeit many brought barbs, few regarded to put them on.

Quoted by Dr. Johnson.

Also the ornaments and housings of horses in peace or at tournaments:

His lottle steed with golden sell.

And goodly gorgeous barbes. Spens. F. Q., II, ii, 11.

At last they see a warlike horse and stout,
With guilded barb, that cost full many a pound.

Harringt. Aricoto, i, 73.

The rayns wer twoo chaynes of golde very artificially made, the barbs and coverture of the horse, of cloth of golde fringed round about with like gold.

Palace of Pleasure, b. 3.

A barb means also a horse from Barbary.

BARBED. Similarly corrupted, for barded; horses thus armed or ornamented. The corruption was in more common use than the proper word.

And now instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly, &c.

Eich. III., i, 1.

And, where he goes, beneath his feet he treads
The armed Surseems, and barbed steeds.

Fairf. Tusso, ix, 48.

A confusion seems to have arisen between the barb or Barbary horse, and the barded horse: thus in the low Latin there is cavallus de barba, and equus barbanus, for the former; as well as cavallus de barda, and equus bardatus, for the latter. Consult Du Cange on the above words. It has very justly been objected to Chatterton as an inaccuracy, that he applied this epithet to a hall. Ælla, 219. It was strictly appropriated to horse armour, and never used in general reference to arms. See also below, BARDE and BARDED.

BARBER'S CHAIR. Proverbial for accommodating all bottoms.

It is like a berber's chair, that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, aure w, ii, 2. See Rav.

Rabelais shows that it might be applied to anything in very common use. Progn., ch. 5. Ozell, vol. v, p. 258. It appears that barbers' shops were anciently places of great resort, and the practices observed there were consequently very often the subject of allusion. The cittern or lute, which hung there for the diversion of the customers, is the foundation of a proverb. See CITTERN.

A peculiar mode of snapping the fingers is also mentioned as a necessary qualification in a barber:

SATY QUALITICATION IN B DATOCT:
Let not the barber be forgotten: and look that he be an excellent fellow, and one that can snap his fingers with dexterity. Greene's Tu Quoque, O. Pl., vi. 98. 4The crooked stick of liquriah that gave this sweet relish, being to set his teeth to it, wipes his rheumy beard, snapping his fingers, berber-like after a dry shaving, jogs on thus. Armin, Nest of Nisnies, 1898. Morose, who detested all noises, particularly valued a barber who was silent, and did not snap his fingers; but it is represented as a rare instance. The fellow trims him silently, and hath not the swack with his sheers or his fingers: and that contingency in a darber he thinks so eminent a virtue, as it has made him chief of his counsel. B. Jon. Silent Wom., 1, 2. Of the barber's art, as it was practised in his day, a curious sample is given by Lyly. The barber says, by Lyly. The Darber says,

Thou knowest I have taught thee the knacking of the hands, the tickling on a man's haires, like the tuning of a citterne. D. True. M. Besides, I instructed thee in the phrases of our eloquent occupation, as, How, sir, will you be trimmed? will you have your beard like a spade or a bodkin? a pent-hous on your upper lip, or an ally on your chin? a low curle on your head like a bull, or dangling locke like a spaniell? your mustachoes sharpe at the ends, like shomaker's aules, or hanging downe to your mouth like goates fakes?
your love-lockes wreathed with a silken twist, or ahaggie to fall on your shoulders?

Myden, when the state of th Plutarch remarks, that barbers are naturally a loquacious race, and gives an anecdote of king Archelaus, who, like Morose, stipulated with his barber to shave him in silence. De Garrul., p. 508.

BARBER-MONGER. A term of contempt thrown out among many others by Kent, in K. Lear, against the earl of Gloster's steward. Its meaning is rather obscure, but is well conjectured, by Dr. Farmer, to be intended to convey a reproach against the steward, as making a property of barbers and other tradesmen, by taking fees for recommending them to the family. Draw, you whoreson cultionly barber-monger, draw.

Lear, ii, 2.

+BARBER'S-BASIN. See BASIN.

Delius. Still it follows me!
The thing in black, behind; soon as the sun
But shines, it haunts me? Gentle spirit leave me!
Cannot you lay him, Aphobus: what an ugly looks it has!
With eyes as big as sawcers, nostrils wider
Then barbers basons?

Randolph's Muses Looking Glasse, 1643. BARBICAN. More properly, but less commonly, barbacan, being from barbacana, Span, or low Latin. It was generally a small round tower, for the station of an advanced guard, placed just before the outward gate of the castle vard, or ballium. King on Anc. Castles: Archaeol., v. 308.

The barbican, a word derived from the Arabic, was properly the temporary fortification of woodwork erected in advance of the entrance gate to a castle or town when a siege was apprehended: but eventually it became a permanent advanced fort.]

Within the barbican a porter sate
Day and night duly keeping watch and ward.

Spens. F. Q., II, ix, 25. Taken for a watch tower, or post of importance in general.

That far all-seeing eye
Could soon capy
What kind of waking man He had so highly set, and in what barbican.

B. Jon. Epithalamion, vol. vii, p. 5. Minshew, on this word, relates a pun of a king of Spain, to an old captain with a gray beard, who had lost a town of which he was governor, "Perdisti mi villa y guardáste la barba cana?" Did you lose my town and keep the barba cana? i. e., barbican, or uray-beard.

Barbicana is found in low Latin as well as barbacana. See Du Cange. Stowe calls it a barbican, or burhkenning, from which he seems to derive it: i. e., from burh and kenn, being a place to kenn or view from, "commonly called barbican or burkkenning, for that same being placed on a high ground, and also builded of some good height, was in old time used as a watch tower for the citie, from whence a man might behold and view the whole citie." Stowe's Survey of Lond., p. 52.

BARBING. A cant term for clipping of gold; quasi, shaving it.

Of gold; Quanta, Salestand the Ay, and perhaps thy neck
Within a noose, for laundring gold, and barbing it.

B. Jon. Alch., i, l.

BARDASH. An unnatural paramour. Bardachio, Ital.

Cato, among other things, hit him in the teeth with a certain berderk, whom he had enticed from Rome into France with promise of rich rewards. This womanly youth being at a feast, &c. Camer. Hist. Med., p. 171. So in the note on Ingle, in Ozell's Rabelais:

The Spaniards spell it Yngle, which with them means nothing else than the groin, not a bardack.

Vol. i, p. 187.

BARDE. The proper word signifying horse-armour, for which barbe is generally, but corruptly, used. See Minshew, and Barrett's Alvearie. word is French, Italian, and low Latin. The bardes consisted of the following pieces: the chamfron, chamfrein, or shaffron, the crinieres or main facre, the poitrenal, poitral or breastplate, and the croupiere or buttock piece. Grose on Anc. Armour, p. 29. See BARBR.

BARDED. Armed or ornamented, but applied only to a horse.

For at all alarmes he was the first man armed, and that at all points, and his horse ever barded.

Comines Hist. by Denet., 1996.

There were a five hundred men of arms in cyther host, with barded horses, all covered with iron. Holiasked. Sometimes barded was contracted to bar'd.

Shall our ber'd horses climb you mountain tops, And bid them battle where they pitch their tents? Heywood's Four Prentices, O. Pl., vi, 514. See also 542. So also in Drayton:

There floats the bar'd steed with his rider drown'd.

Miracles of Moses.

† And the men of armes here and there entermingled on sard horses, whom the Persians use to call clibanarii, harnessed all over with good corselets, and sard about with guards of steel l steele. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

BAR'D CATER TRA, or more properly, barr'd quatre, trois. The name for a sort of false dice, so constructed, that the quatre and trois shall very seldom come up.

I have suffered your tongue, like a bar'd cater tra, to run all this while and have not stopt it. Dekker's Honest Whore, part ii, O. Pl., iii, 437. Where fullam high and low men bore great away With the quicke helpe of a bard cater trey. Taylor's True. of 12 pence, p. 73.

ANGRET, FULLAM, and NOVUM. ewise when other throws were ded by loading, the dice were d accordingly. We read of Those demi-ters, those her size-accs.

Notedy and Sometody, 4to, G. 8.

were chiefly used at the game of m, where five or nine were wincests.

casts.

10 also call'd hard cater treas, because commonly agar end will of his own away drawe downewards, rme up to the cie sics, sincks, dence, or ace. The nal use of them is at Novum, for so long a paire teafer treas be walking on the bourd, so long 1 not cast five nor nine unless it be by a great h.

Art of Juggling, 1613, C. 4.

for bare-headed. It was a piece ite, that the servants of the no-, particularly the gentlemanshould attend bare headed: hich bare was often used. with them for the great caroch, six horses, se two coachmen, with my ambler sere, sy three women; we will live i' faith amples of the town, and govern it.

B. Jons. Devil is an Ass, iv, 2.

hmen also drove bare, when great was assumed:

was assumed:

pleated lock, or a bareheaded coachman;

ista like a sign where great ladies are to sold within. B. J. F. Woman Hater, iii, 2.

a blew't off (his hat) at Highgate, and my lady ot endure me light to take it up, is me drive bere-headed in the rain.

B. Jon. Now Inn. iv, 1. he procession to the trial in espeare's King Henry VIII, one e persons enumerated is a gentleusher bare-headed.

and be a viscountess, to carry all store her (as we say) her gentleman-usher, and cast off pages, bare. B. Jon. Magn. Lady, ii, 3.
And your coachman bald,
Because he shall be bars enough.

Ibid., Devil an Ass, ii, 3. reship's mother passed by (her huisher [usher] urtin barshaaded before her). Ibid., Tale Tub, v. 7. again : ith her Pol-Martin sers before her.

Ibid., 10. LY. Simply.

Another, briefly, hereby did relate
The naked honour of a bare bald pate.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

The outside skin of an onion. done, stop the hole fast that is in the top of the with inte, and set the onion in the imbers to and when you do thinke that it is roasted h, pall off the barker of it, and then bray it in a till it be thicke like an emplaister, and apply to the botch.

Berrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

RK at the moon. To labour in ms my booke and comparisons end together; as much I know, that I have but all this while at the moome, throwne feathers against the built upon the sands, wash'd a blackmore, and id in vaine.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. NG-DOGS bite not. This proverb, which is still in use, is extent in the play of George-a-Greene. That I will try. Barking dogs bite not the screet.

O. Pl., iii, 48.

In Ray it is thus set down:

The greatest barkers bite not screet; or, dogs that bark at a distance bite not at hand. Prov., p. 76.

BARLIBREAK, or the last couple in hell. The name of a rural sport, very often alluded to by our poets, and apparently still used in some parts of Scotland. Dr. Jamieson, in Barla-breikis, barley bracks, says, "This innocent sport seems to be almost entirely forgotten in the South of Scotland. It is also falling into desuetude in the North." He describes it thus: "A game generally played by young people in a corn Hence called barla-bracks. about the stacks. One stack is fixed on as the dule or goal: and one person is appointed to catch the rest of the company, who run out from the dule. He does not leave it till they are all out of his sight. Then he sets out to catch them. Any one who is taken, cannot run out again with his former associates, being accounted a prisoner; but is obliged to assist his captor in pursuing the rest. When all are taken, the game is finished; and he who is first taken is bound to act as catcher in the next game."

The English game was very different from this. It is thus described by Mr. Gifford, chiefly from the passage of the Arcadia: "It was played by six people (three of each sex) who were coupled by lot. A piece of ground was then chosen, and divided into three compartments, of which the middle one was called hell. It was the object of the couple condemned to this division to catch the others, who advanced from the two extremities; in which case a change of situation took place, and hell was filled by the couple who were excluded by pre-occupation from the other places: in this 'catching,' however, there was some difficulty, as, by the regulations of the game, the middle couple were not to separate before they had succeeded, while the others might break hands whenever they found themselves hard pressed. When all had been taken in turn, the last couple were said to be in hell, and the game ended." Note on Massinger, vol. i, p. 104.

One of the poems most descriptive of it is that by Sir John Suckling, quoted in the same note, and beginning,

Love, reason, hate did once bespeak Three mates to play at barley-break, &c. And that in the Arcadia, cited below. Would I had time

To wonder at this last couple in hell. B. & Pl. Capt., v, 4. Sometimes alluded to in a contrary sense:

O devils!

O, the last couple that came out of hell!

B. Brome's Queen and C., iv, 4.

And give her a new garment on the grass,

After a course at barley-break or base. B. Jon. Sad Shop., i, 4.

Both its names are alluded to in the

following passage:
Shall's to barlibreak?

I was in hell last; 'tis little less to be in a petticoat sometimes.

Shirley's Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 296.

It is thus exactly described by Sir Philip Sidney:

Philip Sidney:
Then couples three be straight allotted there,
They of both ends the middle two do flie,
The two that in mid place, kell called, were
Must strive with waiting foot and watching eye
To catch of them, and them to kell to beare
That they, as well as they, kell may supply.
There you may see that, as the middle two
Do coupled towards either couple make,
They, false and fearful, do their hands undo.

Arcadia, B. 1, Ecl. last.
The couples being prized male

The couples being paired, a male and female together, it seems that they sometimes solaced themselves in their confinement by kisses, as appears from the following epigram:

Barloy break: or Last in Hell.
We two are last in Hell: what may we feare
To be tormented or kept pris ners here?
Alas, it kissing be of plagues the worst,
We'll wish in hell we had been last and first. Herrick's Poems, p. 84.

That the middle place was called hell, is also said in a poem entitled Barleybreake, publ. 1607.

Euphema now with Shetton is in hell For so the middle roome is always call'd)
He would for ever, if he might, there dwell.

British Bibliogr., i, p. 67.

This term of hell was indiscreet, and must have produced many profane allusions; besides familiarising what ought always to preserve its due effect of awe upon the mind. See the poem quoted by Dr. Drake in his Shakespeare and his Times, vol. i.

We learn from the communication of a kind friend, that it was played in Yorkshire within his memory, and among the stacks of corn, but with some variations from the Scottish game. They had also another form of it, more resembling that in the Arcadia, which was practised in open ground. It is probable that it still subsists in all the northern counties. Our very puerile game of tag seems to be derived from it; for there was a tig or tag in the Yorkshire game, whose touch made a prisoner.

Barlibak is used as the name of an evil spirit, by Massinger, vol. i, 80.

†Playings at barley-break, foot-ball, dancing, setting cocks together by th' ears, to fight one another; or what is more ridiculous, matching them with corcombe, who like tall fellows pot them to death with sticks, as fishermen do whales, when they dare not come might be the company of the Poor Robin, 1738.

+BARNABY. An old dance to a quick movement.

Bounce, cries the port-hole, out they fly,
And make the world dance Barnaby.

Cotton's Virgil Travestie.

A multivalve shell-fish BARNACLE. (lepas anatifera, Linn.) growing on a flexible stem, and adhering to loose timber, bottoms of ships, &c.; anciently supposed to turn into a Solan goose; possibly because the name was the same. Whether the fish or the bird be meant in the following passage is not clear:

Rge 18 Mov shall lose our time And all be turned to bernacles or apes. Temp., iv, sc. last.

The metamorphosis is mentioned by Butler in Hudibr., III, ii, l. 655. By Bp. Hall, iv, 2, and others; and in this Latin enigma,

Sum volucris, nam plumosum mihi corpus, et alse Quarum remigio, quum libet, alta peto. Haud tamen e volucris focundo semine nascor, Haud ovi tereti in cortice concipior;
Sed mare me gignit, biforis sub tegmine conche,
Aut in ventre trabis, quam tulit unda diu.
Illud idem tenero mihi pabula prebet alumno;
Pabula jam grandi suggerit illud idem.

Pincieri Buigm., i, l The notes show that many respectable men gave credit to the fable. Like other fictions, it had its variations: sometimes the barnacles were supposed to grow on trees, and thence p into the sea and become geese: Drayton's account of Furness: see scatter'd trees, which naturally partake is the soil, (in many a slimy lake so deeply soak'd) send from their stocky boughs seepy gum, from which those tree-geese grow selse by us, which like a jelly first bler seem, then by the fluxure nurs'd and greater thrive, until you well may see 'd to perfect fowls; when dropping from the ary pend which under them doth lie, and taking wing, away in flocks do fly.

Polyolo., song 37, p. 1190. this fable, Linnseus has formed rivial name anatifera, goose- or bearing. See Donovan's British , plate vii, where is a good deion of the real animal, and an ent specimen of the fabulous nt from Gerard's Herbal.

. A child. A word still retained northern dialects, supposed to om born, that which is born,

, ty en 's, a barne / a very pretty barne. Win. Tale, iii, 3. -BISHOP, i. e., boy-bishop. See OLAS, ST. NET. This word was in use long the time of James I in the sigtion of a lesser baron.

earls, berons, and beronettes might use livery and the king, or his collar, &c.. Stat. temp. Hen. IV.

ACADO. To barricade.

you shut up and berracede your dores and as, as hard as your hearts and heads were sized your distressed brethren, yot death will, and leave you to judgement.

Taylor's Workes, 1680.

For barded, which see. med cap-a-pec upon their barred horse, r flaredy flow. Drayt. Pol., xii, p. 904. 3D-GOWN. The gowns of the and other officers of the law, coad stripes or bars of gold lace iRS. To fight at barriers; to vithin lists. This kind of consometimes called simply bar-

Noble youth,
y and fate.—Now to the barriers.
that at barriers, first single pairs, then three that the barriers with Corombons, O. Pl., vi, 341. heriers moulted not more feathers, than he hairs, by the confession of his doctor. Tid., p. 945.

OLOMEW BABY. A gawdily I doll, such as appears to have mmonly sold at Bartholomew Her petticost of sattin,
Her gown of crimson tabby,
Lac'd up before, and spagi'd ore,
Just like a Bartholomes baby.

Wit and Drollery, 1682, p. 843.

BARTHOLOMEW-PIG. Roasted pigs were formerly among the chief attractions of Bartholomew Fair, London: they were sold piping hot, in booths and on stalls, and ostentatiously displayed, to excite the appe-tite of passengers. Hence a Bartholomew pig became a common subject of allusion: the Puritan railed against it, For the very calling it a Bartholomese pig, and to eat it so, is a spice of idolatry, B. Jons. Bart. Fair, i, 6. Falstaff, in coaxing ridicule of his enormous figure, is playfully called by his favorite. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomes boar-pig.
2 Hen. IF. ii. 4.

Dr. Johnson thought that paste-pigs were there meant: but the true Bartholomew pigs were substantial, real, hot, roasted pigs; as may be seen throughout the above play of old Ben, where Ursula, the pig-woman, is no inconsiderable personage. Gayton also speaks of the pig-dressers.

Like Bartholomes Fair pig-dressers, who look like the dams, as well as the cooks of what they roasted.

First. N., p. 57.

The young wife in Jonson's play pretends a violent longing for pig, that she may be taken to the fair; and it seems that her case was far from uncommon. Davenant speaks of the Bartlemeso pig,

That gaping lies on every stall,
Till female with great belly call.
The pigs may still be there, but I fear the fair is now a place of too much mobbing and riot for ladies in that condition. There might also be pastepigs, but, if so, they were very inferior objects, and meant only for children. Mrs. Ursula also tells us the price of her pigs; namely, five shillings, five shillings and sixpence, or even six shillings! This was surely as dear in James I's time, as a guinea lately. The highest price, of course, was to be asked of a longing woman.

BASE, or BASS, v. To sing or play the base part in music.

And the thunder
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounce
The name of Prosper, it did bees my trespen

Bass is the usual orthography among musicians, and is supported by the derivation, which is basse, Fr.; but the pronunciation is in that case very irregular, and the use of the comparative, baser, as "a baser sound," is still more decisive for base. The latter reason is Dr. Johnson's.

BASE, or PRISON-BASE, or PRISON-BARS. A rustic game, which consisted chiefly in running.

Lads more like to run
The country bass, than to commit such alaughter.

Cym., v, 3.

The lines following give some kind of picture of the sport:

So ran they all as they had been at bace,
They being chased that did others chace.

Spens. F. Q., V, viii, 5.

To bid a base, means to run fast, challenging another to pursue.

To bid the wind a base he now prepares.

Shakesp. Venue and Adonis, p. 418. Though in the following passage the allusion is rather obscure, Indeed I bid the base for Protheus, Two Gent., i, 9.

in this it is clear:

We will find comfort, money, men, and friends,
Ere long to bid the English king a base.
How say, young prince, what think you of the match?
Pr. I think king Edward will outrun us all.

Marlow's Ed. II, O. Pl., ii, 378.

N.B. It is there misprinted abase, in one word: the context demonstrates what it ought to be.

+Chapman uses the word to base, or, as there spelt, bace, in the sense of to rush about, to run quickly (Odyss., x):

All so sprightly given
That no room can contain them: but about Bace by the dams, and let their spirits out.

BASE-COURT. The outer, or lower

My lord, in the base-court he doth attend To speak with you; may't please you to come down Rick, II, iii, 8.

Into the base-court then she did me lead.

Tower of Doctrine, Percy, Anc. Post., i, p. 106.

BASELARD. See BASLARD.

BASEN. Extended as with astonishment.

And stare on him with big looks besen wide, Wond'ring what mister wight he was, and whence. Spens. Moth. Hub. Tule, 1. 670. Perhaps the same as Bawson; which BASENET, BASSINET, BACINET. very light helmet, so called from its resemblance to a bason, consequently without a visor, properly, though sometimes that part was added .-Knights when fatigued often wore them for ease, instead of their helmets. They were commonly worn by our infantry in the reigns of Edward II. III, and Richard II. See Grose on Anc. Armour. V. Bacinetum apud Du Cange.

BASES, s. pl. A kind of embroidered mantle which hung down from the middle to about the knees, or lower, worn by knights on horseback.

DRCK.
About his middle hee had, in steede of bases, a long cloak of silke, which unhandsomely, as it needes must, became the wearer.

Sidney's Arcadia, b. i, p. 63.
All heroick persons are pictured in bases and buskins.

Gogton, Fest. Notes, p. 218.

Bases were also worn on other occasions, and are thus exactly described in a stage direction to a play by Jasper Maine. "Here six Mores dance, after the ancient Æthiopian manner. Erect arrowes stuck round their heads in their curled hair instead of quivers. Their bowes in their hands. Their upper parts naked. Their nether, from the wast to their knees, covered with bases of blew satin, edged with a deep silver fringe," &c. Amorous Warre, iii, 2.

The colour of her bases was almost Like to the falling whitish leaves and drie,—
With cipresse trunks embroder'd and embost.

With cipresse truins emercure a unit emocs.

Harr. Ar., xxxii, 47.

The wicked steele seas'd deep in his right side,

And with his streaming blood his beses dide.

Pair/. Tusco, vii, 41.

Butler has used it in Hudibras to express the butcher's apron:

With gantlet blue, and bases white. Dr. Johnson has twice misinterpreted this word. See Base, No. 3 and 5, in his Dictionary.

In a passage of Ariosto, they are worn by ladies instead of petticoats. Harr., xxxvii, 25.

In the original, sopravesta is the word corresponding to bases.

We find a pair of bases mentioned in the play of Pericles, ii, I, where it is wrongly interpreted "armour for the legs.

On the other hand, a petticoat serves for bases, in Massinger.

And in Spenser, a woman's petticoats and apron serve instead of cuirass and bases :

In womans weedes that is to manhood shame, And put before his lap an apron white Instead of curiets, and besses for the fight. F. Q., V, v, 20.

Bpigram of John Wesser on bases. In Brillum.

The Brillum.

Two contraries more glorious farre appears
When each to other they be placed neare:
Untill I knew this axiom I did muse
Way gentlemen so much do bases use;
Yet Brillus' bases adds to Brill no grace,
But make him baser who by birth is base.
Gentilitie then Brillus first should get,
Refere base Brillus do in bases jet. Book i, Epigr. 6.

Before base Brillus do in bases jet. Book i, l Your petticont serves for bases to this warrior.

Thus it will be seen that Mr. Gifford's conjecture on the subject (Massinger, vol. iii, p. 141) was nearly right. The word also occurs in Parad. Lost ...

ix. 36, where it is falsely interpreted housings, in the best editions, on the authority of Richardson,

†To BASH. To be ashamed,
Neither bask I to say, that the people of Rome invaded this inle, rather upon a greedy mind to encroch, than any just title thereto.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.
And this bask not those to doe, in whose auncestors time a senatour was taxed and fined by the censour, that durst, whiles it was not decent and seemly, kisse his owne wife before the daughter of them both. Ibid.

BASILIAED.

BASILIARD. See BASLARD.
BASILISCO. In Shakespeare's King John is this passage:

What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Phil. Knight, knight, good mother, Basilisco like.

John, i, 1.

This is an allusion to an old play, entitled Soliman and Perseda, in which foolish knight, called Basilisco, speaking of his own name, adds, Knight, good fellow, knight, knight. And is answered immediately, Rare, good fellow, knave, knave. Orig. of Drass., ii, p. 910.

BASILISK, s. A species of ordnance.

Which with our bombards, shot, and basilisk,

We rent in sunder at our entry.

Jeso f Malla, O. Pl., viii, 388.

Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin. 1 Hes. IV, ii, 3.

Also an imaginary creature. COCKATRICE.

BASKET, s. It was customary formerly to send the relics of the sheriff's table in baskets, to the poor confined in the prisons.

In the prisons.

Where you shall how! all day at the gate, for a meal at night from the baskst.

Skirtey's Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 259.

Did our charity redeem thee out of prison,—
Where the sheriff's baskst, and his broken meat
Were your festival exceedings. Massing City Mad., i, 1.

Out, you dog leach,
The voxait of all prisons.—

Skill spew'd out
For lying too heavy o' the baskst. B. Jons. Alch., i, 1

That is for eating too, much taking

That is, for eating too much; taking too large a share out of the basket.

tBASKET. The basket into which the broken meat from the table was thrown, and given away generally in charity.

Nor, at his boord together being sat,
With words, nor touch, scarce looks saulterate.
Nor when he, swoln and pamper'd with high fare,
Sits down and snorts, cag'd in his bestet chair,
Must we usurp his own bed any more,
Nor kiss and play in his house as before.

Downe's Poems, p. 65. +BASKET-CHAIR. An easy chair.

BASIN, or BASON, custom. bawds and other infamous persons were carted, it was usual for a mob to precede them, beating metal basins. pots, and other sounding vessels, to increase the tumult, and call more spectators together.

And send her home Divested to her flannel in a cart

Divested to her fiannel in a cart.

Lat. And let her footman beat the bason afore her.

With scornful sound of basen, pot, and pan,
They thought to drive him thence, like bees in swarmes.

Harr Ariost., xvii, 89.

Then like a strumpet drove me from their cells,
With tinkling pans, and with the noise of bells.

Browne's Brit. Past., i, 4.

See also Promos and Cassandra, act iv. 2, part ii.

It seems that the hire of their basins for this purpose was profitable to barbers, for it is uttered as an execration against Cutbeard:

Let there be no bawd carted that year, to employ a bason of his.

B. Jon. Sil. Wom., iii. 5. This ceremony is introduced in the second part of Dekker's Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 481-83, and is there accounted for:

Duke. Why before her does the bason ring? These basons were made of brass. Bp. Hall uses brass-bason as a phrase for a barber:

O Esculape! how rife is physic made, When each brasse-bason can professe the trade. Sat. iv, 1. Hence the similarity between a barber's bason and a helmet. See also Overbury's Characters, K. i, b. See also BRIDE-BOWL.

BASLARD, s. A short sword or dagger. Basalardus or baselardus, low Latin. See Du Cange; who says, "Ensis brevis species, genus pugionis vel sicæ;" and adds, "Gallis olim bazelaire, nunc coutelas."

Where not in robes, but with our baslardes bright,
We came to parle of the publique weale.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 284.

Stowe calls it basiliarde, and speaks of it as the weapon with which Sir W. Walworth first wounded Wat Tyler. The mayor having receyved his stroke drew his basi-liands, and grievously wounded Wat in the neck. London, 1599, p. 173.

A base or base string: that string that maketh the +BASSE. A kiss. A common word in the sixteenth century.

Wyt. Ye, let hym bee,
I doe not passe!
Cum now, a basse!
Hos. Rec. Nay, syr, as for bassys, From hence none passys, But as in gage

Of maryage Play of Wit and Science.

BASTA. Properly an Italian word, signifying it is enough, or let it suffice, but not uncommon in the works of our ancient dramatists, which proves it to have been then current.

Basta, content thee, for I have it full. Tam. Shr., i, 1. +BASTANED. To buy a bastaned gown of a person, i.e., to beat him.

I told him that he did lys in so saying, and that I wold try on the fleysh of him, or by a bastaned gown of him, if he wer not prisoner in the Towr.

Dr. Dec's Diary, 1593.

BASTARD, e. A kind of sweet Spanish wine, of which there were two sorts, white and brown. According to Minshew's explanation it was a raisin wine: but he was mistaken.

Spaine bringeth forth wines of a white colour, but much hotter and stronger, as asche, rumney, and basters.

Copien's Heren of Health, p. 339.

We shall have all the world drink brown and white basters.

It was common in taverns.

Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon 1 Hon. IV. il. 4.

And again: Why then your brown bastard is your only drink See also O. Pl., iii, 292, and v, 328. It is said in one passage to be heady:

I was drunk with bestard,
Whose nature is to form things, like itself,
Heady and monstrous. B. J. Pl. Tamer Tam'd, ii, l. Burton mentions it among hot and strong liquors and compounds.

All black wines, overhot, compound, strong, thick drinks, as muscadine, malmaie, allegant, runny, brown-bastard, methogien, and the like.

Anat. of Mel., p. 70. In the churchwarden's accounts for the parish of St. Lawrence, Reading, in 1509, is this article:

Payed for a quart of besterd for the singers of the Passhyon on Falme Sundaye, 4d. Coates's Reading, p. 217.

BASTILE, s. A castle.

Mirror for Magist., 167, and Hudibras, ii, 1150. See Todd's Johnson. †BASTON. A staff. Fr.

Baculus. A basion: a staffe: wherewith to carry a tub, &c., a cole-staffe.

Nomenclator.

The statute of 13 Richard II. wyll that no servant of husbandrye, no labourer, nor servant of artificer, nor of vitayller, shall beare baselards, dagger, nor spere upon peyme of forfeiture.

Cited in Cons. Liter., vol. x, p. 158, lat ed.

†BASSE. The base, in music See Base. cricket-bat.

I'll try whether your costard or my bat be the harder.

And each of you a good bat on his neck,
Able to lay a good man on the ground.

George-a-Greene, O. Pl., iii, 43.

+BATALIA. The order of battle. Fr. Wee, being upon another hill opposite to him, drew downe, and into lettelia, to give on, though upon the mouth of his cannon: which would have made hot worke.

Arthur Wilson's Autolography.

+To BATE. To diminish: to subtract from.

In time the mighty mountains tops be bated;
But, with their fall, the neighbour vales are fatted;
And what, when Trent or Avon overflows,
They reave one field, they on the next bestowe. Sylvester's Du Bartes.

BATE, s. Contention.

Shall ever civil bate
Gnaw and devour our taste?
Countess of Pembrohe's Antonius.
She set my brother first with me at bate.

Mirror for Magist., p. 74.
Breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories. 2 Hea. IV. ii. 4

See BREEDBATE.

BATE-BREEDING, adj. Apt to cause atrife.

This sour informer, this bate-breeding upy.

Sh. Venus and Adon. Malone's Supp., i, 435. BATE, v. A term in falconry; to flutter the wings as preparing for flight, particularly at the eight of prey; probably from battre, Fr.

That with the wina

Bated, like eagles having newly bath'd.

1 Hen. IF, iv, L. It is a natural action with birds, after bathing, to shake the moisture from their wings; also when desirous of their food, or prey, as in the

following passage:

No sooner are we able to prey for ourselves, but they brail and hood us so with sour awe of parents, that we dare not offer to bate at our desires.

Albumaser, O. Pl., vii, 179.

Hood my unmann'd blood beting in my cheek.

Rom. and Jul., iii, 2.

Afterwards go leisurely against the wind, then unbood her, and before she bate, or find any check in her eye, whistle her off from your fist, fairly and softly.

Gentl. Recr., 8vo, p. 36.

The true meaning of the word is beautifully exemplified in the following passage of Bacon:

wherein (vi. in matters of business) I would to God that I were hooded, that I saw less; or that I could perform more: for now I am like a hawk that setes, when I see occasion of service; but cannot sty be-cause I am ty'd to another's fist. Bate me an ace, quoth Boulton. Proverb. The history of this Boulton, and the origin of the proverb, are equally unknown: he might, perhaps, have asserted at some time that he had all the tricks at cards, when there was an ace against him; or some such thing. According to an account in Ray's Prov., p. 177, queen Blizabeth, by aptly citing this proverb, detected that it was wanting in a collection presented to her. It was asserted, that all the proverbs in the English language were there; "Bate me an ace, quoth Bolton," answered the queen, implying that the assertion was probably too strong; and, in fact, that very proverb was wanting.

The following epigram points out the author of the collection mentioned by

Ray:

Secunda cogitationes mellores.

A pamphlet was of Proverbs pen'd by Polton,
Wherein he thought all sorts included were;
Untill one told him, Bete m's as ace, gueth Boulton.
Indeed (mid he) that proverbe is not there.

The Mastine, by H. P.

We find it in some of the old dramas: After what sort, I pray thee tell me.

Grimme. Nay there, bate me an ace, quoth Boulton.

Damon and Pithias, O. Pl., i, 294.

Where it means, excuse me there: as also in the following:

Bute me on ace, quoth Boulton: Tunh, your mind I know:

Ah sir, you would belike let my cock sparrows goe.

Promos and Cassendre, iv, 7.
†Har. I use all to George Philpots at Dowgate; hees the best backswordeman in England.

Eit. Bats me an acs of that, such Bolton.

Ear. Be not bate ye a pinne on't, sir; for, by this cuspell, tis true.

Play of Sir Thomas More, p. 18.

TFUL, adj. Fruitful; fattening.

cudgell, tis true.
BATFUL, adj.

From to batten.

From to batten.

Where streams of milk thre' batful vallies flow.

Drayt. Mosss, p. 1877. Frequently in his Polyolbion. Todà.

tand have I seen Vernolla's batfull fields, Strew'd with ten thousand helms, ten thousand skields, where funous Bedford did our fortune trie. Drayton. †To BATLE. To fatten. The meaning of the word in the first of these examples is not quite clear.

REAM PICE 18 NOT QUITE CICAT.

Reverthelesse Faith went to mother Redcaps, and by the way met with Joyce, who very kindly balled her penny with her at a fat pig. Twylor's Workes, 1630.

Tet he was of so free a nature, and careless of money, when he had it (though solicitous to get it), that he bested in his own bounty. Wilson's History of James I.

TLET, s. The instrument with BATLET, s. which washers beat their coarse clothes. Johnson. A regular diminutive from bat; meaning, therefore, a small bat.

And I remember kissing of her batlet, and the cows dugs that her pretty chop'd hands had milk'd.

As you like it. ii. 4 I find the same implement called a beetle elsewhere:

Huswife, go hire her, if you yearely gave
A lamkin more than use, you that might save
In washing-bestles, for her hands would pease
To serve that purpose, the 'you daily wash.

Browne's Brit. Past., ii, 1, p. 15.

Have I liv'd thus long to be knock'd o' th' head
With half a washing-bestle!

B. B. Thomas Tamile ii i. B. & Fl. Tamer Tum'd. ii. 5.

See BEETLE.

+BATOON, or BATTOON. A staff: a mace. Fr.

Mace. Fr.

I do but think how I
Shall bastinado o'r the ordinaries.

Arm'd with my sword, battoone, and foot He walk
To give each rank its due. No one shall scape.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

They assaulted him with their battoons, whiles our madman resting himself did look upon them, and said, you will not threaten to whip one any more?

Comical History of Prescion, 1655.

Dick. Thanks, good sir, but will the captain caterer
Take the battoon so kindly; I ne're thought
Patience a souldier's virtue untill now.

Marriage Broaker, 1663.

word can hardly be called obsolete, having been used by Pope, Prior, and Gay (see Johns. Dict.): but it is so far disused as to be obscure to some readers. It occurs in Hamlet, iii, 4, and in Marlow's Jew of Malta. O. Pl., viii, 354.

†Thus they batten here; but the divell will gnaw their bones for it.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

+BATTERFANGED. Beaten.

A poore labouring man was married and matched to a creature that so much used to scold waking, that she had much adoe to refraine it sleeping, so that the poore man was so batterfessy'd and belabour'd with tongue mettle, that he was weary of his life.

Toylor's Workes, 1630.

BATTIL, or BATTEL, v. n. To grow fat. Also actively, to fatten others. For aleep, they said, would make her battil better.

Sp. F. Q., VI, viii, 38.
Ashes are a marvellous improvement to satis barren land.

Eag's Pros., 238. Also 280. Cotgrave has, "to battle, or get flesh, prendre chair."

BATTLE. The main or middle body of an army, between the van and rear.

The vaward Zerbin hath in government,
The duke of Lancaster the battell guides,
The duke of Clarence with the rereward went.

Harrington's Ariost., xvi, 36.

Sould. Be yours the vaward.
Soph I will give the charge.
Sould. Turnus, have you the rereward; I the battle.
Four Prentices of Lond., O. Pl., vi. 589. See Strutt on the Manners and Customs, &c., vol. iii, p. 2, where is an +BATTLE. A small boat. See Howel's Londinopolis, 1657, p. 85.

To BATTLE is still current in Oxford for taking provisions from the butterv. &c.

Eat my commons with a good stomach, and battled with discretion. Puritan, Malone's Suppl., ii, p. 543.

Cotgrave has this sense also:

To battle (as scholars do in Oxford), être debiteur au collège pour ses vivres.

He adds.

Mot usé sculement des jeunes écoliers de l'université d'Oxford.

BAUBLE, or BABLE, s. Baubella, in low Latin, signifies toys, jewels; but that word being found only in Hoveden, it is as probable that the English may be the original as the contrary: perhaps both are from babiole. Fr. Baciballum is found in Petronius Arbiter in a similar sense; and Βουβάλια in Julius Pollux, v. 16, for bracelets. See Junius, in Bable. In its general signification this word is yet current; but the office of fool being obsolete, its meaning, as a badge of it, requires explanation.

A fool's bauble was a short stick, with a head ornamented with ass's ears, fantastically carved upon it. Its form may be seen at fig. 12 in the plate subjoined to the first part of Hen. IV, in Mr. Steevens's edition: and in Mr. Douce's Illustrations of Shakespeare, pl. 3, vol. ii.

An idiot holds his beable for a god, And keeps the oath which by that god he swears. It had been fitter for you to have found a fool's cost and a bamble.

Lingma, O. Pl., v, 139.
If every fool should wear a babbs, fewel would be dear. Ray's Prov., p. 108.

It was also the subject of another proverb, which, as well as several allusions made to it, was of a licentious nature. O. Pl., viii, 15. All's W., iv, 5. Romeo, ii, 4. 979, a.-It appears from the French proverb subjoined by Ray, that the equivalent word in that language was marotte, which is now used for a person's particular foible, or hobby-horse. C'est-la sà marotte: It is his hobby-

Apparently as an adjective:

Doth knock

Bable babes against the rock. Southwell, p. 51, 1st ed. +BAUCKT. Sized. (?)

from time culture banck ladde, and of a good stature when he went from hence. The second is English, 1614. BAUDKIN. The true form of a word, afterwards corrupted into bodkin, in the phrase cloth of bodkin. Baudkin was formed from the low Latin Baldicus, Baldekinus, which itself was derived, says Du Cange, from Baldacco (Baldach), an oriental name for Babylon Bagdad being brought from thence. It was the richest kind of stuff, the web being gold, and the woof silk, with embroidery. "Pannus omnium ditissimus, cuius utpote stamen ex filo auri, subtemen ex serico texitur, plumario opere intertextus." Du Cange. Spelman similarly defines it. See his Glossary. Minshew ridiculously derives it from bawd; because, he says, it was invented by such persons as an attractive ornament. For the examples, see Bodkin, cloth of. Baldaquin in French, and Baldachino, Italian, are explained by Cotgrave and Florio. Bullokar has the word rightly, baudkin; and defines it, "Stuffe or cloth made partly of silk, and partly of gold and silver." He calls it also tinsell, which now has a different meaning.

G. Gascoigne has the word in its original form:

original form:

For cloth of gold, or tinsel figurie,

For baudin, broydrie, cutworks, or conceits,

He set the shippes of merchantmen on worke.

State-Glazer, v, 786.

BAUSIN, or BAWZON. A badger. His mittons were of baseson's akin.

Drayt. Ecl., iv, p. 1403

BAVIAN, the same as babian. baboon, or monkey; an occasional, but not a regular character in the old Morris dance. From baviaan, Dutch: in German pavian, a great monkey. He appears in act iii, sc. 5, of the Two Noble Kinsmen, where his office is to bark, to tumble, to play antics, and exhibit a long tail, with what decency he could. So babouin in French, and our baboon. See BA-BIAN.

The account given of it by Messrs.

Steevens and Tollet, in the dissertation subjoined to first part of Hen. IV. is very erroneous. They would make him a sort of fool, and a regular appendage to the Morris, which if he had been, he would have been more frequently mentioned.

Where's the besies ?
Wy friend, carry your tail without offence
Or scandal to the ladies, and be sure
You tumble with audicity and manhood:
And when you bark, do it with judgment. See Thunberg's Trav., i, 226.

BAVIN. Brush wood, or small fagots, made of such light and combustible matter, used for lighting fires. Still in use in some counties.

The skipping king, he ambled up and down With shallow jesters and rash seria wits 800n kindled and soon burnt. 1 Hen. IF, fii, 9. Bevins will have their flashes, and youth their fancies, the one as soon quenched as the other is burnt.

Mother Bombie, 1894.

The seein, though it burne bright, is but a blaze.

Buganes, G. 2, b. With coals and with berins, and a good warm chair.
Old Song.

Besins are still advertised for, under that name, by some of our public BAWCOCK. A burlesque word of endearment, supposed to be derived from beau cog: but rather perhaps from boy and cock.

boy and cock.

Why that's my besoccek. What has smutch'd thy

W. Tale, i, 2. Good besecool, bate thy rage! use lenity, sweet chuck?

Hen. V, iii, 2.

See also Twelfth N., iii, 4.—In both the latter passages it is immediately joined with chuck or chick, which seems to prove that it meant boycock or young cock.

BAWSON. A large unwieldy person. Possibly from bausin, a badger, that being a clumsy beast.

cace, you fat bessson, peace. Lingua, O. Pl., v, 232. Coles has "a great bawsin, ventrosus." Chatterton has thrice used bawsyn, which seems to be the same word, in the sense of large: this was probably on the authority of Skinner, who explains it, "Magnus, grandis;" also, "Ventriosus, quia scilicet sesquipedalis abdominis sarcinam magna cum difficultate trahit et circumfert. Conjecturing it to be from bauch, a pannch, and zichen, to drag. Etym. Voc. omn. Antiq. Chatterton probably had it from Skinner. See Battle of Hast., 2d, 690; Englysh Met., 131: Ælla, 57.

BAY. A principal division in a building; probably, as Dr. Johnson conjectured, a great square in the framework of the roof, whence barn of three bays is a barn twice crossed by beams. In large buildings, having the Gothic framework to support the roof, like Westminster Hall, the bays are the spaces between the supporters. Houses were estimated by the number

If this law hold in Vienna ten years, I'll rent the fairest house in it, after three-pence a bay.

Mess. for M., ii, 1.

Of one baye's breadth, God wot, a silly coate
Whose thatched spars are furr'd with sluttish soote.

Hall, Sat. v. 1.

As a term among builders, it also signified every space left in the wall, whether for door, window, or chimney. See Chambers's Dict. and Kersey. Coles, in his Latin Dictionary, makes a bay a space of a definite size, "a bay of building, mensura vigintiquatuor pedum," i. e., the measure of +BAY. A dam or wear in a river.

AI. A Uniti Of wear in a niver. Agger, Virg. χώμα, χοῦς, πρόσχωμα, Aggesta in alium terra adversus fluminis impetum. Levée ou chaussée d'une riviere. A dam, bay, banke, or hill of earth heaped up on hie to keepe the water out or in. Nomenclator.

To BAY. To bathe.

twenty-four feet.

BAI. 10 DRILLE.

He feedes upon the cooling shade, and bayes
His sweatie forehead in the breathing wind.

Spens. F. Q., I, vii, 3.

Y WINDOW. Made from BAY, BAY WINDOW. supra; not, according to Minshew, from its resemblance to a bay on a coast, or round, for it was usually square. Bow window has now effectually supplanted it, in practice, and implies a semicircular sweep, like a bow.

In which time, retiring myself into a bsy-window.

B. Jon. Cynthia's Rev., iv, 3.

Why it hath bsy-windows as transparent as barricadoes, and the clear stones towards the south are as lustrous as chony. Mr. Tyrrwhitt, in his Glossary to Chaucer, thus explains it: "A large window, probably so called because it occupied a whole bay, i.e., the space between two cross beams." We have the authority of an old dictionary for asserting, that a bay-window meant also a balcony. In the English part of Coles' Dictionary we find "a bay-window, Menianum;" and in the Latin. Menianum is translated a balcony, or gallery. Meniana were called from Menius a Roman, who invented them. See Festus, and Vossius Etym. Ling. Lat. Minshew confirms the interpretation of Coles. translating it L. Menianum, I. Balcone, G. Une saillie, ou projet de maison, T. Ein arkel, ob formam; which comes very near to our present expression of bow-window. So again, Balcone, qui balsa fuora. See him both in bay and window. Thus the word served at times in both senses. Cotgrave adheres to the more common signification, translating bay-window, "Grande fenestre de bois, de charpenterie."

BAYARD. Properly a bay horse; also a horse in general. Rinaldo's horse in Ariosto is called Baiardo. bold as blind bayard" is a very ancient proverb, being found in Chaucer, Troil., i, 218. See also Ray, p. 80. It is alluded to in the following passage: "Do you hear, sir Bartholomew Bayard, that leap before you look?" Match at Midnight, O. Pl., vii, 435. Perhaps the whole proverb might be "as bold as blind bayard that leaps before he looks," in allusion to another proverb, "Look before you leap." I find the expression in a sermon of Edward the Sixth's time:

I marvel not so much at blind bayards, which never take God's book in hand.

take God's book in hand.

Bernard Gilpin's Serm., republ. 1759, and subjoined to his Life.

Who is more bold than is the separa blind?

Cevil, in Mirr. for Magistr.

A modern editor fancies that bold Bayard alludes to the famous chevalier sans peur, but he is totally mistaken. Induction to Marston's What you will, p. 202. See Bagus in Du Cange. See also Junius in Bayard.

tBut the boldest beyord of all was Wentworth, who said that the just reward of the Spaniard's imposition was the loss of the Low Countries. Letter dated 1614.

YNARD'S CASTLE. The residence

BAYNARD'S CASTLE. of Richard III at the time of his usurpation. It was originally a fortified castle of great strength, built in the time of William I by a Norman of that name. After several changes, which are all detailed by Stowe (London, 1599, p. 47), it was rebuilt by Humphrey duke of Gloucester, and occupied by Richard as his representative. It still gives the name to a ward of the city, called Castle Baynard Ward; and extends, by the Thames, from Paul's Wharf to Black Thames, Irom a war.

Friars. Richard says,
Bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Beynard's Castle.

Rick. III., iii, 5. BEAD-ROLL, or rather BEDE-ROLL. A catalogue of prayers; and thence any inventory; or perhaps, originally, a list of those to be prayed for in church. Kersey.

We in the bead-roll here of our religious bring Wise Ethelwald.

Drayt. Poly., fi, p. 865. Bede, in Saxon, means a prayer; and beads may be found used for prayers.

thus,

Bring the holy water hither,
Let us wash and pray together:
When our beads are thus united.
Then the foe will fly affrighted. Herrick, p. 386.

A list of names; origi-BEAD-ROLL. A list of names: originally of persons to be prayed for; afterwards, any list.

Or tedious seed-rolles of descended blood,
From father Japhet since Deucalion's flood,
From father Japhet since Deucalion's flood,
4"Tis a dead world, no stirring, he hath crosses,
Rehearseth up a seed-roule of his losses.
Recelends, Rasses of Harts, 1613.
†Else let my name be from thy bed-role rac'st,
And be no more a goddesse, if I lose her.

Heywood, Trois Britanies, 1609.

See Todd.

BEADSMAN. From bede. a prayer. and from counting the beads, the way used by the Romish church in numbering their prayers; a prayerman. Commonly one who prays for another.

other.

For I will be thy beadeness, Valentine.

For And on a love-book pray for my success.

Two Gent., i, 1. The office of a beadsman is thus expressed by Herrick:

BECI DY FICTION.
Yet in my depth of grief I'de be
One that should drop his beads for thes.
Works 381.

From this use, beads obtained their

+To BEAKE one's self. To bank: to enjoy one's self.

enjoy one s sen.

At home we take our case,
And beaks ourselves in rest.

Endall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

Yea (poor creatures) they have been constrained to sit warm, and to lie soft, to be served in state, to drink wine in bowles, to be honoured, be worshipped, to be crouched and kneeled unto, and so forth; whereare if that pope of Rome, when he lay beaking himself in the midst of his luxuries, had cause to cry out Heu quantum patimum pro Christo! Symmons, Findication of Charles I, 1648.

†BEAKER. A large drinking-glass, or vessel. The German becher.

Vessel. 'The German becher.

Fill me a bester, looke it be good beere.

Rovlands's Kasse of Harts.

In others whole woods of cypress, ram'sthorn, daffadillies, and juniper for sellets. What they wanted in wine they made up in brandy and coffee, of which the emperor of Gehenna would make nothing to drink off at a draught a gold bester as big as the tun of Heidelbergh.

The Pages Prince, 1690.

Were soon prevail'd on to resign
Their silver besters, and their coin;
That such a just and holy strife
Might want to wealth to give it life.

Might want no wealth to give it life.

Hudibras Radinipus, 1707.

BEAM, or BEME. Bohemia. Bemerlandt, Coles' Lat. Dict. Cooper also "Boëmia. A realme called Beme, inclosed within the boundes of Germanie."

And talk what's done in Austria, and in Beam.

Drayt. Ep. to Sandys, p. 1235.

†Thinking by lingring out the warres in length,
To weaken and decay the Beamisk strength.

Taylor's Workes, 1680.

+BEAMY, adi. In form of beams, or

And eaven front contract, like to a slow
And quiet stream his obscur'd thoughts did flow,
With greater depths then could be fathou'd by
The sensey lines of a judicious eye.

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

BEAN. The old method of choosing king and queen on Twelfth day, was by having a bean and a pea mixed up in the composition of the cake. They who found these in their portion of cake, were constituted king and queen for the evening.

Now, now the mirth comes, With the cake full of plums, Where beans's the king of the sport here; Besides we must know,

The pes also
Must revell as queene in the court here.

Must revell as queene in the court here.

Herrick's Hesper., p. 376.

Cut the cake: who hath the beans shall be

Kinge; and where the pease is she shall be queene.

Nickels's Progresses, vol. ii.

You may imagine it to be twelfth-day at night, and the bean found in the corner of your cake; but it is not worth a vetch, Pil assure you.

Midd. New Wond., Asc. Dr., v. 373.

†When the king of Spain told Olivares of it first, he slighted it, saying. That ne was but rey de havas, a bean-cake king.

Hosels's Pamiliar Letters, 1650.

See also Brand's Pop. Antiq., 4to ed.,

vol. i, 20, &c. This was borrowed from the French, who had their roi de la fêve, on the same occasion. BEANS. "Three blue beans in a blue bladder."

What is the origin of this whimsical combination of words, it may not now be easy to discover; but, at least, it is of long standing.

F. Hark, does't rattle?

S. Yes, like three blue beans in a blue bladder, rattle, bladder, rattle.

Old Fortunalus, Anc. Dr., iii, p. 128. Prior has it in his Alma:

They say—
That putting all his words together,
Tis three blue beans in one blue bladder. Cant. I, v. 25. Not to care a bean for anybody, to hold at little account.]

To sow beans in the wind, i.e., to labour in vain.]

tit is not for idlenis that men some beanes in the wind. The Mariage of Witt and Wisdoms, p. 45. Mo. I do not reche

One bean for all. This buss is a blive guerdon. Hence carlishnesse yferre. Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

+BEAN-SHATTER. A scarecrow? To fright away crows, and keep the corn, bean-shatter.

Shirler's Ball. iv. 1.

To BEAR A BRAIN. To exert attention, ingenuity, or memory.

My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do bear a brain.

But still take you heed, have a vigilant eye—

But still take you heed, have a vigilant eye—
Well, sir, let me alone, I'll bear a brain.
My silly husband, alas! knows nothing of it. 'its I that beare, 'tis I that must beare a braine for all.

Marston's Dutch Courtes
So beare a braine to dash deceit,
And worke with reason and remorae.

Breton's Verses on Chesse. Earle, p. 373.
The rich man drinkes wooderstely, because he must

The rich man drinkes moderately, because he must bears a brains to look to what he hath. Taylor W. Poet, Disc. to Salisb., p. 28, b. †Clown. I have my memorandums about me. As I can bear a pack, so I can bear a brain

Heywood's Golden Age, 1611 To BEAR COALS. See COALS.

To BEAR IN HAND. To keep in expectation; to amuse with false pretences.

Bore many gentlemen, myself being one, In hand, with hope of action. Meas. for M., i, 5. Whereat grieved,

Whereas grieved,
That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand.
All which I suffer playing with their hopes,
And am content to coin them into profit,
And look upon their kindness, and take more,
And look to their kindness, and take more, And look on that; still bearing them in hand. B. Jon. Fox, i,

The expression is very common in Shakespeare; and indeed in all the writings of the time. See Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 441.

To BEAR SIX AND SIX. An obscure phrase, occurring in the Spanish Curate of Beaumont and Fletcher.

He's the most arrant beast—
Mill. He may be more beast.

Jam. Let him beer six and six that all may blaze him. an. Cur., ii, 8.

That the object is to make him a horned beast is plain from the context, but by what allusion, is not so clear. He is to bear six and six, as his arms.

After one or two unsatisfactory conjectures, it was suggested to me that the expression most probably alluded to the horns of a ram, which, by the aid of a little fancy, may be considered as two figures of six, placed back to back. 66 That this is the true interpretation, there seems no reason to Theological allusions being then common, I had fancied there might be some reference to sixes, as the mark of the beast in the Apocalvose. But the new interpretation is much preferable.

+To BEAR A MIND. To intend. or be inclined.

These are right gentlemen, who beare a minds
To spend, and be as liberall as the winds. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To support. +To BEAR WITH. This vex'd Jack Horner to the heart:
He could not bear with her.
Pleasant History of Jack Horner., n. d.

BEARS COLLEGE. A jocular expression for the bear-garden, commonly called Paris garden:

From the diet and the knowledge
Of the students in bears-college.
B. Jos. Masque of Gips., vol. vi, p. 113.
The meat-boat of bear's-college, Paris-garden, Stunk not so ill.

Ibid., On the famous Voyage, vol. vi, p. 287. BEAR-WARD. The keeper of a bear. A term in common use while bearbaiting was practised, yet overlooked by Johnson. It occurs twice in one scene of Hen. VI, but not elsewhere in Shakespeare. He uses the synonymous term, bear-herd, three times. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death, And manacle the bear-ward in their chains.

Again, Again,
And from the burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it under foot, with all contempt,
Despight the bear seard that protects the bear.

2 Hen. VI., v, 1. For that, sir, the bear-ward hath put in security.

B. Jon. Masq. of Augurs.

BEARD, v. To oppose face to face, in a daring and hostile manner: to threaten even to his beard.

No man so potent breathes upon the ground But I will beard him. 1 Hen. IV, iv, 1. Would I bear

These braves, this rage, and suffer uncontrol'd These barons thus to beard me in my land, In mine own realm? Marlow's Ed. II, O. Pl., ii, 865.

The meanest weed the soil there bare Her breath did so refine,
That it with woodbine durst compare,

And beard the eglantine.

Drayt. Quest. of Cynthia, p. 624.

BEARDS. The growth of beards was regulated by statute at Lincoln's Inn, | BEARING-CLOTH.

in the time of Elizabeth. Primo Eliz. "It was ordered, that no fellow of that house should wear a beard above a fortnight's growth." Regist. Hosp. Linc., iv, f. 345. Transgression was punished with fine, loss of commons. and finally expulsion. But fashion prevailed; and in November the following year all previous orders touching beards were repealed. See Nichola's Prog. of Eliz., an. 1562, p. 26. When beards were worn, to cut one off was deemed an irreparable outrage. In one of the old plays, where the object is to overcome the patience of a man, when it has been said that cuckolding him will not do it, the next proposal, as still more provoking, is, "to make him drunk, and cut off his beard." Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 259. Dyeing beards was a practice once prevalent:

Now for a wager,
What colour'd beard comes next by the window?
Adr. A black man's I think. Taff. I think not so,
I think a red, for that is most in faskion.
Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 415. Now for a wager

Bottom, the weaver, offers to play Pyramus in beards of such colours as nature never produced.

I will discharge it either in your straw-colour'd beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, &c. The beard was often dyed by way of diaguise; thus,

And dyes his beard that did his age bewray.

Bp. Hall, Sat. iv, 4. Hence it has been proposed to read "die the beard," instead of "tie the beard," in Meas. for M., iv, 2, but the alteration seems not necessary. We have a horse's mane and tail dyed in Pembr. Arcadia, b. iii, p. 268. †BEARD-BRUSH. When the fashion of beards prevailed generally, it appears to have been customary to carry a brush, to arrange them when accidentally disordered.

His beard-brusk ever in his hand, for if he vouchesafe you a word in complement, he straight doth turne his head, and under colour of spitting, brushes his beard into order again. The Wissri, a Play, 1640.

†BEARING-ARROW. An arrow made to carry especially straight.

ITY especially surangule.

Then Bobin Hood did leap about,
He shot it under hand;
And Clifton with a bearing arrow
He clove the willow wand.

Robin Hood's Exploits before Queen Catherins.
ING-CLOTH. The mantle or

REC

67

cloth with which a child is usually covered when carried to the church to be baptized, or produced among the gossips by the nurse.

Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing cloth for a squire's child! look thee here, take up, take up, boy; open't.

Wint. Tale, iii, 8.

+BEARING-WIND. A favorable wind. Vent prospere, vent en poupe, quò à puppi sequatur. A bearing wind: a prosperous or forward wind.

Nomenclator, 1585. vincial.) The BEARNS. Children. (Provincial.) same as barnes. See BARNE. I think I shall never have the blessing of God, 'till I have issue of my body, for they say begrus are bless-All's W. i. S.

+BEASTISH. Beastly.

What didst thou not blush to bring before my face by deceifull meanes? I am ashamed to once name this beastish word whilst thy mother heere is present.

Terence in English, 1614.

+BEATE. The meaning uncertain.

Suche pleasaunt baites who can refraine?
Suche beats will sure brede the greate paine.

Paradyse of Daynty Devises, 1576.

To BEAT CHALK. One of the employments assigned to vagrants committed to Bridewell.

She'll chalk out your way to you now; she beats chalk.

Honest Whore, 2 part. O. Pl., iii, 464.
Or cart it to the place of youth's correction,
Where chopping chalke, would quite spoile my complexion.

An old Poem, entitled, I would and would not.

BEAT ON, v. To keep the thoughts busied, or as we say, hammering, upon any particular subject.

Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business.

Temp., v.

BEAUCHAMP. See BOLD BEAUCHAMP. BEAUPERES. Equals; fair companions; not from beaupère, Fr., but from beau and peer, or pheere, equal or companion.

BEAUTIFIED. Used for beautiful. To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia. Ham., ii. 2. Polonius calls it a vile phrase, and so it is, but it was at least a common one in those times, particularly in the addresses of letters. "To the most beautified lady, the lady Elizabeth Carey," is the address of a dedication by Nash. "To the most beautified lady, the lady Anne Glemham," R. L. inscribes his "Diella," consisting of poems and sonnets, 1596. The examples wherein a person is said to be beautified with particular endowments seem hardly apposite. See O. Pl., vi,

+BEBEIGHT, in the following example, is perhaps an error for behight. or bediaht.

Consideracions herin are so great
And so manie, and most of such weight,
That they are in counsell more meete to treate,
Then to make an ale-bench talke of, to bebeight.

Heywood's Spider and File, 1556.

+To BEBLIND. To make blind.

Terence was wise which taught by Pamphilus,
How courage quailes where love beblinds the sense,
Though proofe oft times makes lovers quarellous.

Gascoigne's Works, 1887. +To BEBLOT. To stain.

No might could move my mind to any wrong, Which might beblot the glory of my name. Sir T. North's Plutarch, p. 72.

BECCO. A cuckold. An Italian word adopted; originally a goat.

Duke, thou art a becco, a cornuto.

P. How? M. Thou art a curkold.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 20. Also, p. 83.

They'll all make

Sufficient beccos, and with their brow-antiers Sufficient beccos, and with them bear up the cap of maintenance.

Massing. Bondman, ii, 8.

Drayton makes becco the Italian for a cuckow, and, curiously enough, derives it from the English word a beck or nod:

Th' Italians call him becco (of a nod)
With all the reverence that belongs a god.

Works, 8vo, p. 1316 [The following epigram on this word is explained by the notes accompanying it.]

Tof Jealousie. English-French-Italian.

Why do th' Italians, in more grievous sort

Than French or English, take their wives stolu sport?
Beast's worse than bird; the Italians wife's loose amile
Him (a) bestiates: French-English (b) birds the while.
English and French are birds; th' Italian
Sole horn'd beast, of these three must lead the van.

(a) Becco cornuto, an he goat: (b) Un cocu in French, in English a cuckold; Cuculus.

Oven's Epigrams, by Harvey.

The bewritch.

+BECHARM. To bewitch. Against both those publique persons there are two capitall and deadly opposites (if it were possible) to beckarme their resolutions, and blot out their name from the line of life.

Ford: Line of Life, 1630.

CK. A bow, or salutation. For

BECK. other senses, see Todd.

What a coil's here! Serving of becks, and jutting out of bums. Tim., i, 2. So it is in the folios; but Warburton, supposing beck to be put for beak, would have altered the reading to "serring of becks," introducing one new word, for the sake of fixing an unusual sense to another. adopts his mistake in his Glossary. Beak, with the sound of beck, may, however, be found:

Such servitor also deserveth a check,
That runneth a figging with meat in his beck.

Tusser's Husb., p. 129.
†Neither was she unknowyng, that nothyng there was of suche high difficulte to bee dooen, whiche God was not hable with a mere becks to bryng to passe. All hir care and thought was onely for the jewel of her virginitee on whiche she had so muche sette hir love. Paraphrase of Brasmus, 1548.

68

Beck also meant a small stream, whence the names Wel-beck, Sandbeck. &c. This sense, though in Drayton, is not noticed by Johnson. It is also in Junius and Skinner. Still in use in the northern counties.

in use in the northern countries.

My Brent, a pretty beck, attending Mena's mouth,
With those, her aister rills, that bear upon the south.

Polyolo., song 9, p. 838.

The bourne, the brooks, the becks, the rills, the rivulets.

Ibid., song 1.

See Steevens on Lear, act iii, sc. 6. This is the source of an excellent and undoubted emendation in Beaumont and Fletcher:

He has mistook the beck I meant; is gone After his fancy. Two Noble K., iii, 2. The tailor's daughter, who is the speaker, had appointed Palamon to wait for her at a cedar "fast by a Seward.—The older copies had printed it beak, which was not intelligible, but this emendation makes it perfect.

+BECLOUD. To cover or obscure with clouds.

If thou becloud the sun-shine of thine eye,
I freeze to death; and if it shine, I fry.

Quarter's Emblems.

BEDAFF, v. To make a fool of, from daffe, a fool. Sax.

Then are you blind, dull-witted, and bedaft.

North's Plat., p. 105, fol.

But Bartholomew his wits had so bedaft.

Gascoigne's Works, 4to, bl. l.

BEDFELLOW. The simplicity of ancient manners made it common for men, even of the highest rank, to sleep together; and the term bedfellow implied great intimacy. Lord Scroop is said to have been bedfellow to Henry V.

Nay, but the man that was his bedfellose,
Whom he hath cloy'd and grac'd with kingly favours.

Hen. V, ii, 2. See also Sir John Oldc. Malone's

Supp., ii, p. 309. Holinshed mentions the same token of favour shown towards him.

OI TRYOUT BIOWHI TO WAITUS HIM.

He's of a noble strain, my kinsman, lady,

One bed contains us ever, one purse feeds us.

B. & FP. Chances, ii, 2.

Must we that have so long time been as one,

Seen cities, countries, kingdoms, and their wonders,

Been bedfellows, and in our various journey

Mixt all our observations, part, &c.

B. and Fl. Coxcomb, i, 1.

After the battle of Dreux, in 1562, the prince of Condé slept in the same bed with the duke of Guise; an anecdote frequently cited to show the magnanimity of the latter, who slept soundly, though so near his greatest enemy, then his prisoner. Letters from noblemen to each other often began with the appellation bedfellow. See also B. Jon. Dev. an Ass. ii, 8, and B. and Fl. Lovers' Progr., ii, 1.

BED'S FEET. Here, probably in a small bed placed across, was the official station of a lady's maid, or chambermaid, as she was called in unrefined times.

If she keepe a chambermaide, she lyes at her bedd's feete, and theis two say no Paternorters.

Saltonstall. Character 19, a Maide.

Contracted and corrupted BEDLAM. from Bethlehem. The priory of Bethlehem, or rather, St. Mary of from Bethlehem. Bethlehem, was not converted into an hospital for lunatics till 1546; consequently the word Bedlam could not till then have been used with any reference to madness; yet it was already so established in the time of Shakespeare, that he and others have inadvertently put it into the mouths of persons who lived long before its origin.

Origin.

To Bellam with him! Is the man grown mad?

K. H. Ay, Clifford; a bellam and ambitious humour Makes him oppose himself against his king.

2 Hen. VI, v, 1.

†But his wife (as he had attired her) seemed indeede not to be well in her wittes, but, seeying her housbandes maners, ahewed herself in her conditions to bee a right bellem.

Riche, Farescell to Militaris Prof., 1881.

†Thus like a bellam to and fro She frisk'd, and egg'd 'em on to goe, And at last witch'd 'em in that plight, That they were allmost mad to fight.

Homer a la Mode, 1655.

EDLAM MADNESS. Raging mad-

+BEDLAM MADNESS. Raging madness.

Furor, Cic. mania, Aurelian. rabies, Horat. Plaut. Rage, fureur. Outrage; furie; bedlem madnesse. Nomenclator, 1585.

+BED-PAN. A warming pan.

Batillus cubicularius, ignitabulum, Instrumentum eneum, in quod conjectis prunis candentibus excaleiunt lecti. Un eschauffoir de lit. A bed pan, or warming pan.

Nonenclator.

BED-PHERE. Bedfellow. Compounded of bed, and fere or phere. See FERE. And I must have mine ears banquetted with pleasant and witty conferences, pretty girls, scoffs, and dalliance, in her that I mean to chuse for my best-pkerse.

B. Joss. Bpicarse, ii, 5.

†BEDRIBBLE. To sprinkle with wet?

A little urn will hold a great mans sakes; and why should we bedribble with our pens the dust that resist there? there is now no fear that it will rise, and fly upon our faces.

Wilson's James I, 1655.

BED-ROLL, corrupted from bead-roll. A catalogue. See BEAD-ROLL.

And bellow forth against the gods themselves
And bellow forth against the gods themselves
A bed-roll of outragious blasphemies.

Kyd's Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 251.

If this were sold, our names should then be quite Bar'd from the bed-roll of gentility.

Woman kill'd solth kindness, O. Pl., vii, 288.

Drayton has written it bedroul: Then Wakefield battle next we in our bedroul bring.

Polyolb., 22, p. 1077.

†BED-ROPE. The rope under a subtendebatur. A bedrope, or cord. Nomenclator. †BED-STAFF. A wooden pin in the side of the bedstead for holding in the bed-clothes.

All the farmiture in the twelve poor schollars chamber, that is to say, six bed-steads, six matts, sixe mat-tresses, six feather beds, six feather bolsters, twelve pair of sheets, twelve blankets, twelve rugs, three docum of bedstanes, and six pewter chamber potts.

and six pewter chamber potts.

Alleyn's Will, 1626.

The old form of the +BEDSTEDLE. word bedstead.

In the further chamber, one bed-stedle, with blew curtaines and walling backcloath, one downe bedd, boulster, and pillow, one blanket, one coverid, one table, two chayres, one window-curtaine. Insentory of 17th Cent.

One who swerves BRDSWERVER. from the fidelity of the marriage bed:

an adulteress.

That she's

A bedsessers, even as bad as those
That values give bold'st titles. W. Tale, ii, 1.

BEDWARD. Towards bed or rest, or the time of reating.
While your poor fool and clown, for fear of peril,
Sweats hourly for a dry brown crust to bedward.
Albumasse, O. Pl., vii, 160.
Milton

It is used in Coriolanus; and Milton also has it,

Couch'd, and now fill'd with pasture gazing sat, Or bed-ward ruminating. Par. Lost, iv, 350. Compounds were formerly made at pleasure, by subjoining ward to the thing towards which the action tend-Thus we have in the translation of the New Testament, to us-ward and to God-ward, &c. In Fairfax's Tasso is to love-ward, v, 65, to his camp-ward, xi, 46, to Gaza-ward, viii, 51. In Harrington's Ariosto we find to Paris-ward, B. ii, st. 16 and Innumerable instances of this usage might be collected from the writings of those times.

+BEDWARF. To make little.

Thus whilst thy giant worth

Reduceries our funcies; all our words

Do cloud, not set thee forth.

Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

BEBLD. Shelter.

This is our beeld the blustring winds to shun.

This breast, this bosom soft shall be thy beeld 'Gainst storms of arrows, darts, and weapons thrown.

2 bid., xvi, 49. The word is still used in Scotland. Thus Robert Burns.

But thou beneath the random bield
O' clod or stane.

Verses to a Mountain Daisy. Ray has it among his north country words: also Kelly, Scottish Proverbs,

BEEN was often used for have been. No more than may the running streams revert To climb the hills, when they been rolled down The hollow vales. Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 176. Also for were:

And, for of fame and birth alike they been, They chose him captain by their free accord. Pairf. Tass., i, 53.

See also iv, 4. See BIN.

BEES. To have bees in the head. A phrase meaning, I fancy, to be choleric; to have that in the head which is easily provoked, and gives pain when it is.

But, Wyll, my maister hath bees in his head,
If he find mee heare pratinge, I am but deade.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 180.

Also to be restless:

If he meet but a carman in the street, and I find him not talk to keep him off on him, he will whistle him and all his tunes at overnight in his sleep! he has a keed full of bees.

B. Jon. Barth. Fair, 1, 4. To have a bee in the bonnet is a phrase of similar import, or sometimes means to be a little crazy. The phrase is clearly alluded to in the following passage:

For pity, sir, find out that bee That bore my love away; I'll seek him in your bonnet brave. Herrick, Mad Maid's Song, p. 181.

BEESTNING, or BEESTING. first milk given by a cow or other milch beast. A rustic word, sometimes made into biesting, and even bresting. See Kersey and Todd in Biesting. Supposed from a Saxon word, bysting: but as that meant leaven, the derivation is not very certain. See Cotgrave in Colostre.

So may the first of all our fells be thine,
And both the best ning of our goats and kine.

B. Jone. Pan's Annie. As blind as a

†BEETLE-BLIND. beetle.

Yet thou, nor no flie, is so bestle-blinds, But thou and they aparantly may see.

Heywood's Spider and Fite, 1556. †BEETLE. As quick as a beetle, i. e., very slow.

Celerius elephanti parinnt: as quicke as a beetle.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1634, p. 564.

BEETLE. A heavy mallet. A three-man beetle was one so heavy that it required three men to manage it, two at the long handles and one at the head. The exact figure of it is delineated in the Supplement to Shakespeare, vol. i, p. 190.

are, voi. 1, p. 130. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. 2 Hen. IV, i, 2.

For washing-beetle, see BATLET. +BEFOG. To obscure.

What a world of hel-worke, devil-worke, and elve-worke, had we walking amongst us heere in England, what time that popish mist had befogged the eyes of our poore people

Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1603. +BEFORE. In the presence of; used in a form of oath.

Stra. Sirrah, be civill, or clse before Jove I'l pull off my wooden leg, and break your pate with it, though I die for it.

Cartwright's Royall Slave, 1651.

BEFORN. Before.

The time was once, and may again retorn,
For ought may happen that hath been beforn.

Spens. Shop. K., May, 103.
Thee, whom high birth makes equal with the best
Thine acts prefer both me and all beforn.

Pairf. Tasso, v, 10.

The little redbreast to the prickled thorne
Return'd, and sung there as he had beforne.

Browne's Brit. Past., ii, 8, p. 70.

BEG, v. To beg a person for a fool, to apply to be his guardian. In the old common law was a writ de idiota inquirendo, under which, if a man was legally proved an idiot, the profits of his lands and the custody of his person might be granted by the See Blackstone, king to any subject. Such a person, B. i, ch. 8, § 18. when this grant was asked, was said to be begged for a fool; which that learned judge regarded as being still a common expression. See his note, But I do not remember loc. cit. ever to have heard it used.

If I fret not his guts, beg me for a fool.

Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 261. It seems that this petition was regularly to be put up in the Court of Wards.

Leave begging, Lynus, for such poor rewards, Else some will beg thes, in the court of words. Harring. Epigr., i, 10.

The guardianship of young heirs, whose estates were deemed to be held in capite of the crown, might also be begged. See Lord Coke's Charge, reprinted 1813, p. 48.

It is more obscurely alluded to here:

I fear you will

Be begg'd at court, unless you come off thus.

The Wite, O. Pl., viii, 509. It is played upon in this passage:

And that a great man
Did mean to beg you for — his daughter.
City Match, O. Pl., ix, 314. He forms the phrase as if he was going to say "to beg you for a fool," and then suddenly turns it off by subjoining the other words. See also Malcontent, O. Pl., iv. 37.

Nor was this the whole of the abuse: these wardships were also sold, and the ward so bought could not marry without the consent of this guardian. Grace Wellborn being asked how she came under the guardianship of Justice Overdo, replies, Faith, through a common calamity, he bought me, sir; and now he will marry me to his wife's brother, this wise gentleman, that you see; or else I must pay the value of my land.

B. Jons. Berth. Psir, act iii.

See WARD.

70

+BEGGAR. To swear by no beggars; i. e., to swear hard, or solemnly.

8. e., to swear hard, or soleminy. This letter brought mistres Dorite into suche a furie, when she had perused it, that she sware by no beggers she would be revenged upon the doctor.

Ricke his Farewell to Militarie Prof., 1581. For even this Pamphilus, how often did he sware deepely by no beggers unto Bacchis, even so, that anybody in the world might have beleeved him, that so large as the lived he record not take him. long as shee lived, he would not take him a wife; but loe he is married.

Terence in English, 1614.

BEGGARS BUSH, to go by. One of the numerous proverbial sayings which depended on a punning allusion to the name of a place. See Greene's Quip, Harl. Misc., v, 396. It means to go on the road to ruin.

the throws away his wealth as heartily as young heirs, or old philosophers, and is so eager of a goal, or a munper's wallet, that he will not wait fortune's leisure to undo him, but rides post to beggar's-busk, and takes more pains to spend money than day-labourers to get it. Twelve Ingenious Characters, 1686.

+BEGIN. Begin to him, i. e., pledge him first, to do him the first honour.

Phil. The bravest sport is yet to come: the ransack O'th' citty, that's the chiefest. You shall have This lord come profer you his daughter, this Burgesse his wife, and that unskilfull youth Pray you begin to him in 's trembling bride. Cartwright's Siedge, 1651.

BEGUILED. Covered with guile; having be prefixed in such a sense as it is in becalm, bedew, &c.

So beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice. Sk. Rape of Lucr., Supp., i, 560. †BEGULLED. Made a gull of; cheated. He hath not left a penny in my purse:
Five shillings, not a farthing more, I had,
And thus be-guld, doth make me almost mad.
Rowlands, Knare of Clubbs, 1611.

BEHAVE, v. a. Sometimes used for to manage or govern; in point of behaviour.

The earlier critics, not understanding this, suspected the passage to be corrupt, and proposed alterations; but it is now fully proved that this sense of the word was common.

How well my stars behave their influence.

Davenant's Just Italian.

Thus Spenser also,

But who his limbs with labours, and his mind

Between with carea, cannot so easy mis.

Sp. P. Q., II, iii, 40.

It may not be amiss to add, that the stanza here referred to is remarkable for high polish and poetical beauty of expression.

BEHAVIOUR. This word is used in a very peculiar sense by Shakespeare in +BELAID. Waylaid. the first scene of King John:

Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France, In my behaviour, to the majesty, The borrow'd majesty of England here. John John, i, 1. Dr. Johnson explains it thus: "the BELAMOUR. A lover. Bel amour, Fr. king of France speaks in the character which I here assume."

BEHEST. Command. A word still preserved in poetic usage, and sufficiently exemplified by Dr. Johnson.

BEHIGHT, v. To promise, call, bespeak, reckon, &c. Saxon

And for his paines a whistle him behight.

Spens. P. Q., IV, xi, 6.

Such as their kind behighteth to us all.

Ferrez and Porrez, O. Pl., i, 115. Such as their kind pennymers and Porres, U. Kin hard tGood judgement them behight for princes bowres.

Collier's dileys Papers.

Also to intrust or commit. Johnson.

See behote as the preterite of behight. Sp. F. Q., IV, iv, 40, &c. See Todd.

BEHITHER, adv. On this side.

The Italian at this day by like arrogance calleth the Frenchman, Spaniard, Dutch, English, and all other breed behilder their mountaines Apennines, Tramontami, as who should say barbarous.

Puttenh. Art of Engl. Poesis, p. 210.

Also for except.

I have not any one thing, behither vice, that hath occasioned so much contempt of the clergie, as unwillingness to take or keep a poor living.

Oley's Pref. to Herbert, C. Parson, A. 11, b.

Or it may mean, short of vice, or on this side of it.

BEHOLDINGNESS. Obligation; or the state of being beholden; formed according to the corrupt use of beholding for beholden. Beholden expresses the state of being holden or held in obligation to a person.

And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

Tim. of A., iii, b. +BEHORNE. To put horns on, to Marcus Aurelius did faire Faustine wed, And she with whoring did bekome his head Taylor's Workes, 1630. †BEHOVEFUL. Desirable.

It seemed to him very requisite and behoveful, as well for the augmentation of his honours, &c.

Shelton's Don Quixote, 1612.

BEING. adv. Since. It is, in fact, an abbreviated form, instead of "it being so," or "this being so," equivalent to since this is so.

And being you have
Declin'd his means, you have increas'd his malice.

B. J. Fl. Hon. M. Fort., act ii.
†Being y' are confident of me, and I Presume your lips are sealed up to silence,
Take that, which I did never yet discover. Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

He was, by certain Spaniards of the emperors old souldiors, who had knowledge of his comming, belaid upon the river Padus as he was going down to Venice, and slame.

Kooller Hist. of the Turks.

Nor yet her belamour, the partner of his sheet. Sp. F. Q., III, x. 22.

Also a flower:

Her ruddy cheeks like unto roses red, Her snowy brows like budded belamoures. Spens. Sonn., 64. I have not discovered what flower is here meant. It seems to be applied to the lily or iris in F. Q., II, vi. 16. Yet the construction is too obscure to determine anything.

BELDAME and BELSIRE.

mother and grandfather.

To show the beldame daughters of her daughter.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Sup., i, p. 580.

So in 1 Hen. IV, iii, 1. "Beldame earth" and "grandam earth" occur in the same passage, as synonymous. So belsire:

As his great believe Brute from Albion's heirs it won.

Polyolb., song 8. In Spenser, beldame has the original signification of belle dame, fair lady. In a translation of Erasmus's Moriæ Encomium, by Sir Thos. Chaloner, printed 1549, we find a word not unuseful, instead of the awkward phrase great great grandfather, namely, belgrandfather; and great belgrandfather for the next remove. See Capel's School of Shakespeare, p. 198. BELGARDS. Beautiful looks. Belle egard, Fr. Upon her eyelids many graces sate Under the shadow of her even browes Working belgards, and amorous retrate. Sp. F. Q., 1I, iii, 25. BELL, to bear the. To win the prize at a race, where a bell was the usual prize.

Among the Romans it [a horse race] was an Olympic exercise, and the prize was a garland, but now they beare the bell away.

Saltonshall, Char., 23.

Hence this epitaph:

Here lyes the man whose horse did gaine
The bell, in race on Salisbury plain.

Camd. Remains, p. 848.

We find also to lose the bell, for to be worsted, generally.

But when in single fight he lost the bell.

Task whom a single light set test the bett.

Fairf. Tasko, xvii, 69.

†Staid drinking some wyne: soe to a summer game:

Sherburne's mare run, and lost the bett: made nerrie.

Assheton Diary, 1617-18.

BELL, BOOK, AND CANDLE. solemn form of excommunication used in the Romish Church, the bell was tolled, the book of offices for the purpose used, and three candles extinguished, with certain ceremonies; hence this expression,

Bell, book, and candle, shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver becks me to come on. John, iii, 3. Four times a year, the following curse was read in the church, in terrorem. against all who in any way defrauded the church of her dues. The prelate stood in the pulpit in his albe, the cross was lifted up, and the candles lighted; when he proceeded thus:

Thorow authoritie of Lord God Almighty, and our lady St. Mary, and all the saints of heaven, of angels or archangels, patriarchs and prophets, evangelists, apostles, martyrs, confessors, and virgins; also by the power of all holy church, that our Lord Jean Christ ways to S. Better we downted the course of the sposters many its contession, and mines also by the power of all holy church, that our Lord Jesu Christ gave to S. Peter, we denounce all those accursed that we have thus reckned to you: and all those that maintaine hem in her sins, or given hem hereto either helpe or councell, se that they be departed from God, and all holy church, and that they have noe part of the passion of our Lord Jesu Christ, ne of noe sacraments that been in holy church, me noe part of the prayers among christen folke, but that they be accursed of God and of holy church, from the sool of their foot unto the crown of their head, sleaping and waking, sitting and standing, in all her works, and in all her workes, and but if [unless] they have grace of God for to amend hem here in this life, for to dwell in the pain of hell, for ever withouten end (fat., fat). Doe to the book, quench the casals, ring the bell. Amen.

This form was extracted from the Canterbury book, by sir Thomas Ridley, or his annotator, J. Gregory. See his view of the Civile and Ecclesiasticall Law, p. 249. The days of cursing were Advent Sunday, the first Sunday in Lent, the Sunday in the feast of Trinity, and the Sunday within the utas [or octave] of the Virgin Mary. The curse was very like that of Ernulphus.

In the following passage the allusion is only jocular, applying the same form of words to a different purpose.

I have a priest will mumble up a marriage, Without bell, book, or candle. Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 447. Where the candle seems only to be added from the custom of joining the three together. The use of the bell was supposed to be to fright away evil spirits.

Ring the scints-bell to affright
Far from hence the evil sprite.

Herrick's Works, p. 302.

BELLIBONE, Belle et bonne, Fr., a fair maid.

Pan may be proud that ever he begot Such a bellibone. Spen. Shep. Kal., Apr., 91. †BELLARMINE. An earthen jug, ornamented with the figure of a bearded face, which is said to have been designed as the portrait of cardinal Bellarmine. It was in common use in the 17th century.

With jugs, mugs, and pitchers, And bellarmines of stale, Dash'd lightly with a little,
A very little ale. The Jolly Toper, an old ballad.

BELLMAN. Part of the office of this guardian of the night originally was to bless the sleepers, whose door he passed, which was often done in verse. Hence these lines of Herrick:

The Belmen.

The Belmen.

From noise of scarefires rest ye free,
From murders, benedicite.

From all mischances, that may fright
Your pleasing slumbers in the night;
Mercie secure ye all, and keep.

Pat one o'clock and almost two,
My masters all could day to you.

My masters all, good day to you. Неер., р. 139. Thus Milton:

The belman's drowsy charm.
To bless the doors from nightly harm. Pauleroso. Hence our still continued bellman's verses.

BELLS. In order to spread the alarm at a fire, bells were rung backwards. Among some directions, in cases of fire, printed in the Harl. Misc., one is, "That the bells ringing backwards do give notice of fire." Vol. vi, p. 400.

Look how a man would be amaz'd to heare A noise confus'd of sackward ringing bells, And after find, when he approcheth neare: New set on fire the house wherein he dwelst Harr. Ariost., xvi, 64.

Then, sir, in time
You may be remembered at the quenching of Fir'd houses, when the belle ring backward, by
Your name upon the buckets. City Match, O. Pl., ix, 297. tTo the making away of which conceit, and to make him venthis bladder, which otherwise would in a short time have caused him to die, they invented this quirk, to wit, to set an old ruinous house forthwith on fire, the physitians caused the bells to ring backward, and latreated a many to run to the fire.

Opinic Glass of Humors, 1639.

The old wife shee spun the woule, and a many to run to the fire.

Opinic Glass of Humors, 1639.

See Cleiveland, in Nichols's Collect. of Poems, vol. vii, p. 10.

This was practised also in other cases of alarm; thus, when William of Cloudeslee and his companions were attacking the people of Carlisle,

There was many an outhorne in Carleil blowen, And the belles backward did ring, Percy's Reliques, i, p. 160. It seems also to have been a general mark of sorrow:

Not concluded with any epithalamiums or songs of joy, but contrary—his belle ring backward.

Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 258.

+BELLUINE, adj. Having the nature of a beast.

The golden calf which Aaron did calcine,
Moses destroy'd, made it less bellsins.
Onces's Epigrams, by Harvey.
†BELLY-CHEER. This trivial name for provisions is of considerable antiquity.

Abdomini indulgere, to geve hym selfe to bealy chere.

Eliotes Dictionarie, 1559.

Chuttonic mounted on a greedic bears.
To belly-cheers and banquets lends his care.
Rowlands, Knaves of Spades, &c.

We likewise find belly-timber in the same sense.

Anness care est. Come is at a high price; victoria are deare; belly timber is hard to come by.

Terence in English, 1614.

BELLY-GOD. A glutton, or epicure. This odd perversion of calling a person by that name who made a god of his belly, or was addicted to luxurious eating, is noticed by Johnson, from Hakewill; but I believe it is no longer used. Certainly no elegant writer would employ it. In older authors it is not uncommon. In Randolph's Muses' Looking. Glass, Acolastus, who personifies intemperance, is styled Base belly-god! licentious libertine. O. Pl., ix, 901.

Learning is high, becomes the meek, and doth the proud infest,
It doth refuse the belly-gode, and such as sleep hath train'd.
Without long time, and labour great, it will not be obtain'd.
Barn. Gouge's Paling. in Cons. Lit., ix, 281.
And biase this Baal and belligod most blind.

Mivr. for Mag., p. 333.

+BELLY-PIECE. Properly an apron, or covering of the belly.

If thou shoulds cry, it would make streaks down thy face; as the tears of the tankard do upon my fat house betty-pieces.

Shadwoll, Bury Pair, 1689. It is used in the following example as a popular term for a woman. Asot. Come, blush not, beahfull belly-pieco—I will meet thee:

I over keep my word with a fair lady.
I will requite that jewell with a richer.
Randolph'e Jealous Lovers U446.

The old wife shee spun the woule, and a maid be sides was together with them, all ragged and tattered, very sluttish, and not much regarded belike, shee weaved that they spunne. Terence in English, 1614.

†BELISHLASH. To flog.

He that minds trish-trash,

Him I will belishlash.

How a Man may chuse a Good Wife, 1602.

†To BELK. To belch.

To Belk. To belch.

With surfets tympany he ginning swell,
All wan eft lavers in saint Burton's well;
He breathing belketh out such sulphure aires,
As sun exhales from those Egyptian mares.

Optick Glasse of Hussors, 1639.
But they which have melancholia caused of vice in the sides, they have rawnesse, and much windinesse, sharpe belkings, burnings, and grievoussesse of the sides.

Berrough's Method of Physick, 1634.

BEL-SWAGGER, ST., OF MIMS. The history of this canonised personage is a desideratum. He or she is thus mentioned:

Let Mims be angry at their St. Bel-swagger,
And we pass in the heat on't, and be beaten.

B. & Fl. Wit w. M., iii, 1. [In the following example the word is used in the sense of a bully or hector.]

†Mean? why here has been a young belswagger, a great he-rogue, with your daughter, sir.

The World in the Moon, an Opera, 1697.

+BEMARTLED. Trampled?

Stervde mutton, beefe with foote bemartelled,
And skinn and bones, all these will Bardus cate.

Bastard's Chrestoleros, 1598.

BEMOIL: To bemire, or bedraggle. Thou should'st have heard, in how miry a place; how she was bemoifd.

Tam. of Shr., iv. I.

†BENCH. The tavern-bench is often mentioned in the old writers.

Phil. Their spendthrift heires will those firebrands quench, Swaggering full moistly on a tavernes bench.

The Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

The following example appears to contain a pun.

Hee's a bench-solistler; that is but an yache, Whistling an hunt's-up in the King's Bench.

The Scourge of Folly, n. d.
BENIM, or BENOOME, v. To take away. Benæman, Sax., which is from næme, captio; whence to nim, for to steal.

Wherewith he pierced oft

His body gord, which he of life bencomes.

Mirr. Mag., p. 436. BENIZON, or BENISON. Blessing: benison, Fr.

Therefore begone
Without our grace, our love, our benicon. Lear, i, 1.
The bounty and the benicon of heav'n
To boot, and boot!
That through each room a golden pipe may run
Of living water, by thy benicon. Herrick, Works, p. 289.

+BENTS. Hard coarse grass in general.

This wakes the nymph, her eyes admit the day;
Here flowers, and there her ecatter'd garlands lay,
Which as she picks up, and with best roties,
She in her lap the speckled serpent spies.

Randolph's Peons, 1643.

5*

The flowers of the sweetest sents
She bound about with knotty bents.
Select Ayres and Dialogues, 1659.

BERDASH. Said to be a kind of neck-cloth; but I have found it only in the following passage of the Guardian, and we must be sure that it was something more than a temporary term, before we attempt to derive haber-dasher (that puzzle of etymologists) from it, with the editor of those papers in 1797.

papers in 1797.

I have prepared a treatise against the cravat and berdark, which I am told is not ill done. Guard., No. 10.

We may hope that bardash is in no way applicable to it.

BERGOMASK DANCE. A rustic dance, framed in imitation of the people of Bergamasco (a province in the state of Venice), who are ridiculed as being more clownish in their manners and dialect than any other people in Italy. All the Italian buffoons imitate them. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or hear a bergomask dance, between two of our company? Thes. Come, your bergamask, let your epilogue alone. [Here a dance of clowns.]

†BERENT. To tear to pieces, or about.

Shall I therefore serent my haires, with wightes that wish to die?

Or shall I bathe myselfe with teares, to feed your feeckle eye?

Paradise of Dainty Devises, 1596.

BERIE, s. A word not otherwise authorised, that I know of, but used by Sir J. Harrington for a grove or garden.

The cell a chappell had on th' easterne side, Upon the wester side a grove or serie. Orl. Fur., xli, 57.

+BERLINA. The pillory.

Wearing a cap, with fair long ass's cars Instead of horns; and so to mount, a paper Pinn'd on thy breast, to the berling.

B. Jons. Folgone, v, 8.
BERMOOTHES. The Bermudas: an old form of the name.

Thou call'dat me up at midnight to fetch dow
From the still vext Bermoothes. Trme., i, 2.
The dev'l should think of purchasing that egg-shell
To victual out a witch for the Burmoothes.

B. & Fl. Women pleas'd, i, 2.

BERMUDAS, in London. A cant term for certain obscure and intricate alleys, in which persons lodged who had occasion to live cheap or concealed; called also the Straights, q. v. They are supposed to have been the narrow passages north of the Strand, near Covent-garden.

Covent-garden.

Mesercaft. Engine, when did you see
My cousin Eventhil? keeps he still your quarter
In the Bermudes? Bug. Yes, sir, he was writing
This morning very hard. B. Jons. Devil an Ass, ii, 1.

Turn pyrates here at land, Ha' their Bermudas and their Streights i' th' Strand. Ibid., Epist. to Sir Edw. Dorset, vol. vi, 361.

A practice of running away actually to the Bermuda Islands, when they were first settled, to defraud creditors, probably gave rise to the expression, which seems to be literally used here:

There's an old debt of forty, I ga' my word For one is run away to the Bormudas. B. Jon. Devil on Ass. iii, 8.

Bernudas also denoted a species of tobacco; probably from being brought from thence.

Where being furnished with tinder, match, and a portion of decayed Barmoodas, they smoake it most terribly.

Clitus's Whims., p. 136.

See STRAIGHTS.

74

†BEROGUE. To call rogue, to abuse.

Therefore hands off, do not thou draw
Thy sword, agree, you know the law
Is costly, if you please you may
Berogue and rascall him all day.
Homer a la Mode, 1665.

+BESAUCE. To flavour with sauce.

Also, I should overcharge my memory, as then I did mine eyes and stomache, little delighting the reader, because garlicke and onloss must bessee many of my words, as then it did the most parte of their dishes. Sir T. Smith's Voinge in Bussia, 1806.

†BESCATTERED. Disordered.

Whose head befringed with bescattered tresses, Shews like Apollo's, when the mern he dresses. Witt's Recreations, 1654.

BESCUMMER, v. From be and scummer. To scatter ordure.

Which working strongly with
The conceit of the patient, would make them beccummer
To th' height of a mighty purgation.

B. J. P. Feir Maid of the Inn, iv.

B. J. Pt. Pair Maid of the B. Ben Jonson has it bescumber:

A critic that all the world bescumbers
With satirical humours and lyrical numbers.

Poetaster, act v.
†But even now I asked for a little drink, and they gave me a glasse whose foot was all bescumberd, and although the ill favour did much displease me, yet the great thirst I had did inforce me to lift it to my mouth.

Comical History of Francion, 1685.

See SCUMMER.

BESEEK, v. To beseech.

You are begylde, and now your Juliet you besseles To cease your sute and suffer her to live emong her likes. Romens and Juliet, Sh. Sup., i, 291.

BESEEN. Seen, or appearing. Well beseen, making a good appearance; ill beseen, the contrary.

In which I late was wont to reign as queen, And mask in mirth, with graces well beseen.

Spens. Tears of Muses, 179.

Within that lake is a rock, and therein is as faire a place as any is on earth, and richly beseens.

Hist. of K. Arthur, bl. l.

BESHREW, v. To wish ill to; to curse. To shrew is used for to curse by Chaucer, Cant. Tales, 7809;—thus a shrew'd woman and a curst woman, were the same. It is from screawa, the shrew-mouse.

... -

Now much bestree my manners and my pride, If Hermia meant to say Lysander ly'd. Mids., ii, 3. Florio, in the word museragno, gives the best account I have met with of the origin of this expression; for till we know what properties were attributed to the harmless shrew-mouse, we cannot comprehend why its name should imply a curse. He says, "A kinde of mouse called a shrew, which is deadly to other beasts if he but bite them, and laming all, if he but touch them, of whom came that ordinary curse I beshrew you, as much as to say, I wish you death."

+BESMEARED. Bescummered.

Mistris Minz, a marchants wife, that will eat no cherries, forworth, but when they are at twentie shillings a pound, that lookes as simperingly as if she were bestmered.

Nesth, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

BESMIRCH, v. To disfigure with smoke, or blackness. See SMIRCH.

+BESOBBED. Soaked.

Because also that all the ground was besobbed and dreached with the mid-winter frosts that now thawed, and the waters being up and swolne, had carried away the bounds of their banks, and were become verie rough. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+BESOMETIMES. At times. DENOVALIA IMALIA.

Tea, faith itselfs, and seal, becomines angles
Wherewith this juggler heav, that in spring devours
The bade and seaves of choisest fruits and flowrs.

BBSORT, v. To suit, or befit.

And the remainder that shall still depend
To be such men as may besort your age
And know themselves and you.

Lear, i, 4.

BESORT, . Attendance, or society.

With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Oth., i, 8. +BESPARAGE. For disparage.

Yet am I not against it, that these men by their mechanicall trades should come to besparage gentlemen and chuff-headed burghomasters.

Nask's Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

Mr. Malone observes that there is a peculiar propriety in the address of mad Tom in Lear to Bessy; mad Tom and mad Bess being usually companions. In proof of it, he quotes

the following passage:
Stowt rogue and harlot counterfeited gomme,
One calls herself poor Bess, the other Tom.
West's Court of Conscience, In confirmation of this it may be observed, that two of the most celebrated mad songs are entitled Mad Bess and Mad Tom. See Malone's Suppl., i, The passage of King Lear, however, which he thus illustrates, certainly contains a fragment of some old song. Lear, iii, 6.

There is an old chap-book entitled, "Bess of Bedlam's Garland, containing several excellent new songs," 12mo, n. d., with the following verse on the title:1

†See, see, poor Bess of Bedlam, In mournful plight and sadness; I shake my chains and rack my brains In all extreams of madness.

Situated: circum-†BESTAD, part. etenced

What then behoveth so bested to done?

Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

BESTEAD, v. To treat, or accommodate. [See the preceding word.]
Thus ill bestedd, and fearful more of shame

Then of the certeine perill he stood in.

BESTRAUGHT. Distracted. A participle of which the verb is not met with. Distraught, in the same sense, is not uncommon, and is for distract or distracted.

Of CHECTRCUCU.

If she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lying'st knave in Christendom. What, I am not bestrasght!

Tem. Shr. Induct., sc. 2.

They say there was an oracle there in old time, whose spirit possessed many inhabitants thereabouts, and bestrasght them of their wits.

North's Platenth, p. 360, C.

+BESWARM. To cover with dirt?

She jump'd upon the fryar's back
In that most nasty case,
Making his very shoulders crack,
And all besearm'd his face.

The Fryar and the Boy, part ii.

An old representative of better; not unusual in old authors.

Sin it may be no bet, now gang in peace.

Sin it may be no bet, now gang in peace.

Perhaps he shall be bet advisde within a weeke or twayne.

Romens and Juliet, Sup. to Sh., i, 293.

God knoweth I wish it not, it hade beene bet for mee,

Still to have kept my quiet chaire.

Gascoign's Workes, 1887.

†BETALL. To pay, or count out money. From the German.

Our host said we had foure shilling to betall, or to pay, which made me suspect it to bee a bawdy house by his large reckoning, till at last I understood that the shillings he meant were but stivers, or three halfe pence a peece.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

BETEEM, v. To bestow, give, afford, or allow: probably from teem; to teem forth.

em forth.

Belike for want of rain, which I could well

Beteem them from the tempest of mine eyes

Mids., i, 1.

It seems in the following passage to mean give, in the sense of permit, or allow:

So loving to my mother
That he might not bettem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly.

Hami

The modern editions, till Mr. Malone's, BETSO. The smallest coin current in read, in this passage, "let e'en." from the conjectural emendation of Theobald. The true word is in the old quartos. Both folios read erroneously beteene. The fourth, still more absurdly, betweene. If proof were still wanting that beteem was the right word, the following passage, where it forms the rhyme, would afford it fully :
Yet could be not betseme

The shape of any other bird than eagle for to seeme.

Golding's Ovid. Metamph.

It means there endure, or deign, for it is the translation of dignatur.

And poore heart (were not wishing in vaine) I could beterms her a better match, than thus to see a diamond buried in sea-coale ashes.

Case is alter'd, Dram. Dialogue, 1635.

Spenser also has used it in the same sense:

So would I, said th' enchaunter, glad and faine Beteeme to you this sword you to defend. F. Q., II, viii. 19.

It does not appear that the sense of pour out, which Mr. Steevens prefers, is either authorised or necessary.

BETHLEM GABOR. A prince of Transylvania, who by treachery, and by the assistance of the Turks, gained the sovereignty of that country, and caused himself to be proclaimed king of Hungary. The former situation was confirmed to him by the emperor; the latter he was persuaded to renounce, as a condition of peace. He was famous from 1613 to his death in 1629. He is often alluded to in old plays. Thus Ben Jonson:

Some thing of Bethlem Gabor,
And then I'm gone. Tho. We hear he has devis'd
A drum to fill all Christendom with the sound; But that he cannot draw his forces near it To march yet, for the violence of the noise.

To march yet, for the violence of the noise.

Staple of News, iii, 2.

Tis an Arabian woodcock, the same that carry'd a bunch of grapes in January last to Bethlem Gabor.

Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 266.

The sonne of one did dayly labour,

But he, as proud as Bethlem Gabor,

In buffe and scarfs full richly clad.

Gayl. Fest. Notes, iv, 24, p. 280.

Matters go untowardly on our side in Germany, but the king of Denmark will be shortly in the field in person; and Bethlem Gabor hath been long expected to do something, but some think he will prove but a bugbear.

Hosell's Letters, B. 1, 44, 1, 20, dated 15 Mar., 1636.

+BETHREATEN. To threaten much, or on all sides.

My calm's deceitful; and my gulf too near;
My wares are slubber'd, and my fare's too dear:
My plummet's light, it cannot sink nor sound;
O, shall my rock-bethreaten'd soul be drown'd?

Quarter's Emblems.

Venice; worth about a farthing.

And what must I give you? Brs. At a word thirty livres, I'll not bate you a betso.

Antiquery, O. Pl., z, 47.

Coryat calls it betea:
The last and least [coin] is *1 The last and least [coin] is the betse, which is half a sol; that is, almost a farthing.

Crud., vol. fi, p. 69, repr.

+BETWIXT. To come betwixt. i. e., to cause disagreement or estrangement between two persons.

Paith, I was a man in her quarters once, but now am out again. I know not why, but something is come betwist us: I am not so intimate as I was.

The Wisard, a Play, 1640.

BEVER, or BEAVER. The part of the helmet which, when let down, covered the face. Baviere, Fr., the visor or visiere.

ere.
I saw young Harry—with his beaver on.
1 Hon. IF, iv, 1. Warburton, not injudiciously, proposed to read "with his beaver up," alleging that it was improper to say with the beaver on, which is only a part of the helmet. Dr. Johnson thought beaver might stand for helmet in that passage, or on for down. Perhaps it means helmet in the following:

With trembling hand her boor he unty'd.
Pairf. These, rii, 67. In the following passage, it has its proper sense and usage:

Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their bessers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,
And the loud trumpet blowing them together.

9 Hess. IV, iv, 1.

BEVER, e. and v. An intermediate refreshment between breakfast and dinner. From bever, to drink, Sp. and Ital. [Chapman, in his translation of the Odyssey, uses this word for an evening meal, or supper.]

therenda, Plauto. Propriè olim prandium dicebatur quod meridie daretur. Monius cibum qui post meridiem sumitur interpretatur. éowépopue. Le reciner. A middaies meale: an undermeale: a boire or besser: a refreshing betwirt meales. Nomenclator, 1886. Appetitus. Your gallants never sup, breakhast, nor besser without me. Lingua, O. Pl., v, 148. He is none of those same ordinary eaters, that will devour three breakfasts, and as many dinners, without any prejudice to their besser, drinkings, or suppers.

B. § Fl. Wem. Hater, i, S.

BEVIS OF SOUTHAMPTON. A famous knight of romance, whose exploits are not a little marvellous; wherefore Shakespeare thus alludes to them:

They did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bests was believ'd.

Hen. YIII, i, l.

hief circumstances of his history id in the second book of Dray-Polyolbion.

Originally a flock of some kinds is; a company or party[especially ies]. Used by Pope. Abundantly sliffed by Johnson. See Todd.

None here he hopes, I this noble seey, has brought with her me abroad. Hon. VIII. i. 4. Apparently misprinted for in the old folio of B. and Fl.,) places.

As clerk to the great band rewbence, that people call the Switzers, also d benje and sarcenet. Nob. Gent., iii, 1. its teeth; for of my faith I think a sharper than his sword, and dare do more egge meet him fairly.

18td., Copt., ii, 9. VAILE. Very singularly used enser; apparently for to cause, npass.

han a ship that flyes fayre under sayle idden rocke escaped hath unwares, lay in waite her wrack for to bewails.

F. O., L. vi. 1. 1 says that to wail or bewaile, ntly meant to choose or select, juotes G. Douglas and Chaucer

Dr. Johnson's remark that word is only used in phrases admit the word be or its tenses. fectly correct. The exception maly urged by G. Mason (in anner) may be considered as an te form. It could not now be by any pure writer.

safter honours and becares to act straightway he must labour to retract.

B. Jone. Transl. of Horace.

22t, it is now used as if be and were still separate words, not d into one.

ICHED. A cant term for being It is mentioned with others Workes of Taylor the Water-

Y. v. To discover, or betrav. A sewrey his practice, and receiv'd art you see striving to apprehend him.

The known e'en these he should have dy'd, the known e'en these he should have dy'd, the looks no sign of fear between Pairf. Tusso, vii, 30. sting them their cause of strife beaversy.

Spens. Moth. Hubb., 1096.

ID. Beyond oneself was used hat we now express by beside , i. e., excessively affected with you be never so much delai'd, you may not call his master knave; that makes him go beyond him-selfs, and wright a challenge in court hand, for it may be his owne another day.

Coordings's Now and Choise Characters, 1615.

+ Beyond all reason, unreasonably.

Wither's Abuses Stript and Whipt, 1633.

+BEZIL. The part of a ring in which the stone was fixed, or the device engraved.

graved.

Pala annuli, Cicero. Latior annuli turgidiorque pars, cui genama ant symbolum inscritur. Chaton, teste d'un anneau. The besill, colet, or heade of a ring.

Nomenciator.

BEZONIAN. A beggar. From besogno, or besognoso, Ital. Cotgrave thus explains the French word bisogne: "A bison. Also a filthie knave, or clowne, a raskall, bisonian," &c.

Under which king, Bezonian, speak or die. Great men oft die by vile Bezonians. Ibid., iv, 1.
What Bezonian is that?
Middleton's Blurt Master Constable.

Besognion, bisogno, and besoingnies, are all to be met with in the same sense. See O. Pl., vi, 148, and B. and Fletch. Love's Cure, ii, 1.

tWhat blanqueted? O the Gods! spurn'd out by groomes like a base bisomo? thrust out by th' head and shoulders. Chapman's Widows Tears, 1612. Ben Jonson has the original Italian Heart, ere to-morrow I shall be new christen'd And called the Pantalone di besognicsi, About the town.

Fox,

Bessogne is put for the same: Beat the bessognes that lie hid in the carriages.

Brome, Cov. Gard, weeded, act v. sc. S.

BEZZLE, or BIZLE, v. To drink to Todd derives it from old excess. French.

"Stoot, I wonder how the inside of a tavern looks now.
Oh! when shall I biele, biele?

Honest Whore, part ii, and O. Pl., iii, 396.
Time will come
When wonder of thy error will strike dumb
Thy beset d sense.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 49.

Thy beself d sense. Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, i. e., "thy besotted understanding."

That divine part is soakt away in sinne, In sensual lust, and midnight bezeling.

Marston, Scourge of V. Lib. ii, Sat. 7. It is used also as a substantive, a drunkard being called "foule drunken bezzle."

In another passage, sots are called bezelers. See the place first cited. Skinner says, perhaps for beastle, i. e., to make a beast of one's self. The word is also in Kersev.

†For when he was told of he was fallen into this filthic vice and abominable beaseling, O (saith hee) youth may be wanton, and heerafter staydnes may reduce him; puft up with pride that may be moderated by conversation, or religious advise; given to gaming, him leave it.

Rich Cabinet furnished with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

And though the city is not much more then halfe the bignes as London is within the wals, yet are there it almost 800 brewhouses, and in one day there hath beene shipped away from thence 337 brewings of beere, besides 13 or 14 brewings have beene wrackt or stayed in the towne, as not sufficient to be beeseled in the country.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+BIAS. Bent, or inclination.

Though these found some stop, yet our great favourite, the earl of Somerset, and his business, runs smoothly, without rub, since Overburies death. But he must alter his bira, and go less, or find some new ways to bring in monies.

Wilson's James I.

BIB. v. To drink frequently; to tipple. Lat.

And through a wide mouth'd tunnel duly strains
Unto a bibbing substance down conveying.

Ph. Fletcher's Purple Isl., v, 17.
And that the common people did nothing all day long unto darke night, but bybbs, and drink drunke.

North's Plate 1047. North's Plut., 1047.

Your lycour is so mightie and so strong,
And therewithall it goeth down so soft,
That of your guestes some bibb therof so long
Till from the ground it lifteth them aloft.
Thynn, Debate between Pride and Lowlines.
†*What horses Diomedes brought, how great Achilles was,
She learned all too soone, and of love she bibbes (alss). Phaer's Virgil, 1600.

Phaer's Virgil, 1600.

†As soon a little little ant
Shall bib the ocean dry,
A snail shall creep about the world,
Ere these affections dye.

Howell's Familiar Epistles, 1650.

BIBBELER, or BIBBER. One who drinks often.

I perceive you are no great bybler, (i. e. reader of the Bible) Pasiphilo. Pas. Yes, sir, an excellent good bibbeler, 'specially in a bottle.

Gascoigne's Works, sign. C. 1. †BICKERING, and BICKERMENT. Skirmishing; used also in a pathological sense for an internal derangement.

My captaine, feelyng suche a bickeryng within himself, the like whereof he had never indured upon the sea, was like to bee taken prisoner shoard his owne slippe.

Riche's Parewell to Militarie Profession, 1881.

Nature et morbi conflictus, Aurel. spórse. The conflict or bickerment of nature and sicknesse. Nomenclator.

†BICORNED. Two-horned.

JULY DIA A WO-MONTH TO THE PROPERTY OF THE PRO

To BID BEADS. Originally, to say prayers; afterwards, merely to count the beads of the rosary; each bead dropped passing for a prayer. Used also by Dryden. See Todd.

Silly old man that lives in hidden cell, Bidding his beads all day for his trespas. Sp. F. Q., I, i, 30. He describes Superstition as saying, upon her beads.

Nine hundred paternosters every day,
And thrice nine hundred Avea.

F. Q., I, iii, 18.
Some were immured up in little sheads.
There to contemplate heav'n, and bid their beads.

Browne's Brit. Past., i, 5, p. 186.

See BEADSMAN.

either wants, or the discovery of falshood, may make | BIDDING PRAYER. The prayer for the souls of benefactors in popish times. It was said before the ser-It seems to have been so called from bidding the people pray for certain persons. A form of this kind is inserted in the account of Exeter cathedral, published by the Society of Antiquaries, and taken from the archives of that church. written in the time of Edward IV. It begins, "Ye shall pray for the state of al holy church: for our holy fader the Pope, with alle his college of cardinalls; for the holy lande, that of his heigh mercy sende hit sone into cristenmens honde. Also for the erchebysshoppe of Canterbury," &c., p. 11, with a long enumeration of persons dead and living. The regular long prayer, before the sermon, is an evident modification of this, and is still called, by some, the bidding prayer.

BIDET, Fr. A small horse.

I will return to myself, mount my bidet in dance, and curvet upon my curtal.

B. Jone. Masques. B. Jone. Masques.

+BIER-BALK. A road by which a corpse was carried to the churchvard. It was considered that the passage of a corpse gave a right of way ever afterwards, and this belief is still preserved in East Anglia, where such paths are called bierways.

patins are called overvoays.

It is a shame to behold the insatiableness of some covetous persons in their doings; that where their ancestors left of their land a broad and sufficient bier-balk, to carry the corpse to the Christian sepulture, how men pinch at such bier-balks, which by long use and custom ought to be inviolably kept for that purpose; and now they quite ear them up, and turn the dead body to be borne farther about in the high streets; or else, if they leave any such meer, it is too straight for two to walk on.

Hossilies ed Corrie p. 499

+BIG-BO. A hobgoblin.

Don Belzebub sits flexing of his breech,
And marble Proteus dances, leape, and skips;
Belerophon hath pend an excellent speech,
And big-bo and Boreas kist Auroraes lips

Trylor's Worker, 1630.

BIGGEN, or BIGGIN. A kind of close cap, which bound the forehead strongly; used for young children, to assist nature in closing the sutures of the skull. It is now used only for a child's cap. Shakespeare seems to have employed the term to express any coarse kind of night-cap.

2 Hen. IV. It seems also to have A BILL. A kind of pike or halbert, been part of the appropriated dress of barristers - at - law, perhaps the serieant's coif.

One whom the good
Old man, his uncle, kept to th' inns of court,
And would in time ha' made him barrister,
And rais'd him to his sattin cap and biggem,
In which he might have sold his breath far dearer, And let his tongue out at a greater price Than some their manors. City Malch, O. Pl., ix, 369. Or it might be the scientific undress, like the velvet night-cap of our randfathers.

Nash, describing an old miser, says. Upon his head he wore a filthy coarse biggin, and mext it a garnish of night-caps.

Pierce Penil. in Cone. Lit., vii, 18.

+BIGLY. Greatly; strongly; proudly.

Retwene two files, a serius argument.

Whether I should live or die was biglie bent.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

A sweete youth, no doubt, for he hath two roses on his shoes, to qualifie the heat of his feete: he looketh very bigly, and commeth prauncing in.

The Man in the Moon, 1609.

BILBO, and BILBOES. The town of Bilboa, in Spain, being famous for the manufacture of iron and steel, a fine Spanish blade was called a bilbo.

Next, to be compass'd, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point. Merr. W. W., iii, 5.

Merr. W. W., iii, 5.

When down their bows they threw,
And forth their bilbows drew.

Drayt. Ballad of Agine., Works, p. 1879.

Nor Bilbo steel, nor brasse from Corinth fet.

Complaints, Capel Sch. Sh., p. 220.

Pistol calls Slender a "latten bilboe," by which is probably meant only a weak blade of base metal. The commentators have disputed the design | †BILLYMENTS. Apparel. See ABILof the allusion. Mer. W., i, 1. From the same source was derived the name of a kind of stocks or fetters used at sea to confine prisoners:

Methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Haml., v, 2 There is a figure of these bilboes, in Steevens's Shakespeare, at the above passage of Hamlet.

+BILES. Handles.

The wedges, hammer, hatchet, and the nailes,
The siths, the sickle, and the biles of pailes.

Scot's Philomythis, 1616.

BILIVE. Immediately; presently.

And down to Plutoe's house are come biling. Sp. F. Q., I, v, 89.

Also contracted to blive: Perdy, sir knight, saide then th' enchaunter blive.

In Scotland the word is still in use, and means presently, by and by. Bolyve the elder bairns came drappin in.

B. Burns, Cotter's Saturday N., St. 4.

formerly carried by the English infantry, and afterwards the usual weapon of watchmen. It is described by Sir Wm. Temple as giving the most ghastly and deplorable wounds, which may be imagined by the figures of bills delineated in Steevens's Shakespeare, vol. ii, p. 316, ed. 1778. I cannot see how sleeping should offend; only have a care that your bills be not stolen. Much Ado, iii, 3. As for their bills, (the watchmen's) they only serve To reach down bacon to make rashers on.

B. & Fl. Coxcomb, act ii, p. 184.

The soldiers armed with bills were sometimes called bills :

Lo, with a band of bowmen and of pikes,
Brown bills, and targiteers four hundred strong,
I come Edward II, O. PL, ii, 366. Dr. Johnson tells us that these weapons were still carried by the watchmen of Lichfield in 1778.

A bill was also an advertisement set up against a wall, or in some public place; in which sense we still speak of play bills. St. Paul's church was a common place for setting up such bills. See SI QUIS, and PAULS. Some bills set up by Shift in St. Paul's are recited in the third act of B. Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour.

The placards of public challengers were so called:

He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight.

Much Ado, i, 1.

LIAMENTS. As for velvet and satten for billyments, a cap of velvet with a feather, a quilted capp of sarcenet, and money, he did not give me, but at my desire he laid out money for them to be paid again.

Burnet's Ref. Records, p. 171.

BIN. The same as been, are, or were; or is.

With ev'ry thing that pretty bin,
My lady sweet, arise. Song in Cym., ii, 3.
Blushes that bin The burnish of no sin,
Nor flames of ought too hot within.

Crashaw's Wishes to his supposed Mistress.

BIRCHING-LANE. To send a person to Birching-lane, a proverbial phrase for ordering him to be whipped, or otherwise punished. Ascham speaks of "a common proverb of Birchinglane." Scholem., p. 69. See WEEP-ING-CROSS, &c., with many similar allusions to names of places.

This street was also a place for buying second-hand or ready-made clothes:

It had not been amiss if we had gone to Burchen-lane first to have suited us; and yet it is a credit for a man of the sword to go thread-hare.

man of the sword to go thread-hare.

Royal King, Anc. Dr., vi. 235.

His discourse makes not his behaviour, but he buyes it at court, as countreymen their clothes in Birckin-lane.

Overbury's Char., 17, of a fine Gent. It all men were of his mind, all honesty would be out of fashion; he withers his cloaths on the stage, as a salesman is forced to do his suits in Birckin-lane, and when the play is done, if you mark his rising, its with a kind of walking epilogue between the two cardles.

candics.

+Tis like apparell made in Birchon-lane;
If any please to suit themselves and wear it,
The blame's not mine, but theirs that needs will bear it.

Wilts Recreations, 1654. +BIRD. As bare as a bird's tail, was a proverbial expression for being quite stripped.

Despoliavit nos omnibus. He hath not left us a dish to eate our meat in. He hath stript us of al. We are spoiled of all that we have by him. He hath left us as bare as a birds taile.

io. Terence in English, 1614. BIRD-BOLT. A short thick arrow with a broad flat end, used to kill birds without piercing, by the mere force of the blow. Frequently ascribed to Cupid: blow. Frequently ascribed to Cupia.
Subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt.

Now the boy with the bird-bolt be praised!

Greene's Tu Quoque, O Pl., vii, 26.

The form of it is pointed out in this passage:

Ignorance should shoot His gross-knobb'd bird-bolt. Marston's What you will.

See BOLT.

+BIRE. A cow-house. Saxon. It was laied to his charge the driving of kine hom to his fathers byre.

Bullein's Dialogue, 1573, p. 4.

his fathers byre. Bullein's Dialogue †To BIBLE. To pour out wine.

O BIBLE. TO POUT out wine.
On the playne grene was buylded a fountayne of enbowed worke, gylte with fine golde, and vice, ingrayled with anticke workes, the olde god of wyne called Baccus birlyng the wyne.

Hall, Henry VIII, fol. 72.

BIRTHDOM, for birthright. Formed by the same analogy as other words in dom.

Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword; and like good men Bestride our downfain birthdom. Mach., iv, 3. BISHOP. Boy-bishop, or barne-bishop. See NICHOLAS, ST.

+BISKET. The older English form of biscuit. Biscuits of various sorts were in use in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, among which that in most repute was called Naples biscuit, no doubt from the place where it was first made.

The midwifs, captain of the gang, walks first, Laden with child and Naples-bisket crust; Most reverently she steps, drest all in print, If she be not a sain the devil's int Hypocrites, 1689.

Satyr against Hypocrites, 1689.

1644. August 2nd. It is this day ordered, by reason of theise troublesome times, that there shall not be this years as formerly hath bine any eleccon dinner, at the choise of the Mr and Wardens, but oncley wine and Naples bishetts.

Accounts of the Carponters' Company in London.
In "the Accomplish'd Female Instructor" (1719), we have the following receipt for making biscuits.

ing receipt for making biscuits.

To make Queen's Bisket, Genous Bisket, &c.—Take as much fine flower, a loaf-sugar finely boaten, nine yolks and twelve whites of eggs, to a pound of flower, and a pound of sugar, corriander-seeds, and anni-seeds, of each three quarters of an ounce finely beaten and sifted; rose-water and ale-yest very new, of each two or three spoonfuls; then boil up as much fair water as will make it into a convenient thin past something like batter; take it up with a spoon or ladle, and drop it on fine paper, on which fine sugar is strewed, or put it into tin coffins four or five inches long, and an inch and a half broad, and put them into an oven not too hot; and when sufficiently baked, take them out and lay them on a paper to cool; after that, harden them in a stove or warm oven, to keep long: and thus you may make Gosous-biske!

SOCRNO. See REZONIAN.

BISOGNO. See BEZONIAN.

+BISSE. A description of fine silk. frequently mentioned in the mediaval writers.

When thou in triumph didst through Paris ride?
Where all the streets, as thou didst passes along,
With arras, bizes, and tapestry were hung. Draytes.
BISSON. Blind. The old copies of Shakespeare's Coriolanus have beesome. Skinner has it under beesen; and calls it a very common Lincolnshire word. Ray has it bisen'd, among his north country words. Skinner derives it from by, for beside or without, and sin, a Dutch word signifying sense: the sight being the most excellent sense, but this is mere conjecture. [There can be no doubt about the derivation or correct form of this word. It is the Anglo-Saxon bisen, blind.]

What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character?
Cor., is, 1. of this character f

Cor., ii

Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames

With bisson rheum.

Hem. ii

In the following passage we have bisme, which comes very near the old reading of Coriolanus, and is evidently a form of the same word, whether more or less corrupt than bisson I cannot at present determine.

It cost thee nought, they say it comes by kind, As thou art birms, so are thy actions blind Mirror for Magist., p. 478.

+BITE. To grieve. Malè habet virum. It grieveth him, it biteth him. Terence in English, 1614

+To BITE was also used in the sense of to cheat.

He shall not have my maiden-head He shall not nave my in I solemnly do swear; I solemnly do swear; But I'll bite him of a portion,
Then marry with Balph my dear.

Love in a Barn, an old Ballad. Many a poor German hath been bit by an ordinary or his taylor, after this manner; they have suffered the poor wretch to run in debt, made him an extravagant bill, and then arrested him, and so forced him to pay A Journey through England, 1724. their demands

To BITE THE EAR was once an expression of endearment.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest. Rom., ii, 4 In that passage it is ambiguous, but the following explains it:

Thou hast witch'd me, rogue; take, go.
Slave, I could bite thine ear.
Away, thou dost not care for me! B. Jon. Alch., ii, 3. Sometimes bite is used alone in a similar sense :

similar sense:

Bare rogue in buckram, let me bite thee.

Gobtins, O. Pl., x, 147. To BITE THE THUMB AT A PERSON. This was an insult. The thumb in this action represented a fig, and the whole was equivalent to a fig for you, or the fice; as appears by the follow-Ing passage.

Behold next I see Contempt marching forth, giving me the fice, with his thombe in his mouth.

Lodge's Wil's Miserie, 1596.

Hence in Romeo and Juliet. I will bits my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them if they bear it.

Dags and pistols! To bite his thumb at me! Wear I a sword

To see men bits their thumbs?

Rendolph, Muses' L. Glass, O. Pl., ix, 220.

The no less disrespectful to bits the sail of your thumb, by way of seorn and disdein, and drawing your nail from between your teeth, to tell them you value not this what they can do.

Rules of Civility, transl. from French, 1678, p. 44.

†BITTER. A seaman's term, and we believe still in use.

Delice Sthi in use.

Had not God in his wisdoms stayd it, by putting it in the mind of some of our men to let full an anchor, which being done, the tide running very strong, brought our ship to so strong a bitter, that the fast which the Portugals had upon us brake.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

BITTER-SWEET, or SWEETING. An apple so called, which furnished many allusions to poets.

Thy wit is a very little sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Hom., ii. 4. Do but remember these cross capers then, you bitter seest one.

W. Till then shietly ou biller-sweel one.

Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 373.

What in displeasure gone!

And left me such a biller-sweet to gnaw upon?

Fair Em., 1631.

+BITTOUR. The bittern. This form of the word is common in the old writers.

Where hawks, sea-owls, and long-tongued bittours bred.

Chapman's Odys., v.

+BLACK BAGS appear to have been formerly used by the pleaders in the law courts.

If souldiers may obtain four terms of war, Muskets should be the pleaders, pikes the bar;

For black-bags, bandeliers, jackets for gowns. Angels for fees, we'll take no more crackt crowns.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

+BLACK-BOY. The sign of a celebrated tavern in Southwark, mentioned in popular writers of the 17th cent.

Juliar writers of the 1/th cents
But meddle not with any fray.
I charge you keep out of harmes way;
For Jove, and all his houshold a'ter
Him, yesterday went crosse the water,
To th' signe of the Black-boy in Southwarke;
To th' ord'nary to find his mouth worke;
Where he intends to fuddle's nose
This fortnight yet, under the rose.

Homer a la Mode, 1665.

Melancholy. +BLACK-CHOLER. Bilis atra. Melancolie. Melancholie: blacke choller

Nomenclator, 1585. †BLACK COAL. The phrase in the following example is a mere adaptation of the Latin atro carbone notandum. to be condemned.

The setting forth and description of iii. arrant honest women, which for lewdnesse wer famous, and for wicked lyfe worthie to bee noted with a black coale. Painter's Palace of Pleasure, ii, 89.

+BLACK-COAT. This term became applied to a clergyman at a rather early period.

Suppose we should bestow upon a poor low thinking black-coat, one of our best forms, such as follows; it is five to one he would commit some ecclesisatical blunder or other, in setting his name too near.

Eachard's Observations, 1671, p. 176.

+BLACK DOG. To blush like a black dog, i. e., not to blush at all.

Faciem perfricuit. Hee blusheth like a black dogge, hee hath a brazen face.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 557.

BLACK FEATHERS. Large black feathers were fashionable in men's hats about 1596.

But he doth scriously bethinke him whether Of the gul'd people he bee more esteem'd, For his long cloake or for his great blacks feather. Sir J. Davis, Epigr. 47. Besides, this muse of mise, and the blacke feather.

Grew both together in estimation,
And both, growne stale, were cast away together.

Ibid., Ep. 48. Both in Cons. Lit., viii, p. 126.

BLACKS. Mourning.

But were they false
As o'er-dy'd blacks. W. Tale, i, 2. That is, "false as old cloths of other colours dy'd black."

Colours dy'd black."

Blacks are often such dissembling mourners,
There is no credit given to't, it has lost
All reputation by false sons and widows,
I would not hear of blacks. Massing, Old Law.
I'll pay him, when he dies, in so many blacks.
Mad World, O. Pl., v, 333.
Sho'd I not put on blacks, when each one here
Comes with his cypresse, and devotes a teare.
Herrick on the death of H. Lawes, Works, p. 341.
He who wears blacks, and mournes not for the dead,
Do's but deride the party buried. Ibid., p. 379.
We'll like some gallants
That bury thrifty fathers, think't no sinne
To weare blacks without, but other thoughts within.
Heyne Engl. Trav. last lines.
We'll such a such a

Such vulgar spice, and gums, enhalme not thee, Thou art the theume of truth, not poetry. ('arce's Poems, 1642. Carro's Poems, 1 tHence then with folded armes, ecclipsed eyes,
And low imprison'd groans, meck cowardise.
Urge not with oars death that in full saile comes, Urge not with oars death that in run sair comes, Nor walk in forestald blacks to the dark tombs. But rather then th' eternal jaws shall gape, Gallop with Curtius down the gallant hap. Fletcher's Poems, p. 211.

†These loyal mourners that attend its fall, And go in blacks unto his funeral.

Naps upon Parnassus, 1658. BLACK-FRIARS, in the reign of Elizabeth, was celebrated for three things; the theatre, a number of puritans, and the sale of feathers; the two latter professions being often united in the same persons.

This play liath beaten all young gallants out of the feathers. Black-friars liath almost spoil'd Black-friars for feathers. Induc. to Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 11. That is, the satire of the theatre in Bl. Fr. has almost spoiled the trade of the feather-sellers there.

Or a feather-maker in the Friers, that are of the fac-B. Jons. Barth. Pair, v, 5. tion of faith tion of faith.

B. Jons. Barin. Pair, v, v.
A whoreson upstart, apocryphal captain,
Whom not a puritan in Black-Friers will trust
So much as for a feather.

B. Jon. Alckym., i, 1. and Mrs. Bird the feather-man, Flowerdew, in Randolph's Muses' Looking Glass, are said to be two of the sanctify'd fraternity of Black-Fryars. O. Pl., ix, 172. The theatre of Black-Friars was, in Charles I's time at least, considered as being of a higher order and more respectability than any of those on the Bank-side. Thus Shirley, in a prologue addressed professedly to those of the latter class, tries to make the auditors in the pit behave as if they were at Black-Friars; that is, decently and well.

OCCENTLY and well.

You squirrels that want nuts, what will you do?

Pray do not crack the benches, and we may,

Hereafter fit your palats with a play.

But you that can contract yourselvers, and sit

As you were now in the Black-Fryers pit,

And will not deaf us with leud noise and tongues,

Because we have no heart to break our lungs.

Will pardon. Shirtey's Six New Playes, publ. 1653.

The BLACK-GUARD. Originally a jocular name given to the lowest menials of the court, the carriers of coals and wood, turnspits, and labourers in the scullery, who all followed the court in its progresses, and thus became observed. Such is the origin of this common term.

So the black-guard are pleased with any lease of life, especially those of the boiling-house.

B. Jons. Masq. of Merc. Vind.

Turnspits were particularly so called: I am degraded from a cook, and I fear the devil him-self will entertain me but for one of his black-onerd: and he shall be sure to have his roast burnt.

Micros., O. Pl., ix, 162.

Burton speaks of the black guard, as attached to a court, in describing the orders of devils:

Though some of them are inferior to those of their own ranke, as the blacks guard, in a prince's court.

Anatomy of Mel., p. 42.

See also Decker, as quoted by Gifford, in his B. Jonson, vol. vii, p. 250.

in his B. Jonson, vol. vii, p. 25U.

It is a faith

That we will die in, since from the black guard

To the grim sir in office, there are few

Hold other tenets.

B. J. H. Eld. Bro., v, 1.

tWhen injuttie hath played her part, vengeance leapes upon the stage, the comedie is short, but the tragedie is longer: the black gard shall attend upon you, you shall eate at the table of sorrow, and the crowne of death shall bee upon your heads, many glistring faces looking on you, and this is the feare of sinners.

Smith's Bermons, 1609.

BLACK MONDAY. Easter Monday. So called from the severity of that day, April 14, 1360, which was so extraordinary, that of Edward III's soldiers, then before Paris, many died with the cold. Stone, p. 264.

Then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last.

Mer. Venice, ii, 5. The BLACK OX HAS TROD ON HIS FOOT. A proverbial phrase, meaning to be worn either with age or care. Bailey explains it of the latter. But the following alludes to age.

She was a pretic wench, when Juno was a young wife, now crowes foote is on her eye, and the black ore helt trod on her foot.

Alas! the neatest foot that ever came
In the most superclious royall aboe,
By the black ore is often trodden lame.

G. Tooks, Anna dicata, p. 108. The black one had not trod on his or her foote. Heyro, on Tolenkam.

+BLACK-PLAISTER. An old popular plaister for wounds.

Disister for wounds.

The blacke plaister for all manner of griefes.

Take a pot of cyle clive, a part of red lead, boyle these together, and stir them with a slice of wood continually, untill it be black and somewhat thick, then take it off the fire, and pet it in a penyworth of red wax, and a pound of rozen, and set it to the fire againe, but you may not blase it and stir it; then take it off and let it stand untill it be cold, and make it in a lump. It is good for a new wound, or to staunch blood. Poure a little of it in a dish, and if it stick fast unto the dishes side, then it is enough, and preserve it to your dishes side, then it is enough, and preserve it to your use as neede requireth. The Pathway to Health, bl. !.

+BLACK-POT. At present, a black pudding is called a black-pot in the dialect of Somerset. But in the following passage it evidently means a vessel. Now should I be in love; with whom? with Toll, what's that but dole and lamentation; with Jug, what's she, but sister to a black-post? or what's Peg, good for nothing but to drive into a post? no, Capid, I defy thee and all thy genealogy!

Heywood's Love's Mistress, p. 28.

BLACKSAUNT, corrupted from black sanctus, used to signify any confused or hideous noise. See SANCTUS. BLACK.

BLACK.

The language that they speake

Is the pure barbarous blacknaunt of the Geate.

Marston, Sat. ii, 7, p. 205.

Though Geate makes no rhyme. I presume that licentious and bad writer must have written it so. He seems to mean the Getæ; if his meaning be worth guessing. He professedly scorns correct rhyming.

thand she hath leisure now,
(By tying fast her garters to a bow)
Her selfe to strangle. There she dangling hung;
At which the curre a new blacks santus sung. Heywood.

BLACK'S YOUR EYE. A vulgar phrase. not yet quite obsolete: they shall not say black is your eye, that is, they shall not find any accusation against you. It is now jocularly metamorphosed into "black is the white of +To BLANCH. To give a fair appearyour or my eye," and in this form Foote's Mrs. Cole uses it in the Minor.

I can say Mack's your eye, though it be grey;
I have commit'd at this your friend, and yon.

By F. Love's Cure, iii, I.
He is the very justice o' peace of the play, and can commit whom he will, and what he will, error, absardity, as the toy takes him, and no man say black is commit whom he will, and what we want as a substantity, as the toy takes him, and no man say black is his eye, but laugh at him.

B. Jons. Steple of Nenes, 1st intermean.

If you have a mind to rull at 'em, or kick some of their loose fiesh out, they sha' not say black's your eye, nor with all their lynt's eyes discover you.

Bird in Cage, U. Pl., viii, 233.

And then no man say black is their eye, but all is well, and they as good christians, as those that suffer them unpunished: Stubbe's Anatomic of Abuses, p. 65. See Earle, p. 278.

The vulgar do not hastily change their forms of speech. It is introduced in the Spectator, No. 79, near the end.

+BLADDERED, part. Puffed up. Thus did the Athenians, who having obtained the victory in a memorable sea-fight against the Medes, bladder's up with pride from their success herein, it caused sedition and tumultuation in that state, notcanned solition and tumultuation in that state, not withstanding the contrary endeavours of the more with the contrary endeavours of the contrary endeavours of sober to prevent it.

BLAKB, adj. Bare; naked.

See how abuse breeds blake and bitter bale.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 207. BLAME. Apparently, for blameable; blame-worthy.

In faith, my lord, you are too wilful blame.

1 Hen. IF, iii, 1. This has been thought corrupt, but the following passage shows that too blame in this sense was a current expression:

Blush, and confess that you be too too blame. Harr. Ep., i, 84.
Perhaps Potentia wanted to be blame.
Saltonetall's Magd., 1630. I find too blame twice in one page in an old play by Thomas Heywood: Y'are too blame,

And, Besse, you make me angry. Again,

The girle was much too blame. I were too blams if I should not tell thee anie thing.

Menechmus, O. Pl., i, 152.

So that the modern phrase of being to blame, is in fact a corruption; unless, as is not improbable, the other form was founded on a mistake. The consequence of the first unskilful attempts to regulate our language, was the wrong derivation of many words and phrases, and of course the corruption of them. "Too blame" is in the old copies of Shakespeare, in the last scene of the Merchant of Venice:

Sigh then to Cupid, tell him he's too blame, Not raising in my love a mutuall flame. Holiday's Technogamia, F. 3, b.

ance: to disguise.

Nor fits it, or in war, Or in affairs of court, a man employed in public care
To blanck things further than their truth, or flatter any power.

Chapman, Il., xii.

And commonly, by amusing men with a subtlety,
Bacon, Bessy xxvii.

Bacon, Bessy xxvii.

+BLANDYMENTES. Blandishments. So moch the more did he exhorte the kyng of England with letters, writynges and blandymentes, by sondrie and divers messengers, for to treate and conclude a peace.

Hall, Henry VII, fol. 18.

BLANCHER, or BLENCHER. Apparently a sporting term; whether for a person stationed to turn the game one way or another, or for a dog, having the same office, does not appear from the examples that follow, and the dictionaries are all silent. The following passage evidently alludes to it, and makes the blenchers attendants on the sport.

Which makes him overshoot all His valour should direct at, and hurt those That stand but by as blenchers.

That stand but by as blanchers.

B. & Fl. Lone's Filgr., ii, 1.

This Spanish Inquisition is a trappe so slyelie set, As into it wise, godly, rich by blanchers buse are fet, Warn. Alb. Bag., B. ix, ch. 51.

And so manie dayes were spent, and manie waies used, while Zelmane was like one that stood in a tree, waiting a good occasion to shoot, and Gynecia a blancher, which kept the dearest deere from her.

Pembr. Arc., p. 64.
And so even now hath he divers blanckers belonging to the market, to let and stop the light of the goapel.

Latimer, Serm., fol. $3 b.

latter example, connecting blanchers with a market, rather puzzles the cause. It is used twice or more in fol. 24, and still in the BLANK. The white mark in the centre of a butt, at which the arrow was aimed; here used metaphorically:

See better, Lear, and let me still remain The true blank of thine eye.

Loar, i, 4. Shakespeare has used it also for the mark at which a cannon is aimed, or rather the direct range; as we now say to shoot point-blank.

And stood within the blank of his displeasure

And stood within the blank of his displeasure For my free speech.

He has employed it also in other kindred senses, as aim, &c. See Johnson's Dict.

BLANKS. A mode of extortion, by which blank papers were given to the agents of the crown, which they were to fill up as they pleased, to authorise the demands they chose to make. No wonder they were thought oppressive.

And daily new exactions are devis'd,

As blanks, benevolence, and I wot not what.

Rick. II, ii, 1.

Further explained by a passage respecting the same king, in the Mirror for Magistrates:

Which to maintaine my people were sore pol'd With fines, fifteens, and loans by way of prest, Blank charters, oaths, and shifts not known of old, For which the commons did me sore detest.

Also, a kind of base silver money, first coined by Henry V in his French wars, and worth about eightpence.

Kersey. Mr. Gifford says, about a French livre. B. Jon., vol. v, p. 81.

Have you any money? he answered not a blanch.

Gaylon's Fest. N. p. 9.

In an old account of the moneys of Europe, a blank appears to be also a French coin. It is stated thus:

The Minte of Paris in Fraunce.
5 tornes is a blancke.
8 blanckes is a shilling.
90 shilling is a popular.

90 shilling is a pounde.

The Post of the World, 1576, 12mo, p. 86.

Blanks are also used for blank verses in the following passage:

Sir, you've in such neat poetry gather'd a kiss,
That if I had but five lines of that number
Soch pretty begging blanks, I should commend
Your forehead or your cheeks, and kiss you too.

B. & Fl. Philaster, ii, 1.

BLANKET. Shakespeare has been censured by moderns, and justly, according to our present notions, for the introduction of the low word blanket, in the following fine passage:

Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell;
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes;

Nor heav'n peep thro' the blanket of the dark. To cry hold, hold. Macketh, i, 5. But Cibber, in his Lives of the Poets (art. Davenant), very properly reminds us that, in Shakespeare's time, it was a good and local image in the theatre; a blanket being then used instead of a curtain. We might add, perhaps, for scenes also, as it is recorded, on the same authority, that sir William Davenant first introduced painted scenery.

†BLANKET-FAIR. The name given to the fair held on the Thames during the great frost in 1683-4.

Try, these hard times, how to abate the price;
Tell her how cheap were damaels on the ice.
Mongst city wives and daughters that came there,
How far a guines went at Blanket-feir.
Thus you may find some good excuse for falling.
Of your beloved exercise of railing,

Rockester's Valentinian.

†BLASED. Emblazoned?

Their idols eyes to sunbeames to compare,
Or by the rose her blased lips declare.
My mistresse must beyond their saints survive
In that unequal'd height, superlative.

Become's Poems, 1641.

BLAST, v. Shakespeare has used the word in the unusual acceptation of to suffer a blast.

Even so by love the young and tender wit Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud, Losing his verdure even in the prime, &c.

†BLATANT BEAST. The multitude.
The phrase is taken from Spenser.
Faith we are fully bent to be lords of miarule in the worlds wide heath; our voyage is to the Ile of Dogges, there where the blattant beast doth rule and raigne.
Renting the credit of whom it please.
The Returns from Pernassus, 1806.

+BLAUCHES. Blotches.

So now you are sound and lovely to looke on, you may maintaine the same for a small space; but being common, ulcers, fifth and blanches will breed upon you, like frogges and toodes in stinks pooles.

Man in the Moone, 1609.

To BLAZE. Contracted from to blazon. See Todd.

†To BLEA. To make a noise like a lamb.

The morrow when Latonaes sunne 'gan rise,
And with his light illumines mortall eyes.
When cocks did erow, and ismbes did bleat and bles,
I mounted from my couch, and put to sea.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

+BLEAK. To bleach.

Make that ivorie breat
(Now Loves soft bed whereon he play's the wanton,
And ambusheth himselfe to catch the flames
He shoots at others from thy eyes) as cold
As Scythian sands, black's with continual freezing
Into a seeming christall.
Nabbes' Hannibal & Scipio, 1637.

†BLEAKE, or BLECKE. A low German word for a town, occurring in English writers of the early part of the 17th cent.

The feast of S. Bartholomew the apostle, wee arrived at a bleake, alias a towne, an English mile from Hamburgh, called Altonagh, which is so called by the Hamburgers because it stands all-too-nigh them for their profit, being inhabited with divers tradesmen which doe hinder their freedome.

Which doe ninder their frections.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

A long Dutch mile (or almost size English) is a small towns or a blecks called Groning, belonging to the duke, in the which place I observed two things worthly of remembrance.

Bid.

BLEE. Colour: complexion. Saxon. This word, which is rather common in the old ballads, was almost entirely obsolete in the reign of Eliz., but occurs in the Pinner of Wakefield. printed 1599.

rinted 1599. And Robin, Marian she will go with thee— To see fair Bettris how bright ahe is of blee. O. Pl., iii, 43.

Also, p. 52:

I have a lovely lemman As bright of bles as is the silver moon.

It generally occurs thus joined with bright.

BLEEDING HORSES ON ST. STE-PHEN'S DAY. One of the odd superstitions of papal times, of which

But I marvell much, how it came to passe, that upon this day we were wont to let our horses blood: it is like as though St. Steven had some great government over the horses, which thing no doubt is a vine invention of man.

Sermons, fol. 376.

BLENCH, v. To start, or fly off; to flinch.

Keep your instruction

And hold you ever to our special drift,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to that,
As cause doth minister.

Would I do this?

Could man so blench?

What is 't you blench at ! what would you ask?
Speak freely.

B. # Pl. Loyal Subj., ii, 1.
Tour sister, sir, d'ye blench at that ? dye cavil.

B. # Pl. Wildg. Chase, ii, 1.

Milton has used unblench'd for not confounded. Comus. 430.

BLENCH, s. From the verb, a start, or deviation.

These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse cosmys prov'd thee my best of love.
Shakesp. Sonn., 110.

BLEND, v. To pollute or confound, from the original sense of to mix; things being polluted and confused by improper mixture.

And all these storms that now his beauty blend, Shall turn to calms, and timely clear away.

Spenser, Sonn., 63.

BLENT. Participle of blend.

The while thy kingdom from thy head is rent,
And thy throne royal with dishonour blent.

Moth. Hubbard's Tale, 1339. Also, in the sense of blinded; the confusion or hurt of the eve being blindness.

Dillioness.

Whylest reason, blent through passion, nought descry'd.

Sp. P. Q., II, iv, 7.

The eye of reason was with age yblent.

Spens.

What makes thee deaf? what hat thine eye sight blent?

Puirf. Tasso, xii, 86.

BLESS, v. To wave, or brandish. Dr. Johnson thought this sense derived from the action sometimes used in benediction.

Deficience of the state of the Fairf. Tasso, ix, 67,

A man hanged is quaintly said to bless the world with his heels, from their waving in the air when he is suspended.

And the next daye, the three theves were conveied forth, to blesse the worlde with their heeles.

Painter's Palace of Pleasure, sign B, 8.

Dr. Johnson's explanation is strongly confirmed by the following passage: "In drawing (their bow) some fet such a compasse, as though they would turn about and blesse all the field." Ascham's Toxophilus, p. 196, new edit., where the editor has a remark to the same effect.

To bless seems to be used for to secure, in the following passage:

And glauncing downs his shield, from blame him fairly blest. Spens. F. Q., I, ii, 18. This last is perhaps only an example of the old phrase to bless from, i.e., to preserve from, evil.]

thy, or turn out of my tenement; my hist landlord was a beau, forsooth, and refus'd to renew my lease, because I brought my money in a greasie leathern purse; and turn'd my neighbour Ralph out of his farm for plaistering the garden wall with cow-dung; but heaven bless us from such landlords.

The Country Farmer's Catechism, 1703.

†BLETCH, s. Blacking for shoes.

Blacke or bletch to colour the leather with, atramentum sutorium. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 152.

BLIN, v. To cease, or stop. How so her fansies stop

How so her fansies stop—
Her tears did never blin.
Romens and Jul., Supp. to Sh., i, 287.
Well noble minds in perils best appeare,
And boldest hearts in bale will never blinne.
Gazooigne's Works, 4to, D, 6.
That I gan cry, ere I blin,

Oh her eyes are paths to sin.

R. Green, in Beloo's Aneed., vi, p. 10. +BLIND. A cant term for being tipsy. It is used with others in the Workes of Taylor the Water-Poet, 1630.

+Writing was termed blind, when it was written in ink not intended to be durable.

Lettre qui blanchist, et s'efface. A blind letter that wil in short time be worne out.

+Blind manuscripts, were anonymous manuscripts.

These fantasies we finde in certaine blinde manu-scripts, without name or author, which walke under hand like the petilence in the darke. Penton's Treatise of Userie, 1612, p. 11.

+BLIND-HUGH. A personage whose history does not appear to be known. Such a one as is able and will not feast his neighbour this Christmas; may blind Hapk bewitch him, and turn his body into a barrel of strong ale, and let his nose be the spigget, his mouth the fosset, and his tongue a plug for the bung-hole. And so til next year farewell.

Poor Robin, 1716.

+BLINDLED. Mingled. Mingled. Whether that God made then those goodly beams Which gild the world, but not as now it seems: Or whether else some other lamp he kindled Upon the heap (yet all with waters blindled) Which flying round about, gave light in order To th'un-plac't climates of that deep disorder.

Sylvester's Du Bartas.

BLIND-WORM. Called also a slowworm. A little snake with very small eyes, falsely supposed to be venomous. It is the anguis fragilis of Linnæus; and much dreaded still by the common people, though perfectly harmless.

Newts and blind-worms, do no wrong! Mids., ii, 8. Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting. Marb., iv, 1. The small-ey'd slow-worm, held of many blind.

Drayton, Noah's Flood, p. 1538.

+BLINKARD. One who blinks.

Fie is the token of a stinke;
A blinkard alwayes good doth mis.
Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 288.

BLINKINSOPS. A celebrated fencer, mentioned in B. Jonson's New Inn. act ii, sc. 2. His memory rests at present on that passage only.

BLIST, for blest. This is one of the liberties thought allowable in the sixteenth century for the sake of rhyme.

And how the ground he kist Wherein it written was, and how himself he blist, Spenser, IV, vii, 46.

That he had fied, long time he never wist;
But when far run he had discover'd it,
Himself for wonder with his hand he blist.
Fairf. Tasso, xiii, 29.

It is used in the sense exemplified above in BLESS, in the following passage:

And with his club him all about so blist, And with his club nim an about so one.,
That he which way to turn him scarcely wist.

Spens. F. Q., VI, viii, 13.

See BLESS.

BLIVE, adj. Quick; ready. A contraction of bilive. The word was beginning to be disused in the time of Cartwright and Brown, who both give it to antiquated speakers.

This buse is a blive guerden. Antig., O. Pl., x, 300.

Into the ship he entreth, and as blive
As wind and wether good hope to be.

Brown, Shep. Pipe, Bel., 1.

BLIVE, adv. Quickly.

The people cried, with sundry greeing shouts,
To bring the horse to Pallas' temple blive. Surrev's Bn., B. ii. 293.

See BILIVE.

To BLOAT, or BLOTE. To dry by smoke. Latterly chiefly applied to herrings. Blotan, Saxon, meant to sacrifice or slaughter, whence November was, at one period, called Blot-monath, or slaughtering month, because the animals were then slaughtered, which were to be salted and dried for winter provision. But, as these meats were chiefly dried in the smoke, when the Saxon word was forgotten, to blote was supposed to denote that operation: and thus the change of meaning evidently crept in.

And dry them like herrings with this smoak; For herrings in the sea are large and full, But shrink in bloating, and together pull.

Sylvester's Tobacco balt., p. 101.

I have four dozen of fine firebrands in my belly, I have more smoke in my mouth than would blote a have more smoke in my mouth than would cooke a hundred herrings. By F.R. ist. Frin., ii. Three pails of sprats, carried from mart to mart, Are as much meat as these, to more use travel'd, A bunch of blosted fools! Bid., Q. of Cov., ii, 4. To bloat, now means to swell up, and comes probably from blow (Johnson); and to this we must perhaps refer the "bloat king" in Hamlet, iii, 4. It is singular enough that two opposite senses should thus have belonged to one word. Smoke-dried, and therefore shrunk; or puffed and swollen.

BLOAT-HERRING. A herring so dried. Skinner and Minshew puzzle about the etymology; but to me it seems clear that it arose as above mentioned.

Ley you an old courtier on the coals, like a sausage or a bloat-herring. B. Jon. Mass. of Mer., v, 429. Why you stink like so many bloat-herrings. newly taken out of the chimney. 1b. Mas. of Augura, vi, 121. Make a meal of a bloat-herring, water it with four shillings beer, and then swear we have dined as well as my lord mayor. Match at Mids., O. Pl., vii. 3.13 formed.

A BLOCK, s. The wooden mould on which the crown of a hat is formed.

Mine is as tall a felt as any this day in Millan, and therefore I love it, for the block was cleft out for my head, and fits me to a hair.

Housest Wh., part 2d, O. Pl., iii, 360.

Hats alter as fast as the turner can turne his blockr.

Emph. Empl., O. 4. Hence it was also used to signify the form or fashion of a hat:

A grave gentleman of Naples, who having bought a hat of the newest fashion and best block in all Italie, &c.

Euph. Engl., O, 3 b.

Is this same hat
O' the block passant?
B. Jons, Steple of News, i. 2. That is, "of the current fashion." You shall alter it to what form you please, it will take say block.

Ibid., Cynth. Rev., i, 4. Also for the hat itself:

The new your block head be covered with a Spanish block.

Beaum, and Fl. Martial Maid.

A pretty block Sextinus names his hat,
So much the fitter for his head by that.

Witt's Recreations, Epigr. 456.

A flat-crowned block was fashionable about 1596, when Sir J. Davis's Epigrams were printed.

And still the newest fashion he doth get,
And with the time doth change from that to this.
He weares a hat now of the fat-crowne blocke
The treble ruffes, long cloake, and doublet French.

Ep. 22, in Cens. Liter., viii, 24. I still the newest fashion he doth get

Hence that excellent interpretation of a speech of Lear, which had puzsled the earlier commentators:

This a good block?—
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with felt.

Lear, iv, 6. The whole of Mr. Steevens's remark ought by all means to be cited, as affording an admirable specimen of judicious illustration. "Upon the king's saying I will preach to thee, the poet seems to have meant him to pull off his hat, and keep turning it and feeling it, in the attitude of one of the preachers of those times (whom I have seen represented so in ancient prints), till the idea of felt, which the good hat or block was made of, raises the stratagem in his brain of shoeing a troop of horse with a substance as soft as that which he held and moulded between his hands." It should be rather, "the †BLORE. A blast of wind, or gale. very same."

BLONCKET, adj. Gray. Used by Spenser as an epithet for liveries or coats, and explained in the original notes "gray coats." I believe it meant at first whitish, for I find in Coles' Dictionary "a blanquet pear, pyrum subalbidum." If so, it is from the French blanc. Kersey also has blankers, white garments.

Our Hoschet liveries bene all to sadde
For thilk same season, when all is yeladde
With pleasaunce. Shep. Kal., May, v, 5. I have not met with the word elsewhere. BLOOD was sometimes used for disposition, thus:

. Strange unusual blood, When man's worst sin is he does too much good. Tim. A., iv. 2. Also in the very difficult passage of the opening of Cymbeline, of which perhaps this is the most intelligible reading:

You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, they are courtiers,
Still seem as does the king's.

Cym.

i. e., our dispositions no longer obey the influences of heaven; they are courtiers, and still seem to resemble the disposition the king is in.

TA blood, in the sense of a highmettled young man, was also in use at a rather early period.]

†To which effect we have sent a generall challenge. To all the youthfull bloods of Africa. To all the youthful bloods of Africa,
That whosoever (borne of princely stem)
Dares foote the bosome of this desert ile,
(The stage where lie performe this lovers prize)
And by his wit and active policie,
Wooe, win, intice, or any way defeate
Me of my charge, my daughters of their hearts,
Shall with their loves weare my imperiall crowne
Wreath of their conquest. Day's lie of Guils, 1633.

BLOOD-BOLTER'D. Stained blood; from a bolter or sieve, whose blood issues out at many wounds, as flour passes through the holes of a sieve. Warburton. Or sprinkled with blood, as if with meal from a boulter. as Johnson explains it.

For the blood-boulter'd Banquo smiles upon me. Macb., iv, 1. [See Collier's Hist. D. P., iii, 56.]

+BLOODY-NOSE. A term which seems to show that boxing was an earlier accomplishment than is generally supposed.

Jud. What Ingenioso, carrying a vinegar bottle about thee, like a great schole-boy giving the world a blondy nose?

The Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

Sometimes used by Chapman simply for the air.

Like rude and raging waves roused with the fervent blors Of th' east and south winds.

Chapman, R., ii, 122.

+To BLOW. To blow upon, to speak disparagingly of, to criticise.

CHEPATRAGING! Y OI, to CTITICISE.

Peace, the king approaches: stand in your ranks orderly, and shew your breeding; and be sure you blow thing on the lords. Cartwright's Royall Slave, 1651. I thank you for the good opinion you please to have of my fancy of trees: it is a maiden one, and not blown upon by any yet; but for the merits you please to ascribe unto the author, I utterly disclaim any, specially in that proportion you please to give them me.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

To blow, to betray, to make known. As for that, says Will, I could tell it well enough, if I had it, but I must not be seen anywhere among my old acquaintance, for I am blows, and they will all betray me.

History of Colonal Jack, 1793. Nay, clownes can say, this parson knowes enough, But that his language does his knowledge blough. Whiting's Albino and Bellama, 1638.

To blow up, to cause to swell. But who had blowne her wp, and made her swell? Mother, quoth she, in truth I cannot tell.

Pasquil's Night-Cap, 1619. BLOWN. Swollen, or tumid; inflated. No blown ambition doth our arms incite. Lear, iv, 4. How now blown Jack, how now guilt? 1 Hen. IV, iv, 2. Proud, insolent:

I come with no blown spirit to abuse you.

B. 4 Fl. Mad Lover.

†BLOW-BASTED. Flogged.

The earle of Urenia asked one that came from the court, what was reported of him there? who answered: Neither good nor bad, my lord, that I could heare. With that the earle commanded him to be thoroughly blose-batted and beaten: and then afterward gave him fiftie duckets, saying, Now maist thou report of Urenia both good and bad.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

+BLOW-BOOK. A book with indelicate pictures.

Last Sunday a person did pennance in the Chapter-house of St. Paul's, London, for publickly shewing in Bartholomer Fair a book called a bloze-book, in which were many obscene and filthy pictures: the book was likewise burnt, and the person paid costs.

Post Man, 8 June, 1708.

BLOW-POINT. A childish game; consisting perhaps of blowing small pins or points against each other. Probably not unlike push-pin.

How he played at blow-point with Jupiter, when he was in his aide coats; and how he went to look birdsnests with Athous.

Lingus, O. Pl., v, 167. Also Donne's Poems, 1719, p. 119.

Dust-point seems to have been a similar game.

See Dust-Point.

Nee DUST-POINT.

Nuces relinquere: to leave boyes play, and fall to blow-point. Withals Dictionarie, ed. 1634, p. 568.

180 master Amoretto plays the gull in a piece of a parsonage; my master adorns his cupboard with a piece of a parsonage; my mistress, upon good days, putson a piece of a parsonage; and we pages play at bloepoint for a piece of a parsonage: I think, here's trial enough for one man's gifts.

Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

BLOXFORD. Apparently a jocular and satirical corruption of the name of Oxford, quasi Block's-ford, or the ford of Blockheads. This is intimated in the following lines of Bp. Corbet:

Corbet:
What was the jest d'ye ask? I dare repeat it,
And put it home before you shall entreat it;
He call'd me Bloxford-man, confess I must
'Twas bitter; and it grieved me in a thrust
That most ungrateful word Bloxford to hear,
From him whose breath yet stunk of Oxford beer,

Poems, p. 67, to Lord Mordant.

In Healy's "Discovery of a New World," imitated from Hall's Mundus alter et idem, Blocksford is made the capital of the region Fooliana.

Entering Fooliana, came without resistance unto Blocksford, otherwise called Duns-ton, the chiefe citic of the land. The intended allusion seems to be strengthened by a particular notice of the number of spires and bells contained in it. Ibid., p. 179.

BLUE was a colour appropriated to the dresses of particular persons in low life.

88

1. It was the usual habit of servants. You proud variets, you need not be ashamed to wear blue, when your master is one of your fellows.

Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii. 389.

The other act their parts in bless coates, as (if) they were their serving men. Decker's Belman, sign. E, S. Hence blue-bottle is sometimes a term of reproach for a servant. O. Pl., v. 6. And a serving-man in B. Jonson says, "Ever since I was of the blue order." Case altered, i. 2. About 1608, when Middleton's Comedy of A Trick to Catch the Old One was produced, the blue coats of servants appear to have been changed for cloaks, such as were worn by the gentry also at that time. Thus, in that comedy:

There's more true honesty in such a country serving man, than in a hundred of our clock companions. I may well call 'em companiona, for since blue ceats have been turned into clocks, one can scarce know the man from the master.

Act ii, Anc. Drama, V, p. 151.

B. Jonson introduces New-Yeares-Gift.

In a blew coat, serving-man like, with an orange, &c.

Mask of Christmas.

2. Also of beadles: whence they also came in for the appellation of blue bottle :

Dive collie:

I will have you as soundly swinged for this, you blubbille rogue!

2 Hen. IV, v, &
And to be free from the interruption of blue beadles, and other bawdy officers. Middleton's Mich. Term.
The whips of furies are not half so terrible as a blue coat.

Microcosmus, O. Pl., ix, 161.

I know not whether it means servants, or officers of justice, in the following passage; probably the latter:

Come a velvet justice with a long Great train of blow-coats, twelve or fourteen strong.

Bonne, Sat. i, 31.

3. It was also the dress of ignominy for a harlot in the house of correction, &c.

Your puritanical honest whore sits in a blue gown.—
Where!—do you know the brick house of castigation?

Hon. Whore, O. Pl., iii, 468.

Lam. Teare not my clothes, my friends, they cost more than you are aware.

Bedell. Tush, soon you shall have a blew gown; for these take you no care. Promos and Cass., iii, 6.

BLURT. An interjection of contempt.

Shall !!—then blurt o' your service! O. Pl., iii, 314.

Blirt! a rime; blirt, a rime! Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 21.

Blurt, Murt! there's nothing remains to put thee to pain now, captain. Puritan, iv, 2, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 610. Blurt, master constable, or a fig for the constable, seems to have been a proverbial phrase; it is the title of a play written by Thos. Middleton, and published in 1602. Hence I suppose it is that Ben Jonson makes one of his characters call a constable "old Blurt." Tale of a Tub, ii, 2. In O. Pl., v, 420, we have "Blurt, master gunner!"

To BLURT AT. From the former. To hold in contempt.

And all the world will blurt and scorn at us.

Edw. III, iv, 6. But cast their gazes on Marina's face, While ours was blurted at.

Pericles, iv, 4, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 115.

To blurt out, still remains in modern usage, and signifies much the same as to spurt or sputter out hastily.

BLUSHÊT. (Apparently peculiar to B. Jonson.) See Todd. One who blushes.

+BOARD. The term board answers to the modern table, but it was often moveable, and placed on trestles.

+BOAST. The following is an early example of a well-known proverb. Aureos montes policeri: great boast, small roste. Withal's Dictionarie, ed. 1634, p. 553,

To BOB. To cheat, or obtain by cheating. DUD. 10 CHERL, OF ODIAIN DY CHERING. He calls me to a restitution large Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him. Oth., v, l. Let him be bob'd that bobs will have; But who by means of wisdom hie Hath sav'd his charge?—It is even I. Pembr. Arcad., lib. ii, p. 203. Disgrace me on the open stage, and bob me off with me'er a penny. Hog balk lost his Pearl, O. Pl., vi, 886.

We should now say, in familiar lan-guage, "fob me off." BOB, s. A taunt or scoff.

Off. takes (his mistress by) the bitter bob.

Pletch. Purp. Is., vii, 95.

He that a fool doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, altho' he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob. As you like it, ii, 7.
I have drawn blood at one's brains with a bitter bob.

Alex. and Campappe, O. Pl., ii, 113.

To give the bob was a phrase equivalent to that of giving the dor. See DOB.

C. I guess the business. S. It can be no other But to give me the bob, that being a matter Of main importance. Massing. Maid of Honour, iv, 5.

†To BOB. To thump. The s. a bob, or thump, was also used.

In an envious spleene, smarting ripe, runes after him, fals at fistic cuffes with him; but the fellow belaboured the foole cunningly, and got the fooles head under his arme, and bob'd his nose. Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

Suppose then you see Francion enter into the school, buppose tien you see reaction cated into the same has lyings hanging out of his breeches down unto his shoes, his gown wrapped about him, his book under his arm, undertaking to give a fillip to one, and under his arm, unuertaams a bob unto an other.

Comical History of Francion, 1655. +BOB, s.

OB, s. A jewel or drop for the ear.
Rich bobbs upon her ears are hung,
To stop the clamour of her tongue.
The London Ladies Dressing Room, 1705.
The poor wench loves dy'd glass like any Indian, for a diamond bob I'd have her madenhead if I were a man and she a maid Cowley, Cutler of Coleman Street, 1663. †BOB, s. Appears, in the following passage, to mean a kind of worm.

Or yellow bobs turn'd up before the plough,
Are chiefest baits, with cork and lead enough.

Lawson's Secrets of Angling, 1652.

+BOBBING-JOAN. The name of a very old dance.

Strike up Bobbing Joan,
Or I'll break your fiddle. The Hop Garland, 1756.
BOCARDO. The old north gate of Oxford, taken down in 1771. There is a good view of it in the first number of Oxonia Antiqua Restaurata. Whether it was originally so named, from some jocular allusion to the Aristotelian avilogism in Bocardo, I have not discovered.

It was used as a prison; and hence the name was sometimes made a general term for a prison.

Was not this [Achab] a seditious fellow?—Was he not worthy to be cust in bocardo or little-case? Latimer, Serm., fol. 105. C.

Bocardo was the last prison of that good man himself, before his shameful murder; to himself a glorious martyrdom. Its downfal was celebrated by Oxford wits, both in Latin and English.

nd English. One say ...,
Num jam
Antiqui muri venerabilis umbra *bocardo*Visitur Oxonii ? Salve hand ignobile nomen !

Dialogus in Theatr., 1778.

The other, Rare tidings for the wretch whose ling'ring score Remains unpaid, bocardo is no more. Newsman's Verses, 1779, by Warton.

Bocardo, as a logical term, for a particular kind of syllogism, occurs in Prior's Alma, canto 3.

striber are many in London now adaies that are be-sotted with this sinne, one of whom I saw on a white horse in Fleet street, a tanner knave I never look to who with one figure (cast out of a schollers studie for a necessary servant at bocardo) promised to find any man's oxen were they lost, restore any man's goods if they were stolne, and win any man love, where or howsoever he settled it. Lodge's Incurnate Devile, 1596.

BOCKEREL, or BOCKERET. A longwinged hawk. Dict. The family name of Bocket is perhaps a contraction of Bockeret.

BODE. Obsolete preterite of to bide. Never, O wretch, this wombe conceived thee, Nor never bode I painful throwes for thee. Ferrex and Porrex, O. Pl., i, 141.

BODGE, v. Probably the same as to budge; from bouger, Fr.

With this we charged again, but, out alas! We bodg'd again. 2 Hen. VI. i. 4. Dr. Johnson, in his note on the passage, considers it only as budge misprinted; in his Dictionary, as probably corrupted from boggle. Mr. Malone, having seen bodgery for botchery, thinks it may be for to botch: but the sense evidently points rather to the interpretation here given.

BODGE, s. Ben Jonson has a bodge of oats, for some measure of them.

Oats, for some measure of hay.

To the last bodge of oats, and bottle of hay.

New Ins., i, 5.

BODKIN. A small dagger.

When he himself might his quietus make

Ham., iii, l. In the margin of Stowe's Chronicle, edit. 1614, it is said that Cæsar was slain with bodkins.

The cheef woorker of this murder was Brutus Cassius with 260 of the senate all having bodkins in their sleeves. Serp. of division, prefixed to Gorboduc, 1590.

If it is quoted rightly, the author made two Romans into one.

Chaucer save the same :

With bodkins was Casar Julius Murder'd at Rome of Brutus Cassius.

Cens. Liter., ix, 369. BODKIN, CLOTH OF. A species of rich cloth. A corruption of BAUDKIN, which see.

Or for so many pieces of cloth of bodkin,
Tissue, gold, silver, &c. Mass. City Madam, ii, 1.
Cloth of bodkin or tissue must be embroidered;
As if no face were fair that were not powdered and painted.
B. Jons. Disc., vol. vii, p. 88.

As if no face were B. Jons. Disc., ...
C. Sir, I have a sute to you.

Ant. Is it embroidered sattin. sir, or scarlet?
Yet if your business do hold weight and consequence, I may deserve to wear your thankfulness
In tissue, or cloth of bodkin. Ermines are for princes.

Shirley, Doubt! Heir, act iii, p. 31.

Cleas O. Pl., ix,

See Muses' Looking Glass, O. Pl., ix, 197.

BODRAGS. Evidently for bordrags or bordragings: border incursions.

No wayling there nor wretchedness is heard— No nightly bodrags, nor no hue and cries. Spens. Colin Cl., v. 815.

See BORDRAGING.

†BODY. The popular oath or exclamation, body of me, is found in old authors.

8.

Oh, the bodye of me
What kaytyves he those?

Play of Wit and Science, p. 7.

Body of me; I was unkinde I know, But thou deserv'st it then; but let it goe. Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631. Capt. Body of me, nor no better preferment. Marmyon, Fine Companion, 1633.

†BOG. Petulant, arrogant.
The cuckooe, seeing him so bog, wart also wondrous wrothe.
Warner's Albions England, 1592.

†A BOG, was used as an emblem of softness or tenderness.

Car. I will not raile at you, but I will cudgell you, and kicke you, you man of valour.
Cap. Hold as thou art a man of renowne, thou wilt strike thy foote into mee else, my body is as tender as a bogg.

Marmyon, Fine Companion, 1633.

BOGGLER. One who boggles; but in the following passage a vicious woman, one who starts from the right path:
You have been a boggler ever. Ant. and Ct., iii, 11. Johnson in his Dict. explains it a doubter, a timorous man; but it is evidently addressed not to Thyreus but to Cleopatra. BOHEMIAN-TARTAR. Perhaps gipsy; or a mere wild appellation, designed to ridicule the appearance of Simple in the Merry W, of Windsor, act iv, sc. 5. The French call gipsies Bohemians, and the Germans Tartars and Zigeuners, so that the term might be thus compounded. See the note on the passage, edit. 1778.

+BOIGHROPE. A nautical term.

Make ready th'anker, ready th'anker hoe, Cleere, cleere the boighrops, steddy, well steer'd so; Taylor's Workes, 1630. +BOILING-BOOT. An instrument of torture mentioned in Field's Amends for Ladies, 1618. +BOILING-HOUSE. An eating-house.

See the History of Colonel Jack, 1723.

+BOISTOUS. Rough, coarse.

Gette, hypht Gagates, and is a boystons stone, and never the les it is precious.

It is contrary to fendes,—helpeth for fantasies and ayenste vexacions of fendis by night.—And so, if so boystus a stone dothe so great wonders, none shuld be dispisid for foule colour without, while the vertu that is within is unknowe. Glassille, by Trevisa, xvi, 49.

To BOLD. For to bolden, or render bold. Embolden is the word now most used.

It touches us as France invades our land, Not bolds the king. Lear, v, l. Alas that I had not one to bold me. Hycke Scorner.

BOLD BEAUCHAMP, or AS BOLD AS BEAUCHAMP. A proverbial expression, supposed by Fuller and Ray to be derived from the courage of Thomas, first earl of Warwick, of that name, who in 1346, with one source and six archers, defeated 100 Normans. See Ray, p. 218. There were however more of the name, who contributed to its celebrity. There was an old play, entitled The Three bold Beauchamps, printed about 1610. See Biogr. Dram., ii, p. 429. It is referred to in the Induction to the Knight of the Burning Pestle, B.

They're here now, and anon no scouts can reach 'em, Being ev'ry man hors'd like a bold Beauchamp. Mad World, O. Pl., v, 390.

See also O. Pl., x, 172.

Drayton derives it from the bravery of the earls of Warwick, of that name, in general.

That after of that name it to an adage grew, If any man himself advent rous hapt to shew, Bold Besichang men him term d, if none so bold as Polyolb., song zviii, p. 1007. +BOLDY. Perhaps an error of the press for boldly.

Press for Occasy.

But with their darts farre off and clamours shrill,
They him provoke: the boars sits bothy still,
Gasshing with foamy chaps his tusks most keen,
And shaking off the darts from's back is seen,
Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

+To BOLE. To drink bowls full.

Gull, bib, and sole, carouse and quaffe, Eche can in Germany. Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

+BOLE, s. A roll.

Put to two spoonfuls of rose, water, and as much salt as spice, then make it up in little long boles or roules, and butter your dish, and lay them in with a round hole in the middle.

The True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676.

+BOLE-DISH. A bowl.

It so chanced, as the boy was throwing of a bole-disk of water over his fish, sir William Davenant was going by the stall. Great Britain's Honeycombe, 1712, MS.

BOLL, v. To swell, or pod for seed. Boll, in the dictionaries explained a round stalk, is evidently only another form of bole.

And the flax, and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

Exodus, ix, 31.

In the Septuagint, τὸ δὲ λίνον σπερμ-tyena fontis, scaturigo. Source, surgeon. The veine of a fountaine: the bolling or rising up of water out of a spring.

†BOLLEYNE. Bullion.

Item, that they shall copne no manner of bolleyne, either of this realme or of Ireland, but to provide it in other countries.

Archeologia, xviii, 137.

sountries. Archeologia, xviii, 137.

Swelled; contracted from BOLN. bollen, which is the old form for Here one being throng'd bears back, all boln and red.

Sh., Rape of Lucr., suppl. i, p. 553.
Thus it appears that Mr. Malone's alteration of this word to blown, which signifies the same, contrary to all the editions, is entirely unnecesaary.

BOLŤ. A sort of arrow. Hence boltupright. Thus defined by R. Holmes: "The second is termed a bolt: it is an arrow with a round or half round bobb at the end of it, with a sharp pointed arrow head proceeding there-Acad. of Armory, b. iii, ch. 17, MS. When it has only the blunt bob, without the point, it was a BIRD-BOLT. It thus differed from a shaft, which was sharp or barbed. Hence the proverb, "To make a bolt or a shaft of a thing." Ray, p. 179. It is a mistake to say that it was "peculiarly used for the cross-bow:' as in Ivanhoe, ii, p. 20. Holmes describes also a sort of bolts having the bob or button hollow, to receive a stone or bullet, which was projected thence by fastening the bolt itself to the bow, or cross-bow. Ibid. Harl. MS., 2033.

MS., 2033.

Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing, Which the brain makes of fumes.

I bent my bolt against the bush, List'ning if any thing did rush.

Sp. Skep. Kal., Mar., 70.

We have it also in the proverb, "A fool's bolt is soon shot." See also Mids. N. Dr., ii, 2, for the exquisite beauty of the passage. The word was very common.

To BOLT, or BOULT. To sift. In this sense not obsolete; but used formerly in metaphorical senses, in which it is not now current.

is not now currence.
For refined in manners and disposition,
Such and so finely boulted didst thou seem,
Hen. V, ii, 2.

Often applied also to language and arguments:

He is ill school'd In soulted language; meal and bran together He throws without distinction. Coriol., iii, 1, Saying, he now had soulted all the floure. Spens. F. Q., II. iv, 24.

That is, had discovered all that was important. So Milton:

I hate when vice can bolt her arguments. Comus, 760. This application was probably made more current by the term of bolting used in the inns of court for disputing. See BOLTINGS.

It is beautifully applied in the literal sense, Wint. Tale, iv, 3.

BOLTING-HUTCH. According to Dr. Johnson, a meal-bag; according to Mr. Steevens, "the wooden receptacle into which the meal is bolted?" the latter interpretation is the right.

That bolting-hutch of beastliness. 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

The word was used by Milton:
To sift mass into no mass, and popish into no popish:
yet saving this passing fine sophistical boulting-hutch, yet saving this passing fine sophistical boulding-hutch, bcc.

Prose Works, vol. i, $4.

Now, take all my cushions down and thwack them
Soundly, after my feast of millers, for their buttocks

Have left a peck of flour in them; beat them carefully

Over a bolting-hutch, there will be enough

For a pan-pudding, as your dame will handle it.

Mayor of Quinh., O. Pl., xi, 158.

Its nee is hore decombed.

Its use is here described:

For as a miller in his boulting-hutch Drives out the pure meale nearly as he can, And in his sifter leaves the coarser bran. So. &c. Browne's Brit. Past, ii, 2, p, 44.

BOLTINGS. Meetings for disputation, or private arguing of cases, in the inns of court. Cowell tells us which were the bolting days:

were the cotting days:

And having performed the exercises of their own houses called boltes, mootes, and putting of cases, [80 a mootes, without any comms between] they proceed to be admitted and become students, in some of these four houses or innes of court, where continuing by the space of seven yeares (or thereaboutes) they frequent readings, meetings, boltinges, and other learned exercises.

Stowe's Survey of Lond., p, 59.

BOMAN. Said to mean, in the cant language, a gallant fellow. But certainly, in the passage of Massinger where it occurs, no such cant is to be expected, and it must be a mere misprint for Roman, according to the undoubted correction of Mr. Gifford. In the 4to. it is printed with a capital letter, which would strengthen the conjecture if it could want strengthening.

Dost thou cry now

Like a maudlin gamester after loss? I'll suffer
Like a Roman, and now, in my misery,
In scorn of all thy wealth, to thy teeth tell thee
Thou wert my pandar. City Madam, iv, 2.
The speech has rather a tragic cast than any thing of burlesque. Boman, therefore, must be supported, if at all, by some other passage.

BOMBARD. A sort of cannon.

[Properly, large machines for casting heavy stones in the attack and defence of fortified places, called also lithoboli and petrariæ; they subsequently became improved into large cannons.]

Which with our bombard, shot, and basilisk,
We rent in sunder at our entry.
Jes of Malta, O. Pl., viil, 388.
†First they planted in divers places twelve great bombards, wherewith they threw up stones of hugic waight into the ayre Knolles, Hist. of Turks, 1603. †Quoth air John Parker, I swear by my rapier, This bombard was stuff'd with very foule paper. Musarum Delicia, 1656.

Also, a very large drinking vessel, made probably of leather, to distribute liquor to great multitudes: named perhaps from its similarity to a cannon :

B CHINON:
You'd same black cloud, you'd huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. Trusp., ii, 2.
That swoln parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of anck.

I Han. IF, ii, 4.

sack.
See also Hen. VIII, v. 3.

His boots as wide as the black-jacks,
Or bombards toas'd by the kings guards.
Shirloy's Martyred Soldier.
I am to deliver the buttery in so many firkins of aurum potabile as it delivers out bombards of bouge.

B. Jons. Masque of Merc. Find.

The latter passage, among others, serves to show that it was not a barrel. as some have conjectured.

BOMBARD-MAN. One who carried out liquor.

92

With that they knock' hypocrisic on the pate, and made room for a bombard-man, that brought bouge for made room for a some a country lady or two.

B. Jon., Love Restored, a Masque.

BOMBARD-PHRASE is used by Ben Jonson to express the amoullas of Horace:

HOTACE:

Their bombard phrase, their foot and half foot words.

Art. of P., vol. vii, p. 173.

†Remember once
You brav'd us with your bombard boasting words.

Death of R. Barle of Huntington, 1601.

†A warrior appointed by heaven in the edge of the sword, a persecutor of his enemies, a most perfect jewell of the blessed tree, the chiefest keeper of the crucified God, &c., with other such bombardicall titles.

MRASE country according to the property of the crucified God, &c., with other such bombardicall titles.

BOMBASE, occurs sometimes for cotton:

JM BASE, OCCUPS SOMEUMES for COLLON:

Bombase or cotton: the seed swageth the cough, and is good against all cold diseases of the breast.

Langham's Garden of Health, p. 85.
†Heer for our food, millions of flow ric grains,
With long mustachoes, wave upon the plains;
Heere thousand fleeces fit for princes robes,
In Serean forrests hang in silken globes:
Heer shrubs of Malta (for my meaner use)
The fine white balls of bembase do produce. Du Bartas.
†Habillement de fustaine, ou de cotton. A garment or any attire of cotton fustion, bumbasis, or such stuffe.
Nomenclates

BOMBAST. Originally cotton; from bombax, low Latin, or bombace, Italian, or baumbast, Germ., all signifying cotton.

Sunt ibi præterea arbusta quædam ex quibus colligant bombacem, quem Francigehæ cotonem seu coton ap-pellant. Jac. de Vitriaco, i, 84. pellant.
See Du Cange in Bombax.

Bombyx must be carefully distinguished from bombax. Hence, because cotton was commonly used to stuff out quilting, &c., bombast also meant the stuffing of clothes, &c.

How now, my sweet creature of sombast. 1 Hen. IV. ii. 4. It was then the fashion to stuff out doublets; Stubbs, in his Anatomie of Abuses, speaks of their being "stuffed with four, five, or sixe pounde of bombast at least." Hence also applied to tumid and inflated language. in which metaphorical sense it is not obsolete

 All of one pound of wax, two ounces of quick brim-stone, and as much of quick line (putting thereto an ounce of the oyl of nuts) a candle be made, with a wick of bumbast, and so put into the water. Limpton's Thousand Notable Things.

To BOMBAST. To stuff out.

Is this sattin doublet to be bombasted with broken meat?

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 441.

And bombasted they were, like beer barrels, with statute marchants and forfeitures.

What's to be done now? heres a rumor spread of a young heir, gods bless it, and (the) belly bushasted with a cushion.

Webster's Appins and V., 1654. In the Palace of Pleasure, it is used in the sense of to beat, or, as is popularly said, to baste:

popularly said, to coaste:

I will so codgell and bombaste thee, that thou shalt not be able to sturre thyself.

Sign. K., 6.

†And so be bombasted the doctor, that for the space of a quarter of a yere after he was not able to lift an arrinall so hye as his bedde.

Riche, Farewell to Military Profession, 1581.

In the following passage we see how it became applied to writing: Give me those lines (whose touch the skilful ear to were me taces mose (whose couch the skilltil ear to please). That gliding slow in state, like swelling Euphrates, In which things natural be, and not in falsely wrong, The sounds are fine and smooth, the sense is full and strong: Not bombased with words, vain ticklish cars to feed, Rot boundaries with worus, van treatme ears to recom-but such as may content the perfect man to read. To flourish o're, or boundart out my stile, To make such as not understand me smile.

Taylor's Motto, 1629.

BONA-ROBA. An Italian phrase, signifying a courtesan. We knew where the sons-robus were, and had the best of them all at commandment. 2 Hes. IV, iii, 2 Wenches, sons-robus, blessed beauties, without colour or counterfeit. Min. of Inf. M., O. Pl., v, 75.

Cowley seems to have considered it as implying a fine tall figure:

I would neither wish that my mistress nor my for-tune should be a some-rose;—but as Lucretius says, Parvula, pumilio, xapíres la tota merum sal.

Essay on Greatness. The word occurs in all our old drametists.

†BONAS NOCHES. A variation in the orthography of a popular phrase taken from the Spanish. See Bonus NOCHES.

If this day smile, they'l ride in coaches,

But if it frown, then bonus noches.

Musarum Delicis, 1656.

Heartum Delicis, 1656.

BONA-SOCIAS. Good companions: not commonly used.

Tush, the knaves keepers are my bona-socias and my pensioners.

Merry Devil, O. Pl., v, 268.

Drunken Barnaby has it, more correctly, Bon Socios. Itin. 1.

BONABLE. Conjectured by Steevens to be put for banable, i. e. cursable; perhaps for bone-able, strong in the bones; or bon and able, good and able.

Diccon! it is a vengeable knave, gammer, 'tis a bon-able horson.

Gam. Gurt., O. Pl., ii, 41. able horson.

†BONE. To have a bone to pick or gnaw, i. e. to be occupied. To make no bones, to go to work without ceremony: not to hesitate.

C This is strange as God helpe me.
T. I have given them a bone to picke.
When the company was dissolved, Camilla not think-When the company was dissolved, Camilla not think-ing to receive an answere, but a lecture, went to her Italian booke, where she found the letter of Philautus, who without any further advise, as one very much offended, or in a great heate, sent him this bone to gase on. Lylie, Eughnes and his England, 1623. My maide, who shall of purpose be readie to waite for your commyng at the houre, shall make no bones to deliver you this male.

This when she and her wall-ev'd maid

This when she said, her wall-ey'd maid Made no more bones on't, but obey'd.

Homer & la Mode, 1665.

The BONE-ACH. Lues venerea.

After this the vengeance on the whole camp! or rather the bose-acke! for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket.

170. f. Cr., ii, 3.

The 4to has "Neapolitan bone-ache. †But cucullus non facit monachum—'tis not their newe bonnets will keepe them from the old boan-ack, Nask, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

BONE-LACE. Dr. Johnson has given the true origin of this word, from the bobbins being made of bone; but it may be worth mentioning, that the lace-makers still call their work "getting their bread out of the bones." This information I had from a friend in Buckinghamshire. Probably the bone bobbins were formerly more used than any others. word is now little, if at all, used.

WORD 13 NOW HILLE, II RE RII, URFUL.
Heing returned he lodged abroad, and not in the college, and left not off his sword or his boots, but made his long clock shorter, and metamorphosed his cassock into a doublet cut upon his shirt; he did wear every day a band with a bourlace on it, and had nothing of a pedant but the discourse only.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

+BONE-SETTER. A surgeon.

Oh surgeons and bone-setters, bone-setters and surgeons, all my bones, all my bones for a penny. I have not a finger nor a toe in joynt; my leggs, my thighs, my arms, my neck.

Brome's Queen & Concubins, 1659.

Scogin's Jests, p. 38. BON-GRACE. A bonnet, or projecting hat, to defend the complexion. Sometimes a mere shade for the face.

As you may perceive by his butter'd bon-grace, that film of a demi-castor. Cleveland, 1687, p. 81. Cotgrave, in the French word bonnegrace, which he explains as part of a French hood, adds, "whence, belike, our boon-grace;" as if the word was not the same, except in pronuncia-"A bon-grace, umbraculum, umbella." E. Coles.

†Umbella, Juven. umbraculum, Martial. Capitis oper-culum ad desendendum solem aut indrem compara-tum. σκιάδιον. Chapeline. A broad brim hat to keepe tum oricides. Chapeline. A broad brim hat to keepe off heat and rayne: a bone-grace. Nomenclator, 1568. †Pam. Hei day, now will these wenches wear their eyes like spectacles on their noses, and look as demurely as cows in bon-graces.

Mecknoc's Love's Kingdom, 1664. †Bongrace, Fr. A certain cover which children use to wear on their forelieads to keep them from sunburning; so called because it preserves their good grace and beauty. Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

NNY-CLABBER. An Imigh Access 1600.

BONNY-CLABBER. An Irish term for sour buttermilk. Swift uses it. See Todd, and Ash.

To drink such balderdash, or bonny-clabber.

B. Jon. New Inn, i, 1. From a preceding line, it might seem that it was beer and buttermilk together:

And that driven down
With beer and buttermilk, mingled together. Thid It being said afterwards,
The healths in usquebaugh, and bonny-clabbore.
Ford, Perk. Warb., iii, 2.

†Of the Warres in Ireland.

I prais'd the speech, but cannot now abide it, That warre is sweet to those that have not try'd it;

That warre is sweet to those that have not try'd it;
For I have prov'd it now, and plainly see't,
It is so sweet it maketh all things sweet.
At home canarie wines and Greek grow lothsome;
Here milk is nectar, water tasteth toothsome;
There, without bak'd, rost, boyl'd, it is no cheere;
Bisket we like, and bony-clabo here.

Harington's Epigrams, 1633.

BONUS NOCHES. A corruption of buenos noches, good night, in Spanish.
You that fish for dace and roches, Carpes or tenches, bonus noches.

Liuellin, Men. Mir., p. 53. Wits' Recr., i, 13, repr.

BOOK. Every kind of composition was sometimes so called. Shakespeare uses it for articles of agreement:

And again: By this our book is drawn, we will but seal, And then to horse immediately.

BOOKS. To be in a person's books; to be in favour with them. Concerning the origin of this phrase, which is not yet obsolete, many conjectures have been made. Perhaps it might not be deduced from a single circumstance, but from the union of several: thus.

1. Servants and retainers were entered in the books of the person to whom they were attached. This is perhaps the most ancient mode, and consequently the real origin of the phrase:

Alle the mynstrelles that comen before the great Chan ben witholden with him, as of his household, and entered in his bookes, as for his own men Sir J. Mandevile; cited by Farmer.

Hence it signified to be in favour:

I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Much Ado, i, 1.

2. Friends entered their names mutually in an album, or list of worthies, which each kept. This also implies favour:

We weyl haunse thee, or set thy name into our fellowskip book, with clappynge of handes. Acolastus; cited by Steer.

The whyte or album is expressly mentioned directly after.

It was certainly, as Mr. Steevens remarks, the usage of those times "to chronicle the small beer of every occurrence in table books."

3. Customers were, as in later times, in the books of those who gave them credit. This, we may presume, did not always end in favour.

When Petruchio uses it, he seems to allude to the books of arms kept by heralds 2

And if no gentlemen, why then no arms.

Polr. A herald, Kate!—O put me in thy books.

Kate. What is your crest? a coxcomb? Tame Shr., ii. Thus there were various ways of being in the books of different persons. But I do not find any instance in which it refers to being in their will, which is the interpretation some would give it.

BOOKER'S PROPHECIES. These were, according to William Lilly, "excellent verses upon the twelve months, framed according to the configurations of each month." He adds, that he (Booker) was "blessed with success according to his predictions, which procured him much reputation all over England." He died in 1667. He was bred a haberdasher, but preferred the profession of an astrologer and almanac maker.

I pos'd him in Booker's prophecies, 'till he confess'd he had not master'd his almanac vet.

Parson's Wedd., O. Pl., xi, 391.

†BOON VOYAGE. The French bon voyage.

The news that keeps greatest noise here now, is the return of sir Walter Raleigh from his myne of gold in Guiana, the south parts of America, which at first was like to be such a hopfull bom royage, but it seems that that golden myne is proved a meer chymera, an imaginary airy myne; and indeed, his majestic had never any other concept of it.

Howell's Familias Letters, 1650.

BOORD, or BOURDE, Fr. See BOURD, [and BORDE.]
And if you will, then leave your boordes.
Ld. Surrey's Poems, 4to, Sign. F. 3.

To BOORD, for to BOARD. To at-A metaphorical expression from boarding a ship; to accost; aborder, Fr. Sir Toby Belch explains it by placing it among other synonyms of accost:

You mistake, knight; accost is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Theel. N., i. 3. Whalley, editor of Ben Jonson, would change the above to bourd, with the usual zeal of a critic for a word he had newly discovered: but the alteration is not warrantable: nor is it more so in the passage of Ben Jonson which occasioned the note, (Catil., i, 4), nor indeed is any alteration wanted, since to boord often means to accost in the most modest way.

Ere long with like again he boorded me.

Spens. F. Q., 11, iv, 24.

Philautes taking Camilla by the hand, and as time served began to boord her on this manner. Euph. Engl. P., 4, b.

In the following the original metaphor is preserved:

So ladies pretend a great skirmiah at the first, yet are soorded willinglie at the last. Id. Q., 1. See Sir J. Harington, Ep., iii, 40. See also boord for boarding a ship, twice in one stanza. Mirror for Mag. p. 670. In the following, to boord seems to mean to border, or to form a boundary:

The next the stubborn Newre, whose waters gray By faire Kilkenny and Rosseponte boord.

Sp. F. Q., IV, xi, 43 BOOT. This word, in the sense of profit or advantage, is sufficiently exemplified by Dr. Johnson, and, indeed, though now confined to familiar language, is not obsolete. +BOOTING. Booty.

In the following passage it is singularly used:

Then list to me, St. Andrew be my boot,
But I'll rase thy castle to the very ground,
Unless thou open the gate.

Pinner of Wakef., O. Pl., iii, 19.

That is, so may St. Andrew bless or benefit me.

+BOOT. An instrument of torture, by which the leg was crushed, and which was much used in Scotland. a later period an instrument for tightening the leg or hand was used as a cure for the gout, and called a bootikins.

OOCIAINS.

Al your empericks could never do the like cure upon the gout the racke did in England; or your Scatch boote.

Marston, the Matrontent, iii, I. Except one day's gout, which I cured with the booti-kins, I have been quite well since I saw you.

Horace Wulpole, letter to G. Montagu, July 31, 1767. I am perfectly well, and expect to be so for a year and a half. I desire no more of my bootifins than to curtail my fits.

1 bid., letter to Cole, June 5, 1775.

BOOTS were universally worn by fashionable men, and in imitation of them by others, in the reign of Elizabeth and James the First, insomuch that Gondomar, the Spanish ambassador, pleasantly related, when he went home into Spain, that all the citizens of London were booted, and ready, as he thought, to go out of town. Fabian Philips on Purveyance, p. 384.

Such a speech more turns my high shoes strait boots.

Albumazar, O. PL, x, 163. That is, will change me from a clown into a gentleman, which was the process supposed to be going on. Spurs also were long worn, on foot as well as on horseback, insomuch that, in the last parliament of Elizabeth, the Speaker directed the Commons to come to the house without spurs.

BOOT-HALER. A robber or freebooter. From boot, profit or booty, and to hale, or draw away; a rascal.

My own father laid these London boot-kalers the catch-poles in ambush to set upon me.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 103.

BOOT-HALING. Plundering, or going on any knavish adventure.

Well, don John,
If you do spring a leak, or get an itch,
'Till ye claw off your curl'd pate, thank your night-

Till ye claw on your curi u pane, tanan your nguri walks.
You must be still a boot-haling. B. & Fl. Chances, i. 4.
Hlow, when all supply of victualls fayled them, they went a boot-haling one night to sinior Greedinesse bed-chambers.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

96 Lyth and listen, gentlemen,
That be of high born blood,
I'll tell you of a brave booting
That befell Robin Hood.
Thou, Lynus, that lov'st still to be promoting,
Because I sport about king Henries marriage;
Think'st this will prove a matter worth the carriage.
But let alone, Lynus, it is no booting,
While princes live, who speaks, or writes and teaches Against their faults, may pay for speech, and writing.
Harington's Epigrams, 1633. +BOOTY. To play, or bowl, or cry booty, appears to have meant to give people an advantage at first in order to draw them on to their loss. No envy then on to their loss.

No envy then or faction fear we, where All like yourselves is innocent and clear; The stage being private then, as none must sit, And, like a trap, lay wait for sixpence wit; So none must cry up booty, or cry down; Such mercenary guise fits not the gown.

Such mercenary guise fits not the gown.

Carteright's Royall Slave, 1631.

She divides it so equally between the master and the serving man, as if she had cut out the getting of it by a thread, only the knave makes her bowb booty and over reach the master.

Overbury's Characters. +BORDE. A joke.

Trust not their words. Nor merry bordes,
Nor knights and lords
Deceived have been.
Controvery Between a Lover and a Jaye.

BORDEL, or BORDELLO. A brothel. Fr.

From the windmill!
From the bordello, it might come as well.
B. Jons. Every Man in his H., i, 2. See Bailey's Dict. in voce.

Also crept into all the stewes, all the brothell-houses, and burdelloes of Italy.

Coryat, vol. ii, p. 175. +BORDERING. Stationed on the border.

Qui est en garnison sur les frontieres. A bordering souldier; one of the garrison appointed for the fron-tiers of a land. Nomenclator, 1585.

BORDRAGING. Ravaging on the bordera

Yet oft annoy'd with sundry bordragings Of neighbour Scots. Spens. F. Q., II, x, 63. The hollow of a cannon, &c., used in Hamlet metaphorically, much as the French use the synonymous word calibre; estimation, capacity.

I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter.

Hem., iv. 6. 2. A torment or plague; like the modern cant term: Miso, because I hunted in his grounds,

Let loose his running dogs, and bang'd my hounds,
From thence that sport I utterly forswore,
Being so unkindly crost by such a bors.

Help to Discourse, 12mo, 1667, p. 157.

It seems to bear the sense here attributed to it: but in the uncertainty of orthography, it is not impossible that the writer might mean to call Miso a boar, or savage beast. This comes more near:

There's nought distastes me more
Than to behold a rude uncivil bors. Hon. Ghost, p. 27. [It is more probable that bore is here used for a boor, or peasant, as in Chapman, Hom. Il., xi, 473 and 587.] To BORE. To wound: and hence metaphorically to torment.

At this instant He bores me with some tricks. Hon. VIII. i, 1. One that hath gulled you, that hath bored you, sir.

Lord Crom., iii, 2, Suppl. Sh., ii, 408. This sense rather confirms that assigned above to the substantive.

BORREL. Rude, or clownish. From burellus, coarse cloth; in which sense borrel is also used by Chaucer. Fr. boureau. See Du Cange in burellus.

How be I am but rude and borrel, Yet nearer ways I know. Sp. Shep. Kal., July, 1, 95. Because they covet more than borrel men.

Because they covet more than borrel men.

Gazcoigne's Works, 1587, Sign. h, 4:
†A bigg fellowe and borrell,
Of the colledge of Oriell,
Tooke many a large stride
For his bulke to provide.

#B. Poems, xvij cent.
†Let ne mee's Irish borrell speack.

Whiting's Albino and Bellama, 1638, p. 53.

BORROW. A pledge.

This was the first sourse of sheuherd's sorrow

This was the first sourse of shepherd's sorrow
That now nill be quit with bale (bail) nor borrow.
Sp. Shep. Kal., May, 1, 130. That is, neither by surety nor pledge.

See also l. 150. Also cost or expense:

Marry, that great Pan bought with great borrow, Thid., Sept., 1, 96. +BOSCAGE. A small wood; a shrubbery. From the French. Which was the pendant of a hill to life, with divers boscage: and grovets upon the steepe or hanging grounds thereof.

grounds thereof.

Mague of the Inner Temple and Grayes Inne, 1612.

BOSKY. Woody. From bosquet, Fr.

And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown

My bosky acres and my unshrubb'd down,

Rich scarf to my proud earth.

If ale him from hence, and in this bosky wood

Bury his corps.

Edw. I, by Peek. Milton has preserved the word in Comus, 1. 313. Singularly used by Shake-BOSOM. speare for wish or desire.

And you shall have your bosons on this wretch, Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart And general honour.

N. B. In the ed. of 1778, sc. 3 is marked 4 by mistake.

Secret counsel or intention: She has mock'd my folly, else she finds not

The bosom of my purpose.

B. & Fl. Wit at sev. W., ii, p. 271. It is here used as an endearing appellation, as bosom friend:

Hor. Whither in such haste, my second self?
Andr. I' faith, my dear bosons, to take solemn leave
Of a most weeping creature.
First part of Jeron., O. Pl., iii, 67.

In the next page the lady calls Andrea "gentle breast.

Dr. Johnson notices this sense of the word. See Bosom, 10.

To the BOSOM. Affectation pervaded even the superscriptions of letters in former times; they were usually addressed to the bosom, the fair bosom, &c., of a lady. Thus Hamlet to Ophelia:

To her excellent white boson, these. Ham., ii, 2. Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence; Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd. Even in the milk-white boson of thy love.

Two Gent., iii, 1.

For further illustration of this phrase, it should be mentioned, from Mr. Steevens's note on the latter passage, that women anciently had a pocket in the fore part of their stays, in which they not only carried loveletters and love-tokens, but even their money and materials for needlework; and he mentions an old lady who remembered it to be a piece of gallantry to drop letters or other literary favours there, the stays being worn very prominent. See LETTERS.

BOSOM'S-INN. A corruption of Blossom's-inn: a house in Laurence lane. the sign of which was St. Laurence within a border of flowers or blossoms. whence it took its name. See Stowe's Survey, p. 215.

But now comes in Tom of Bosom's-inn,
And he presenteth misrule.

B. Jon. Masque of Xmas, vol. vi, p. 7.

Taylor the water poet, celebrating the reception of Tom Coriat there, calls it Bossom's Inn. Laugh and be fat, p. 78.

+BOSPREET. The bow-sprit. A nautical term.

Their vice-admirall, named likewise 8. Francisco, wherein was commander Francisco Burge, had 32 peccess of ordinance as the former, and 250 men, of which were slaine 31, the aforesaid commander beeing one of the number, her maine top-mast shot by the boord, her maine-mast, fore mast, and boprest so torne, that they were unserviceable.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

BOSS, v. For to emboss, or stud.

Fine linnen, Turky cushions lose'd with pearl.

Tam. Shr., ii, 1. BOSSE, s. For a ball, or some such ornament.

OFRAMERU.
The mule all deck'd in goodly rich array,
With bells and hosses that full loudly rung,
And costly garments that to ground down hung.
Sp. Moth. Hub. T., 589.

With tinsel treppings, woven like a wave, Whose bridle rang with golden balls and basses brave. Sp. F. Q., I, ii, 13. Probably the bells and bosses were placed alternately, so that, on any motion, the collision produced the sound. Stowe tells us that Bosse alley, in Lower Thames street, was so called from "a bosse of spring water, continually running, which standeth by Billinsgate against this alley." Lond., p. 104. This bosse must have been something of a projecting pipe con-the water-workes, huge Paul's, old Charing Crosse, Strong London bridge, at Billinsgate the bosse. Good Newes and Bad Newes, by S. R., 1623. †He(Whittington)builded the library of the Grey Friers, and the east end of the Guild Hall in London, with divers small conduites called bosses, and the weast gate of London called Newgate.

veying the water [a conduit].

Store's Annales, p. 567. BOTARGO. A kind of salt cake, or rather sausage, made of the hard roe of the sea mullet, eaten with oil and vinegar, but chiefly used to promote drinking by causing thirst. fully explained in Ozell's Rabelais. B. i, ch. 3, note 2d. After quoting Cotgrave and Miege, nearly to the same purpose, Mr. Ozell quotes Du Chat, the French editor of Rabelais. to this effect:

In Provence, they call botasques the hard roe of the mullet, picki d with oil and vinegar. The mullet (muge) is a fish which is catched about the middle of December; the hard roes of it are salted against Lent, and this is what is called botasques, a sort of boudins, (puddings) which have nothing to recommend them, but their exciting of thirst.

This is right, except that boudin means properly a sausage. What we call pudding is but lately known in France. Miege savs sausages. Of Gargantua it is afterwards said,

Because he was naturally flegmatic, he began his meal with some dozens of gummons, dried neata' tongues, bolargos, sausages, and such other forerunners of wine.

B. i, ch. 21.

runners of wine.

B. i, ch. 21.

Botargo, anchovies, puffins too, to taste
The Maronean wines, at meals thou hast.

Heath's Clarastella, in Heywood's Quintess. of Poetry, vol. ii, p. 16.
HI thank you a thousand times for the Cephalonian muscadell and botargo you sent me; I hope to be shortly quit with you for all courtesies, in the interin, I am.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+BOTE-POT. A name given to the nef, one of the important drinking vessels at the ancient table, in the following passage.

Combium, Virgil. Poculum procerum concavum ad cymbes similitudinem. κίμιβιον. Vaisseau à boire à la façon d'une nasselle. À bots-pot, or a drinking pot made like a bote.

BOTTELER. The original form of the word butler, which requires no foreign derivation, but comes directly from bottle.

These citizens did minister wine as bottelers, which is their service at the coronation. Stows, Lond., p. 71. their service at the coronation.

BOTTLE OF HAY. A truss of hay: now only used in the proverbial saying of "looking for a needle in a bottle of hay," which is not understood by many who use it. Bottom longs for hay, when metamorphosed with an ass's head:

Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow. Mids. N. D., iv, 1.

Hence an old essayist says of an

When guests' horses stand at livery, he sleeps very little, fearing lest they should eat too much; but at bottle he is more secure [that is, when the hay they bottle he is more secure tenas..., eat was charged by the bottle].

Clitus's Whime., p. 109.

He begins the same essay by describing the ostler as a bottleman. See Johnson.

+BOTTOM. A ball of thread.

And lett this be thy maxime, to be greate Is when the thred of hayday is once sponn, A bottom greate woond up greatly undonn.
Sir Thomas More, a Play.

+BOTTOM-CAKE. The foundation on which the coals were raised in making a fire.

a 11re.

Cut. Your mother will rejoyce, the vision says so, sister, the vision says your mother will rejoyce; how will it rejoyce her righteous heart to see you, Tabitha, riding behind me upon the purple dromedary? I would not for the world that you should do it, but that we are commanded from above; for to do things without the aforesaid command is like unto the building of a fire without the bottom-cake.

Cookey, Cutter of Coleman Street, 1663.

+BOTTOM-LANDS. Valleys; dales.

Of my dire pangs I'le only make effusion
Mongst those steep rocks and hollow bottom-tands.

History of Don Quizote, 1675.
BOUCH, BOUGE, or BOWGE, of COURT. An allowance of meat or drink to a servant or attendant in a palace. Minsh. Kers.

In the ordinances made at Eltham, in the 17th of Henry VIII, under the title Bouche of Court, the queen's maids of honour were to have, "for theire bouch in the morning, one chet lofe, one manchet, two gallons of ale, dim' pitcher of wine." P. 164. See Gent. Mag., Sept., 1791, p. 812.
What is your business?—N. To fetch bondge of court, a parcel of invisible bread, &c.

B. Jon. Mag. of Augure.

Cotgrave has it, "avoir bouche à court, to eat and drink scot-free, to have budge-a-court, to be in ordinary at court," in Bouche.

Skelton has a long poem so entitled.

They had bouch of court (to wit, meat and drink), and great wages of sixpence by the day.

Stone's Survey of London, bl. l, 4to, sign. C c, 2.

Made room for a bombard-man, that brought bouge for a country lady or two, that fainted, he said, with fasting.

B. Jons. Masque of Love Rest., vol. v, p. 404. In Puttenham's Art of English Poesie. p. 45, it is misprinted bonche for bouche; "with a good allowance of dyet, a bouche in court as we use to B. i, ch. 27. See an old instrument of Richard II in Cowel's Law Dict.

BOUDGE, v. To budge, or move. It seems in the following passage to mean rather to start, or be moved at.

Leon. Boudge at this? Ant. Has fortune but one face? Lieut. In her best vizard, Methinks she looks but lowsily. B. & Fl. Hum. Lieut., ii, 4.

Boud has here been proposed, from the French, bouder, to pout, or be sulky; and would certainly suit well with the sense. The great authority of Mr. Gifford is also for it. See his Jonson, vol. iv, p. 222. But I do not believe that boud ever was adopted as an English word. I doubt whether even the French word existed in the time of our dramatists. It certainly is not in Cotgrave. Or if it existed (for it is in Menage), it was not in so common use as to be borrowed here. BOUGHT. A knot, or twist.

Her huge long taile her den all overspred,
Yet was in knots and many boughtes upwound.

Sp. F. Q., I, i, 15. Applied to the joint of the knee:

But bow all knees, now of her knees My tongue doth tell what fancie sees The knots of joy, the gemmes of love, Whose motion makes all graces move. Whose bought incav'd doth yeeld such sight, Like cunning painter shadowing white.

Pembr. Arc., p. 141.

Milton seems to employ it to express the sudden turns of music.

BOUGHT AND SOLD. A kind of proverbial expression, meaning to be completely disposed of.

It would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought So also in the scroll sent to the duke of Norfolk before the battle of Bosworth:

Jockey of Norfolk be not too bold, For Diccon thy master is bought and sold. Rick. 111. 1. 3. Then were the Roman empire bought and sold, The holy church were spoyl'd, and quite undone. Har. Ariost., xvi, 33.

The old spelling of to bolt. To BOULT. See to BOLT.

+BOULTER. "A boulter or a racket to play with, reticulum." Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 615.

BOULTING-HUTCH. See BOLTING-HUTCH.

+BOUND. Prepared; starting.

Him alone shee me Ready bossed for hunting,
Him she kindly greetes,
And his journey stayes.
England's Helicon, 1614.

BOUNDER. A boundary.

And lands and seas that namelesse yet remaine
Shall be well knowne, their bounders, seite, and seat.
Fairf. Tasso, xv, 80, fol. ed. of 1600.

In the octavo of 1749, it is changed to "boundaries and seat," the editor having taken upon him, as he tells us in his preface, "to make some few alterations in such stanzas as seemed necessarily to require them."

To have made the sea the only bounder of his empire.

Roller's Hist. of the Turks. fol., p. 76.

†He possesseth all the sea coast . . from the river
Mulvia, the bounder of the kingdom of Fez. Ibid.

+BOUNTY and BOUNTITH. A gift, or gratification; a fee.

or gratification; a ree.

Bury. Here is, maister doctor, foure pence your due, and eight pence my bounty; you shall heare from me, good maister doctor, farewell, farewell, good maister doctor.

The Returns from Pernassus, 1606. But who is this fellow that comes on hether? ah, ah, But who is this fellow that comes on hether? ah, ah, this in truth is Gnatho the captaines paranite. He brings with him a damsell for a bountith to Thais: good lord, a well favoured maide of a beautiful countemance; its a marveile, but I shall shame my selfe to day here with this my old cunuch even at deaths dore for age: why, this virgin surpasseth even veric Thais her owne selfe.

Torence in English, 1614.

BOURD, s., the same as boord. A jest,

Yet in fine (turning the matter to a bourd) he pardoned all the parties.

Holingshed, vol. i, sign. O, 8 b. Gramercy, Bonil, for thy company,
For all thy jests, and all thy merry bourds.

Drayt. Ect., vii, p. 1424.

BOURD, v. To jest.

I am wise enough to tell you I can bourd where I see occasion, or if you like my uncle's wit better than mine, &c.

'The Pity the's a W., O. Pl., viii, 38.

Bourd not with mine eye, nor with mine honour.

Elly's Scottish Prov., B. 67.

Eke, with ny cruel sword,

Eke, with ny cruel sword,

To part his neck, and with his head to bord;

Envested with a royal paper crowne,

From place to place to beare it up and downe.

Mirr. for Magistr., p. 866.

†Where words may win good wil,

And boldnesse beare no blame,

Why should there want a face of brasse

To bourd the bravest dame?

Turberville, Epig. and Sonnettes, 1669.

See BOORD. BOURDONASSE. A kind of ornamented staff.

Their men of armes were all barded and furnished with brave plumes, and goodly bourdonasses.

Danet's Transl. of Ph. de Comines, F f, 3 b.

Afterwards it is defined exactly, Bourdonasses were holow horse-men's staves used in Italy, cunningly painted.

1 Ibid., F f, 6 b.

Pilgrims' staves were termed burdones in low Latin. See Du Cange. Burdo. To BOURGEON. To bud, or sprout.

Fr.
When first on trees bourgeon the blossoms soft.
Fairf. Tass., vii, 76.

In a metaphorical sense, to swell and be ready to burst:

His heart was full And lifted up as high as the Mogull.

No less the Don doth burgeon, and at once
Again comes on Mambino's batter'd sconce.

Gayton, Pestir. Notes, IV, x, p. 237.

Dryden used the word. See Johnson. BOURN. A limit, or boundary; borne, Fr. Sir Thomas Hanmer recommends writing this word borne, in English also, to distinguish it from the follow-

Letters should not be known; riches, poverty, And use of service, none; contract, success Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vincyard, none.

Tem., ii, 1.
I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd. Ant. & Cl., i, 1. BOURN. A brook, or rivulet. From burn, Saxon. Whence the proper form is burn, as it is still used in the Scottish dialect. Thus.

Ne can drink of the burn, when we cannot bite of the brea, (i. e., bank.)

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me.

Song in Lear, iii, 6.

The bourns, the brooks, the becks, the rills, the prayt. Polyolb., song 1.

To gild the mutt'ring bournes and pritty rils.

Browne's Brit. Past., i, 4, p. 99.

BOURSE, or BURSE. A place of exchange, Fr. Here, the Royal Exchange:

nge:
Tattelius the new-come traveller,
With his disguised coate, and ringed eare,
Trampling the bourse's marble twice a day,
Tells nothing but stark truths I dare well say.

Hall, Sat. VI, 1, 51.

It hath——a glorious burse which they call the roial Rechange, for the meeting of merchants of all countries, where anie trafficke is to be had. Euph. Eug., Ff 1. b.

+BOURY. Wreathed?

Jove was the next; then Mars and Vulcan follow; Mercury those, and last the boury Apollo.

Hymnus Tabaci, 1651, p. 58.

To BOUSE, or BOWZE. To drink.

And in his hand did beare a boazing can.

Sp. F. Q., I, iv, 22.

i. e., a drinking vessel.

tWho surmise, if there were no playes, they should have all the companic that resort to them lye bosesing and beere-bathing in their houses everie afternoone.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

†Yet such the fashion is of Bacchus crue

The such the samon so in Bucchus crue To quaffe and borze, until they belch and spue. Well, leare it, Marcus, else thy drinking health, Will prove an eating to thy wit and wealth. Harisgion's Epigrams, 1638.

tFor drinkes, we must not like bousers carouse boule after boule to Bacchus his diety, like the Grerians, nor use smaller cups in the beginning of our banquet, more large and capacious bouls at the later end.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

BOW. A yoke for oxen. Called also an ox-bom.

As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the faulcon her bells, so man hath his desires.

BOW, or BOW-LENGTH. Was used as a measure of distances, particularly in ascertaining the distance from a mark, in giving aim.

No, no, Kate, you are two bones down the winde.

R. Greene, in Harl. Mis., viii, 384. See AIM. TO GIVE.

†BOWCERY. The butlery.

And had every night the keys of the boscory and buttery delivered, whereby he provided for bread and drink, good sait eels, sait salmon, and other sait fighes. Scogin's Jests

+BOW-DIE, v. To discolour, applied especially to the face when discoloured by drinking.

No Helicon like to the juice of good wine is, For Phobus had never had wit that divine is, Had his face not been box-dy'd as thine and mine is.

The Loyal Garland, 1686.

Now a cup of nappy ale will box-dy's a man's face, and make it look like an almanack compos'd all of holydays and dominical letters.

Poor Robin, 1738.

BOW-HAND. To be too much o' the bow-hand, to fail in any design. phrase borrowed from archery; particularly used in shooting at marks, by those who gave aim, i. e., directed the shooters about their aim. AIM. The bow-hand is the left hand. in which the bow was held.

Uber. Well you must have this wench then. Ric. I hope so,
I am much o' the bow-hand else.
B. & Fl. Coxcomb, i, 1.

BOWER. Anciently signified a chamber.

She led him up into a godly bosers.

Sp. F. Q., II, ii, 15.

And he himself seem'd made for merriment, Merrily masking both in bower and hall.

Spens. Astrophel, 1. 28.

Rosamond's bower at Woodstock was a chamber, or set of apartments, constructed for her use.

And if thou wilt lend me the Eldridge sword That lyeth within thy bowre.

Percy's Reliques, vol. i, p. 56.

As this sense of the word does not admit the usual etymology from boughs, Dr. Percy conjectures it to be derived from the Islandic bouan, to dwell. [It is of course the Anglo-Saxon bur, a chamber.] The modern sense is evidently deduced from the ancient.

2. A muscle, quasi bender, musculus flexor: from to bow in the sense of to bend. Surely not from bou, Saxon for the shoulder.

His raw bone armes, whose mighty brawned *boors*Were wont to rive steele plates, and helmets hew,
Were clene consum'd.

Spens. F. Q., I, viii, 41.

I have not found it elsewhere.

BOWL-ALLEY, or BOWLING-ALLEY. A covered space for the game of bowls, instead of a bowling-green. Strutt's Sports, ch. vii, p. 237. A bowl-alley is particularly characterised by Earle in his Microcosmographia. & xxx: which article he winds up

To give you the moral of it; it is the emblem of the world, or the world's ambition: where most are abort or over, or wide, or wrong-biassed, and some few justle to the mistress, fortune.

Bliss's Edition, p. 87. See MISTRESSE.

Whether it be in open wide places, or in close allies,— the chusing of the bowle is the greatest cunning. Country Contentm., G. Markham, p. 58.

A street adjoining to Dean's-yard, Westminster, still retains the name of the Bowling-alley. Bowling-alleys are described as common appendages to stately mansions, as well as tenniscourts, cock-pits, &c. They were also common in great towns, and the receptacles of idle and dissolute persons. See Strutt, loc. cit.

Note.—Under the name of longbowling, Strutt evidently describes the modern game of skittles. Page 237.

BOWLT, for bolt. Arrow.

We are as like in conditions, as Jacke Fletcher and his boult.

I brought up in learning, but he is a very dolt.

Damon and Pithias, O. Pl., i, 176. +BOWSIER. A butler. See BOWCERY. And to be head bowsier of the colledge as good as to be chiefe butler of England. Tom of All Trades, 1631.

+BOWT. The bought or knot. See BOUGHT.

Offendix, the button or bowt of the hatband or cap-band. Nomenciator, 1585, p. 165.

+BOWTHE. A booth.

But hys chiefest trade is to rob bonethes in a faire, or to pilfer ware from staules, which they cal heaving of the bouth. The Fraternitys of Vacabondes, 1576.

BOWYER. A maker or seller of bows. It is now hardly known, except as a family name; which has been the fate of Fletcher also, the maker of arrows. The cause is obvious. Yet Bowyer was used by Dryden, and applied to Apollo, as an archer. See Todd.

A sedan chair.

believe that the duke should be carried in by six men, to St. James's to tennis, and the k by him on foot.

Letter dated 1627. G. A process in old surgery, nstead of bleeding.

st use boxing, not to the head itselfe, but to a adjoyning, as the shoulders and breast, to at to pull back the bloud.

Barrough, Method of Physick, 1624.

An ornamental knot ing a small sculpture or carving.

sative and covenanting oath,
n mustachoes, issuing from his mouth;
a upon his chin (like a carr'd story,
-kmof) cut by the directory.

Emmof Songs. Be with you. A contraction usual in old plays.

SHOP. See NICHOLAS, SAINT. LY. Boyhood; boy's estate.

Bed the children that were past infancy two use, and the greatest boys Melirenes, as who my, ready to go out of boyery.

Sir T. North's Plutarch, p. 43.

The terrible, angry, or roaring were a set of young bucks, ike the Mohawks described by pectator, delighted to commit es and get into quarrels.

béfulaces of your phrase, believe it, sir, would on a quarrel once an hour with the terrible ness should but keep 'em fellowship a day.

Ben. Jon. Epicane, i, 4.

so young, but I have heard some speech ngry boys, and seen 'em take tobacco.

Ibid. Alchem., iii, 4.

nanners.

another nose, that will be pull'd has cher nose, that will be pun u has engry boys, for thy conversion.

B. and Fl. Scornf. Lady, iv, l.
no engry, nor no roaring boy, but a blustering Greene's Tu Qu., O. Pl., vii, 26.
a forgot my husband, an engry roarer.

Album, O. Pl., vii, 198.

1's Life of James I gives an it of their origin:

g minding his sports, many riotous demean-st into the kingdom; divers sects of vicious going under the title of roaring boys, bra-reysters, &c., commit many insolencies; the swarm, night and day, with bloody quarrels, heads fomeated, &c.

JB. A quarrel, or petty broil. ty brobble will undo us all. Tit. Andr., u, 1. BBLE, v. From the noun, to the Lucio, sir, that sar'd Vitelli?

I indeed, sir, I did never brable.

B. J. Fl. Love's Care, ii, 2.

mrds molest the street and fall to brabling.

en the malefactors down.

Ibid., iii, 5.

A word proposed by Dr. m to be read, in the difficult e in Cymbeline which is sub-I know no instance of the the word, otherwise the con-iecture is striking; and the affectation of that time was like enough to present Shakespeare, in some place or another, with the Greek word Boa Belov Anglicised.

O this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a brabe;
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk. Cym., iii, 3. The old edition reads babe, which is entire nonsense. Hanmer reads it bribe: and Warburton bauble, which in old spelling was bable. Brabe or bribe seems required by the sense. Mr. G. Chalmers proposes babee, the northern term for a halfpenny, and speaks very contemptuously of the commentators for not adopting it: but I fear the general sense of the passage will not permit us to receive it. See his Glossary to Sir David Lyndsay's Works, p. 252. BRABLER, or BRABBLER.

reller; from the preceding. We hold our time too precious to be spent With such a brabler.

Aing John, v. 2.

+BRABO. Perhaps a misprint for bravo, a bully.

Where is my spirit? what, shall I maintain A strumpet with a brabo and her bawd. To beard me out of my authority?

How a Man may Chuse a Good Wife, 1602.

I there exhibits a specimen of †BRACEL. The bracer, or armour for

Then through the camp the hote alarum past Som takes his neighbours armour first he findes, And wrong on armes the bracels both he bindes; Som takes a staf for hast, and leaves his launce. Du Bartas.

†BRACER. A protection for the arm in archery.

Among the five articles subjoined to the Rules, recited Among the five articles supuned to the Railes, Fertile to all persons introducing scholars to be received on the foundation, I find, Thirdly, you shall allow your child, at all times, bow-shafts, bow-strings, and a bracer, to exercise shooting. Rules for Harr. Sch., 1690.

+BRACH. Some article of kitchen furniture in the following passage:

Item, one brack, a pere of cobbordes, a grydyron, pothockes and hangles, a pere of bellows.

Inventory, 1590, Stratford-on-Aron MSS.

RACH. From the French brac, or BRACH. braque; or the German bract, a scenting-dog: a lurcher, or beagle; or any fine-nosed hound. Spelman's Glossary. Used also, by corruption, for a bitch, probably from similarity of sound; and because, on certain occasions, it was convenient to have a term less coarse in common estimation than the plain one. See Du Cange in Bracco. The following account shows the last-mentioned corruption:

There are in England and Scotland two kinds of hunting-dogs, and nowhere else in the world; the first is called ane racks (Scotch), and this is a foot-scenting creature, both of wild beasts, birds, and fishes also, which lie hid among the rocks: the female thereof in England is called a bracks. A brack is a mannerly name for all hound bitches.

Gentleman's Recreation, p. 37, 8vo.

The expression rache is confirmed by Racha Saxonibus canam significabat, unde Scoti hodie rache pro cane femina habent, quod Anglis est brache. Notes on Gratius.

Brack Merriman,—the poor cur is imbost—
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brack Tam She induct.

I had rather hear Lady, my brack, howl in Irish. Truth is a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when the lady brack may stand by the fire and stink.

In this passage some propose to read "the lady's brach," some "lady the brach," but there appears no necessity for alteration. Shakespeare enumerates brach among the species of dogs:

of dogs:

Mastif, greyhound, mungrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, bracke, or lym.

Mr. De-vile, put case one of my ladies here
Ilad a fine brack, and would employ you forth,
To treat 'bout a convenient match for her.

B. Jon. Deril an Ass, iv, 4. Also Alchem., i, 1.

Ha' ye any bracket to spade.

B. J. Pl. Beggar's Bush, iii, 1.

Kill'd with a couple of braiches.

White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 386.

Most of these citations show that a female was usually meant. In Fragmenta Antiq. several manors are specified as held by the nurture of a brach: Bracheta. Massinger also uses it; yet of this word Skinner could say, "vox quæ mihi apud Florium solum occurrit."

BRACK. A crack, or break. quite obsolete.

Having a tongue as nimble as his needle, with servile patches of glavering flattery, to stitch up the bracks, &c.

Antonio and Mellida, 1602.

There is something singular in the following application of the word:

To make them passe the bracke of one equal fortune, and to tangle them within one net.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii, sign. T t, 2 b.

Drayton seems to use it for the channel of a river:

Where, in clear rivers beautified with flowers, The silver Nalades bathe them in the brack. Man in the Moone, p. 1337.

[Drayton uses it repeatedly in the sense of the water of the sea, brine.]

†The warlike chariot turn'd upon the backe,
With the dead horses in their traces tide,
Drags their fat carkasse through the fomie bracks
That drewe it late undanntedly in pride.
Drayton's Moyses in a Map of his Miracles, 1604.

+BRACKET. A liquor. See Bragget.

Now at the coffee-houses they Do rob the hogs, selling the whey; Whilst others they drink ninny-broth, Or chocolate, and perhaps both, Or chocolate, and perhaps count, Stepony, tea, or aromatick, Brunswick-mum, syder, or bracket; With other liquors which they brew, That our forefathers never knew. Poor Robin, 1755.

BRAG, adj. Brisk; full of spirits.

And home she went as brag as it had been a bode louce.

Gammer Guerton's Needle, O. Pl., ii, 38.

"As brisk as a body louse," is one of the proverbial similes preserved in Ray, p. 219, and in the celebrated love song of old Similes attributed to Gay:

Brisk as a body-louse she trips; Clean as a penny drest; Sweet as a rose her face and lips; Sweet as a rose her face and lips;
Round as a globe her breast.

Ritson's Engl. Songs, vol. i, p. 153.
A woundy brag young fellow
As the port went o' hun then, and i' those days.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, i, 2.
I was (the more foole I) so proud and brag,
I sent to you against St. James his faire
A tierce of claret wine, a great fat stag, &c.

Harringt. Ep., ii, 51.

BRAGLY, adv. Made from the former, briskly. est not thilk same hawthorn stud. How bragly it begins to bud.

Spens. Shop. Kal., March, 1, 13.

BRAGGET, or BRAGGAT. A liquor made of honey and ale fermented. Of Welsh etymology, and said to be also a name for metheglin or mead. See Minshew.

And we have serv'd there, armed all in ale, With the brown bowl, and charg'd in bragget stale. B. Jons. Masque of Gipsies, vol. vi, p. 78.

In the same masque we read of "a drink-alian and a drink-braggatan," words made from drinking ale and Ibid., p. 103. drinking braggat.

By me that knows not neck-beef from a pheasant, Nor cannot reliah braggat from ambrosis. B. & Fl. Little Thief, act 1.

The curious may perhaps be glad to see a receipt for making bragget.

Take three or four galons of good ale or more as you please, two dayes or three after it is cleased, and put it into a pot by itselfe, then draw forth a pottle thereof, and put to it a quart of good Engish heay, and set them over the fire in a vessell, and let them boyle faire and softly, and alwayes as any froth ariseth skumme it away, and so clarifie it, and when it is well charified, take it off the fire and let it cook, and put thereto of pepper a penny worth, cloves, mace, ginger, nutmegs, cinamos, of each two penny worth, beaten to powder, stir them well together, and set them over the fire to boyle againe awhile, then being milke warme put it to the rest, and stirre all together, and let it stand two or three daies, and put barme upon it, and drink it at your pleasure. Haves of Health, chap. 239, p. 268.

BRAID, adj. Deceitful; crafty. From bred, cunning. Sax.

Since Frenchmen are so braid
Marry that will, I live and die a maid. All's W., iv, 2. In a passage cited in the notes it is used as a substantive, for deceits:

Dian rose with all her maids
Blushing thus at love his braids.

Greene's Never too late, 1616.

A reproach. The verb to BRAID, s. braid, for which we now use upbraid. occurs also in some old dictionaries; particularly Huloet's, which has also braider for an upbraider. See Todd.

And grieve our soules with quippes and bitter braids.

Rob. E. of Huntingd., bl. 1, 1601.

In case of slander lawes require no more,

Save to amend that seemed not well said;

Or to unsay the slanders said afore,

And ask forgivenesse for the hastie braid

Mirr. Mag., 1610, p. 461. It is probable, therefore, that this was the sense intended, in the passage above cited from Greene; meaning Love's reproaches.

A BRAID, ... meant also a start.

When with a braide

A deep-fet sigh he gave, and therewithal
Clasping his hands, to heav'n he cast his sight.

Ferres and Porrex, O. Pl., i, 148.

The woman, being afraid, gave a braid with her head and run away.

Scogin's Jests, p. 10.

Chaucer also has it in this sense. Legend of Dido, v. 239.

A BRAIL, s., or BRAYL. Explained in several dictionaries. Thus Kersey, "a pannel, or piece of leather slit, to bind up a hawk's wing." And Bailey, "a piece of leather to bind up a hawk's wing." Brails are also certain ropes in a ship. See Todd.

To BRAIL. To fasten up the wing of a bird, to confine it from flight. From the substantive.

Alas! our sex is most wretched, nurs'd up from in-Amai our sex is most wretted, nurs up from in-fancy in continual slavery. No sooner are we able to prey for ourselves, but they brail and hood us so with sour awe of our parents, that we dare not offer to bate at our desires.

Albumazar, O. Pl., vii, 179.

The editor of the old plays very properly proposes to substitute hood for hud, which, however, is only a different spelling. But not knowing the word brail, he would change it to be-rail, which completely destroys the pure language of falconry, in which the metaphor is conceived, and offers no very good sense in return.

So Sandys, in his address to the queen, prefixed to his Ovid: Ambrosia tast, which frees from death

And nectar fragrant as your breath, By Hebe fill'd; who states the prime Of youth, and brails the wings of time

Urania to the O. BRAIN, v. a. To beat out the brains. Shakespeare uses it metaphorically:

Shakespeare uses it incorporate it was the swift celerity of his death, which I did think with slower foot came on, which I did think with slower foot came on, which I did think with slower foot came on, which is the same of the same Thus we popularly speak of knocking a scheme on the head; meaning that we defeat and destroy it. Not obsolete in the literal sense.

BRAIN-PAN. The skull; the vessel that contains the brains.

Many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pas had been cleft with a brown-bill. 2 Hen. VI, iv, 10. If he will but boil my instructions in his brain-pan.

Decker's Gul's Hornb. Proemium.

BRAINSICK. Distempered in the brain: mad: impetuous.

But honest Fear bewitch'd with lust's foul charm Doth too too oft' betake him to retire, Beaten away by brainsick rude desire.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Sup., i, 484.
Thou damned mock art, and thou brainsick tale
Of old astrologic; where didst thou vaile Thy cursed head thus long? Hull's Sal., ii, 7, 1, 11. The following passage is a comment on the word:

on the word:

I am lunatick,

And ever this in madmen you shall find,
What they last thought on, when the brain grew sick,
In most distraction they keep that in mind.

Drayt. Idea, ix, p. 1262.

So also Dryden:

o also Dryden : Nay, if thy brain be sick, then thou art happy. Edipus, act v.

BRAINSICKLY. Madly; wildly. You do unbend your noble strength, to think So brainsickly of things. Macb., ii, 2.

BRAINISH. Probably deduced from the former: mad. So cerebrosus in

He whips his rapier out, and cries a rat! a rat! And, in this brainish apprehension, kills The unseen good old man. Пат., iv, 1.

BRAKE. A word formerly used in many different senses, but since become obsolete, or little known, in all but that of a thicket or thorn-bush. It meant, 1. A particularly powerful bit for horses, whence perhaps the phrase of breaking (properly braking) a horse, unless the bit was, on the contrary, derived from to break. An engine to confine their legs when unruly in shocing, or any other ope-3. A toothed instrument ration. used in dressing flax. 4. A baker's kneading trough. 5. The bandle of a ship's pump. 6. An engine of torture. 7. A battering engine in war. 8. Fern. These various senses seem to have little in common, but the notion of an engine, which pervades them all, except the last, and that is most related to the sense now in use, a bush. For the rest, Skinner, perhaps, points out the right etymology. when he states it anciently to have signified steel; the Saxon origin being the same as that of to break. Thus the general meaning will be "any powerful instrument of steel," and afterwards, of other materials. which of these senses it is to be taken. in the following passage of Measure for Measure, has been a good deal disputed.

Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none. ii, 1. The plainest interpretation seems to be, "from thorns and perplexities of vice," which is much confirmed by a passage concerning virtue in Hen. VIII.

Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake That virtue must go through. In this, brake evidently means a difficult path through briars, &c. So here, Honour should pull hard, ere it drew me into these brakes.

B. 4 Fl. Thier. 4 Theod., v, 1.

The old reading, "breaks of ice," is undoubtedly corrupt, the words "and answer none," having not the least seuse after it.

In the sense of a bit, we find it in this passage:

Lyke as the brake within the rider's hand both strain the horse, nye wood with grief of paine, Not used before to come in such a band.

Ld. Surrey's Poems, sign. U, 2. In that of an engine to confine the legs:

He is fallen into some brake, some wench has tied him by the legs.

Shirley's Opportunity. As an instrument of torture it is mentioned by Holinshed, and delineated in the notes to Meas. for Meas.. ed. 1778.

Probably it has the same sense here

Had I that honest blood in my veins again, queen, that your feats and these frights have drained from me, honour should pull hard ere it drew me into these brakes.

B. J. Pl. Thierry J. Thod., v, 1. As a battering engine; a sort of crossbow:

Not rams, nor mighty brakes, nor slings alone.

Pairf. Tasso, xviii, 43. Also St. 64, ib.

† For when the same defendants were troubled sore with the brakes, crosse-bow cs, and balists of our men.

they themselves also from aloft set up their bows strongly bent, the crooked hornes whereof arising at both ends, were so stiffely bowed, that the strings driven with the violent stroke of fingers, sent away shafts headed with yron, which striking upon the bodies that were against them, strucke fast in them, and gave a deadly wound. Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. See, by all means, the notes above cited. Brakes, for fern, is an expression still used in many parts of England. BRAME, n. s. Vexation; probably from the adjective breme, bitter, severe, q. v. I cannot agree with Mr. Todd, that it seems to be an adjective in the following passage; because, though heart-burning is certainly not uncommon as a substantive, it does not appear to accord well with the sense of this passage. Heartburning, as a substantive, usually implies anger or malice, whereas this lady's complaint was love. Besides. it seldom occurs in the plural.

Ne ought it mote the noble mayd awayle,
Ne stake the fury of her cruell flame,
But that shee still did waste, and still did wayle,
That, through long languor, and hart-burning brane,
She shortly like a pyned ghost became. Spens. P. Q., III, ii, 59.

To convert an adjective into a substantive was no uncommon licence, any more than to change a vowel for the sake of rhyme.

BRAND. A sword; in allusion to the original sense of flame, to which a sword is often compared. It is the Anglo-Saxon brond, or brand, a sword. It is still a poetical word.

Eftsoones he perced through his chaufed chest With thrilling point of deadly yron brand. Spens. F. Q., I, iii, 107.

Bold was his heart, and restless was his sprite,
Fierce, stern, outragious, keen as alaryen'd brassd.

Fairf. Tasso, ii, 59.

BRAND-WINE, or BRANDEWINE. The old name for eau-de-vie. now shortened into brandy.

In the Beggar's Bush, Clause comes in as an aqua-vitæ man, and his cry Buy any brand-wine, buy any brand-wine. He confided not in Hanse's brande-wine.

G. Tooke, Belides, p. 7. † It is more fine then brandewine, The butterboxes potion,
Who drinking dares in Neptunes wars
Reign master of the ocean.

Sack for my Money, an old balled.
†In order to delight the rabble,
Who crowding swarm'd at e'ery table. Sots for more brandy-wine were builing, Whores for more cakes and cyder calling.
Hudibras Redivious, vol. ii, part 4, 1707. +BRANGLE. To wrangle.

RANGLE. 10 wranges.

Heer I conceive, that flesh and bloud will brangle,

And murmuring Reason with th' Almighty wrangle.

Pro Reason.

The cause of our separation proceeded from a little branging betwixt us, because I made more havock of his goods, and spent his money more lavishly, than he was willing to permit.

Comical History of Francian, 1655.

BRANSLES, for Brawls. A kind of tune to a dance. See BRAWL.

Bransles, ballads, virelayes, and verses vaine.

Spens. F. Q., III, x, 8. Sir J. Hawkins doubts, without reason, whether the bransle of Poitiers, which occurs in Morley's Introduction, has any relation to the dance. brawl. Hist. Mus., ii, 133.

orano. Itsel. Mus., 11, 133.

BRANT, or BRENT. Steep.

A brant hill,—as brant as the side of a house.

Ray's North Country Words.

A man may (1 graunt) sit on a brante hill side, but if he geve never so little forward he cannot stoppe.

Asch. Throph., p. 56, repr.

The excellent prince Thomas Howarde d. of Norfolke, with bowemen of Englande, slewe king Jamye with many a noble Scotte, even brant against Holden Hill.

Ibid., p. 104. There it seems to mean "up the steep side." Derived, but doubtfully, from bryn, a hill, Welsh.

BRASELL, as an epithet for a bowl, used in the game of bowls, if it be not put for Brazil, is past my skill to explain. [See BRAZIL.]

Blesse his sweet honour's running brasell bowle. Marston Sat ii. He is speaking of the base adulation of a servile flatterer, and supposes him to praise the bad bowling of a lord. If this be not his meaning, I know not what is: nor does it much signify.

To BRAST. To burst, or break. But dreadful furies which their chaines have brast.

Sp. F. Q., I, v, 31.

Sp. F. Q., I, v, 31.

Then gan she so to sobbe
It seem'd her heart would brast.

Roseus and Juliet, Supp. to Sh., i, 333.
†But flie, oh flie, poore soules, from hence full fast,
Your cables cut, and loose, and quickly brast,
From such, so huge, as Polypheme in 's den,
Who men and beasts in's clutches close doth pen.

Who men and beasts in's clutches close doth pen.

Firgil, by Ficars, 1632.

In the following passage, it is used as the preterite.]

†Whose first loose lids one sudden nod scarce made,
When to himself the helm too closely stay'd,
He pulls the poop aside, the rudder brast,
And overboard i' th' sea he's headlong cast.

Ibi Thid

+BRAVE, .. A bravado.

To call my lord maior knave;
Besides too, in a brave.
Witte Recreations, 1654. The word brave was frequently used to signify a braggard speech or challenge. Thus, in Chapman's Homer: King Menclaus doth accept his brave.

BRAVE. Finely drest.

They're wondrous breve to-day: why do they wear These several habits? Vittor. Corossb., O. Pl., vi, 891.

For I have gold, and therefore will be brese; In silks I'll rattle it of ev'ry colour.

Greene's Tu Q., O. Pl., vii, 35.

BRAVE, v. a. From the above, is used for, to make a person fine, and in that sense quibbled upon by Shake-

Thou hast brav'd many men (that is, hast made them fine, being said to a taylor), brave not me; I will nei-ther be fac'd nor brav'd. Tam. Shr., iv, 3. Thou glasse wherein my dame hath such delight. As when she braves then most on thee to gaze.

T. Watson. Sonnet 24.

BRAVERY. In a similar sense, finery. With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery, With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.

Tam. Shr., iv. 3.

And to how many several women you are Beholding for this bravery. Massing. Picture, iii. Another layeth all his living upon his backe, judging that women are wedded to braverie. Buphue, p. 67.

BRAWL. A kind of dance; spelt bransle by some authors: being from branle, the French name for the same dance; anciently bransle. There is the figure of a brawl set down in the Malcontent, iv, 2 [Marston]; which, if the obscurity of the terms does not baffle their expectations, may be reckoned fortunate by those who are curious in such matters. It is as follows:

Why, 'tis but two singles on the left, two on the right, three doubles forward, a traverse of six round: do this twice, three singles side, galliard trick of twenty, curranto pace; a figure of eight, three singles broken down, come up, meet two doubles, fall back, and then honour.

This is called Bianca's brawl, and seems not unlike a country-dance. O. Pl., iv, 73.

Master, will you win your love with a French brawl? Love's L. L., iii, 1.

It appears that several persons united in this dance, and took hands to perform it; and that it contained some kind of representation, remote enough probably, of a battle.

Tis a French brawl, an apish imitation
Of what you really perform in battle.

Massing. Picture, ii, 3.

tGood fellowes must go learne to daunce,
The brydeal is full near-a;
There is a brall come out of France,

The fyrst ye harde this yeare-a.

Good Fellowes (a ballad), 1569. I'The earliest mention of the brawl in England occurs in sir T. Elyot's

"Boke named the Governour:"1 By the second motion, which is two in numbre, may be signified celeritie and slownesse; whyche two, albeit they seme to discorde in their effectes and natural properties, therefore they may be wel resembled to the branks in dannaying.

BRAWL seems to be used for brat, in the phrase "a beggar's brawl;" probably from their brawling or squalling.

Saxon.

Shall such a begar's brauds as that, thinkest thou, make me atheefe? Gammer Gurt., O. Pl., ii, 51.

And for the delight thou tak'st in beggars
And their brauds. Jovial Crew, O. Pl., x, 357.

BRAWN-FALLEN. Thin; having the brawny or muscular part of the body fallen away; shrunk in the muscles.

All pale and brawn-fall'n, not in triumph borne Among the conquering Romans, &c. Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 260.

Thy brane fall'n arms, and thy declining back,
To the sad burthen of thy years shall yield.

Drayton, Ect., ii, p. 1389.

Have my weake thoughts made braun-fallen my strong arms?

Lyly, Endim., iv, 3.

To BRAY. In the sense of to beat small (from braier, Fr.) seems only to have been used in the phrase "to bray in a mortar."

'Twould grieve me to be bray'd In a huge mortar, wrought to paste, &c.

Albumacar, O. Pl., vii, 161. Would I were bray'd in my own mortar, if I do not call th' in question the next term.

Dr. Johnson has two instances also. In the sense of to make a noise, it is not yet obsolete in poetry. See Todd.

BRAY, n. s. A rising-ground; a hill. Probably from the French compound fausse-braye, which means a counter breast-work, covering the fosse of a fortified place.

But when to climb the other hill they gan, Old Aladine came fiercely to their aid; On that steep bray lord Guelpho would not then Hazard his folk, but there his soldiers staid.

Fairf. Tasso, ix, 96. Todd's Johnson adds an example from Lord Herbert's Henry VIII, which confirms the above etymology, being altogether connected with fortification. He defines it also, "ground raised as a fortification; a bank of earth." See FALSE-BRAY.

+BRAY. A strong tower or blockhouse in the outworks of a fortification, before the port. It was also called the spur.

BRAZED, or BRASED. Under what circumstances a bow was said to be brased, I have not discovered. It could not be any jointing with brass, for that was not usual, and if done, must be done once for all.

Such was my lucke, I shot no shafte in vaine.

My bow stood bent and brased all the yeare.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 500.

[Nares is in error as to the origin of +BRAZIL. A sort of hard wood, used to dve of a red colour. Brazil, the country, seems to have taken its name from the quantity of this wood found there, but the word was known long before, and occurs in Chaucer.

Thou know'st my slender vessel's apt to leak;
Thou know'st my brittle temper's prone to break;
Are my bones brazil, or my flesh of oak?
O, mend what thou hast made, what I have broke:
Look, look with gentle eyes, and in thy day
Of vengeance, Lord, remember I am clay.

Quartes's Emblems.

†BREAK. To break the brains, to drive mad. To break the neck, to disconcert.

Let fortunes mounted minions sinke or swim He never breakes his braines; all's one to him. He's free from fearefull curses of the poore.

He's free from fearefull curses of the poore,
And lives and dies content, with lease or more.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Nor his papers so well sorted as I would have had them, but all in confusion, that break my brainst o understand them.

Yet did not this break the neck of Henries design, but having by his fair deportment gained forces from the duke of Brittain, and some other princes envious of the prosperity of the house of York, Richmond puts forth to sea, and lands at Milford Haven in Wales.

Select Lives of English Worthies, n. d.

READ AND SALT.

ordinary, O. Pl., x, 311. BREAD AND SALT, perhaps as two of the chief necessaries of life, were anciently taken, by way of giving solemnity to an oath.

Our hostess, profane woman! has sworn by bread and salt she will not trust us another meal.

Bastward Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 278.

And there be no faith in men, if a man shall not believe oaths. He took bread and salt, by this light, here oaths. He took bread and salt, by this light, that he would never open his lips.

Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, $50.

I will trust him better that offereth to sweare by bread and salt, than him that offereth to sweare by the Bible.

B. Rick's Descr. of Ireland, p. 29. See also Gammer Gurton's Needle, O. Pl., ii, 31 and 68.

Bread alone is mentioned in the following passage:

My friends, no later than yesternight,
Made me take bread and eat it, that I should not
Do it for any man breathing in the world.

B. 5 Fl. Honest Man's F., ii, p. 407.

Warner gives us both the form of the oath, and the expected consequence of perjury:

The traitrous earle took bread and said, so this digested be
As I am guiltlesse of his death; these words he scarcely

But that in presence of the king the bread did Goodwyn choke.

BREAD AND WINE must have meant* the Holy Sacrament. She swore by bread and wine she would not break.

To BREAK ACROSS in tilting. When the tilter by unsteadiness or awkwardness suffered his spear to be turned out of its direction, and to be broken across the body of his adversary, instead of by the push of the point. This was very digraceful. Sidney, describing the awkward attempt at tilting made by the coward

Clinias, says,

The wind took such hold of his staffe, that it cross guils over his breast, and in that sort gave a flat battonado to Dametas.

Arcad., B. iii, p. 278. So in some verses by the same au-

One said he brake across, full well it so might be. To this unskilfulness Shakespeare alludes in the following passage:

Swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, atheart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter that spurs his horse but on one side breaks his staff like a noble goose.

As you l. it, iii, 4.

The author of Ivanhoe skilfully introduced this circumstance into his tournament. Vol. i, p. 159.

I cannot however agree with the editor of Ben Jonson's Works (Whalley) in changing "a breaking force" to "a breaking cross." Vol. vi, p. 413.

To BREAK UP. To carve.

Boyet, you can carve;

Break up this capon. Low's L. L., iv, 1.

An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.

Mer. Fen., ii, 4. In both these places it is metaphorically used of opening a letter. In the Argument to act the first of the Sad Shepherd, by B. Jonson, the cutting up the deer is mentioned in these terms:

All which is briefly answered with a relation of breaking him up, and the raven, and her bone.

Jonson's Works, vol. v, p. 102.

To BREAK WITH. To open a secret to. See Johnson, Break, v. n., 11, It is now used only in the sense of ceasing to be on friendly terms. See Johnson, ibid., 25.

O name him not, let us not break with him; For he will never follow any thing That other men begin.

Jul. Jul C ii 1

+BREAKER. A sort of artificial firework.

Thirdly, there doth march round about the pavilion artineriall men, which shall cast out fires (as before) as it were in skirmish; another part of the pavilion is all in a combustious flame, where rockets, crackers, crackers, and such like, gives blowes and reports without number.

Taylor's Worker, 1630.

BREAST. A musical voice; voice, in general. The Italians call the full natural voice, voce di petto; the feigned voice, voce di testa.

By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast.

Two. Night, ii, 3.

Pray ye stay a little: let's hear him sing, h'as a fine breast.

B. S. Fl. Pilgrim, iii, 6.
Which said queristers, after their breasts are changed, &c.
Strype's Life of Abp. Parker, p. 9.
Truely two degrees of men shall greatly lacke the use of singinge, preachers and lawyers, because they shall not without this, be able to rule their breastes for every purpose.

Ascham's Toxoph., p. 39.

See also O. Pl., i, 67, and B. Jons., vol. vi, p. 406, where Mr. Whalley has a conjecture, which the established currency of the expression fully refutes.

The better brest, the lesser rest. Tusser, p. 141.
A man's brest giveth a great ornament and grace to all these instruments. Hobby's Castilio, i, 3, 1588.

The original is "la voce humana;" the French, "la voix humaine." Sir J. Hawkins gives the following account of this phrase:

In singing, the sound is originally produced by the action of the lungs; which are so essential an organ in this respect, that to have a good breast was formerly a common periphrasis, to denote a good singer.

Hist. of Mus., vol. iii, p. 466.

This account is much more rational than the petulant and illiberal reflection in Mr. Steevens's note on the above passage in Twelfth Night: which, added to another of the same cast, on the famous encomium of music in the Merchant of Venice, act 5. would incline one to think that the writer himself "had no music in his soul." It is by virtue and amiableness, not by angry invectives, that the enemy of music should refute the censure of the discerning Shakespeare; and I have known it so refuted.

†BREAST-CLOTH. A part of the dress covering the breast; a gorget.

Mammillare, Mart. Amiculum quo mammas adstringunt. στηθόδισμον, στομαστίδιον. Gorgerette, gorgias. A breast cloth, or gorget. Nomenclator, 1885.

To BREATHE ONE SELF. To promote free respiration. Hence, to take exercise.

Methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon.

All's W., ii, 3.

This signification of the word is noticed by Dr. Johnson at Breathe, v. a., No. 4. His instance is different.

til seemed some gentleman's mannor, but I could espie no wagges watching, nor wantons wagging out to breath themselves when their maddam was covered.

The Man in the Moone, 1609.

+To BREATHE. To stop to take breath, in drinking, &c.

And, when you breathe in your watering, they cryhem! and bid you play it off.

Hen. IV, part 1, ii, 4.

We also doe enacte

That all holde up their handes, and laughe aloude, Drinke much at one draughte, breathe not in their drinke.

Timon, ii, 5.

†BREATHINGS. A participle used as a substantive in Cymbeline, i, 4, "the tyrannous breathings of the North."

A BREATHING-WHILE, or SPACE. A time sufficient for drawing breath; any very short period of time.

any very short period of time.

A plague upon you all! His royal grace.—
Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—
Cannot be quiet, scarce a breathing-white,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Bick III. 1.8.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
And shall be blasted in a breathing-while.

Venus and Adonis, Sh. Supp., i, 459.

Yenus and Adons, Sn. Supp., 1, 269.
I'll tell thee,—while my Julia did unlace
Her silken bodice, but a breathing space,
The passive aire such odour then assum'd
As when to Jove great Juno goes perfum'd.
Herrick, p. 182.

Ingratitude I hold a vice so vile,
That I could ne'er endure't a breathing-while.

Taylor, W. Poet, Kicksey Winsie.

†BREDE. A braid, or piece of weaving.

On a brede of divers colours, weven by four maids of honour, and presented to the queen on new years day last.

day last.
Twice twenty slender virgin fingers twine
This curious web, where all their fancies shine;
As nature them, so they this brede have wrought,
Soft as their hands, and various as their thoughts.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

To BREECH. To whip; to punish as a school-boy.

I am no breeching scholar in the schools, I'll not be ty'd to hours, nor 'pointed times

Where, with the licence of the times, breeching is put for breechable, i.e., liable to be whipped. The word occurs in another passage of Shakespeare, but still more disguised:

If you forget your kies, your kes, and your cods, you must be precedes.

Mer. W., iv, 1.

Sir Hugh means to say breeched, i. e., flogged.

With sighs as though his heart would break:
Cry like a breech'd boy, not eat a bit.

B. & Fl. Hum. Lieut., iv, 4.

Where the editor (ed. 1750) alters it to unbreech'd. New-breeched, which he also proposes in the note, but did not admit into the text, is probably the right reading; not meaning "newly put in breeches," as he seems to suppose, but newly whipped. It is confirmed by a passage in the Little Fr. Lawyer.

Kneeling and whining like a boy new-breech'd.

Unbreeched has no sense; newbreeched suits both sense and metre. Or it might have been "cry like a breech'd boy, and not eat a bit;" or the verse might have been left imperfect, a circumstance common enough in these dramatists.

Had not a courteous serving-man convey'd me away, whilst he went to fetch whips, I think in my conscience he would have breech'd me.

Hog kath l. kis Pearl, O. PL, vi, 431.

BREECHED, is applied to daggers by Shakespeare, in a manner that has much tormented the commentators. Macbeth says,

There, the murderers
Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers
Unmannerly breeck'd with gore.

The lower extremity of anything might be called the breech (as the breech of a gun), and Dr. Farmer has quoted a passage, which proves that the handles of daggers were actually so termed. Instead therefore of concluding with him, that Shakespeare had seen that passage and mistaken it, we should use it to confirm the true explanation, which is this: "having their very hilt, or breech, covered with blood." The passage cited by that excellent critic is this:

Boy, you do nothing but play tricks there, go fetch your masters silver hatched daggers, you have not brushed their breeches, bring the brushes and brush them before me. Prench Garden, fc., Dialogue 6. Sheaths of daggers are wiped, not brushed; and Shakespeare could not have supposed them to be here meant; it was evidently the silver hatching that required the brush. We cannot, however, conceive Shakespeare looking for paltry authorities, or even thinking of them, when he poured forth his rapid lines. He doubtless took up the metaphor as it occurred to him, without further reflection.

BREECHES, LARGE. See Hose.
BREED-BATE. A maker of contention. From bate, contention. See BATE, and MAKE-BATE.

An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate.

Mer. W., i, 4

We have also, breeder of debate, at large. Mirror for Mag., p. 243.

†BREID, or BRAID. A moment.
For as I sodainely went in hand therewith, and made it in a bride.

Sir T. Mort's Workes, 1557.

BREME, or BREEM. Fierce, or sharp.

From the Saxon.

But eft when ye count you freed from fear,
Comes the breme winter with chamfer'd brows,
Full of wrinkles and frosty furrows.

59. Skep. Kal., Feb., 42.

See BRIM.

BRENNE, v. To burn. A word considered as obsolete in Charles the First's time, as appears by its being put into the mouth of Moth the antiquary in Cartwright's play of the Ordinary.

ing in fire of little Cupido. Reen It was in use in the time of Holinshed:

The Jewes that were in those houses that were set on fire, were either smoldered and brenned to death, or else, &c Vol. ii, sign. G, 7, col. 1. Having caused his people yet to spoyle, and brease first a great parte of the country.

Ibid., Y y, 7. Spenser also used it. See F. Q., IV. iii, 45.

BRENT. Burnt: the participle of brenne.

And blow the fire which them to ashes brent.

Spens. F. Q., I, ix, 10.

BRENTFORD, Old Woman of. Shakespeare's annotator tells us there was some old woman of Brentford, a celebrated witch of her time; and that there are several ballads concerning her, among the rest one entitled Julian of Brentford's last Will and Testament. The note is on the following passage; speaking of her, She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, &c.

Mer. W., iv, 2.

I have not met with it.

BRETNOR. A celebrated conjuror, or pretender to soothsaying. He is named, with some others of the same fraternity, in the following passage: Ay, they do now name Bretsor, as before
They talk'd of Gresham, and of Dr. Foreman,
Franklin, and Fiske, and Savoys.

B. Jone. Devil is an Ass, i, 2.

"All these," says Mr. Gifford, "with the exception of Bretnor, who came later into notice, were connected with the infamous countess of Essex, and Mrs. Turner, in the murder of sir Thomas Overbury." Franklin was hanged with her. Gresham escaped that fate by dying early. See Mr. G.'s curious note on the passage here cited, where all the set are characterised.

BRETON, NICHOLAS. A writer of celebrity in the time of Elizabeth, whose fame, after suffering a long eclipse, has been so far revived, by means of specimens, selections, &c., from his various works, that his productions now bear an extravagant price. Even Suckling did him the honour to mention him with Shakespeare :

3Deare: The last a well-writ piece, I assure you, A Breton I take it, and Shakespeare's very way. O. Pl., x, 172. His works are very numerous, but are not so respectfully mentioned in the following passage:

The recollection of those thousand pieces,
Consum'd in cellars and tobacco-shops,
Of that our honour'd Englishman Nich. Breton.
B. & Fl. Scornf. Lady, act ii.

This, being abbreviated in the old edition, N. Br. has been referred to Nich. Broughton. But Hugh was See BROUGHTON. Bp. his name. Percy first restored Breton to notice, by inserting his simple and pleasing ballad of Phillida and Corydon in the Reliques, vol. iii, p. 62, 4th ed. But he has since been abundantly quoted in the Censura Literaria, the British Bibliographer, the Restituta, and all the publications of specimens. He has even found a place in the Gen Biogr. Dict. So I may be allowed to dismiss him; only adding that a poem of his, called Melancholike Humours (1600), was honoured by a complimentary epigram from Ben Jonson, which, according to the custom of those days, was prefixed to the poem. It is reprinted in Gifford's edition, vol. viii, p. 350. The temporary fame of Breton may be presumed from the following passage:

And prentices in Paul's church yard, that scented Your want of Britain's books.

Wit without Money, act iii.

The want of Britain's books is evidently designed to imply rawness and ignorance in town, which some of Britain or rather Breton's pamphlets might remedy.

BREWIS. Not altogether obsolete. See Johnson. Bread soaked in potliquor, and prepared secundum artem. Bris. Sax.

Ale, sir, will heat 'em, more than your beef brewis.

Ale, sir, will heat 'em, more than your beef brewis.

If he paid for them, let it suffice that I possesse them; beefe and brewes may serve such hindes; are piggious meate for a coorse carpenter. Sir Thomas More, a Play.

+BRIARS. To be in the briars. i. e., to be in difficulty or misfortune.

Davus interturbat omnia. Davus brings all out of square: he marres all; he brings all into the briars.

Terence in English, 1614. Nummam perimus? Are we not in ill case? be we not in the briars? The wonders of that merciful Providence, which, when it has mercy in store for a man, often brings him into the briers, into sorrow and misery for lesser sins, that men may be led to see how they are spared from the punishment due to them for the greater guilt which they know lies upon them. History of Colonel Jack, 1723.

A BRIBE-BUCK. Supposed to mean a buck distributed as bribes or largesses to different persons.

Divide me like a bribe-buck each a haunch.

Mer. W., v, 5. All the old copies read brib'd buck. which Mr. Capel explains, "a beg'd buck, i. e., beg'd by the keepers. From the French word briber, to Skinner has the same etymobeg.' logy. See Todd in Bribe.

BRIČKLE. The old word. Brittle. and nearest to the presumed etymology, brokel. Teut.

See those orbs, and how they passe, All's a tender brickle glasse. Tixall Poetry, p. 50. It is found in Spenser, and other old authors, and in the earlier dictionaries. See Todd.

BRIDE-ALE. A wedding feast. See

Romances or historical rimes made on purpose for recreation of the common people, at Christmasse dinner or bride-ales.

Art of Engl. Poesy, 4to, M, 1.

A man that's bid to bride-ale, if he ha' cake
And drink enough, he need not vear (fear) his stake. And drink enough, he need not ver (fear) his stake.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii. 1.
†How happy are those, in whom faith, and love, and godlinesse are maried together, before they marry themselves? For none of these martiall, and cloudy, and whining mariages can say, that godlines was invited to their bride-ale; and therefore the plessings which are promised to godlinesse, doe file from them.

Smith's Sermons, 1609.

A BRIDE-BUSH is also found, alluding to the bush hung out by the ale-house. After all, bridale is a fair derivation from bride, both in Saxon and English. without supposing it a compound. The adjective bridal only differs by one letter.

BRIDE-BOWL, and CAKE. the festive ceremony of nuptials was the handing about a bowl of spiced ingredients with cake. Bride-cake still maintains its ground.

The maids and her half-valentine have ply'd her, With courtsie of the bride cake and the bowl, As she is laid awhile.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iii, 8.

That is, "so that she is obliged to lie down for a time."

In the argument to the fifth act of his New Inn, it is said, "Lord Beaufort comes in-calls for his bed and bride-bowl to be made ready." in the corresponding part of the play, he savs.

Get our bed ready chamberlain, And host, a bride-cup, you have rare conceits,
And good ingredients.

Act v, sc. 4. The same, I suppose, is meant by the bason in the Tale of a Tub. act i. sc. 1.

Odson in the Tale of a Tub, act 1, sc. 1.

I'll bid more to the baios and the bride-ale;
Although but one can bear away the bride.

With garlands of roses our housewilely wives,
To have them adorn'd most lovingly strives;
Their bride-cakes be ready, our bag-pipes do play,
Whilst I stand attending to lead thee the way.

The Wooing of Queen Catharine.

+BRIDE-HOUSE. A public hall for celebrating marriages, which seems to have been one of the social arrangements of former times.

ments of former times.

Nympheum, in antiquo marmore Bomæ. Zonaras historicus νυμφείον exponit sedificium augustum publicum, in quo nuptise celebrabantur ab iis qui angustiùs habitabant, cujusmodi Lutetiæ sunt. Alii putant amœna esse lavacra, publica tamen, in que virgines se conferebant amœnitatis ergo, vel à nympharum statuis quibus exornata erant. A bride-hosse, as when a hall or other large place is provided to keepe the bridall in, when the dwelling house is not of sufficient roome to serve the turne. Nomenclator, 1855. Why come, man, we shall have good cheere Anon at the bridehouse, for your maisters gone to Clurch to be married alreadie, and thears. Such cheere as passeth. The Taming of a Shrew, 1894.

†BRIDE-KNOT. The ribands worn by the friends at a wedding.

We find by this time all things in a forwardness to-wards the nuprisls; the milliner, who of all trades in furnishing out in such a pomp is the readiest, was consulted last; nor was he slow in furnishing the bride-haots and favours, which the nimble fingur'd bride-maids mingled in their colours as best suited their fancies, alluding them to many pretty conceits, and in that, and washing their white soft necks, &c.

The Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

BRIDE-LACES, in two passages of Laneham's Kenilw. seem to mean a sort of streamer; particularly in the [These, says Gifford, were second. fringed strings of silk, cotton, or worsted twist, given to the friends who attended the bride and bridegroom to church, to bind up the rosemary sprigs which they all carried in their hands. After the ceremony, these bridal favours were usually worn as ornaments, sometimes in the hat. at other times twisted in the hair, or pendant from the ear, according to the prevailing mode of those fantastic days.]

From which two broad bride-laces of red and yellow buckeram, begilded, and gallantly streaming by such wind as there was, for he carried it aloft.

Quoted in Drake's Sh., i, 228.

BRIDE. It was formerly the custom for brides to walk to church with their hair hanging loose behind. Anne Bullen's was thus dishevelled when she went to the altar with king Henry the Eighth.

Come, come, my lord, untie your folded thoughts, And let them dangle loose, as a bride's hair. Viltoria Coromb., O. Pl., vi, 305.

BRIDE-STAKE. A festive pole, set up to dance round, like a Maypole. See Todd.

BRIDEWELL. Once a royal palace, rebuilt by Henry VIII in 1522, for the reception of Charles V, and called Bridewell, from a famous well in the vicinity of St. Bride's church. Cardinal Campeius had his first audience there. Edward VI gave it to the City for a house of correction, endowing it with lands and furniture from the All this history is, by a curious licence, transferred to Milan. by Decker, in the second part of the Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 465. The account is very exact, compared with Bntick's Hist. of Lond., vol. iv, p. 284. tA workhouse wher servants be tied to their work as Bride-well: a house of correction: a prison.
Nossenclator, 1885.
BRIDLE. To raise up the head

+To BRIDLE. scornfully.

The damoisel was mighty well pleased with his judgment; she bridled, she strutted, and strained as much as was possible to deserve it. Anals of Love, 1672.

BRIEF, s. A short writing, as a letter or inventory. Bear this sealed brief With winged haste, to my lord Mareschal. 1 Hen. IV, iv, 3.

Even a speech is so termed:

Her business looks in her With an importing visage, and she told me In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern Your highness with herself.

All's AU s W., ₹, 8. Hence we may explain the following obscure passage in the same play:

Whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the new-born brief,
Point the new-born brief,
Point the new-born brief,
Point the new-born brief, And be perform'd to-night.

That is, "whose ceremony shall seem expedient in consequence of the short speech you have just now made." +BRIEF. An epitome.

Each woman is a briefe of woman-kind,
And doth in little even as much containe,
As in one day and night all life we find;
Of either, more is but the same againe.

Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1615.

BRIEF, adj., seems to be used in the following passage for rife; a corruption which is still to be heard among the vulgar.

A thousand businesses are brief in hand.

K Lobs is S +BRIGANDISE, n. s. Partizan or desultory warfare.

Who being better fitted for brigandise than open fight in the field, are weaponed with long pikes, and armed with habergeons

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. BRIGANT. A robber or plunderer, Fr. and Italian. I do not see that it can at all be referred to the Brigantes of England.

cland.

A lawlesse people, brigants hight of yore,
That never usde to live by plough or spade
But fed on spoile and booty.

Spens. F. Q., VI., x, 39.

Also soldiers armed with brigandines. whence Holinshed derives the name: Besides two thousand archers, and brigans, so called in those days of an armour which they were named brigandines, used then by footmen.

Holinsk, ii, N n, 5 b.

But perhaps the armour was rather called from the inventors. [Holinshed is correct.]

BRIM. The same as BREME. Severe; horrid. See BREME.

Baleful shricks of ghosts are heard most brim. Sacky., Induction.

Also fierce:

Also Herce:
And then, Leslaps, let not pride make thee brim,
Because thou hast thy fellow overgone.

Pembr. Arc., p. 224.

tWhen stormes are bryme, the calme is next;
Tyme triethe all thinges in evrye place.

MS. Poems, temp. Eliz.

†By this time divers noyse abroad through all the towne is steerd. And wailings loude, and more and more on every side appeard.

And though my father Anchises house with trees encompast round

Stood far within, yet brim we heare the noise and armour sound.

Phase's Virgil, 1600. †BRIMLY. Fiercely. "One so brimly brag and boste." Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

BRIMME. Public; universally known. From bryme, Saxon, meaning the same. So explained by Percy, Reliques, vol. ii.

Yet that thou dost hold me in disdaine
Is brimme abroad, and made a gybe to all that keep this plaine. Warn. Alb. Engl., IV, ch. xx, p. 96. +BRIMMER. A hat, from the breadth of its brim.

Now takes his brimmer off, and to her flyes, Singing thy rhimes, and straight she is his prize.

Brome's Songs, 1661.

I cannot forget (before sashes and broad hats came into fashion) how much I have seen a small puny wit delight in himself, and how horribly he has thought to have abused a divine, only in twisting the ends of his girdle, and asking him the price of his brimmer;

but that phansie is not altogether so considerable now, as it has been in former ages.

Rachard's Observations, 1671.

An unusual word, having BRINCH. some reference to drinking. If an error of the press, I know not what the reading should be.

Let us consult at the taverne, where after to the health of Memphio, drinke we to the life of Stellio, I carouse to Prisus, and brinch you mas Sperantus.

Lyly, M. Bombie, ii, 1.

i. e., one was to take Prisius, and the other Sperantus.

To BRING A PERSON ON HIS WAY.

To accompany him.

And she went very lovingly to bring him on his way to horse.

Woman killed w. k., O. Pl., vii. 262. To bring onward was a similar phrase: Come, mother, sister: you'll bring me onward, brother.

Revenger's Tr., O. Pl., iv, 312.

+BRISK. Was used sometimes as a substantive, a brisk person.

So there's one in the fernbrake, and if she stir till No there's one in the fernbrake, and if she stir till morning I have lost my aim; but now, why what have we here? a Hugonot whore by this light—liave I.? For the forward brisk, she that promis'd me the ball assignation, that said, there was nothing like slipping out of the crowd into a corner, breathing short an ejaculation, and returning as if we came from church.

The Princets of Clere, 1689.

BRISLE DICE. A kind of false dice. INDE DIVE. A RHU OF RHOT GUES.

Those bar size accs; those brisle dice. Clown. The like they brisle, for I'm sure theile breede anger.

Nobody and Somebody, 4to, G, 3 b.

For the bristle dye it is,

Not worth the hand that guides it.

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 238.

†BRISTOL. A kind of brilliant stones were found at St. Vincent's rocks, near Bristol; they were formerly in great repute for common jewellery, and were known popularly as Bristol stones.

Oh! you that should in choosing of your owne,

Knowe a true diamond from a Briston stone.

Wit Restord, 1658.

On the northern side of this city are several high and On the northern side of this city are several high and craggy rocks, by which the river Avon gently glides along, till it returns back again into the Severa, one of the chief whereof is call '68. Vincent's rock, which hash great plenty of pellucid stones. commonly call'd Bristol stones. The learned Mr. Cambden hath observ'd, that their pellucidness equals that of the diamonds, only the hardness of the latter gives them the pre-gringing.

a, only the narunless of the latter gives them minence. Brome, Trasels over England. The cap the stalking hero wore,
Was set with Bristol jens before.
Hudibras Redivirus, vol. ii, part 3, 1707.
The cestrum or gad-fly; more BRIZE. commonly called breeze.

Commonly called Dreeze.

The brize upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails and files.

Ant. & Cl., iii, 8.
The herd hath more annoyance by the brize
Than by the tyger.

This brize has prick'd my patience.

B. Jons. Poetaster, iii, 1.

I will put the brize in's tail shall set him gadding presently.

Vitt. Corom., O. Pl., vi, 251.

BROCHE, Fr. A spit.

Many a gossing cun in my time have I tested.

Many a gossips cup in my time have I tasted,
And many a brocks and spyt have I both turned and basted.

Gam. Gurt. N., O. Pl., ii, 7.

Also a spire:

And with as high

G. Tooke, Bel., p. 19. Innumerous brockes. To BROCHE, or BROACH. To spit, or transfix.

ansfix.

Bringing rebellion broacked on his sword.

Hen. V, Cho., act v.
I'll broack the tadpole on my rapier's point.

Tit. And., iv, 2.

We cannot weep
When our friends don their helms, or put to sea,
Or tell of babes broach'd on the lance, &c..
Two Noble Kinsm., i, 8.

See also Brooch, which is of the same origin.

BROCK. A badger: pure Saxon. Used frequently as a term of reproach:

Marry, hang thee, brock. Twel. N., ii, 5.
What, with a brace of wenches, l'faith, old brock, have
I tane you? Isle of Gulls, 4to, H, 2.
Or, with pretence of chacing themce the brock,
Send in a cur to worry the whole flock.

B. Jons. Sad Shook. BROGUES. A kind of coarse shoes; wooden shoes. Clouted brogues are such shoes, strengthened with clouts or nails.

I thought he alept, and put
My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Cymb., iv, 9 Cymb., iv. 9.

+To BROIL. Used in rather an unusual manner in the following passage:

Love broyled so

Within his brest, as he would nothing knowe.

The Newe Metamorphosis, 1600.

ROKE, v. To deal, or transact a

BROKE, v. business, particularly of an amorous nature; to act as a procurer. Probably from brucan, Sax., to be busy.

And brokes with all that can, in such a suit,

And brokes with an understand the series of Used also actively for, to seduce in behalf of another:

"Tis as I tell you, Colar, she's as coy,
And hath as shrewd a spirit, as quicke conceipt,
As ever wench I broth in all my life.

Daniel, Queen's Arcadia, iii, 3, p. 365.

BROKEN BEER. Remnants of beer. Broken victuals, is still a common expression; but broken beer, sounds strange, as hardly applicable to a liquid. Yet it occurs.

liquid. Yet it occurs.

The poor cattle are passing away the time, with a cheat loaf, and a bumbard of broken beer.

B. Jone. Marque of Augurs, vol. vi, p. 123.

Very carefully carried at his mother's back, rock'd in a cradle of Welsh cheese like a maggot, and there fed with broken beer, and blown wine of the best, daily.

Ibid., Marque of Gypnies.

The Dutch come up like broken beer; the Irish Savour of usquebaugh.

†For scrappes and broken beere it is so rare.

For me to rime, that thou shalt have my share;

For though much wealth I want to maintaine me, I'll never trouble whores, nor rogues, nor thee.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

BROKEN MEAT, was frequently sent, in charity, to prisons and hospitals, from the sheriffs' tables, and other feasts.

When the sheriffs' basket, and his broken most Were your festival exceedings.

Mass. City Madam, i, 1.

As the remnant of the feast—if they be maimed or spoiled are sent abroad to furnish prisons and hospitals; so the remainder of the fight—are sent likewise to furnish prisons and hospitals.

Chapm. May-day, iv, p. 92.

Drown San also Stowe R iii

See BASKET. See also Stowe, B. iii, p. 51, quoted by Gifford.

BROKER. From to broke, above. A pander or go-between.

Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines? Let all inconstant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between, pandars. Tr. & Cr., iii, 2.

See also 3 Hen. VI, iv, 1. Madam, I am no broker.—Nor base procurer of men's B. 4- Fl. Valentin., ii. 2.

A sword. BROND, for brand.

He hath a sword that flames like burning brond.

Spens. F Q., II, iii, 18, Used also BROND-IRON. The same. by Spenser.

BROOCH, or BROCHE. An ornamental buckle, pin, or loop. From the form of this word, which seems to point to the French broche, a spit, for its etymology, Dr. Percy gives the following account of it: 1st. Originally a spit. 2dly. A bodkin. 3dly. The old Any ornamental trinket. dictionaries declare it also to signify a collar or necklace. It is frequently mentioned as an ornament worn in the hat: Honour's a good brooch to wear in a man's hat at all times.

B. Jons. Poetaster. It was out of fashion in some part of Shakespeare's time: Offineer preserve there of the fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable; just like the swood and the toothpick, which wear not now.

And love to Richard.

Is a strange broock in this all-hating world.

Rich. II, v, 5.

Brooch is the original reading in the following passage, if it be right, it means appendage; hanger on.

I will hold my peace when Achilles' broock bids me, shall I?

Tr. & Cr., ii, 1. A brocke is still a female ornament;

so called, probably, from the pin or tongue by which it is fastened.

BROOCH, v. Shakespeare has ventured to make a verb of this word. It must then mean, to ornament.

Not the imperious shew
Of the full-fortun'd Cassar ever shall
Be broach'd with me.
BROOM-GROVES. As the broom, or genista, is a low shrub, which gives no shade, it has been doubted what broom-groves can be. Perhaps birchen groves may be intended. Brooms of birch are now more common than those of heath, &c., and the birchen shade may suit a dismissed bachelor; though I do not recollect any proverbial allusion of that kind.

And thy broom-groves,
Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves, Being lass-lorn. Temp., iv, 1. Brooms-grove is well known, as the name of a town in Worcestershire.

BROUGHTON, HUGH. An English divine, and a writer on mystical, alchemical, and other abstruse subjects; often mentioned in our old plays, and sometimes confounded, by modern critics, with NICH. BRETON above noticed, before Breton became so well known.

But (i. e., except) alchimy
I never heard the like, or Broughton's books.
B. Jons., ii, 2. So in the Alchemist, when Dol produces a rhapsody of mystical and rabbinical jargon, Face exclaims,

Out of Broughton / I told you so. Alch Alch., iv, 5. Mr. Whalley, in his edition, subjoins part of an elegy on the death of Broughton, written in 1612. though designed as an encomium, it is rather a satire on the misemployment of his time and talents. Broughton (says the last and best editor of B. Jonson) was a man of very considerable learning, particularly in the Hebrew; but disputatious, scurrilous, extravagant, and incomprehensible. He was engaged in controversy during the greater part of his life. Vol. iii, p. 213. He died in 1612. An excellent sketch of his life and character is given in Chalmers's Gen. Biog. Dict., vol. viii.

+BROWN GEORGE. A popular name for a loaf of a coarse description of Faith, I've great designs i' my head; but first and toremost, let me hide this portmantle.—After all, this monarch here, must dine to day with a brown George, and only salt and vineager save.

Plantus's Comedica made English, 1694.

BROWNISTS. A sect founded by Mr. Robert Brown of Rutlandshire, who spent great part of his life in several prisons, to which he was committed for his steady adherence to his own particular opinions. Brown was a violent opponent of the discipline and ceremonies of the Church of England, which he held to be antichristian. He died in gaol at Northampton in 1630, being then about 80. See Biogr. Dict.

And 't be any way, it must be with valour; for policy I hate. I had as lief be a Brownist, as a politician.

The. N., iii, 2.

The good professors Will like the Brownists frequent gravel-pits shortly.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 420. This sect is supposed to be alluded to here also:

She will urge councils for her little ruff Call'd in Northamptonshire. City Match, O. Pl., ix, 294.

That is, where those sectaries most abounded. They were long the subject of popular satire.

BROWN STUDY. A thoughtful absence of mind. Whatever was the origin of this singular phrase, which is not yet disused, it is far from being new, since we find it in B. Jonson. The phrase is much older, as will be seen by the additional examples.]

Why how now, sister, in a motley muse

Faith, this brown study suits not with your black, Your habit and your thoughts are of two colours.

Case alter'd, iv, 1. †And in the mornyage when every man made hymredy to ryde, and some were on horsebacke setting forwarde, John Reynoldes founde his companion syttynge in a browne study at the inne gate.

†I must be firme to bring him out of his Resume stodie, on this fashion.

To Honest Recreation.

The Mariage of Wit and Wisdome. BRUCKEL'D, wants explanation. Herrick speaks of "boys and bruckel'd children, playing for points and pins." Fairy Temple, Poems, p. 103. it mean breeched? [Bruckled is still used in Norfolk and Suffolk in the sense of wet and dirty, which is evidently the meaning here. See Forby.]

BRUIT, often written BRUTE. A report. From bruit, Fr.

114

The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

3 Hen. VI, iv. 7. May be as prompt to flie like brute and blame Mirror for Mag., 59. Warner has to brute, in some sense like to stand opposed.

And more the lady flood of floods, the river Thamis,

Did seeme to brute against the foe, and with himself to fit.

Albions Engl., p. 63.

BRUIT, v. To report with noise. By this great clatter one of greatest note Seems bruited.

Macò., v, 7. A thousand things besides she bruits and tells.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 17.

†BRUNGEON. A child, apparently a corruption of burgen, a bud or sprout.

O Lungeon, ich cham undone, Chave a brungeon, a daughter or a zon. Jordan's Nursery of Novelties, n. d.

BUBBER, probably a misprint, for lubber, in Middl. Spanish Gypsie. [Nares appears See AIM, to give. to be in error in this conjecture, as will be seen from the following passage of a song of the 17th century.]

iThe tenth is a shop-lift that carries a bob,
When he ranges the city the shops for to rob;
Th' eleventh's a bubber, much used of late,
He goes to the alchouse and there steals the plate.
The twelfth a trapan, if a cull he doth meet,
He maps all his cole, and turns him i' th' street. Then hark well &c.

†To BUBBLE. To cheat. A word apparently of some antiquity in this sense, although the origin of it is not clear. The noun, in the modern sense (as the South-sea bubble, &c.), was probably taken from the verb.

The tincture of the sun's-beard; the powder of the moon's-horns; or a quintessence extracted from the souls of the heathen gods; will go off rarely for an universal medicine, and bubble the simple out of their money first, and their lives afterwards.

These Internations Characters 1856.

their money first, and their lives afterwards.

Twelve Ingesions Characters, 1686.

Towards the latter end of this month there will be more people in Smithfield than in Westminster Hall; Jack Padding and Harlequin telling stories in jest to get money in earnest, and have much better luck than those who while they are making a play day, lose one half of their money at gaming, and have the other half pick'd out of their pocket; such people are in more danger of going home mad than drunk; and it is hard to say which of the two looks more like a fool, be that wants wit, or he that has so foolishly bern be that wants wit, or he that has so foolishly been bubbled out of his money. Poor Robin, 1731.

bubbled out of his money.

O. Which are your best sort of customers?

A. Either your city-aprentice that robs his master for me, or your country-gentleman that sells his estate, or che your young extravagant abop-keeper, that is newly set up: these I bubble till they grow weary of me, and never leave them till I have run'd them, and if they leave me, I either force them to purchase my silence at a dear rate, or swear a bastard to them, tho' I was never with child.

The Town-Misses Catechism, 1703.

The Town-Misses Catechism, 1708. In the following example, the n. s. is used for a man who is bubbled.

And here begins the fatal catastrophe; if they think that he has too much regard for his reputation, or too much modesty to make use of the statute for his defence, or perhaps (what's more prevalent with him than either) will be unwilling that the town should know be has been a bubble, then they stick him in earnest, so deep, it may be, that he must be fore'd to cut of a limb of his estate to get out of their clutches. The Country Gentleman's Vale Mecum, 1897.

The allusion in the following passage is to the bubbles of the South-sea year (1720).

year (1720).
Adjoyning to this village the duke of Argyle had a fine seat called Caen-wood. You remember him at the head of the English at the famous battel of Blaregnies; but I shall do him wrong to mention him till I come to his own country, where his ancient and moble family have been very conspicuous for so many ages, and where his personal character will be beat placed. It now belongs to one Dale, an upholsterer, who bought it out of the bubbles.

Journey through England, 1724.

BUBUKLE. A corrupt word, for carbuncle, or something like it.

His face is all bubulles, and whelks and knobs.

Hen. V, iii, 6. BUCK. Liquor or lye for washing linen. Bauche, Germ. Dr. Johnson quotes the following passage as an example of it, in this sense : Buck, I would I could wash myself of the buck / &c.

Merr. W., iii, 3.

But it is evident that Ford also intends a pun; "I would I could wash the horned beast out of myself."

It is used also for a quantity of linen washed at once. Thus a wash of clothes, or a buck of them, are the same.

But now of late not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes such here at home. 3 Hen. VI, iv, 2. The wicked spirit could not endure her, because she had washed among her such of cloathes, a Catholique pricates shirt.

Decl. of Popish import, 4to, E, 3. Then shall we not have our houses broken up in the night, as one of my nyghtbors had, and two great buckes of clothes stolen out, and most of the same, fyne lynnen.

Caseat for Com. Curr., A, 2 b.

To BUCK. To wash. Mr. Steevens says, to wash in a particular manner.

in a note on this passage: Alas, a small matter bucks a handkerchief.

Puritan, Sh. Sup., ii, 540.

It seems, from the Merry Wives of Windsor, that they bucked the clothes in the river, in which case we lose eight of the lye or lixivium of the etymologists, of which I am inclined to doubt the authority. The expression of buck-washing conveys the idea of a particular mode.
You were best meddle in buck-washing. Mer. W., iii, 8.

Also to drive a buck, for to carry on a wash:

Well I will in and cry too; never leave Crying, until our maids may drive a buck With my salt tears, at the next washing day. B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 1.

This bucking was done by beating the clothes in the water on a stone. with a pole flattened at the end. Hence we have also, to beat a buck : Faster! I am out of breath, I am sure:

If I were to best a buck I can strike no harder.

Mass. Virg. Mart., iv, 2.

It is still practised in many parts of this island, but particularly in Scotland. Bucking continues to be the technical term for washing new varn. linen, &c., in the process of whitening them.

BUCK-BASKET. A basket in which linen was carried to be washed, or bucked. See Merry W. W. passim. The incident of the buck-basket seems to us rather improbable. But there is a story of Ben Jonson being so sent home, iu a state of ebriety, and other tales of the same sort exist. See Mr. D'Israeli's Quarrels of Authors. iii, p. 130. They who would fain have Shakespeare and Jonson enemies, contrary to history, may fancy that this incident was alluded to in Falstaff's adventure.

†BUCKLE. To turn your buckle behind, to be patient.

Barbary, you are much to blame to fall out with your-selfe for want of better company. If you be angry, turne the buckle of your girdle behind you, for I know nobody is in love with you. Breton's Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters, 1637.

†BUCKLE-GARTER. A garter fastened by a buckle, in use in the 17th century.

I might easily forget the buckle-garters. But is there nothing else in that ancient and venerable poet, but dry stories of footmanhip, and such like low accomplishments?

Eachard's Observations, 1671, p. 43.

BUCKLER, v. To defend. The use of this verb is not peculiar to Shakespeare.

Yet if those weake habillements of warre, can but het in those weaks informed to warre, can out sheckler it from part of the rude buffets of our adversaries.

Heywood's Apol. for Actors, 4to, A, 4.

'Tis not the king can buckler Gaveston.

Bdw. II, O. P.I., ii, 385,

King Edward is not here to buckler thee. Ibid., 360.

See Tam. Shr., iii, 2.

"One end of a +BUCKLER-PIECE. sur-loin of beife called the buckler peece, by reason of a large flat bone in that part." Abortive of an Idle Houre, 1620.

BUCKLERS. To give bucklers. An old phrase, signifying to yield, or lay by all thoughts of defence; clypeum abiicere. Johnson.

A most manly wit. Margaret, it will not hurt a woman; and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice: I give thee

The allusion seems to be to the fighting for a prize of bucklers, in which the bucklers themselves were used:

Play an honest part, and bear away the bucklers.

B. Jons. Case is altered.

Thus to take up the bucklers means to contend:

Charge one of them to take up the bucklers Against that hair-monger Horace.

Decker's Satiromastis. If you law down the bucklers, you lose the victory.

Revery Woman in her humour.

Age is nobodio—when youth is in place, it gives the other the bucklers.

Old Meg of Heref., P. 3.

See these and other authorities, in Steevens's ed. on the above passage of Shakespeare.

BUCKLERS-BURY. This street, in the time of Shakespeare, was inhabited chiefly by druggists, who sold all kinds of herbs, green as well as Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersnac women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple time.

Mer. W. W., iii, 3.
Go into Bucklers-bury and fetch me two ounces of preserved melounes; look there be no tobacco taken in the shop while he weighs it. Decker's Westward Hoe.

Run into Bucklers-bury for two ounces of dragon water, some spermaceli and treacle.

Ibid.

+BUCKRAM-BAG. The lowest class of attorneys appear to have carried bags of this material.

To Westminster Hall I went, and made a search of enquirie, from the blacke gowne to the buckram bag, if there were anie such serjeant, bencher, counsailer, atturney, or petiliogger. Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1892.

BUCKSTALL. A net to catch deer. Thus Walla remonstrates with Diana:

Have I (to make thee crownes) been gath'ring still Fair-cheekt Etesia's yealow cammonil; And, sitting by thee on our flowrie beds, Knit thy torne buck-stals with well twisted threds, To be forsaken?

Brown, Brit. Past., ii, p. 108.

To BUD, seems to be put for to lie, in the following passage, if it be not corrupt, which I should think it is.

Tis strange these varlets—
—Extream strange, should thus boldly
Bud in your sight, unto your son.

B. J. Pl. Mons. Thom., iv, 9.

BUDGE, is explained in all the old dictionaries to mean fur. Minshew says particularly, lamb's fur, which is confirmed by a passage in the Cambridge statutes, directing facings to be made, "furruris buggeis, sive agninis;" the Latin word being evidently intended to explain the barbarous one.

In th' interim comes a most officious drudge.

In th' interim comes a most officious drudge,
llis face and gown draw'd out with the same budge.
Corbet, Iter. Boreale, p. 3.
Budge backelors; a company of poor old men, clothed in long gowns lined with lambs fur, who attend on the lord mayor of the city of London when he enters into office.
Bailey's Folio Dict.
Budge-rowe, a streete so called of the budge turre, and of skinners dwelling there.
Stone's Surrey of London, p. 200.

In this sense Mr. Warton supposes it to be used in the following line of Milton, notwithstanding the tauto-

116

To those budge doctors of the Stoic fur. Comus. 707. See Todd's Milton, in Comus, 1. 797. Mr. Todd produces three passages in which budge seems to mean stiff or surly: but the word in those places, as well as in Milton, is metaphorically used: a budge countenance, meaning one that resembles the wearers of budge, in gravity, severity, &c. Thus the "budge doctors" are grave, severe, stiff doctors.

Marston calls a man budge-face, from wearing a large beard. Here the beard was the fur.

beard was the fur.

Poor budge-face, bowcase sleeve, but let him passe,
Once furre a beard shall privilege an asse.

Scourge, III, x.

Or else he meant solemn-face. To BUFF. To beat, or strike violeutly. There was a shock

To have buff'd out the blood Of ought but a block. R Inne BUFF, as a substantive, is merely a contraction of buffet. Spenser uses it.
Nathelesse so sore a buff to him it lent. P. Q., II, v. 6.

+BUFFE. A wild ox.

+To BUFF. To puff.

Now as the winde, buffing upon a hill With roaring breath against a ready mill. Du Bartas. †BUFFEN, adj. Made of buffaloes' skin; or simply of leather. See BUFFIN.

Beneath his arm a buffer knapsack hung,
Stuft full of writings in an unknown tongue.
Quarles' Argalus and Partkenia, 1647, p. 117.
†BUFF-FACED. Perhaps leather-faced.

Tis sack that rocks the boyling brain to rest, Confirms the aged hams, and warms the brest Of gallantry to action, runs half share And mettal with the buff-faced sons of war. Fletcher's Poems, p. 911.

+BUFFIAN. A buffoon.

I will not trouble my self to relate some odde story to you, according to the antient custom, to stir up rour attention by laughter; it becometh not a man of my learning to be so great a briffiam. Let those who have need of my counsel in their affairs repair unto me ose by one to my own below. by one, to my own lodging.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

BUFF-JERKIN. Originally a leathern waistcoat; afterwards, one of the colour thence called buff: a dress worn by serjeants and catchpoles.

I know not at whose suit he is arreated, well,
But he's in a suit of buff, which 'rested him, that I can tell. Com. B., iv, 2.
See the ludicrous account of the bailiff immediately preceding.

Aye be sure of that,
For I have certain goblins in buff-jerkins.

Bam Alley, O. Pl., v. 468. It was also a military dress. the captain of a citadel refuses to give it up, through fidelity to his prince, the answer is,

O heavens, that a Christian should be found in a buff-jerkin! Captain Conscience, I love thee, captain. Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 91.

So also here:

A happy sight! rarely do buffe and budge Embrace, as do our souldier and the judge. Gayton, Fest. Notes, iv, 15, p. 251.

See Budge.

BUFF NE BAFF. Neither one thing nor another. Nothing at all.

A certaine persone being of hym [Socrates] bidden good speede, saied to hym againe neither buffe ne baff [that is, made him no kind of answer]. Neither was Socrates therewith any thing discontented.

Udall Apophih., fol. 9.

BUFFIN. Used for some coarse material, whether literally buff leather, or coarse stuff of that colour, does not appear.

My young ladies
In buffia gowns, and green aprons! tear them off.
Massing. City Mad., iv, 4. The stage direction says, that they come "in coarse habits, weeping."

+BUFFLB. A buffalo.

JUFFLE. A CHIBALO.

A. But what if it were buls flesh?

P. O God, that's worst of all: it is an aguie, grosse, hard, stincking, and dry flesh, of bad nourishment, and is never well rosted by the fire, nor concocted by the stomake, and in a word, it is worse then buffler flesh.

The Pausencer of Benvenule, 1012. The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

+BUFFLE-HEAD. A fool; a heavy, stupid fellow.

Why, you blockhead, you've almost thrown the door off the hinges. D'ye think our doors are made at the publick charge?—What makes you stare so, bufflehead? What's your business, I say? And who are ye? Plantus's Comedies made English, 1694.

+BUFFLER. A buffalo.

DER. A Utiliaro.
Upon his loyns a leathern zone
Above his coat was girted on,
Made, I suppose, of buffers hide,
And was at least four inches wide.
Hudibras Redistrus, part 12.

†BUFFON. An ape or baboon.

And because he suspected, that they (who brought with them certaine before as slaves to be sold) whom by chance they found there, would by specific riding out give intelligence of that which they saw, those he spoyled of their commodities, and slew them all.

Helland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

A BUG, now usually BUGBEAR. object of terror; a species of goblin.

Bwg, in Welsh, means a goblin: and Pug, in English, probably derived from it. had often the same meaning. See Pug.

Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs. Tum. Shr., i, 2. Afterwards they tell them, that those which they saw, were bugs, witches, and hags.

Lavaterus, de Spectris, transl. 1573, p. 21.

Lemures are described by Ab. Fleming.

Hobgoblins, or night-walking spirits, black bugs

Nomenci., p. 471 a. Those that would die or ere ream, and both from the mortal bugs o' the field.

Cymb., v, S.
Which be the very bugges that the Paalme meaneth on, walking in the night and in corners.

Asch. Toroph., p. 61, new ed.

[In Matthew's Bible, Ps. xci, 5, is rendered, "Thou shalt not nede to be afraid of any bugs by night."7

This hand shall hale them down to deepest hell, Where none but furies, bugs, and tortures dwell.

Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 234.

[Bug-words, ugly words, words calculated to frighten or disgust.]

†Tere. But heark ye, my fellow-adventurer, are you not marry'd? or marry'd?

Geo. Marry'd?—that's a bug-word—prithee, if thou hast any such design, keep on thy mask, lest I be tempted to wickedness. Beha's Younger Brother, 1696.

*Merry. You are resolved to go to her again; notwithstanding the damn'd trick she serv'd you with the sea captain and your noble resolution to the contrary? I'll see her hang'd first! No, tho she beg it a thousand times, and with a thousand tears, I'll n'e'r go near her!

*Keepw. Did I say such bug-words?

Sedley's Bellamira, 1687.

*It tell you, sir, I know your creature;
 I say, sir, she's a whore, no better,
 And you're a pimp to riudicate her.

At these provoking bugbear words,
 Amidst the crowd both drew their swords.

*Hudibras Redivieus, vol. ii, part 5.

Hudibras Redivivus, vol. ii, part 5. +BUGANTINE. A sort of ship, used apparently in coasting.

P. Earnest: what earnest to horse-letters, we may put the pipes into the cases, goe and learne out some barque, foist, or bugantine, that goes to Genoa: from whence we will embarque for Genoa. The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

+BUGLE-BROWED. Browed like a buffalo, one name for which animal was bugle.

Wife. The for mine own credit if I forbear, not thine, thou bugle-brow'd beast thou.

Middleton, Anything for a Quiet Life.

BUGLE-HORN. Buculæ cornu, a small hunting horn.

Or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick.

Muck Ado, i. 1.

I think Benedict means to say, "or wear a horn, though so worn as to be invisible;" invisible baldrick, meaning a baldrick which renders it invisible. Bugle is elsewhere applied to a cuck-Thus a wife calls her old's horns. husband a bugle-brow'd beast, Middleton's Any thing for a quiet Life. 4to. F. b.

Bugle is derived from bugill, which meant a buffalo, or perhaps any horned

CRIUIC.

He beareth azure, a buffe. Or some call it a bugill, and describe it to be like an oxe.

R. Holme Acad., II, ix, p. 170.

In the Scottish dialect it was bowgle See Jamieson. Buffe, or bowaill. bugle, and buffle, are all given by Barrett, as synonymous for the wild BULCHIN. A diminutive of bull; a bull-calf. It should be bulkin, that being the proper diminutive; and probably it was so pronounced.

Hazard and Wilding, how is't? how is't, bulchine?

Gamester, O. Pl., ix, 71.

Do'st roar, bulchin? do'st roar?

Do'st roar, bulchin? do'st roar?

Satiromartis, Orig. of Dr., iii, p. 170.

I was at supper last night with a new-wean'd bulchin.

Marston's Dutch Courtes., ii, 1.

And better yet than this, a bulchin two years old,
A curl'd pate calf it is, and oft' night have been sold.

Dray!. Polyulb., S. xxi, p. 1050.

†Yet I doubt hee'le proove but a victualer to the camp,
a notable fat double-chind bulchin.

Decker's Whore of Babylon, 1607.

BULFINCH. A simpleton. See the +BULFINCH. example given under BULL-SPEAKING.

He, after a distracted countenance, and strange words, takes this bulfisch by the wrist, and carried him into the privy and there willed him to put in his head but while he had written his name and told forty. while he had written his name and told forty.

Jests of George Peele, n. d.

BULK. The body. From the Dutch bulcke, thorax.

OMICKE, LHOTEX.

And strike thee dead, and trampling on thy bulk,
By stamping with my foot crush out thy soul.

Pour Prentices, O. Pl., vi, 478.

Antonio's shape hath cloath'd his bulk and visage;
Only his hands and feet so large and callous,

Require more time to supple.

equire more time to supple.

Albumas., O. Pl., vii, 183.

Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.

Shakesp. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 501.

But smother'd it within my panting bulk.

Rick. III., i, 4.

BULL-BEGGAR. A kind of hobgoblin; rendered by Coles, "Larva, terriculamentum." So Fleming's Nomenclator, under terriculamentum, explains it, "A scarebug, a bullbegger, a sight that frayeth, and frighteth." P. 469 b. tinet frayeth, and frighteth. F. 409 b.
Look what a troop of hobgoblins oppose themselves against me; look what ugly visages play the bullbeggers with us. Shetton's Don Quiz., p. 190.
And they have so fraid us with bull-beggers, spirits, witches, urchens, elves, &c.—and such other bugs, that we are afraid of our own shadowes.

Scot's Disc. of Witchen, 1580, p. 153.

Used generally, even to a late period, for any terrifying object. The etymology is very uncertain. Bold beggar, which Skinner mentions, is not quite satisfactory.

†Then she (in anger) in her armes would snatch me, And bid the begger, or bull-begger, catch me; With, take him, begger, take him, would she say.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.
†Of all things, hee holds fasting to be a most superstitious branch of Poperty, he is a maine enemy to Ember weekes, he hates Lent worse then a butcher or a Puritan, and the name of Good-Friday affrights him like a hulleger. And being an ill-lock'd fellow, he has a pension for being hullbergar to all the churchwardens for being bullbergar to all the froward children in the popel.

The characteristic content of the faction of the fraction of the fraction of the popel nuncio (that great sublegger) was soliciting both in Spain and France the kings business for foreign aids.

Symmons, Vindic. of K. Charles I, 1648.

The churchwardens for being bullbeggar to all the froward children in the parish.

Monntfort, Greenwich Park, 1691.

A place for boiling.

+BULLARY. A place for boiling. ULLARY. A place for botting.

A messuage and ground in Bednoll Green, and a close called Tognall, and certain salt fatts or bullaries, and divers other lands in Droitwich, late the inheritance of George Dawks deceased, the testator.

Bills in Chancery, ii, 82.

BULLED. The same as bolled, q. v., swelled or emboss'd.

And hang the bulled nosegays bove their heads.

B. Jons. Sad Shep., i, 3. +BULLET. A billet, or order for a lodging.

At the signe of the Angell: but you may goe whether you please, and thinke good, and to that end, there is a bulke for the warrant of your lodging, without which none will entertaine you into their house.

The Passenger of Bensenato, 1618.

+BULL-FLY. The stag-beetle. Cerf volant. A horned beetle: a bullflie, or hornet.

Nomenclator BULLION, besides its usual signification, of gold or silver uncoined, meant also, according to the old dictionaries, "copper-plates set on the breast leathers or bridles of horses, for ornaments." I suspect that it also meant, in colloquial use, copper lace, tassels, and ornaments in imitation of gold. Hence contemptuously attributed to those who affected a finery above their station. Thus it is said to some shabby gamesters:

While you do eat and no and And cozen in your bullions.

B. Jons. Dev. an Ass, iii, 3.

Also, in describing an ape, fantastically dressed to play tricks, B. and Fl. say, That ape had paid it,

What dainty tricks!—
In his French doublet with his blisterd [puffed up] hullione

In a long stock ty'd up; O how daintily
Would I have made him wait, and shift a trench
Carry a cup of wine.

Beggar's Bush Beggar's Bush, iv, 4. Lt is here also among a list of dreases:
The other is his dreasing block, upon whom my lord lays all his clothes and fashions, ere he vouchsafes them his own person: you shall see him in the morning in the galley-foist, at moon in the bullow, in the evening in quirpo.

Massing. Fatal Descry, ii, 3.

See GALLEYFOIST and QUERPO. Billon, in French, means base coin, and bullion was so used in English.

And those, which eld's strict doom did disallow,
And damn for bullion, go for current now.

Syls. Du B., Weck 2, Day 2.

+BULLOSE.

The sparking bullose of her eyes
Like two ecclipsed suns did rue

Beneath her christal brow.

Pictcher's Poems, p. 227.

+BULL'S-FEATHER. One of the sym-The following bols of cuckoldom. song is of the 17th cent.

song is of the 17th cent.

The Bulls Feether.

It chanced not long ago as I was walking,
An eccho did bring me where two were a talking,
Twas a man said to his wife, dye had I rather,
Than to be cornuted and wear a bulls feather.
Then presently she reply'd, sweet, art thou jealous?
Thou canst not play 'valcan before I play Yenus;
Thy fancies are foolish, such follies to gather,
There's many an honest man hath worn the bulls feather.
Though it be invisible, let no man it scorn,
Though it be a new feather made of an old horn,
He that disdains it in heart or mind either,
May be be the more subject to wear the bulls feather.

BUILL SERAK INCL.

+BULL - SPEAKING. Boasting language.

Lec. He is doubtful, but yet he is sure he knows him.

What a bulfinch is this! Sure 'tis his language they call bull-peaking.

BULLYONS, a pair of. Qu. Pistols.

Why should no bilbo raise him? (the devil) or a Pair of bullyons? They go as big as any.

B. & Fl. Chances, v, 2.

†BULRUSH. A person who was slender in form was popularly compared to a bulrush.

These therefore they diet, albeit that the nature of the gyrles is to be ful and faste; neverthelesse by this their differnt dressing and trimming of them, they make them as small as a bulrush: and hereupon it make them as small as a buirnah: ann nercupon falls out that young men are enamoured of them.

Terence in English, 1014.

BUMBARD. See BOMBARD. BUMBAST. See BOMBAST.

UMBASTE. A jocular word for to beat, or baste. [See BOMBAST.] BUMBASTE.

I shall bumbaste you, you mocking knave.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 209. BUMBLE-BEE. The humble bee was often so called; to bumble being an old word for, to make a humming noise. See Skinner. A poem printed in 1599 was entitled Caltha Poetarum, or the Bumble bee. Dr. Johnson's conjecture, that the humble-bee is so called from having no sting, is evidently erroneous: that insect being as well armed as any of its tribe. The verb to bumble occurs in Chaucer.

And as a bitore bumbleth in the mire. Wif. of Bath. Humble-bee is either from to hum, or +To BUNCH. To thump.

is a corruption of this.

tBut still persever as the bumble-bes, Repinclesse in their dung, and desperate. Copley's Fig for Fortune, 1596, p. 78. IIt is sometimes called simply a bumble.

Through which with case the lusty bumbles break.

Whiting's Albino and Bellama, 1638.

+BUM-CARD. A card used by dishonest gamesters.

Eyther by pricking of a carde, or pinching of it, cutting at the nicke; cyther by a bumbe carde finely under, over, or in the middes, &c., and what not to deceyve? Northbrooke, Treatise against Dicing, 1877.

To those exployts he ever stands prepard;
A villaine excellent at a bum-card.

Rowlands' Humors Ordinarie. +BUM-DAGGERS. Large daggers which were worn by soldiers in the place where they now carry bayonets.

Two thousand hardy Scots, with glaved blades, bum-daggers and white kerchers, such as will fight and face the fiery French.

Sampson's Vow Breaker, 1636.

+BUMKIN. A burlesque term for the posteriors.

And so I take my leave; prithee, sweet Thumkin, Hold up thy coats, that I may kisse thy bumbin. Wit Restor'd, 1658.

+BUMLEAF. "At each bum leaf, or high inch of paper seven leaves distant," in a book. Cotgr., p. 89.

BUM-ROLLS. Stuffed cushions, used by women of middling rank, to make their petticoats swell out, in lieu of the farthingales, which were more expensive. The cork rumps, and other contrivances of more modern date, had therefore less of novelty than was imagined.

Nor you nor your house were so much as spoken of, before I disbased myself from my hood and my farthingal, to these bum-rouse, and your whalebone bodice.

B. Jons. Poetast., ii, 1.
Those virtues [of a bawd] rais'd her from the flat petticoat and kercher, to the gorget and bum-roll.

Parson's Wedding, O. Pl., xi, 460.

BUM-TROTH. A grotesque contraction of "by my troth."

No, bum troth, good man Grumbe, his name is Stephano.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 211.

Bum troth, but few such roysters come to my yeares at this day.

So also bum ladie, for "by my lady," i. e., by the Virgin Mary.

Nay, bum-ladie, I will not, by St. Ame.

Promos and Cassandra, iv, 7.

The common word for a +BUNCH. lump or swelling. Formerly bunchback was the word for what we now call hunch-back.

A bunch or knot in the tree, bruscum.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 93.

That is worthie to bee beaten, buncked, battered, punished, &c. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 854.

+BUNCH-CLOD. A clod-hopper; a

There are a great many bunch-clods in the world, that had rather have a belly full of victuals than a handsome sweetheart Poor Robin.

†BUNCH, MOTHER, occurs as the name of a celebrated ale-wife, apparently of the latter part of the 16th She is mentioned by Dekker, in his Satiromastix, printed in 1602; and in 1604 was published a jest-book entitled, Pasquils Jests, mixed with Mother Bunches Merriments.

Mothers by alime, as frogs, which may be alluded to Mother Bunches slymic sie, that hath made her and some other of her filpot familie so wealthie.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

BUNG. A low-lived term of reproach for a sharper or pickpocket. for a sharper or preapeoner.

Away, you cut-purse rascal, you filthy bung, away!

2 Hon. 17, ii, 4.

My bung observing this, takes hold of time,
Just as this lord was drawing for a prime,
And smoothly nims his purse that lay beside him.

An Age for Apes, 1658, p. 232.

In the same book, p. 323, a stealer of buttons is called a button-bung. Bung, in the cant language, meant also a pocket, and a purse.

BURBAGE, RICHARD. One of the actors in the time of Shakespeare, who with others is a speaker in the induction to Marston's Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 10. By a foolish inattention, he is twice miscalled Henry in the course of that dialogue. The best account of him is in the Biographia Dramatica. He, with Field, receives an oblique compliment from B. Jonson, though it is in character of the foolish Cokes: Cok. Which [of the puppet actors] is your Burbage now?

Leath. What mean you by that, sir?
Cok. Your best actor, your Field. Barth. Fair, v. 3. BURDELLO. See BORDELLO.

To BURGEN, for burgeon. To sprout out. See Bourgeon.

With my dear self, and my most prosp'rous parts,
They do so spring and burgeon. B. Jons. Fix., iii, 1.
The waterie flowres and lillies on the bankes,
Like blazing comets, burgen all in rankes.

Peele's Arayament of Paris, 1584.

BURGH, or more properly BURR. part of the handle of a tilting lance, thus exactly described by R. Holmes: "The burre is a broad ring of iron behind the handle, which burre is brought into the sufflue or rest, when the tilter is ready to run against his enimy, or prepareth himself to combate or encounter his adverse partv." Acad. of Armory, B. iii, ch. 17, MS. Harl., 2033.

I'll try one speare —, though it prove too short by the burgh. Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 38. Also, the projecting rim of a deer's horn, close to the head.

BURGONET, or BURGANET. A kind of helmet. A Burgundian's casque. Skinner.

And that I'll write upon thy burgonet.

2 Hen. FI, v, 1. This demy Atlas of the world, the art. #. Cl., i, 5.

Upon his head his glistering burganet,
The which was wrought by wonderous device.

Spens. Muiopot, i, 73.

See O. Pl., vi, 542.

BURGANT is a contraction, or corruption of burganet.

They rode, not with fans to ward their faces from the wind, but with burgant, to resist the stroke of a battle-axe.

Greene's Quip, Fc., Harl. Misc., v, 403.

BURGULLIAN. Supposed to mean a bully or braggadocio; and conjectured to be a term of contempt, invented upon the overthrow of the Bastard of Burgundy in a contest with Anthony Woodville, in Smithfield, 1467.
When was Bobadill here, your captain? that rogue, that foist, that fencing burguillian.

B. Jons. Ev. M. in H., iv. 2.

See Mr. Gifford's note.

+BURLIBOND. Clumsy; unwieldy.

The Danes, who stands so much upon their unweldie burlibound souldiery, that they account of no man that hath not a battle-are at his girdle.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

+To BURLIE. To cause to swell out. Think'st thou that paunch, that burlies out thy coat, Is thriving fat; or flesh, that seems so brawny? Thy paunch is dropaied and thy checks are bloat; Thy lips are white, and thy complexion tawny.

Quarles' Emblem.

To BURN DAY LIGHT. A proverbial phrase, applicable to superfluous actions in general.

in general.

We burn day light: here, read, read.

Mer. W., ii, l. Mercutio gives a full explanation of Come, we burn day light, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so. Merc. I mean, sir, in delay

We waste our lights in vaiu, like lamps by day.

Rom. and Jul., i, 4.

BURNING, or BRENNING. One of the names for a disorder which has no decent appellation. Alluded to in this passage:

No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors. Lear, iii, 9. +BURNING-STONE.

Mine is Canary-rhetorick, that alone Would turn Disna to a burning stone, Stone with amazement, burning with loves fire; Hard to the touch, but short in her desire.

121

Witts Recreations, 1654. BURRATINE. Perhaps the same as barracan, explained by the dictionaries a coarse kind of camlet. Mr. Gifford quotes Purchas's Microcosmus, where, he says, it is spoken of, as "a strange stuff, recently devised, and brought into wear."

B. Jonson introduces burratines, as if they were a kind of creatures, but his commentators understand him to mean monsters so dressed. It occurs only in a stage direction.

Here the first antimasque entered. A she-monster, delivered of six burratines, that dance with six panta-loons.

Vision of Del., Giff. Jon., vii, p. 300.

†BURRE. A part of the spear used in tilting. See BURGH.

Some had the spere, the surre, the cronet al yelowe, and other had them of diverse colours.

Half's Union, 1548, Hen. IF, fol. 12.

An exchange in general. When spoken of in London, commonly the New Exchange in the Strand, unless otherwise distinguished.

She says, she went to the burse for patterns,

—You shall find her at St. Kathern's.

Rearing Girl, O. Pl., vi, 81.

I knew not what a coach is

To hurry me to the Burse, or Old Exchange.

Mass. City Mad., iii, 1.

See Gifford on the place.

When the Royal Exchange was meant, it was usually so distinguished, at least after the building of the other.

Afer hath sold his land and bought a horse, Wherewith he praneeth to the royal Burse. Wit's Recreations, 1663, Epigr. 106.

Baker speaks thus of the building of the New Exchange, in the Strand:

Also at this time in the Strand, on the north side of Also at this time in the Strand, on the north side of Durham house, where stood an old long stable, Robert earl of Salisbury, now lord treasurer of England, caused to be built a stately building, which upon Tuesday the tenth of April in the year 1609, was begun to be richly furnished with wares; and the next day after, the king, the queen, and prince, with many great lords and ladies, came to see it, and then shabine even it the name of British's Bures. the king gave it the name of Britain's Burs

Chronicle, 1609. Exeter Change was a part of an old mansion of the earls of Exeter, variously appropriated, till it took the present form. [It has been demolished] The rooms over the New Exchange were formerly shops of great resort for female finery; a kind of bazaar.

for female Hurry, a Burst.

†BURSEN, part. p. Burst.

Whereat death seazing on his vitall part,
His members bursen, loathed life out flies,
And with a deep-fetcht groan to Charon hies.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1683.

To BURST, was formerly used for to break.

You will not pay for the glasses you have burst.

Tam. Shr., Induct. 1.

I'll be sworn he never saw him, but once in the Tultyard; and then he burst his head, for crouding among the marshal's-men.

2 Hen. IV, iii, 3.

He burst his lance against the sand below.

Pairf. Tasso, vii, 87. Bursting of lances was a very common expression. See also O. Pl., ii, 12.

BUSH. The proverb, Good wine needs no bush, alludes to the bush which was usually hung out at vintners' doors. It was of ivy, according to classical propriety, that plant being sacred to Bacchus.

Now a days the good wyne needeth none ivye garland.

Gascoigne's Glass. of Gov.

Tis like the ivy-bush unto a tavern. Rival Friends.

Green ivy-bushes at the vintners' doors.

Sumner's last Will and Test.

See Mr. Steevens's note on the epilogue to As you like it.

The good wine I produce needs no iry-bush.

Summary on Du Bartas. To the Reader. BUSH-LANE, in London, seems to have been famous for very small needles. And now they may go look this Bush-lane needle in a bottle of hay.

Lenton's Leas., Char. 9.

It is in Cannon street, Walbrook.

To trouble with business; to importune. Fr.

He procurith traylors, arrand theves, and other notorious offendors to accuse me, and both occupieth himself in suche thinges, and busyneth moche the kinges highnes consayle in England, whiche I am sure they estem as appertaynyth. State Papers, iii, 25.

BUSINESS. A term often affectedly used, by the gentlemen who piqued themselves upon the knowledge of the duello, for what is now called an affair of honour, a quarrel. To make a master of the duel, a carrier of the differences, Ben Jonson puts, among other ingredients, "a drachm of the business," and adds,

For that's the word of tincture, the business. Let me alone with the business. I will carry the business. I do understand the business. I do find an affront in do understand the business. I do find an affront in the business. Masque of Mercury, J.c., vol. v, p. 431.

So Beaumont and Fletcher,

Could Caranza himself
Carry a business better. Love's Pilgrim, v. Occupation; diligence.

+BUSINESS. Often used in an indelicate sense.

I have searched for a knave called Idlenis,
But I canot find him for all ny businis.

Mariage of Witt and Wisdome.

And Lais of Corinth, ask'd Demosthenes
One hundred crownes for one nights businesse.

Taylor's Workes, 1630

What Crispulus is that in a new gown, All trim'd with loops and buttons up and down, That leans there on his arm in private chat With thy young wife, what Crispulus is that?

As cid and goat, and great goats mother, And runt, and cow, and good cows uther:
And once but taste of the Welse mutton. Your Englis sheeps not worth a button.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

A lawyer hath but a bad trade there, for any cause or controversie is tryed and determined in three dayes, quirks, quiddits, demurs, habeas corposes, sursararaes, procedendoes, or any such dilatory law-tricks are abolished, and not worth a button.

ion. Taylor's Workes, 1630. The Dutch were especially remarkable for the number of buttons on their dress.

As, in the common proverb,

The Dutchman drinks his buttons off, the English

The Dutchman urinks and Doublet and all away.

Glapthorne's Ladies Priviledge, 1640. The phrase in the following passage is not so easily explained.

And herein she served herself another way, for her adversary defamed her for swearing and unswearing, and it was not amiss to have a button in the room.

Lives of the Norths. +BUTTONS OF NAPLES. Syphilitic

Specially because his souldiers were much given to venerie. The Frenchmen at that siege got the buttons of Naples (as we terme them) which doth much annoy them at this day. But the first finding of this griev-ous sicknesse, was brought into Spaine, by Columbus at his coming home, so that all Christendome may curse the king and Columbus.

+BUTTON, or BUTTONED, CAP.

Upon his head he wore a filtry, coarse biggin, and next it a garnish of nightcaps, with a sage butter, cap, of the forme of a cow-sheard, overspred verie orderly.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1893 next it a garnish of nightcaps, with a sage butten cop, of the forme of a cow-sheard, overspred verie orderly.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1593

A plaine old man of threescore yeeres, with a buttoned cop, a lockram falling-band, course but cleane, a russet coat, a white belt of a horse hide, light horse coller white leather, a close round breech of russet sheeps wool, with a long stock of white kersey, a high shoe with yelow buckles, all white with dust. Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

+BUTTON-SMOCK. An old song on the button-smock, dated 1621, is preserved in MS. Harl., 1927. It merely appears to be applied to a smock which buttoned down in the front. BUXOM, originally meant obedient, from a Saxon etymology. It is now used only in the sense of gay, lively; and is clearly formed of the word buck and the termination some. Bucksome, spirited, lively as a buck. It is difficult to say in which sense Shakespeare uses it here.

Bardolph a soldier, firm and sound of heart, Of busom valour. Hen. V, iii, 6. I rather think the modern sense preferable. There is no doubt that the old meaning is to be assigned in the following passage of Spenser, and many others:

By OLHERS:
So wild a beast, so tame ytaught to be
And busom to his bands, is joy to see.
Moth. Hubb. Tale, 625.

In this sense Milton speaks of "the buxom air."

1XOM AIr."

†Rom. About your busines,
And I'le goe visitt my young sickly suckling.

O, 'tis a bucksome boy!

Wilson's Inconstant Lady, 1614.

+BUY-ALL. Purchase. Such at least appears to be the meaning of this term in the History of Don Quixote. 1675, f. 63.

BUZZARD, in the proverb, "As blind as a buzzard," or a blind buzzard, certainly means a beetle. Ray has, "as blind as a beetle," p. 218, with this explanation of it:

this explanation of it:
A beetle is thought to be blind, because in the evening it will fly with its full force against a man's face, or any thing else which happens to be in its way;
which other insects, as bees, hornets, &c. will not do.
He has also, as "dull as a beetle," p. 221. But there perhaps the allusion is to a carpenter's beetle, or mallet. This kind of buzzard was probably meant by Hudibras, when he undertook to prove.

That a buzzard is no fowl. The beetle was familiarly called a buzzard, from its peculiar buzzing noise: as in Staffordshire, a cockchafer is still called a hum-buz. buzzard-moth, a kind of sphinx. seems to be meant in the following passage, by the company it appears in: O owle! hast thou only kept company with bats, buzzards, and beetles, in this long retirement in the desert? Are you of a feather? It is blindnesse, obstinate blindnesse. Gayl. Fast. Notes, p. 188.

In the following passage also, a beetle's must be meant by a buzzard's nest:

That, from the lothsome mud from whence thou camest,
Thou art so bold, out of thy buseard's nest,

To gaze upon the sun of her perfections.

Weakest goes t. Wall, sign. C, 4 b.

I have an imperfect recollection, though I cannot bring proof of the fact, that, in my childhood, all nightflying moths were popularly called buzzards. All insects which buzz remarkably might naturally so be called.

The bird called the buzzard, or the bald-kite, is known, on the contrary, to be peculiarly sharp-sighted. In that sense, the word is derived from the French, busard.

"Between hawk and buzzard," means, between a good thing and a bad of the same kind: the heavy being the true sporting bird, the buzzard a heavy lazy fowl of the same species, butro ignarus, the sluggish buz-sard. Comenii Janua. Lond. ed. 1662, 9 146. Oh, slow-wing'd turtle, shall a buzzard take thee? Tam. of Shr., ii, 1.

†To BUZZLE. To swell out. O BUZZLB. TO SWEII OUT.

Lett us be gone, then, and performe the rest
Of our observance in some scate unscene.

Ile flutter upp, and take my perche upon
Some citty head-attire, and looke through that (Buzzelld with bone lace) like myselfe in state.

Masque of the Twelve Months.

Distracted were her thoughts, in silence tyde,
Till love and honour buzzled, then she cryde.

Historic of Albino & Bellama, 1638.

tB'W'Y. An abbreviation of be with you, for God be with vou!

+BY-AND-BY. One of the cries of tapsters in inns. English Roque, ed. 1719, p. 91. †BY-ARTS. Cunning tricks.

What others now count qualities and parts,
She thought but complements, and meer by-arts.

Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

+BY-BLOW. A bastard.

In such a ladies lappe, at such a slipperie by-blow,
That in a world so wide could not be found such a wilie That in a world so wide could not be found such a wille Lad; in an age so old, could not be found such an old lad. Barnefield's Affectionate Shepherd, 1594.

Sal. Thou speak'st not like a subject; what sthy name?

Fil. My name is Draco.

Sal. Of the Athenian Draco's?

Fil. No, of the English Drakes, great Captain Drake (That sail'd the world round) left in Spain a by-blow, Of whom I come.

The Slighted Maid, p. 27.

VENDES Sales below the Stighted Maid, p. 27.

+BY-ENDS. Selfish objects. Y-ENDS. Selinan Objects.

And happy he, who free from all by-ends,
Gapes not for filthy lucre, nor intends

The noise of empty armour, but rais'd high
To bester cares, minds heaven; and doth try
To see and know the Deity only there

Where he himself discloseth. Cartseright's Poens, 1651.

BY'R LAKIN. A familiar diminutive of by our lady, i. e., by our ladykin.

By rlakin, a parlous feare. Mids. N. Dr., iii, 1. Shakespeare has stamped no great credit upon the expression, by putting it into the mouth of Snout the bellows-mender. Preston's Cambyses is quoted for the same phrase, which, as Shakespeare ridicules it in other parts of those scenes, perhaps he might allude to here also.

'BYE, for Abye, q. v. Thou, Porrex, thou shalt dearly 'bye the same.

Forr. and Porr., O. Pl., i, 140. It is written also buy, which, when dear is added, certainly makes as good sense.

And minding now to make her buy it deare, With furie great and rage at her she flies. Harr. Ar., xxxvi, 18.

C.

CABBAGES. These are said to have been first imported from Holland in Queen Elizabeth's time.

ueen Elizabeth's unit.

He has received weekly intelligence,
Upon my knowledge, out of the Low Countries,
(For all parts of the world) in cabbages.

B. Jons. Par. ii, 1.

B. Jons. Fos., 11, 1.

This is not an expression thrown out at random, or by chance. Cabbages were not originally the natural growth of England; but about this time they were sent to us from Holland, and so became the product Whalley's Note. This may seem extraordinary, but

Evelyn confirms it:

The scarce an hundred years since we first had cabbages out of Holland, Sir Arth. Ashley of Wiburg St. Giles, in Dorsetshire, being, as I am told, the first who planted them in England. Acetaria, or Disc. of Sallets.

This, however, must not be understood of all the species, some, under the name of cole-worts, having been known much longer.

+CABBISH. An early manner of spelling cabbage.

The violet, lady Flavia bestowed on thee, I wish thee, and if thou like it, I will further thee; otherwise, if thou persist in thy old follies, whereby to increase thy new griefes, I will never come where thou art, nor shalt thou have accesse to the place where I am. For as little agreement shall there be between us, as is betweene the vine and the cabbish; the oake and the olive-tree; the serpent and the ash-tree; the yron and Theamides.

Lylie's Euphnes and his England.

CABLE-HATBAND. A fashion supposed to have been introduced at the very close of the 16th century, being a twisted cord of gold, silver, or silk, worn round the hat. world I had on a gold cable.halband, then new come up, which I wore about a murrey French hat I had,—cuts my hatband, and yet it was massie goldsmith's work, &c.

B. Jons. Er. Man out of H., iv, 6.
More cable, till he had as much as my cable.halband to fence him.

Mariton, dni. f. Mell., ii, 1.

+CACHES. Occurs in the following passage as the name of a kind of dog. but perhaps it is only a misprint for raches.

Butchers dogs, bloud-hounds, dunghill dogges, trindle-tailes, prick-eard curres, small ladies puppies, caches, and bastards.

Returne from Pernassus, 1606. +CACKRELL. A fish which was celebrated for its laxative qualities. Mæna, Plin. µavis. Cagarel, quod alvum citet. A cackrell, so called, because it maketh the eaters laxative: some take it for a herring or sprat.

Nomenclater, 1585.

Defective writing. +CACOGRAPHY. It seems to have been introduced as an affected word.

On the other side, the counsellor drew up I know not how many writings, with two words in a line, that he might get the more. And to swell up the number, his clerk used a certain kinde of cacographie, that admitted a multitude of superfluous letters; you would have judged him a sworn enemy to those that will have men write as they speak, or fancy Du-gardismes, and spell com, hav, &c. without e, and detor, dout without b. Comical History of Francion, 1655.

+CADDESS. A jackdaw. Randle Holme, in his Academy of Armes, p. 248, has "Jackdaw. In some places it is called a caddasse, or choff." See Caddow.

A flock of stares or caddesses, such fear brought his Chapman, II., xvi, 548.

CADDIS. A kind of ferret, or worsted lace

They come to him by the gross; inkles, caddisses, cambricks, lawns.

Wint. Tale, iv, 3.

Mr. Steevens, on this passage, says, "I do not exactly know what caddisses are:" but it is plain from the context, that the expression is not used as the plural of a caddis, but as a collective term for quantities of caddis of different kinds, as inkles, &c.

Ordinary garters were sometimes made of caddis. One of the epithets given by prince Henry to the landlord is "caddis garter." 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. Garters were then worn in sight, and therefore to wear a coarse, cheap sort, was reproachful. The same epithet is used in Glapthorne's Wit in a Constable. We are told also of "footmen in caddis," meaning the worsted lace on their clothes.

†CADDOW. A jackdaw.

Ah, that drabe, she can cackel like a cadowe.

Mariage of Witt and Wisdome.

CADE. A cade of herrings, that is, a cask or barrel of them: from which keg is evidently corrupted. can be no doubt that it was made from cadus, notwithstanding Nash's fanciful, or rather jocular derivation: The rebel Jack Cade was the first that devised to put redde herrings in cades; and from him they have their name. Praise of B. Her., 1599.

Shakespeare has turned the derivation the contrary way:

We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father. Dick. Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.
2 Hen. VI, iv, 2.

CADGE. A round frame of wood, on which the cadgers, or sellers of hawks, carried their birds for sale. Bailey, &c. Cadger is also given, as meaning a huckster, from which the familiar term codger is more likely to CAIUS. The name of a writer on some be formed, than from any foreign origin.

CADŇAT. A word mentioned only, as far as I know, in a book entitled, "The perfect School of Instruction for Officers of the Mouth." By G. Rosse, 12mo, 1682; where it is de-

A sort of state covering for princes, dukes, or peers, at a great dinner. P. 92. This might be thought to mean a canopy; yet cadenas, its apparent origin, signifies rather a case of instru-"On appelle aussi cadenas ments. une espece de coffre, ou d'etui, qui contient une cuillere, une fourchette, et un couteau, qu'on sert pour le Roi. ou pour les personnes d'une grande distinction." Manuel Lexique. [The term cadenas was given in French to the ship-formed vessel belonging to the table service which is more commonly called a nef.

CAFFLING. Probably, for cavilling. Ah if I now put in some caffling clause,
I shall be call'd unconstant all my days.

Harr. Ar., xlv, 97.

CAIN-COLOUR'D. Yellow or red, as a colour of hair; which, being esteemed a deformity, was by common consent attributed to Cain and Judas.

No forsooth: he hath but a little wee face, with a yellow beard; a Cain-colour'd beard. Mer. W., i, 4. The old copies read it thus; the later, till Theobald's time, have cane-colour'd. which might do, but is not so pro-What makes it clear that we should prefer Cain-colour'd, is the . expression of Abram-colour'd above noticed, and that of a Judas beard, for a red beard. See JUDAS COLOUR. There is some reason to think that the devil himself had sometimes this attribute given:

tribute given:

Run to the counter,
Fetch me a red-bearded serjeant; I'll make
You, captain, think the devil of hell is come
To fetch you, if once he fasten on you.

Ram Alley, O. Pt., v, 463.

At all events, it shows how odious a red beard was esteemed.

†CAINSHAM-SMOKE. We have not been able to ascertain the origin of this phrase, which is explained as follows.

Cainsham-smoke, a man's weeping when beat by his wife.

Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

kind of Rosverucianism: thence adopted by Shakespeare for the name of his French doctor in the Merry Wives of Windsor. Mr. Ames had among his MSS, one of the "secret writings of Dr. Caius." See Dr. Farmer's note on the first entry of Dr. Caius in the Mer. W. [The Dr. Cains who wrote upon magical and astrological subjects was no doubt the celebrated master of Caius College, Cambridge, who flourished in the reign of Henry VIII. Some of his MSS. on these subjects are still preserved.

CAKB. "My cake is dough." obsolete proverb, implying the loss of hope, or expectation; a cake which comes out of the oven in the state of dough being considered as utterly spoiled.

My cake is dough: but I'll in among the rest; Out of hope of all,—but my share in the feast. Tam. Shr., v, 1.

Steward, your cake is downs well as mine.

Steward, your cake is down as well as mine.

B. Jon. Case is alter'd, seene last.
You shall have rare sport anon, if my cake be'n't dough,
and my plot do but take.

Rabelais, by Ozell, vol. iv, p. 106.
Notwithstending all these traverses, we are confident here that the match will take, otherwise my cake is dough.

Howell's Letters, I, § 8, 1, 12. CAKE-BREAD. Rolls, or manchets.

Aye and eat them all too, an they were in cake-bread.

B. Jons. Barth. F., v. S.

A tailor is there spoken of: and tailors were famous for eating hot rolls. See TAILOR.

†A fritter or fine cake-bread, artolaganus.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 292.

†Cake-bread, panis aromaticus. Ibid., p. 177.

†A new shav'd cobler follows him, as't hapt,

With his young cake-bread in his cloke close wrapt.

Satyr against Hypocrites, 1689.

CALAIS. Duellists being punishable by the laws of England, it was customary for them, after we had lost Calais, to fight on the sands there, as Calais, to fight on the small the nearest foreign ground.

If we concur in all, write a formal challenge, and bring thy second: meanwhile I make provision Of Calais send, to fight upon securely.

Albumazer, O. Pl., vii, 218.

The speaker here seems to propose a ludicrous way of evading the law, by fetching sand from Calais, and thus fighting on foreign ground. The sands of Calais are literally meant in other passages:

Gilbert, this glove I send thee from my hand, And challenge thee to meet on Callis sand, On this day moneth resolve I will be there. 5. Ecouland's Good Noves and Bad Noves, 1622, sig. F, 2.

Mr. Strangeways, meaning to challenge his brother-in-law, Mr. Fussel. said.

Calais sands were a fitter place for our dispute than Westminster Hall. Harl. Misc., iv, p. 8, Park's ed. But his envy is never stirred so much as when gentlemen go over to fight upon Calais sands.

Earle's Microc., 33, p. 90, Bliss's ed.

See also the notes there.

So in a poem called the Counterscuffle. printed in 1670:

He durst his enemy withstand, Or at Tergoos, or Calis-sand, And bravely there with sword in hand

Would greet him.

Dryden's Misc., 12mo, iii, 334. Calais sand was imported for domestic purposes also:

When he brings in a prize, unless it be Cockles, or Carlis sand to scour with, I'll renounce my five mark a year.

B. & Fl. Honest M. Fortune, v., p. 459.

Callis was at this time the common manner of spelling the word.]

†Away went hee and crost the sea, With's master, to the Isle of Rhea, A good way beyond Callics.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†CALIS, or CALES. Cadiz. In Vere's Commentaries, 1657, we have a description of the Calis journey, while the accompanying map is lettered "The Bay of Cadiz."

CALF'S-SKIN. Fools kept for diversion in great families were often distinguished by coats of calf-skin, with buttons down the back. Therefore Constance and Falconbridge mean to call Austria a fool, in that sarcastic line so often repeated,

And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs. His calf's-skin jests from hence are clear exil'd. Prol. to Wily Beguiled, +CALIDITY. Hent. Latin.

P. Passe at over, gentle sir, for the truth is, exceeding in caliditie, it enflames the bloud, as doth also sage, garlicke, wild mynt, pepper, and other such like, but to qualifie a little the caliditie of those meates you have taken downe, will you please to eate a little of these cold cates.

Passenger of Renrenuto, 1612.

CALIPOLIS. A character in a bombastic tragedy, printed in 1594, and called the Battel of Alcazar, &c., some lines of which are burlesqued and ridiculed by Shakespeare and several other dramatists. A single line of parody is spouted by Pistol:

Feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis. 2 Hen. IF, ii, 4. Several lines together are inserted by Ben Jonson in the Poetaster, iii, 4, and are truly ridiculous. The line taken by Shakespeare is also in Decker's Satiromastix, Or. of Engl. Dr., iii, 254, and in Marston's What you will. The old interludes, and the early attempts at tragedy, were often ridiculed, when dignity of style was better understood. Thus king Darius, king Cambyses, and others, are occasionally alluded to and quoted. See particularly the same scene in the Poetaster.

CALIVER. A gun, or musquet. Skinner and others derive it from calibre. which means only the bore, or diameter of a piece. But the more numerous authorities define it as "a small gun used at sea," and some as exactly synonymous with arquebuse. It was probably of various sizes, but the quotations show that it was carried by infantry. Its derivation is not yet made out.

Such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild duck.

1 Hen. IV. iv. 2. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

2 Hen. IV. iii. 2.

He is so hung with pikes, halberds, petronels, calieres, and muskets, that he looks like a justice of peace's hall.

B. Jons. St. Wom., iv, 2.

In the following passage it is accented on the middle syllable:

Tall souldiers thence he to the world delivers,
And out they fly, all arm'd with pikes and darts,
With halberts, and with muskets, and calivers.

Harringt. Epig., i, 90.

To CALKE, for to calculate.

What mean then foole astrologers to calke,
That twinckling starres fling down the fixed fate,
And all is guided by the starrie state.

Mirr. Mag., p. 425.

+CALKER. A calculator; one who calculates nativities, &c.

The imagination is not so good for curing as this which I seeke, which inviteth a man to be a witch, superstitious, a magician, a deceiver, a palmister, a fortune-teller, and a calker.

Triall of Wits, 1604, p. 163.

67. Item, whether you have any conjurers, charmers, calcours, witches, or fortune-tellers, who they are, and who do resort unto them for counsell?

Articles of Inquirie by the B. of Sarum, 1614.

CALKYNS, or CALKINS. Apparently from calx, a heel; the hinder parts of a horse shoe, which are sometimes turned up.

Cansyng a smyth to shoe three horses for him contrarily, with the calkyns forward, that it should not bee perceyved which way he had taken.

Holinia. Hist. of Scotl., sign. U, 8 b.
On this horse is Arcite

Trotting the stones of Athens, which the calkins
Did rather tell than trample. Two Noble Kinsm., v, 4. +CALLABRE. A sort of fur.

And fourteen of them to be aldermen, that is to say, vj. graye clokes and viij. callabre.

Order of the Hospitalls, 1557.

CALLET, CALLAT, or, according to Skinner, CALOT. A woman of bad character.

character.

A callat

Of boundless tongue; who late hath beat her husband,

Winter's T., ii, 3. Skinner derives it from calotte, a sort of leathern cap worn by some women in France; but Mr. Todd properly objects to that derivation. See Todd.

objects to that derivation.

Why the callet
You told me of, here I have ta'en disguis'd.

B. Jons. Foz., iv, 3.

But I did not think a man of your age and beard had been so lascivious, to keep a disguis'd callet under my nose.

Antiquary, O. Pl., x, 57.

It is more likely to have been derived from the personage next mentioned.

CALLOT, KIT. The fair, or perhaps more properly the brown associate, of one Giles Hather. They are supposed to have been the first couple of English persons who took up the occupation of gipsies. So says Mr. Whalley, but I know not his authority.

To set Kit Callot forth in prose or rhime, Or who was Cleopatra for the time. B. Jons. Masque of Gips., vol. vi, p. 79.

It certainly might mean Kit, the callot, or strumpet.

CALLOT, or CALOT, meant also any plain coif or skull-cap, such as is still worn by serjeants-at-law, on their wigs. From the French calotte, eod. Accented on the last syllable. sensu.

> That tread the path of public businesses Know what a tacit shrug is, or a shrink, The wearing the callot, the politic hood,

And twenty other parerga.

B. Jons. Magn. Lady, act i. Together of the fashions
Of man and woman, how his callet and her

Black-bag came on together.

Brome New Acad., iv, p. 85. Callet is also used as a verb, for to rail, in the following passage; probably from the violent language often used by callets.

Or to hear her in her spleen Callet like a butter-quean. Ellis's Specimens, vol. iii, p. 84.

+CALLOW. Unfledged. Applied properly to birds, but often used metaphorically.

Fran. Alas poor creature, thou dost not understand what belongs to a waiting-damsel; it is part of her office to discover her lady's secrets. I perceive by this, thou art but a callow-maid—and o' my conscience a virgin.

Maid. A virgin? Aye, a pure one.

Woman turn'd Bully, 1675.

Scribling assassinate, thy lines attest An ear-mark due, cub of the blatant beast, Whose wrath before 'tis syllabled for worse, Is blasphemy unfledg'd, a callow curse.

Cleareland's Poems, 1651.

A word which

CALLYMOOCHER. wants explanation. A term of reproach.

I do, thou upstart cally moocher, I do;
Tis well known to the parish I have been

Tis well known to the Twice ale-cunner.

Mayor of Quinb., O. Pl., xi, p. 132.

CALSOUNDS, or CALZOONS. Close linen or cotton trousers. Calecon, Fr. The uest that they were is a smocke of callico, with ample sleeves, much longer than their armes; under this, a paire of calsounds of the same, which reach to their ancles.

Sandys, Travels, p. 53.

Mr. Todd has it as calzoons, q. v.

+CALTROP. 1. An implement formed of four spikes, to be used against cavalry in war. It seems to be an invention of great antiquity, and is thus described in the Nomenclator, 1585.

Murices, Q. Curtio, et Val. Max. triboli sive tribuli, Veget machinulæ ferrææ tetragome, aculeis exatantibus infestæ, quæ spargi solent adversus hostiles eruptiones. 1968ao. Chaussetrappes. Engins of war foure square, with pricks or sharpe points, which are wont to be cast in the enimies way, when they would breake in upon the contrary side; caltraps.

+2. A name for the star-thistle, also derived from the French. Cotarave.

To CALVER. To prepare salmon, or other fish, in a peculiar way, which can only be done when they are fresh and Calver'd salmon is a dainty celebrated by all our old dramatists. May's Accomplished Cook, if that be sufficient authority, gives an ample receipt for preparing it. It is to be cut in slices, and scalded with wine and water and salt, then boiled up in white-wine vinegar, and set by to cool; and so kept, to be eaten hot or cold. P. 354.

Great lords, sometimes, For a change leave calver'd salmon, and eat sprats.

Massing. Guard., iv, 2. It now means, in the fish trade, only crimped salmon. tCAM. To do a thing cam, Crooked.

to do it contrarily. To doe a thing cleane kamme, out of order, the wrong

Cotgrave. CAMBRILS. A word which I cannot find acknowledged in any dictionary, but evidently meaning, in the following passage, legs; perhaps bowed legs particularly, from cambré, crooked, French. [Cambril signifies the hock of an animal.] In describing a satyr it is

But he's a very perfect goat below, His crooked cambrils arm'd with hoof and hair. Drayt. Nymphal, x, p. 1519.

CAMELOT. A town in Somersetshire. now called Camel, near South-Cadbury: much celebrated as one of the places at which king Arthur kept his court. The ancient Camelot was on a hill of that name, according to Selden: "By South-Cadbury is that Camelot, a hill of a mile compass at the top, four trenches circling it, and twixt every of them an earthen wall; the content of it within, about twenty acres, full of ruins and reliques of old buildings." Note the last, on Polyolbion, B. 3. Leland exclaims, on seeing it, "Dii boni! quot hic profundissimarum fossarum! quot hic egestæ terræ valla! quæ demum præcipitia! atque ut paucis finiam, videtur mihi quidem esse et naturæ et artis miraculum." Cited by Selden, ibid.

Like Camelot, what place was ever yet renown'd,
Where, as at Caerleon oft, he kept his table round?

Drayton, Polyolb., song iii, p. 715. It is often mentioned with Winchester. which was another residence of that famous king:

This round table he kept in divers places, especially at Carlion, Winchester, and Camalet in Somersetshire. Stor's Annals, sign. D, 6.

The old translator of the romance of Morte Arthure mistook it for the Welsh name of Winchester:

It swam downe the stream to the citie of Camelot, that is in English Winchester. Sign. K, part 1, bl. 1, 1634. In the editor's prologue to the same book, we find it removed into Wales: And yet a record remaineth in witnesse of him in Wales, in the towne of Camelot.

Shakespeare alludes to it in a less heroical character, as famous for geese, which were bred on the neighbouring Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, I'd drive ye cackling back to Camelot. Le Grand in his Fabliaux calls it Caramalot. Tom. i, p. 16.

CAMERARD. Comrade; but nearer to the French original, camerade.

misa, Ital.

His camerard, that bare him company,
Was a jollie light-timber'd jackanapes.
Greene's Quip., f.c., Harl. Misc., v, 490. [It is often spelt camerade, as in French, and sometimes camrado. †But finding myself too young for such a charge, and our religion differing, I have now made choice to go over camerade to a very worthy gentleman, baron Althams son, whom I knew in Stanes when my bro-Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. ther was there. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. †

CAM CAN 130

But to the purpose, my camerade, thou eatest up all the bread which I doe cut. I will form a complaint for this abuse, and cause thee to appeal in a case of seisin, and trespasse sciain, and trespasse.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.
†Car. Oh uncle, that you should thus carpe at my happines, and traduce my camradoes, men of such spirit and valour. Marmyon's Fine Companion, 1633.

CAMIS, CAMUS, or CAMICE. A light, loose dress or robe, of silk or other Of the same origin as materials. chemise.

All in a camis light of purple silke, Woven upon with silver subtly wrought, And quilted upon sattin, white as milke.

nilke. Sp. F. Q., V, v, 2. All in a silken cames lilly whight, Purfled upon with many a folded plight.

Ibid., II, iii, 26.

CAMISADO. Also from camisa. Thus explained:

explained:

A sudden assault, wherein the souldiers doe weare shirts over their armours, to know their owne company from the enemie, lest they should in the darke kill of their owne company in stead of the enemie; it cometh of the Spanish camiea, a shirt. Minskew. For I this day will lead the forlorn hope, The camisade shall be given by me.

Four Prestices of Lond., O. Pl., vi, 539. Some for engaging to suppress
The camisado of surplices.

Hudibr., III, ii, 297.

It is also used for the shirt so put on. See Todd.

+CAMEL-BACKED. Was used not uncommonly in the sense of hunchbacked.

That is crump-shouldered, or cammell-backed, gibbus, Withals Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 286. A CAMOCK. A crooked tree; also a crooked beam, or knee of timber, used in ship-building, &c. From kam, Welsh and Erse, for crooked. See KAM.

Bitter the blossom when the fruit is sour, And early crook'd that will a camock be

And early crook'd that will a cameer be.

Drayt. Rel., 7.

But timely, madam, crooks the tree that will be a cameek, and young it pricks that will be a thorn.

Lylly's Endymion.

Camocks must be bowed with sleight not strength.

Ibid., Sappko and Phao, 1591.
Full hard it is a camocke straight to make.

Engl. Parn. repr. in Heliconia, p. 356. A lamentable mistake is made in the note on this word, p. 622 of that reprint.

But I well know, that a bitter roote is amended with a sweet graft, and crooked trees prove good cammocks, and wild grapes make pleasant wine.

Buph. and his Engl., C, 3.

Camock meant also a weed called restharrow, so named, probably, from the crookedness of its roots. It is the ononis spinosa of Linnæus.

†CAMOUS. The meaning of this word, used in the following passage, is Perhaps it is equivalent uncertain. to debauchery.

When numes rested she did her season note. And she with Bacchus her camous did promote Barclay's Ecloques, 1570.

CAMUSED. Flat, broad, and crooked; as applied to a nose, what we popularly call a snub-nose. French.

And though my nose be camused, my lips thick, And my chin bristled, Pan, great Pan, was such! Skelton has "camously crooked."?

To CAN. Used formerly for to know, or be skilful.

I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French. And they can well on horseback Haml., iv Haml., iv, 7. Let the priest in surplice white, That defunctive musick can.

Seameth thy flock thy counsel can, So lustless been they, so weak, so wan.

So lustices been they, so weak, so wan.

Spens. Februar., 77.

I know and can by roate the tale that I would tell.

Ld. Surrey's Songs, &c., p. 5. To be able, to have power. $+T_0$ CAN.

In evil, the best condition is not to will, the second not to can Bacon, Essay xi.

CANARY, or CANARIES. A quick and lively dance; the music to which consisted of two strains with eight bars in each. See Sir John Hawkins's Hist. of Music, iv, 391.

I have seen a medicine
That's able to breathe life into a stone; Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary
With sprightly fire and motion.

All's W., ii. 1. At a place, sweet acquaintance, where your health danc'd the canaries i faith.

Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 284.

When Mrs. Quickly says, "You have brought her into such a canaries," &c. (Mer. W., ii, 2), she probably means to say quandary, which, though not a very elegant word itself, is corrupted by her.

†Mistris Minx . . . that lookes as simperingly as if she were besmeard, and jets it as gingerly as if she were dancing the canaries

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1593 CANARY WINE. Wine from the Canary Islands, by some called sweet sack; sherry, the original sack, not being sweet; whence Howell says in his letters that Sherries and Malagas, well mingled, pass for Canaries in most taverns. Letter to Lord Cliffagd, Oct. 7, 1644. Canarie-wise, which beareth the name of the islands from whence it is brought, is of some termed a sacke, with this adjunct sweete; but yet very improperly, for it differeth not only from sacke in sweetnesse and pleasantness of taste, but also in colour and consistence, for it is not so white in colour as sack, nor so thin in substance; wherefore it is more nutritive than sack, and less penetrative.

Venueri Via recta ad Vit. longam, 4to, 1623.

See SACK.

CAN

In the following proverbial phonse there appears to be a play upon the word.

And shift a score or two of cups, and then Set fresh upon us, make us all as drunk As rats in the Canaries. Albertus Wallenstein, 16:3

CANCELEER, or CANCELIER, s. From chanceller, Fr. The turn of a light-flown hawk upon the wing to recover herself, when she misses her aim in the stoop.

The fierce and eager hawks down thrilling from the

Make sundry canceleers ere they the fowl can reach.

Drayt. Polyolb., xx, p. 1046.

Nor with the falcon fetch a cancelleer.

J. Weever's Epigr., B. iv, Ep. 5. Also, as a verb, to cancelier, to turn in flight:

The partridge sprung.

He makes his stoop; but wanting breath, is forced To cancelier; then with such speed, as if He carried light'ning in his wings, he strikes

The trembling bird.

Mass. Guard., i, 1. The trembling orra.

His ambitious wings 'gan downwards steer,

And stoop to earth, with a mild cancileer.

Marmion's Cupid and Psyche, sec. iii.

CANDLE'S-ENDS, to drink off. piece of romantic extravagance long practised by amorous gallants. may perhaps be asked, why drinking off candles'-ends, for flap-dragons. should be esteemed an agreeable qualification? The answer is, that, as a feat of gallantry, to awallow a candle'send formed a more formidable and disagreeable flap-dragon than any other substance, and therefore afforded a stronger testimony of zeal for the lady to whose health it was drunk. See FLAP-DRAGON, and DAGGER'D ARMS.

Why doth the prince love him so then?—Because— be eate conger and fennel; and drinks off candle's-ends for flap-dragons. 2 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

he ests conger and rennes; and damage 2 Hen. IV, ii, 4.
Carouse her health in cans,
And condle's-ends B f. Pl. Monsieur Thomas, ii, 2.
But none that will hang themselves for love, or eat candle's-ends, &c., as the sublunary lovers do.
B. Jon. Masque of the Moon, vol. vi, p. 62.

CANDLESTICK. This word was very commonly pronounced canstick; and we frequently find it so written. The metre of the following verse depends upon it:

I had rather hear a brazen condestick turn'd.

1 Hen. IF, iii, 1. And we find it accordingly in the 4tos of 1598, 1599, and 1608: I had rather hear a brasen caustick turn'd. Capell, very wisely, gives it in his various readings, "can sticke."

with the canstick is one of the spirits mentioned by Reginald Scot, 1584.

If he have so much as a canstick, I am a traitor.

Pamous Hist. of Tho. Stukely, 1605, Cit. St. Thus the name of Cavendish was very generally shortened to Ca'ndish; and throughout Ford's poem on the death of Mountjoy earl of Devonshire, the title stands in the verse as De'nshire. Deconskirs the issue of nobility. P. 21, repr. 1819 Many such abbreviations were once common which are now disused.

CANDLE, votive. A customary offering to a saint, or even to God.

To God I make a vow, and so to good St Anne. 10 God I make a vow, and so to good at Anne, A candell shall they have a peece, get it where I can, It I may my neele find in one place or in other.

Gammer Gurton's N., O. P., ii, 18.

CANDLE-WASTERS. Rakes who sit up all night, and therefore waste much candle. It certainly does not, as some have supposed, relate to the custom explained under the words candle's-ends; for a book-worm is called a candle-waster. See Todd.

Called a Cannie-Waster. See a com.
If such a one will smile and stroke his beard;
And, sorry wag! cry hem when he should groan;
Patch grief with proverbs; make misfortune drunk,
With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me.

Much Ado, v, 1.

Sorry wag, is the conjectural reading of Mr. Steevens for sorrow, wagge, of the old editions, of which no sense can be made. Every editor has proposed something.

Candle-wasting students are thus mentioned:

I, which have known you better and more inwardly, than a thousand of these candle-wasting book wormes.

Hosp. of Inc. Pooles, Indic. to Fortune.

+CANEER. A cannoneer. He should be a skilfull cancere, and able to direct the gunner. Tom of All Trades, 1631.

CANE-TOBACCO, or tobacco in cane. Tobacco made up in a particular form, highly esteemed, and dear. I have sometimes thought it might be the sort since called pigtail, but that seems not convenient for smoking.

The nostrils of his chimnies are still stuff'd With smoke more chargeable than cane-lobarco.

Merry Devil, O. Pl., v, 257.

My boy once lighted

A pipe of cane-lobacco, with a piece
Of a vile ballad.

All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 187.

Again,

It is not leaf, sir, 'tis pudding, case-tobacco. Pudding tobacco was another form. They are all enumerated here:

Impose so deep a tax
On all these ball, lenf, cane, and pudding packs.

Sylvester's Tobacco butter'd, p. 113.

Then of tobacco he a pype doth lack, Of Trinidade in cane, in leaf, or ball.

Harrinat, Evia., iv. 34.

132

See also Epig., ii, 38.

+CANGEANT. Changing? The upper garment of the stately queen,
Is rich gold tissu, on a ground of green;
Where th' art-full shuttle rarely did encheck The cangeant colour of a mallards neck. Du Bartas.

CANKER. The common wild rose, or dog-rose. Cynosbaton.

I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace.

To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke.
1 Hen. IV, i, 3.

The canker blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly.
Skakesp. Sonnet 54.

Also a worm, or rather caterpillar:

Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun, And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.

For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love. Ibid. 70. Also in Sonnet 95.

CANION, or CANNION. Thus defined in Kersey's Dictionary: "Cannions. boot-hose tops; an old-fashioned ornament for the legs." That is to say, a particular addition to breeches. Coles says, "Cannions [of breeches] Perizomata." Cotgrave, "Canons de chausses."

† Subligar, Mart. subligaculum, Cic. femoralia, Sueton. feminalia, Superior bracharum pars, pudenda et femora obtegens, ἀναξυφιδες, μηροδέται, Eudox. Brayes. Slops or breeches without canions or nether stocks. Nonenclator, 1585. Come, you are so modest now, 'tis pity that thou wast ever bred to be thus through a pair of canions; thou wouldst have made a pretty foolish waiting maid. Middleton's More Dissembers, β·c., Anc. Dr., iv, 353.

Minshew says, "On les appelle ainsi pourceque, &c., because they are like cannons of artillery, or cans or pots.

+CANNEL-RAKERS. Rakers of gutters; men accustomed to low occupations.

These vyle cannel-rakers Are now becumme makers,
Ther poems out they dashe,
With all ther swyber swashe.

Papystical Exhortation, n. d.

CANON.

A rule, or law.

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. Haml., i, 2.

In the following passage the word from introduces it obscurely:

Twas from the canon. Coriol., iii, 1. Dr. Johnson explains it, "'Twas coutrary to the rule, was a form of speech to which he has no right;" and probably he was right. Thus from is used in Othello:

Do not believe That from the sense of all civility

I would thus play and trifle with your reverence. Othello i 1.

CANT, s. Supposed to mean a niche, in the following passage of B. Jonson; from kant, a corner, in Dutch.

The first and principal person in the temple was Irene, or Peace; she was placed aloft in a cant.

Coronation Entertainm., vol. vi. 445, Giff.

Directly under her, in a cant by herself, was Arcte inthroned.

Decker, Entert. of James I, sign. H, 3 b. In the following passage, Greene seems to use cantes, for canters, or vagabonds.

I fell into a great laughter, to see certain Italianate cantes, humourous cavaliers, youthful gentlemen, &c.
Quip for Upsi. C., Harl. Misc., v, 396.

One who cants, a vagrant CANTER, s. or beggar.

A rogue. A very canter I, sir, one that maunds
Upon the pad. B. Jons. Staple of News, act ii.
†And if it be but considred in the right kue, a coach or caroach are meere engines of pride (which no man can deny to be one of the seven deadly sinnes); for two can deny to be one of the seven deadly sinnes); for two leash of oyster-wives hyred a coach on a Thursday after Whitsontide, to carry them to the greene-goose faire at Stratford the Bowe, and as they were hurried betwirt Algate and Myle-rid, they were so be madam'd, be-mistrist, and ladified by the beggers, that the foolish women began to swell with a proud supposition or imaginary greatnes, and gave all their mony to the mendicanting canters; insomuch that they were faigne to pawne their gownes and smocks the next day to buy oysters, or else their pride had made them cry, for want of what to cry withall.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CANTERBURY. A short gallop; said by Johnson to be derived from the pace used by the monks in going to Canterbury. Now abbreviated into makes chaucer his author is with his liste.

He [a postmaster] rides altogether upon spurre, and no less is necessary for his dull supporter, who is an familiarly acquainted with a Canterbury, as hee who makes Chaucer his author is with his Tale.

Clitus's Whimnies, page 119.

Boileau's Pegasus has all his paces. The Pegasus of Pope, like a Kentish post-horse, is always on the Canterbury.

Dennis on the Prelim. to the Dunciad. Johnson had not the verb to canter. which has long been so common. Mr. Todd has supplied it. The former only alluded to it under Canterbury Gallop.

CANTERBURY BELLS. A species of campanula, said by Gerard to grow abundantly in Kent. See p. 452. There were also a sort of bells carried by pilgrims for their solace, thus mentioned in the Examination of William Thorpe, which were so called; probably because the pilgrimage to Canterbury was the most common.

Some other pilgrimes will have with them bagpipes; so that in everie towne that they come through, what with the noise of their singing, and with the sound of their piping, and with the jangling of their Canter-buric bells, &c. they make more noise than if the king came there away. Wordsw. Eccl. Biogr., vol. i, p. 168. CANTLE. A part, or share. Todd.

And cuts me, from the best of all my land, A huge half moon, a monstrous cantle out. 1 Hen. IV. iii. 1.

The greater cantle of the world is lost. With very ignorance.

Ant. & Cl., iii, 8.
There armours forged were of metal frail,
On ev'ry side a massy caulel flies. Fairf. Tass., vi, 48. Do you remember

The cantel of immortal cheese ye carried with ye?

B. J. Fl. Queen of Corinth, act ii, p. 218.

CANVAS, c. In the sense of disappointment [a dismissal.]

As much as marriage comes to, and I lose
My honor, if the Don receives the caneas.

Shirley, Brothers, act ii, p. 14.

The note on this passage informs us, "the phrase is taken from the practice of journeymen mechanics who travel in quest of work, with the implements of their profession. they are discharged by their masters, they are said to receive the canvas, or the bag; because in this, their tools and necessaries are packed up, preparatory to their removal."

If he chance to miss, and have a canous, he is in hell on the other side.

But on, Anal., p. 113.
But why should'st thou take thy neglect, thy canous, so to heart?

Itid., p. 357. This is cited by Johnson, as an example of the more usual sense.

+To CANVAS. To discuss.

I invited the hungry slave sometimes to my chamber, to the cansasing of a turkey pie, or a piece of venison, which my lady grandmother sent me.

Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

CANUIST, or CANVIST, in the following passage, seems to mean entrapped, but I can give no further account of

That restlesse I, much like the hunted hare, Or as the cannist kite doth feare the snare.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 230.

To CAP, for to arrest, abbreviated from capias, the technical term for an arrest.

Therefore, gentle knight,
Twelve shillings you must pay, or I must cap you.

B. & Fl. Kn. of B. Pest, act iii. +CAP-PAPER. Whatever be the origin of this name, it is of considerable antiquity, as the following extracts show.

Packe paper or cap-paper, such paper as mercers and other occupiers use to wrappe their ware in.

Nomenclator, 1585, p. 6.

And dunghill rags, by favour, and by hap,
May be advanc'd aloft to sheets of cap.
As by desert, by favour, and by chance
Honour may fall, and begg 'ry may advance.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. †CAP-DATES. Perhaps for Cape-dates. | CAP-CASE. .

For a consumption, proved.
Take halfe an ounce of manus christi, one ounce of white sugar candy, and a penny worth of anniseedes, and halfe a pinte of redde-rose water, and a pint of and naire a pinte of reduc-rose water, and a pint of muscadine, fourenew layd egges, a quarter of nut-negges, halfe a quarter of cap dates, and stone your dates, and wash them before that you doe put them in, and boyle them altogether, and so use them, for this hath beene proved.

Pathicay of Health, n. d.

+CAP OF MAINTENANCE. state carried before a high dignitary on occasions of ceremony. In the second example, written probably when the knowledge of the thing was only traditional, it is spoken of as if carried on the head.

A sword, a cap of maintenance, a mace Great, and well guilt, to do the towne more grace, Are borne before the major, and aldermen, And on festivities, or high dayes, then Those magistrates their scarlet gownes doe weare, And have sixe sergeants to attend each yeare.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

The man, thought I, that does advance With this huge cap of maintenance, Seems to the rabble, in the street here, As if he was my lord's cole-meeter, Because he had, as some folks said, The standard bushel on his head

Hudibras Redivirus, vol. ii, part 6, 1707.

OF WOOL. The wearing of woollen caps was enforced by statute 13 Eliz. There was a song of which the burden was, "An if thy cap be wool," to which B. Jonson alludes in the following passage:
Slip, you will answer it, an if your cap be of wool.

Tale of a Tub, ii, 2.

It seems, however, to have been considered as a peculiar mark of a citizen; probably higher ranks wore no caps at all.

Though my husband be a citizen, and his cap's made of wool, yet I have wit.

Marston's Dutch Courtezan, 1605.

Shakespeare seems to have a similar meaning in the following passage: Well, better wits have worn plain statute caps.

Love's L. L., v. 2.

That is, better wits may be found even among citizens.

Dr. Johnson supposed it an allusion to the university caps.

†Therefore, vicar, I tell thee. fore thou goe out of these doores, lle make thee pay every farthing, if thy cap be of wooll.

Life of Long Meg of Westminster, 1635. †CAPAX. The Latin word, used in the sense of sharp or knowing.

the sense of sharp of knowing.

I am a trew flie; sure I can no false knackes;

Alasi master spyder, ye be to capackes.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

Thys Wyt such gyftes of graces hath in hym,

That makth my dowghter to wysh to wyn hym;

Yoong, paynefull, tractable, and capax,

Thes be Wytes gyftes whych Science doth axe,

Play of Wit and Science, p. 3.

A small travelling case,

The skipping king he ambled up and down With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits, Soon kindled, and soon burnt: carded his state; Mingled his royalty with carping fools.

1 Hen. IV, iii, 2.

The expression carded led directly to the similar one of mingled. Warburton proposed 'scarded, which was adopted till this explanation appeared, and was certainly very specious.

CARD. The mariner's compass. Properly the paper on which the points of the wind are marked.

All the quarters that they know I' the shipman's card. Mach .. i. 3.

We're all like sea cards. All our endeavours and our motions, As they do to the north, still point at beauty.

B. & Fl. Chances, i, 11. Hence to speak by the card, meant to speak with great exactness, true to a point.

How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. Haml., v, 1.

CARD OF TEN. A tenth card; one as high as a ten. See to FACE IT, where instances are given. The phrase of a card of ten was possibly derived, by a jocular allusion, from that of a hart of ten, in hunting, which meant a full-grown deer; one past six years of age.

A great large deer—what head?
Forked; a hart of ten.
B. Jons. Sad Sheph., i, 6.

In the Chances, a card of five is men-

Whether a card of ten was properly a cooling card, I have not discovered, but certain it is that the expressions are united in the following passage: And all lovers, he only excepted, are cooled with a card of ten.

Euph. Engl., O, 2. See COOLING CARD.

CARDECU. Quart d'écu, the quarter of a crown, i. e., fifteen-pence, or thereabouts. So written in the old editions of Shakespeare; the modern editors give quart d'écu. The other is the spelling of the time.

Did I not vester-morning

Bring you in a cardeen there from the peasant,
Whose ass I'd driven aside?

B. & Fl. Bloody Brother, iv, 2.

With a new cassock lin'd with cotton,
With cardeenes to call his pot in.

with cardecus to can its pot in.

Ballad in Acad. of Compt., ed. 1713, p. 248.

I compounded with them for a cardaker, which is eightenpence English, to be carried to the top of the mountaine.

Coryat, vol. 1, p. 77.

See QUART D'ECU.

†CARE. To wish.

One of these questions related to our manner of living, and the place where, because I had heard he had a great plantation in Virginia, and I told him I did not care to be transported.

Fortunes of Moll Flanders, 1722. CARE-CLOTH. A square cloth held over the head of a bride by four men, one at each corner. Probably from the care supposed to be taken of the bride, by this method. The name remained when the practice was disused. A sermon is referred to, by one William Whately, entitled "A Care-cloth, or a Treatise of the Cumbers and Troubles of Matrimony." Lond., 4to, 1624. See Brand's Pop. Ant., 4to ed., vol. ii, p. 68. might mean square cloth, carré.

CAREIRES, or CAREER. To pass the carriere, a military phrase for running the charge in a tournament or attack.

Here used metaphorically:

And so conclusions pass'd the careires. Mer. W., i. 1. They [horses] after the first shrink at the entering of the builet, doo pass their carriere, as though they had verie little hurt. Sir John Smythe's Discourses, 1569.

To stop, to start, to pass carier, to bound, To gallop straight, or round, or any way.

Harr. Ariost., xxxviii, 35.

To run the career was an equivalent expression:

Full merrily Hath this brave manage, this career, been run Lore's L. L., v, 2.

+CARGAZON. From the A cargo. French.

She was to me, as a ship richly laden from London useth to be to our marchants here, and I esteem her cargazon at no lesse a value.

Ilowell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

The searchers came aboard of her, and finding her richly laden, for her cargazon of broad cloth was worth the first peny neer upon 30000l.

Ibid.

CARK. Care.

Wail we the wight whose absence is our cark, The sun of all the world is dim and dark. Spens. Novemb., 66.

†All that we get by toyle, or industry, Our backes and bellies steale continually: For though men labour with much care and carke, Lie with the lamb downe, rise up with the larke, Sweare and forsweare, deceave, and lie and cog, And have a conscience worse then any dog. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To CARK. To be careful or thoughtful. It is often joined with to care, as if not perfectly synonymous.

NOL PETICELY SYNONYMOUS.

Why knave, I say, have I thus cark'd and car'd,
And all to keep thee like a gentleman?

Lord Crowwell, Sh. Supp., ii, 377.

In times past neither did I labor, carcke, nor care,
For business, for family, for foode, nor yet for fare,
For business, for family, for foode, nor yet for fare,
Forth's Fint., p. 392, E.

That rather carked to satisfie his desire, than coveted to observe his promised faith.

Painter's Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii, sign. A. 8.
†A lusty youth in prime of years, his fathers only child,
Who Theodorus had to name of conventories.

Who Theodorus had to name, of courage stout and wild,

Whose father had by carking got great store of goods whose father had by carring got great store of goods and lands,

Which after the decease of him fell holy to his hands.

History of Fortunatus, 1692.

CARKANET, or CARCANET. A necklace. A diminutive from the old French word carcan. ench word carcun.

Say that I linger'd with you at your shop

To see the making of her carkanet.

Com. of E., iii, 1.

Also, in his Sonnet 52.

About his necke a carknet rich he ware

About his necke a carknet rich ne ware of precious stones all set in gold weil tried.

Harr. Ariost., vii, 47.

About thy neck a carkanet is bound

Made of the rubie, pearl, and diamond. Herrick, p. 30.

Spelt sometimes karkanet, see Herrick. p. 11, and carquenet.

Golden carquenets
Embraced her neck withall.

Chapman, in Ellon's Hasiod, p. 381.
†A number of well-arted things, round bracelets, buttons brave, Whistles and carements. Chapman, Il., xviii.

It seems to be used erroneously for casket, in this passage: [See CASKNET.]
That since the Fates had tane the gem away,
He might but see the carknet where it lay.

Brown, Brit. Past., ii, 139.
CARLE. A boor, or countryman. This and the word churl are both derived from the Saxon ceorl, a husbandman. The latter has been since confined to the sense of an ill-tempered brutish person.

Or could this carle, A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me In my profession? Cymb Nor full nor fasting can the carle take rest. Cymb., v. 2. Hall, Sat., iv. 6.

We find also carlot: if intended for a name, yet a name formed from the sense.

And he hath bought the cottage and the bounds That the old carlet once was master of.

As you like it, iii, 5. CARLO BUFFONE. This character, in Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour, is said to have been intended for one "Charles Chester, a bold impertinent fellow,—a perpetual talker, who made a noise like a drum in a room." Aubrey Papers, p. 514.

+CARM. A Carmelite friar. Fr.

> Better it were withouten harm For to become a Celestine,

A grey friar, Jacobin, or a Carm,
An hermit, or a friar Austine.
Compt. of them too lute Maryed.
HNIST. Used by Nash in the +CARMINIST. sense of a writer of ballads.

CARNADINE. Red, or carnation colour; or a stuff of that colour.

Grograms, sattins, velvet fine, The rosy colour'd carnardine. Any thing for a Quiet Life, Com Hence Shakespeare's word to incarnardine, q. v.

+CARNELS. The tonsils.

The carnels in the throate, tonsillæ.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p 281. +CARNIDGE. Used in the following extract for cornage, a tenure of land by the duty of blowing the horn to give notice of invasion.

To find out some precedents where his majesty's sub-jects, that hold their lands by knight's service or by escuage, or by carnidge, which hast is blowing of a horn upon the marches of Scotland or Wales before they were annexed to the crown.

Letter dated 1637.

+CARNOGGIN. Some article which was characteristic of Wales.

A herd of gosts, or runts, or ought
That country yeilds; flancel, carnoggins,
Store of metheglin in thy waggons.

Wit and Drollery, 1682, p. 303.

CAROCH. A coach. Minshew says a large coach. Carocchio, Ital., or carocho, Span., as if made from carro de ocho, a coach and eight. The size of it seems confirmed by the following passage:

Passage:
Have with them for the great caroch, six horses,
And the two coachmen, with my ambler bare,
And my three women. B. Jons. Dev. is an Ass, iv, 2.
One only way is left me to redeem all:
Make ready my caroch. B. J. Fl. Custom of C., iii, 4.
Horeover, that during all the time of his empire he neither tooke up any man to sit with him in his carroch, nor admitted one prime tower to his time. nor admitted any privat person to be his companion in the honourable estate of consull, as princes have been wont to do. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. Minshew, whom Dr. Johnson follows in this instance, derives coach from Kotczy, the name for this kind of carriage in Hungary, where he says it was invented. Mr. Whalley thinks caroche the primitive word, and coach only a smoother way of pronouncing it. He derives caroche, carosse, and carrozza, Ital., from the Italian words carro rozzo, a red carriage. But it should be observed that cocchio, coche, and coach are also used in those three languages; and it seems not likely that the three countries should all have softened carrozza exactly in the same manner. See Mr. Whalley's note on B. Jons. Cynthia's Revels, iv, 2. Besides this, we have direct evidence that a caroch and a coach were different carriages: tNo cost for dyet she at all requires, No charge for change of changeable attires, No coaches, or carroaches slie doth crave, No base attendance of a pandring knave,

No base attendance of a pandring knave,
Perfumes and paintings she abhorres and hates,
Nor doth she borrow haire from other pates.

*Taylor's Workes, 1630.

No, nor your jumblings In horslitters, in coaches or caroaches. Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 475.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 4/b.
Nny, for a need, out of his easy nature,
May'st draw him to the keeping of a coach
For country, and carroch for London.
Greene's Tu Quoque, O. Pl., vii. 28.

Coaches are said to have been first brought into England in 1564, by William Boonen, a Dutchman, who became coachman to queen Elizabeth. Junius mentions Koets. Dutch for a litter, as one of the etymologies.

+CAROLET. A form of poetical composition.

I will repeat a carowlet in rime. Drayton's Shepherds Garland. 1593. CAROUSE is well known in the sense of a drinking bout; but it meant originally a large draught or bumper fairly emptied. Skinner and Minshew derive it from gar ausz, Germ., meaning all out.

Robin here's a carouse to good king Edward's self.

George a Greene, O. Pl., iii, 51.

Then in his cups you shall not see him shrink,

To the grand devil a carouse to drink.

Drayt. Mooncalf, p. 483. CARPET KNIGHTS. Knights dubbed in peace, on a carpet, by mere court favour: not in the field, for military prowess. Some have thought that there was actually an order of Knights of the Carpet. So the compiler of Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica, in Pendragon. But if it was anything like an order, it was only one of social jocularity, like that of the Odd Fellows, &c. seems only to have been a mock title, given to some knights who were not furnished with any better, at queen Mary's accession. It was also perfectly current as a term of great contempt. Cotgrave translates mignon de couchette, "a carpet knight, one that ever loves to be in women's chambers." See in Couchette.

Randle Holmes thus describes them: All such as have studied law, either civil or common, phisick, or any other arts and sciences, whereby they have become famous and serviceable to the court, city, have become famous and serviceable to the court, city, or state, and thereby have merited honour, worship, or dignity, from the sovereign and fountais of honour, if it be the king's pleasure to knight any such persons, seeing they are not knighted as soldiers, they are not therefore to use the horseman's title or spurs; they are only termed simply, miles and milites, knight or knights of the carpet, or knights of the green-cloth, to distinguish them from knights that are dubbed as soldiers are in the field. soldiers are in the field.

Academy of Armoury, B. iii, p. 57. Shakespeare seems to have defined their claims with great exactness:

He is a knight, dubb'd with unhack'd rapier, and on carpet consideration.

Tweel. N., iii, 4.

Now looks my master just like one of our carpet knights, only he's somewhat the honester of the two. Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 310.

See also the notes on these passages.

There your carpet knights
Who never charged beyond a mistress' lips,
Are still most keen and valiant.

Massing. Unn. Comb., iii, 3.
A knight, and valiant servitor of late. Plain'd to a lord and counsellor of state, That captains in these daies were not regarded,
And only carpet-knights were well rewarded.

Harringt. Epig., iv. 65.

Hence a carpet-shield is mentioned: Can I not touch some upstart carpet-shield Of Lolio's sonne, that never saw the field?

Hall's Sat., iv, 4. A trencher-knight was probably synonvmous:

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick. Lore's L. L., v. 2.

The same as CARPET-MONGER. carpet-knight.

+CARPET-PEERE. and CARPET-SQUIRE, are also used in the same sense as carpet-knight.

No, they care not for the false glistering of gay garments, or insimuating curtesic of a carpet-peere.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

For that the valiant will defend her fame,
When carpet squires will hide their heads with shame
Turberville's Tragicall Tales, 1587.

The behaviour of tCARPET-TRADE.

the carpet-knight, flattery.
What should I saie, father? this noble duke had no maner of skill in carpet-trade.

Riche, Farewell to Militarie Profession, 1581.

CARRACK, or CARACK. Span. A large ship of burden; a galleon.

But here's the wonder, though the weight would sink A Spanish carrack, without other ballast; He carrieth them all in his head, and yet

He walks upright,

B. & Fl. Elder Bro., i. 2.

They are made like carracks, only strength and stowage.

What a bouncing bum she has too,

There's sail enough for a carrack. Wild G. Chace, v. 6.

Erroneously written carect, in the

following passage:
So Archimedes caught holde with a hooke of one of the greatest careets or hulkes of the king.

North's Plut., 338, C.

+CARRAINE. The old form of carrion. Fr. caroigne.

Secing no man then can death escape.

Secing no man then can death escape,
Nor hire him hence for any gaine,
We ought not feare his carreine shape,
He onely brings crell men to paine.
Paradyse of Daynty Devises, 1576.
CARRAWAY, or CARAWAY. The carum carus of Linnseus. A plant, the seeds of which being esteemed carminative and stomachic, are still used in confections, cakes, &c.

Nay, you shall see mine orchard: where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own grafting, with a dish of currencys, and so forth. 2 Hen. IV, v.

This passage has given rise to conjectures and disputes. The truth is, that apples and carraways were a favorite dish and are said to be still served up on particular days at Trinity College, Cambridge. customs are longer retained in colleges, than, perhaps, in any other places. I find in an old book entitled the Haven of Health, by Thomas Cogan. the following confirmations of the practice. After stating the virtues of the seed, and some of the uses, he

For the same purpose careway seeds are used to be made in comfits, and to be eaten with apples, and surely very good for that purpose, for all such things as breed wind, would be eaten with other things that breake wind. Quod semel admonuisse sat erit. P. 53. Again, in his chapter on Apples, Howbeit wee are woont to ent cararnyes or biskets, or some other kinde of comfits, or seeds together with apples, thereby to breake winde engendered by them: and surely this is a verie good way for students. P. 101. The date of the dedication to this book is 1584.

CARRECT, or CARACT, for carrat. Weight or value of precious stones.

As one of them, indifferently rated.

As one of them, multicrently rated,
And of a carrect of this quantity,
May serve in peril of calamity
To ransom great kings from captivity.
Jew of Malta, O. Pl., viii, 307.
But doth his caract, and just standard keep
In all the prov'd assays.
B. Jons., vol. vii, p. 4.

CARREFOUR, French. A place where four ways meet. Phil. Holland has used it as an English word:

He would in the evening walke here and there about the shops, hostelries, carrefours, and crosse streets. Tr. of Amm. Marc., p. 3. Carfax, Oxford, is possibly a corruption of this.

CARRIAGE. Import; tendency.

As by that comart
And carriage of the articles design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Haml., i, 1.

+CARRIAGE. In the sense of burden. or baggage.

The shore At last they reached yet, and then slow their carriages they cast, And sat upon them. And sat upon them. Chapman, Hom. II., xxiii, 115. We took up our carriages, and went up to Jerusalem. Acts xxi. 15

†CAROL-WINDOW. A bow-window. In 1573, the Carpenters' Company of the city of London ordered "a caroll-sindos to be made in the place wher the window now standethe in the gallerie."

Jupp's Historical Account, p. 223.

†CARRY-CASTLE. A name used by writers of the Elizabethan age for an elephant. Silkewormes and their Flies, by T. M., 1599, p. 34.

CARRY-TALE. In use before the present word talebearer.

Oresent word thirdenier.

Some carry-lale, some please-man, some slight zany.

Love's L. L., v, 2.

This carry-tale, dissensious jealousy.

Shakesp. Venus and Adonis, Suppl., i, 435. CART, was formerly used for car, and seems to have been constantly applied to that of Phœbus.

Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone round.

Haml. Player's Trag., iii, 2. It is by no means clear that Shakespeare meant any burlesque in that part of the speech :

When Titan is constrayned to forsake
His lemman's couche, and clymeth to his cart.
Gascoigne's Works, sign. f, 1.
Too soone he clamme into the flaming carte,

Whose want of skill did set the earth on fire Gorboduc, 4to, B, 4 b. In O. Pl. i, 121, where this play is reprinted, it is altered to carre.

+CART-TAKER. The officer who pressed carts and other vehicles into the service of the court.

Purveyors, cart-takers, and such insolent officers as were grievances to the people.

Wilson's Life of James I, 1653, p. 11.

CARVEL, for caravel. A small ship. See CARAVEL.

CARWHICHET, CARWITCHET, or CARRAWHICHET. A pun or quibble, as appears clearly in the first example. I can find neither fixed orthography, nor probable derivation, for this jocular term. Mr. G. Mason fancied a French origin, but with little success.

All the foul i'the fair, I mean all the dirt in Smithfield .that's one of master Littlewit's carehiche's now,—will be thrown at our banner to-day, if the matter does not please the people.

B. Jons. Barth. Fair, v. 1.

He has all sorts of echoes, rebuses, chrongrams, &c., besides carwitchets, clenches, and quibbles.

Butler's Rem., ii, 120.

Buller's Rem., ii, 120.
Sir John had always his budget full of punns, conundrums, and carrawitchets,—at which the king laught till his sides crackt. Arbuthnol, Dissert. on Dumpling. Hewices to make the Thannes run on the north side of London (which may very easily be done, by removing London to the Banke-side), of planting the Ile of Dogs with whiblins, cornelichets, mushromes, and tobacco.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CASAMATE, for casemate. Casamatta. Ital. A term in fortification, meaning a particular kind of bastion.

To beat those pioneers off, that carry a mine Would blow you up at last. Secure your casamates.

B. Jons. Staple of N., 1, 1.

I can make nothing else of chasemates, in the following lines:

Of thunder, tempest, meteors, lightning, snow, Chasemates, trajections of haile, raine. Heyw. Hierarchie, p. 441.

That is, I presume, batteries for throwing hail and rain.

+CASE. If case, if it happen, or, as we now say, in case.

We now say, in case.

If case a begger be old, weake or ill.

It makes his gaines and commings in more still;

When beggers that are strong, are paid with mocks,

Or threatned with the cage, the win, or stocks.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To CASE. To strip, or flay; to take off the case.

We'll make you some sport with the fox cre we case him. All's W., iii, 6.

Some of them knew me,
Else they had cased me like a cony too,
As they have done the rest,
B. J. Fl. Love's Pilg., ii, 3.

That is, they had flayed me like a rabbit. It appears by the context that "the rest," alluded to, had actually been stripped. †CASE-WORM. The caddis, a favorite bait of the angler.

The car-worm, the dewe-worme, the gentile, the flye, the small roache, and suche-like, are for their turnes according to the nature of the waters, and the times, and the kindes of fishes.

Booke of Angling, 1606.

+CASHED. Cashiered. Fr. cassé.

That of the bandes under her majesties paie, such as shal be found weaks and decaied to be cashed, and with the nomberes remayning to suplie the defects of smal or found weaks and decared to be canned, and with the nomberes remaying to suplie the defects of thother bandes, or elles those bandes to be renforced by other her majestics subjectes serving in those countrys. Letter of the Earl of Leicester, 1585.

+CASKNET. A small casket.

Sir, I must thank you for the visit you vouchsafed me in this simple cell, and whereas you please to call it the cabinet that holds the procle of our times, you may rather term it a wicker cashnet that keeps a jet ring, or a horn lantern that holds a small taper of cours wax.

† To CASKE. Apparently, to strike.
The day hath been, this body which thou seest
Now falling to the earth, but for these props,
Hath made as tall a souldier as your selfe
Totter within his saddle: and this hand Now shaking with the palsie, cask the bever Of my proud foe, until he did forget What ground hee stood upon.

Weakest goeth to the Wall, 1618.

To CASSE. To break or deprive of an office; to disband. Casser, French; from which language we have many military terms.

But when the Lacedæmonians saw their armies cassed, and that the people were gone their way.

North's Plut., 180, E.

He changed officers, cassed companies of men of armes.

Danet's Comines, sign. V, 6. This was probably the word now printed cast, in some passages of Othello.

You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice. Othel., ii, 3. Othel., ii, 3. Cassed undoubtedly shows the origin of the term; but it was already +CAST. Style; manner.

corrupted to cast, when the first folio of Shakespeare was printed. It is so also in Beaumont and Fletcher:

Makes but against you, Pontius, you are cast, And by mine honour, and my love to Casar. By me shall never be restor d. Valentinian, ii. 3. So it is printed in the folio of 1647. The term is not yet disused in the army: the rejected horses in a troop are called cast horses. The term indeed comes accidentally so near to cast, in the sense of cast off, that they have been confounded. Thus cast clothes, means clothes left off: and I fancy a cast mistress, is to be understood as a metaphor, alluding to left off garments.

†At whose becke two princes, namely, Veteranio and Gallus, although at divers times were in manner of common souldiors, and no better, thus cassed. Holland's Ammianus Marcel., 1609.

CASSOCK. Any loose coat, but particularly a military one. Shakespeare, speaking of soldiers, says,

Half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they should shake themselves to pieces.

This small piece of service will bring him clean out of love with the soldier for ever. He will never come within the sign of it, the sight of a cassock, or a musket-rest again.

B. Jons. Every Man in H., ii, 5.

Cassocks, however, are mentioned All's W., iv, 3. also in different passages as a dress used by old men, by rustics, and even by women. See Mr. Steevens's note on the first-cited passage. Also O. They are now only Pl., v, 154. clerical.

CAST, s. A share, or allotment. As for example, for your cast o' manchets Out o' th' pantry, I'll allow you a goose out of the kitchin.

B. & Fl. Wit at see. W., iv. 1. To CAST, was sometimes used for to cast up, in the sense of to reject from the stomach.

These verses too, a poyson on 'em, I can't abide 'em, they make me ready to cast, by the banks of Helicon.

B. Jons. Poetast., i, 1.

Let him cast till his maw come up, we care not.

B. & Fl. Spanish Curate, iv, 7. The porter in Macbeth quibbles between this sense of the word and that which implies to throw a person in wrestling. Speaking of the wine he had drunk, he says,

Though he took up my legs sometimes, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Maco., ii, 3. solut to cast nim.

Asco., it, o. tif you cast the medicine you may take it the second, third, or fourth time, by the whole, half, or less measure as your stomach will bear it.

The Countess of Kents Choics Manual, 1676.

The lady Flavia, speaking in his cast, porceeded in this maner. Truely Martius, I had not thought that as yet your colts tooth stuck in your mouth, or that so old a trewant in love could hitherto remember his lesson.

Lylie's Euphues and his England.

+CAST. A cast of the loom.

By-warde, in-warde, to-warde the file more fast.

Heywood's Spider and Flis, 1556.

†CAST. A performance of an office.

AS1. A performance of an office. For many a topping strumpet, now at a guinea purchase, will dwindle from a velvet scarf into rusty lutestring, and will be at a hackney-coachman's service, the next vacation, for a cast of his office and a quartern of brandy.

London Bewitched, 8vo, 1708, p. 4.

+CAST. An old term in brewing.

When ale is in the fat, If the bruar please me nat, The cast shall fall down flat. And never have any strength Bale's Nature, 1562.

+To CAST. To reckon up an account. An arithmetical term.

Her greatest learning is religion, and her thoughts are on her own sex, or on men, without casting the diffe-rence. Overbury's Characters.

†2. To give a verdict of guilty. That all humane laws cannot be perfect, but that some must rest in the discretion of the judge, although an innocent man do perish thereby: as his majesty further conceived, that a jury may cast upon evidence, and a judge may give a just sentence, yet the party innocent.

Apothegms of King James, 1669.

†3. To reckon, in the sense of to con-

For comparing my place with my person, mee thought thy boldnesse more then either good manners in thee would permit, or I with modesty could suffer: yet at the last, casting with my selfe that the heat of thy love might cleane be raced with the coldnesse of thy letter. I thought it good to commit an inconvenience, that it might prevent a mischiefe, choosing rather to cut thee off shorts by rigour, then to give thee any jot of hore of slapes.

of hope of silence. Lylie's Euphues and his England.

The last cast, the last gasp. +CAST. Sir Thomas Budley is even now at the last cast, and hath lain speechless and without knowledge since yesterday at noon. God comfort him, and send him a guod passage.

Letter dated 1612. good passage.

†CANT. A passage over a river in a hoat

For old acquaintance, e'r thou breathe thy last, I o'r the water will give thee a cast. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CAST. A flight of hawks.

The difference betwixt your noble father, And conde de Alvarez, how it sprung From a meer trifle first, a cast of hawks,

Whose made the swifter flight, whose could mount highest.

Lie longest on the wing.

CAST, part. Warped. The Spanish Gipsie. Applied to a

I found my good bow clene cast on one side Asch. Tox., p. 7.

See Johns. Cast, v. n. 3. To CAST BEYOND THE MOON. proverbial phrase for attempting im-possibilities. But oh. I talk of things impossible,

And cast beyond the moon.

Women k. with K., O. Pl., vii, 314.

Pardon me, Euphues, if in love I cast beyond the moone, which bringeth us women so endlesse moone. Euphues, H, 1, (bl. 1.) But I will not cast beyond the moone, for that in all things I know there must be a meane. Huph. Bngl., Z, 2.

To cast here seems to be in the sense of to contrive.

Also, to indulge in wild thoughts and conjectures :

Beyond the moon: when I began to cast,
By my own parts what place might be procur'd.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 529.

This tale not fullie finished, Mamilia stoode upon thornes, cast beyond the moone, and conjectur'd that which neither the tale did import, nor Pharicles himself imagine.

R. Greene, Mammil, B, 2 b.

I cannot think, with Mr. Steevens. that there is any allusion to this phrase in the following passage of Titus Andronicus:

My lord, I am a mile beyond the moon, Your letter is with Jupiter by this. Act iv. 3. The whole dialogue is extravagant, on the subject of shooting arrows among the stars. The folios 1623 and 1632 read, "I aym a mile," &c. The old quarto of 1611 reads, "I aime;" and it should be considered, that if we take this as equivalent to the phrase here noticed, it will mean, "I attempt things impossible." which speech has nothing of madness in it.

whereas it is meant for a wild rant. To CAST WATER. To find out diseases by the inspection of urine.

If thou could'st, doctor, cast

The water of my land, find her disease. Macb., v, 3.

There's physicians enough there to cast his water. is that any matter to us! Puritan, iv, 1. Suppl. to Sh., ii, 603.

CASTILIAN. There are several conjectures concerning the use of this appellation; and indeed it seems to have been employed in several senses. 1. As a reproach, which probably arose after the defeat of the Armada: Thou art a Castilian, king urinal! Mer. W., ii, 3. The host addresses Dr. Caius in highsounding words, which at the same time are reproachful, presuming on his ignorance of the language.

2. For a delicate courtier:

Come, come, Castilian, skim thy posset curd,
Shew thy queere substance, worthless, most absurd.

Marston's Satires, 1599, p. 138, Mod. Ed.
Adieu, my true court friend, farewel, my denr Castilio.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 27.

In this sense it was used, because the Spaniards were then thought people of the highest ceremony and polish. "Castiliano volto" is conjectured by

Warburton for Castiliano volgo, of which no sense can be made, in Twelfth Night, i. 3, implying that Maria is to put on a courtly or solemn countenance. The conjecture is probably right: not because sir Toby is to be supposed to have that idea of civility, as peculiar to himself, but because Castilian breeding was certainly most esteemed. Thus Marston draws the character of

The absolute Castilio,
He that can all the poynts of courtship show Sat., i, p. 138, Mod. Ed.

There seems no reason to suppose that Marston thought of Balthasar Castiglioni.

3. It seems also to have been a drunken exclamation, being found ioined with Rivo!

Hey! Rivo Castiliano, a man's a man.

Jew of Mal.a, O. Pl., viii, 377.

And Rivo will he cry, and Castile too.

Look about you, an old Com. cited by Mr. Steevens.

Castilian liquor had also a kind of proverbial celebrity.

Away Tirke, scowre thy throate, thou shalt wash it with Castilian licour.

Shoemaker's Holiday, an old Com., 4to, C, 4.

Ben Jonson has called canary, Castalian liquor, as peculiarly fit for poets, and perhaps as an improvement upon the commoner term of Casti-Ev. Man out of H., lian liquor. Induction.

+CASTING. A term in hawking. "Oiseau acuré; that hath had casting given her." Cotgrave.

CASTING-BOTTLE. A bottle for casting, or sprinkling, perfumes. A very fashionable article of luxury in the days of Elizabeth.

Pray Jove the perfumed courtiers keep their casting-bottles, pick-tooths, and shittlecocks from you.

B. Jons. Cynthia's Rec., i, 1.

So in giving instructions to assume the airs of a courtier:

Where is your page? call for your casting-bottle, and place your mirror in your hat, as I told you. Ib., ii, 3. Plaggons, and beakers; salts, chargers, casting-bottles.

Albumaz., O. P., vii, 165.

In the third act of Marston's Antonio and Mellida, there is this stage direction .

Enter Castilio and his Page. Castilio with a casting-bottle of sweet water in his hand, sprinkling himself. Repr., p. 150.

There were probably also castingboxes; and that is perhaps meant in justice Algripe's lamentation.

They have a chain,
My rings, my box of casting gold, my purse too.
B. & Fl. N. Walker, iii, 5. Sometimes called also a casting-glass:

Faith, ay: his civet and his casting-glass
Have helpt him to a place among the rest.

B. Jons. Ev. M. out of h. II., iv, 4. In one of the old receipt books the following is given as an excellent sweet water for a casting bottle.

the true drammes of oyle of spike, one dramme of oyle of thyme, one dram of oyle of lemmons, one dram of oyle of cloves, then take one graine of civet, and three grains of the aforesaid composition well wrought together: temper them well in a silver spoone with your finger.

CASTLE. A kind of close helmet.

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-ax,
Writing destruction on the enemies castle.

Tit. And., iii, 1.

This word caused much altercation between Warburton and Theobald. but the former was right.

Farewel, revolted fair !- and, Diomed. Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head.

Then suddenlie with great noise of trumpets entered sir Thomas Knevet in a castell of cole blacke.

Holissh, ii, p. 815.

Mr. Steevens, in citing the following passage as containing an instance of this word, has surely misrepresented its meaning:

But use
That noble courage I have seen, and we Shall fight as in a castle.

B. & Fl. Little Fr. Lawyer, act i, end. If castle meant helmet in this place, it would not be a castle, but castles. "To fight as in a castle" is a very intelligible phrase to express fighting in great security, as in a fortified place. It is so undoubtedly in the following passage:
Draw them on a little further

From the footpath into the neighbouring thicket,
And we may do't, as safe as in a castle.

Little Pr. Lawy., iv, p. 242.

Gadshill explains the phrase, as to its literal meaning:

We steal as in a castle, cock-sure. 1 Hcm. IV, ii, 1. Euripides has the same metaphor: ην μέν τις ημίν πύργος ἀσφαλης φανή. Medea, 1. 390.

CASTLE. Old Lad of the Castle! A familiar appellation, apparently equivalent to Castilian, in its convivial Sense; i. e., old buck!

As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle! And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

1 Hen. IV., i, 3.

Gabriel Harvey tells us, says Dr. Farmer, of "old lads of the castle, with their rapping babble; roaring boys." The singular coincidence of this address to Falstaff, was long regarded as a strong proof that the part was first produced under the name of Sir John Oldcastle. But this opinion is now relinquished. Oldcastle was the buffoon of a play entitled The famous Victories of Henry V, &c., but this piece was prior to Shakespeare's: and as the introduction of Oldcastle there had given offence, the audience was informed in the epilogue to the second part of Henry IV, that he was not even alluded to in the character of Falstaff: "for Oldcastle died a martyr; but this is not the man." See the notes on the first-cited passage, and one on the first scene of Henry V.

CASTREL; written also kastril and kastrel. The hovering hawk, Lat. tinnunculus; a wild sort, not fit for training. Minshew derives it from quercerelle, Fr.

But there's another in the wind, some castrel

But there's another in the wind, some control.

That hovers over her, and dares her daily.

B. & Fl. Pilgrim, i, 1. It is in allusion to the name of the character, that Lovewit says to Kastril in the last scene of the Alchemist. Here stands my dove, stoop at her if you dare.

nere stands my dove, stoop at her if you dare.

†The sparrow-hawk is a fierce enemy to all pigeons, but they are defended of the castrel, whose sight and voice the sparrow-hawk doth fear, which the pigeons or doves know well enough; for where the castrel is, from thence will not the pigeons go (if the sparrow-hawk be nigh), thro' the great trust she hath in the castrel, her defender.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

CAT IN PAN. To turn cat in pan, a proverbial expression implying perfidy, but of which it is not easy to trace the origin.

Damon smatters as well as he of craftie phylosophie, Damon smatters as well as ne of crattle physicsophic, And can tourne cat in the panne very pretily. Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 193.

So in the famous old song of the Vicar of Brav:

When George in pudding time came o'er, And moderate men look'd big, sir, I turn'd a cat-in-pan once more, And so became a Whig, sir.

Lord Bacon defines it as if it meant turning the tables upon a man, or reversing the truth.

There is a cunning which we in England call, the turning of the cat in the pan; which is, when that which a man says to another, he lays it as if another had said it to him.

Essay 23.

A writer in the Gent. Mag., 1754, p. 66, conjectures that it was originally cate or cake; another, p. 172, derives it from the Catipani, whom he supposes a perfidious people, in Calabria and Apulia: but in fact Catapanus was in those countries the name of an office, and nearly synonymous with Capitaneus, meaning a governor or præfect. Hoffman gives a list of those Catapani. It must not be concealed, that in several Monkish verses there cited. Catapan is used without the termination, which strengthens the probability that our phrase is in some way derived from it. See also Du Cange, who gives two etymologies of it, κατεπάνω, a Byzantine Greek word, and kara παντοκρατορα, next to the chief commander. The former is the right: the officers in Hoffman's list all held their power under the Byzantine emperors.

It does not seem to have originally implied perfidy, but merely an interested changing of character. the old play of the Mariage of Witt and Wisdome, Idlenesse says,] thow am I true araid like a phesitien;

I am as very a turncote as the wethercoke of Poles;
For now I will calle my name Due Disporte.
So, so, finely I can turne the catt in the pane.
CAT and CATSTICK. I mplements of a puerile game, said to be still practised in the northern counties. is common enough at the present day under the name of tip-cat. cat is well described by Strutt:

The cat is about six inches in length, and an inch and a half or two inches in diameter, and diminished from the middle to both ends, in the manner of a double cone; by this curious contrivance the places of the trap and ball are at once supplied, for when the cat is laid upon the ground, the player with his cudged [or catstick] strikes it smartly, it matters not at which end, and it will rise with a rotatory motion, high enough for him to beat it away as it falls, in the same enough for finit to heat it away as it falls, in the same manner as he would a ball. Sports and Pastimes, p. 101. Then for love of this sword, I broke and did away all my storchouse of tops, gigs, balls, cat and catsticks, pot-guns, key-guns, &c. Brome, New Ac., iv, 1. To play at cat, cato ligneo ludere; baculo et buxo ludere.

Cambr. Phrase-book. The cat and stick are much mentioned by a foolish character in Middleton's Women beware Women, act i, &c. The game was called tip-cat.

†That gall their hands with stool-balls, or their cat-

For white-pots, pudding-pies, stew'd prunes, and To feast their titts at Islington or Hogsden.

Brome's New Acad. †To whip the CAT. A jocular phrase for sickness from intoxication.

And when his wits are in the wetting shrunke, You may not say hee's drunke though he be drunke,

For though he be as drunke as any rat, He hath but catcht a fox, or whip! the cat. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To be an envy, base and secretly, 'Tis counted wisdome, and great policy. To be a drunkard, and the cat to whip, Is call'd the king of all good fellowship.

144

+CAT AND DOG MONEY. At Christchurch, Spitalfields, there is a benefaction for the widows of weavers under certain restrictions called cat and dog money, and there is a tradition in the parish that the money was given in the first instance to cats and See Edwards's Old English dogs. Customs, 1842, p. 54.

CAT IN A BOTTLE. The subject of allusion in the following passage: If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me.

Much Ado. i. 1. Of this phrase Mr. Steevens tells us he was unable to procure any better illustration, than an account of a rustic custom which consisted in hanging up a cat in a wooden bottle or keg, with soot; the sport being to strike out the bottom, and yet escape being saluted by the contents. Here is no mention of shooting at it, but the comparison may be supposed to end at the hanging in a bottle.

+CAT-SILVER. An old popular name

Hnjus species est et magnetis sive mica. μαγνήτις.
Cal silver
Nomenclator. +CATADUPE. A waterfall. Gr. κατά-

Sien of my science in the catadupe of my knowledge, I nourish the crocodile of thy conceit Wil's Miserie, 1596.

CATAIAN. A Chinese: Cataia or Cathay being the name given to China by the old travellers. It was used also to signify a sharper, from the dexterous thieving of those people; which quality is ascribed to them in many old books of travels. See Mr. Steevens's note on the following pas-

I will not believe such a Cataian, though the priest of the town commended him for a true man

Mer. W., ii. 1. The opposition in this passage between Cataian and true or honest man, is a proof that it means thief or sharper; and Pistol is the person deservedly so called.

My lady's a Cataian, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey. Theel. N., ii, 3. Sir Toby is there too drunk for precision, and uses it merely as a term of reproach. Sir W. Davenant, in Love and Honour, employs the same term in describing a sharper:

Hang him, bold Cataian, he indites finely, &c. "And will live as well by sharping tricks as any one," is the meaning of the remainder of the passage.

I'll make a wild Cataian of forty such.

Honest Whore, O. Pl., iii, 435. i. e., forty such blockheads would hardly furnish wit for one dexterous sharper.

+CATAZANERS. Probably, says Gifford, a corruption of some term for revellers. Shirley's Ball, v, 1.

†CATCH. The eye of a hook, or buckle.

A catch, spinter.

Withal's Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 210, under the head, "Cloathing or apparell for men."

The male, catch, or rundle through which the latchet passeth, and it is fastened with the tong of the buckle.

Nomenclator, 15*5.

CATER. An acater, or caterer. See ACATER.

To deat him of a dinner.

B. & Fl. Mad Lorer, act ii.

Or freeze in the warehouse, and keep company With the cater, Holdtast. Massing. City Mad., ii, 1. When the toil'd cater home them to the kitchin brings.

The cook doth cast them out, as most unsavoury things.

Drayt. Polyolb., S. xxv, p. 1160.

The word very frequently occurs. See Gifford's Massinger, vol. iv, p. 34.

†My lord, our catours shall not use the markett

†My lord, our catours shall not use the markett For our provision, but some straunger now Will take the vittailes from him he hath bought.

Play of Sir Thomas More.

tObsonator, Plaut. coquus nundinalis. Eid, qui coemptos è macello cibos coquo tradit ad cocturam. opiniones, qui achette les viandes. A cater: a steward: he that buyeth and provideth victuals. Nomenclator.

†A cater, or hee that buyeth the meate, obsonator.

Withats Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 124.

+CATER-COUSINS. Friends so familiar that they eat together.

Inimicitia est inter eos. They are not now cater-cousins. They are at dissention or debate one with another Terence in English, 1614.

CATLING. The string of a lute or violin, made of cat-gut.

What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not: but I am sure, none; unless the fidler Apollo get his sinews to make caf-Tro. 3 Cr., m, 3.

Simon Catling is therefore the name of a fidler, in Rom. and Jul., iv, 5.

CATSO. A low-lived term of reproach, borrowed from the Italians by ignorant travellers, who probably knew not its Used to signify a real meaning. rogue, cheat, or base fellow:

These be our nimble spirited catees that ha' their evasions at pleasure. B. Jon. Every Man out, ii, 1. And so cunningly temporize with this cunning cateo.

Wily beguited, O. Pl.

It is introduced as the exclamation of an Italian, in the Malcontent, O. Pl., iv. 22.

CATZERIE, formed from the above. Cheating; roguery.

And looks Like one that is employ'd in catzeris And crosbiting; such a rogue, &c.

Jew of Malta, O. Pl., viii, 374.

CAVALERO, or CAVALIER. Literally a knight; but, as the persons of chief fashion and gaiety were knights, any gallant was so distinguished. Hence it became a term for the officers of the court party, in Charles the First's wars, the gaiety of whose appearance was strikingly opposed to the austerity and sourness of the opposite side.

I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros +CAUDE. A word used by G. Peele apparently in the sense of care.

And thou these caudes and labours seriouslie,
Was in that worke not mentioned speciallie.

Peele's Eglogue, 1589.

CAVIARE, CAVEAR, or CAVEARY. The spawn of a kind of sturgeon pickled, salted, and dried: derived from the Italian caviale, or the barbarous Greek καβιαρι, which signify the same. Made also sometimes of the spawn of other kinds of fish: botargo being a species of it. "Caviarium, ova piscium salita et exsiccata, ut sturionum, mugilum, luporum," &c. Du Cange, Gloss. It is now imported in great plenty from Russia; but in the time of Shakespeare was a new and fashionable delicacy, not obtained or relished by the vulgar, and therefore used by him to signify anything above their comprehension. Anchovies classed, at that time, in the same

For the play, I remember, pleas'd not the million; 'twas certare to the general. Haml., ii, 2

How fashionable it was, appears in the following passage. Speaking of affected travelled men, it is said,

A pasty of venison makes him sweat, and then swear that the only delicacies be mushrooms, careare, or snails.

Ed. Blount's Observ., 1620. enails.

Thus a novice is defined as one who knows it not:

Laugh—wide—loud—and vary— A smile is for a simp'ring novice; One that ne'er tasted cureare, Nor thous the smack of dear anchovis.

B. 4 Fl. Passion. Madm., act v, p. 353.

Thou dost not know the sweets of getting wealth.

As. Nor you the pleasure that I take in spending it;

To feed on caseare and eat anchovies. Muses' L. Glass, O. Pl., ix. 205.

It is said of the affected imitator of a fine gentleman, that "he doth learn to make strange sauces to eat anchovies, maccaroni, bovoli, fagioli, and caviare, because he (the person he imitates) loves them." B. Jons. Cunth. Revels. ii. 3.

There's a fishmonger's boy with cariar, sir, Anchoves, and potargo, to make ye drink. Char. Sure these are modern, very modern, meats; For I understand 'em not. B. & Fl. Blder Br., iii, 3. The following curious account of the actual produce of caviare, is taken from Dr. Crull's Ancient and present State of Muscovy, 8vo, printed in 1698:

Casiare, or casajar, (by the Russians called ikary) is made of the roes of two different fishes, which they catch in the river Wolga, but especially near the city of Astracan, to wit, of the sturgeon and the belluga. I will not pretend to describe the first, it being too well known in these parts; but the belluga is a large fish, about twelve or fifteen foot long, without scales, well known in these parts; but the belluga is a large fish, about twelve or fifteen foot long, without scales, not unlike a sturgeon, but more large, and incomparably more luscious, his belly being as tender as marrow, and his flesh whiter than veal, whence he is called white-fish by the Europeans. This belluga lies in the bottom of the river at certain seasons, and swallows many large pebbles of great weight to ballast himself against the force of the stream of the Wolga, augmented by the melting of the snows in the spring: when the waters are asswaged he disgorges himself. Kear Astracan, they catch sometimes such a quantity of them, that they throw away the firsh (though the daintiest of all fish) reserving only the spawn, of which they sometimes take an hundred and fifty or two hundred weight out of one fish. These roes they salt and press, and put up into casks, if it is to be sent abroad, else they keep it unpressed, only a little corned with salt. That made of the sturgeon's spawn is black and small grain'd, somewhat waxy, like potargo, and is called ikary by the Muscovites. This is also made by the Turks. The second sort, which is made of the roes of the belluga, or white-fish, has a grain as large as a small pepper-corn, of a darkish grey. The casiare made of these proves the parts have become a surface he was first much by the hard he was first made by the hard he was first much by the second sort, when he was here he was first much by the head of the surge here the parts have head of the surge here the parts have head of the surge here the second sort. as a small pepper-corn, of a darkish grey. The cariars made of this spawn, the Muscovites call Armeinska made of this spawn, the Muscovites call Armeinska ikary, because they behave it was first made by the Armenians. Both kinds they cleanse from its strings, salt it, and lay it up on shelving boards, to drain away the oily and most unctuous part; this being done they salt it, press it, and put it up in casks containing 700 or 800 weight, and so send it to Musco, and other places; from thence it is transported by the English and Dutch into Italy. That glew which is called ising-glass is made out of the belluga's sounds.

P. 163. &c. P 168 &c.

A coif, or caul. +CAVILL.

Her golden lockes like Hermus sands,
(Or then bright Hermus brighter)
A spangled carill binds in with bands,
Then silver morning lighter.

England's Helicon, 1614.

+CAVILLER. A cavalier?

P. Alas, alas! unlesse I looke to my selfe I am in for a bird. Youder fellows come towardes me swearing and staring like cavillers. Terence in English, 1614.

CAUL. A thin membrane, found encompassing the head of some children when born: superstitiously supposed to be a token of good fortune through-These cauls were even out life. imagined to have inherent virtues, and were sold accordingly; nor is the superstition yet extinct, for advertisements for the sale of them are still not uncommon. Mr. Todd testifies the same. They are also considered as preservatives from drowning, and for that purpose are sold to seafaring people.

Were we not born with cauls upon our heads?
Think'st thou, Chichon, to come off twice a row,
Thus rarely, from such dangerous adventures?

For either sheet was spread the caule

Elvira, O. Pl., xii, 212. Herrick speaks of them, as being supposed fortunate to the children who have them:

That doth the infant's face enthrall
When it is born; by some enstyl'd
The luckic omen of the child. Heeper, p. 194. The webs of spiders were sometimes called caules:

His shelves, for want of authors, are subtilly inter-woven with spiders' caules. Clitus's Whimzies, p. 7.

+CAUL. A covering of net-work under which the hair of ladies' heads was gathered.

These glittering cauls of golden plate, Wherewith their heads are richly deck'd, Makes them to seem an angel's mate,
In judgment of the simple sect. Gosson's P. Q.

A caule to cover the haire of the head withall, as maidens use, reticulum crinale vel reticlum.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 217.

CAUSE, first and second, &c. Terms in the art of duelling, fashionable in Shakespeare's time, and particularly ridiculed by him in the last act of As you like it:

Faith we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

As you like it, v, 4. The clown, who says this, afterwards enumerates the degrees of the quarrel upon the lie, to the number of seven. introducing it by saying, "O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book, as you have books for good manners." The books chiefly ridiculed were those of Vincentio Saviola, entitled, "Of Honour and honourable Quarrels, and that of Jerome Caranza. Warburton's note on the above pas-The causes are again mentioned:

The first and second cause will not serve my turn. L. L. Last 1.2. A gentleman of the first house; of the first and second cause.

Rom. 3. Jul., ii, 4. CAUSEN. The old infinitive of to cause.

Used by Spenser in the sense of the French causer to prate; to assign frivolous reasons.

But he, to shift their curious request, Gan causes why she could not come in place.

F. O. 111, ix. 26.

CAUTELE, or CAUTELL. Caution, or deceit.

But in all thinges thys cautell they use, that a lesse pleasure hinder not a bigger.

Robinson's Transl. of Sir T. More's Utopia, 8vo, M, 6 b.

Perhaps he loves you now;

And now no soil, nor cantel, doth besmirch

The virtue of his will.

Haml., act i, sc. 3.

In him a plenitude of subtle matter
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives.

Lover's Complaint, Sh. Supp., i, 758.

To CAUTEL. To provide carefully, or artfully.

It was wisely cauteled by the penner of these savory miracles.

Ded. of Popish Impost, 4to, I, 3, 1663.

CAUTELOUS. Cautious; but more frequently artful; insidious.

frequently artful; Insidious.
You cannot be too cautelous, nice, or dainty
In your society here.
B. & F. Wit at see. Weapons, act iv, p. 298.
My stock being small, no marvel 'twas soon wasted;
But you, without the least doubt or suspicion,
If cautelous, may make bold with your master's.

Massing. City Madam, ii, 1.
He is too prudent and too cautelous,
Experience hath taught him t' avoid these fooleries.

B. & W. Elder Brother, iv, 4.

The note on the following passage says "cautelous is here cautious, sometimes insidious;" but a little consideration of the context will convince the reader that artful or treacherous must be its meaning there.

Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautclons, Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls

"Men cautelous," and "priests" too, I fear, are there expressly opposed to Honesty to honesty engag'd. So also in the following:

Will or exceed the common, or be caught With cantelous baits, and practices. Co Cor., iv. 1.

An old astrological term, denoting the centre or middle of the sun. A planet is said to be in cazimi when not distant from the sun, either in longitude or latitude, above 17 minutes; or the apparent semidiameter of the sun, and of the planet. Kersey says 17 degrees, and the annotator on the Old Plays, who copies him, has raised it, by a new error, to 70 degrees. The term is explained at large in Chambers's Dictionary.

I'll find the cuspe, and Alfridaria, And know what planet is in cazimi Album., O. Pl., vii, 171.

+CEASURE. Probably the Latin cæsura. the rhythm of verse.

But O! what rich incomparable treasures Had the world wanted, had this modern glory, Divine du Bartas, hid his heavenly ceasures, Singing the mighty world's immortall story? Sylvester's Du Bartas.

+CEDULE. A shedule.

Having brought up the law to the highest point against the vice-roy of Sardinia, and that in an extraordinary manner, as may appear unto you by that printed crdule I sent you in my last, and finding an apparent disability in him to satisfie the debt.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+CELEBROUS. Famous

From the Greek isles, philosophy came to Italy, thence to this western world among the Druydes, whereof those of this isle were most celebrous, for wee read that the Gauls (now the French) came to Britanny in great numbers to be instructed by them.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

tCENSE. A census.

Vopiscus writes she was then of fifty miles circumference, and she had five hundred thousand free citizens in a famous cense that was made, which, allowing but six to evry family in women, children, and servants, came to three millions of souls.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

CENSER. A part of the luxury of Shakespeare's time was to fumigate rooms with perfumes in a censer; which was also an appendage of that curiously furnished place, a barber's shop. These censers of course were made with many perforations in the top, an allusion to which is seen in the following passage:

What! up and down, carv'd like an apple tart?

Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish, and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop.

Tam. Shr., iv, S. The use of a censer is exemplified in B. Jons. Every Man out of H., act ii, sc. 4, and in Lingua, O. Pl., v, 199. CENSURE. Opinion.

Madam, the king is old enough himself To give his censure; these are no women's matters. 2 Hen. IV, i, 3.

Madam,—and you my mother—will you go
To give your censures in this weighty business? Rick. III. ii. 2.

Even a very favourable judgment:

This and some other of his remarkable abilities, made one then give this censure of him; that this age had brought forth another Picus Mirandula, &c.

Donne's Life, by Watton, beginning.

A judical sentence:

To you, lord governor, Remains the censure of this hellish villain; The time, the place, the torture,-O inforce it. Othel., v, 2.

To CENSURE. To give an opinion. Pardon, dear madam: 'tis a passing shame, That I, unworthy body as I am, Should consure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Protheus, as of all the rest?
Luc. Then thus—of many good, I think him best. Two Gent., act i. The interpretation of to pass sentence is in that place erroneous: Julia is giving an opinion only.

To pass sentence judically:

Has centur'd him Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution. Meas. for M., i, 5.

CENT. A game at cards; called also corruptly saint or sant. Supposed to be like piquet.

The duke and his fair lady, The beauteous Helena, are now at cent;
Of whom she has such fortune in her carding. The duke has lost a thousand crowns.

B. 4. Fl. Four Plays in one, vol. x.

Called cent, because 100 was the game:

It is not saint, but cent, taken from hundreds. Dumb. Am., O. Pl., iv, 483.
While their glad sons are left seven for their chance
At hazard; hundred and all made at sent.
Wits, O. Pl., viii, 419.

Several illustrations of the game occur in that scene. Thus the lady asks him what is his game, to which he answers, "Madam, I am blank:" Again, "What's your game now? P. Four kings, as I imagine." Presently, "Can you decard (for discard), madam? Q. Hardly, but I must do hurt."-All these things certainly have much resemblance to piquet. Thus also,

Cent for those gentry who their states have marr'd. That game bents them, for they must discard.

Cotsu. Games, C, 2 b.

Used in the following CENTURY. passage for a party of an hundred

A century send forth,
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye.

Lear, iv, 4. Also for the number of an hundred: And on it said a century of pray'rs. Cymb., iv, 2.

+CEREBRAND. A sarabande. The song ended, a cerebrand is danc'd: as the dance

The song enacu, a coreor and ends, musick is heard without.

Wrangling Lovers, 1677. +CERE-CANDLE. A candle of wax; a

Who in your temple
Will light a cere-candle, or for incense burn
A grain of frankincense? Randolph's Poems, 1646. CEREMONIES. Ornaments of state and regal pomp.

Disrobe the images. If you do find them deck'd with ceremoni Jul. Cas., i, 1.

Also, for prodigies:

Of fantany, of dreams of ceremonies.

Cassar, I never stood on ceremonies,
But now they fright me.

Ibid., ii, 2.

CERTES.

Certainly.
And in conclusion Nonsuits my mediators; for certes, says he, I have already chosen my officer.

Certes, my lord, said he that shall I soone, And give you eke good help to their decay.

Spens. F. Q., II, iii, 15.

Very common in Spenser, and occasionally found in later authors.

CESS. Measure or estimation. bably corrupted from cense.

The poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.

1 Hen. IV, ii, 1.

Also, the census, or account of an estate:

te:
Though much from out the cess be spent,
Herrick, p. 34. The verb to cess is still occasionally used; but more frequently, to assess. CESSE, v. To cease. Cesso, Lat. So written by Spenser:

For natural affection soon doth cesse, And quenched is with Cupid's greater flame F. Q., 1V, ix, 2.

+CHAFERNE. A anusepan.

Five brasse pottes, iij. brasse panues, iiij. kettles, and one chaferne. Inventory, 1613, Stratford-on-Avon MSS.

To exchange. To CHAFFER. Johnson has remarked that this word is obsolete in the active sense.

He chaffer'd chairs in which churchmen were set Sp. Moth. Hub., 1159. Ladies regard not ragged companie;
I will with the revenues of my chafred church.

I will with the revenues of my chafred church.

Returne from Permassus, 1612.

†*Yet knights and lawyers hope to see the day,
When we may share here their possessions,
And make indentures of their chafred skins;
Dice of their bones to throw in meriment.

TEFU Description

CHAFFER, was used also as a substantive, for goods intended to be exchanged in traffic.

He tooke toll throughout all his lordshippes of all suche persons as passed by the same with any cattel, chafre, or merchandize.

Holinsh., vol. ii, Q. 5.

CHAIN. A gold chain, as may be seen in many old pictures, and is still exemplified in the dress of the lord mayor and aldermen of London, was anciently a fashionable ornament, for persons of rank and dignity. Godfrey, in the comedy of the Puritan. is very particular in ascertaining the worth and antiquity of his chain:

Out! he's a villain to prophecy of the loss of my chain.
Twas worth above three hundred crowns. Besides 'twas my father's, my father's father's, my grandfather's huge grandfather's: I had as lief have lost my neck, as the chain that hung about it. O my chain, my chain.

Act nii, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 576. Afterwards he tells us that it had "full three thousand links." In Albumazar, O. Pl., vii, 152, a gold chain is mentioned which cost two hundred pounds, besides the jewel.

tif our gallantes of Englande might carry no more linkes in their chaynes, nor ringes on their fingers, than they have fought feelds, their neckes should not bee very often wreathed in golde, nor their handes imbrodered with precious stones.

Gosson's Schoole of Abuse, 1579. Rich merchants also, who frequently lent out money, were commonly distinguished by a chain. Hence we read of an usurer's chain:

What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck like an unner's chain? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scars? Much Ado about N., ii, 1. All rich citizens were engaged in this traffic. Hence Belarius says,

Did you but know the City's usuries,
And felt them knowingly.

Cymb., iii, 3. When the dignity of the fashion had a little worn off, the chain became a distinction for the upper servant in a great family:

Run, sirrah, call in my chief gentleman i' th' chain of gold, expedite.

Mad World, O. Pl., v. 328. Particularly for stewards; Malvolio is therefore supposed to have one:

Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs. Thou false and peremptory steecard, pray, ii, 3. For 1 will hang thee up in thy own chain.

B. J. Pl. Love's Cure, ii, 2.

Again,

Pior. Is your chain right?

Bob. It is both right and just, sir, For though I am a steward, I did get it With no man's wrong.

Ibid., iii, 2. As soon as he expects the place of steward, he begins to talk of his chain. Act i, sc. 2. The steward's chain was also accompanied by a velvet jacket. Bussy D'Ambois says to Maffé, the steward of Monsieur,

Steward Of Nathsheut,
What qualities have you, sir, besides your chain,
And relevit jacket?

Anc. Dr., iii, p 243.
That's my grandsire's chief gentleman, i' the chain of gold. That he should live to be a pander, and yet look upon his chain, and relevit jacket!

Middl. Mad World my Masters.

+CHAIN-BULLETS. Chain-shot; bullets attached together by a chain and fired out of a cannon in that condition.

My friend and I
Like two chain-bullets, side by side, will fly
Thorow the jawes of death.

Heywood's Challenge for Beautie, 1636.

+CHALDRON. Part of the entrails of an animal. See CHAUDRON.

†CHALK. To know cheese from chalk, i. e., to be conscious of what is going on, or of one's interest.

thu I was ever better with forks to scatter, then with rakes to gather, therefore I would not have the townes men to mistake chalks for cheese, or Robert for Richard.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. He knowes chalke from cheese: he knowes on which side his bread is buttered.

Withal's Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 570. CHAMBERS. Short pieces of ordnance, or cannon, which stood on CHAMBER-FELLOW. their breeching, without any carriage, used chiefly for rejoicings, and theatrical cannonades, being little more than chambers for powder. They are, enumerated by authors however. among other pieces of artillery, and by the following passage seem not to have been excluded from real service : To serve bravely is to come halting off, you know:—

To venture upon the charg'd chambers bravely.

2 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

It must be owned that the whole speech is jocular, and therefore might not require perfect correctness of military allusion. The stage direction in Hen. VIII, act i, 4, orders that chambers should be discharged on the landing of the king at the palace of cardinal Wolsey; which very chambers occasioned the burning of the Globe play-house on the Bank-side; for, being injudiciously managed, they set fire to the roof, which was thatched with reeds, and the whole building was consumed. Ben Jonson, in his execration upon Vulcan, particularly alludes to this accident, and calls it the mad prank of Vulcan:

Against the Globe, the glory of the Bank;
Which, though it were the fort of the whole parish,
Flank'd with a ditch, and forced out of a marish,

I saw with two poor chambers taken in, And raz'd. Works, vol. vi. p. 409. See also Prolegom. to Shakesp., p. 315, and suppl., ii, 542.

In the account of the queen's entertainment at Elvetham, p. 19, we find that there was "a peale of an hundred chambers discharged from the Snailmount." Nichols's Progresses, vol. ii. At the ceremony of letting in the water to the great cistern at the New River Head, which was attended by sir Hugh Middleton, the lord mayor and aldermen, &c., "after a handsome speech, the flud-gates flew open, the stream ran chearfully into the cistern, the drums and trumpets sounding in triumphant manner, and a gallant peal of chambers gave a period to the entertainment." Howell, Londinop. p. 11.

The small guns still fired in St. James's Park, on rejoicings, are probably of the very same kind.

Called in the universities a chum. One who jointly inhabited the same chambers with another. The same was also practised in the inns of court; and Mr. Ed. Heyward of Cardeston in Norfolk. to whom Selden dedicated his Titles of Honour, is known to have been thus connected with that great lawyer. Ben Jonson, in his verses on that book, so mentions Heyward:

He thou hast giv'n it to,
Thy learned chamber-fellow, knows to do
It true respects.

Underwood, vi, p. 366. Selden, probably, so addressed him in the first edition, which I have not In the second he only alludes to that connection:

to that connection:
Worthy sir, that affection which thus gave you, some sixteen yeers past, the first edition of the Titles of Honor, was justly bred out of the most sweet community of life. and freedome of studies, which I then happily enjoy'd with you.

Ded., 2d edit.

CHAMBERER. A wanton person; an intriguer.

Haply for I am black, And have not those soft parts of conversation That chamberers have.

Fall'n from a soldier to a chamberer.

Countess of Pembroke's Antonius, 1590.

It can hardly be necessary to mention, that the word chambering occurs in our version of the New Testament in a similar sense. Rom. xiii, 3.

+CHAMBER-LETTER. Letting of chambers appears to have been considered a disreputable occupation.

B. We are even closed up, betweene the dore and the wall, betweene an host and a whore.

F. We want here but a scholler, an hackney man, a marshall, a custome house searcher, a chamber-lett-r, a bargeman, and worse I cannot tell how to devise.

Passenger of Benreauto, 1612.

CHAMBERLIN, properly CHAMBER-LAIN. An attendant in an inn, equivalent to the present head waiter or upper chambermaid, or both offices united; sometimes male, sometimes female. Milton says that Death acted to Hobson the carrier:

In the kind office of a chamberlin, Show'd him his room where he must lodge that night, Show'd him his room where he must lodge that night, Pull'd off his boots, and took away the light.

On the Univ. Carrier, 1, 14.
I had even as live the chamberlaine of the White Horse had called me up to bed.

Peele's Old Wive's Tale, i, 1.

In the Knight of the Burning Pestle, the chamberlain and other servants of an inn are ludicrously described as squires attendant upon the knight, who is the landlord:

The first hight chamberline, who will see Our beds prepar'd, and bring us snowy sheets, Where never footman stretch'd his butter'd hams

The character of a chamberlaine is given at large by Wye Saltonstall, in the 18th of his Characters (1631), where some of his tricks are exposed. Among his perquisites, was that of selling faggots to the guests. He is also said to be "secretary to the kitching and tapsty," i. e., the tap. He also made the charge for the reckoning. The author concludes by saving.

But I forbeare any farther description, since his picture is drawne to the life in every inne.

See Mr. Wharton's ed. of Milton's smaller poems, p. 323. A chamber-lain was also a servant in private houses. See Johnson.

†CHAMBER-STOOL. A close-stool.
This term occurs in the Nomenclator, 1585.

A chamberstoole or pot, lasanum et scaphium.
Withal's Dictionarie, ed, 1608, p. 205.

CHAMFER'D. Furrowed; channelled, like a fluted column, which was the original sense.

Comes the breme winter with chamfred brows, Full of wrinkles and frosty furrows. Spens., Pebruary, 43.

CHAMFRON. The frontlet of a barded war-horse; usually armed with a spike between the eyes. Howel thus defines it, among the bardes of a horse: "Les bardes,—c'est-à-dire, toutes les pièces pour l'armer, comme le chanfrain, pièce de fer avec une longue pointe de fer au milieu, qui lui couvre et arme la face," &c. Vocabulary, § 44. See Chamfrain, in the Manual Lexique of Prevot. See also Ivanhoe, vol. i, p. 26.

CHAMOMILE. It was formerly imagined that chamomile grew the more luxuriantly for being frequently trodden or pressed down; and this was a very favourite allusion with poets and other writers. Shakespeare ridicules an absurd use of it:

For though the camomile the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears.

The above is evidently written in ridicule of the following passage, in a book then very fashionable, Lyly's Euphues, of which it is a parody:

Though the camomil! the more it is trodden and pressed downe, the more it spreadeth; yet the violet the oftener it is handled and touched the sooner it withereth and decaieth.

Euphnes, sign. D, bl. let.
Shakespeare showed his taste in ridiculing an affected style, which was then yeary generally admired.

then very generally admired:
That ev'ry heast that can but pay his tole
May travel o'er, and like to camomile,
Flourish the better being trodden on.
Miseries of Inf. M., O. Pl., v, 56.

CHAMPER. Of uncertain meaning. I have found it only in the following passage. Perhaps caters.

I keep champers in my house can shew your lordship some pleasure. Mad World, O. Pl., v, 832.

†CHAMPION. The old term for champain, or flat country.

The verdant mends are drest in green,
The champion fields with corn are seen;
Wheat-cars do the summer crown,
Harvest begins to come to town.
Poor Robin, 1694.

+CHANCEABLE. Accidental.

That they thought in the channecable hitting uppon any such verses, great foretokens of their fortunes were placed. Whereupon grew the worde of Sortes Virgiliame, * * which although it were a very vaine and godles superstition. Sydney's Apology for Poetry.

CHANCEMEDLEY. The old law term for mauslaughter.

Manslaughter, otherwise called chancemedley, is the killing of a man feloniously, se, with a mans will, and yet without any malice forethought; as when two doe quarrell and fight together upon the sudden and by neere chance, without any malice precedent, and one of them doth kil the other; this also is felony of death. Plo. 101. Br. Coron., 222.

CHANCE Towns of the process of the coron, 222.

To CHANGE. To wear changes or variety of any dress or ornament.

O that I knew this husband, which, as you say, must change his horns with garlands, [i.e. must wear a variety of garlands on his horns].

Ant. J. Cl., i, 2.

CHANGELING. The fairies were supposed to steal the most beautiful and witty children, and leave in their places such as were ugly and stupid. These were usually called changelings: but sometimes the child taken was so termed:

So, let's see; it was told me I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling. Wint. T., in; 3. As the child found was a beautiful one, changeling must there mean the child stolen by the fairies, especially as the gold left with it is conjectured to be fairy gold. It certainly means so in the following passage:

so in the following passage:

Because that she, as her attendant, hath
A lovely boy stol'n from an Indian king,
She never had so sweet a changeling.

Mids. N. Dr., ii, l.

The usual sense of the word is thus marked by Spenser:

From thence a facry thee unweeting reft, There as thou slepst in tender swadling band,

150

arms.

And her base elfin brood there for the left:
Such men do chaungelings call, so chaunged by facrics
F. Q., I, x, 65.

+CHANKS. Shankers.

TOHANAS. Shalkers.

An angel-like water of a marvellous virtue against blearedness of the eyes, chanks, and burning with fire.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

†CHANNEL-BONE. The collar-bone.

Used by Chapman, Hom. Il., xvii. Cavicula jugulus, Cels. compages colli cum trunco, κλοίς, κληψε. Homer. κληψορο, Galeno. L'os du gavion. The channel bone: the necks bone or throte bone. Nomenciator, 1886.

CHANSON, PIOUS. What is meant by it, in the following wild speech, of Hamlet's feigned madness, has been more disputed than it is worth.

Why as by lot, God wot, and then you know, it came to pass, as most like it was,—the first row of the pions chanson will shew you more.

Haml., ii, 2,

The pious chanson might mean a sacred song on Jephtha, which appears to be quoted. But the reading is doubtful; Pons chanson and Pans chansons are in the folios, both of which are apparently nonsense. Hamlet was perhaps intended to mix French and English, but both seem to have been corrupted by the players. or the printers.

+CHAPS. The chops.

The silly sheep, and chaps with blood besoiles.

Firgil, by Ficars, 1632.

+CHAPERON. A hood.

The judges meet in som uncouth dark dungeon, and the executioner stands by, clad in a close dark garment, his head and face covered with a chaperon, out of which ther are but two holes to look through, and a huge link burning in his hand.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+CHAPILET.

Howell's Pamiliar Letters, 1650.

CHAPILET. A chaplet.

Make her a goodly chapilet of azur'd colombine,
And wreath about her coronet with sweetest eglentine.

Drayton's Shepherd's Garland, 1593.

Spira, capitis ornamentum femineum, ex auro et gemmis, retro adstringi solitum, Ascon. Isidor.

strArypis, Sayvis, Theocriti schol. Buben d'or et de perles Womens attire for the head, made of gold and pearle, and used to be tied or fastened behind: some call it a chapilet.

APINEY the account of the same and the same call the chapilet.

CHAPINEY, the same as CHIOPPINE. CHAPMAN. Now used only for a purchaser, or one who bargains for purchase, but anciently signified a seller also, being properly ceapman, market man, or cope man, one who barters with another. See COPEMAN. Shakespeare has used it for a seller:

Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues.

Love's L. L., ii, 1.

CHAPTER, or CHAPITER. The capital of a column.

The collowns hie, the chapters guilt with gold, The cornishes enricht with things of cost. Spens.

In the translation of the Bible. chapter is frequently used in the same sense, as in Exod. xxxvi. 38. &c. There is no weight put upon the capitella or chapiters of them, as upon the other pillar's head, for fear least they should be broken in pieces. Coryat, i. p. 269, repr. CHARACT. A distinctive mark, as in

Even so may Angelo
In all his dressings, characts, titles, forms,
Be an arch-villain. Meas. for Meas., v, 1.

A statute of Edw. VI directs the seals of office of every bishop to have certain characts, under the king's arms, for the knowledge of the 1 Ed. VI, c. 2. diocese.

CHARACTERY. Writing; that which is charactered; expression. Accented on the second syllable.

Faries use flowers for their charactery.

Mer. W. W., v, 5.

All my engagements I will construct o thee, All the charactery of my sad brows. Jul. Con., ii, 1. CHARE, or CHAR-WORK. Task-Of uncertain work, or any labour. derivation. See Todd.

And when thou'st done this chare I'll give thee leave the state of the Also iv, 13.

I have yet one chare to do. Promos & Cassandra, i, 6. His hands to woll, and arras worke, and women's chares hee laid. Warner's Alb. Engl., ii, 11. You are a trim gossip, go give her the blue gown, sether to her chare; work, huswife, for your bread, away!

2d Part Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 479. Chare-woman is still used, for one hired to work by the day.

To CHARE, or CHAR. To work, or

All's char'd when he is gone. Two Noble Kinsm., iii, 2. All's char'd, means "all is done; it is all over." "That char is char'd, as the good wife said when she had hang'd her husband." Ray's Prov., p. 182, who there conjectures char to be formed from charge, sar' άποκοπήν. See CHEWRE.

CHARE THURSDAY. The Thursday in Passion week. Corrupted, according to the following ancient explanation, from Shear Thursday, being the day for shearing, or shaving, preparatory to Easter. Called also Maundy Thursday.

Upon Chare Thursday Christ brake bread unto his disciples, and bad them eat it, saying it was his ficah and blood.

Shepherd's Kalendar. and blood. Shopkerd's Kalendar. Yf a man aske why Shore Thursday is called so, ye may say that in holy chirche it is called Cena Domini, our Lordes super day. It is also in Englyshe called Sher Thursday, for in olde faders dayes the people wolde that days shere theyr hedes, and clippe theyr berdes, and poll theyr hedes, and so make them honest agenst Ester day. For on Good Fryday they doo theyr bodyes none case, but suffre pensunce in mynde of him, that that day suffred his passyon for all man kynde. On Ester even it is tyme to here theyr servyce, and after servyce make holy daye. Then as Johan Bellet sayth, on Sher Thursday a man sholde do poll his here, and clype his berde, and a preest sholde shave his crowne, so that there shold nothynge be betweene God and hym.

Festival, quoted by Dr. Wordsworth, in Eccles. Biog., vol. i, p. 297.

CHARET, CHARRY. Old forms of chariot.

The further from the sun, the duller wits. The common people imagined the sun to be carried about in a charat with horses. Phaer's Virgit, 1600, marg. n. Come pray thee come, wee'l now assay. To piece the scantness of the day:

We'l pluck the wheels from th' charry of the sun,

That he may give Us time to live;
Till that our scene be done. Witt's Recreations, 1654. CHARGE. To give a charge to the watchmen appears to have been a regular part of the duty of the constable of the night. Dogberry's charge is well known, which, curious as it is, appears to satisfy the watchmen, whose resolution is as useful as that is sagacious:

Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church bench 'till two, and then all to bed.

Much Ado, iii, 3.

My watch is set—charge given,—and all at peace.

New Trick to cheat the Devil, 1689.

CHARGE-HOUSE. Conjectured to Conjectured to mean a free-school, by Mr. Steevens: but more probably a common school. for at a free-school there is no charge. Used only, as far as I know, in the following question to Holofernes the schoolmaster; evidently intended for affected language.

Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

L. L. Lost, v, 1.

CHARINESS. Caution; scrupulousness. From chary, which, as well as this derivative, is growing obsolete.

Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him that may not sully the chariness of our honesty.

Mor. W. W., ii, 1.

CHARITY, ST. The allegorical personage Charity figured as a saint in the Romish Calendar, and consequently was currently spoken of as such by our ancestors. Ophelia sings,

By Gis, and by Saint Charity. Haml., iv. 5. Gammer Gurton says,

And helpe me to my neele, for God's sake, and St. Charitie. Gammer G., O. Pl. ii, 54.

Spenser also speaks of her:

penser also spears of the Ah! dear Lord! and sweet Saint Charity!
That some good body once would pity me.

Ect. May, 247.

CHARLES'S WAIN. The old name for the seven bright stars of the constellation Ursa Major. The constellation was so named in honour of Charlemagne. With the usual regard of our elder poets to chronological propriety, it is, in Fisher's Fuintus Troes, put into the mouth of Brennus the Gaul, who took Rome. Yet Fisher was an academic.

From the unbounded ocean, and cold climes Where Charles's wain circles the northern pole.

Phimus Troes, O. Pl., vii, 446.

The editor of the old plays, there, and in vol. v, 259, explains it as the constellation Ursa Minor, which is a mistake.

Charle Wane is used by Bp. Gavin Douglas.

HOUGIAS.

thor can the searching eye, or most admirable art of astronomic, ever yet finde, that a coach could attaine to that high exaltation of honour, as to be placed in the firmament. It is apparently seen, that Charles his Cart (which we by custome call Charles his Wase) is most gloriously stellified, where in the large circumference of heaven, it is a most usefull and beneficial sea-marke (and sometimes a land-marke too.) Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To CHARM. To utter musical sounds, whether by voice or instrument. From ciarma, Ital.

Here we our slender pipes may safely charm. There we our stender pipes may salely charm.

O what songs will I charm out, in praise of those valiantly strong-stinking breaths.

Decker, Gul's Hornb. Prosm.

Hence Milton's beautiful expression: With charm of earliest birds. Par. L., iv, 641.

+CHARM-MILK. An old name for buttermilk.

Lac serosum, agitatum. γάλα δρόώδες. Lait beurs. Butter milke: charme milke. Nomenclator, 1585.

CHARMER. One who deals in charms or spells; magician.

That handkerenies

Did an Egyptian to my mother give.

She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people.

I fly unseen as charmers in a mist.

Phimus Trocs, O. Pl., vii, 497.

In the Psalms, we read of the charmer who charms wisely, with a design to quell the fury of the adder. Ps. lviii, 5.

+CHARNE. To churn.

They are so practized and inured in all kinde of bar-barisme, that they will milke one mare, and let another blood, and the blood and the milke they will charse together in their hats or caps, till they have made fresh cheese and creame (which the divell will scarce Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CHARNICO, or CHARNECO. of sweet wine. Supposed by Warburton to be derived from charneca, the Spanish name for a species of turpentine tree.

And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco

2 Hen. VI. ii S. Come my inestimable bullies, we'll talk of your noble Come my inestimatic control acts in sparkling characto.

Puritan, act iv, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 616.

It was probably esteemed a fine wine. being introduced with sack in the first-cited passage, and in the following mentioned with anchovies, which were then esteemed a great delicacy:

And 's soon I'd undertake to follow her,
L. Where no old charnico is, nor no anchoves.
B. f. Fl. Wit without M., act ii.
A pottle of Greek wine, a pottle of Peter-sa-meene, a pottle of charnico co. 2d Part of Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 457. It was probably a Spanish wine, being mentioned with others as such, in a work called Philocothonista. See the note on the above passage. Yet Mr. Steevens asserts that Charneco is the name of a village near Lisbon.

†CHAROKKOE. A corruption of the Italian scirocco, the south-east wind.
When the chill charokkoe blows,

When the chill charokkee viows, And winter tells a heavy tale. Ballad, 17th cent. CHARTEL. A challenge, or letter of defiance. From charta, Lat. The word now in use, but in a different sense, is cartel, from cartelle, Ital. See Johnson.

Chief of domestic knights, and errant, Either for chartel, or for warrant.

You had better have been drunk, and set in the stocks for it, when you sent the post with a whole packet of chartels for me.

Lord Roos' Letter to Lord Dorchester, 1659, p. 5.

CHARY. Scrupulous; nicely cautious. See CHARINESS above.

The chariest maid is prodigal enough, If she unmask her beauty to the moon

Haml., i. 3. Nor am I chary of my beauty's hue, But that I am troubled with the tooth-ach sore

George a Greene, O. Pl., iii, 30. CHASBOW. The poppy, Scotch. Written also chasboll, chesbol, and chesbowe. See Jamieson.

The violet her fainting head declin'd Beneath a sleepy charbow. Drummond, p. 13, ed. 1791.

Gerard says, the plant was called in English poppy, or cheese-bowles, p. 400. A strange corruption!

CHASEMATE. See CASAMATE.

+CHASE-PIECE. The cannon in a ship which was so placed as to be available in pursuing an enemy, placed no doubt on the bow.

The eighth day, about 7 in the morning, Rufrero with his frigots came rowing towards the ship, and being then calme that the ship could not worke, hee came in such sort that she could have none but her chase peece to beare upon them, which lay so well to passe, that they sunke two of their frigots before they could boord her, and two more after they were by her sides.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CHAUCER'S JESTS. Incontinence in act or language. Probably from the licentious turn of some of that poet's

In good faith, no; the wight that once hath tast the

In good rattn, no; the fruits of love, fruits of love, Untill her dying days will long sir Chancer's jests to Promos. f Cassand, i, 8.

So Harrington, on the licentious use of the word occupy :

Lesbia doth laugh to heare sellers and buyers
Cal'd by this name, substantial occupyers:
Lesbia, the word was good while good folk us'd it,
You mar'd it that with Chawcer's jest abus'd it.

Yet would he not play Cupid's ape,
In Chaucer's jest lest he should shape
A pigsnye like himselfe.

Verses prefixed to Coryat, Copy 11.

CHAUDRON, or CHAULDRON. Part of the entrails of an animal. Add thereto a tyger's chaudron, For the ingredients of our cauldron.

How fare I? troth, for sixpence a meal wench, as well as heart can wish, with calves chaldrons and chitter-lines.

Hencst Wh., O. Pl., iii, 300.

See Todd in Chawdron.

To CHAUNE. To gape, or open. The word is Greek, however it got adopted here: χαυνῶ, laxo, aperio.

Oh, thou all bearing earth,
Which men do gape for, 'till thou cramm'st their mouths And choak'st their throats with dust: O chause thy

And let me sink into thee.

Ant. & Mell. Anc. Dr., ii, 144. The editor of that work changed the word, because it was unknown to him. But Cotgrave has it, both in the French and English part, and Todd gives it as a substantive from Bp. Herbert Croft.

†CHAUNE, or CHAWNE. A crack, or crevice.

Anaximander is of opinion, that the earth waxing drie upon a long and extraordinarie drought, or after much moist weather and store of raine, openeth very great chinkes and wide chaures, at which the aire above with violence and in exceeding much quantitie entreth, and so by them shaken with a strong spirit, is stirred and moved out of her proper place.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

IAW An add form of the word inwestigations.

CHAW. An old form of the word jaw. It occurs in that form in the translations of the Bible, Ezekiel xxix, 4, and xxxviii, 4, but has been silently altered in the later editions. It was continued in the first part of the 18th century.

†Now this inflexible purpose of his grew the more confirmed through the covetousnesse both of himselfe, and of those also who conversed then in the court, and of those also who conversed then in the court, gaping still for more, and never laying their chares together, which did set him on and pricke him ever forward. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. †Danieles after this and Barzimeres, when thus deluded they were returned (to the court.) being with reproachfull tearmes reviled as dastards and cowards, faring like unto venimous serpents, which with the first blow are astonied, plucked up their spirits and whetted their deadly chases, purposing as soone as possibly they could if it lay in their power to be meet with him that thus escaped their hands, and to doe him mischiefe.

154

CHAWL. The jaw, or jaw-bone.

Of an asse he caught the chaule bone. Bochas., 33. Cited by a writer in the Gent. Mag., Feb., 1820, p. 116. The editor adds. "Pigs' chauls are to be had at every pork-shop." In Staffordshire, they are simply called chawls; which would be a better term than the compounds, pias'-faces, or pias'-chops, which are commonly used in London.

CHEAP, Market. See CHEPE.

CHEAPSIDE CROSS. The cross at Cheapside, being much revered by the Papists, was proportionably detested by the Puritans. It was therefore removed May 2d, 1643. In Randolph's Muses' Looking Glass, a Puritan calls it an idol; -or rather the statue of the Virgin which was on it. She looketh like the idol of Cheapside.

CHEARE, or CHEERE. Look; air of countenance.

No sign of joy did in his looks appear, Or ever mov'd his melancholy chear. Drayton's Owl, 8vo, p. 1292.

Drayton's Owl, 8vo, p. 12wz.
With cheare as though one should another whelme,
Where we have fought and chased oft' with dartes.
Ld. Surrey's Sonnet on Winds. Castle.
IEAT-BREAD. Household bread;

CHEAT-BREAD. i.e., wheaten bread of the second sort. This is fully explained by Cotgrave, who, under Pain, has pain bourgeois, which he renders "crible bread, between white and brown, a bread that somewhat resembles our wheaten, or cheat." Todd derives it from achet, but that seems very doubtful. G. Mason, the censurer of Johnson, says, "the finest white bread."

No manchet can so well the courtly palate please, As that made of the meal fetch'd from my fertil leaze. Their finest of that kind, compared with my wheat, For whiteness of the bread, doth look like common Drayt. Polyolb., zvi, p. 959.

See MANCHET.

The poor cattle yonder are passing away the time with a cheat loaf, and a bumbard of broken beer.

B. Jons. Masque of Augurs, vol. vi, p. 123.

In the following it seems to indicate a fine sort, yet perhaps the speaker means that she shall be reduced even to the coarsest kind: she laments that she shall be,

Without French wires; or cheat bread, or quails; or a little dog; or a gentleman usher; or indeed any thing that's fit for a lady.

Eastward Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 281.

†As when salt Archy or Garret doth provoke them, And with wide laughter and a cheat-long choake.

Corbet's Poetica Stromata, 1648.

CHEATER, is said, in many modern notes, to have been synonymous with uamester: but it meant always an unfair gamester, one who played with false dice: though the name is said to have been originally assumed by those gentry themselves.

He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, he. [The hostess immediately contrasts the expression with konest man.] Cheater call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater.

2 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

So, in Ben Jonson's epigram on Captain Hazard the cheater, his false play is immediately mentioned: Touch'd with the sin of false-play in his punk, Hazard a month forswore his, and grew drunk.

In several old books, it is said that the term was borrowed from the lawyers, casual profits to a lord of a manor being called escheats or cheats. and the officer who exacted them escheater or cheater. An officer of the Exchequer, employed to exact such forfeitures, and therefore held in no good repute, was apparently so called, at least by the common people. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me.

To CHECK. A term in falconry. To pause in the flight; to change the game while in pursuit, especially for an inferior kind.

And like the haggard check at ev'ry feather That comes before his eye. Tweel. I Twel. N., iii, 1.

CHECK, s. Base game itself was also called check; such as rooks, small birds, &c.

To take your falcon from going out to any check, thus you must do: If she hath kill'd a check and has fed thereon, before you come in, &c.

Gentl. Recr., 8vo, p. 27.

The free haggard,
(Which is that woman that hath wing, and knows it.
Spirit and plume) will make a hundred checks
To shew her freedom.

B. J. Fl. Tamer tamed.

See 'Todd, Check, No. 5. †To CHECK. To reproach. Used also as a substantive, a taunt.

Which beheld by Hector, he let go itter check at him. Chapm. Hom. R., iii, 37. This bitter check at him. +CHECK-CLOUD.

Not to dismount a checke-cloud earthy heape. Or make soule passage by a poinard point.

Rowlands' Betraying of Christ, 1598.

CHECK-LATON. Used by Spenser for a kind of gilt leather, as he has defined it in his View of Ireland, and probably means the same here.

MIS the Same new.

But in a jacket, quilted richly rare,
Upon checklaton, he was strangely dight.

P. Q., VI, vii.

Tyrwhitt, on Chaucer, seems rather to make it the form of a robe, from an old French word, ciclaton; and he considers Spenser as mistaken in his idea of it. Yet Chaucer's words are, "his robe was of ciclatoun." which surely implies that it was made of a substance so called. [The word is derived from the Arabic, and signified originally a rich stuff which was brought from the East.]

+CHECK-TEETH. The grinders. For cheek teeth.

The other 5 on each side with three rootes, are the grinders, or checkletch. Lomatius on Painting, 1698. Dentes genuins, Cic. intimi, Eid. aparripes, deliyoros, owdopouroripes. Dents maschelieres. The justecth or checketeeth.

+CHECQUER-ROLL. A check-roll, or list of servants in the household.

First, if any man being the kings sworne servant (and his name in the chequer-roll of his houshold) under the degree of a lord, shall conspire with another. Dallon's Country Justice, 1820.

CHEEKS AND EARS. A fantastic name for a kind of head-dress, of temporary fashion.

Fr. O then thou can'st tell how to help me to cheeks and cars. L. Yes, mistress, very neil Pt. S. Cheeks and cars. L. Yes, mistress Frances, want you cheeks and cars? methinks you have very fair ones. Pr. Thou art a fool indeed. Tom, thou knowest what I mean. Cis. Ay, ay, Kester; 'tis such as they wear a' their heads.

London Prod., iv, 3, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 511.

+CHEESE-TRENCHERS. Are referred to in old plays as having posies often inscribed on them.

+CHEEKS. Door-posts.

Antas, Vitru. ostiorum latera, Festo, Lapides vel arrectaria utrunque; ostii latus munientia. παραστάδες, Χεπορh. σταθμοί, Polluci, τέτταρα, Hesych. Poll. Les jambes, on jambags d'un huis ou porte. The doore postes, jambes, or checks of the doore. Nomenclator.

+CHEERY. In good spirits.

A young maid having married an old man, was ob-A young maid having married an old man, was observed on the day of marriage to be somewhat moody, as if she had eaten a dish of chums, which one of her bridemen observing bid her be cheery, and told her moreover, that an old horse would hold out as long and as well as a young in travel.

Wilty Apolkegms, 1669.

Ben. Ods precious, madam, I am not so old yet to think it a trouble to wait upon ladies. Mine was not an age of that debauchery to make men old and de-crepid at thirty. I am upwards of threescore, and yet, ods precious, I am sound of limb and cheary of heart. Ha, come lady. Wrangling Lovers, 1677.

+CHEERING. A rural feast or merry-

Feasts which they called barley-feasts, wherein they did sacrifice for or with their barley, and so be the feastings, meetings, and cheerings called in our barleyfeastings, meetings, and harvests at this day.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 84. +CHENIX. A measure of corn: a bushel. The Gr. xoiris.

I will allow him pottage thickt with bran,
Of barley-meale a chenix every day.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638.

+CHEESE. Suffolk cheese seems to have been notorious for its bad quality.

Observations on April.

Poverty and pride this Easter will go hand in hand, many will pinch their bellies to adorn their backs, and many will pinch their belies to adorn their backs, and young women tumble upon their backs to please their bellies. Many London prentices will be forc'd to eat Suffolk cheese, that their masters daughters may be kept at a boarding-school. London Bratiched, 1708.

†CHECKER-MAN. A player at chess.
For Death hath been a checker-man

Not many yeares agoe;
And he is such a one as can
Bestow his checking so.
Death's Dance, an old Ballad, n. d.

+CHEIREBOLL.

That upon the cheyreboll hard beating his fist, Spiders owe all windows, he sware by Gods blist.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

CHEPE. Market, Saxon.

Nor can it nought our gallant prayses reape,
Unless it be done in [the] staring cheape.

Ret. from Parm., sc. 1.

As good cheve is therefore exactly analogous to the French, aussi bon marché.

That yf there were a thousande soules on a hepe,
I wold bring them all to heven, as good ckepe
As ye have brought yourselfe on pilgrimage.
But the sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good ckep, at the dearest chandler's in Europe.

Perhaps thou may'st agree better cheap now.
Anonymous Play of Hen. V.
Hence Chean See

Hence Cheapside, East Cheap, &c. CHERALLY. A liquor, but of what sort is uncertain.

By your leave, sir, I'it tend my master, and instantly be with you for a cup of cherally this hot weather.

B. & Fl. Fair M. of Inn, ii, 2.

Mr. Weber's conjecture is hardly worth notice.

+CHERRY-BOUNCE. Burnt brandy and sugar; or perhaps what we now call cherry-brandy.

Burnt brandy very good I hold,
To keep in heat, and force out cold;
And if you chuse to drink it raw,
Mix sugar which it down will draw: When men together these do flounce, They call the liquor cherry-bounce; Yet no more difference in them lies, Yet no more difference in them now,
Than betwirt mine'd and Christmas pies.

Poor Robin, 1740.

+CHERRILETS. A term for the paps.

Then nature for a sweet allurement sets
Two succling, swelling, bashful cherry-lets;
The which with ruby-redness being tip'd, Do speak a virgin merry, cherry-lip'd.

Over the which a neat sweet skin is drawn Which makes them shew like roses under lawn.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

Then those twins, thy strawberry teates, Curled, puried, cherrilets?

Sylvester's Miracle of the Peace, 1599.

+CHEERUPPING. For chirruping, on the supposition, apparently, that the word is derived from cheer up.

Come turn up the boats, let's put on our coats,
And to Ben's, there's a cheerupping cup;
Let's comfort our hearts, every man his two quarts,
And to-morrow all hands to cut up.

The Greenland Voyage, a ballad.

CHERRY-PIT. A puerile game, which consisted of pitching cherry-stones into a small hole, as is still practised with leaden counters called dumps, or with money.

What man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Treel. N., iii, 4. Nash [Pierce Penilesse], speaking of the disfigurement of ladies' faces by painting, says,

You may play at cherry-pit in the dint of their cheeks.

I have loved a witch ever since 1 play'd cherry pit.

Witch of Edmonton.

His ill favoured visage was almost eaten through with pock-holes, so that halfe a parish of children might easily have played at cherry-pit in his face.

Fenner's Compteri Com. W. in Cens. Lit., x, 301.

+CHESHIRE-ROUND. A rough dance.

The fidlers, with their chaplets crown'd,
Now gave the mob a Cheshire-round,
To which, a sloven paw'd the floor,
And us'd the same steps o'er and o'er, Hudibras Rediricus, vol. ii, part 4.

CHESSNER.

ESSNER. A chess-player.

Yonder's my game, which, like a politic chessner,
I must not seems to see.

Middl. Game at Chess, act iv.

CHEST. For a coffin. In very common use.

But first, in Duden's place, now laid in chest, Chuse you some other captain, stout and wise.

Sleep'st thou yet here, forgetful of this thing, That yet thy friends lie slain, not laid in cheet? Ibid., x. 8.

Chests is put also for the game of chess. O. Pl., v, 168.

+CHESTS. The game of chess. Jouer eux eschets, to play at chests or tables. Nomenclator, 1585, p. 294.

CHEVERIL. A kid; more commonly, kid leather. Chevreuil, Fr.

A sentence is but a chereril glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward! Twel. N., iii, 1.

This leather being of a very yielding nature, was often alluded to in comparisons:

Oh, here's a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad! Rom. & Jul., ii. 4. arrow to an ell broad! Rom. & Jul., ii, 4.
No cheveril stretching to such prophanation.
Two Maids of Moreclack, 1609. Thus a very flexible conscience was proverbially compared to it:

He hath a conscience like a cheverel's skin. Ray, 274. Which gifts—the capacity

Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive or your soit exercit conscience would receive if you might please to stretch it. Hen. VIII, ii, S. He had a tongue for ev'ry language fit, A cheverel conscience, and a searching wit.

Drayton's Out, Works, 800, p. 1302.

CHEVISANCE. Achievement; action. But through this and other their miscreance. They maken many a wrong cherisance.

Spens. Ecl. May, 91. Here, after they had well refreshed their bodies with ment, they came the next day to Callinisum, a strong towne of defence, and for rich cherisance and quicke traffique a most delectable place.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. CHEWET, certainly meant a sort of minced or forced-meat pie; but as prince Henry, when he calls Falstaff chewet, is reproving him for unseasonable chattering, interrupting grave business, Peace, chewet, peace. 1 Hen. IV, v, 1. it is more likely that he alluded to the chattering bird, called in French chouëtte, by us chough, or jack-daw. Common birds had always a variety of names.

As for the other chewet, Cotgrave uses it to explain the French word goubelet, thus, "a little round pie, resembling our chuet." Lord Bacon mentions chuets, in his Natural History, and calls them minced meat. In the following proverbial line, bird or mincedpie may suit equally well:

Chatting to chidyng is not worth a chuet.

Heywood's Poems, 4to, G, 4. CHEWRE, only a corrupt form of chare. A task, or business. I have little doubt that it was pronounced cheer.

Here's two chewres chewr'd; when wisdom is employed 'Tis ever thus.

B. & Fl. Love's Cure, iii, 2.

i. e., "Here's two chares char'd," two businesses done, two points gained. Cheer is very likely to be said for chare: as it frequently is. even now, for chair.

An officer under the Turkish CHIAUS.

government. Sandys writes it chause, and thus defines it:

Of the other Jemoglans some come to chauses; who of the other semograms some come to example; who go on embassies, execute commandements, and are as pursivants, and under sherrifs attending the imployment of the emperour—and on the courts of justice, soliciting also the causes of their chients.

Sandys' Travels, p. 48.

In 1609, a chiaus was sent by sir

Robert Shirley from Constantinople, who, before his employer arrived, had chiaused (or choused) the Turkish and Persian merchants out of four thousand pounds, and had decamped. The affair was quite recent when Jonson's Alchemist appeared, 1610. who thus alludes to it

D. What do you think of me?
That I am a chiaus?

D. The Turk [who] was here.

As one would say, do you think I am a Turk? Alch., i. 2.

And afterwards,
This is the gentleman, and he's no chiaus.
"The Turk," says Mr. Gifford, "was probably little conscious that he had enriched the language with a word, the etymology of which would mislead Upton, and puzzle Dr. Johnson." He might have mentioned Skinner, and others also.

Hence therefore to chouse, which is the same sound in different letters: and which, while the fact was remembered, was written chiause. As by Shirley, quoted by Mr. Gifford; and by Gayton, Festiv. Notes, B. iv, chap. 16 and 18, chiauze. So capricious is often the origin of words, and so dangerous to etymologists. Rycaut writes it chiause.

CHIBBALS, or CHIBBOLS. Onious. From ciboule, Fr.

As at St. James's, Greenwich, Tibbuals,
Where the acorns plump as chibbals
Soon shall, &c.
B. Jons. Gipsics Melam., a Masque, vol. vi, p. 73.
+CHICKIN. The Italian coin a sequine. See CHIQUINIE.

Finally, they made him giddle and blinde, by disbursing unto him an hundred chickins of very good golde, then they honourably clad him, with episcopall roubes, and advised him, that whither they should conduct him, keeping silence, and standing with a kinde of reverence.

Passenger of Beneenuto, 1612.

To CHIDE. Sometimes merely to make a noise, without any reference to scolding. It means here the cry of hounds:

Never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for besides the groves,
The skies, the fountain, ev'ry region near Seem'd all a mutual cry.
I take great pride
To hear soft music, and thy shrill voice chide.

Humour out of breath, cited by Mr. Steevens.

In the following passage either sense may do:

With as much patience hear the mariners Chide in a storm. Muses' Looking Gl., O. Pl., 1x, 201.

To CHIEVE. To succeed; to proceed; as in the phrase, "Faire chieve you. which Coles renders, opus tuum fortunet Deus, spiret labori tuo

You have us'd a doctor farre worse, and therfore look for ill chiesing.

Ulysses upon Ajax, D, 2 b. tFor apparant it was, that if they chiesed well in this enterprise, they would make foule worke, and commit some notable carnage among them.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

CHILD. A youth trained to arms, whether squire or knight: derived by some from the Saxon cild, a prince.

Child Rowland to the dark tower came. Lear, iii, 4.
And yonder lives the child of Elle.

A young and comely knight. Percy's Anc. Ballads, i, 109, See his annotation prefixed to Child Waters, vol. iii, p. 54. Sir Tristram in Spenser is called child Tristram, immediately after being dubbed a squire:

So he him dubbed, and his 'squire did call, Full glad and joyous then young Tristram grew. After which it is subjoined.

Chyld Tristram pray'd that he with him might go On his adventure. Spons. F. Q., VI, ii, 35, 36. On this account, Mr. Todd inclines to think that the title belongs to a squire, and not to a knight; though he confesses that it may be found applied to the latter, in the old ballads and romances. But prince Arthur, in his own Spenser, was a complete knight, and of him his author has said expressly,

Ruthor has said capiece.,,
The noble childe, preventing his desire,
Under his club with wary boldnesse went.

F. Q., VI, viii, 15.

See also V, xi, 8. Upton has asserted that cniht, or knight, in Saxon, meant also child; but we see that a squire might be so styled. Childe Harold has lately made the term very familiar.

To CHILD. To bear children. Childing women was a common expression for lying-in women

The spring, the summer,
The childing autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liveries,
Mids., ii, 3. In the above passage childing means fruitful. It is cited several times from Heywood, as And at one instant she shall child two issues

Silver Age. This queene Genissa childing died.

Warner's Alb. Engl.., iii, 18. Drayton uses it also, of Elflida: Who having in her youth of childing felt the woe, Her lord's embraces vow'd she never more would know. Polyolb, Song zii, p. 893.

Childing plants were those now termed by the botanists proliferous. in which one flower rises within or around another, and sometimes se-

Furthermore there is another pritty double daisie, which differs from the first described only in the floure, which at the sides thereof puts forth many footstalkes carrying also little double floures, being mostly of a red colour, so that each stalke carries as it were an old one, and the brood thereof: whence they have fitly termed it the childing daisie.

Gerarde Herb., p. 635.
CHILD, for a young person. This, says Mr. Warton, was anciently restrained to the young of the male sex. Thus the children of the chapel signifies the boys of the chapel, &c. : and in Lord Surrey's translation of the second book of Virgil, for pueri innuptæque puellæ sacra canunt, we have Children and maids that holy carols sung.

And for puer Ascanius,
The childs Julus. Hist. of Poetr., iii, 23. From a passage in the Winter's Tale. Mr. Steevens has maintained that the contrary was the usage, where it is said,

A very pretty bearne, A boy, or a child, I wonder. Act iii, sc. 3. But this may perhaps be rather referred to the simplicity of the shepherd, reversing the common practice, than taken as an authority for it. As to a general reference to the usage of some counties, it cannot have much weight.

+CHILD-GREAT. Great with child.

Swines bread, so used, doth not onely speed A tardy labour; but (without great heed) If over it a child-great woman stride, Du Bartas. Instant abortion often doth betide.

CHILDERMAS DAY. It was a popular superstition, which in the remote parts of the island is not yet extinct, that no undertaking could prosper which was begun on that day of the week on which Childermas, or Innocents' day, last fell.

Friday, quoth-a, a diamal day! Childermas-day this year was Friday.
Sir John Oldcastle, part i, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 297.
Bourne thus speaks of it:

According to them it is very unlucky to begin any work upon Childermass-day; and what day soever that falls on, whether on a Munday, Tuesday, or any other, nothing must be begun on that day through the year.

Obs. on Popular Antiq., ch. 18.

CHILDNESS. Used once by Shakespeare, for childishness.

And, with his varying childness, cures in me Thoughts that would thick my blood. Wint. Tule, i, 2.

+CHILD-WIFE. A woman who has borne children.

But the law selfe doth openly discharge and deliver this holy childwife from the band of the law, whan it sayeth in the third boke of Moses entitled Leviticus: If a woman have conceived, and borne a manchilde, &c.

Paraphrase of Erasmus, 1548.

CHIN-CLOUT. The muffler formerly worn by females.

If I mistook not at my entrance there hangs the lower part of a gentlewoman's gown, with a mask and a chin-clout.

Mad World, O. Pl., v, 362. It is afterwards said of the lady.

She wears a linen cloth about her jaw. Ibid., p. 370. tHer loose gowne, for her looser body fit.

Shall be adored with a flash of wit,

And from the chin-cloud, to the lowly slipper

In Heliconian streames his praise shall dip her.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. CHINESES. Formerly used for the Chinese, and even later than the times of Shakespeare. Thus Milton,

But in his way lights on the barren plains
Of Sericana, where Chineses drive
With sails and wind their cany waggons light.
Par. Lost, iii, 438.
And the account of the Chineses is not hard to be re-

But for this let them consult the king of France's late envoy thither, who gives no better account of the Chineses themselves.

Chineses themselves.

Locke, I, 4, § 8. Essay on H. Und.

And the Chineses now, who account the world 3,269,000 years old, or more.

Something of this I have seen in some places, but heard more of it from others who have fived much among the Chineses; a people whose way of thinking seems to lie as wide of ours in Europe as their country does.

Sir Wm. Temple on Gardening, vol. iii, p. 220.

†CHINKY. Full of cracks or crevices.

Those rays that do but warm you in England, do half roast us here; those beams that irradiat onely, and guild your honey-suckled fields, do scorch and parch this chinky gaping soyl. Howell's Pamiliar Letters, 1650. CHIOPPINE. A sort of high shoe, formerly worn by ladies: or rather a clog or patten, as Corvat savs, "They weare it under their shoes," loc. infr. cit.

By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chioppine.

Haml., ii, 2.

The derivation is Spanish, (chapin.) The wear of them is found most frequently attributed to Italian ladies:

The Italian in her high chopeene.

Heyw. Challenge of Beauty, act v Venice was more famous for them than any other place, and they seem to have been carried there to the greatest excess, where walking was least required.

Tis ridiculous to see how these ladys crawle in and out of their gondolas, by reason of their choppines, and what dwarfs they appeare, when taken down from their wooden scaffolds.—Courtexans or citizens may not weare choppines. Evelyn's Journal, 1645, vol.i, p. 190. As for the women here, [at Venice] they would gladly get the same reputation that their husbands have, of being tall and handsome, but they overdo it with their horrible cioppini, or high shoos, which I have often seen to be a full half yard high.

Lassels's Italy, part ii, p. 380.

See also his discussion on the inconvenience and use of them.

Massinger spells it chapin, according to the etymology:

I am dull—some music-Take my chepins off. So, a lusty strain. Renegado, i, 2. Their Spanish origin is also alluded to by Ben Jonson:

For that He has the bravest device (you'll love him for't) To say he wears cioppinos, and they do so In Spain.

Devil's an Ass, iii, 4. The person spoken of was to be disguised as a Spanish lady, in which dress he appears, act iv, sc. 3, and talks of the fashion of cioppinos accordingly. The intimate connection between Spain and some parts of Italy accounts sufficiently for the quick adoption of the fashion in the latter country. In Marston's Dutch courtezan, their construction is partly explained. "Dost not wear high cork shoes : chopines?" D, 4. Coryat calls them chapineus, and describes them as made of wood covered with coloured leather, and sometimes even half a yard high, their altitude being proportioned to the rank of the lady: so that they could not walk without being supported: this was at Venice. Cor. Crudities, vol. ii, p. 37, repr. And for a speciall preheminence [the tragic actors] did walke upon those high corked shoes or pantodles, which they now call in Spaine and Italy shoppini.

Pattenham, Art of Poss., ch. xv. b. l.

It is odd enough that no corresponding word is found in such Italian dictionaries as I have had an opportunity to consult: not even cioppino, which, on the authority of Jonson, added to the evidence of its form, we might have supposed to be the word in that language.

Hall writes the word, chippins.
What an irregular height doth Venetian chippins mount them to!

Parad., iii, p. 67. The sweet Italian, and the chip-chop Dutch,
I know, the man i' th moone can speake as much.

Then as great Maro, and renowned Naso,
Page 1 there between the limit Transport.

Brave Homer, Petrarke, sweet Italian Tasso: And numbers more, past numbring to be numberd, Whose rare inventions never were incumberd, With our outlandish chip-chop gibrish gabbling:
To fill mens cares with unacquainted babbling. Ibid.

†CHIP-AXE. "A chip-axe, ascia."

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p.

+CHIPPING-KNIFE. "A chippingknife to chip bread with, culter panarius." Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 178.

CHIQUINIE. A sequine; an Italian coin. Corvat estimates its value at eight shillings and eightpence halfpeuny of the English coin of his time. Vol. ii, p. 21, repr.

CHIRE, v., probably the same as to chirre. To make an obscure noise.

What the' he chires on purer manchet's crowne Hall, Sat. v. 2.

tCllIRPING-CUP. A merry cup, or glass; one which makes you chirp.

glass; one which makes you chip.

I thank you for your last society in London, but I am sorry to have found Jack T. in that pickle, and that hee had so far transgress'd the Fannian law, which allows a chirping-cup to satiat, not to surfet, to mirth, not to madnes.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. To chirp. A word meant

To CHIRRE. to express the indistinct noise made by some birds.

y Source officers as timorously as swans,
(Cold as the brook they swim in) who do bill
With tardy modesty, and chirring plead
Their constant resolutions.

Glapthorne's Argalus and Parthenia, 4to, C, 4.

Said also of the murmur of turtles.

Also of grasshoppers:

O of grassnoppers.
But that there was in place to stir
His spleen, the chirring grasshopper.

Herrick, p. 136. To chirp is now the word in use. See Junii Etym. in Chirre. To chatter, as a sparrow. +CHITTER.

The fethered sparrow cald am 1;
In swete and plaasaunt spryng
I greatly doe delight, for then
I chitter, chirpe, and syng.
Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

+CHITTERLINGS. The small entrails

Panse, ou le grus boyau. A fat gut or chitterling, (and as some say) a tripe.

Nomenclator.

+CHIVE. A chip.

These diseases happen specially to masons, millers, carpenters, wrights, and smithes: for if any chise, chip, or dust skip into the eye, and through negligence be left behind, it will incarnate upon the tunicle salvatrice, and then can you not cure the eye but by removing and drawing the said chise.

Barrouch's Method of Physick, 1624.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624. +CHIVAN. To play the chivan, to run away precipitately.

Ill away precipitately.

Well shot, well shot, said Robin Hood then,
That shot it was in time;
And if thou wilt accept of the place,
Thou shalt be a bold yeoman of mine.
Go play the chiran, the stranger then said,
Make haste and quickly go,
Or with my fist, be sure of this,
I'll give thee buffets ato'.

Related of Robin Hood and his Common

Ballad of Robin Hood and his Cousin Scarlet,

+CHOAK-PEAR. A coarse kind of pear. Pet. Ay, but the devil take thee and thy almond nuts, if these be they. But it is no matter! I will give thee a dish of choak-pears, which will do thee a great deal of good, and as you like these, you shall have more, for I have anew for thee.

more, for I have anew for thee.

A Battle for the Breeches, n. d.
Euphues not a little amazed with the discourteous speech of Philautus, whom he saw in such a burning feaver, did not apply warme clothes to continue his sweat, but gave him colde drinke to make him shake, either thinking so strange a malady was to be cured with a desperate medicine, or determining to use as little art in phisick, as the other did honesty in friendship: and therefore in stead of a pill to purge his hot blood, he gave him a choake-peare to stop his breath, replying as followeth.

Lutie's Ruchus.

Lylie's Euphues and his England, 1623.

+CHOAK-PLUM. A similar plum.
The spider's tale (quoth thant) senth a choking chokeplum.
Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

+CHOAK-WORT.

HOAK-WORT. A plant.
The Libians call'd it Reena, which implies
It makes them doe like birds twist earth and skyes;
The name of choak-wort is to it assign'd, Because it stops the venom of the mind.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. To CHOP. Was used somewhat in the sense of our word to pop. As flise at libertee in and out might chop.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

+To CHOWRE. To grumble or mutter. But when the crabbed nurce

Beginnes to chide and chowrs.

Turbervile's Ovid, 1567, f, 122.

CHRISOME, CHRYSOM, or CHRISME. "The face-cloth, or piece of linen put upon the head of a child newly baptis'd." Kersey. Also, chrisoms, "Infants that die within the month of birth, or at the time of their wearing the chrisom-cloath." Ibid.

The best account is in Blount's Glossography, as it notices all the senses in due order:

Chrisome ($\hat{\mathbf{a}} \times \rho(\omega)$) signifies properly the white cloth which is set by the minister of baptism upon the head of a child newly anointed with chrism after his baptism: now it is vulgarly taken for the white cloth put about or upon a child newly christened, in token of his baptism; wherewith the women use to shroud the his baptism; wherewith the women use to shroud the child, if dying within the month; otherwise it is usually brought to church at the day of purification. Chrisoms, in the bills of mortality, are such children as die within the month of birth, because during that time they use to wear the chrisom-cloth. And in some parts of England, a calf kill'd before it is a month old, is called a chrysom-calf.

Infants were so called in the registers and bills of mortality:

When the convulsions were but few, the number of chrisoms and infants was greater.

Graunt's Bills of Mortality, cited in Johns. Dict. Hence it is plain that in the following passage we should read "chrisom child," unless Mrs. Quickly be supposed to disfigure the word.

A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any chrisom'd child. Hen. V. ii, 3. Chrusome child is used where no suspicion of misuse can apply

Doe not confess you are a lieutenant, or you an Antient, and no man will quarrel w'ee; you Shall be as secure as chrysome children.

Shirley's Doublif: Heir, ii. p. 16.

And would'st not join thy haifpenny

And would'st not join on,
To send for milk for the poor chrisome.

Wits, O. Pl., viii, 508. The original use of the chrisme cloth was to prevent the rubbing off the chrism or holy unguent, a part of the old baptismal office.

It afterwards came to signify a white mantle thrown over the whole infant, which became in some places the perquisite of the clergyman.

Madam, the preacher
Is sent for to a churching, and doth ask
If you be ready: he shall lose, he says,
His chrysome clase. City Match, O. Pl., ix, 352. In the liturgy compiled by Cranmer, Ridley, &c., in the second year of Edward VI, the following was part of the office of baptism: The child, if not weak, was to be dipped three times; first on the right side, then on the left, and lastly with the face towards the font. After which, the godfathers and godmothers were to take, and lay their hands on the child: and the minister was to put upon it the white vesture, or chrisom, saving. Take this white vesture, or a token of the innocency, which, by God's grace, in this holy sacrament of baptism, is given unto thee; and for a sign whereby thou art admonished, so long as thou livest, to give thyself to innocency of living; that after this transitory life thou mayest be partaker of the life ever-

Lives of the Compilers of the Liturgy, Appendix, p. clxv. This, as well as other ceremonies, was struck out at the revisal of the Liturgy in 1551, p. clxxxiv. The French word for the baptismal oil was cresme or creme; for the chrisom cloth, cres-See Cotgrave in both those words, who further illustrates what is here said.

CHRIST-CROSS. The alphabet was called the Christ-cross row, some say because a cross was prefixed to the alphabet in the old primers; but as probably from a superstitious custom of writing the alphabet in the form of a cross, by way of charm. This was even solemnly practised by the bishop in the consecration of a church. See Picart's Religious Ceremonies, vol. i, p. 131. It was also termed in French croix de par Dieu. It was pronounced cris-cros. Shakespeare calls it the cross-row.

And from the cross-row plucks the letter G. The mark of noon on a dial is in the following passage jocularly called the Christ-cross of the dial, being the figure of a cross placed instead of xii.

Fall to your business roundly; the feacue of the dial is upon the Christ-cross of noon.

Puritan, iv, 2, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 607.
†Christ's cross is the christ-cross of all our happiness; it delivers us from all blindness of error, and enriches our darkness with light.

Quartes's Emblems.

+CHRIST-CHURCH-BELLS. The name of an old dance.

Of all Old traites. The man dances to the contrary woman, and turns her with his right-hand, then takes his own partner with his left-hand, and turns her round; then stands in his place till the other man hath done the like; then take hands all four, and turn round, and clap with right-hand and left, then cast off. and so on. Newest Academy of Compliments.

CHRISTENDOM. Usually a general term for the Christian part of the world: also for baptism.

WOTIG; ALSO IOF DADISM.

There looking to behold
People that had receiv'd their christendome,
As the false pilot promis'd him he should.

Fanshaw's Insied, i, 104.
This struck such fear that straight his christendome
The king receives, and many with the king.

Ibid. x, 116.
You must forsake your christendoms and faith.

First Targe x 50

They all do come to him with friendly face,
When of his christendome they understand.

Harringt. Ariost., thiil, 189.

Hence used for the name given in baptism, and even for an appellation in general:

With a world Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
That blinking Cupid gossips.

All's W., i, 1. That is, "a number of pretty, fond, adopted appellations, or Christian names, to which blind Cupid stands godfather." The commentators appear not to have understood this passage. See ADOPTIOUS.

Sometimes it means Christianity itself.

Prince Arthur says,

By my christendom,
So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I should be merry as the day is long.

K. John, iv, 1.

+CHRISTAL. A glass; a glass mirror. You are more worthy of pittie, then of envie; you hold my counsailes, now I see, in scorne, use at my reasons jest, but time will come, when you will repent not to have followed them; for then you will avoyde those christles, wherein now you looke, your selfe not so deformed to behold.

Passenger of Bewenuto, 1613.

CHRISTMAS. The celebration of this festival, at the inns of court, was anciently attended with much revelry. In Dugdale's Origines Juridicales, p. 150, &c., is an account of a grand Christmas kept at the Temple in 1562. at which lord Robert Dudley, afterwards earl of Leicester, presided. An account of a similar feast at Grav'sinn, is inserted in Nichols's Progresses of Elizabeth, vol. i, under the title of Gesta Gravorum. Gaming was a good deal practised on those occasions. which is alluded to in the following passage:

Worth so much! I know my master will make diee of them; then 'tis but letting master Alexander carry them next Christmas to the Temple, he'll make a hundred marks a night of them.

hundred marks a night of them.

Match at Midm., O. Pl., vii, 358.

I thought he [the devil] was a cheater, e'er since I heard two or three Templers swear at dice, the last Christmas, that the devil had got all.

Hog has lost, $c., O. Pl., vi, 445.

†CHRISTMAS-BOOK. A book in which people were accustomed to keep an account of the Christmas presents they received.

Rad. pag. Sir Theon, here are a couple of fellowes brought before me, and I know not how to decide the cause; looke in my Christmas booke who brought me a present.

Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

+CHRISTMAS-BOX. This was a box. generally made of earthenware, with a slit in it, through which the money given at Christmas was passed into the box. It was carried about by prentices and others to receive gifts, which were hoarded up, and could only be obtained by breaking the box. Hence the following allusions.

Allusions.

Like a swine, he never doth good till his death; as an apprentice's box of earth, apt he is to take all, but to restore none till hee be broken. Mason's Essaies, 1621.

Both with a Christmas boxe may well comply, It nothing yields till broke; they till they die.

The English Usurer, 1634.

Like the Christmas earthen boxes of apprentices, apt to take in money, but he restores none till hee be broken, like a potter's vessel, nit many shares.

H. Browns, Map of the Microcosm, 1642.

†To CHRISTMAS. Is used by Chapman as a verb.

Her labours feast imperial Night with sports, When loves are Chrismast with all pleasure's sorts. Hymn. in Noct. CHRISTMAS PRINCE. This high title was sometimes given, for the greater solemnity, to the lord of misrule, who presided at any distinguished festival of the kind. A most curious narrative of such a celebration has lately been published in a collection of tracts, called Miscellanea Autiqua

Anglicana, from an original MS. preserved at St. John's College, Oxford. It took place in the year 1607. The Gesta Gravorum above mentioned afford another remarkable instance of the same kind; and a third is mentioned as carried on in the Middle Temple in 1635. See Preface to Christmas Prince, p. ix. See Boy-RISHOP +CHRIST-TIDE. Another name for Christmas.

Let Christ-tide be thy fast, And Lent thy good repast: And regard not an holy day. Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

CHUCK. Corrupted from chick, and used as a fondling expression. In the following passage, the immediate substitution of biddy illustrates its signification:

Why how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck? Mal. Sir! Sir To. Ay, biddy, come with me.

th me. Twel. N., iii, 4. Immortal she-egg chuck of Tyndarus his wife. Albions Engl., v, 27

Meaning Helen. Shakespeare has wentured to use it in tragic style:

Be ignorant of the knowledge, dearest chuck,

Till thou appland the deed.

Macb., iii, 9.

So in Othello:

What promise, chack? iii, 4.
One that does nothing without his chack, that is his wife.

Rarle, Microc., p. 184, ed. Bliss.

CHUFF. A term of reproach, usually applied to avaricious old citizens; of uncertain derivation. Some suppose it to be from chough, which is similarly pronounced, and means a kind of sea bird, generally esteemed a stupid one. See Todd.

One. See TOGG.

Are ye undone? No, ye fat chaft, I would your store were here.

Troth, sister, I heard you were married to a very rich thought.

Honcet Wh., O. Pl., iii, 256.

The chaft's crowns

Imprison'd in his trusty chest, methinks

I hear groun out, and long till they be thine.

Muses' Look. Glass, O. Pl., ir, 209.

Mr. Steevens quotes it "rusty chest," which is better.

that chaffe it was (I remember), with a grey beard cut short to the stumps, as though it were grymde, and a huge worm-eaten nose, like a cluster of grapes hanging downwards. Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

†CHUFF-HEADED. Stupid.

That these men by their mechanicall trades should come to be sparage gentlemen and chaff-headed burgho-masters. Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

+CHURCH. "The nearer the church, the farther from God," is a proverb at least as old as the beginning of the fifteenth century, for it occurs in | +CIPHERED. Written.

MS. Douce, 52, fol. 15, "The nerer the chyrche the fer fro Crist."

CHURCH-ALE. A periodical festival, like the wakes of many parishes. See ALE.

For the church-ale two young men of the parish are yerely chosen by their last foregoers, to be wardens; who, dividing the task, make collection among the parishioners of whatsoever provision it pleaseth them voluntarily to bestow. This they employ in brewing, baking, and other acates, against Whitson-tide, &c.

Carey's Surv. of Corner., p. 68.

A piper it got at a church-ale.

B Jons. Masque of Queens, vol. v, 328.

†CHYMICK METAL. Counterfeit metal, perhaps the metal called alchemu. World, thou'rt a traytor; thou hast stampt thy base
And chymick metal with great Caesar's face,
And with thy bastard bullion thou hast barter'd
For wares of price; how justly drawn and quarter'd!
Quarter's Emblems.

+CICER. A kind of pea. Lat.

It is made the better, if you ad to it sweet almonds, pistax, pine nuts, barley meale, cicers, and such like.

Barrough's Method of Phisick.

+CILLIBUB. A sillabub.

If you are in health, 'tis well, we are here all so, and wee should be better had wee your company; therfore I pray leave the smutty ayr of Loudon, and com hither to breath sweeter, wher you may pluck a rose, and drink a cillibub. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+CIMBALS. A dish in confectionary, described in the True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676.

+CINDRING. Reducing to cinders. Short tale to make, where sword and cindring flame Consume as much as earth and aire may frame. Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

CINOPER. Supposed to be put for cinnabar.

nabar. I know you have armike, Vitriol, sal-tartre, argaile, alkaly, B. Jons. Alck., i, 3.

CINQUE-PACE. A kind of dance (called also galliard), the steps of which were regulated by the number five.

Five.

Fire was the number of the music's feet,
Which still the dance did with fee paces meet.

Sir John Davies on Danc., st. 67.
And then comes repentance, and, with his bad lega, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Much Ado, ii, 1.

Cinque-pace is there aquibble, alluding to sink, and grave is equally a pun; not alluding to the nature of the dance, which was not grave (as Johnson says), but very lively. The poet loved to play on this word.

He seem'd the trimmest dancer that ever trode a cinque-pace after suche musicke.

Palace of Pleas., ii, Q q, &.

See GALLIARD.

The characters of gravity and wisdome ciphered in your aged face.

Gough's Strangs Discovery, 1640. CIPRES. See CYPRESS.

A CIRCLING BOY. A species of roarer: one who in some way drew a man into a snare, to cheat or rob him.

See Mr. Gifford's conjectures upon it. Barth. Fair, iv, 3, p. 481.

CIRCUIT, for circle. Applied to a CTOWN

Until the golden circuit on my head, &c.
2 Hen. PI. iii. 1. Also for a long compass of reasoning. See Todd.

+CIRCUMQUAQUE. A circumlocution. What, quoth the flie, meaneth this circumquaquie?

Heywood's Spider & Flie, 1556.

Town bred: delicate. CITIZEN, adj. The use of this word as an adjective seems to have been only a licence of Shakespeare's pen.

So sick I am not; yet I am not well; But not so citizen a wanton as Cymb., iv, 2. To seem to die ere sick. CITTERN. A musical instrument, like a guitar. See BARBER.

For grant the most barbers can play on the cittern.

B. Jons. Vision of Delight, vol. vi, p. 22. B. Jonson makes Morose say of his wife, whom his barber had recommended,

I have married his cittern that's common to all men. Silent Woman, iii, 5.

And, by the very same allusion, Matheo, in the Honest Whore, calls

A barber's citterne, for every serving man to play upon. O. Pl., iii, p. 471.

Dr. King says of the barbers in his time, that,

Turning themselves to perriwing making, they had forgot their cittern and their musick. Works, ii, 72. See Hawkins's note on Walton's Angler, part i, ch. xvi, p. 286, ed. ĭ806.

The cittern had usually a head grotesquely carved at the extremity of the neck and finger-board. Hence these jests on the face of Holofernes:

H. I will not be put out of countenance.

B. Because thou hast no face.

H. What is this?—[pointing, doubtless, to his own

B. A cittern head.
Du. The head of a bodkin.
Bi. A death's face in a ring.

L L Last v 2 With several other fanciful allusions. †Shall brainlesse cyterne-heads, each jobernole, Pocket the very genius of thy soule?

Marston, Sc. of Villanie, Works, iii, p. 242.

So in other old plays:

C. I hope the chronicles will rear me one day for a head-piece.

Rk. Of woodcock, without wear thee on their citterns.

Ford's Love's Melancholy, ii, t.

Ma Rh. Of woodcock, without brains in't: barbers shall See also other passages cited by Mr. Steevens.

A similar allusion to the head of a rebeck was current in France. Gargantua's lamentation for his wife Badebec, we read,

Dead is the noble Badebec,
Who had a face like a rebec.

On which the note is,

A grotesque figure, or monstrous chimerical face, cut in the upper part of a rebee, which is a three stringed fiddle.

Motteux' Ed., vol. ii, p. 24.

So in the French:

Car elle avoit visage de rebec.

With a similar note, which Motteux translated.

CLADDER. Of uncertain derivation: probably no more than a temporary conversational term. The use and signification are only exemplified in this passage:

A. Two inns of court men.

B. Yes, what then?

A. Known cladders.

Through all the town. B. Cladders!

A. Yes, catholic lovers, From country madams to your glover's wife,
Or laundress.

City Match. O. Pl., ix. 298.

To CLAM. See CLEM.

To CLAMMER, for clamber. A colloquial pronunciation.

Methinkes they might beware by other's harmes,
And eke eschue to clammer up so hye.

Mirr. for Mag., Higgins's Ind., 1st ed.

Norare these affections—so dull, but they can clammer over the Alps and Apennin to wait on you.

Howell's Letters, 1, 43, 1.2, 1st ed.

Where it is uniformly so spelt.

To CLAMOUR. An expression taken from bell-ringing; it is now contracted to clam, and in that form is common among ringers. The bells are said to be clamm'd, when, after a course of rounds or changes, they are all pulled off at once, and give a general crash or clam, by which the peal is concluded. This is also called firing, and is frequently practised on rejoicing days. As this clam is succeeded by a silence, it exactly suits the sense of the following passage, in which the unabbreviated word occurs:

Unabbreviaced word occurs.

Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or killhole, to whistle off these secrets; but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests?—Tis well they are whispering;—classour your tongues, and not a word more.

Wint. Tale, iv, S.

Warburton conjectured rightly that the word had reference to bell-ringing, but mistook the application. In the ringing of bells, there is also an accidental clam, or clamour, as well as an intended one; which is, when bells are struck together unskilfully in ringing the changes, so as to produce discord. This kind of clam is mentioned in some old verses inscribed in the belfry of St. Peter's church at Shaftesbury, which were formerly communicated to me by a friend resident there, himself a great adept in ringing. The lines are curious altogether.

What music is there that compar'd may be
With well-tun'd bells' enchanting melody?
Breaking with their sweet sound the willing air,
They in the list'ning ear the soul ensnare.
When bells ring round and in their order be,
They do denote how neighbours should agree;
But when they clam, the harsh sound spoils the sport,
And 'tis like women keeping Dover-court.

A quotation produced by Mr. Todd shows that striking four bells at once, even so as to form a concord, was called clamming.

Mr. Gifford pronounces clamour, in the above passage of Shakespeare, to be a mere misprint, for charm. (Note on Jonson's Barth. Fair, act. ii, sc. 1.) But such a mistake seems very improbable, both because the words are unlike, and because charm would occur more easily to a compositor than clamour.

+CLAP. A sharp blow.

But I fied from him, and ran my way; then did he fret and out-ran me, and drew out his staffe that had a knot on the end, and hit mee a clap on the scull, and a crosse blow on the leg, so that I did skip at it. Coole's English Schoolemaster, 1632.

CLAP-DISH; frequently written clackdish. A wooden dish carried by beggars, with a moveable cover, which they clapped and clattered to show that it was empty. In this they received the alms. It was one mode, among others, of attracting attention.

And his use was to put a ducket in her clack-disk.

Mess. for M., iii, 9.
Can you think I get my living by a bell and a clack-disk?—By a bell and a clack-disk? how's that?—
Why, by begging, sir.

Family of Love, cited by Mr. Steevens.

The bell seems to have been an additional improvement, when the noise of the clap-dish began to be disregarded.

Jocularly applied to a lady's mouth, from the noise it is supposed to make:

Widow, hold your clap-dish, fasten your tongue Under your roof, and do not dare to call. Greene's Tu Quoque, O. Pl., vii, 106.

Two proverbs were founded on this custom.

1. He claps his disk at a wrong man's door. Ray, 186.
2. To know any thing, As well as a beggar knows kis disk.

The former is used by Ben Jonson. in company with one of similar import:

He has the wrong sow by the ear i' faith, and claps his dish at the wrong man's door. Boory Man in his H., ii, 1.

See also O. Pl., iii, 442.

The clap-dish is still used on particular days by a society of widows, who subsist in alms-houses, without the gate of York called Mickle-gate Bar. At those times they are allowed to beg from house to house, and enforce their supplications in the ancient manner, by clattering this wooden dish. Their dish has no cover, but the noise is made by a kind of button suspended by a string from the bottom, and occasionally shaken within it.

The clap-dish was also termed a clicket. See Cotgr. in Cliquette. It was used, I believe, originally, by lepers and other paupers deemed infectious, that the sound might give warning not to approach too near, and alms be given without touching the object. In a curious account of an escape of Corn. Agrippa, taken from one of his epistles, a boy who is to personate a lazar is "leprosorum clapello adornatus," furnished with a clap-dish like a leper, which has such an effect, that the rustics fly from him as from a serpent, and throw their alms upon the ground. He afterwards returns to his employers "clapello præsentiam suam denuncians." Schellhorn Amæn., ii, p. 580.

+CLAP-SHOULDER. A term applied to the officers of justice who laid their hands upon people's shoulders when they arrested them.

Clap-shoulder serjeants get the devill and all, By begg'ring and by bringing men in thrall. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CLAPPER-DUDGEON. A cant term for a beggar. Probably derived from ping a dish.

See in their rags then, dancing for your sports,
Our clapper-dudgeons, and their walking morts.
Joial Crew, O. Pl., x, 372.

It is but the part of a clapper-dudgeon
To strike a man in the street.

George a Greens, O. Pl., iii, 44.

tho, sirrah, you clapperdudgin, unlock, unbolt!

Heywood, 1st P. of K. Ed. IV, 1600.

CLARISSIMO. A grandee or gentleman of Venice: called sometimes magnifico.

magnifico.

But your clarissimo, old round-back, he
Will crump you like a hog-louse with the touch.

B. Jons. Fos., v, 2.

By the clarissimo he means Corbaccio, to whom he says afterwards in derision, speaking of Mosca,

There was still something in his look did promise

The bane of a clarissimo!

Sc. 8.

Coryat gives us this account of them: "It is said there are of all the gentlemen of Venice, which are there called clarissimos, no lesse than three thouand." Vol. ii, p. 32.

tIt is not a dish for every mans tooth: for none but brave sparkes, rich heires, clarissimoss and magni-ficoss, would goe to the cost of it. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†CLASH. To bang. Still retained in the Northern dialects.

Then Thisbe, as though some man thence made a breach,

Cries out, th' adulter's gone, and elashi the dore.

Liste's Historic of Heliodorus, 1638. CLAVER. The old, and Mr. Todd thinks the proper, word for clover.

See Todd. †Lotus sativa. λωτὸς ημερος, vulgò trifolium odoratum. Triffie odoriferant. Sweete trefolie; garden claver, or scillat claver. Nomenciator.

To CLAW. To scratch, or tickle; and thence to flatter. Laugh when I am merry, and elew no man in his humour.

Muck Ado, i, 3.

Haugh when I have Ado, 1, 0. Hs is a gallant fit to serve my lor l,
Who classes and soothes him up at everie word.
T. Lodge, Satyre 1.
(Since Castriots had a scabby wrist:
How kindly they, by classing one another,
As if the left hand were the right hands brother!
Witts Recreations, 1654. One who scratches CLAW-BACK. another's back. Metaphorically, a flatterer. And I had close-backs even at court tun me,

Which sought by outrage golden gains to win.

Mirror for Magist, p. 73. d I had claw-backs even at court full rife,

The Pope's flatterers are called, by bishop Jewel, the Pope's claw-backs. See Johnson's Dict., Claw-back. Johnson has placed the above passage that of to flatter without an instance: only marking it as obsolete.

Adulator, Cic. assentator, Eidem, palpo et palpator, Plauto. κόλαξ. Flatteur, flagorneur, amadoueur, patelim, papelard. A flatterer: a clawbacke: a pickethanke. Nomenclator.

The overweening of thy wits doth make thy foes to Thy friends to weepe, and clawbacks thee with soothings to begile. Warner's Albions England, 1592.

†CLAY-WALL. This appears in the following passage to signify some eatable. May the green sickness reign in their bloods, and may they be debarr'd of oatmeal and clay wall, and fall to ratsbane.

Glapthorne's Ladies Priviledge, 1640.

165

CLEAN, adv. Quite.

Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And coasting homeward came to Ephesus. Com. E., i, 1. Clean for the purpose of the things themselves.

CLEAR, s. Clearness; brightness. Blush daise eternal lamp to see thy lot, Since that thy cleere with cloudy darkes is scar'd. Lodge, Disc. Sat., p. 38, repr. LEAR, adj. Pure; innocent. This CLEAR, adj. sense is rather obsolete, but is noticed by Dr. Johnson as the 10th of that word.

Therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Lear, iv, 6.

So Milton:

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise

Nor can so clear and great a spirit as her's Admit of falsehood.

B. J. Fl. False One, v, 1.
Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still.

Skak. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 495.

To escape, or be freed †To go CLEAR. from.

Tis here the people farre and neer Bring their diseases, and go clear. Musarum Delicia, 1656.

CLEEVES. An old plural of cliffs.

She sang and wept, O yee sea binding cleeves,
Yeeld tributary drops, for Vertue grieves.

Browne's Past., 1, 4, page 110.

Also p. 123:

Those cleeses whose craggy sides are clad
With trees of sundry suits.

Drayt. Muses' Elys., vol. iv, 1447.

To Pirene cleeses, tweene Spaine and France the bound.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 8. Cleeve, in the singular, is used by Drayton:

rayton : Thus leaning back against the rising cleeve. Moses, p. 1620.

Sometimes written clives : CLIVES.]

The clives are hie, and all of chrystall shine. Shippe of Safegarde, 1569.

†CLEG. A gad-fly.

He earthly dust to lothly lice did change,
And dimd the ayre with such a cloud so strange And dimd the ayre with such a cloud so selects, Of flies, grashoppers, hornets, clegs, and clocks, That day and night throw houses flew in flocks.

Du Barlas.

under the sense of to tickle, and left To CLEM. To starve. As a neuter verb.

Hard is the choice, when the valiant must eat their armes, or clem. B. Jons. Every Man out of H., iii, 6. As a verb active.

To annot eat stones and turfs, say. What, will he clem me and my followers? Ask him an he will clem me; do, go.

1bid., Poetaster, i, 2.
Now lions' half-clem'd entrails roar for food.

Clam, in the following passage, seems to be the same word:

And yet I
Sollicitous to increase it, when my intrails
Were clamm'd with keeping a perpetual fast, &c.
Massing, Roman Actor, ii, 2.
"I shall be clamm'd," for starv'd, is still provincially used in Staffordshire.

To CLEPE. To call. Saxon.

They cleps us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Tax our addition. Haml. i. 4.

Tax our addition.
To appeal:

For to the gods I cleps
For true records of this my faithfull species.

Forres and Porres, O. Pl., i, 143.

The preterite is frequently written clipped and yclept, &c.

+CLERICK. A clergyman.

And as to the persons of my subjects which are of that profession, I must divide them into two ranks, clericks and laicks.

Wilson's James I.

CLEYES. Claws. Minshew says, of crabs, scorpions, &c., and seems to derive it from chelæ, χηλαὶ; so also Skinner. In the following passage it is applied to the talons of a bird of prey, and I believe was chiefly so used.

To save her from the seize
Of vulture death, and those relentless clays.

B Jons. Underw., vol. vii, 29.
One editor doubted the evistance of

One editor doubted the existence of the word: his successor says it is common.

See Clees, in Johnson.

†CLIBBY. This adjective is used in the dialect of Devon in the sense of adhesive.

Then clibble ladder gainst his battered fanck he reares.

CLIFF, in music, from clef, signifying a key; as it is a key to what is written, the lines and spaces referring to different notes, according to the cliff prefixed at the beginning. The principal cliffs are the bass, treble, and tenor; these are ascertained by the gamut.

She will sing any man at first sight

And any man

May sing her if he can take her cliff, she's noted.

Tro. and Cress., v. 2.

It is often equivocally used by our old comic writers.

CLIM, or CLEM O' THE CLOUGH.
A noted archer. See ADAM BELL.

Though this rude Clim i' th' Clough presume,
In his desires more than his strength can justify.

Wits, O. Pl., viii, 436.
†'Slight, I bring you no cheating Clim o' the Chughs, or Claribels.

Ben Jons Alchem., 1, 2.

[Nash applies it to the devil.]

tClim of the Clough, thou that usest to drinke nothing but scalding lead and sulphur in hell, thou art not so greedie of thy night-geare. Pierce Penilesse, 1592. †CLINCH. A clencher; an unanswerable reply. The term occurs in Taylor's Workes, 1630, in Wit and

Mirth, p. 194. †To CLINCH. To clench, in the sense of to settle a matter.

Hol. Come with me, Humfrey, thou shalt go e'en now, and tell her, and I'll be packing up the while. [Exit. How. This elinekes, I shall win my lady's heart for ever. To manage two such businesses more, were enough to raise me agent for a state. Brome's Northern Lass. +CLINCHPOOP. A vulgar, ill-bred fellow. We have in the examples a curious case of plagiarism.

If a gentleman have in hym any humble behavour, then roysters do cal suche one by the name of a loute, a clynche-pope, or one that knoweth no facions.

a cignete-pope, or one that knoweth no factons.

Institucion of a Gentleman, 1868.

As, if a gentleman have in him any humble behaviour, then the roysters cal such one by the name of loute, a clinchpop, or one that knoweth no fashions.

Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

+CLIN'D. For climbed.

But time permits not now to tell thee all my minde:
For well 'tis known that but for fear you never wold have clind.

True Trag. of Ric. III. 1594.

To CLING, v. a. Supposed to be used

To CLING, v. a. Supposed to be used in the sense of to shrink or shrivel up, in the following passage:

If thou speak false,
Upon the next tree thou shalf hang alive

Upon the next tree thou shalf hang alive

Mach., v, 5.

Kersey has clung in the sense of shrunk or shrivelled. In the following it seems to mean embrace:

Some fathers dread not (gone to bed in wine)
To slide from the mother, and cling the daughter-in-law.

Revenger's Trag., O. Pl., iv, 323.
In the next it is used still less intelligibly:

Andrea slain! then weapon cling my breast.

1st Part of Jeronino, O. Pl., iii, 91.

Dr. Johnson notices the first sense, and derives it from the Saxon. See Junius, Etym. in cling, marcere.

†CLING. s. An embrace.
At last I plung'd into th' Elysian charms,
Fast clasp'd by th' arched zodiack of her arms,
Those closer clings of love, where I pertaked
Strong hopes of bliss; but so, o so I waked!

Fetcher's Poems, p. 254.

+CLINK. Clink Street, Southwark, seems to have been a noted place for lodgings.

Then ther's the Clinks, where landsome lodgings, And much good may it doe them all, for me.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†To cry CLINK, to ring.

Then drink we a round in despith of our foca,
And make our hard irons cry clink in the close.

Carteright's Royall Slave, 1851.

CLINQUANT, adj. Shining. the French word clinquant, meaning

To-day the French
All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English. K. Hen. VIII, i, 1.
His buskins clinquant, as his other attire.
Masque at Whitch. in 1613.

To embrace. Metaph. to CLIP, v. encompass.

That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about, Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself.

Then again worries he his daughter, with Clipping her.

While others clip the sun, they clasp the shades.

Res. Trag., O. Pl., iv, 386.

See to COLL.

Johnson has not marked this sense as obsolete, which certainly it is.

CLIT. A word which I have seen only in the following passage, and cannot explain.

For then with us the days more darkish are,
More short, cold, moyste, and stormy cloudy clit,
For sadness more than mirths or pleasures fit.

Mirr. for May, Highes's Ind.

+CLIVES. The plural of cliff.

What booteth it against the clives to ride,
Or clae to worke against the course of kinde?

Mirour for Magistrates, 1587.

The stormie south againe the clives the waters drive so hie.

Phaer's Virgil, 1600.

†CLOAK. To take any one for a cloak, to use him as a cover to one's de-

But the bride flatly tells him that he is but taken for a cloak; that she, indeed, is a bedfellow only for the king.

Rymer on Tragedies, 1678, p. 104.

CLOKE, BLACK. Anciently the appropriated dress of the speaker of a prologue. Black dress was long retained, when the cloke was disused, and is perhaps still.

not see this long black veloct cloat upon my back?
Nay, have I not all the signs of a Prologue about me?
Four Prestices, O. Pl., vi, 464.
In the Induction to Cynthia's Revels, to settle the doubt who shall speak the prologue, one says, "I shall plead possession of the cloke," and directly begins, "Gentles, your suffrages I pray you." B. Jons.

+CLOMPERTON. A clown.

It chanced him to stray asyde from his companie, and fallinge into reasonings, and so to altercation with a stronge stubberne closspertos, he was showdlie beaten of him.

Polydore Vergil, trans.

†CLOSE, adj. Secret, silent; also, concealed.

CONCENIOU.

Without resistance. Go, be close, and happy.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

That dares not then speake out and e'en proclaime
With lowd words and broad pens our closest shame.

Tourneur's Repengers Tragadie, 1608.

From | +CLOSE-FISTED. Miserly; mean.

A miserable knave may be close-field,
And prodigall expence may be resisted.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

But, although we discommend excess in both, as a thing misbecoming, and very hainous; yet our senator must be sure not to be avaricious, niggardly, and close-field, because it is an argument of a base servile spirit.

The Sage Senator, p. 76.

†CLOSE-FIGHT. An old naval term. A ship's close-fights are small ledges of wood laid crosse one another, like the grates of iron in a prison window, betwirt the maine mast and fore mast, and window, betwite the maine mast and fore mast, and are called gratings or nettings.

Smith's Sea Grammar, 1637.

She comes! O, how her eyes dart wonder on my heart! Mount bloode, soule to my lips, taste Hebe's cup; Stande firme on decke, when beauties closs-fight's up. Marston, Antonio f Mellida, i, 1. †CLOTH-BREECHES were the distingtive marks of plebeians.

Things which are common, common men do use,
The better sort do common things refuse:
Yet countries-cloth-breech, and court-velvet-hose,
Puff both alike tobacco through the nose.
Witts Recreations, 1654.

+CLOTHWORKERS appear to have been famous for singing.

been famous for singing.

Singing catches with cloth workers.

B. Jons. Sil. W., iii, 8.

I would I were a weaver; I could sing Psalms or any
1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. thing.
†CLOTPATE. A clodpole.

Wouldst thou ever thought that this lady should have writ to me love letters, me, whome she cald clowne, clotpate, loggerhead? The Wisard, a Play, 1640.

†CLOTTRED. Clotted.

That never thaw, and sayd him, in this wise.

Funeralles of King Rdward the Sist, 1860.

+CLOUCHT. Clutched; held in the hand. Tis yet dead night, yet all the earth is clouch! In the dull leaden hand of snoring aleepe.

Marston, Antonio and Mellida, 1633. CLOUGH. A valley between two hills: pronounced cluff, and sometimes so written. As by Gayton, "Clem of the cluff." Festiv. Notes, p. 21. And so rhymed by others, when that famous personage was mentioned.

The other Clym of the Clough,
An arther good ynough.

Ballad of Adam Bell, &c., Percy's Reliques, i, p. 156. Here also:

Each place for to search, in hill, dale, and clough, In thicke or in thin, in smooth or in rough. Robinson's Rev. of Wickeds.

Verstegan thus defines its meaning: A clough or clowgh is a kind of breack or valley down a slope, from the side of a hill.

Restit., ch. 9.

Cliff is probably from the same origin. The mark, fixed in the centre CLOUT. of the butts, at which archers shot for practice. Clouette, Fr. Metaphorically, for an object sought, of any sort. Literally, the nail, or pin. Indeed he must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Love's L. L., iv, 1.

O well-flown bird! i' the clout, i' the clout.

Here Lear in imagination calls his arrow bird: like an ardent archer: howlers speak similarly to their howls.

Wherein our hope Is, though the clout we do not always hit,
It will not be imputed to his wit.

B. Jons. Staple of N., Epil.

The best shot was that which clove or split the clout or pin itself.

CLOUTED; from clout, a nail. Fortified with nails. Thus:

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rules and the state of the ose rudeness Cumb., iv. 2. See BROGUES.

Clouted cream is a very different matter, being only a corruption of clotted, or thickened.

CLOWN. "The clown in Shakespeare," say the commentators, "is commonly taken for a licensed jester, or domestic fool." The fool was indeed the inmate of every opulent house, but the rural jester, or clown, seems to have been peculiar to the country families. There was in him a premeditated mixture of rusticity and bluntness, which heightened the poignancy of his jests. Shakespeare's clowns were deservedly famous for their wit and entertaining qualities. Yet they did not escape a sarcasm from a later wit, Cartwright, who probably would have laboured in vain to imitate what he satirised:

Shakespeare to thee was dull, whose best jest lies I' th' lady's questions and the fool's replies; Old fashion'd wit, which walk'd from town to town In trunk hose;—which our fathers call'd the clown.

Verses prefixed to Beaumont and Fletcher.

In an old play, we have this stage direction "Entreth Moros, counterfeiting a vaine gesture, and a foolish countenance; synging the foote of many songs, as fools were wont." The longer thou livest, &c., pr. 1580. Shakespeare's fools and clowns abundantly answer to this character, since the foot or burden of many songs, and other fragments of them, are exclusively preserved by these personages. See particularly, All's well that ends well, Twelfth Night, and Lear. His clowns have certainly more wit than fools in general, and sometimes appear to have a little consciousness of their talents.

Heaven give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Theelf. N., i, 5.

Which I would thus paraphrase: "Heaven give real wisdom to those that are called wise, and a discreet use of their talents to fools, or jesters." To play the fool well requires no small wit. CLOY, v. a. To claw, or stroke with a claw; from a more antiquated word, cley, or clee, meaning a claw.

His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak
As when his god is pleas'd.

Cymb. Cymb., ₹, 4. CLOYER. A term in the slang, or conventional language, of the thieves of old time, for one who intruded on the profits of young sharpers, by claiming a share.

Then there's a cloyer, or snap, that dogs any new brother in that trade, and suspa,—will have half in any booty.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 113. †Money is now a hard commodity to get, insomuch that some will venture their necks for it, by padding, cloying, milling, filehing, nabbing, &c., all which in plain English is only stealing; but that is enough to bring them to dangle on the leafless tree near Paddington.

Poor Robin, 1739. dington.

†CLUBBING. Clubbing drinkappears to have been a term equivalent to Bever. He hath also a drink call'd cauphe, which is made of a brown berry, and it may be call'd their clubbing drink between meales, which though it be not very gustfull to the palate, yet it is very comfortable to the stomack, and good for the sight.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

In any public affray, the cry was Clubs! Clubs! by way of calling for persons with clubs to part the combatants.

COMDATABLE.

They are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them. As you like it, v, 2.

Go, y're a prating Jack,

Nor is't your hopes of crying out for clubs,

Can save you from my chastisement.

Greene's Tu Q., O. Pl., vii, 53.

From the following passage, it appears that shopkeepers generally kept clubs in readiness, for the very purpose of checking affrays.

Do not shew A foolish valour in the streets, to make
Work for the shopkeepers and their clubs;—'tis scurvy!
Mass. City Mad., i, 2. But clubs were sometimes used to make, as well as to appease a quarrel.

I miss' the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out class! When I might see from far forty truncheoneers draw to her succour, which were the hope of the strand, where she was quartered.

Hen. VIII. v. S. In the Puritan, when clubs are cried, Simon puns upon it: Ay, I know, by their shuffling, clubs would be trumps.

Sh. Suppl., ii, 574.

In Clitus's Whimzies [by R. Brathwaite], 1631, a ruffian, or bully, is represented as submitting to a demand at a three-penny ordinary "for feare of clubbes." Char. 17, p. 134.

Clubbs was also the popular cry to call forth the London 'prentices.

+CLUB-FIST. A brutal fellow. The rascall rude, the roag, the chibits griepte
My sciender arme, and pluckt mee on in hast.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1887.

The use of clubs. +CLUB-LAW. Then in and out they danced about,
The horns aloud did rattle The horns aroun durasers
Together in that revel-rout,
Like club-law in a battle.

The Fryar and the Boy, second part.

To handle roughly. It is +To CLUM. still used in this sense in the west of England.

Some in their griping tallants clum a ball of brasse. A Herrings Tayle, 1598.

+CLUSTER-FIST. In the first of these extracts seems to mean an ignoramus. in the latter a niggard.

in the latter a niggard.

And another cluster-fist, in my opinion, came no wayes short of him, for the people of a certaine country village, being distracted in opinion, how with their greatest credit, they might frame a Latine letter, which they were to send together with a present of brickes to pave their land-lords fish-pond, their pedant alledging that the beautie of the Latine tongue consisted in the varietic of wordes, advised them thus to write: Nos, nis, nus, mittimus et mandamus, delle pietre, to your 1: to pave your fish-pond.

The Passenger of Bennesuto, 1619.

Well, away I went with a heavy heart, and brought his guest into the very chamber, where I saw no other cakes on the table, but my owne cakes, and of which he never profered me so much as the least crum, so base a cluster-fist was he.

he never pronured me so base a cluster-fist was he.

Comical History of Francion, 1655. CLUTCH, s. A claw. This I conceive. and not the verb, to be the primitive word, as to claw is certainly made from the substantive claw. It is not yet disused in the plural, clutches; and does not much require illustration. Here it is in the singular:

Between that zone where Cancer bends his clutch, To that bright sun a bound septentrional.

Fansh. Lusiad, iii. 6. CLUTCH, v. To seize or grasp anything, as with claws. This verb has not been much used since Shakespeare's time, who has it several times. Come, let me clutch thee.

Clutcht is one of the words which Crispinus is made to disgorge, in Jonson's Poetaster:

Clutcht ! it is well that's come up, it had but a narrow I see no reason to suppose that Jonson meant to satirise Shakespeare in this passage. Decker was his object : and as clutcht is certainly a harsh sounding word, it was probably the use of it by that poet which he ridiculed.

+CLUTCH-FIST. A miser.

UIUII-FISI. A HINGE.

Has. No fitter place; there is
An old rich cistchfst knight, sir Thomas Bitefig,
Invite him too; perhaps I may have luck,
And break his purse yet open for one hundred.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

†CLUTTER. A preparation of milk.

To make cream clutter.

Take milk, and put it into an earthen pot, and put thereto runnet, let it stand two days, it will be all in a curd, then season it with some sugar, cinnamon, and cream, then serve it, this is best in the hottest of the summer.

4 True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676.

†CLUTTISH. Perhaps for sluttish.

And thou my cluttish landresse Cinthia,

Nere thinkes on Furors linnen, Furors shirt.

The Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

COACH. The council-chamber on

+COACH. The council-chamber on board a man-of-war. Pepys' Diary, i, 64

+COACH. The following is an early instance of the use of this word.

If hee had beene for the bodie, our gentlemen and gentlewomen, with our rich farmours in ours parish, would have beene there, although they had beene carred in wagons or cockes.

Northbrooke against Dicing, Je.
COACII-FELLOW. A horse employed to draw in the same carriage with another.

Their charriot horse, as they coachfellows were, Fed by them. Chapman, Iliad, x. Metaphorically, a person intimately connected with another:

I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves, for you and your coach-fellow Nym. Merry W.W., ii, 2. Some editions read couch-fellow, but without any necessity or authority for the change; and there is more humour in making them beasts that draw A similar allusion is extogether. pressed in the following:

Are you he, my page here makes choice of to be his fellow coach-horse? Mons. D'Olise. Other similar expressions have been produced.

+COALS. Precious coals, used as an exclamation of surprise.

One of them I am presently to visit, if I can rid my selfe cleanly of this company. Let me see how the day goes (hee pulls his watch out): precious coales, the time is at hand, I must meditate on an excuse to be gone.

The Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

+COAL-UNDER-CANDLESTICK. A

Christmas game mentioned in the Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1603.

COAL-HARBOUR. A corruption of Cold-harbour. An ancient mansion in Dowgate, or Down-gate Ward, London, of which Stowe gives a minute history in his account of that it was the residence of Tunstall, bishop of Durham, when probably it obtained the privileges of a sanctuary. These were still retained, when small tenements were afterwards built upon the spot, which let well, as being a protection to persons in debt. Hence Hall says,

They starved brother live and die Within the cold Coal-karbour-Sanctuary. Sat., v, 1. Or its knighthous shall do worse, take sanctuary, in Cole-karbour-sanctuary, and fast.

Cole-harbour-sanctuary, and fast.

B. Jons. Silent Wom., ii, 8.

Here is that ancient modell of Cole-harbour, bearing the name of the Prodigall's Promentorie, and being as a sanctuary for banque-rupt detters.

Healy's Disc. of a New World, p. 182.

Mr. Lodge says that "Richard III granted it for ever to the College of Heralds, who had lately received their charter from him; and Henry VII. willing to annul every public act of his predecessor, gave it to the then earl of Shrewsbury." He adds, "It was pulled down by earl Gilbert, about the year 1600." Illustrations,

I, p. 9. COALS, to carry. To put up with insults; to submit to any degradation. The origin of the phrase is this; that in every family, the scullions, the turnspits, the carriers of wood and coals, were esteemed the very lowest of menials. The latter in particular were the servi servorum, the drudges of all the rest. See BLACK GUARD. Hence the valiant declaration of Sampson, in the opening of Romeo and Juliet:

Gregory, o' my word we'll not carry coals. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew, by that piece of service, the men would carry coals. Hen. V, iii, 2. He means to insinuate that they were base, cowardly rascals. Puntarvolo

See! here comes one that will carry coals, ergo, will hold my dog.

B. Jons. Ev. M. out of H., v, 1. This is said upon the approach of a servant with a basket, probably of coals.

In most of these cases charcoal is probably meant. See COLLIER.

The phrase is too common in old authors to require further illustration. But abundance may be found in the notes upon the first example.

ward. In the reign of Henry VIII | † To COAPPEAR. To appear at the same time with.

same time with.
Thy torch will burn more clear
In night's un-Titan'd hemisphere;
Heaven's scornful flames and thine can never co-appear.
Quarte's Embless.
Nocally the COAST, v. To approach. Nearly the same as to accost. Who are these that coast us?

You told me the walk was private.

B. & Fl. Mind in Mill., i. 1.

Also, to pursue: William Douglas still coasted the Englishmen, doing them what damage he might. Holinsk., iii, p. 352. Warburton well conjectured that coast should be read in the following passage, instead of cost. But it is not a term of falconry

That hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will coast my crown. 3 Hen. VI, i, 1. The modern editions have adopted it. For further examples, see Todd.

+COAST, s. The ribs of meat.

To fry a coest of lamb.—Take a coest of lamb, and parboil it, take out all the bones as near as you can, and take 4 or 5 yolks of eggs beaten, a little thyme and sweet marjoram, and parsly minced very small, and beat it with the eggs, and cut your lamb into square pieces, and dip them into the eygs and herbs, and fry them with butter, then take a little butter, white-wine, and sugar for sauce.

A True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676.

+COASTER. An inhabitant of the seacoast.

B. Sir, if you had beene present, you never saw, nor heard any, or English man, or other coaster, or river man, or ilander, use more malicious inventions, more diabolicall deceites, practise more knavish cunnings, with girds, answeres, and which had beene able without winde to have turned any mill topsic turvie.

The Passenger of Bensensto, 1613.

A COASTING, s. An amorous approach;

a courtship.

O these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes.

Tro. f. Cress., iv, 5 See Cote, which is only another form of the same word.

+COAT. Till three coats is a master, a phrase used by sir Thomas Overbury. apparently in the sense of a long while.

He is wel winded, for he tires the day and outrannes darkenesse. His life is like a hawkes, the best part mewed; and if he live till three coates is a master. Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1815.

COAT-CARDS. The figured cards, now corruptly called court-cards. Knaves, we trust, are not confined to courts, though kings and queens belong to them. They were named from their The proofs of it are abundresses. dant. One says,

I am a cost-card indeed. He is answered,

Then thou must needs be a knave, for thou art neither king nor queen.

Rowley, When you see me, fc.

We call'd him a cont-card

Of the last order.

B. Jons. Staple of News.
She had in her hand the ace of hearts, with a cont-card.

Chapman's May-Day.

The same is alluded to by Massinger:

Here's a trick of discarded cards of us : we were ranked with coats as long as my old master lived.

In Robertson's Phrase Book [1681], under Card, we find this: dealer shall have the turn-up card, if it be an ace, or a cote-card." But the usage being then become doubtful, (court-card) is subjoined. It is thus Latinized: "Distributor sibi retinebit indicem chartam, si sit monas, aut imago humana. This was a help to playing cards in Latin! tFor the kings and coate cardes that we use nowe, were in olde times the images of idols and false gods which, since they that would seeme christians have changed into Charlemaine, Launcelot, Hector, and such lyke Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, &c., 1577. +COAT-FEATHERS. The small or body feathers.

Pennse vestitrices, minores que pretexunt illas.

malaurinos. The lesser feathers which cover the birds: their cote fethers.

Nomenclator, 1585. COATE, for cot, or cottage. Written also cote.

She them dismist to their contented coates; And every swaine a several passage floates Unon his dolphin.

Brown, Brit. Past., ii, 4. My coat, saith he, nor yet my fold, Shall neither sheep nor shepherd hold

Except thou favour me. Draut. Ecl., iv. COB, had many meanings; among others that of a herring. The dictionaries say that a herring-cob was a young herring, and so it appears in the following passage. Cob, the waterbearer, punning on his own name, save he was a descendant of a king; namely herring, currently called the king of fish. See Nash's Lenten Stuff. His ancestor, he says, was the first red-herring broiled in Adam and Eve's kitchen. He adds,

His cob [that is, his son] was my great, great, mighty great grandfather. B. Jons. Every Man in his H., i, S. He can come hither with four white herrings at his tail—but I may starve ere he give me so much as a cob.

Hon. Wh., part 2, O. Pl., iii, 440. Cob is said also to be an Irish coin, but I know no proof of that. I find herring-cob in the following:

Butchers—may, perchaunce,
Be glad and fayne, and keryag cobs to daunce.

Promos. and Cass., part 1, iv, 6. Cob also meant sometimes a rich. covetous person.

their bellies and their bagges theyr gods, are called rich cobbes. Nask's Lenten Stuff, Hark Misc., vi, 174. †But, at leisure, ther must be some of the gret cobbes served likewise, and the king to have ther landes likewise, as, God willing, he shall have th'erle of Kildares in possession, or somer passe. State Papers, ii, 238.

+COBBING. Holding up the head above others.

Pars mihi prima est, my part is first, inter precipuos stultos, amongst those notable, famous, notorious, cobbing fooles, &c.

Withals' Dictionaris, ed. 1608, p. 391. +COB-IRONS. Andirons.

In the kitchin.—Seawen large pewter dishes, three dozen of pewter plates, three iron pots and hookes, fowr brasses skillets, two pewter endiestits, one iron jack and weight, two spits, two pot hooks, one iron rack, one fender, one paire of cobirous, fireshowel and tongs, two dresser boards, one cupboard, one owen lid, one table, one forms, three old chayres. Old Insentory.

COB-LOAF. A large loaf. Cob is used in composition to express large, as cob-nut, cob-swan, &c. But if Ajax uses it to Thersites, he must mean to imply awkwardness and deformity. Tro. & Cress., ii, 1. The passage stands thus, in the modern editions: Ther. Thou grumblest, and railest every hour on Achilles; and art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proscrpina's beauty, ay, that thou Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Aj. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Aj. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a bisket.

Loc. cit.

This is desperately corrupt. Of "Mistress Thersites," I can make nothing: but the 4to suggests the true reading of the rest, after transposing only one word, by giving the whole to Thersites.

Ther. Shouldst thou strike him, Ajax, cobloaf! He would pun thee into shivers, &c.

The commentators, to explain the other reading, say that cob-loaf means "a crusty uneven loaf," that it may suit Thersites; and Mr. Steevens says it is so used in the midland counties; but Mr. Steevens finds an usage where he wants it. Whereas, if Thersites calls Ajax cob-loaf, it then retains its analogous sense, of a "large, clumsy loaf," and the succeeding allusion to a biscuit is natural, and in its place. "Though you are like a large loaf, Achilles would pound you like a biscuit." The passage little deserves the labour of correcting, had not the correction been so obvious. Stealing of cob-loaves was a Christmas sport. Popular Ant., i, 358.

And of them all solding country chaffes, which make | +COBLING. Pe haps for hobbling.

Since G. V. the cobling barber went two miles to trim a gentleman, and having powder'd and comb'd his peruke, with many dexterous snaps of his fingers, lather'd his beard and put all things in order, was forced to run home to fetch his razor. Poor Robin, 1738.

COBWEB-LAWN. A very fine transparent lawn.

Thin clouds, like scarfs of cob-seeb leaves,

Yell'd heav'n's most glorious eye.

Drayt. Nymp., 6, p. 1490.

Shee [a sempstress] hath a pretty faculty in presenting herself to the view of passengers by her rolling eyes, glancing through the hangings of tiffany, or cobsect-leaves.

Leation's Leas. Char. 23.

+COBWEB-LEARNING. Flimsy learn-

But amongst these studies you must not forget the unicum necessarium, on Sundaies and holy-dayes, let divinity be the sole object of your speculation, in comparison where all other knowledg is but cobools are the comparison of the colorest colorest and a supplied that the colorest parison wheref all other knowledg is out to learning; præ qua quisquiliæ cætera.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

COCK. A vulgar corruption, or purposed disguise, of the name of God. in favour of pious ears, which in early times were not yet used to the profanation of it. Hence, by cock, by cock and pie, and such softened oaths. We find also cocks-passion, cocks-body, and other allusions to the Saviour, or his body, as supposed to exist in the Host: and when that belief was discarded, the expression still remained in use.

in use.

W. By the masse I will boxe you.

J. By cocke I will foxe you.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 316.

Hami., iv, 5. By cocks they are to blame.

By cocks and pye, justice Shallow's famous oath, adds the pie, or sacred book of offices, to the former name. But it is not peculiar to the justice.

"By cock and pie and mousefoot," is quoted from the old play of Soliman and Perseda, Orig. of Drama, ii, p.

Now by cock and pie, you never spoke a truer word in your life.

Wily Beguiled.

See the notes on 2 Hen. IV, v, 1. See also PIE.

+COCK. The lock of a gun?

Is thy cock ready, and thy powder dry?

Marlows's Lust's Dominion, iii, 5.

+A COCK OF TWENTY. One which has killed twenty antagonists in the pit.

Lays. She is a widow, don, consider that;
Has buried one was thought a Hercules,
Two cubits taller, and a man that cut
Three inches deeper in the sey, than I;
Consider that too:
She may be cock o' tecenty, nay, for aught
I know, she is immortal.

Shirley's Brothers.

+To COCK. To vaunt; to swagger.

The spider and fly, that erst there bragde and cockt. Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

COCK, for cock-boat. A small boat; whether attached to a ship or not. do not find that it is now the sea-term for any boat there used.

You tall, anchoring bark
Diminished to her cock; her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight.

Lear, iv, 6. Mr. Steevens and others have shown that this abbreviation is not peculiar to Shakespeare. He quotes, to Shakespeare. Ile quees,

I caused my lord to leap into the cock, &c.
Trag. of Hoffman.

and Mr. Todd this: They take view of all-sized cocks, barges, and fisher-boats hovering on the coast. Carew's Cornwall.

+COCK-ALE. A sort of ale which was very celebrated in the seventeenth century for its superior quality, but the exact meaning of the term is not clear.

My friend by this time (knowing the entertainment of the house) had call'd for a bottle of cock-alc, of which I tasted a glass, but could not conceive it to be any thing but a mixture of small-beer and treacle. If this be cock-alc, said I, e'en let cocks-comba drink it.

True. Nay, nay, no more sobrictie than will do us good; but that's all one. Look ye, Mr. Spruce, for your wine I don't love it; and for your alc, ye have not a drop in London worth drinking; that's the short on't.

not a drop in London worth druking; that's the short on't.

Spr. How, Mr. Trupenny, not a drop worth drinking? Did you ever taste our cock-ele?

Trup. Cock-ele, no; what's that?

Spr. Why, there you shew your ignorance. Look ye, air, I lay ye five pound you shall say, ye never tasted the like in the country.

The Woman turn'd Bully, 1675.

But by your leave, Mr. Poet, notwithstanding the large commendations you give the juice of barley, yet if compar'd with canary, it's no more than a mole-hill to a mountain; whether it be cock-ele, China ale, rasberry-ale, sage-ale, scurvy-grass-ale, horse-reddish ale, Lambeth-ale, Hull-ale, Darby-ale, North-down-ale, double-ale, small-ale, March-beer, nor mum, tho' made at St. Catherines, put them all together, are not to be compared to a glass of pure, racy, sparking, brisk, rich, generous, neat, choice, odorous, delicious, heart-reviving canary.

Poor Robin, 1788.

COCK-RRAINED. Hair-brained wild-

+COCK-BRAINED. Hair-brained; wildheaded.

And these are proper to drunckards, fooles, madde men, and cocke-braynes. Lomatius on Painting, 1898. Py. Doest thou asks, cock-braind foole: Thou hast utterly spoiled this young man whome thou broughtest instead of the eunuch, whilest thou goest about to deceive us.

vive us. Terrace in English, 1614.
Now cock-brain'd youths will throw at cocks,
But they alone deserve such knocks;
For 'tis a cruel, wicked thing,
Should be forbidden by the king! Poor Robin, 1777.

Now Pisces rules, the scaly star,
That ends the circuit of the year;
Which doth prognosticate we say,
Ripe pancakes on the fourteenth day;
As also there shall store of cocks,
By coci-brain'd youths then suffer knocks;
To racks cook, byth which wines hattern To make cock-broth which wives bestow On feeble husbands, who can't do.

+COCK-SURE. The origin of this phrase is not very clear, but it occurs as far back as the time of Chalkhill. and is probably much older.

Now did Orandia laugh within her sleeve, Thinking all was cock-sure. Thalina and Clearchus, p. 89.

COCKAL. The game played with sheep's bones, instead of dice, similar to the ancient talus or astragalus. talaris. Also, the bone itself used in that game, called also corruptly, Auckle-bone. It is the pastern bone of the animal.

The altar is not here foure-square,
Nor in a form triangular;
Nor made of glasse, or wood, or stone,
But of a little transverse bone,
Which boyes and bruckel'd children call

(Playing for points and pine) cockall.

Herrick, Hepper., p. 102.

The ancients used to play at cockall, or casting of huckle-bones, which is done with sheep's bones. Lavinus Lomn., Engl. Transl., p. 368.

The bone itself is thus mentioned:

Lastly chief comfort and hilarity, signified by the coccal-bone, [before mentioned as talus] which especially is competent to young age.

Optick Glass of Humors, Ep. Ded.

*Talus pronus. spring. Aristot. qui jactus proper erat.

Take all: cockell: a luckie cast. Yomenclator*
†But news of this makes scrivener wary.

And eight i'th' hundred don look awry.

That we do stoop to sums as small

As children venture at cock-all.

Wit Restor'd, 1658. †Learn trivial sports, but, oh! your poet shames The arm invital sports, but, our your poet summer. To bid you be experienced in some games. Yet long they to my art: then be not nice. To learn to play at cockail or at dice.

Ovid de driv Amandi, 1677, p. 80.

COCKARD, or COCKADE. Cocarde being the original word in French, it is rather strange that it should so long have lost its r, in our usage. Yet Pope has retained it, and seems to accent the word on the first syllable.

To that bright circle that commands our duties, To that bright circle that commands our duties,
To you, superior eighteen-penny beauties,
To the lac'd hat and cockard of the pit,
To all, in one word, we our cause submit,
Who think good breeding is akin to wit.

Epil. to Three Hours after Marriage.

+COCKAPERT. Saucy.

Your cockapers pride and your covetous harts
Have brought more then three parts of our ils about.

Heynood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

COCKATOO. The crested parrot. is punned upon in the following passage:

My name is Cock-a-two, use me respectively, I will be cock o' three else. B. and Fl. Little Fr. Lawyer, ii, 3. It has been supposed that game cocks were styled from the number of their victories, cocks of two, or more. Which the following passage seems to confirm. [See Cock of TWENTY.]

Consider. She may be cock-a-twenty; nay for ought I know, she is immortal.

COC

Shirley's Brothers, iii, p. 38. COCKATRICE, or BASILISK. imaginary creature, supposed to be produced from a cock's egg; a production long thought to be real. It was said to be in form like a serpent. with the head of a cock. Sir Tho. Brown, however, distinguishes it from the ancient basilisk, and in so doing describes it more particularly. For. savs he,

Enq. into Fulg. Errors, III, vii, p. 126. Many fables were current respecting it. In the first place it was supposed to have so deadly an eve, as to kill by the very look.

This will so fright them that they will kill by the look, like cockatrices.

Twelfth N., iii, 4.

Say thou but I,
And that bare vowel I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice Rom and Jul. iii 9.

But there was a still further refinement, that if the cockatrice first saw the person, he killed him by it; but if the animal was first seen, he died.
To no lords' cousins in the world, I hate 'em.

lord's cousin to me is a kind of cockatrice,

If I see him first he dies.

B. and Fl. Little Fr. Lawy., iv, 1. Dryden has also alluded to this fancy:

Mischiefs are like the cockatrice's eye,
If they see first they kill, if seen they die.
They were supposed to be able to penetrate steel by pecking it.

Yes, yes, Apelles, thou mayst swim against the stream with the crab, and feed against the wind with the deer, and peck against the steel with the cockatrice.

Lyly, Alex. and Camp., iii, 5.

Cockatrice was also a current name for a loose woman; probably from the fascination of the eve. It seems to be applied especially to a captain's concubine.

And withal, calls me at his pleasure I know not how And withal, calls me at things.

many cockatrices and things.

B. Jons. Cynth. Rev., iv, 4.

No courtier but has his mistres, no capian but has his cockatrice.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 93. †And amongst souldiers, this sweet piece of vice Is counted for a captaines cockatrice.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†Some wine there, That I may court my cockatrice. Care. Good captaine, Bid our noble friend welcome.

Killegrew's Pandora, 1666.

†Some gallants will this month be so penurious that they will not part with a crack'd groat to a poor body, but on their cochairies or punquetto will bestow half a dozen taffety gowns, who in requital bestows on him the French noz.

Foor Robin, 1740. the French pox. Poor Robin, 1740. †COCK-THROWING. A practice which prevailed formerly at Shrove-tide, when they tied a cock to a stake. and threw sticks at it. See Strutt's Pastimes and Brand's Popular Antiquities.

Cock-throwing.

Cock-a-doodle do, 'tis the bravest game,
Take a cock from his dame,
And bind him to a stake,
How he strutts, how he throwes,

How he swaggers, how he crowes,
As if the day newly brake?
How his mistriss cackles,
Thus to find him in shackles, And ty'd to a pack-threed garter; Oh the bears and the bulls

Oh the bears and the same and the but corpulent gulls
Are but corpulent gulls
To the valiant Shrove-tide martyr.

Wils Recreations, 1640. COCKER, v. To train up in a fondling manner. This word has been explained in editions as obsolete, but Todd shows that it was used by Locke and Swift. that it was used by Docke and Swill is were in the Aprill of his age, cocherch in himselfe a foolish imagination of his age, cocherch in himselfe a foolish in as a discredit unto him to seeme to fears the approach of any disease, leaving the provident government of the body to decrepite and withored old age.

Barrongh's Method of Physick, 1634.

COCKEREL. A young cock.

Which of them—for a good wager, first begins to crow? S. The old cock. A. The cocket. S. Done. The wager? Tempest, ii, 1.

Yet shall the crowing of these cockerells

Affright a lion.

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 253. Affright a lion. Dryden has used the word. Todd. Still later, Mr. Tucker, who called himself Search, has employed it. If there were any free-thinking cockerills in the hen-roost.

Light of Nature, v, p. 39. There are other traces of antiquated language in that acute author.

+COCKERNUTS. Cocoa-nuts.

Note, that in the morning cap. Weddell had fitted a Portugall vessell (which had beene formerly taken with some cochersus), and purposed to have fired her thwart the admirals hawse. Taylor's Works, 1630.

COCKERS. A kind of rustic high shoes, or half-boots; probably from cocking up.

His cockers were of cordiwin,
His hood of miniver.

Now doth he inly scorne his Kendall-greene,
And his patch'd cockers now dispised beene.

Hall, Sat. IV, vi.

†COCKET. A cocket was a certificate that goods had paid duty, which was granted by the authorities at customhouses to merchants, and without which no taxable commodities could be exported. The name is thought to be a corruption of "quo quietue," words which occurred in the Latin form of the document.

COC

COCK-FEATHER, the, on an arrow, was the feather which stood up on the arrow, when it was rightly placed upon the string, perpendicularly above the nock or notch.

The cocks-feather is called that which standeth above in right nockinge, which if you do not observe, the other feathers must needes runne on the bowe, and so marre your shote.

Ascham. Taxoph., p. 175. Ascham. Toxoph., p. 175.

+COCK-HORSE. To ride a-cock-horse. is a phrase of considerable antiquity. to signify being over proud and imperious.

Fooles that are rich with multitudes of pieces. Fooles that are rich with multitudes of pieces, Are like poore simple sheepe with golden fleeces; A knave, that for his wealth doth worship get, Is like the divell that's a-cock-horse set. For money hath this nature in it still, Slave to the goodman, master to the ill.

Slave to the goodman, master to the ill.

Taylor's Workes, 1680.

Pedes grown proud makes men admire thereat,
Whose baser breeding, should they think not bear it,
Nay, he on cock-horse rides, how like you that?

Tut! Pedes proverb is, Win gold and wear it.
But Pedes you have seen them rise in hast,
That through their pride have broke their neck at last.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

The term cock-horse was commonly used in the sense of upstart.

Our painted fools and cock-horse peasantry.

Marlow and Chapman's Masons, in fin. +COCKISH. Wanton.

Cockish, lustic, leacherous, mlax.
Withals Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 25. COCKLE. The agrostemna githago of Linnæus, a weed often troublesome in corn-fields. An old proverb, alluded to by Shakespeare, implied that he who sowed cockle could not expect to reap corn: equivalent to "As you sow, you must reap."

18t Femp.
Sow'd cockle, reap'd no corn.
Love's L. L., iv, 3. The metaphor of cockle in the following passage, where it makes so good an appearance, is merely borrowed from North's Plutarch.

If off in the mounts of received and cortic of insolency and scattered.

Moreover he [Coriolanus] said that they nourished against themselves the naughty seed and cortic of insolency and sedition, which had been sowed and scattered among the people.

Moreover he [Loriolanus] said that they nourished against themselves the naughty seed and cortic of insolency and sedition, which had been sowed and scattered among the people.

Mr. Todd has shown that it was only in consequence of a false reading, that Dr. Johnson supposed cockle to be used by Spenser for cockerel.

COCKLED is used by Shakespeare for, enclosed in a shell.

Love's feeling is more soft and sensible Than are the tender horns of cockled snails. Loos's L. L. iv S. cockle-shell. The badge of a pilgrim, worn usually in the front of the hat. The habit being sacred, this served as a protection, and therefore was often assumed as a disguise. The escalop was sometimes used, and either of them implied a visit to the sea. Thus in Ophelia's ballad, the lover is to be known.

By his cockle-hat, and staff,
And by his sandal shoon. Haml., iv, 3.
So a pilgrim is described:

A hat of straw, like to a swain,

A hat of straw, like to a swain, Shelter for the sun and rain, With a scallop shell before.

Green's Never too late. COCK-LORREL. A famous thief in the time of Henry VIII. It is said, in a passage quoted by Mr. Beloe, that he ruled his gang almost two and twenty years, to the year 1533. Anecd. of Lit., i, p. 396. Ben Jonson introduces his name, and a humorous song of his, inviting the devil to dinner, in his masque of the Gipsies Metamorphosed, vol. vii, p. 408, ed. Gifford. This song was long popular, and the tune, if any one should desire to see it, is preserved in the 5th volume of Hawkins's History of Music, Appendix, No. xxx. [According to Rowlands he was a tinker by trade. He is frequently alluded to by our early writers. It is, however, possible that the name is merely a generic one for a rascal, for in one tract he is termed Cock-Losel.]

COCKMATE, probably a corruption of copesmate, q. v.

They must be courteous in their behaviour, lowlie in their speech, not disdaining their cockmates, or refraining their companie.

But the greatest thing is yet behinde, whether that those are to be admitted, as cockmates, with children their their cockmates, with children their the COCKNEY. What this word means is well known. How it is derived there is much dispute. The etymology seems most probable, which derives it from cookery. [It is probably a diminutive of cock, but seems to be used in several distinct senses, and may have more than one derivation.] Le pais de cocagne, in French, means a country of good cheer; in old French, coquaine. Cocagna, in Italian, has the same meaning. Both might be derived from Coquing. This famous country, if it could be found, is described as a region "where the hills were made of sugar-candy, and the loaves ran down the hills, crying, Come eat me." It is spoken of by Balthazar Bonifacius, who says, "Regio quædam est, quam Cucaniam vocant. ex abundantia panis, qui Cruca Illyricè dicitur." In this place, he says, "Rorabit bucceis, pluet pultibus, ninget laganis, et grandinabit placentis." Lib. ix, Arg. The cockney spoken of by Shakespeare seems to have been a cook, as she was making a pye.

COC

Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels, when she put them into the paste alive.

Lear, ii, & Yet it appears to denote mere simplicity, since the fool adds,

Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

10 Joid.

10 Joid.

10 Joid.

10 Joid.

11 Joid.

12 Joid.

13 Joid.

14 Joid.

15 Joid.

16 Joid.

18 Joid.

18

COCK-ON-HOOP, or COCK-A-HOOP.

The derivation of this familiar expression has been disputed. See Todd. I can add one example of its being used as if to mark profuse waste, by laying the cock of the barrel on the hoop.

The cock-on-koop is set,
Hoping to drink their lordships out of debt.
Honest Gkost, p. 28.

Ben Jonson also seems to show that he so understood it, and his authority is of weight. As an example of the preposition of, by which he there means off, he gives this: "Take the cock of [off] the hoop." Engl. Gram., ch. vi.

But it must be owned that the usage is not always consistent with that origin.

COCK-PIT. The original name of the pit in our theatres; which seems to imply that cock fighting had been their original destination.

And Benedict be seen; lo! in a trice,
The cock-pit, galleries, boxes, all are full.

Leon. Digges, Sh. Suppl., i, 71.
One of the theatres, at that period, was called the Cockpit. This was the Phoenix, in Drury-lane.

On God's name, may the Bull, or Cock-pit have Your lame blank verse, to keep you from the grave. Leon. Digges, loc. cit.

See also O. Pl., xii, 341, et seq. COCK-SHUT, s. A large net, stretched across a glade, and so suspended upon poles as to be easily drawn together. Evidently from cock and shut, being employed to catch, or shut in, woodcocks. It is hardly necessary, I presume, to add, that those birds were. and still are, usually called cocks, by sportsmen. These nets were chiefly used in the twilight of the evening. when woodcocks go out to feed. Hence cockshut time, and cockshut light, were used to express the evening twilight.

Vilignt.
Thomas the earl of Surry, and himself,
Much about cockshuf time, went thro' the army.

Rick. III, v, 3.

Mistress, this is only spite; For you would not yesternight Kiss him in the cockskut light.

B. Jons. Masq. of Satyrs. Juliana Barnes has been quoted, as mentioning a cockshut cord, which means, says Mr. Gifford, "the twine of which the cockshut was made." With deference to such an opinion, it meant rather the cord by which the net was pulled together; which kind of cord was used also for other pur-DORES.

Sometimes erroneously written cockzhoot :

Come, come away then, a fine cockshoot evening.
Widow, iii, 1, 0. Pl., xii, 270.
B. and Fl. in the Two Noble Kinsmen have "cock-light."

+COCK-THROPPLED. If the windpipe of a hunting-horse bends like a bow, when he bridles, it is said to be cock-throppled. Fairfax's Complete Sporteman, p. 32.

COCOLOCH. Probably the insect called a cock-roach, one original name for which, kakkerlac, is not very different.

Than clutch thee,
Poor fly! within these eaglet claws of mine,
Or draw my sword of fate upon a peasant,
A besognio, a cocolock, as thou art.

B. & Fl. Four Plays in 1.

The speech is intentional jargon, but, one insect having been mentioned, another might naturally be introduced. +COD'S-HEAD. A stupid fellow; a fool.

You confounded toad you, where were your eyes, in your heels? that you should be such a bungling cods.

Read to see no better. Dunton's Ladies Dictionary.

Dask. Sweet sir. I think it is neer octa kora . Your Dash. Sweet sur, ... servant, gentlemen.
Good. Farewel, cods-head.
The Woman turn'd Bully, 1675.

CODGER. A familiar expression for a mean old person; from cadger, a huckster, or low trafficker.

Testicles. +CODLINGS. The musk beaver was believed to carry his perfume in these, and it was pretended that, knowing instinctively that this was what the hunters sought, when pursued it bit them off and left them behind it, to save its life.

There, the wise bever, who, pursu'd hy foes, Tears off his codlings, and among them throwes; Knowing that hunters on the Pontik heath Doo more desire that ransom, then his death.

Du Bartas. CODPIECE. A part of male dress. formerly made very conspicuous, and put to various uses.

Shark, when he goes to any publick feast, Eats, to one's thinking, of all there the least. What saves the master of the house thereby? What saves the master of the house thereby r When, if the servants search they may descry, In his wide cod-piece, dinner being done. Two napkins cram'd up, and a silver spoon. Herrick, p. 136.

†COETANEAN. Coeval. From the Lat. For these began

For these ucgan.
At once, and were all coëtanean.
S. Marmion's Cupid & Psyche. COFFEE-HOUSE. The first was opened in London in 1652. Sandys, not long before, thus curiously describes them. as existing in Turkey.

Although they [the Turks] be destitute of taverna, yet they have their coffa-houses, which something resemble them. There they sit chatting most of the day; and sippe of a drinke called coffa, (of the berry that it is made of) in little China dishes, as hot as they can suffer it: blacke as soote, and tasting not much unlike it, (why not the black-broth, which was in use amongst the Lacedemonians,) which helpeth, as they say, digestion, and procureth alacrity. Travels, p. 66. COFFIN, s. The raised crust of a pie, or any other article of pastry. word was derived from the Latin and Greek, and originally meant a basket. In which sense it is used in Wickliffe's version of the Testament. See Todd. PRION Of the Testament.

Why thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap:
A custard-coffis, a bauble, a alken pye.
Tam. Skr., iv, 3.

Therefore if you spend Therefore if you spend
The red-deer pie i' your house, or sell them forth, sir,
Cast so that I may have their coffine all
Return'd here, and pil'd up.

B. Jons. Staple of N., ii. 3.

The term coffin was also extended to those cones of paper, which are twisted up to hold sugar, spices, &c., which the French call cornets.

To COG. To lie or cheat. Hence to cog the dice.

tCOGGER. One who lives by cheating; a swindler.

Many men marvell Lynus doth not thrive, That had more trades then any man alive; As first, a broker, then a petty-fogger, A traveller, a gamester, and a cogger, A covner, a promoter, and a bawd,

A coyner, a promoter, and a uswu, A spie, a practiser in every fraud; And missing thrift by these lewd trades and sinister, He takes the best, yet proves the worst, a minister. Harington's Epigrams, 1633.

GGERIE. Falsehood; cheating.
But whom should the children of lyes, coggeries, and impostures believe, if they should not believe their father, the grandfather of lyes.

Decl. of Popish Impost., sign. Y, 3.

COIGNE, s. A corner stone: the finish of a building at the angle. old French.

See you you coigne o' th' capitol? you corner stone?

Written also coin, and quoin. †Prothyrides, Vitru. ancones, eidem. Mensulæ quædam volutarum instar leniter infractæ ad S. literæ speciem, ante ostium. προθυρίδες. The counce or corners of a wall: the crosse beames, or overthwart rafters.

tCOIF. A lady's headdress.

Say so much again, ye dirty quean,
And I'll pull ye by the coif.

Newest Academy of Complements.

Hol. Sir, be you and this lady but as confident of my fidelity, and trust me in this action, and if I break not the toils your kinsman is in, and make you mistress of my interest in sir Paul, let all the good you intended me, be a lockram coif, a blue gown, a wheel and a clean whip.

Brome's Northern Lass.

COIL, s. Noise; tumult; difficulty. Of very uncertain derivation.

Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil Would not infect his reason.

Temp. i, 2. Tou will not believe what a coil I had t'other day, to compound a business between a kattern-pear woman and him, about snatching.

B. Jons. Bart. Pair, i, 4. Here it seems to mean impediment, obstruction:

For in that sleep of death, what dreams may come, When we have shuffled off this mortal coil, Must give us pause.

COINTREE. A familiar abbreviation of Coventry.

His tar-box on his broad belt hung,
His breech of Cointree blue. Drayt. Ecl., iv, p. 1403. It should be remarked that the name of that city is not derived from Covent. for convent, like Covent-garden, but from Cune, or Coven, the stream on which it is built. So the same author.

With Cune, a great while miss'd,
Though Corentry from thence her name at first did raise. Drayl. Polyolb., xiii, p. 922. The note says, "Otherwise Cune-tre: that is, the town upon Cune." Skinner also says, "Vel à Coven fluvio, nam in diplomate prioratûs dicitur Cuentford."

COISTERED. An uncommon word, known only in the following example, where it seems to mean coiled up into a small compass. The attempts to find a derivation for it have not been very successful.

I could have carried a lady up and down, at arm's end, in a platter; and I can tell you there were those at that time, who, to try the strength of a man's back and his arm, would be coister'd.

Malcontent, v. 1. O. Pl., iv, p. 86.

COISTREL, or COYSTRIL. A young fellow. [Kersey and Bailey.] Properly, an inferior groom, or a lad employed by the esquire to carry the knight's arms and other necessaries. Probably from coustillier, old French, of the same signification. See Cot-

It is surely not a corruption of kestrel, as Mr. Todd and others have supposed. Among the unwarlike attendants on an army are enumerated.

Women, lackies, and coisterels. Holinsk., iii, 272, The same author speaks of them as "the bearers of the armes of barons or knights." i, 162.

He's a coward and a coystril, that will not drink to

He's a coward and a coystrid, that will not drink to my niece.

You whoreson bragging coystrid!

B. Jons. Es. M. in his H., Iv, 1.

Thou art the damned doorkeeper to every coystred that comes enquiring for his tib.

Periodes, Sh. Suppl., ii, 129.

Both hee of whom thou spakest, and all the rable of you, are a company of cogging coistrels.

Act of Flattery, 4to, sign. E.

M. M. Malone, on the year-green of Pori.

Mr. Malone, on the passage of Pericles, gives an erroneous derivation of the word, without any authority.

tSo in the conceit of his own overworthyness, like a coistrell, he strives to fill himself with wind, and flies against it.

Overbury's Characters.

+COKELY. The name of the master of a motion or puppet-show, often mentioned by Ben Jonson.

COKES, s. A fool. Skinner's attempts towards a derivation of this word are very unsatisfactory. But from it is unquestionably derived to coax, meaning to make a fool of a person, the usual object of coaxing. Mr. Todd reverses the etymology, with much less probability, in my opinion. Coles, in his Latin dictionary, seems to make the substantive the primary word. He has "Cokes. stultus," and after that, "To cokes, adblandior.'' Puttenham spells the verb accordingly.

Princes may give a good poet such convenient countenaunce and also benefite, as are due to an excellent artificer, though they neither kisse nor cokes them.

Art of Poetrie, I, viii, p. 15.

Why we will make a cokes of this wise master, We will, my mistress, an absolute fine cokes;
And muck to air all the deep diligences
Of such a solemn and effectual ass.

B. Jons. Deril an Ass, ii, 3.

In his Barthol. Fair. the character named Cokes perfectly illustrates the meaning of the word.

In the old play of Gammer Gurton, it is written coxe.

He showeth himself herein, ye see, so very a core,
The cat was not so madly alured by the foxe.
O. Pl., ii, 72.

The conjecture of the editor that it is put for coxcomb, is ridiculous. In some editions of Beaumont and Fletcher, the same word is spelt coax.

Go, you're a brainless coax, a toy, a fop.
Wit. at sev. Weap., iii, 1. COLD-HARBOUR. The proper name of a place in London, frequently corrupted into Coal-Harbour, which see. In a grant of Henry the Fourth, it is called, "quoddam hospicium, sive placeam, vocatum le Cold herbergh."

Sometimes it seems to be used as a kind of metaphorical term for the grave:

ve : I sweat ; I would I lay in Cold-Harbour. Roaring G., O. Pl., vi, 98.

COLEN, COLLEIN, COLOYN, ٥r KULLAINE. Old names for the city of Cologne. The three Kings of Colen were very famous personages in legendary history, distinguished by the names of Melchior, Balthazar, and Gasper. They were originally Arabians, and supposed to be the wise men who made offerings to our Saviour. Their bodies travelled first to Constantinople, thence to Milan, and lastly to Cologne, by various removals. See a sketch of their history in Browne's Vulg. Errors, VII, viii, p. 379. They are there called Kings of Collein. Their legend was the subject of a popular pageant or dramatic representation, which was exhibited on certain festivals. In the churchwardens' accounts of St. Laurence, Reading, A. 1499, is this entry:

Payed for horsmete for the horsys of the kings of Colen, on May-day, vid.

Contes's H. of Rending, p. 214.

The King-game, or Kingham, spoken of in the churchwardens' accounts at Kingston-upon-Thames, is supposed to have been a similar pageant. Lysons' Env. of L., vol. i.

We have Colen used for Cologne, as late as in 1699, by Theoph, Dorrington, Travels, p. 301. Also by Dr. Ed. Browne, son of sir Thomas, in his travels. See KING-GAME.

COLE-PROPHET, or COL-PROPHET: sometimes written cold-prophet, but I believe corruptly. The origin of the term is very obscure, but it seems, from the instances produced by Tyrwhitt (Chaucer, iii, p. 292), that col in composition signified false. So indeed it seems to do in this line:

Cole-prophet and cole-poyson, thou art both.

Heyw. Ep., 89, Cent. vi. Chaucer also has coll-tragetour for false traitor. Here also coll seems singly to mean deceit:

singly to mean deceit:

Coll under canstyk she can plaie on both hands,
Dissimulation well she understands.

Heyw. Prov. Dial., I, x.

Our coleprophets have prophesied, that, "in evaltatione Lune, Leo jungetur Leene."

Harringt. Nuga. ii, 37, ed. Park.

Whereby I found, I was the hartles hare,
And not the beast colprophet did declare.

Mirr. for Mag., Owen Gl., ed. 1587.

In the addition of 1610 it is changed.

In the edition of 1610, it is changed to false-prophet. The following are examples of cold-prophet:

As hee was most valuely persuaded by the cold prophets, to whom he gave no small credit.

Enolder, Hist. of Twrks, 1014, L. Phavorinus saith, that if these cold-prophets, or oraclers, tell thee prosperitie and deceive thee, thou art made a miser through value expectation.

Sect's Disc. of Witcher., sign. M, 8.

Dr. Jamieson suggests kall, cunning, in Celtic and Cornish, as the origin of our coll, and he may possibly be right.

COLESTAFF. A strong pole on which men carried a burden between them; originally, perhaps, of coals.

I heard since 'twas seen whole o' th' other side the downs, upon a cole-staff, between two huntamen.

Widow's Tears, O. Pl., vi, 225.

Sometimes written colt-staff: I and my company have taken the constable from his watch, and carried him about the fields on a coli-staff. Arden of Ferersham.

The name is sometimes given to the staff on which a pedlar carried his pack. Some will have it to be cowlstaff, from a brewer's cowl, in which the wort was carried to the cooler. See Skinner.

Burton speaks of witches Riding in the ayre upon a coulstaffe, out of a chimney top.

Anat. of Mel., p. 60.

†COLET. A collect. Rutland Papers, p. 16.

COLEWORTS. Cabbages. See the various sorts described by Gerard in his Herbal, 311-317, ed. Johnst. It is worthy of notice that this old botanist forms cauliflower from coleflorie, or flowering cole, not from the Latin caulis. He says, "Cole-flore, or, after some, colie-flore." Cole or cole-wort was the general name for cabbages, till some improved sorts were introduced from the continent.

To COLL, v. a. To embrace, or clasp round the neck. Probably from collée, Fr., signifying such an embrace. See Cotgrave.

He riewed them—colled with straighter bands than reason or honesty did permit. Pal. of Pleas., ii, 8 s, 8.
Kissing and colling are often spoken of together, as might be expected.

Found her among a crew of satyrs wild,
Kinsing and colling all the live-long night.

Grim the Collier, U. Pl., xi, 191.

For els, what is it in young babes, that we do kysse so, do colle so.

Erasm. Pr. of Fol., 1649, sign. B, 3. See Collingly.

Sometimes written cull.

She smil'd, he kist, and kissing cull'd her too

Herrick, p. 371. The flower sweet-william was called, among other names, col-me-neer, i.e., hug me close; from the flowers being formed in so compact a cluster.

Lyte's Dodors, p. 176.

+COLLANAE. A necklace; collane in French.

The jewels and pendants, the robes and mantles, the ornaments and coronets, the collanaes and chaines.

History of Patient Grissel, 1619.

†COLLATION. A homily.

That no parson, ricar, curate, or lecturer, shall preach any sermon or collation hereafter upon Sundays and holydays in the afternoon, in any cathedral, or parish church, throughout the kingdom, but upon some part of the Catechism, or some text taken out of the Creed, Ten Commandments, or tne Lords Prayer (funeral sermons only excepted).

+To COLLAUD. To unite in praising.

Beasts wild and tame, Whom lodgings yeeld House, dens, or field, Colland his name.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

COLLECTION. A conclusion, or consequence.

When I wak't, I found This label on my bosom, whose containing is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it. Cymb., v, 5. That is, draw no conclusion from it. What light collections has your scarching eye Caught from my loose behaviour? B. & Fl Faithful Fr., ii, 2. This sense has been noticed by Johnson. But it is surely now obsolete.

+COLLER. A collar of brawn was a quantity bound up in one parcel.

My lord, your grandfather was complaining lately that he had not heard from you a good while. By the next shipping to Ligorn, amongst other things he intends to send you a whole brawn in collers.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

Wee'l eat this? 'tis but for formalitie;

Item a coller of good large fat brawn.

Wee'l eat this? 'tis but for formanue; Item a coller of good large fat brawn Serv'd for a drum, waited upon by two Fair long black puddings lying by for drumsticks. Carteright's Ordinary, +COLLERICAL. Troubled with choler. But sweete new wine is hot and moist temperately, in winter it helps yong men and persons coll-ricall.

The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

COLLET. The setting which surrounds the stone of a ring.

Thou hadst been next set in the dukedom's ring,
When his worn self, like age's casy slave,
Had dropt out of the collet into th' grave.

Revenger's Trag., O. Pl., iv, 318.
How full the collet with his jewel is.

Cowley, Tr. of Verses on the V.

Collet is properly read for coller, in

B. and Fl. Wit at sev. Weapons, iv. p. 302.

Collet meant also a small collar or band, worn as part of the dress of the inferior clergy in the Romish church, whence they are still called in French petits-collets. Fox makes it part of the ceremony of degrading bishops, to take from them "the lowest vesture which they had, in taking bennet and collet." Martyrdom of Hooper, Fox's Eccl. Hist., vol. iii, p. 152, An. 1555.

Bennet I do not find in French nor elsewhere explained, except that Fox also says, they were the lowest offices in the church. Wordsw. Eccl. Biog., ii, 464.

COLLIER. A seller of coals, or charcoal. Persons of this profession were formerly in bad repute, from the blackness of their appearance, and on that account often compared to or assorted with the devil.

What man! 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan! Hang him, toul collier. Twelf. N, iii, 4. Hence the proverb, "Like will to like, as the devil with the collier." Ray's Prov., p. 130.

W' hear in this case, no conscience-cases holier, But like will to like, the direll with the collier. Sylv. Tobacco butt., p. 88, COLLI-MOLLY. A jocular corruption of the word melancholy.

The devil was a little colli-mollie and would not come off.

Decl. of Pop. Imp., sign. Q, 3.

COLLINGLY. Closely; embracing at the same time.

And hung about his neck, And collinglie him kist.

Gascoigne, Works, A. S. For colleted, set in a 180

+COLLITED. collet.

And in his foyle so lovely set,
Faire collited in gold.

Armin's Ital. T. and his boy, 1609.

To COLLOGUE. To talk closely together, as if plotting something. From colloquor, Lat. The word is still retained by the lower classes.

Pray go in; and sister, salve the matter,
Collogue with her again, and all shall be well.
Greene's Tw Quoq., O. Pl., vii, 86.
Why, look ye, we must collogue sometimes, forswear sometimes.

Malcont., O. Pl., iv, 94. Collogued has been proposed for colleagued, in Haml., i, 2. "Colleagued with this dream," &c., but unsuccessfully: colleagued is preferable on several accounts.

tHe enured and enticed him to the company and haunt of fair women, where he of his proper charges would always send for wine, and other banquetting junquets, meet for such company. Robert also would collogue with him, praising his riches, nobility, and valiant courage, which Fortunatus could well endure.

*Mot. Well, you coloque now; say I should present you to Arsamnes and Cratander, what would you do Cartwright's Royal Stare, 1651.

COLLOP. A slice or small portion of meat: and still used in that sense. But the metaphorical use of it by a father to his child, as being part of his flesh, seems at present rather harsh and coarse.

harsh and Course.

Sweet villain!

Most dear'st,—my collop, &c.

Wint. Tale, i, 2.

God knows thou art a collop of my fleah.

1 Hen. VI, v, 5. Yet it is used also by Lyly, when he certainly intended to be pathetic.

And then find them curse thee with their hearts, when they should sak blessing on their knees; and the collops of thine own bowels to be the torture of thine own soul.

Moth. Bombis, 1, 3.

To COLLOWE. Corruptly used for to colly or blacken, q. v.

Fy, ty, Club, goe a t'other side the way, thou collowst me and my ruffe; thou wilt make me an unclean member i' the congregation.

Family of Lov., 1604, D. 4.

+COLLUTION. A wash or lotion. An old medical term.

Therefore use collutions made of those things: as if they should be moderate, seeth dates sometime in water alone, and sometime with a little boney put them. Likewise make decoctions of roses, vine buds, brambles, cipresse, the first buds of pomegranate flowers, siligna, roots of mulberie, soure apple, and sorbus.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1634.

COLLY. s. The black or smut from coal: called in the northern counties collow, or killow. Wallis's Hist. of North., p. 46. Dr. Johnson exemplifies it from Burton, "Besmeared with colly," &c.
To COLLY. To blacken, or make dark;

from the substantive.

Brief as the lightning in the colly'd night,
That in a spleen unfolds the heav'n and earth.

Mids. N. Dr., i, 1.

And passion, having my best judgment collica

And passion, having my best judgment collied, Assays to lead the way. Othello, ii, 3. Nor hast thou collied thy face enough, stinkard! B. Jons. Poetast., iv, 5. To see her stroaking with her ivory hand his [Vulcan's] collied cheekes, and with her snowy fingers combing his sooty beard. Calum Britan., B, 4, 1634.

COLMES-KILL, for Icolmkill, a small island at the south-western point of Mull, in the Hebrides; celebrated for having been the metropolitan seat of a bishop at the first establishment of Christianity. See Johnson's Tour.

Where is Duncan's body? M. Carried to Colmes-kill:
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,

And guardian of their bones. Macb., ii, 4, sub fin. Shakespeare had this from Holinshed. †COLOSŠE. A colossus.

Ollows 11. A Collows 13.

Sir, or great grandsire, whose vast bulk may be A burying-place for all your pedigree;
Thou moving colosse, for whose goodly face
The Rhyne can hardly make a looking-glass.
Clereland's Poems.

COLOURS; to fear no colours. Probably at first a military expression, to fear no enemy. So Shakespeare derives it, and though the passage is comic, it is likely to be right.

Cl. He that is well hanged in this world, needs fear no colours. M. Make that good. Cl. He shall see none to fear. M. I can tell thee where that saying was born of, I fear no colours. Cl. Where, good mistress Mary? M. In the wars; and that you may be bold to say in your foolery.

Twelfik N., i, b.

Accordingly it is said of a horse which is to be taken to the wars:

Go saddle my fore-horse, put on his feathers too, He'll prance it bravely, friend, he fears no colours. B. 3. Pl. Wom. pleased, iv. 1.

The phrase is often applied in different senses. As of fair ladies, whose colour is natural:

For those that are, [fair] their beauties fear no colours. B. Jons. Sejanus, act i.

We find the expression as late as in Swift:

He was a person that feared no colours, but mortally hated all.

Tale of a Tub, § 11.

+COLOURS. "Color upon color is false heraldrie," a heraldic proverb given by Howell, 1659.

To COLPHEG. A corrupt form of to colaphize, or box.

Away, jackanapes, els I wyll colpheg you by and by.

Damon & Pith., O. Pl., i, 209.

To COLT. Perhaps from the wild tricks of a colt, to trick, befool, or deceive.

What a plague mean ye, to colt me thus? 1 Hen. IV, ii, 2. I'll meet you and bring clothes, and clean shirts after, And all things shall be well.

(Then aside) I'll colf you once more, And teach you to bring copper.

B. & Fl. Rule a W., iv, 1.

Also in common language:

Whereby he was in good time preserved, and they colled, like knaves, very prettily.

Disc. of Span. Inquis.

Shakespeare has once used it in a Cymb., ii, 4. coarser sense.

†COLTSFOOT. This plant appears to have been used from an early period in the adulteration of tobacco.

Since the man persuaded his master, who used to kick him very often, that he should not put so much colts-foot in his tobacco.

Poor Robin, 1713.

COLUMBINE. A common flower. Aquilegia vulgaris, Linn. Anciently termed by some, "a thankless flower." Why is not clear, for it is not so destitute of attributed virtues, among the old botanists, as Mr. Steevens chose to assert.

Chose to assert. What's that? A columbine?

No; that thankless flower grows not in my garden.

Chapm. All Fools.

Ophelia seems to have the same allusion, when she joins it with fennel, in her emblematical gifts:

There's fennel for you; and columbine. Haml., iv, 5.

†She ware a frock of frolicke greene,
Might well beseeme a mayden queene,
Which seemly was to see.
A hood to that so neat and fine,
In colour like the colombine,
Ywrought full featnously.

Drayton's Skepherds Garland, 1593.

COMART. A word hitherto found only restored by Warburton, as better suiting the sense than covenant, which had been substituted. It may, very analogically, mean bargain or covenant between two. Shakespeare also uses to mart, for to traffic.

As by the same comart,
And carriage of the articles designed,
His fell to Hamlet.

Haml., i, 1. It might even mean single combat, for mart is also war, or battle. See MART.

†COMB. To cut a person's comb, was equivalent to disabling him.

Then my harte was heavye, my lyfe stoode in jeopardie, and my combe was clerely cut.

Hall's Union, 1548, Hen. IV, fol. 12.

+COMB-CASE. Fops were in the habit of carrying combs with them. and the cases seem sometimes to have been employed as receptacles for other articles.

There's not a man of 'em, but has all mayors, sheriffs, Intere's not a man of 'cm, but has all mayors, sheriffs, bayliffs, sergeants at mace, marshals-men, constables, and other his majesties officers, in a comb-case in his pocket. They are a generation that never eat but in parliament time, and now every table is full of 'cm.

Brome's Northern Lass.

+To COMBER. To trouble; to impede. But no man considered all this while, that the case of the times was altered, for then they were combred and kept downe with a three-fold mischiefe. Holland's Assmianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+COMBER. Trouble, care. See Cum-RER.

Now we have gone so far, it's meet, That of such vices we do treat.

Inst of such vices we do treat,
As make a comber most compleat:
They drink, they swear, they lye, they whore,
They steal and cheat, and run o'th' score,
And practise thousand vices more,
Whilst their vile masters rob the poor.
Corruption grows, where'er they dwell,
This bakistion's accord thell Their habitation's second hell This of the combers is the sum.

Of the whole earth the greatest scum. Poor Robin.

OMBEROUS. Troublesome, labo-+COMBEROUS. rious.

As he should come downe the mountaines; to the end he might, if fortune had given him leave and oppor-tunitie, encounter him in the plaine, wearied with the roughnesse of those comberous waies.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

†COMBLE, or CUMBLE. The summit. Fr.

In Philip the seconds time the Spanish monarchy come to its highest cumble, by the conquest of Portu-gall, wherby the East Indies, sundry islands in the Atlantic Sea, and divers places in Barbary, were added to the crown of Spain.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. +COMBLE. To overload; to oppress. You dayly and howerly soe comble me with not only expressions, but allsoe deeds of your worthyness and goodness. Letter dated 1672, Pepys' Diary, v, 289.

+COM-BRETHREN. Brethren of any community were sometimes so called.

in the old 4to ed. of Hamlet, but +COM-BURGHERS. Fellow-burghers. If Jaffa marchants now comburgers seem With Portugalls, and Portugalls with them

> +To COME. The participle of this verb was sometimes comen, and sometimes it was written more vulgarly comed. I loth my life, I loth the dearest light, loth my life, I loth the dearest light,

Com's is my night, when once appeares the day.

Drayton's Shepherds Garland, 1593.

But were my Philip com'd again,

I would not change my love,

For Juno's bird with gauly train,

Nor yet for Venus dove.

Nay, would my Philip come again,

I would not change my state,

For his great nameaskes wealth of Spain,

To be another's mate. Brome's Northern Lass.

To COME ALOFT. To vault, or play the tricks of a tumbler; which apes also were taught to do.

But if this hold. I'll teach you To come aloft, and do tricks like an ape.

Mass. Bondm., iii, 3.

Which he could do with as much ease as an ape-carrier with his eye makes the vaulting creature come aloft.

Gayton, Festiv. Notes, p. 113.

To come from Tripoli was another phrase for the same thing; probably because apes often came from those

To COME OFF. To come down, as we now say, with a sum of money; to produce it as a gift or payment.

I have turned away my other guests; they must come off; I'll sauce them.

Wherfore yf ye be wyllynge to bye,
Lay down money, come off quyckely.

Four Ps, O. Pl., i, 65.

Do not your gallants come off roundly then?

n i Decker.

To come off was used also as a term in painting, to describe figures that came out, or apparently projected from the canvass:

P. Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well, and excellent.

Timon of Ath., i. 1.

Or perhaps more as a general term of applause, being well executed, or performed. So we find it applied to a tale:

Put a good tale in his ear; so it comes off cleanly.

Trick to catch the O. One. So we say that a thing well done goes off well.

COMEDY, for play in general; as comédie, Fr.

Aie, Fr.
For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike, he likes it not perdy.
Haml., iii, 2.

+COMENTY. For commonalty, or common people.

Of the comenty in ony wyse,
Ought not so ferre them to avanue,
Leest theyr mayster them dyspyse.

The Doctrynall of Good Servannes, p. 6.

COMIC, s. A comedian, or actor.

My chief business here this evening was to speak to my friends in behalf of honest Cave Underhill, who ny friends in behait of noness care has been a comic for three generations.

Steele, Tatler, No. 22.

†COMINGS-IN. A man's income.

OMINGS-IN. A man's income.

Know you why Lollus changeth every day lis perriwig, his face, and his array?

'The not because his comings is are much,
Or 'cause he'l swill it with the roaring Dutch;
But 'cause the sergeants (who a writ have had Long since against him) should not know the lad.

Witte Recreations, 1654.

He's rich, and hath great in-comes by the year;
Then that great belly'd man is rich, I'le swear;
For sure his belly ne'r so big had bin,
Had he not daily had great comings in.

OMITATE TO secommany.

+COMITATE, v. To accompany.

With no lesse care With no lesse care
Eneas in the morning doth prepare.
With Pallas young the king associated,
Achates kinde Eneas comitated.
Virgil, by Vicare, 1632.

COMMANDEMENT, in four syllables. I think I have heard it so spoken by old persons.

The wretched woman, whom unhappy houre Hath now made thrall to your commandemen ath now made thrall to your commandement.

Spens. P. Q, I, ii, 22.

From her fayne eyes he took commandement. Thid iii 9.

tA COMMANDER. An implement for ramming stakes.

A commander, which is of wood with a handle, wherewith stakes are driven into the ground; a rammer Nomenclator, 1585.

+COMMANDLESS. Unrestrained. Therefore the gods th'unbrideled winds t'attone,
That their commandlesse furies might be staid.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

+COMMANDMENTS. The ten commandments, the nails of the fingers. Hands off, I say, and get you from this place; Or I wil set my ten commandments in your face. The Taming of a Shrew, 1594.

+COMMENDATION. A commendation and no token, signified a fruitless commendation, one which had nothing to youch it.

Like marrow-bone was never broken, Or commendation and no token; Like a fort and none to win it, Or like the moon, and no man in it; Like a school without a teacher. Unite a school without a teacher,
Or like a pulpet and no preacher.
Just such as these may she be said.
That lives, ne'r loves, but dyes a maid.
Witte Recreations, 1654.

COMMENDS. Commendations, regards, compliments.

With all the gracious utterance thou has speak to his gentle hearing kind commen Rick. 11, iii, 3.

Mr. Todd exemplifies it also from It is a mistake to say that Shakespeare often uses it.

†You are deceiv'd sir, I come from your love, That sends you faire commends, and many kisses. Beaumont and Fletcher. tSleepe, Momus, sleepe, in Murceas slothfull bed Let Morpheus locke thy tongue within thy head; Or if thou needst will prate, prate to this end, To give commends to that thou canst not mend.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. +COMMISSION. A cant name for a shirt.

As from our beds we doe oft cast our eyes,
Cleane linnen yeelds a shirt before we rise,
Which is a garment shifting in condition,
And in the canting tongue is a commission;
In weale or woe, in joy or dangerous drifts,
A shirt will put a man unto his shifts.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To COMMIT, v. n. To be guilty of incontinence.

Commit not with man's sworn spouse. Lear, iii, 4. She commits with her ears, for certain; after that she may go for a maid, but she has been lain with in her understanding.

Overl. Char. a very Woss.

Though she accus'd

Me even in dream, where thoughts commit by chance.

Wite, O. Pl., viii, 425.

Massinger uses it; but in a passage which it is not desirable to quote.

COMMITTER. A person guilty of incontinence.

If all committers stood in a rank,
They'd make a lane, in which your shame might dwell.

Deck. How. Wh.

COMMODITY. Interest, advantage. This sense of the word is clearly obsolete, though not marked as such by Johnson or Todd, who quote the beginning of the speech of Falconbridge, in which it occurs five times in the same sense, concluding thus:

Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, he my lord; for I will worship thee.

K. John, ii, 2.
Whereof if men were carefull, for vertue's sake only
They would honour friendship, and not for commodity.

Dam. and Pith., O. Pl., i, 184.

And often in the same play.

In the phrase commodity of brown paper, &c., often occurring in the old dramas, it means merchandise or article of traffic, as it still does, but with a peculiar reference to the practice of young prodigals in that age, who nominally bought brown paper, or any trumpery, which, with a certain loss, they could turn into ready money.

First, here's young master Rash; he's in for a commodify of brown paper and old ginger; nine score and seventeen pounds.

Meas. for Meas., iv, 3.

That is, he stood charged with a debt of £197 for that which produced him perhaps not half the sum. The advantage is exactly stated by Greene: So that if he borrow an hundred pounds, he shall have forty in silver, and three score in wares, as lutestrings, hotby horses, or brown paper, &c.

Quip for an Upst. Court.

A pretty list is given by Diego, in his mock testament:

I do bequeath you Commodifies of pins, brown papers, packthreads, Roast pork and puddings, gingerbread, and Jewstrumps, trumps.

Of penny pipes, and mouldy pepper.

Span. Cur., iv, 5.
The passages alluding to this custom are numerous beyond imagination, which plainly shows how common it was. Hence Gascoigne calls the encouraging of such extravagance,
To teach young men the trade to sell brown paper,

To teach young men the trade to sell brown paper, Yea morrice bells, and byllets too sometimes. To make their coyne a net to catch young frye. Steele Glasse, 795.

One editor of B. and Fl., with much simplicity, wonders for what precise use the brown paper was intended. The above passage might have told him. Like the pedlar's edgeless razors, in the tale—to sell. The manner of conducting these dishonest practices forms the subject of a chapter in Decker's English Villanies. See it also well explained in D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature, vol. iii, p. 78. Such schemes have been heard of in later times.

COMMORSE. Compassion, pity. Commorsus, Lat.

And this is sure, though his offense be such, Yet doth calamitie attract commorse.

Daniel, Civ. Wars, I, 46.

Daniel, Civ. Wars, I, 46.
Yet must we thinke that some which saw the course,
(The better few, whom passion made not blinde)
Stood careful lookers-on, with sad commorse.

Did., II, 103.

Neither the old northe new dictionaries acknowledge the word, which I presume is peculiar to this author.

†To COMMUNICATE. To share in.
To thousands that communicate our loss.
B. Jone, Sei., iii.

†COMPACT, part. p. Entered into a pact with.

The villain constable
Hath secretly with Edward thus compact.

Heywood's Edw. IP, part 9, 1600.

COMPANION, said in contempt. A fellow, generally implying a scurvy fellow. This usage hardly subsists at present.

present.

Has the porter no eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions. Coriol., iv, 5.

What should the wars do with these jigging fools?

Companion, hence!

And better 'tis that base companions die,

Than by their life to hazard our good haps.

Spanish Trag.

It is exemplified by Johnson, but not noticed as disused.

COMPARATIVE, c. Rival; one who compares himself with another.

And gave his countenance against his name, To laugh at gybing boys, and stand the push Of cv'ry beardless, vain comparative. 1 Hen. IV, iii, 3,

Gerrard ever was
His full comparative. B. and Fl. Four Pl. in One.
COMPARATIVE. The double comparative, made both by the form of the adjective and the adjunct more, was formerly used by the best authors.

Nought knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Then Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.
If he do not bring

His benediction back, he must to me
Be much more crueller than I to you.

B. and Fl. Lane of Candy, iv, 1.

Gentle Asper,
Contain your spirit in more stricter bounds.

B. Jons. Induct. to Ev. M. out of H. There is nothing more swifter than time, nothing more sweeter.

Euphues, R, 4. In Shakespeare, Rich. II, we have "less happier," a very incongruous phrase, but certainly originating in the practice of saying more happier, act if, 1.

Shakespeare, therefore, who often uses this form, is fully justified by the best authorities of his time.

†COMPARE. Comparison.

OMPARE. Comparison.

This off-spring of my braine, which dare not scarcely make compare with the foulest? look for better and more generous wine of the old vine tree.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

+COMPARTIMENT. A compartment.

Elizabeth on a compartiment
Of gold in Bysse was writ, and hung askue
Upon her head. Peele's Honour of the Garter, 1593.

+COMPASS. To keep compass; to keep within bounds.

Puce, the bitter fool, was not suffered to come at the queen, because of his bitter humour, yet at one time some pressed the queen, that he should come to her, undertaking for him, that he should keep compass; so he was brought to her, and the queen said, Come on Pace, now we shall hear of our faults; saith Pace, I do not use to talk of that that all the town talks of the King James's Witty Apoltegms, 1669.

COMPASSED. Drawn with a compass, as being the segment of a circle. Thus a compassed window is what we now call a bow-window. A bay-window had rectangular corners.

Nay I am sure she does. She came to him the other day in the compassed window. Tro. & Cress., i. 2. Tro. & Cress., i, 2.

COMPASSIONATE, in the sense of complaining. Exciting compassion.

It boots not thee to be compassionate,
After our sentence, 'plaining comes too late.

Rich. II, i, 8.

I know no other instance. +To COMPELL. To collect.

The powers that I compel Shall throw thee hence. Chapm., Hom. R., v, 650.

+COMPELLATIONS. Addresses.

So that to satisfie him, I was content to answer to his compellations, and give him leave to be an asse.

The Wizard, a Play, 1640, MS.

COMPETITOR. One who seeks the same object. Commonly used for a rival, but by Shakespeare for one who unites in the same design, an associate.

It is not Cæsar's natural vice, to hate One great competitor. Ant. & Cleop., i. 4. Alluding to Lepidus, his associate in the triumvirate. So also he uses it in Two Gent. Veron. and in Rich. III. The following passage is more remarkable, as being joined with other words, which fully explain the author's meaning:

eaning:
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war, &c.
Ant. & Cleop, v, 1.

From the Fr. com-+COMPLEASE. To humour, to respond to plaire. pleasingly.

Wy lord, go to your bed and take your ease;
Where I your sweet embracings will complease, Assone as I my garments may remove,
That bindes my body brunt with ardent love.

Du Bartas.

COMPLEMENT. That which renders anything complete. Hence used for ornament or accomplishment.

rnament or accomplishing the blood, Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood, Garnished and decked in modest complement.

Hes. F, ii, 2.

Expressing what habiliments doe best attire her; what ornaments doe best adorne her; what complements doe best accomplish her.

Braithw. Engl. Gentlew., title-p.

See more instances in Todd's Johnson.

+COMPLEMENTAL. Accomplished.

Would I express a complementall youth,
That thinks himself a spruce and expert courtier,
Bending his supple hammes, kissing his hands.
Randolph's Muses Looking-Glasse, 1643.

COMPLEXION; singularly used in As you like it. It seems to me that Rosalind means to swear by her complexion, by an exclamation similar to "Good heavens!" but I would not be too positive of it.

Good, my complexion! Dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? Act iii. sc. 2.

+COMPLY. To fulfil.

Abil. Gentle Abrahen, I Am griev'd my power cannot comply my promise; My father's so averse from granting my Request concerning thee.

Chapman's Revenge for Honour, 1654.

†COMPREHEND. "To contain." Acad. Compl., 1654.

+COMPRIMIT. To subdue.

Hee is a physitian to other men's affections, as to his own, by comprimitting such passions as runne into an insurrection, by strengthening such as decline, by suppling such as are inflamed, by restrayning such as would runne out, by purging such as over-abound.

Pord's Line of Life, 1620.

†COMPT. Neat, spruce. Lat. comptus.
And with him came Lausus his sonne likewise,
A compt, accomplisht prince, without compare.
Firgit, by Ficars, 1632.

+COMPUTE. A calculation.

Let the disease forgotten be, but may
The joy return as yearly as the day;
Let there be new computes, let reckoning be Solemnly made from his recovery.

Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

OMROGUE. A jocular perversion of the word comrade, by way of calling a man rogue.

When you and the rest of your comrogues shall sit di-guised in the stocks. B. Jous. Masq. of Augurs.

Here are none of your comrogues.

Mass. City M., iv, 1. Comraque occurs in Webster's Appius and Virginia (Anc. Dr., v, 428), but clearly not with the same intention. Probably a misprint.

†Nay, rest by me,
Good Morglay, my comraque and bedfellow.
Heywood's Lancashire Witches, 1634.

+CONCEALMENT. Much property, formerly applied to superstitious purposes, had been by various means concealed from the commissioners for the dissolution of monasteries, &c., and these were afterwards called concealed lands and concealments. During the reign of Elizabeth there was a regular traffic carried on, with a good deal of what would now be called swindling, in discovering concealments and obtaining grants of them from the crown.

He keeps an office of concealments.

B. F. Pl. Humourous Liout., ii, I. +To CONCEIT. To fancy.

That though they rave, and hop, and hollow, In thought they're wiser than Apollo, Conceiting all non compos mentis, That will not think them in their senses. Hudibras Redirivus, vol. i, part 1, 1708.

CONCEITED. Inclined to jest, or be playful.

Your lordship is concrited. B. Jons. Sej., act i. Black-anout's concrited too.

B. J. Fl. Paithful Pr., ii, 3.

+CONCENTER. To collect together in one point.

Those rays of goodnes which are diffusedly scatterd in others, are all concentred in you, which were they divided into equal portions were enough to compleat a whole jury of ladies.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. CONCLUSION. An experiment; something from which a conclusion may be drawn. Noticed by Johnson (4), but not as disused, which it certainly is.

Having thus far proceeded,
(Unless you think me devilish) is't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in
Other conclusions?

Cym

Other conclusions?

And, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep.
And break your neck down. Haml., iii, 4.
This 'tis, for a puisne
In policy's Protean school, to try conclusions
With one that hath commenced and gone out doctor.

Mass. D. of Milan, iv, 1.

We are not, therefore, to suspect Lancelot Gobbo of incorrect language when he proposes to try conclusions upon his old purblind father. Mer. Ven., ii, 2.

Conclusion is once used by Shakespeare rather obscurely. From the character and state of mind of the speaker, Cleopatra, I should think she meant "deep but secret censure, looking demure all the while.

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour
Demuring upon me.

Ant. & Cleop., iv, 13. Johnson's note on the passage is, "Sedate determination; silent coolness of resolution;" but these would not be called for by the occasion, nor would they be particularly galling to Cleopatra.

+CONCORDER. One who promotes concord.

CORCOTA.

Ordain'd for us by heavenly power divine,
Then from the north this glorious starre did shine,
The roisll image of the Prince of Pence,
The blest concorder that made warres to cease;
By name a Steward, and by nature one,
Appointed from Jehovahs sacred throne.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. To CONCORPORATE. To unite in one. Say, my young sophister, what think'st of this? Chimera's reall; ergo falleris.
The lamb and tyger, fox and goos agree,

And here concorp'rate in one prodigie.

Cleaveland's Poems, 1651.

Thus we chastise the god on which, with water that is feminine, Until the cooler nymph abate. His wrath, and so concorporate. NCREW. To grow together; Thus we chastise the god of wine,

To CONCREW. concresco.

And his faire lockes, that wont with ointment sweet To be embaulm'd, and sweat out dainty dew, He let to grow, and griesly to concrete

Spens. F. Q., IV, vii, 40. CONCUPY. An abbreviation or corruption of the word concupiscence, put into the mouth of the railer Thersites:

He'll tickle it for his concupy. Tro. & Cress., v. 9. CONCUR. To run together. In To CONCUR. the sense of the etymology, con-curro. Anone they fierce encountring both concur'd
With griesly looks, and faces like their fates.

Hughes's Arthur, E, S b.

CONCUSSION. In the Latin sense, extortion; getting money by means of terror.

Pror.
And then concussion, rapine, pilleries,
Their catalogue of accusations fill.
Dan. Civ. Wars, iv, 75.

To adorn simulta-+CONDECORATE. neously, or combinedly.

Many choice and fragrant gardens also condecorate her, which together make a combined beauty, though seemingly separate. Herbert's Travels, 1638.

CONDEL, HENRY. A player contemporary with Shakespeare, and, in conjunction with Hemming, the editor of the first folio edition of his plays. He is introduced with Burbage and Lowin in the induction to Marston's Malcon-

He was chiefly tent. O. Pl., iv. 11. celebrated as a comic actor.

CONDESCENT. subs. for condescension. Exemplified by Todd. Used also by Cudworth.

CONDOG. A whimsical corruption of the word concur, substituting dog for cur, as equivalent. A story is told of its arising from a mistake between Dr. Littleton and his amanuensis. It is certain, however, that it appears, prior to Littleton, in all the early editions of Cockeram's small dictionary, as a synonym for the word agree. Thus, "Agree; concurre, cohere, condog, condescend." How it originated therefore does not appear. We find it in Lylie's Galathea, as if it was merely a burlesque of the right word:

So is it, and often doth it happen, that the just pro-portion of the fire and all things concurre. R. Con-curre, condugge. I will away. Act iii, sc. 3. +CONDIGNITY. Equal or similar dignity.

This noblest worke, after it self's condignitie: Or else the sweet rayes of your royal favour May shine so warme on these wilde fruits of mine, As much may mend their vertue, taste, and savour, And rypen faire the rest that are behinde.

+CONDITED. Candied.

†CONDITED. Candied.

Now, the making of it is in this manner: They that are skilfull confectioners, take common cyle infected with a certaine hearbe, and this being condited, preserve it a long time, and as it gathereth to a thicker consistence, harden it by meanes of a substance issuing out of a naturall veine, like unto grosse cyle; and this kind of drugge is engendred among the Persians, which, as I have said alreadie, they used to call by a tearme of that countrey, naphtha.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

†CONDON. Knowing.

Gardener's neere the worse,

Gardener's neere the worse, As condon as the burs

MS. Poems, 17th cent.

CONDUCT. A conduit.

And the water is well conveyed, that it cannot annoy the foundation of the house, and yet serveth the most necessarie offices very commodiously; and I see the conducts are made of carrien pipes, which I like farre better than them of lead, both for sweetnesse and continuance under the ground.

Norden's Surreiors Dialogue, 1610.

CONDUCT. Conductor.

And there is in this business more than nature Was ever conduct of. Temp., v, 1.

Come, gentlemen, I will be your conduct.

Ben. Jons. Be. M. ont of H.

To CONEY-CATCH. See CONY-CATCH. CONFECT. A sweetmeat. The word is now corrupted into comfit, by which the trace of the etymology (confectus, Lat _) is lost. Confectioner still retains original form. Comfit was, how- | CONFINER.

ever, already written in Shakespeare's time. See the folio of 1623.

Count-confect, in Much Ado about N... iv, 1, is well illustrated by iv, 1, is well illustrated by

Affording me—no better word,
Than of a carpet, civet, comfit-ford. Hos. Gh., 181.

'To make confects or other sugar-plumbs.—Take a pan that is as well tinned as a preserving pan, hang it over a fire of charcoal not too scorching, then cleanse your seeds or aimonds, &c., from dross, by well sifting, and to each quarter of a pound put two pounds of fine sugar, dissolve the sugar with a pint of apring-water, keeping it stirring till it ropes, then set it on hot embers, and suffer it to boil a little, so drop in your seeds or almonds scatteringly, continually moving them with a slice, and when they have taken up the sugar, and by the motion are well cover'd and rowl'd into order, dry them in an oven or stove. For smooth perfunced almonds, add a little musk, and may only dip them into the boiling sugar twice, sticking a small sharp wire or needle at the point of them.

The Accomplish'd Pessale Instructor, 1719.

To CONFECT. To prepare as sweetmeats. In this, and many other cases, I think it more probable that the verb was formed from the substantive than the contrary. In this I differ from Mr. Todd, but the point is hardly worth disputing.

Not roses'-oile from Naples, Capua. Saffron confected in Cilicia

Browns, Br. Past, I, ii. This CONFECTION. A sweetmeat. was probably the original word, then shortened into confect, and lastly changed to comfit. Confection is French of the same date; and confectio meant the same in low Latin. But it was extended to various compounds, so that confectionarius meant an apothecary, or compounder of drugs. See Du Cange.

Hast thou not learn'd me to preserve? Yea, so That our great king himself doth woo me off For my confections. Cymb., i Cymi., i, 6.

In the sense of a drug:

If Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress the confection
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

To CONFEDER. To confederate; the same word abbreviated.

The king, espying me apart from those With whom I confedered in band before.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 286.

The souldiers, having confedered together, dyd flocke about Galba.

North's Plut. Lises, 280 D. tWherefore having confedered with Oneale, Oconor, and other Irish potentates, &c.

Holiushed's Chronicles.

+To CONFINE. To drive beyond the confines or borders; to banish.

Lycaon's once more fied. We, by the help Of these his people, have confin'd him hence. To whom belongs this crown? Heywood's Golden Age, 1611.

A borderer; one who lives on the confines of another country. Not now in use. To confine, in this sense, is also nearly disused: the substantive is used, but with its accent changed, being now on the first syllable, confine. Confiner was generally ac-Todd. cented on the second syllable, but not always.

The senate bath stirr'd up the confiners

Shakespeare has confineless, for bound-Macb., iv, 3.

+CONFLUENT. Rich; affluent.

Th' inhabitants in flocks and herds are wondrous confluent. Chapm. Il., ix, 57. +To CONFLOW. To flow together.

The Drasidæ record, That a part in very deed of the nation were homelings, in-borne, and there bred; but others also from the utmost islands and the tracts beyond Rhene, driven out of their owne native seats, beyond Rhene, driven out of their owne native seats, what with continual warres, and what with the inundation of the swelling sea, conflowed thither.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

From whom, when hee had turned himselfe toward the common people, he wondered exceedingly, how quickly all the men in the world thus conflowed to Rome.

10id.

To CONFOUND. Applied by Shakespeare to the spending of time.

He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower. How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour?

Coriol. i, 6.

So also in two other instances, Jul. Czes., i, 1, and Ant. & Cleop., i, 4. +CONGESTED. Accumulated

In whose minde Worlds of heroick vertues are congested
To make him up a worthy.

Nabbes's Hannibal & Scipio, 1637.

To CONGREE. To agree together.

Doth keep in one consent,

Congrecing in a full and natural close. Hen. V, i, 2.

Addern editors have arbitrarily Hen. F. i. 2. Modern changed the word to congruing.

+CONGRUENCE. Of congruence, i. e., by implication.

Everie justice of peace may cause two constables to bee chosen in each hundred, Lambert, 190, and this secmeth to bee meant of the high constables of hundreds, and to include and imply of congruence the swearing of them. Dalton's Countrey Justice, 1020. +CONGY. A bow of salutation.

Sir William, with a low congy, saluted him; the good lady, as is the courtly custom, was kist of this nobleman.

Armin's Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

To CONJECT. To conjecture. The old quarto of Othello reads thus: From one that so imperfectly conjects.

Othello, iii, 3. In the first folio it is changed to conceits; so that conject was probably +CONSPICTIOUS.

beginning to be disused. in other authors.

Now reason I or conject with myself. Acolastus, 1540.

187

Cited by Steevens.

Madam, the reason of these vehement tearmes,
Cyrus doth neither know, nor can conject.

Wars of Cyrus, sto. E, 1 b, 1894.

†That no lyvyng creature cowld conjects,
But that pure love dyd that wyt dyrect.

The Play of Wyt and Scyence.

Accounted

To CONJURE. To agree. Accented on the first.

Thou maist not coldly set
Our soversigne processe, which imports at full,
By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet.

Haml

Haml., iv. 8. To conjure, obtestor, or to bind by asseveration, and to conjure, to use magical arts, were not then always distinguished from each other, or from this; all were accented conjure. Instances are found in Shakespeare both ways: and Hall has conjur'd, for raised by conjuration:

for raised by conjunation.

But who conjurd this bawdie Poggie's ghost?

Sat., B. 2, S. 1.

So fluctuating was accent as yet. †CONNIVENCY. Connivence.

And by the consisence of this very same ladie of the world, how many men of high birth and noble parentage have submissively embraced the knees of Viriatus or Spartacus?

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

†CONQUERANT. A conqueror. Fr. I made a flat retreat into a closet I found open, the floore of which was strewed with roses, halfe a yard thick. Thither the wanton conquerants pursued me, and there we rowl'd one over another after a mad fashion, till, I believe, we were all alike willing to give the game over.

The Comicall History of Francion, 1655.

+CONSECUTE. To attain.

For, as ferr as I can lerne, few men hitherto, being here in any auctoritie, hath finally conscented favora and thankes, but rather the contrarie, with povertie for theire farewell.

State Papers, ii, 389.

CONSENT, for concent. Musical accord. For government, though high, and low, and lower, Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, Congreeing in a full and natural close,

Like musick.

Hen. V. i. 9. Why the modern editors, who changed the spelling of Shakespeare, to suit modern readers, did not change this to concent, it is not easy to say.

To CONSKITE, or CONSKITT. Mer-dis aspergere.

By the means of which, they gripe all, devour all, conskite all, burn all, &c. Rabelais, Oz., B. 5, ch. 11. The company began to stop their nose; for he had conskitted himselt with meer anguish and perpentity.

[bid., B. 2, ch. 19.]

+To CONSORT. To associate with. And they

Consorted other deities, replete with passions.

Chapman, II., viii, 385.

Excelling.

Heere he comes, sweete host, hoere is the dukes heire of Leningberge; doe homage, and after entertaine him and me his follower with the most conspictions pleasures that lies in thy poore ability.

The Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

+CONSTERNATED. Struck with consternation.

The king of Astopia and the Palatine were strangely consternated at this association.

on. The Pagan Prince, 1690.

+CONSTULT. To become as great a fool as another.

Some English gentlemen with him consulted, And as he nat'nlly with them constulted, Where they perceiving his deserts were great, They striv d to mount him into honours seat. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CONSUBSTANTIAL. Identical in substance with.

As in the course of nature doth befall,
That from the essence of an earthly father,
An earthly son essentiall parts doth gather;
Or as in spring-time from one sappy wig
There sprouts another consubstantial sprig.

Die Bartas.

+CONSULT. A consultation.

He is altogether unease, till he makes a second visit, and thinks time runs too slow, till he can find a convenient opportunity to do it, and puts himself for that purpose into the finest garb that a consult of the neatest taylors about town can contrive, concluding that or nothing will win her.

Dunton's Ladies Dictionary. CONSUMMATE, verbal adjective, for the participle consummated, or being consummated.

No you the office, friar, which consummate, Return him here again. Meas. for Meas., v, last sc. The accent here is doubtful; but Shakespeare and his contemporaries generally accent the first syllable.

The fulness of his fortunes winged them To consummate this match. Lady Alimony, D. 4. CONTECK, for contest; in Chaucer conteke. Retained by Spenser. See Todd. Mr. Tyrwhitt marks it as Saxon, but no such word is found in that language. Skinner supposed it only a corruption of contest. Gascoigne also has it:

But, for I found some contecke and debate, In regiment where I was woont to rule.

Works, 4to, 1587, sig. h, 4.

+CONTEMPLATION. Sight; behold-

ing.

The king at the contemplation of Alfreds frends and kinsfolks, signified to the pope, &c.

Holinshed's Chronicles.

CONTENTATION. Very commonly used for contentment, or satisfaction. and even so late as, by Arbuthnot. See Todd. I suspect it ought to be substituted for contention in the following passage, unless the speaker be intended to express himself incorrectly, which does not seem probable.

Content? I was never in better contentation in my life.

B. & Pl. Wit at sev. Weep., v. 1. The first folio, however, as well as the modern editions, gives contention.

+CONTERITION. Rubbing or striking together.

He being gone, Francion did light his torch again by the means of a flint, that by conterition sparkled out fire.

Comicall History of Francion, 1655.

To CON THANKS. To study expressions of gratitude.

Yet thanks I must you con Yet thanks I must you com,
That you are thicres profest; that you work not
In holier shapes.

But many other mo, when they shall knowe of it—for your kindnesse will con you very much thanche.

Asch. Toroph., p. 11.
I con thee thanks to whom thy dogges be deare.

Pemb. Arc., p. 224.

CONTINENT. That in which any-The original thing is contained. sense of the word, by its etymology. It is frequently so used by Shakespeare, and the usage was long thought peculiar to him, but Mr. Todd has shown other authorities for it. More might easily be adduced.

Great vessels into lesse are emptied never. There's a redoundance past their continent ever.

Busy d'Ambois, 4to, sig. D, 2 b.
†And yet that little thou esteem'st too great a con-

In thy incontinent avarice. Chapm., Hom. Il., i, 170.

†To CONTINGERATE. To come into contact with. Yet I with non-sence could contingerate,

With catophiscoes terragrophicate,
And make my selfe admir'd immediately,
Of such as understand no more then I.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CONTRADICTIVE. Contradictory. Of the king's fault in labouring to uphold monarchy, his soliciting the king of Denmark to this purpose, no what contradictive to his former resolutions of not calling in forreign aid. Symmons, Vindic. of Ch. I, 1618.

+CONTRARY. Contradictory.

Had I demanded whence you came, or whither you would, for the one you might have told me a contrary tale, and for the other your selfe is uncertaine.

The Man in the Moone, 1809.

To CONTRARY. To oppose, or counteract. Accented on the second.

You must contrary me! Marry, 'tis time!

Rom. and Jul., i, 5.

I will not contrary your majesty; for time must wear out that love hath wrought.

Lyty, Alex. and Comp., iii, 4.

Exemplified by Todd, but not noticed as obsolete.

To CONTRIVE. To wear out, to pass away. From contrivi, the præt. of contero. One of the disused Latinisms. See CONTINENT, and CONFINER.

Please you we may contrine this afternoon, And quaff carouses to our mistress' health. Tem. Shr., i. 2.

+CONTRIVEMENT. Contrivance.

My braine shall be Busie in his undoing; and I will
Plot ruine with religion; his disgrace
Shall be my zeales contricement.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

†CONVENABLE. Convenient.

And when he had targed there a long time for a consenable wind, at length it came about even as he himself desired.

Holinshed's Chronicles, 1577. himself desired.

+CONVERTIST. A convert.

Hypocrisic is so great an enemy to mans peace with God, that hee will pardon the sorrowfull convertist before the proud justifier; for he that standeth upon tearmes of dooing well, when hee determineth to continue bad, is worse then he that looketh up to heaven, and falleth into some durty puddle or other.

Rich Cabinet furnished with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

CONVERTITE. A convert: one who has changed his notions.

Out of these convertites there is much matter to be heard and learn'd. As you like it, v, 4.
You must now prepare.

In all your grace's pomp, to entertain
Your cousin who is now a convertite.

B. & Fl. Noble Gent., iii, sub fin.

To CONVEY. A more decent term for to steal; as ancient Pistol learnedly distinguishes.

Convey, the wise it call. Steal!—foh, a fice for the phrase! phrase! Merry W. W., i, S. But, as I am Crack, I will convey, crossbite, and cheat upon Simplicius.

Marston's What you will, Anc. Dr., ii, 260.

Hence also conveyance is used for dishonesty, and a conveyer for a

Since Henry's death, I fear there is conrevance. 1 Hen. VI, i, 3,

Oh good, convey! Conveyers are you all.
That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.
Rich. II, iv, sub fin.

A conveyancer is different. See Todd. +CONVICIOUS. Reproachful.

Also a continuous dyaloge withowt any tytle, inveynge specyally agaynst saynt Thomas of Canterberge, the say the say the say that a yet was never prynted nor publyshed openly.

Letter dated 1533.

+CONVICTED. Convinced.

Euphues seeing this fatherly and friendly sire (whom wee will name Fidus) to have no lesse inward courtesic, then outward comlinesse, convicted (as wel he might) that the proffer of his bountie noted the noblenesse of his hirth Lylie's Euphucs.

To CONVINCE. To overcome. Latinism.

His two chamberlains I will, with wine and wassell so convince. That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume.

Mach., i, 7.

Now you look finely indeed, Win! this cap does consisc.

B. Jons. Barth. P., i, 1. See Todd. Also for to convict.

To CONVIVE. To feast together, to be convivial.

Go to my tent,
There in the full convine we. Tro. and Cross., iv, 5.
To CONY-CATCH. To deceive a simple person; to cheat, or impose; a conv. or rabbit, being considered as a very simple animal. It has been shown, from Decker's English Villanies, that the system of cheating, or, as it is now called, swindling, was carried to a great length early in the 17th century; that a collective society of sharpers was called a warren, and their dupes rabbit-suckers (that is, young rabbits), or conies. One of their chief decoys was the selling goods or trash, to be resold at a loss, as explained under COMMODITY. They had several other terms of their art, all derived from the warren. See this well stated in Mr. D'Israeli's Curios. of Lit., vol. iii, p. 78, et seq., At other times the gang were birdcatchers, and their prey a gull, &c. Ibid.

Take heed, signor Baptista, lest you be cony-catched in this business.

Tam. Skr., v, i.
Whorcson consy-catching rascal! I could eat the very hilts for anger.

B. Jons. Ev. Man in H., iii, I. Shakespeare has once used it to express harmless roguery, playing jocular tricks, and no more. When Grumio will not answer his fellowservants, except in a jesting way, Curtis says to him, Come, you are so full of conventching. Tam. Shr., iv. 1. CONY-CATCHER. A sharper, or cheat. Minshew has well expressed the origin of the term:

Of the term:

A conic-catcher, a name given to deceivers, by a metaphor, taken from those that rob warrens, and conic-grounds, using all means, sleights, and cunning to deceive them, as pitching of haies before their holes, fetching them in by tumblers, &c. Dict. Seel seel impostors! cony-catchers!

Marst. What y. will, Anc. Dr., ii, 253.

+COOK. The following proverb is certainly not a common one.

Eum odi sapientem qui sibi non sapit: hee is an ill cooke that cannot licke his owne fingers.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 556.

A COOLING CARD. A phrase probably borrowed from primero, or some other game in which money was staked upon a card. A card so decisive as to cool the courage of the adversary. Met. Something to damp or overwhelm the hopes of an ex-

There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

1 Hen. FI, v, 4.

These hot youths,
I fear, will find a cooling card. B. F. M. Island Pr. i. 3.
Euphues, to the intent that he might bridle the over-lashing affections of Philautus, conveied into his studie a certeine pamphlet, which he tearmed a cooling card for Philautus; yet generally to be applyed to all lovers. We have no instance of it in the original sense. [But see the following.] + Buc. My lord, lay down a cooling card, this game is gone too far,

You have him fast, now cut him off, for feare of civill
True Tragedie of Ric. III, 1894.
+COOT. A bird. The name is at present given to the water-hen.

Glaucium, à glaucis oculis. γλανκίον, quod fuscius genus est plumis pedibusque. À felfare, or (as some thinke) a coote.

Nomenciator.

thinke) a coole.

Nomencia.

But (gentle muse) tell me what fowls are those.

That but even-now from flaggy fenns arose?

This th'lungry hern, the greedy cormorant,

The cool and curiew, which the moors doo haunt. Du Raetas

COP, or COPPE. The top of anything. The head. It is pure Saxon. It is abundantly illustrated in Todd's Johnson.

Marry, she's not in fashion yet; she wears a hood; but 't stands a-cop.

B. Jons. Alch., ii, 6.
Wherefore, as some suppose, of copper-mines in me I Copper-land was call'd; but some will have 't to be From the old Britains brought, for cop they use to call The tops of many hills, which I am stord withal.

Drayton's Polyolb., 80, p. 1225.

He should have said Saxons, rather than Britons.

†Most like unto Diana bright when she to hunt goth out Upon Eurotas bankes, or through the copy of Cynthus hill,

Whom thousands of the lady nimphes await to do her Phaer's Virgil, 1600. +To COPART. To share, to sympathise. How say you, gentlemen, will you copart with me in this my dejectednesse? Heywood's Royall King, 1637.

COPATAIN. A word hitherto found only in the following passage, but supposed to be made from cop, and to mean high-crowned. [A sugar-loaf hat. A corruption of copped-tank. See COPPED, and COPPLE-TANKT.]

Oh fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat. Tam. Shr., v, 1. +COPEL. A cape. Fr.

pinkinge and racing the doublett, and lininge of ye copell 8s. for embroideringe doublett, copell, and scarfe, 21. 10s. makinge the copell makinge the cloake 17. 84.

Account, dated 1619. The same as chapman, or COPEMAN. From to cope, which merchant. meant to exchange: both from ceap, a market.

He would have sold his part of Paradise For ready money, had he met a copeman.

B. Jons. Foz. iii, 5.

Verstegan gives the derivation thus:

Compan, for this we now say chapman, which is as much as to say as a merchant, or copeman.

Restit. of D. Int., p. 166.

COPESMATE. The same word cope. compounded with mate instead of man; meaning therefore evidently a partner or companion in merchandise.

Mishapen Time, copernate of ugly night.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 526.
No better copesnates!

I'll go seek them out with this light in my hand.

All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 146. See it further exemplified in Todd's Johnson.

COPHETUA. An imaginary African king, of whom the legendary ballads told, that he fell in love with the daughter of a beggar, and married her. The song is extant in Percy's Reliques, vol. i, p. 198, and is several times alluded to by Shakespeare and others. The name of the fair beggar-maid, according to that authority, was Zenelophon; but Dr. Percy considered that as a corruption of Penelophon, which is the name in the ballad.

The magnanimous and most illustrate king Cophetra set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon.

Lore's L. L., iv, 1. The following lines of the ballad are alluded to in Romeo and Juliet:

The blinded boy that shootes so trim, From heaven down did hie; He drew a dart and shot at him In place where he did lye.

See Rom. and Jul., ii, 1. According to B. Jonson this king was remarkable for his riches.

I have not the heart to devour you, an I might be made as rich as king Cophetus.

Be. Man in his H., iii, 4.

It has been conjectured that there was some old drama on this subject, in which these riches might be mentioned. From this play probably the bombastic lines spoken by ancient Pistol were quoted:

O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let king Cophetsa know the truth thereof. 2 Hen. IV, v, 3.

And perhaps this:

Spoke like the bold Cophetne's son!
Wits, O. Pl., viii, 429.

The worthy monarch seems to have been a favorite hero for a rant.

COPPED. Having a high and prominent top; from cop.

These they call first Jemoglans, who have their faces shaven, in token of servitude, wearing long coates and copped caps, not unlike to our idiots.

Sandys, Travels, p. 47.
With high-copt hats, and feathers flaunt a flaunt. Gascoigne, Hearbes, p. 216. Were they as copped and high rested as marish ahoops.

Rabelats, Ozell, B. II, ch. xii.

COPPLE-CROWNS are the same thing:

high-topped crowns.

Soon after follows:

O sweet lady-birds!
With copple crowns, and wings but on one side. Ibid.
COPPLE-TANKT, COPPINTANK, and COPTANKT, are all of similar forma-

Then should come in the doctours of Loven, [Louvain] with their great coppin-tankes, and doctours hattes.

Bee-hive of Rom. Ch., I, 7 b.

A coptankt hat, made on a Flemish block.

Gasc. Workes, N. 8 b

+COPPRICE-BAG.

I know you'l not endure to see my Jack
Goe empty, nor weare shirts of copprice bags.

The Citye Match, 1639, p. 33.

†COPSI-CURSTY. A vulgar corruption of corpus Christi, occurring in old English plays.

COPY. Plenty; from copia. It is several times used by Ben Jonson, but is not peculiar to him; Mr. Todd has quoted it from the preface to the English Bible, and Mr. Gifford says that it is found in Chaucer.

Some was blest with no more copy of wit, but to serve his humour thus.

To gain the opinion of copy, utter all they can, however unfitly.

Address pref. to the Alchemist.

Cicero said Roscius contended with him, by varietie of lively gestures to surmount the copy of his speach [i.e., copiousness].

Puttenham, B. i, ch. 14.

'Thou foolish thirster after idle secrets

And ill's abrode; looke home, and store and choke thee:

thee

There sticks an Achelons horne of all,

Copie enough. Chapman's Widows Tears, 1612. Copie enough. Chapman's Widows Tears, 1612. +CORAGE. To encourage. Heywood, 1556.

†CORAL seems to have been employed from an early period for playthings given to infants when they were cutting their teeth.

And since that physick is not to be used as a continual And since that paysick is not to be used as a continual aliment, but as an adjument of drooping nature at an extremity; and beside that, seeing every nasty and base Tygellus use the pipe, as infants their red corals, ever in their mouths, and many besides of more note and esteem take it more for wantonnes than want, as Gerard speaks.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

Gerard speaks. Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.
CORANTO. A swift and lively dance. Courant, Fr.; from correre, Ital. to run: written also corranto.

And teach lavoltes high, and swift corantos.

Hen. V, iii, 5. They are thus described by sir John Davies, in his poem on dancing:

What shall I name those current traverses. That on a triple ductyl foot do run, Close by the ground, with sliding passages, Wherein that dancer greatest praise hath won Which with best order can all order shun:

For every where he wantonly must range, And turn and wind with unexpected change.

Stanza 69. Hence we find a coranto pace used for a very swift pace:

But away rid I, sir; put my horse to a coranto pace, and left my fiddle behind me.

Middleton, More Diss., Anc. Dr., iv, 411.

CORDEVAN. Spanish leather, from Cordova. Corrupted also into cordwayn, or cordewayne. Whence a shoemaker is still technically called a

Puts on his lusty green, with gaudy hook,
And hanging scrip of finest corderon.
Fletch. Faithf. Sh., i, 1.

So Spenser:

Buskins he wore of costliest cordwayne
Spens. F. Q., VI, ii, 6.
tBy the next opportunity I will send you the cordwan pockets and gloves you writ for of Francisco Morenos perfuming.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. DOCKETS and govers.

Howell's Pamiliar Letters, 1000.
With your favour my good friend, I would willingly buy three paire of gloves, one of lambes leather, the other of kid, and a paire of cordinant; but for Gods sake let us have no ceremonies, nor any biddings off and on.

The Passenger of Beneensto, 1612.

To groan. +To CORE.

Which saint George seeing, upon the suddaine thrust his sword into his greedy throat, and overthrew him; at which the mouster yels and cores forth such a terrible noyse, as if the center of the earth had crack, that with the uncould din thereof, the neighbouring hils, woods, and valleyes, seemed to tremble like an earthouse.

Tabler's Worker 1830 earthquake. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CORIANDER SEED. A familiar and jocular term for money. The seeds of coriander being hemispheres, flattened on one side, may perhaps have given some rude idea of pieces of money.

Which they told us was neither for the sake of her Which they told us was neturer not use same or not puty, parts, parts, or person, but for the fourth comprehensive p, portion; the spankers, spur-royals, rose-nobles, and other coriander seed with which she was quilted all over.

Ozell's Rabetais, B. IV, ch. ix, p. 133.

+CORINTH. A currant.

A brief abstracte of the accompte of the Corynthes for 2 years ending at Michaelmas 1606.—The net produce of the farm on the duties on currants was, during this period, 2845f.

A CORINTHIAN. A wencher, a debauched man. The fame of Corinth as a place of resort for loose women was not vet extinct. It had flourished from the times of ancient Greece.

And tell me fatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.

1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. And raps up, without pity, the sage and rheumatic old prelatess, with all her young Corinthian laity.

Milton, Apol. for Smeel.

Corinth was even a current name for a house of ill repute.

Would we could see you at Corinth! Tim, of Ath., ii, 2.

+CORK-BRAINED. Light-headed. ORA-BRAINED. Light-headed.
And however we are slightly esteem'd by some giddy-headed corkbraiss or mushrom painted puckfoysts.

Taylor's Workes, 1830.
Will beare five hundred akers on his backe,

And walke all stoutly as if it were no load,
And beare it to each place of his aboud.

†CORNELIUS. The name of the individual who is said to have introduced the discipline of the tub for the venereal disease. See Tub.

And, where they should study in private with Diogenes in his cell, they are with Cornelius in his tub. Armin's Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

CORNEMUSE, or CORNAMUTE. bagpipe. The French Manuel Lexique. by the Abbé Prévost, defines it exactly as a bagpipe: "Instrument de musique champêtre, à vent et à anche. Il est composé de trois chalumeaux, et d'une peau remplie de vent, qui se serre sous le bras pour en jouer, en remuant les doigts sur les trous des chalumeaux." Drayton rather inaccurately speaks of it as distinct from the bagpipe, in reciting country instruments.

Even from the shrillest shawn, unto the cornamute.

Some blow the bagpipe up, that plays the country round.

Polyolb., iv, p. 736. *Tound. Polyolo, iv, p. 736.

†Wher on those pines the neighb'ring groves among,
(Now utterly neglected in these days)
Our garlands, pipes, and cornamutes were hung,
The monuments of our deserved praise. Drayton.

+CORNEOL. The stone now called a

Sardius, Cornaline. blackish colour, called a cornsol. Cornaline. A kind of onyx of a +CORNER PIE.

He may marry a knights daughter, a creature out of fashion, that has not one commendable quality, more fashion, that has not one commendable quality, more then to make a corner pye and a sallad, no manner of courtship, but two or three dances, as old as mounsier, and can play a few lessons on the virginalls that she learnt of her grandam; besides she is simple, and dull in her dalliance.

The Lost Lady, 1638.

+To CORNUTE. To cuckold. This to the poorest cuckoid seemes a bliss,
That he with mighty monarchs sharer is,
That, though to be cornuted be a griefe,
Yet to have such brave partners is reliefe.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

+CORNWELL. Cornhill is so called in Deloney's Strange Histories, 1607. In the following passage, we have a pun upon (probably) Cornwall.
For millions of men that have beene married,
Have unto Cornwell without boat beene carried.

Paquil's Night Cap, 1612.

+CORNY. Hard, like horn?

Also Ipocras saith, that a woman being conceived with a man-child is ruddy, and her right side is corny about, but if she bee conceived with a maid-child, she is blacke, and her left pap is corny about.

The Pathway to Health, f. 58.

COROLLARY. Something added, or even superfluous. No great deviation from the original sense.

Bring a corollary, Rather than want. Tomp., iv, 1. CORONAL. A crown, or garland. Now no more shall these smooth brows be girt With youthful coronals, and lead the dance Fl. Paithf. Sheph., i. 1.

So Spenser in his pastorals. CORONEL. The original Spanish word for colonel. This fully accounts for the modern pronunciation of the latter word, curnel.

Afterwards their coronell, named Don Sebastian, came forth to intreat that they might part with their armes like souldiers. Speaser, State of Ireland. He brought the name of coronel to town, as some did formerly to the suburbs that of lieutenant or captain. Plecknoe's Eniam, Characters.

That is, as a good travelling name, for disguise.

Our early dictionaries also give coronel for colonel.

+CORONICH. A cornice.

There was presented to sight a front of architecture with two pillasters at each side, and in the middle of the coronich a compartment with this inscription.

Triumphs of the Prince d'Amour., 1635.

CORPUS CHRISTI DAY. A high festival of the church of Rome, held annually on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, in memory, as was supposed, of the miraculous confirmation of the doctrine of Transubstantiation under pope Urban IV.

This was the usual time for performing the mysteries, or sacred dramas, of which, in England, those of Coventry were particularly famous, as is related in Dugdale's Warwickshire, p. 116. They are thus alluded to in an old drama:

This devyll and I were of olde acqueyntance. For oft in the play of Corpus Christi He hath play'd the devyll at Coventry. Four Ps, O. Pl., i, 86.

The Chester Mysteries were also famous, and were performed at the same feast, and sometimes at Whitsuntide. A few copies of the latter have been printed for the members of the Roxburghe Club, by James Heywood Markland, Esq., from an Harleian MS., with an excellent preliminary discourse. This was in 1818. +CORRASIVED. An old form of corrosived, common in early plays.

CORRIGIBLE, for corrective. Having the power of correction. This sense is clearly improper, yet Mr. Todd has shown that it was used by Jonson as well as Shakespeare.

The power and corrigible authority of this, lies in our Do I not bear a reasonable corrigible hand over him, Crispinus? Poetaster. ii. 1. Yet Shakespeare has also used it Bending down his corrigible neck. Ant. & Cleop., iv. 12. CORSEY, COR'SIVE, and CORZIE. All, I believe, corruptions of corrosive; meaning therefore, as a substantive, anything that corrodes. itself was used as a substantive, and spoken as two syllables, even when written without contraction.

Whereas he meant his corrosises to apply, And with streight diet tame his stubborne malady. Spens. P. Q., I, x, 25.

Elsewhere Spenser writes it so: And that same bitter cor'sive which did eat Her tender heart, and made refraine from meat

And without ceasing fed upon his bones.

Drayt. Leg. of P. Gav., p. 571.

We find it written corzie:

He feels a corzie cold his heart to knaw.

Harr. Ariost., xx. 97. I thought once this might be put for coryza, or rheum; but the similarity of the two passages from this author shows plainly what he meant. In one place it seems to mean distress or inconvenience.

His perplexed mother was driven to make him by force be tended, with extreme corsey to herselfe, and annoyance to him.

Pembr. Arcad., L. 3, p. 297.

Here also it is much the same: The discontent

You seem to entertain, is merely causeless ;-—And therefore, good my lord, discover it,

That we may take the spleen and corsey from it.

Chapman's Mons. D'Olive, Anc. Dr., iii, 348.

The editor's note is quite erroneous. tTo have a great hurt or domage, which we call a corsey to the herte.

Eliotes Dictionarie*, 1559.

+CORSICK. Grieved.

Alas! poore infants borne to wofull fates,
What corsicke hart such harmelesse soules can greeve.
Great Britaines Troys, 1609.

CORTINE, for curtain. Cortina, Lat. Only an antiquated spelling.

Talk of the affairs

The cloudes, the cortines, and the mysteries,
That are afoot. B. Jons. Mang. of Neptune's Triumph,
Cortina striata, a pleited or folded cortine, or a cortine +COSHER. To entertain a guest.

A very fit and proper house, sir, For such a worthy guest to cosher. The Irish Hudibras, 1689.

+COSHERING. A pet animal?

I would not leave a head to wag upon a shoulder of our generation, from my mother's sucking-pig at her nipple to my great grandfather's coshering in the peas-straw. Shirley's St. Patrick for Ireland, v, 1. COSIER. See COZIER.

A lamb, or other young animal, brought up by hand. Being a rustic word. I cannot believe that it had an Italian derivation.

I shall give thee you cosset for thy payne.

Spens. Shep. Kal, Sept.

A pet of any kind.

d I am for the cosset, his charge; did you ever see a fellow's face more accuse him for an ass?

B. Jone, Barth, F., i. 1.

COST. A rib. From the Latin costa. It is an automa, [automaton] runs under water, With a snug nose, and has a nimble tail

Made like an auger, with which tail she wriggles Betwixt the costs of a ship, and sinks it straight.

B. Jons. Staple of News, iii, 1.

This is like some modern projects. COSTARD. A man's head; or a large kind of apple. Which is the original sense, is not yet settled. Mr. Gifford positively says the apple (Note on the Alchemist, act v, sc. 1): and certainly we do not find it used for a head, except in ludicrous or contemptuous language. It occurs five times in Shakespeare, and always in that way. Yet Skinner tells us that coster meant a head, and derives that from coppe: quasi, copster. authority has been generally followed.

Ise try whether your costard or my bat be the harder.

Well, knave, an I had thee alone, I would surely rap thy costard. Gamm. Gurt., O. Pi., ii, 66. Well, knave, and Gamm. Gurt., U. I.I., II,
That I may hear and answer what you say,
With my school-dagger 'bout your costard, sir.

B. Jons. Tale of Tab. ii, 2.

B. Jons. Tale of Tab. iii, 2.

Once we find it used for the covering of the head, the cap:

Take an ounce from mine arm, and, doctor Deuzace,

Take an ounce from mine arm, and, doesn' Start.

I'll make a close-stool of your velvet costard.

B. & Fl. Woman's Prize, iii, 4. The modern editors of these plays have made foolish work, in changing custard to costard, where the former was right. Loyal Subj., ii, 5. To "crown with a custard," means to clap a custard on his head, the effect of which must of course be ludicrous. As a species of apple, it is enumerated with others, but it must have been a very common sort, as it gave a name to the dealers in apples:

Apples be so divers of form and substance, that it were infinite to describe them all; some consist more of aire then water, as your puffs called mals pulmones; others more of water than wind, as your costards and pomewaters, called hydrotica.

Muffelt's Health's Improvement, p. 196

The wilding, costard, then the well-known pomewater.

Drayt. Polyolb., 8.

+COSTARD-JAGGER. Another name. apparently, for costard-monger.

Coblers, or tynkers, or else contard-jaggers.

Barclay's Fifte Eglog., n. d.

COSTARD-MONGER, or COSTER-MONGER. A seller of apples; one, generally, who kept a stall. They seem to have been frequently Irish.

Her father was an Irish costar-monger.

B. Jons. Alch., iv, 1. In England, sir, troth I ever laugh when I think on't;

Why, sir, there all the coster-mongers are Irish.

2 P. Hon. Wh., O. Pl., sii, p. 375.

Costermongers were usually noisy, whence old Morose in Epicœne is said to swoon at the voice of one. Their bawling was proverbial:

And then he'll rai, like a rude costermonger,
That school-boys had courened of his apples,
As loud and senseless.

B. J. Fl. Scornf. Lady, iv, 1. They were general fruit-sellers. costard-monger in Jonson's Barth. Fair cries only pears.

COSTER-MONGER, jocularly used as an adjective. Anything meanly mercenary, like a petty dealer in apples, whose character was bad in various ways. See APPLE-SQUIRE.

Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times, that true valour is turned bear-herd. 2 Hen. IV, i, 2.

Where note, that times is not in the two folios, but is supplied from the quarto, and that bear-herd should probably be bear-ward, the quarto having berod. Bear-herd occurs.

garis, called also alecost, as it was frequently put into ale, being an aromatic bitter.

Costmarie is put into ale to steep; as also into the barrels and stands, amongst those herbes wherewith they do make sage ale. Johns. Gerrard, B. ii, ch. 208. The purple hyacinth, and fresh costmarie.

Spens, Gnat. †COT. Apparently a jocular term for a citizen. "Too much like a citizen, or a cot, as the women call it." Commentary upon the History of Tom Thumb, 1711, p. 12.

To COTE, To pass by, to pass the side of another. Costoyer, old French, in which the s was soon dropped, and is now not written. The same as to coast.

We coted them on the way, and hither they are Her amber hair for foul hath amber coted.

Love's L. L., iv. 8. That is, hath so far passed amber, as to make it seem foul.

The buck broke gallantly; my great swift being disadvantaged in his slip was at first behind; marry, presently coted and outstripped them.

Ret. from Perm., Orig. of Dr., iii, p. 238.

This is exact, first coted, i. e., went by the side, then outstripped them.

Chapman is also quoted by Johnson. [See Chapm. Hom. Il., xxiii, 324, and Od., xiii, 421.]

It was, however, a common sporting term, and by that probably made familiar to Shakespeare. Drayton has it, where he particularly professes to give the account of coursing in its true terms:

Which in the proper terms the muse doth thus report. Cotes is thus introduced in that place: When each man runs his horse with fixed eves, and which dog first turns the hare, which first the other coals.

Polyolb., xxiii, p. 1115. The passage from the Return from Parnassus, above cited, seems to prove that it was used also in buckhunting.

COTE, or COAT, s. In similar usage. A pass, a go-by, as we sometimes sav. But when he cannot reach her,

This, giving him a cost, about again doth fetch her. Drayton, ibid. +COTHURNAL. Tragical, or drama-

A sprightly comedy, the sins unfold Of more corrupted times, then in its high Cothurnal sceans, a lofty tragedy Erects their thoughts, and doth at once invite however, in other passages.

To various passions, corrow and delight.

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

COSTMARY. The herb balsamita vul
A COT-QUEAN. Probably cock-quean; that is, a male quean, a man who troubles himself with female affairs; which old Capulet is doing when the Nurse tells him.

> Go, you cot-quean, go, Get you to bed. Rom. and Jul., iv, 4. In the following passage, it means masculine hussey. It is spoken by Ovid, as Jupiter, to Julia, as Juno: We tell thee, thou angerest us, cot-queen; and we will thunder thee in pieces for thy cot-queenity.
>
> B. Jons. Poetaster, iv, 3.

It continued long in use in the former sense, and is quoted even from Addison, who compares a woman meddling with state affairs to a man interfering in female business, a cotquean, adding, "each of the sexes should keep within its bounds." See QUEAN.

It seems to have meant also a henpecked husband, which suits the same derivation.

COTSALE. A corruption of Cotswold. open downs in Gloucestershire, very favorable for coursing.

How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say be was outrun on Cotsale. Merry W. W., i. I. This might refer to common coursing, and therefore does not at all affect the date of the play, which Warton endeavoured to fix from the establishment of Dover's Games on Cotswold. They were not founded till the reign of James I. See Dover.

A sheep was jocularly called a Cotsold or Cotswold lion, from the extensive pastures in that part. It is among Ray's Proverbs, under Gloucestershire, p. 242. So Harrington:

Lo then the mystery from whence the name
Of Cotsold lyons first to England came.

Epigr., B. iii, Ep. 18.

COTTON. To succeed, to go on To COTTON. prosperously: a metaphor, probably, from the finishing of cloth, which when it cottons, or rises to a regular nap, is nearly or quite complete. It is often joined with geer, which is also a technical and manufacturing term.

Still mistress Dorothy! This geer will cotton.

B. J. Fl. Mons. Tho., iv, 8.

Now, Hephestion, doth not this matter cotton as I would. Lyly's Alex. J. Camp., iii, 4, 0. Pl., ii, 122.

It cottens well, it cannot choose but beare

Family of Love, D, 3 b. A pretty napp. This is exact to the presumed origin of the phrase. Sometimes, by a still further extension of the metaphor, it meant to agree:

Styles and I cannot cotten.

Hist. of Capt. Stukely, B, 2 b.
Else the matter would cotten but ill favouredly with our loving mother, the holy church.

Beehive of Rom. Ch., Br, 7.

Swift seems to be the latest authority for the word.

the word.

thow this geare will cotten, I know not.

True Tragedie of Ric. III, 1594.

tCome on, sir frier, picke the locke,

This gere doth cotton hansome.

Troubl. Raigne of King John, p. 1.

tWhat meanes this? doeth he dote so much of this strange harlot indeede? now I perceive how this geare cottens? I scarse found it out now at last, foolish man that I am. Terence in English, 1614.

COTTYER. A cottager. Cottier in old

French law was the same as roturier. See Cotgrave.

Himself goes patch'd like some bare coltyer, Lest he might ought the future stock appeyre. Hall, Sat., IV, ii, 9.

Cotin also meant a cottage. See Lacombe's Dict. du vieux Langage. tom. ii.

†To COUCH. To lay, to place together.

Opus emplecton, Vitru. cum frontibus utrinque politis, medium naturalis saxorum materia temere collocata farcit. εμπλεκτον. Worke wel knit and couched togither.

Nomenclator, 1585.

Coagmentum. Plauto, commissura, Arcta et compressa conjunctio, propriè lapidum. σύστημα, συναφη, ἄρμη. Jointure, attachement, liaison. The close joyuing or conching of things together, properly of stones. Ibid.

+COUCHANT. Lying.

The place, manor house, or farme of husbandris, where this officer is conchant and abiding.

Withals Dictionaris, ed. 1608, p. 77.

†COVE. This cant term for a man is found at an early period. cove in the following extract means of course a gentleman.

The rule and recorder, And mouth of the order
As priest of the game,
And prelate of the same. And presate of the same.

There's a gentry core here.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

COVENT. Old French, as well as English, for convent. Hence the Mr. Todd name of Covent-garden. has abundantly exemplified the word. I shall only add the authority of the venerable Latimer :

Neither doe I now speake of my selfe and my count, as the begging fryers were wont to doe. I have enough, I thanke God, and I neede not to begge.

Sermons, fol. 92 b.

Coventry is not supposed to be derived from this, but from Cune, a small river on which it stands.

COVENTRY BLUE. The dyeing of blue thread was formerly a material part of the trade of Coventry. This thread was much used for working or embroidering upon white linen.

I have lost my thimble, and a skein of Coventry blue
I had to work Gregory Lichfield a handkerchief.

B. Jons. Gipsies Metam.

And she gave me a shirt collar, wrought over with no counterfeit stuff. G. What, was it gold? J. Nay, 'twas better than gold. G. What was it? J. Right Corentry blue. Geo. a Greene, O. Pl., iii, p. 29. I have heard that the chief trade of Coventry was heretofore in making blew thread, and that the towne was rich ever upon that trade. W. Stafford.

COVENTRY CROSS. This splendid and ornamental structure, now removed to the grounds of Stourhead, was once, in great part, covered with gilding. Speaking of Coventry, Drayton says,

Her walls in good repair, her ports so bravely built, Her halls in good estate, her cross so rickly gilt. Polyolb., xiii, p. 922.

+COVERING-SEEDS. The old popular name for a well-known description of sweetmeats.

Sweetmeats.

To make each sort of comfits, rulgarly called coveringseeds, &c., with sugar.—You must provide a pan of brass or tin, to a good depth, made with ears to hang over a chafing dish of coals, with a ladle and alice of the same metal; then cleanse your seeds from dross, and take the finest sugar well beaten; put to each quarter of a pound of seeds, two pounds of sugar; the seeds being first well dried, and your sugar melted in this order, put into the pan three pounds of sugar, adding a pint of spring water, stirring it till it be moistened, and suffer it to melt well over a clear fire till it ropes, after that, set it upon hot embers, not suffering it to boil, and so from your ladle let it drop upon the seeds, and keep the bason wherein they are continually moving, and between every coat rub and dry them as well as may be; and when they have taken up the sugar, and by the motion are rolled into order, dry them in an oven, or before a fire, and they will be hard and white. The Rick Closet of Rarities.

VETISE. Covertousness Fr

COVETISE. Covetousness, Fr.

But you think, Curius,
Tis covetise hath wrought me? if you love me
Change that unkind conceit. B. Jons. Catil., ii, 3. Thy mortal consists perverts our laws,
And tears our freedom from our franchis'd hearts. Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 240.

Used also by Spenser.

†But, the chiefe end, this precept aims at, is
To quench in us the coals of covetize. Du Bartas.
†Pigmalion, a sinfull wretch of all that ever raignde,
Whom covetize did blinds so sore, and rage of furie strainde,

That unaware, with privic knife before the altars pure,
pure,
He alew Sicheus, and of his sisters love he thought him sure.

Virgil, by Phaer, 1600.

COVIN. An act of conspiracy between two or more persons to defraud others. from an old French word of the same meaning. Still in use as a law term. Fraud in general.

Where purchase comes by covin and deceit.

Gasc. Steele Glas., 1. 296. Where custumers conceale no covine usde.

1bid., 1111.

† Mo. Why laugh you every dele? so mote I gone.
This goeth not aright; I dread some cosis.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.
†Into this coses was Pheliche thrust.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638.

The old preterite of can or con, to know: now used chiefly as an auxiliary sign of a mood. Often written without the l. See COUTH.

That he had found out one, their soveraigu lord to be, Com'n of the race of kings, and in their country born, Could not one English word; of which he durst be sworn.

Drays, Polyolb., ix, p. 835.

It written was there in th' Arabian toong, Which toong Orlando perfect understood;

But at this time it him so deeply stoong, It had bin well that he it never cond.

Harr. Ariosto, xxiii, 85.

+COUNSEL. A matter to be kept secret.

And what they did there must be counsel to me. Because they lay long the next for coverage to me,
Because they lay long the next day;
And I made haste home; but I got a good piece
Of bride cake, and so came away.

Ballad of Robin Hood and Clorinda.

+COUNTENANCE. A portrait of a person was sometimes called a copy of his countenance.

Of this countersance.

I must be bold to tell you I took it rather as a copy of your countenance than any thought could take its original from the discretion I ever own'd you lady of.

Osborne's Works, ed. 1673, p. 540.

There were two prisons †COUNTER. called the Counter in the city of London; one in the Poultry, the other in Wood-street.

The captains of this insurrection
Have tane themselves to armes, and cam but now
To both the Counters, wher they have releast
Sundrie indebted prisoners. Play of Sir Thomas More.
I appeale from Newgate to any of the two worshippfull Counters. There was also a Counter in Southwark.

Five jayles or prisons are in Southwarke plac'd, The Counter (once S. Margreta church defac'd), The Marshalsea, the Kings Bench, and White Lyon, Where some like Tantalna, or like Ixion, The pinching paine of hunger daily feele,

Turn'd up and downe with fickle fortunes wheele

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+COUNTER-BOOK.

Though base and trebles, fortune did me grant, And meanes, but yet alas, they are too small. Yet to make up the musicke, I must looke The tenor in the cursed counter-books.

Taylor's Workes, 1680. +To COUNTER-RUSH. A term in jousting.

JOUSTING.

A gentleman who was none of the wisest was deputed judge in jest of a just betweene two other gentlemen. And one saying unto him, Sir, how thinke you of this last course, bath not maister N. lost his launce? meaning that he had not counter-rush! it upon his adversarie; whereunto he answered, If maister N. have lost his launce, let him seeke it out againe.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Pancies, 1614.

†COUNTERFAIT. An insincere convert?

A drunken Christian and a Jewiah Christian being at tearmes of brabble, the drunkard call'd the counterfait a drunken companion, and the counterfaite called hum a Jew. The next day they met againe, and the drunkard then said unto the Jew: Sirrah, take thy Jew to thyselfe, and restore me my drunkard againe. Copley's Wits, Fits, and Pancies, 1614.

COUNTERFEIT. A portrait; a likeness.

What find I here,
Fair Portia's counterfeit? What demigod
Hath gone so near creation? Morch of Ven., iii, 2.
Thou draw'st a counterfeit best in all Athens.

Thou draw at a counterfett Dest in all Alberts.

Thou of A. v, l.

A certain painter brought Apelles the counterfaile of a face in a table.

Lytic's Euphues, p. 55.

Next after her was borne the counterfeit of the princesse of Elis.

Pembr. Arcad., p. 58.

COUNTERGATE. Some known place in Windsor. Probably, a gate which went out by the counterguard of the castle, consequently by the fosse, or ditch.

Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk by the connicr-gate; which is as hateful to me as the reck of a lime-kiln.

Merry W. W., iii, 3. †COUNTERLET. Perhaps a bye-path.

The highest of the highest rancke is set,

To tread this maze, not free from counterlet.

Norden's Labyrinth of Mans Life, 1614.

†COUNTER-MAKE. To make things in contradiction to what one has made

He all this time was content, tooke the chalke in his hand, and began to make and unmake and countermake a many lines and dashes upon the cloth and so continued a good space. Till at the last she marveilling thereat, ask'd him what he did? he answered: I measure how many sizzars these sheeres will make.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

COUNTERPANE. The corresponding copy of a deed, now called the counterpart. Noticed by our old dictionaries. "Schedulæ antigraphum." Coles.

Read, scribe; give me the counterpans.

B. Jons. Induct. to Barth. Pair. COUNTERPOINT, now changed to counterpane. A covering for a bed, formed in regular divisions. From the same word in French. Latined by Coles, "Cadurcum contrapunctum." The change of the last syllable to pane, probably arose from the idea of panes, or square openings, applied of panes, or square openings, appearable also to some parts of dress.

In ivory coffers have stuffd my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras, counterpoints,
Costly apparel, &c.
Then I will have rich counterpoints, and musk.

Knack to know a Kn., cited by Steevens.

†Imbroidered coverlets, or counterpoints of purple silk.

North's Platarck, p. 39.

+COUNTER-SCALE.

Balance. To compare their university to yours, were to cast New-inne in consterscale with Christ-Church colledge, or the alms houses on Tower hill to Suttons hospitall. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+COUNTER-STRIVE. To strive together with. The word occurs in A Herrings Tayle, 1598.

+To COUNTERWAIT. To lay in wait against any one.

He that his wife will counterwait and watch.
Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 440.

COUNTESS, ENGLISH. The English dame alluded to in the following passage, was probably the countess of Essex, afterwards of Somerset, whose infamous amours and plots ended in the poisoning of sir Thomas Overbury. He will not brook an empress, though thrice fairer Than ever Maud was; or higher spirited Than Cleopatra, or your English countess.

B. and Fl. Nice Valour, i, 1.

She is much more severely attacked. as she well deserved, by Rich. Braithwaite, if he was, as is supposed, the author of the Honest Ghost. Near the end of the first part he has an epitaph, entitled, "Upon our Age's Messalina, insatiat Madona, the matchless English Corombona," p. 99. this poem the chief features of her delinquency are touched with a strong hand. She was tried with her husband, and condemned, in 1616; but both were pardoned afterwards, to the everlasting disgrace of James.

COUNTY, for count: or a nobleman in general.

A ring the cosmiy wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house,
From son to son, some four or five descents. Arom son to son, some four or five descents.

All's Well, iii, 7.

Gismund, who loves the countie Palurin.

Arg. to Tancr. & Gism., O. Pl., ii, p. 165.

Applied to Orsino, duke of Illyria:

pplied to Urshio, concerning the first same peerish messenger,
The county's man, he left this ring behind him.
Twelfth N., 1, 5.

To COURB. To bend, or stoop. Se

courber, Fr. rber, Fr.
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea courb and woo, for leave to do it good.
Haml., iii, 4.

The word is found in the older writers. The modern editors of Shakespeare have absurdly printed it curb.

To COURE. Usually written to cower or cowre, to stoop or bend over anything. Couver, Fr.

They course so over the coles, theyr eyes be bleard with smooke.

Gamm. Gurt., O. Pl., ii, p. 9.

It is so spelt by Spenser also. †To COURSE. To beat with a stick.

Accommodé. Fitted, apted, applied; furnished, accommodated; also, helped, assisted; also coursed, or cudgelled.

†COURSE-A-PARK. A country game often alluded to by old writers.

At course-a-park, without all doubt,
He should have first been taken out
By all the maids i'th town:
Though lustly Roger there had been,
Or little George upon the green,
Or Vincent of the Crown. Witts Recreations.

The following is a curious enumeration of rustic sports.

At doore expecting him his mother sate,
Wondring her boy would stay from her so late;
Framing for him unto her selfe excuses.
And with such thoughts gladly her selfe abuses:
As that her sonne, since day grew old and weake,
Staid with the maids to runne at baribreake: Staid with the maids to runne at barlibreake: Or that he cours' d a parke with females fraught, Which would not run except they might be caught. Or in the thickets layd some wily snare To take the rabbet, or the pourblinde hare. Or taught his douge to eatch the climbing kid: Thus shepheards doe; and thus she thought he did.

Browne, Brit. Past.

COURT-CHIMNEY. Probably a chimney built in the corner of a room. They use no rost, but for themselves and their houshold; nor no fire, but a little court chimnis in their owne chamber. Greens's Quip, J.c., Harl. Misc., v, 414, repr.

Or else it was something of a stove. +COURT-CUP. The meaning of the word is not quite clear in the first of these extracts.

Marry, hee doth not use to weare a night-cap, for his hornes will not let him; and yet I know a hundred, as well headed as he, that will make a jolly shift with as well headed as ne, that will make a joint with a court-cup on their crownes, if the weather bee coide.

Nashe's Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

Let t dry in an ashen dish, otherwise call'd a court-cup, and let it stand in the dish till it be dry, and it cup, and let it stand in the will be like a saucer.

True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676. COURT-CUPBOARD. Apparently a kind of moveable closet or buffet, in which plate and other articles of luxury were displayed.

luxury were displayed.

Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate.

Rom. and Jul., 1, 5.

Place that [a watch] o' the court-cupboard, let it lie rull in the view of her thief-whorsh eye.

Roaring G., O. Pl., vi, 77.

Here shall stand my court-cupboard, with its furniture of plate.

Mons. D'Olive, Anc. Dr., iii, 394.

Elsewhere it is called a cupboard of plate :

Is the cupboard of plate set out?

A Trick to catch. &c., Anc. Dr., v. 217. It was therefore evidently moveable, and only brought out on certain occa-It was sometimes adorned with carved figures:

With a lean visage, like a carved face
On a court-cupboard. Corbet, Iter Boreale, p. 2. It is evidently the same as is called in Comenius's Janua, ed. 1659, a "livery cupboard."

Golden and gilded beakers, cruzes, great cups, crystal glusses, cans, tankards, and two-ear'd pots, are brought forth out of the cup-loard, and glass case, and being rinsed and rub'd with a pot-brush, are set on the livery-cupboard.

No. 562.

COURT HOLY-WATER. A proverbial phrase for flattery, and fine words without deeds: borrowed from the French, who have their eau bénite de la cour, in the same sense. Ray has it in his Proverbs, p. 184.

O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Lear, iii, 2. Coles renders it in Latin, "Promissa rei expertia, fumus aulicus."

The Diction. Comique of Le Roux thus defines the French phrase: "On dit d'un homme qui fait beaucoup de complimens, ou de promesses sur lesquelles il ne faut pas faire grand fondement, que c'est de l'eau bénite de la cour, parcequ'on n'est point chiche de belles promesses à la cour, non plus que d'eau bénite à l'église.

The phrase is still current in France. In 1812 appeared a comedy by M. Picard, the title of which was Les Prometteurs, ou l'Eau bénite de la Cour. of which an account is given in the Esprit des Journaux for October, 1812, p. 59. Eau bénite de la cave, is now jocularly used for strong liquors.

COURTLAX, or CURTLAX. A short, crooked sword; one of the various forms which have been given in English to the French word coutelas, as curtleaxe, &c., many of them implying some reference to an axe, though coutelas is made only from cultellus. His curtlax by his thigh, short, hooked, fine.
Fairf. Tasso, ix, 82.

+COURT-NAP. An outside polish?

We are cheated by a court-nap.
Skirley's Gentleman of Venice, 1655. A COURTNOLL. Some appendage to a court, but what does not appear. Now every lowt must have his son a courtholl.

Greene's Onin. &c.

In the Harl. Misc., vol. v, p. 403, ed. 1810, it is explained, "with a head dressed like that of a courtier;" but the son is said to be, not to wear or have, a courtnoll, which seems to preclude that interpretation.

As bene the controle gay;
Yet chave a faile, that will not faile,
To threahe both night and day.

Howell's driver of Amitic, 1568.

Courteousness.

+COURTSHIPMENT.

Then she relates how Carlia
The lady here strippes her array,
And girdles her in home spunne bayes,
Then makes her conversant in layes Of birds, and swaines more innocent That kenne not guile or courtshipment.

Lovelace's Lucasta, 1649.

+COURTY. A courtier.

COURTY. A courtier.

I cannot play the fool rightly, I mean, the physician, without I have licence to expaleat on the disease. But (my good lord) more briefly, I shall declare to you like a man of wisdom and no physician, who deal all in simples, why men are melancholy. First, for your courties. Chapman's Revenge for Honour, 1654. So oft their shady vail, that every tree, In wreaths where love lay wrapt in mystery, Held their included names, a subtile way, To the observant courties to betray Their serious folly, which, from being their own Delight, was now the sport oth' pages grown.

Chamberlayne's Pharoanids, 1659.

DUTH. The old preferrite of can. to COUTH. The old preterite of can, to know; the same as coud or could. See the latter.

Well could hee tune his pipe, and frame his still.

Spens. Shep. Kal., Jan., v, 10. E. K., who probably was Spenser himself, thus comments upon it: "Couth cometh of the verb conne, to know, or to have skil. As well interpreteth the same, the worthy sir Tho.

Smith, in his booke of government."

As I my little flocke on Ister banke,
A little flocke, but well my pipe they couth,
Did piping lead.

397.

†COW. "In our common law." says Howell, 1659, "there are some proverbs that carry a kind of authority with them, as that which began in Henrie the Fourth's time, He that bulls the cow must keep the calf,"

COW, for coward.

That Carisophus, my master, was no man, but a cose, In takinge so many blowes, and give never a blow agayn.

Dam. and Pith., O. Pl., i, 315. The derivation of coward is doubted. It certainly might come from couard, French. But Menage says that couhart is German for it, and is made from cou and hart, which is the same as the English, cow-heart. It may therefore be either derived from the German, or originally English. A cow is notoriously a timid animal, considering her strength and formidable appearance. We find here cowe used alone, in the sense of coward, and shall see cowish also, for timid. would not go further for a derivation Codardo, in Italian, is clearly made from coda, one that drops his tail in fear, or remains in the tail or rear of the army; the French word may be made from it, and the English from that; or the resemblance may See Todd, who has much be casual. on the subject. There can be no doubt that the English word is derived from the French, or Anglo-Norman, and these "doubts" about it deserve no attention.

+COWCUMBER was the old mode of spelling cucumber, most in use.

Cucumis, cucumer . . . Concombre. A co

COWISH. Dastardly, timid.

It is the cowish tenor of his spirit That dares not undertake. Lear. iv. 2. We have also to cow in common use. for to overcome with terror. I have not met with any dictionary which gives cow-hearted, yet I am convinced that the word may be found.

+COW-LADY. The insect now called a lady-cow, or lady-bird.

A paire of buskins they did bring
Of the con-ladyer corall wing;
Powder'd o're with spots of jet,
And lin'd with purple-violet. Muserum Delicie, 1656.

COX, Captain. A Warwickshire gentleman, who, by his knowledge of old legends and customs, contributed to the entertainment of queen Elizabeth at Kenilworth castle. From Lancham's Letter describing those entertainments. it appears that he had a collection of old books, curious at that time. but which now would be nearly inestimable. He is introduced by Ben Jonson, in his Masque of Owls, and with allusion to the sports above mentioned:

This captain Cos, by St. Mary, Was at Bullen with king Harry: And (if some do not vary)

And (if some do not vary)
Had a goodly library;
By which he was discerned
To be one of the learned.
Vol. viii, p. 56, ed. Giff.
†Although we thus did th' heaving Spaniards boxe,
We lost noe man but only captains Coxe.

MS. addit., 14825, p. 246, Brit. Mus.

COXCOMB, that is, cock's comb. The cap of the licensed fool was often terminated at the top with a cock's head and comb, and some of the feathers. Hence it was often used for the cap itself. The fool in Lear.

therefore, alluding to his cap, says,
There, take my corcomb; why this fellow has banished two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him thou must needs wear my corcomb.

Lose, i. 4. Therefore it was often jocularly used to signify a head: He has broken my head across, and given sir Toby a bloody coscome too. Twelfth N., v. 1. As many coscome as you threw caps up, will be tumble down. Coriol., iv, 6. It is clearly an error to put this as the first sense. Afterwards, indeed. it came to mean a foolish conceited fellow, as it still does. Minshew exactly illustrates the primitive sense. COXON. The coxswain on shipboard.

About two o'clock in the morning, letters came from London by our cozon, so they waked me. Pepys's Diary, March 25th, 1660.

To COY. To decoy, allure, or flatter. This word is abundantly and judiciously illustrated by Mr. Todd, who shows clearly that it was currently used as an original word. Decoy is probably made from it. Also to stroke, or sooth with the hand, which is a species of allurement.

Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy.

Mids. N. Dr., iv, i.
And while she coys his sooty cheeks, and curles his sweaty top.

Warner, Alb. Engl., B. 6, p. 148.

COY, adj., seems to be used by Drayton for rare or curious: which is very analogous to its other senses.

hinalogous to the other sense. Shepherd, these things been all too coy for me, Whose youth is spent in jollity and mirth, Like hidden arts been better fitting thee. Eclogue 7, p. 1418.

COY, s., is also clearly used for a decoy,

in the following passage:

To try a conclusion, I have most fortunately made their pages our coyes, by the influence of a white powder.

Lady Alimony, act iii, sub fin.

COYSTRIL. See Coistrel. Coustrel has been erroneously used sometimes for kestrel, a bad species of hawk. See also CASTREL.

+To make a COZEN of one. To deceive him?

Ceive film:

Cassander, this old hermit, hearing it to be Callimachus his nephew, and understanding of the death of his brother, dissembled his griefe, although hee were glad to see things happen out so well, and determined with himselfe to make a cozen of his young nepew, untill hee had bought wit with the price of woe.

Lytie's Euphues.

COZIER. One who sows; probably from coser, Span. to sow; or cousu, Fr. Dr. Johnson interprets it a taylor, but Minshew, Phillips, Kersey, and Coles, say a botcher, or cobbler. Minshew gives the derivation from Spanish.

Do you make an alchouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coriers' catches, without any mitigation or remorse of voice?

Twelfik N., ii, 3.

Mr. Steevens, not with his usual sagacity, fancied cottyer, used by Hall, to be the same word; which certainly means cottager.

CRAB, ROASTED. This wild English apple, roasted before the fire and put into ale, was a very favorite indulgence in early times. So Robin Goodfellow says,

Offeliow says,
And sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab.

Mids. N. Dr., ii, 1.

So the oldest English ballad:

I love no rost, but a nut-browne toste, And a crab layd in the fire.

. Gamm. Gurton, ii, 1. |

And sit downe in my chayre, by my wife faire Alison, And tourne a crabbe in the fire, as mery as Pope Jone. Lom. sad Pith, O. Pl. 1, 223. Now a crab in the fire were worth a good grote, That I might quasife with captain Tom Toe-pot.

Like will to like, c. 21.

CRABAT, for cravat, in some editions of Hudibras; probably from a mistaken notion of its etymology. But Skinner was certainly right in deriving it from the Croat soldiers, who were called in French Cravates. Menage is very clear upon the subiect: "On l'appelle de la sorte, à cause que nous avons emprunté cette sorte d'ornement des Croates, qu'on appelle ordinairement Cravates." He then specifies the exact time when the fashion was assumed: "Ce fut en 1636 que nous prismes cette sorte de collet des cravates, par le commerce que nous eumes en ce tems-là en Allemagne, au sujet de la guerre que nous avions avec l'empereur." Origines de la L. Fr. The same origin is given by Prevost, in the Manuel Lexique. Coles has it crabbat, and translates it "Sudarium linteum complicatum."

The handkerchief about the neck, Canonical crabat of Smec.

Hadib., I, iii, v, 1165. It is crabat also in Townley's edition, vol. i, p. 292.

In his poem of Du Val, Butler seems to have written cravat:

To understand cravats and plumes, And the most modish from the old perfumes. Stanza 3

This latter form is still in use. this tacted the second of the +CRACHED. Infirm; broken.

On Monday or Tuesday next commyng, I entende to departe hens, commensyng and contynuyng my jorneys towardes your highnes, withe suche diligence, as myn olde and cracked body may endure.

State Papers, i, 278.

A boy; generally a pert, lively boy: one that cracks or boasts. There is no occasion for referring to the Icelandic for its derivation.

I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was but a crack, not thus high.

3 Hen. IV. iii, 2.

Since we are turn'd cracks, let us study to be like cracks; practise their language and behaviours, and not with a dead imitation; act freely, carelessly, and capriciously, as if our veins ran with quicksilver.

B. Jons. Oynth. Rev., ii, 1.

It is a rogue, a wag, his name is Jack,
A notable dissembling lad, a crack.

Four Prentices, O. Pl., vi, 554.

tFrost and snow will be every whit as scarce in this month as thunder and lightning at Christmas. Warming-pans will be scoured bright, and hung up behind the kitchen door as an ornament. Muffs and sable tippets will be plenty in Long-lane, where you may have as great choice in every brokers shop, as you may of cracks in the eighteen-penny gallery.

London Bewitched, 1708.

+CRACK. A breach.

Liquido possum jurăre, I may take an oath with a safe conscience: I may sweare without impeachment, or cracke of conscience.

Terence in English, 1614. †CRADE. A crate, or wicker basket for glass or crockery.

Amongst the rest, six jolly blades
After these crowders came,
Who on their shoulders carry'd crades,

Who on their shoulders carry'd crades,
With glasses in the same.
The Pleasant History of Jack Horner, n. d.
For crowders they are rogues I know,
And crades-men they are worse;
They cozen all where-e'er they go,
And pick each lass's purse.

†CRAFTS-MASTER. A master or superior in cunning.

Scudilo captaine of the squires, under the cloke of a mature somewhat rude and uncivile, in cunning persuasion his crafts-master, who, by way of flattering words, intermingled with serious matter, was the onely man of all other that overcame and woon him at last to set forward in his journey.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus 1609

Likewise, by the suggestion of Musonianus the philosopher, Eustachius, one that for persuading was his evafts-master, carrying with them missives from the emperor, and gifts beside.

To CRAKE. To boast. Kraecken,

Dutch. I make this the primitive rather than the substantive, on account of the etymology. To crack, in the same sense, is of rather more recent usage, and is probably only a corruption of this.

REOFFUPION OF THIS.

As little do I esteeme those that boast of their ancesiours, and have themselves no vertue, as I doe those that crake of their love, and have no modestic.

Emph. and his Engl., K, 2.

She was bred and nurst

She was bred and nurst
On Cynthus hill, whence sho her name did take;
Then is she mortal borne, howso ye crake.

Sp. P. Q., VII, vii, 50.

†No less than ten poundes, sir, will serve your turne,
To carie in your pursse about with ye,
To crake and brag in tavernes of your monie.

Play of Sir Thomas More.

†With him I threatned to be quite, and great things did I crake.

†But I write more than thou canst crake or cry.

Overs's Epigrams Englished, 1077.

CRAKE, s. A brag or boast.

but his. 5. A bing of country of the country of the Virgil, by Vicars, 1632. CRAKER. A boaster.

These barking whelpes were never good biters;
Ne yet great crakers were ever great fighters.

Dam. & Pith., O. Pl., i, p. 215.

+CRAMOCK. Either equivalent to, or a misprint for, Camock.

Full hard it is a cramocke strayght to make, Or crooked logges with wainscot fine to frame. Mirour for Magistrates, 1587.

CRAMP-RINGS. We find these rings mentioned in several old authors. both in verse and prose. Their form probably was not material, but their supposed virtue in preventing the cramp was conferred by solemn consecration on Good Friday, among the ceremonies of that great day. Our kings of the Plantagenet line were used to give such rings. See Brand's Pop. Antiq., 4to ed., vol. i, p. 128. There was an ancient office of consecrating cramp-rings, which appears to have been revived in England in 1694: this date being appended to a copy of the office printed in 1789, by the antiquary Ducarel.]

I. Robert Moth, this tenth of our king, Give to thee, Joan Potluck, my biggest cramp ring.

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 250.

Because Goshawk goes in a shag-ruff band, with a face sticking up in't, which shows like an agget set in a cramp ring, he thinks I'm in love with him. Roaring G., O. Pl., vi, p. 86.

They were even recommended by physicians:

The kinge's majestic hath a great helpe in this mat-ter, in hallowing crampe ringes, and so given without money or petition. Borde's Breviary of Health, ch. 337, ed. 1598.

Lord Berners wrote from Spain to have some cramp-rings sent to him by "my lorde cardinall, his grace." Brand, ut supr.

+CRANE-COLOURED.

Also I give to Adam Ashame my hose with the frendge and lined with crans-coloured silk, which gifts I will to be delivered immediately after my decease.

Will, 1573.

CRANES IN THE VINTRY, THE THREE. The Vintry in Thamesstreet, which still gives its name to a ward of the city of London, was early a royal wharf, for landing foreign wines. The three cranes were originally three of the machines, still so called, for lifting the vessels of wine out of the ships; but there was also a tavern with that sign. ners' Hall is still in that part.

Then the three cranes lane, so called not only of a signe of three cranes at a taverne dore, but rather of three strong cranes of timber, placed on the Vintrie wharfe by the Thames side, to crane up wines there.

None, p. 191.

In whom is as much vertue, trueth, and honestie,
As there are true fathers in the three craines of the Fintree.

Dam. Frith., O. Pl., 1, 283.

From thence shoot the bridge, child, to the crases of from therees above the Vintry,
And see there the gimblets how they make their entry.
B. Jons. Dov. is an Ass. j. l. The wits of those days did not despise the city. The three cranes is mentioned among their places of resort:

A pox o these pretenders to wit! your three crasss, mitre, and mermaid men!

B. Jons. Barth. Fair, Induction. Stowe will enable us to account for this. There was good eating and drinking to be had there:

Betweene the wine in shippes, and the wine to be sold in tavernes, was a common cookerie, or cooke's row. There, at a still earlier period, he says, The cookes dressed meate, and sold no wine, and the taverner sold wine, and dressed no meat for sale. London, p. 190.

+To CRANGLE. To twist. This verb is now used in the north of England in the sense of to waddle.

And this he shortly did, the thing to prove:
It quickned lo, and on the ground gan move.
(O miracle) he saw without all faile,
It grew a serpent fell with head and taile;
Which crassling crept, and ranne from trod to trod
In many a knot.

Du Barta.

Du Bartas CRANK, s. A cheat, an impostor. Mr. Todd has produced two examples of this word from Burton, and I know of no other; but they are decisive. I insert them here:

A lawyer of Bruges hath some notable examples of such counterfeit cranks. Anat. of Mel., p. 159. Thou art a counterfeit crank, a cheater. Ibid., p. 436. CRANK, adj. Brisk, lively, full of spirit. Ray gives it as an Essex word; but quotes a Mr. Brokesby as saying that it was also used in Yorkshire. Grose says it is Kentish. Spenser has usually been quoted for it, but other examples have since been found, even that of Dr. South. See Todd. I add one more:

You knew I was not ready for you, and that made you so cranke. Middlelon, Trick to catch, fc., B. S. The derivation is very uncertain; in Dutch and German it means just the contrary, sick; and so in Scotch. Skinner conjectures that it was once onkranck, that is, un-crank, not sick, and that it afterwards lost the negative particle; but this seems very improbable. †Even as fierce blasts fling flames, and cornfields burning, Or mountain flouds with swift careere o'returning.

O'reflow faire meads, o'respread crank corn, plow'd Tumble down headlong trees, nought upright stands.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

[Crank is used in a similar sense by Drayton :]

tLike Chanticleare he crowed crank. tLike Chanticious and And piped full merily.

Vol. iv, p. 1402, ed. 1753.

+CRANKLING. Winding; twisting.

Now, on along the crankling path doth keep, Then, by a rocke turnes up another way. Drayton. CRANTS. Garlands. It seems sufficiently proved that this is the right reading in Hamlet, and such the meaning of it, being a German word; and probably also Danish, as Rosencrantz, Rosy-garland, is the name of a character in the same play. It is certainly Icelandic. But how Shakespeare came to introduce a word so very unusual in our language, has not found it in some legend of Hamlet. Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial. Haml., v, 1.

vet been accounted for; probably he

No other example has been found.

CRAPLE. A claw.

And still he thought he felt their craples tare

Him by the heels, back to his ougly den.

G. Fletcher, Chr. Victory, B. 2.

Used also by Spenser.

CRAYER, CRARE, or sometimes changed to CRAY. A small vessel. Craiera, low Latin, craier, old French. The word occurs in our old statutes.

O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The coze, to shew what coast thy aluggish cre Might easiliest harbour in?

Cyn Cymb., iv. 2. Let him venture

In some decay'd crare of his own: he shall not Rig me out, that's the short on't.

B. and Pl. Captain, i. 9. The reading there differs, but this is clearly right: Sending them come from Catana, in little fisher botes, and small crayers.

Adiew, desire, the source of all my care;
Despaire tells me my weale will neare renus
Till thus my soul doth passe in Charon's crare.

The. Watson, in Engl. Helicon, p. 140, repr.

See CRAY.

The keele and crass were named By the Phenetians first: the brigandine The Rhodians rear'd: the canoes now in trade In India by the Germans were first made.

Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

+To CRASE. To crush, or bruise: to weaken.

Or random shot which wall would pearce, but cannot crass. A Herrings Tayle, 1598.

They also put no childe to nurse, nor mend with doung their ground,

Nor medicine do receyve to make their crased bodies

Barnabe Googe's Naogeorgus, 1570.

+CRASH. Entertainment. Probably a cant word.

The blades that want cash, Have credit for crush, They'l have sack what ever it cost um,

They do not pay,
Till another day,
Manet alta mente repostum.

Witts Recreations. 1654.

†CRASY, or CRAZY. Infirm.

The lively portraiture of the citic of Rome, in her flower and youthfull daies of growth, in her full yeares and strength, in her old age also and crasic time full of diseases. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+CRASINESS. An infirmity.

and being afrighted with this ominous signe, himselfe, as the destinies hastened his end, went on apace the more resolutely, and came to Tarsus, where hee got a light ague; but supposing that all danger of this crassinesses of his, might bee shaken off by stirring in his travaile he came by difficult and cumbrous wayes to Mopsuestia. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+CRASSY.

Arithmetick would erre exceedingly,
Forgetting to devide and multiply;
Geometry would lose the altitude,
The crassic longitude and latitude;
And musick in poore case would be o're-throwne,
But that the goose quill pricks the lessons downe.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CRATCH. A manger; particularly that in which our Saviour was laid. Créche, Fr. The word is still used in Roman Catholic countries, in that particular sense. The abbe Prévost says, "Nom qu'on donne à la mangeoire des bœufs, et qui est consacré par la naissance de Jésus Christ." Manuel Lexique.

The sun reduced the solemnized day
On which, a king laid in a cratch to find,
Three kings did come conducted from the east.
Fanshaw's Lusiad, v, 68.

Who that had seene him sprawling and wringing in the cratch—could say other than, Hee hath no forme Bishop Hall, Works, p. 453.
When our Lord lay in the cratch, the oxe and the asse fell down on their knees and worshipped Him, and eat no more of the hay. Patrick, Dev. of Rom. Ch., p. 16.
†There in a cratch a jewell was brought forth, More then ten thousand thousand worlds is worth, There did the humane nature and divine.

The godhead with the manhood, both combine.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

If I all things should be writ which erst was done

By Jesus Christ (Gods everlasting sonne).

From cratch to crosse, from cradle to his tombe,

To hold the bookes, the world would not be roome.

This opens to us the meaning of a childish game, corruptly called scratch-cradle, which consists in winding packthread double round the hands, into a rude representation of a manger, which is taken off by the other player on his hands, so as to assume a new form, and thus alternately for several times, always changing the appearance. The art consists in making the right changes. But it clearly meant originally the cratch-cradle; the manger that held the Holy Infant as a cradle.

Coles has, "A cratch for horses, præsepe."

CRAVEN. Recreant, beaten, cowardly. In the old appeal or wager of battle, in our common law, we are told, on the high authority of lord Coke, that the party who confessed himself wrong. or refused to fight, he was to pronounce the word cravent, and judgment was immediately given against him. When battle had been joined, if the appellant cried cravent he lost liberam legem, that is, the right of such appeal in future; but if the appellee, he was to be hanged. See Jacobs, and other Law Dictionaries. Mr. Todd has given the various opinions of the origin of this word; but this is clearly the right. Its remoter etymology is the same as that of to crave; i. e., crafian, Sax.

He is a craven and a villain else.

Hen. V, iv, 7.

Very naturally transferred to a beaten cock:

No cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.

Tam. of Shr., ii, 1.

The verb to craven is also used by Shakespeare and others.

+CRAVING.

Some stand up t. the ankles, some the knees,
Some to the brest, some dive above the crowne;
Of this her naked fellow nothing sees,
Saving the troubled waves, where she slid downe;
Another sinkes her body by degrees,
And first her foot, and then her legge doth drowne;
Some their faint fellowes to the deepe are crasing,
Some sit upon the banke their white legs laving.

Heywood's Troin Britanica, 1609.

CRAY. A corruption of crare or crayer, a sort of small vessel.

A miracle it was to see them grown
To ships, and barks, with gallies, bulks, and crayes.

Harr. Ariost., XXXIX, st. 28.

After a long chase, took this little cray,
Which he suppos'd him safely should convey.

Drayt. Miseries of Q. Marg.

The same author has even changed it to crea:

to crea:

Some shell or little crea,
Hard labouring for the land, on the high-working sea.

Polyote., xxii.
See Crare.

†CRAYZE. Perhaps means a wild fellow.

Books old and young on heap they flung,
And burnt them in the blazes,—
Tom Dekker, Haywood, Middleton,
And other wand ring crayees.

Songs of the London Prentices, p. 96.

†CREAK. To cry creak, to yield, to repent.

Palinodiam canere: to turne taile, to cry creake.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 575.

CREEPING TO THE CROSS. See

CREEPLE; written by some authors for cripple, from a notion of its being derived from creep, which is not improbable, though other etymologies have been suggested. See Todd. She, she is dead; she's dead! When thou know'st Thou know'st how lame a creeple this world is.

Donne, Anat. of World, v, 238.

†Le vicillard qui est sur le bord de la fosse. A very crooked old man: a drooping olde man: a creeple.

†From a preacher in buff, and a quarter-staff-steeple, From th' unlimited soveraigne power of the people, From a kingdom that crawles on its knees like a creeple. Rump Songs.

CRESSET, or CRESSET-LIGHT. An open lamp, exhibited on a beacon, carried upon a pole, or otherwise suspended. The etymology is probably croiset, a crucible, or open pot, which always contained the light; not croissette, its connection with a small cross being very forced and dubious. Cotgrave, under Falot, best describes it: "A cresset light (such as they use in play-houses) made of ropes wreathed, pitched, and put into small and open cages of iron." If he had added, in open pots or pans, the description would have been complete.

A burning cresset was shewed out of the steeple, which suddenly was put out and quenched.

Holisaket, vol. ii, F f f, 3 b.

The which would immediately make his doings shine through the world, as a cresset-light upon the toppe of a kepe, or watch-tower. North's Plat. Lisses, 944, C. The heavenly luminaries, being seen on high, are often compared by the poets to cressets:

Which from the mountain, with a radiant eye,
Brav'd the bright crassit of the glorious sky.

Drayton, Owl, p. 1320.

The word is preserved from total disuse by being found in Shakespeare and Milton. The form of a portable cresset may be seen in many old prints of night scenes.

+CREVISE. A streak, or channel. What, yet more crevises in your stockings? fie upon it, how complementall he is, and kisseth his hand as if he were in love with it. The Man in the Moone, 1009.

+CREVISH. The cray-fish. Fr.
The blond in veins, the sap in plants, the moisture
And lushious meat, in crevish, crab, and oyster;

That oak, and elm, and firr, and alder, cut Before the crescent have her cornets shut. Du Bartas. +CREVISSED. Channelled, ornamented with crevises.

Columna striata, Plin. Colomne canelée, creusée. A carved or crevissed piller, with long strakes or lines made therin.

Nomenciator.

CREWEL was, and is, a kind of fine worsted, chiefly used for working and embroidering. Hence Ben Jonson joins it with worsted, as nearly See extract under synonymous. The lexicographers in JAMSEY.] general have not understood this word, which is still not uncommon in trade.

> And may don Provost ride a feasting long. And may don Provost ride a feasting lon
> Ere we contribute a new creecel garter,
> To his most worsted worship.
> Did you not walk the town
> In a long cloak, half compass? an old hat
> Lin'd with vellure, and on it, for a band,
> A skein of crimson crewel?

B. & Fl. Noble Gent., v, 1. Theobald unfortunately interpreted it "ends of coarse worsted." Scornf. Ladv. ii. 1.

The word, of course, often occasioned puns, from its resemblance to the adjective cruel. See the note on "cruel garters." Lear, ii, 4. One of the examples introduces a lady working a bed with crewel, which is the kind of use still made of it.

+CRIBBLE-BREAD. Bread made of fine bran.

Crible bread, panis vulgaris, secundarius vel cibarius. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 177. †CRICH. A cratch, or manger.

CRATCH. Prescpe. La cresche, auge d'un estable, mangeoire. A crib: a crich, or manger. Nomenclator.

+CRICKET. A low stool, with four legs.

Mack. And what'l you do, when you are seated in The throne, to win your subjects love, Philenis?

Phil. I'l stand upon a cricket, and there make Fluent orations to 'em; call 'em trusty And well-beloved, loysil, and true subjects.

Cartwright's Lady Errent, 1651.

†CRICKLE-CRACKLE. Appears to mean simply a crackling noise.

Kusse me, my honest Dick, for we this night
With crickle-crackle will the gobblins fright.

Historic of thisso and Bellema, 1638, p. 130.

†CRIMINOUS. Criminal.

As manifest usurers, sodomites, and other criminous persons, are forbidden to make testaments themselves, or to dispose their goods by their last willes.

Sunisburns on Willes, ed. 1591, p. 903.

To shrink; to crouch +CRINCH, v. together.

How now? what makes you sit downe so tenderly? you cristch in your buttocks like old father Pater patrie, he that was father to a whole countrey of bastards.

Trimming of Thomas Nashe, 1597.

+CRINGLE-CRANGLE. This term is still used in the northern dialects for a

The business being in this forwardness, the gentle-woman at the time appointed came, against which I had prepared a deal of scribble or cringle-crassife, and so from thence began to take the height of her fortune. English Rogue, p. 111. This quarter begins precisely where summer ends, when Don Phœbus enters that cringle-crangle, which the rablars would have to be a pair of heavenly scales, to weigh usurers consciences and bawds maidenheads. Poor Robin, 1789.

+CRINKLING. Rumpling, or crackling.

One that more admires the good wrinckle of a boote, the curious crinkling of a silke stocking, then all the wit in the world: one that loves no scholler but him whose tyred eares can endure halfe a day togither his filblow sonnettes of his mistresse, and her loving pretty creatures. The Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

CRIPPIN, or CREPINE. A part of a French hood, formerly worn; probably the fringe, as crepine still means in French. It is enumerated among the endless appurtenances of female dress:

Earerings, borders, erippies, shadowes, spots, and so many other trifles, as I want the words of arte to name them, time to utter them, and wit to remember them. Lyly's Mydas, v, 2.

Crepine is thus learnedly described by Menage, from Nicot: "C'est une facon de frange, entrelacée en losanges, ou autre façon, dont le fil pendant à icelle entrelassure est ondovant. Il semble venir de κράσπεδον. Grec. dont St. Matthieu. ou le traducteur d'icelui (ch. 14, et S. Marc, ch. 6), ont usé pour la crespine, ou frange, dont les peuples Orientaux usoient pour les bordures de leurs robes.'

CRISP, from crispus, Lat. Curled, as applied to hair. In modern usage it always implies something of brittle hardness, as in food that easily cracks under the teeth. Hence the application of it by our early writers, to water and clouds, seems to us the more extraordinary. Thus it is said that when Mortimer and Glendower fought, the river Severn

Hid his crisp head in the hollow bank. 1 Hen. IV, i, 3. By this epithet, when thus applied, was meant to be expressed the curl raised by a breeze on the surface of the water; whence curled is also used by some writers;

Your curls to curled waves, which plainly still appear The same in water now, that once in locks they were. Drayton, Polyolb., song 6.

It is also applied to the twisted form of the clouds:

With all th' abhorred births below crisp heav'n, Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine. Tim. Atk., iv. 3.

To which curled is also applied:

Be't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds.

CRISP, v. To curl. Milton probably had Shakespeare's expression in his mind when he employed this epithet:

How from that sapphire fount the crisped brooks, Bolling on orient pearl, and sands of gold, &c.

Par. Lost, iv, 237.

He has applied it also to express the twisted form of trees and bowers:

Along the crisped shades and bowers. Comus, 984. See Warton's note. Ben Jonson also has used it to express the effect of Zephyr upon water:

The rivers run as smoothed by his hand, Only their heads are crisped by his stroke.

Vision of Delight, vol. vi. p. 26.

Here it is properly applied to hair: So are those crisped, snaky, golden locks, Which make such wanton gambols with the wind. Mer. Ven., iii, 2.

+CRISPING-PIN, or CRISPING-WIRE. A curling-iron.

A CUITING-IFOD.

Pas. Talk we of swords, she asks what crisping-pins
And bodkins we could guess might easily be Rais'd through the common-wealth?

Carteright's Lady Errant, 1651.

That utensill or necessarie belonging to the daintie sort of women kinde, too fine to be good, I mean in huswiferie, which they call a bodkin, wier, curting pin, or crisping wier, calemistrum.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 276.

+CRISPLE. A curl.

The winde new crisples makes in her loose haire, Which nature selfe to waves recrispelled.

Godfrey of Bulloigne, 1594.

The use of this Curly. word in the following passage further illustrates the application of the two former to water:

Ther to water:

O beauteous Tiber, with thine easy streams
That glide as smoothly as a Parthian shaft,
Turn not thy crispy tides, like silver carl,
Back to thy grass-green banks to welcome us?

Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 281.

Crispy is quoted as in the Merchant of Venice, act iii, sc. 2, but there it is crisped.

CRITICK. A piece of criticism, now called a critique. Also the art of criticism itself. The alteration of criticism itself. this word took place very lately. Dryden wrote it critick; Pope adopted the new orthography, but preserved the practice of his time. See Elements of Orthoepy, p. 341.

But you with pleasure own your errors past,
And make each day a critique on the last.

And perhaps, if they were distinctly weighed, and duly considered, they would afford us another sort of logick and critick, than what we have hitherto been acquainted with.

Locks on Hum. Und.. iv. 31.

CROCHETEUR. An adopted French word, meaning a common porter. Why Mr. Seward says a pig-driver, I know not, unless from his whip.

Rescued? 'Sight I would
Have hired a crocketeur for two cardecnes,
To have done so much with his whip.

B. & Fl. Hon. Man's T., iii, 1.

The old editions have crohieture and acrocheture, evidently from not understanding the French term. Why he has a whip does not appear, but Cotgrave gives him, "Le crochet d'un crocheteur, the forke or crooked staffe, used by a burthen-bearing porter."

+CROCODILIAN. Like a crocodile: deceitful.

O what a crocodilian world is this, Compos'd of treach'ries and insnaring wiles! She cloaths destruction in a formal kiss, And lodges death in her deceitful smiles.

Ouarles's Emblems +CROE. A crew, or company. Whiting.

CROFT. A small home-close, in a farm. Some derive it from crypta, but it is pure Saxon.

This have I learnt
Tending my flocks hard by i' th' hilly crofts
That brow this bottom glade.

†CROGGEN. Seems to have been a jocular term for a Welshman.

Nor that terme Croggen, nickname of disgrace, Us'd as a by-word now in ev'ry place, Shall blot our bloud, or wrong a Welshmans name, Which was at first begot with Englands shame. Drayton.

+CROISANT. A crescent.

In these pavilions were placed fifteene Olympian knights, upon seates a little imbowed neere the forme of a croisant.

The Masque of the Inner Temple and Grayes Inne, 1612.

CRONE, or CROAN. Most commonly used for an old woman; some assert that it originally meant an old toothless sheep. There is strong temptation to derive it from xpóros or spóros.

See the etymologists.

Take up the bastard,
Take 't up, I say; give 't to thy cross.

Wint. T., ii, 3.

There is an old cross in the court, her name is Maquerelle.

Marry, let him alone

With temporal projume to remove the cross.

With temper'd poison to remove the crone.

B. Jons. Poolaster, iii, 5.

the old accent, which I believe was | + CRONOCATOR. A term in astrology, signifying apparently a planet in the ascendant.

ASCEN GARt.

In the 34 yere of my age, which was in the yere 1898, when Mars begans to be cronocator, untill the yere 1898 in November, at which tym he wente out, in the tyme, I said, of his rulinge, I never obteyned anythings, or broughte anything to passe that I wente aboute, or entended to doe, or that I was in hope of.

Forman's Disry.

CROSBITE, s. A swindler. See to CROSS-BITE.

Some cowardly knaves, that for feare of the gallowes leave nipping and foysting, become crosbite; knowing there is no danger therein but a little punishment, at most the pillorie, and that is saved with a little unguentum aureum.

R. Greene's Therees falling out, f.c., in Harl. Misc., viii, 389.

+CROSHABELL.

ROSHABELL. A prostitute.
But now the word refined being latest, and the authority brought from a climate as yet unconquered, the fruitfull county of Kent, they call them croskell, which is a word but lately used, and fitting with their trade, being of a lovely and courteous condition.

Jests of George Peels, B. d.

CROSS, s. Any piece of money, many coins being marked with a cross on one side. A cross meant also a misfortune or disappointment; hence many quibbles. The common people still talk of "crossing the hand with a piece of money."

For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you; yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you; for, I think you have no money in your purse.

As you like it, ii, 4.

†Now I have never a crose to bles

Now I goe a-mumming,
Like a poore pennilesse spirit,
Without pipe or druming,
Mariags of Witt and Wisdome, p. 31.

When Falstaff asks the Chief Justice for money, his lordship replies in the same punning style, Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. 2 Hen. IV. i. 2.

So the Steward also in Timon:

There is no crossing him in his humour,
Else I should tell him—well—i' faith I should,
When all's spent he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
Timon of A., i, 2.

i. e., he'd be furnished with crosses, or money, if he could.

I will make a crosse upon his gate; ye, crosse on,
Thy crosses be on gates all, in thy purse none.

Heywood's Epigrams.

Tom's Fortune.

Tom's Fortune.

Tom tells he's robb'd, and counting all his losses,
Concludes all's gone, the world is full of crosses,
If all be gone, Tom, take this comfort then, Thou'rt certain never to have crosse agen.
Witt's Recreations, Epigram 419.

Hence the saying, that it is necessary to have some piece of money in the pocket, however small, to keep the devil out; this was originally in allusion to the cross upon it, which was supposed to prevent his approach.

What would you have? The devil aleeps in my pocket, I have no cross to drive him from it.

Massing. Bashf. Lover, iii, 1
So long put he his hand into his purse, that at last the empty bottom returned him a writ of non est inventus; for well might the divel daunce there, for never a cross there was to keepe him backe.

B. Gresne's Never too Late, in Cens. Lit., viii, p. 16.

CROSS, CREEPING TO. The creeping to the cross was a popish ceremony of penance. It is particularly described in an ancient book of the ceremonial of the kings of England. purchased by the late duchess of Northumberland, and cited by Dr. Percy in a note on the Northumberland Household Book, p. 436.

You must read the morning mass.

You must read the morning mass,
You must oree pasto the cross,
Put cold ashes on your head,
Have a hair-cloth for your hed.
Merry Devil of Râm., O. Pl., v, 377.
We kiss the pix, see creepe the crosse, our beades we overrunne,
The convent has a legacie, who so is left undone.

Marner, Albions Engl. p. 115.

As there was a doctor that preached, the kings majesty hath his holy-water, he creepeth to the crosse.

Latimer, Serm., fol. 43.

Though the custom was then disused. it seems not to have been forgotten. Like many other ceremonies of the Romish church, it exactly resembled the practices of the heathens. So Tibullus,

Non ego, si merui, dubitem procumbere templis, Et dare sacratis oscula liminibus :

Non ego tellurem genibus perrepere supples, Et miserum sancto tundere poste caput. L. i, El. 2, v, 83.

tBecause they not beleev'd a purgatory,
And held the popes decrees an idle story.
Because they would not creepe such the crosse,
And change Gods sacred Word for humane drosse Taylor's Workes, 1630.

CROSS, THE SIGN OF, placed upon a house, was one of the marks which denoted a family infected with the plague. See LORD HAVE MERCY.

To declare the infection for his sin, A crosse is set without, there's none within. Epigrams, by R. S. (Roger Sharpe), 1610.

+CROSS. A misfortune.

Whilst he spake thus, the queen, oppressed with a violent grief, upon this occasion of new crosses, which former passages made her foresee in a moment, studied for terms to explain herself, both according to the greatnesse of her courage, and the condition of her present fortune to the greatnesse of the present fortune.

Hymen's Praludia, 1658, p. 10.

To CROSS-BITE. To cheat. Kersey, in his dictionary, has cross-bite, a disappointment, and N. Bailey has followed him. It is evidently compounded of cross and bite, in the same manner as cross-blow, which Cotgrave has in the sense of an untoward accident, or traverse. therefore cross-bite others who bring disappointments and losses upon them, i. e., they who cheat. It is equivalent to what is now called swindling. Afterwards contracted to bite. See CROSBITE.

Who, when he speaks, grunts like a hog, and looks Like one that is employ'd in catzerie And crosbiting. O. Pl., viii, 37

O. Pl., viii, 374. Crosbiters are mentioned, in suitable company, in a pamphlet of Robert Greene's entitled, The Blacke Booke's Messenger, laying open the Life and Death of Ned Browne, one of the most notable Cutpurses, Crosbiters, and Coneycatchers, that ever lived in England.

In Whetstone's Rock of Regard it is thus defined in the margin, p. 50: "Crosbiting, a kind of cousoning, under the couler of friendship;" and in his epistle to the readers, "The cheter will fume to see his crosbiting and cunning shiftes decyphered."

Playing a jocular trick to a friend was also called crossbiting him. Thus Aubrev relates how sir John Suckling and sir W. Davenant prevented Jack Young (an intimate of theirs) from going to an assignation, by having him detained as a madman. next day," says, he, "his comerades told him all the plott, and how they crosse-bitt him." Letters from Bodl., vol. ii, p. ii, page 549.

Prior has used the word:

As Nature slily had thought fit For some by ends to cross-bite wit.

†She was such a devill of her tongue, and would so crossebite hym with suche tauntes and spightful quippes.

Riche, Farewell to Militarie Profession, 1581.

+CROSS-CLOTH, CROSS-CLOUT. kerchief, or cloth to wrap round the head or bosom.

head or bosom.

A crosse-cloath, as they tearme it, a powting-cloth, plagula. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 275. Thy swelling breats are not display'd enough, Pull them up higher, set thy dressing lower; Those strippings sute farre better with a ruffe, Tother is layd aside, this used more; Thy crossectoth is not pinned right before, Thus with thy tiffing, trimming, and thy mending. Thos spend'st whole houres together without ending. Crankey's Amanda, p. 33. Here is now sixteen pence a week, beside soap and candles, beds, shirts, biggens, waistcoats, head bands, swaddle bands, cross clouts, bisb, tail clouts, mantles, hose, shoes, clouts, pettiroats, cradle and crickets, and besides that a standing-stool, and a poanet to make the child pap; and all this is come upon thee, besides the charge of her lying-in.

Chrispine and Chrispianus, n. d.

CROSS-GARTER'D. A fashion once prevailed, for some time, of wearing the garters crossed on the leg. With respect to this, as well as other fashions, we must distinguish the opinions held of it in different times. While modes are new, they are confined to the gay or affected; when obsolete, they are yet retained by the grave and the old. In Shakespeare's time this fashion was yet in credit, and Olivia's detestation of it arose, we may suppose, from thinking it coxcombical.

He will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross-garter'd, a fashion she detests.

Twelfth N., ii, 5.

Malvolio's puritanism had probably nothing to do with this. stockings were then high fashion, and so, doubtless, were cross-garters.

The following passage proves it:
Ev'n all the valiant stomache of the court,
All short-cloak'd knights, and all cross-garter'd

All pump and pantofie, all foot-cloth riders, &c.

B. & Fl. Woman Hater, i, 2.

But when Barton Holyday wrote of the ill success of his Technogamia, the fashion was exploded, and was retained only by puritans and old

Had there appear'd some sharp cross-garter'd man, Whom their loud laugh might nickname puritan. So also in the Lover's Melancholv. printed in 1639:

As rare an old youth as ever walk'd cross-garter'd.

+CROSS-PIECE. An ill-tempered per-

Ara. O never, madame,
When it comes guarded with such innocence!
I must confesse, if your faire vertues had not Given a new stamp unto the rugged thoughts That crosse-peece of your sex imprinted in mee, I should have buried all my hopes in her, Which now revive in you.

Wilson's Inconstant Lady, 1614.

†CROSS-QUESTIONS. An old game. Bell. My lord, I did, where she appear'd like her that gave Acteon horns, with all her nimphs about her, busic in tyeing knots which she took from baskets of ribbons that they brought her; and methought she ti'd and unti'd 'em so prettily, as if she had been at cross guestions, or knew not what she did, her face, her neck, and arms quite bare

The Princess of Cleve, 1689. CROSS-ROW. By abbreviation from CHRIST-CROSS ROW, which see.

†CROSS-STAFF. An instrument used by navigators.

The crosse staffe is an artificiall quadrant, geometrically projected into that forme as an instrument of greatest ease and exactest use in navigation, by which in any naturall disturbance of weather (the sunse or starres appearing) the poles height may be knowne, when the astrolabie or quadrant are not to be used.

Hopton's Baculum Geodæticum, 1614.

Excrement. Fr.

+CROUSE.

And touching streets, the dirt and crott of Paris may be smelt ten miles off, and leaves such a tenacious oily stain, that it is indelible.

Howel's Londinopolis, 1657, p. 391. PROUSE. Merry. See CROWSE. And now of late duke Humphrey's old allies, With banish'd Ei'nors base accomplices, Attending their revenge, grow wond'rous crouse, And threaten death and vengeance to our house.

Draylos.

Drauton. The instinctive knowledge which this bird appears to have of the approach of firearms was remarked at a very early period.

Sir Tho. What gone? upon my life they did mistrust.

Mcan. They are so beaten that they smell an officer,
As crows do powder.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651. A CROWD. A fiddle. Certainly from the Welch crwth, though some who are fond of Greek derivations deduce it from κρούω, pulso, though it is not struck or beaten.

A lacquey that—can warble upon a crosed a little, &c.

B. Jons. Cynth. Revels, i, 1.
O sweet consent between a crosed and a Jew's harp.

Alex. J. Campaspe, O. Pl., ii, 103.

Violins strike up aloud,

Ply the gittern, scowr the crowd. riy the gittern, scowr the crosed.

Progt. Nyaph., 8, p. 1512.

His fiddle is your proper purchase
Won in the service of the churches;
And by your doom to be allow'd
To be, or be no more a crosed.

. Hudib., I, ii, 1000. In Gammer Gurton's Needle, crowded seems to be used for crowed: "Her cock with the yelow legs that nightly crowded so just." O. Pl., ii, 31. This, however, is probably only a false print for crowed.

+CROWDER. A fiddler.

her eggs.

Saying I'll do the best I can,
To plague them all this night;
His pipes he straight began to play,
The crowders they did dance. Jack Horner. †CROWD, v. To sit, as a hen upon Accounter. To brood, sit close, or crowding, as a henne over her egges, or chickens. Cotgrace.

CROW-KEEPER. A person employed to drive the crows from the fields. At present, in all the midland counties, a boy set to drive the birds away is said to keep birds. Hence a stuffed figure, now called, more properly, a scare-crow, was also called a crow-keeper.

crow-keeper.

That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper.

Lear, iv, &

Drayton, in an angry address to Cupid, tells him to turn crow-keener : Or, if thou'lt not thy archery forbear, To some base rustic to thyself prefer, And when corne's sown, or grown into the ear, Practise thy quiver, and turn crow-keeper. Idea 48.

This is one of Tusser's directions for September:

No sooner a sowing, but out by and by With mother or boy that alarum can cry And let them be armed with a sling or a bow, To scare away pigeon, the rook, or the crow.

So among his harvest tools he reckons A sling for a mother, a bow for a boy.

And in his abstract for the same month.

With sling or how

Keepe corne from tow.

A scare-crow is clearly meant in the following lines:

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper.

Rom. and Jul., i, 4. +CROWLING. Grumbling in the stomach.

The crowling in the bellye, bothorigmon
Withals Dictionarie, ed.: 1608, p. 297.

+CROWN. A sovereign, a king. Nor do thou encounter with thy crown, Great son of Peleus, since no king, that ever Jove allowed

Grace of a sceptre, equals him.

Chapm., Hom. II., i, 274. CROWN, IRON. The putting on a crown of iron, heated red hot, was occasionally the punishment of rebels or regicides. In the tragedy of Hoffman, 1631, this torture is supposed to be practised, the offender being adjudged to have his head seared with a burning crown.

In Richard III, the princess Anne alludes to the practice, in the following passionate expressions:

O, would to God, that the inclusive verge Of golden metal that must round my brow, Were red-hol steel, to sear me to the brain.

Goldsmith alludes to a similar fact, in the History of Hungary, in a line which long puzzled the majority of readers:

Luke's iron croses, and Damien's bed of steel. Now the history is known, it would surely be allowable to correct it to "Zeck's iron crown," since it was in fact not Luke, but George Zeck, his brother, who suffered this torture, for a desperate rebellion in which they were both engaged in 1514. Respub. Hung. The same punishment was inflicted in Scotland, on the earl of Athol, one of the murderers of king James I. See Boswell's Life of Johnson, and Steevens's note on the passage of Richard III, above cited.

+CROWNS OF THE SUN. Gold coins of Louis XI, of France, with the mint mark of a sun. See Gifford's Mas-singer, vol. i, p. 131.

Let him be bound, my lord, to pay your grace,
Toward your expenses since your coming over,
Twenty-five thousand crocers of the sus.

Heywood's Ed. IV, part 2, i, 4, 1600.

†CROWN-CROACHER. One who encroaches upon the crown.

Sith stories all doe tell in every age,
How these crowns-croachers come to shamefull ends.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1887.

A CROWNED CUP. A bumper; a cup so full of liquor that the contents rise above the brim like a crown.

True, and to welcome Dariotto's lateness,
He shall, unpledg'd, carouze one erowned cup
To all these ladies health. All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 186.
We'll drink her health in a crowned cup, my lads.
Old Couple, O. Pl., x, 481.

This illustrates, and is illustrated mutually by, the Homeric expression, which is perfectly equivalent:

Κούροι μεν κρητήρας επεστέψαντο ποτοίο. Π., A, 470. The youths with wine the copious goblets crown'd.

On which Athenæussays, Έπιστέφονται δε πυτοίο οι κρητήρες, ήτοι υπερχειλείς οί κρητήρες ποιούνται, ώστε διά του ποτοῦ ἐπιστεφανοῦσθαι. Lib. i, c. 11. That is, "The cups were made to stand above the brim, so as to be crowned with the liquor in them." See Il., 0. 232. It was also a custom with the ancients literally to crown their cups with garlands, which has caused some little obscurity in Virgil's imitations of these passages. Heyne on Æn., i, 724. Once, however, that poet has clearly alluded to the latter circumstance:

Tum pater Anchises magnum cratera corona Induit, implevitque mero.

En., ii Bn., iii, 525.

CROWNER'S QUEST. A familiar corruption, among the vulgar, for coroner's inquest.

2d Clo. But is this law? 1st Clo. Ay, marry is't; crowner's quest law. The coroner, I believe, is still the crowner, in that class of society.

CROWNET. Diminutive of crown, as coronet. Both this and crown are used occasionally as the chief end, or ultimate reward and result, of an undertaking; because, as Dr. Johnson | CROYDON-SANGUINE. observes. the end crowns the design. Finis coronat opus.

Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them

Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end. Ant. and Cl., iv. 10.

Thus in Cymbeline he says. My supreme crown of grief.

tFirst stately Juno, with her porte and grace, Her robes, her lawne, her crownet, and her mace. Pecle's Araignment of Paris.

Paper of a parti-+CROWN-PAPER. cular size, named from the water-mark of a crown. The name is as old as the beginning of the seventeenth century, and perhaps older.

And may not dirty socks from off the feet
From thence be turn'd to a crowne-paper sheet?

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CROWN-RAPE. Usurpation of the crown by force.

Crownerspe accounted but cunning and skill,
Bloudshead a blockehouse to beate away ill.
Mirour for Magistrates, 1587.

CROWSE. A north country word, meaning sprightly, merry, or alert.

Spr. How chear, my hearts?

1st Beggar. Most crowse, most capringly.

Jouil Crew, O. Pl., x, 340.

See also p. 442.

See RISO p. 442.
Such one thou art, as is the little fly,
Who is so crowse and gamesome with the flame.
Drayton, Ecl. 7, p. 1419.
As crowse as a new washen louse. Ray's Pros., p. 220.

It is also among his north country words. Kelly has the proverb more metrically, Scottish Proverbs:
Nothing so crowse
As a new washen louse.

P 963

+CROYDON. This town seems to have been formerly celebrated for its colliers, i. e., charcoal-burners. the collier of Croydon is the subject of an old play, and there was an old tune, mentioned in the 16th century. entitled, "Tom Collier of Croidon hath solde his cole." Richard Crowley, in his Epigrams, printed in 1550, has one on "The Collier of Croydon," in which he speaks of a collier of that town who had become so rich that he was offered the honour of knighthood.

Take kennel water, soot, and burnt crusts, of each a proportion according to the quantity of coffee you intend to make; boil these ingredients together in an iron pot that is as black without and within as the poult footed flend, or the collier of Croydes; when they are well incorporated together, let a fat hostess serve it up in white earthen pots, and it is as good coffee as the black broth which the Lacedemonians used to drink in their most serious consultations.

Poor Robin, 1696.

Supposed to be a kind of sallow colour.

By'r ladie, you are of a good complexion,

A right croyden-sanguine, heshrew me. Both of a complexion inclining to the Oriental colour of a croydon-sanguine.

Anatom. of the Metum. of Ajax, by Harr., sign. L. 7.

†CRUCE. A jug, or goblet. Fr.
They had sucked such a juce

Out of the good ale cruce.

The Unluckie Pirmentie.

+To CRUCIATE. To torment.

Hee hath kneeled oftener in the honour of his sweete-heart then his Saviour; hee cruciateth himself with the thought of her, and wearieth at his friends with talking on her. Man in the Moone, 1009. talking on her.

A crew.

An Alema prince, named Rando, making preparation long before for that which he designed, entred by stealth with a cene of souldiors lightly appointed to kill and rob, into Magontiacum.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus. 1609.

+To CRUM.

O One Ora.

P. O Phormio, the whole charge is laide on thy backe: thou thy selfe didst cramms it, thou therefore must eate it up all: selfe doe, selfe have: prepare thy selfe.

Terence in English, 1614.

+CRUM. To gather up one's crums, to recover strength.

She courteously granted both, and so carefully tended me in my sichnesse, that what with her merry sporting and good nourishing, I began to gather up my crams, and in short time to walke into a gallery neere adjoyning unto my chamber, where she disdained not to lead me.

Lytic's Emphace.

†To a crum, exactly.

That griping knight is ir Thomas must be call'd With the same lure; he knows f'a crum how much Losse is in twenty dozen of bread, between That which is broke by th' hand, and that is cut.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

CRUMENAL. A purse.

The fat one that wont to lig in the stall,
Is now fast stalled in her crumenal.

Spens. Shep. Kal., Sept., v, 118.

Crooked. "Crumpe-shoul-+CRUMP. dered, camell-backed, backt." Nomenclator. or crooke-

All those steep mountains, whose high horned tops
The misty cloak of wandring clouds enwraps,
Under first waters their erwsp shoulders hid,
And all the earth as a dull pond abid. Du Barte

+To CRUNK. To make a noise like a crane.

The crane crunketh, gruit grus.
Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 20.

†CRUSE. A goblet. See CRUCE. Goblet. A cruse: a quaffing cup, properly a little pot wherewith they drowe drinke as with a bucket.

Sink'st thou in want, and is thy small cruse spent? See him in want; enjoy him in content.

To CRUSH A POT, or CUP. A cant phrase for to finish a pot; as it is now said to crack a bottle.

My master is the great rich Capulet, an if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wins.

Rom. and Jul., i, 2. of the nouse of the normal state of the normal

Fill the pot, hostess,—and we'll crush it.

Two Angric Women of Abington. CRUZADO. A Portuguese coin, worth, according to Guthrie's table, 2s. 3d. if a crusade of exchange, and 2s. 8$d. if a new crusade. E. Coles makes it worth 10s.; Kersey, 4s.; Dr. Grey, 3s.; the editor of Dodsley's Old Plays above 2s. 10d. It is named from a cross which it bears on one side, the arms of Portugal being on the other. It doubtless varied in value at different periods.

Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzados.

Oth., iii, 4. The fine impos'd

For an ungown'd senator is about Forty crusadoes. Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 309 I have houses, Jewels, and a poor remnant of crusadoes.

White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 293.

CRY. OUT OF. Out of all estimation. A quaint, familiar phrase, of which it is not easy to trace the origin.

Sirrah serjeant, and yeoman, I should love these maps out o' cry now, if we could see men peep out of door in 'en.

Puritas, iii, 5; Suppl. Sh., ii, 588. And then I am so stout, and take it upon me, and stand upon my pantofies to them, out of all crie.

Old Taming of Shr., 6 pl., i, 174.

Again, p. 185.

Very similar, and probably made from this, is the phrase "Out of all whooping," as used by Shakespeare:

O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping.

As you like it, iii, 2. See also OUT OF ALL HO.

+To CRY OUT. To be brought to bed of a child.

You pupply off-spring of a mangy night-walker, who was fore'd to play the whore an hour before she cry'd out, to get a crown to pay the bawd her midwife for bringing you, you bastard, into the world.

The London Spy, 1698. CRYSTALS. A common expression for eves.

yes.
Therefore careto be thy counsellor.

Hen. V, ii, 3. That is, dry thine eyes. Pistol says it to his wife, Mrs. Quickly, who may be supposed to weep at their parting. The old quartos read "clear up thy christals."

Tut! tut! you saw her fair, none else being by, Herself priz'd with herself in either eye; But in those crystal scales let there be weigh'd Your lady's love against some other maid, &c Rom. and Jul., i, 2.

Rom. and Jul., i, 2.

Oh how your talking eyes,
Those active, sparkling, sweet, discoursing twins,
In their strong captivating motion told me
The story of your heart! A thousand Cupids
Methought sat playing in that pair of airstals.

Match at Midn., D. Pl., vii, 393.

Sleep, you sweet glasses,
An everlasting slumber close those chrystals.

B. 4 Rl. Double Mearings.

CRY YOU MERCY. A phrase equivalent to "I beg your pardon." at present.

What Hal! How now, mad wag? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?——My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

1 Hen. IF, iv, 2.

Are you the gentleman? cry you mercy, sir.

B. Jons. Every M. in his H., i, 2.

A ridiculous proverb, once common, included this phrase also:

Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool. Used apparently in mere sport, as an awkward apology for some blunder or inattention; possibly, founded upon some anecdote of such an apology being †Sure his taylor hath not done well to make it so short wasted; cric him mercie! now I looke so low, he hath put all the waste in the knees of his breeches; currage, man! if she will not, another will.

The Man in the Moone, 1609.

+To CRY UP. To extol; to make famous.

Hear. We're cry'd up
O' th' sudden for the sole tutors of the age.

O'th' sudden for the sole tutors of the age.

Skap. Esteem'd discreet, sage trainers up of youth.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

You writ to me long since, to send you an account of the duke of Ossuna's death, a little man, but of great fame and fortunes, and much cried up, and known up and down the world.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

To CUB. To confine in a narrow space. Perhaps a familiar corruption of to coop.

To be cubbed up on a sudden, how shall he be per-nlexed. Burt. Anat. Mel., p. 153. To be cussed up on a least Must. Must., p. 100. Art thou of Bethlem's noble college free, Stark staring mad, that thou wouldst tempt the sea? Cubb'd in a cabin, on a mattress laid, On a brown-George, with lousy awabbers fed.

Dryd. Pers., Sat. 5.

Johnson has inadvertently put the second example as an instance of to cub, for to bring forth cubs, but it is evidently used in this sense; and my friend Todd has not perceived the mistake. That sense of to cub, therefore, still wants an example.

+CUCKING-STOOL. A well-known popular instrument for punishing women, used in former times, sometimes less correctly called a duckingstool.

Plus. And here's a coblers wife brought for a scold.

Nim. Tell her of cooking-stooles, tel her there be Oyster queanes, with orange women, Carts and coaches store, to make a noyse.

Randolph's Muses Lowling-Glasse, 1643.

As with her father she was diving,

And catching craw-fish for her living, (For she belong'd to Billingsgate, And often times had rid in state, nuu sate i' th bottome of a poole, Inthroned in a cucking-stools.)

Homer a la Mode, 1665. CUCKOLD, perhaps, quasi cuckoo'd; i. e., one served

As that ungentle gull the cuckow bird Useth the sparrow. 1 Hen. 1 Hen. IV. v. 1. i. e., forced to bring up a brood that is not his own. I do not recollect having seen the etymology thus considered, which is my only reason for giving the word a place in this Glos-BATV.

+CUCKOLD'S HAVEN and CUCK-OLD'S POINT. Well-known spots on the Thames, below Greenwich. which are often alluded to by the old popular writers. According to tradition, this place owes its name to the discovery by the injured husband of an amour between king John and a miller's wife at Eltham. The king, to escape exposure, was glad to give the miller all the land he could see between that spot and the river: and, in commemoration granted a charter for a yearly fair at Charlton for the sale of horned cattle and articles manufactured of horn. This was known as horn-fair.

And passing further, I at first observ'd That Cuckolds-karen was but badly serv'd; For there old Time had such confusion wrought, For there old Time has such contusion wrought, That of that ancient place remained nought. No monumentall memorable horne, Or tree, or post, which hath those trophees borne, Was left, whereby posterity may know Where their forefathers crests did grow, or show. Which put into a maze my muzing muse, Both at the worlds neglect, and times abuse, Both at the worlds neglect, and times abuse, That that stout pillar to oblivious pit Should fall, whereon plus ultra might be writ, That such a marke of reverend note should lye Porgot, and hid, in blacke obscurity; Especially when men of every sort
Of countries, cities, warlike campes, or court,
Unto that tree are plaintiffs or defendants, Whose loves, or feares, are fellowes or attendants.
Of all estates, this haven hath some partakers
By lot, some cuckolds, and some cuckold-makers. And can they all so much forgetfull be Unto that ancient and renowned tree, That hat so many ages stood erected,
And by such store of patrons beene protected,
And now ingloriously to lye unseene,
As if it were not, or had never beene?

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Man. Now doth my master long more to finger that gold, then a young girle, married to an old man, doth to run her husband ashore at Cuckolds hacea.

Day's Ile of Gulls, 1633.

If you are minded for to wed. And bring a woman to your bed, Take one that's cheerful with discretion, Handsome and neat without ambition; Mirth mix'd with manners let her have, Not said and dumpish, but yet grave. Let her be loving, but yet mind. That she be chaste as well as kind.

Lest if at Cuckolds point you land, And ere you rightly understand. Through ignorance or want of care, Your wife conduct you to Horn-fair. Poor Robin, 1757.

+CUCKOT. Perhaps for cuckold.

Mop. No, no, I am deceiv'd, it is not that.

Amy. You dolt, you ssse, you cuckot.

Randolph's Amyntas, 1640.

CUCKOW. A cuckold being called so from the cuckow, the note of that bird was supposed to prognosticate that destiny, which strengthens the probability of the above derivation. Thus Shakespeare, Cuckow, cuckow, O word of fear, Unpleasing to a married ear. Love L. L., v, 2. And Drayton:

No nation names the cuckow but in scorn. And no man hears him but he fears the horn. Works, 8vo, p. 1316.

In the same passage, the popular account of the cuckow and hedgesparrow, alluded to by Shakespeare, 1 Hen. IV, v, 1, and Lear, i, 4, is told at large.

CUCKOW-FLOWERS. Certainly used in the above passage of Lear, if the reading be right, for cowslips; which is supported by the knowledge that cocu, or herbe cocu, had that meaning in French. See Cotgrave in those words.

CUCK-QUEAN. A familiar word, fabricated by taking the first syllable of cuckold, and adding quean to it, thus making a she-cuckold, or a woman whose husband is unfaithful to her. Femme cocue, Cotgrave. So also Minshew, very fully: Cuckqueane, apud Anglos est illa quæ juncta est impudico viro," &c.

> He loves variety, and delights in change And I heard him say, should he be married, He'd make his wife a cuck-quean.
>
> Four Prentices of Lond., O. Pl., vi, 513

Pour Frentices of Lona., O. Fl., vi, 513
And now her hourly her own cucquean makes.

B. Jons. Epigr., 25
Diana wears them [horns] on her head, after the manner of a crescent; is she a cuc-quean for that:
how the devil can she be cuckolded who was never yet married?

Ozell's Rabelais, b. m., ch. 14.

COT-QUEAN (which see) is quite a different word, though they have sometimes been confounded.

Queene Juno not a little wroth against her husband's crime,

By whom she was a cock-queans made, &c.
Warner's Alb. Engl., i, 4.

Where read cuck for cock. Warner has ventured to make a verb of it:

Came I from France queene dowager, quoth she, to pay so deere

For bringing him so great a wealth, as to be cuckquean'd heere.

Alb. Bn.jl., viii, 41, p. 199.

+CUCULE. A monk's hood, from the Latin.

Of Cotta lately made a monk.

Cotta perplex'd with's wife a cucule bought,

That dying he might die no cuckold thought.

Overs's Epigrams Englished, 1677. Hence cuculled, hooded.

With hys venym wormes, hys adders, whelpes, and snakes.

snakes, Hys cuculled vermyne that unto all myschiefe wakes. Bale's Kynge Johan, p. 93.

+CUDGELLED. Embroidered thickly. Now (perhaps) you shall have an Irish footman with a jacket cudgeld down the shoulders and skirts with a jacket cudgeted down the shounders and sairts with yellow or orenge tawny lace, may trot from London 3 or 4 score miles to one of these decayed mansions.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CUDGEL-PLAY. Fighting with cudgels.

Near the dying of the day There will be a cudget-play, Where a coxcomb will be broke, Ere a good word can be spoke. Witts Recreations, 1654.

CUE. A small portion of bread or beer; a term formerly current in both the English universities, the letter q being the mark in the buttery books to denote such a piece. Q should seem to stand for quadrans, a farthing; but Minshew, who finished his first edition in Oxford, says it was only half that sum, and thus particularly explains it: "Because they set down in the battling or butterie bookes in Oxford and Cambridge, the letter q for half a farthing; and in Oxford when they make that cue or q a farthing, they say, cap my q, and make it a farthing, thus . But in Cambridge they use this letter, a little f; thus f, or thus s, for a farthing." He translates it in Latin calculus panis. Coles has "A cue [balf a farthing] minutum."

Cues and cees are generally mentioned together, the cee meaning a small measure of beer; but why, is not equally explained.

Hast thou worn Gowns in the university, tost logick, Suckt philosophy, eat cues, drank cees, and cannot

A letter the right courtier's crest? That he, poor thing, hath no acquaintance with above a mase and a half; and that he never drank above size q of Helicon.

Eachard, Contempt of Cl., p. 26.

Bishop Earle also has cues and cees: Hee [the college butler] domineers over fresh men when they first come to the hatch, and puzzles them with strange language of cues and cees, and some broken Latin, which he has learnt at his bin.

oken Latin, which he has learnt at his fin.

Earle's Micro-cosmographic (1628), Char. 17.

That you're fain

To size your belly out with shoulder fees,
With kidneys, rumps, and cues of single beer.

B. & Fl. Wit at see. W., act ii, p. 278.

Cues there stand for cees, which proves that the terms were not well defined.

†Thou, that in thy dialogues soldst hunnie for a halfepenie, and the choysest writers extant for cues a peece.

Nash's Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

CUE-FELLOW. From cue, the final or catch-word of a speech; a technical term among players: whence cuefellows means players who act together.

You have formerly heard of the names of the priests, graund rectors of this comedie, and lately of the names of the devils, their cue-fellowes in the play.

Decl. of Popish Impost., H, 2.

The cue among players was derived, doubtless, from the French, queue; being literally the tail of a speech. It occurs several times in Mids. N. Dr., iii, 1, among the rustic actors. UERPO. To be in cuerpo, to be CUERPO. stripped of the upper garment, a Spanish term, meaning to display the body, or cuerpo.

But why in cuerpo?

I hate to see an host, and old, in cuerpo.

Host. Cuerpo, what's that?

Tip. Light-skipping hose and doublet,
The horse-boy's garb! poor blank and half blank!

B. Jons. New Inn, ii, 5.

Again,

Your Spanish host is never seen in cuerpo, Without his paramentos, cloke, and sword. This Butler has used it in Hudibras.

So they unmantled him of a new plush cloak, and my secretary was content to go home quietly en cuerpo.

Howell's Letters, B. 1, § i, Lett. 17.

CUIRASS. Armour for the breast and back. The thing being disused, the word is likely to become obsolete, and perhaps is nearly so at present. It is derived from cuir, leather, of which at some time it probably was formed.

Proof cuirasses, and open burganets.

Four Prentices, O. Pl., vi. 542.

Neoptolemus had his sword yet who hurt him under his curaces, even about his groyne.

North's Plut., 646, A. Since writing the above remark, the word has been revived by means of Buonaparte's Cuirassiers, but is now likely to be again forgotten. CUISSES. Armour for the thighs.

I saw young Harry with his beaver on, His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd, Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury 1 Hen. IV, iv, 1. CULLINGS, or CULLERS, Dict. Iuferior sheep, separated from the rest.

Those that are big'st of bone I still reserve for breed, My cullings I put off, or for the chapman feed. Drayt. Nymph., 6, p. 1496.

CULLION, s. A base fellow; a term of great contempt: from the Italian, coglione, a great booby.

Away, tase cullions, Suffolk, let them go.

2 Hes. YI, i, 3.

And, Midas like, he jets it in the court,
With base outlandish cullions at his heels,
Whose proud fantastick liveries make such show,
As if that Proteus, god of shapes, appear'd.

Edw. II. O. P.I., ii, 840.

See also O. Pl., ii, 63.

But one that scorns to live in this disguise, For such a one as leaves a gentleman, And makes a good of such a cultion. Tum. Skr., iv, 2. Sometimes culten:

For what could be more cullen-like or base, Or fitter for a man were made of straw, Than standing in a fair yong ladies grace, To shew himself a cuckow or a daw.

Harr. Ariost., xxv, 25.
CULLIONLY. Base, blockheaded; from

Draw, you whoreson cullionly barbermonger, draw.

Lear, ii, 2

CULLIS. A very fine and strong broth, strained and made clear for patients in a state of great weakness. From coulis, Fr., of the same sense; i. e., a solution of meat. In an old book before cited, called the Haven of Health, is a receipt to make a coleise of a cocke or capon, which in many respects is so curious, that I am tempted to insert the whole of it, though rather long.

If you list to still [distil] cocke for a weak body, that is in a consumption through long sicknesse or other causes, you may doe it well in this manner. Take a red cocke, that is not old, dresse him and cut him in quarters, and bruse all the bones, then take the rootes of fennell, parcely, and succorv, violet leaves, and borage, put the cocke into an earthen pot which is good to stew meates in, and between every quarter lay of the rootes and herbes, corans, whole mace, anise seeds, liquorice being scraped and slyced, and so fill up your pot. Then put in halfe a pint of rose water, a quart of white wine or more, two or three dates made cleane and cut in peices, a few prunes and raysons of the sunne, and if you put in certain peeces of gold, it will be the better, and they never the worse, and so cover it close, and stop it with dough, and set the pot in sectning water, and let it seeth gently for the space of twelve houres, with a good fire kept still under the brasse pot that it staudeth in, and the pot kept with liquor so long. When it hath stilled so many houres, then take out the earthen pot, open it, streine out the broth into some cleane vessel, and give thereof unto the weake person morning and evening, warmed and spiced, as pleaseth the putient. In like manner you may make a coleyse of a capon, which some men like better.

Brown, in his Pastorals, tells us of a cullis mixed with still more costly ingredients:

To please which Orke her husband's weakned peece Must have his eullis mixt with ambergreece, Pleasant and partridge into jelly turn'd, G:sted with gold see'n times refin'd and burn'd, With dust of Orient pearle, richer the east Yet ne're beheld: (O Epicurian feast!)
This is his breakfast. Brit. Past., B. ii, S. 3.
This seems to have been an approved receipt:

Let gold, amber, and dissolved pearl be common ingredients, and that you cannot compose a cullics without them.

Mac World, O. Pl., v, 339.

When I am excellent at cawdles.

And cullices, and have enough spare gold To boil away, you shall be welcome to me.

To boil away, you shall be welcome to me.

B. & Fl. Ceptain, i, 3.

But as they that are shaken with a fever are to be warmed with cloaths, not grouns, and as he that melteth in a consumption is to be recur'd by cullises, not conceits, so, &c. alex. & Campaspe, O Pl., ii, 124.

So the same author, Lylie, in his Euphues:

They that begin to pine of a consumption, without delaie preserve themselves with cultises. Emph. F. 2b. We should indubitably read cultises for callises, in Beaumont and Fletcher's Thierry and Theodoret, act ii, p. 143. Cullises were, in fact, savoury jellies; but generally taken hot, as best suited to sick persons.

CULLISEN, s. A corruption of cognizance, or badge of arms; unknown to some editors of B. Jonson's plays, but since noticed in other books. His usage of it, however, is sufficiently explanatory. In Every Man out of his Humour, Sogliardo says, "I'll give coats, that's my humour, but I lack a cullisen." Act i, sc. 2. He is immediately answered, that he may get one in the city, where he may have a cout of arms made to fit him, of what fashion he will. To confirm this, we hear afterwards that he is at the herald's office, where his adviser (Carlo Buffone) was to meet him against his cognizance was ready. Act iii, 1.

In the play of The Case is altered, Onion asks, "But what badge shall we give, what cullisen?" The answer, though in corrupt language, is intelligible enough: "As for that, let us use the infidelity and commiseration of some harrot [herald] of arms, he shall give us a gudgeon. Onion. A gudgeon! a scutcheon thou wouldst say, man." Act iii.

The Owles Almanack, a humorous production of 1618, has it more than once:

All the cullizans (signs or badges, in the zodisc) except one, drew their pedigree from the idea of some excellent animal.

P. 10.

A blew coat without a cullizan will be like habberdine

Mr. Gifford has found another ex-

Then will I have fifty beads-men, and on their gowns their cullisance shall be six Milan needles.

Brewer's Love-sick King. We are told by a foreigner how these badges were worn:

The English are serious, like the Germans,—lovers of shew; liking to be followed, wherever they go, by whole troops of servants, who seem their masters' arms in silver, fastened to their left arms.

P. Hentzner's Travels in 1598.

He adds. "And they are not undeservedly ridiculed, for wearing tails hanging down their backs." Were those long shoulder-knots? I should think so, for the custom of tying the hair into that form was not yet known. We still see cullisens, or badges, worn by watermen, firemen, and sometimes by parish officers, as beadles, &c. See BADGE.

+CULLY. A term of reproach, nearly equivalent with cullion. In the latter part of the seventeenth century it was used in the sense of a fop.

Cully, fop, or one that may easily be wrought upon.

Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

CULME; from culmen. The top of anything.

Who strives to stand in pompe of princely port On guiddy top and culme of slippery court, Finds oft a heavy fate.

Arthur, a Traged., 1587, sign. D 4. +CULPE. A fault. Lat.

To deprive a man beyng banished out of the realme without deserte, without culpe, and wythout cause, of his inheritaunce and patrimony. Hall, Henry IV, fol. 4.

CULTER, now coulter. A ploughshare.

The edition of Johnson and Steevens has coulter. CULVER. A pigeon, or turtle dove. CUMMIN-SEED was used for attracting Like as the culver on the bared bough Sits mourning for the absence of her mate.

Like woful culvers, do sit wailing now. Sp. Tears of the Muses, v. 245.

CULVER-HOUSE. A pigeon-house.

He [the gamester] is onely used by the master of the ordinarie, as men use cummin-secde, to replenish their culver-house.

Clitus Whims., p. 54.

So Overbury, "His [the host's] wife is the cummin-seede of his dovehouse." Charact., sign. G 2.

CULVER-KEYS. The flower or herb

Culver being columba, columbine. and the little flowrets like keys.

A girl cropping culterkeys and cowslips, all to make garlands suitable to the present month of May.

Walton's Angler, 1, ch. 16.

A CUMBER. A care, danger, or inconvenience. Sometimes written com-See Todd. An abbreviation of incumber.

Meanwhile the Turks seek succours from our land, Thus fade thy helps, and thus thy cumbers spring.

Fairf. Tasso, ii, 73.

Thus tage my near,

Caius, none reckon'd of thy wife a point,

While each man might without all let or cumber.

Harringt. Epigr., i, 94.

+CUMBER, JOHN A. A personage alluded to in the following lines, as a man of extraordinary power.

Hunger's sharp dart hath piere'd (and yet we stand
To fright and foil our foes with sword in hand), These weapons cannot conquer, nor the number,
Were they two thousand such as John a Cumber,
Legend of Captain Jones, 1659.

Anthony Munday introduced John a Cumber as one of the heroes of a play entitled John a Kent and John a Cumber, compiled in 1595, and represents him to us as a great magician engaged in a trial of skill with another celebrated magician, John a Kent, whose legendary fame still survives in Herefordshire. According to Munday's play, John a Cumber was a Scot.

The only man renownde for magick skill.
Oft have I heard he once beguylde the devill, And in his arte could never finde his matche +CUMBER-WORLD. That which is only a trouble or useless burthen to the world.

A cumber-world, yet in the world am left,
A fruitles plot, with brambles overgrowne,
Mislived man of my worlds joy bereft,
Hart-breaking cares the ofspring of my mone.

Drayton's Skepherd's Garland, 1593. The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Doth root upon; while that the culter rusts
That should deracinate such savag'ry.

Hen. V, v, 2.

CUMLICATION. For complication.

In all thys cumicacion.

In all thys cumlicacion
Is nother felony nor treason.

John Bon and Mast Person, n. d.

pigeons to inhabit a dove-cote. See Culver-house.

Spens., Sounce 88. CUNNING, s. Knowledge, skill in any All comfortless upon the bared bough, We'll crave a little of your cousin's cuaning; I think my girl hath not quite forgot To touch an instrument.

'Tis Pity She's a W., O. Pl., viii, 28.

CUNNING, adj. Skilful, knowing. At present to be cunning implies craft, but the following passage shows that formerly they might be separated:

Wherein neat and clean, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cusaing but in craft? 1 Hen. IV. ii. 4.

Alex. Why should not I be as ennning as Apelles?

Apell. God shield you should have cause to be so cunning as Appelles.

Alex. & Campaspe, O. Pl., ii, 180. They both mean skilful in the art of painting. †CUNNINGLY. Skilfully.

In the inner court, I saw the kings armes cusningly carved in stone, and fixed over a doore aloft on the wall.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+CUPPED. Intoxicated; in one's cups. Where as the hall did in the parlour dine;
At night with one that had bin shrieve I sup'd,
Well entertain'd I was, and halfe well cap'd.

Taylor's Workes, 1650.

+CUPBOARD. A piece of furniture for

My lord of Bristoll is preparing for England. I waited upon him lately when he went to take his leave at court, and the king washing his hands took a ring from off his own finger, and put it upon his, which was the greatest honor that ever he did any ambassador as they say here; he gave him also a cupbord of plate, valued at 20000 crowns.

plate, valued at 20000 crowns.

His cupboard's head six earthen pitchers graced,

Beneath them was his trusty tankard placed.

Dryden's Juv. +CUPBOARD-LOVE. Interested love.

A cupboard love is seldom true, A love sincere is found in few: A love sincere is found in new;
But 'tis high time for folks to marry,
When women woo, lest things miscarry.

Poor Robin.

To look for Cupids in the eyes, a phrase equivalent to look babies. &c.

The Naiads, sitting near upon the aged rocks, Are busied with their combs, to braid his verdant

While in their crystal eyes he doth for Cupids look.

Drayton, Pol., ii, p. 862.

See BABIES.

CURAT, CURATE, or CURATS, for cuirass. Body armour.

And first in sight he slew my elder brother, The bullet through his curat did make way, And next in flight he took, and kill'd the t'other.

Harringt. Ariost., ix, 26.
His helmet here he flung, his poulderns there,
He casts away his curats and his shield.

Ibid., xxiii, 106. His wyfe Panthea had made, of her treasure. a curate and helmet of golde. Palace of Pleas., i, p. 50, repr. Spenser has it curiet :

Spenser has it curret:

And put before his lap an apron white,
Instead of curiets, and bases for the fight.

Sp. P. Q., V, v, 20.

†But so soone as it was faire daylight, the glittering haberg: ons trimmed all about with white guards, the bright curets made of yron plates, discovered a faire off, shewed the kings power to be at hand.

Holland's Amminus Marcellinus, 1609.

†Neoptolemus had his sword yet, who hurt him under his curaces, even about his groyne. Plutarch, 1579.

To CURB, properly courb; from courber, to bend or cringe.

For, in the fatness of these pursy times, Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg, Yea curb, and woo, for leave to do him good.

Haml., iii, 4. +CURBLE. The mouth of a well. Pive things in great request. - Hoops in women's petticoats almost as big as a well's ourble, women who carry their cloaths half up their legs, young men in perukes down to their breeches, wenches who wear high topknots on their heads and never a smock on, painted whores in coaches, and honest gentlemen who are walking on foot.

The Five Strange Wonders of the World. Delicacies of the +CURD-CAKES. table in former times, which were made as follows.

made as follows.

To make curd-cakes.—Take a pint of curds, four eggs, leaving two of the whites; add sugar and grated nutmeg, with a little flower; mix them well, and drop them like fritters in a frying-pan, in which butter is hot. Closet of Rarties, 1706. A curious curd-cake.—Put the yolks of four eggs and the whites of two to a pint of curds, sweeten it with sugar and grated nutmeg, and stiffen it with a little flower, and when it becomes a kind of batter, drop it like little cakes or fritters into your frying-pan that has sweet butter in it, that so they may be quickly done. To make them eat tender and short, sprinkle them over with rosewater and sugar, and serve them them over with rosewater and sugar, and serve them up. The Accomplish'd Female Instructor, 1719.

CURFEW. The evening bell; couvre feu. The origin and purpose of this bell are too well known to need repetition. The original time for ringing it was eight in the evening, and we are told by some writers that in many villages the name is still retained for the evening bell. Brand, in his observations on Bourne's Antiquities, says, "We retain also a vestige of the old Norman curfew at eight in the evening," chap, i. In the Merry Devil of Edmonton it is represented as having got an hour later; the sexton comes in saying,

Well, 'tis sine o'clock, 'tis time to ring curfew.

O. Pl., v, 292.

By a passage in Romeo and Juliet it seems that the bell which was commonly rung for that purpose obtained in time the name of the curfew bell. and was so called whenever it rung on any occasion:

Come stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd. The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock Rom. and Jul., iv. 4.

At the regular time it probably was called simply the curfew; at others, if it was known that the same bell was used, it might be said, as above, that the curfew-bell had rung. This bell, if we may believe the reporters, was as important to ghosts as to living men; it was their signal for walking; and their furlough lasted till the first cock. Fairies and other spirits were under the same regulation:

hence Prospero says of his elves, that

To hear the solemn curfew. Temo., v. 1. On the other hand, the cock crowing alarmed them :

Buarment them:

Ber. I was about to speak when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard

The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,

Doth, with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat,

Awake the god of day, and at his warning.

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,

Th' avternated and extince spirite his. Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies

The fiend Flibbertigibbet obeyed this general rule :

This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks 'till the first cock.

Lear, iii, 4. See Warton on Comus, 1. 435.

CURIET. See CURAT.

CURIOSITY. Scrupulousness, minute or affected niceness in dress, or otherwise.

Wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custom; and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me. Lear, i, 3.
For equalities are so weigh'd, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety. Ibid., i, 1.
At the choyce I made no great curiositie, but snatching the golde let goe the writings.

Euphues and his Engl.
When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mock'd thee for too much curiosity.

Timon of A., iv, 3.

But I have ever had that curiosity

In blood, and tenderness of reputation Such an antipathy against a blow——

I cannot speak the rest.—Good sir, discharge me.

B. and Fl. Nice Valour, act iv, p. 343.

See the editor's note there.

A waiting gentlewoman should fice affection or curiosily. Hobby's Castiglione. In this passage affection is put for affectation, and curiosity subjoined as synonymous. See Affection.

Mr. Steevens, who quotes the following passage, thinks that it seems there to mean capriciousness; it appears to me that the sense of scrupulousness suits it as well:

Pharicles hath shewn me some curtesy, and I have not altogether requited him with curiosity; he hath made some shew of love, and I have not wholly seemed Greene's Mamilia.

CURIOUS. In the senses corresponding to the above, scrupulous, or affected.

For curious I cannot be with you,

For curious I cannot be with you, Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Tam. of Shr., iv, 4.

The emperor, obeying more compassion than the reason of things, was not curious to condescend to perform so good an office.

Why, Toby may get him to sing it to you, he is not curious to any body.

Eastur. hoe, O. Pl., iv. 293.

†CURIOUSLY. Scrupulously, with care.

Makes me vow,

Which shall be curiously observed.

Chapm. Hom. II., ii, 225. †CURNOB, v. ? To steal, to plunder.

And see, I pray, th' effect of drunckenesse, Howe many doth it drive to like distresse. Howe many dots it drive to like distribute, That of their honesty they oft are robd, So their best jewell likewise is cursobd. The Newe Melamorphosis, 1600, MS.

+CURRANT. or CURRANTO. A name for a newspaper. The currentos were so little to be trusted in their news, that the name became equivalent to that of a liar, and their romancing propensities are often ridiculed by the writers of that day.

Writers of that day.

It was reported lately in a currant (for currant newes) that a troope of French horse did take a fleete of Turkish gallies, in the Adriaticke sea, neere the gulph of Venice. The newes was welcome to me, though I was in some doubt of the truth of it, but after I heard that the horses were shod with very thicke corke; and I am sure I have heard of many impossibilities as true as that. Taylor's Workes, 1630. It is no curranto news I undertake,

New teacher of the town I mean not to make,

No new England vower my muse does intend

No new England voyage my muse does intend, No new fleet, no bold fleet, nor bonny fleet send. Cleaveland's Poems, 1651. Ne're feare; for men must love thee

When they behold thy glorie To fill two leaves in a currant, Or bee a bishop's storie.

Old Song.

+CURRANTNESS. The fact of passing currant.

Nummariam rem constituere, Cic. Introduire ordon-nance de la monnoye. To establish and set downe an order for the valuation and currantnes of monie. Nomenclaton tCURRIE. For quarry.

New come from currie of a stag.

Chapm. Hom. R., xvi.

+CURRYFAVEL. One who curries favour : a flatterer.

Wherby all the curryfarel, that be next of the deputye is secrete counsayll, dare not be so bolde to shewe hym the greate jupardye and percil of his soule.

State Papers, ii, 15.

CURSEN'D. A vulgar corruption of christened. See KIRSOME.

Nan. Are they cursen'd? Madge. No, they call them infidels. I know not what they are. B. and Fl. Corcomb, act iv, p 211. † As I am a cursen man, i.e., a Christian man. Marlowe's Tragedy of Doctor Faustus.

A courier; a runner. +CURSITOR.

For their office was this, by running a great ground to be cursitours to and fro, and to intimate unto our captaines upon the marches what sturres there were among the neighbour nations.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

Ill-tempered, given to scolding and mischief, shrewish. cursed, which shows how much it was hated.

H's elder sister is so curst and shrewd, That, 'till the father rid his hands of her, Master, your love must live a maid at home.

Tam. Shr., i, 1. As it was the epithet usually applied to a scold or virago, it occurs, as may be imagined, very frequently in the above play. Thus again:

Be she as foul as was Florentius' love. As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse, It moves me not. It moves me not.

Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst. Rick. III. i. 2. In the following passage it is applied to a bear, and consequently means savage, or disposed to slaughter:

I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten; they are never cursi but when they are hungry.

Wint. T., iii, 3. It is applied also to a schoolmaster. in the sense of severe, or ill-tempered:

Alas I what kind of grief can thy years know? Had'st thou a curst master when thou went'st to school? school?

Thou art not capable of other grief.

B. & Fl. Philaster, ii, 3.

CURTAIL-DOG. Originally the dog of an unqualified person, which, by the forest laws, must have its tail cut short, partly as a mark, and partly from a notion that the tail of a dog is necessary to him in running. In later usage, curtail-dog means either a common dog, not meant for sport, or a dog that missed his game. It has the latter sense in this passage:

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtail-dog in some affairs;

Sir John affects thy wife.

Mer. W. W., ii, 1. Cur, for a mongrel dog, has been derived from korre, Dutch; but perhaps it is rather formed from curtail, or curt-tail, by dropping the last syllable. Cut-tail, however, was sometimes used, and we meet with a cut-tail'd cur in Drayton :

Then Ball, my cut-tail'd cur, and 1 begin to play.

Nymphal., 6, p. 1496.

And Cut-tail as a dog's name. Moone., p. 506. In Fletcher's Address to the Reader, prefixed to the Faithful Shepherdesse, we find "curtail'd dogs, in strings."

†CURTAIN. A theatre which appears to have stood in Moorfields, and to have been celebrated for the performance of humorous and satirical pieces. See Collier's Annals of the Stage, iii, 268.

Doe you speake against those places also, whiche are made uppe and builded for such playes and enterludes, as the theatre and curtaine is, and other such lyke places besides.

Northbrooke, Treatise against Dicing, 3-c., published about 1677.

Base fellow, whom mere time Hath made sufficient to bring forth a rhyme, A curtain jig, a libel, or a bullad.

Wither's dbusce Stript and Whipt, 1613.

CURTAL. The same as curtail, a little altered in form, but more usually applied to a horse. A curtal is a docked horse, but not necessarily a small one, as some have asserted.

Small One, as some mave account and l'd give bay curtal, and his furniture, My mouth no more were broken than these boys', And writ as little beard.

Tom Tankard's great bald curtal I think could not breake it.

Gammer Gurt., O. Pl., ii, 41.

breake it. Gammer Guert., O. Pl., ii, 41.
If 1 prove not

As just a carrier as my friend Tom Long was.
Then call me his curtall. B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 1. Banks's famous horse is often called his curtal, to which, therefore, the passage following most probably alludes:

And some there are Will keep a curtal, to shew juggling tricks, And give out 'tis a spirit. White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 277. See BANKS'S HORSE.

It came, at length, to mean a crop of any sort, as here:

You may apparently see I am made a curtall; for the pillory—hath eaten off both my eares.

Greene's Quip, 3.c., in Harl. Misc., v, 410.

Mr. Douce derives curtal from tailler court, to cut short; but it is difficult to form it thence, and curt being an English word, whether from the French or Latin, is a more probable origin for it. See Illustr. of Shaksp., i, p. 320.

It is sometimes written curtole:

Were you born in a myll, curtols, that you prate so hve?

Promos and Cass., i, 4.

+CURTAL FRIAR. The meaning of this word, which occurs in the Robin Hood ballads, has not been clearly explained.

Robin Hood lighted from off his horse. And tied him to a thorn;
Carry me over the water, thou curtal fryar,
Or else thy life's forlorn.

Ballad of Robin Hood and the Curtal Fryar. CURTLE-AX. See COUTRLAS. It is often found in this form. From what we have seen of curtal, it seems that it might mean a short axe.

+CURTLY. Courteous.

For which delightfull joyes yet thanke I curtely Jove, By whose allmightic power, such sweete delites I prove. Paradyse of Daynty Dovises, 1576.

CURTOLDE seems to be the same word as curtal; when applied to a slipper, short, abridged of its long peak, and other ornaments.

A slender slop close-couched to your docke, A curtoide slipper, and a short silk hose.

Gascoigne, N 8, b. Curtol is enumerated among rich articles in the following passage:

Pearl, curtol, christall, jet, and ivory.

Old Taming of Shrew, O. Pl., i, 204. But what it means is doubtful.

CURVIFY, v. To curl. An affected word.

Irons to curvifie your flaxen locks. And spangled roses that outshine the skie.

Jordan's Death Dissected, 1649. CUSHION. To hit or miss the cushion; to succed or fail in an attempt. evidently alludes to archery, and probably cushion was one name for the mark at which the archers shot. Thus. "To be beside the cushion, scopum non attingere, à scopo aberrare." Coles' Lat. Dict.

Unto whom Lucilla answered with this glicke. Trulic, Euphues, you have mist the cushion, for I was neither angrie with your long absence, neither am I well pleased at your presence. Euphues, K 2. Alas, good man, thou now begin'st to rave, Thy wits do err, and miss the cushion quite.

Drayt. Eclog., 7.

Yet these phrases seem inconsistent with that sense:

A sleight, plotted betwirt her father and myself,
To thrust Mounchensey's nose besides the cushion.

Merry Dev., O. Pl., v. 278.

And as we say in our poor English proverb, put him clean beside the cushion. Gayton, Fest. N., p. 36.

†To foresee the king his power on the one side, and To foresee the king his power on the one side, and your force on the other, and then to judge if you bee able * to put hym beside the cushion, and not whylest you strive to sit in the saddle, to lose to your owne undoyng both the horse and the saddle. Holinsked's Chronicles, 1577. † What I? marrie I will goe to Menedenus, and tell him that this wench was stolne from Caria, one thats with and of a noble nevertheau, whom he may greatly rich, and of a noble parentage; whom he may greatly gaine by, if he would redeeme her. C. Thou art beside the cushin.

Terence in English, 1614. traisus es, thou art beside the cushion. Thou art decived. You mistake me. Ibid.
†Tru. No, Ned, for blaming the poor town, for a lewd ill-manner'd town, or as your mother thinks it, a sink of perdition, I tell thee, Ned, thou art quite beside the cushion.

The Woman turn'd Bully, 1675.

+CUSHION-DANCE. A dance of a rather free character, used chiefly, it would appear, at weddings.

I have, ere now, deserved a cushion: call for the cushion dance.

Heywood's Woman kill'd with Kindness. 1600. Besides, there are many pretty provocatory dances, as the kissing dance, the cushin dance, the shaking of the sheets, and such like, which are important instru-mentall causes, whereby the skilfull liath both clyents and custome. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

The musical notes are preserved in the English Dancing Master, 1686; where it is called "Joan Sanderson. or the cushion dance, an old round dance." This dance was well known in Holland in the early part of the seventeenth century, and an interesting engraving of it may be seen in the Emblems of John de Brunnes, Amst., 1624.

+CUSHION-CLOTH seems to mean a cushion case or covering.

Three night-gowns of the richest stuff;
Four cushions-cloaths are scarce enough;
Fans painted and perfumed three;
As many muffs of sable grey.

London Ladies Dressing Room, 1705.

+CUSHIONET. Literally, a small cushion. It perhaps means a casket in the latter of the following extracts.

He cover'd it with false beliefe. Which gloriously show'd it : And for a morning cushionet, On's mother he bestow'd it.
Lucasta, by Lovelace, 1649.

Lucasta, by Lovelace, 1649.
Yet he thought he should easily muke peace with her, because he understood she had afterwards put the latter letter in her bosome, and the first in her coshiones, wherby he gather'd, that she intended to reserve his son for her affection, and him for counsell.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

A drinking-cup. +CUSKIN. Any kinde of pot to drinke in : a cup : a cuskin.

Nomenciator. CUSPE. "The first beginning or entrance of any house in astronomy." Coles' Engl. Dict. He should have said astrology. Phillips, in his World of Words, is more explicit: he says, "The entrance of any house, or first beginning, which is the line whereon the figure and degree of the zodiac is placed, as you find it in the table of houses." This stuff was then considered as science. It is used in Albumazar:

I'll find the cuspe, and Alfridaria. O. Pl., vii, 171. CUT. A familiar appellation for a common, or labouring horse, either from having the tail cut sort, or from being cut as a gelding. When applied to a dog, it certainly referred to the tail. See CUT AND LONG TAIL. But when used as a term of reproach to a man, it might sometimes have the other allusion.

I prythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle. In Sir John Oldcastle, the Miller, disposing his men for action, appoints, Tom upon Cut, Dick upon Hob, Hodge upon Ball, &c.
Suppl. to Sh., ii, 313.

He'll buy me a white cut, forth for to ride.

B. & Fl. Two Noble K., iii, 4.

In the following passage it is used generally:

The carriers' jades shall cast their heavy packs,
And the strong hedges scarce shall keep them in:
The mikmaid's cwis shall turn the wenches off,
And lay their dossers tumbling in the dust.

Am I their cutt.' now the poore sconce is taken, must Jack march with bag and baggage.

Play of Sir Thomas More.

Hence call me cut, is the same as call me horse, both which expressions are used. Falstaff says, "If I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse." | 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. And sir Toby Belch, "Send for money, knight; if thou hast her not in the end, call me cut." The two phrases are, Twel. N., ii, 3. therefore, equivalent.

I'll meet you there: if I do not, call me cut.
Two Angris Women of Abington. A person is twice called cut, as a term of reproach, in Gammer Gurton's Needle, O. Pl., ii, 44 and 69.

If thou se hym not take hys owne way,

Call me cut when thou metest me another day.

Nature, an Interlude, fol., bl. let., sign. C 1.

If thou bestowst any curtesis on mee, and I do not requite it, then call me cut.
Nask's Apol. of Pierce Penilesse, K 4.

See also Lond. Prod., ii, 4.

Cut was also applied to dogs, as in the following common phrase.

CUT AND LONG TAIL, meaning to include all kinds, curtail curs, sporting dogs, and all others.

Yea, even their verie dogs, Rug, Rig, and Risbie, yea cut and long taile, they shall be welcome.

Art of Flattery, by Ulpian Fulved, 1576, sign. G 3.

The compters pray for me; I send all in, cut and long tail.

Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 424.

tail. Match at Mian, U. I., vii, we. He dances very finely, very comely, And for a jig, come cut and long tail to him, He turns ye like a top.

Fl. and Shak. Two Noble Kinsm., v, 9.

See CURTAL.

We find Cut-tail as a dog's name:

Whistles Cul-tail from his play, And along with them he goes. Drayt. Sirena, p. 640.

These quotations fully explain a passage in the Merry Wives of Windsor, concerning which some injudicious attempts and conjectures have been made:

Shell. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long tail, under the degree of a squire.

Mer. W. W., iii, 4.

That is, "Come who will to contend with me, under the degree of a squire." It is used in a manner exactly similar in the following passage:

As for your mother, she was wise, a most flippant tongue she had, and could set out her tail with as good a grace as any she in Florence, come ext and long tail.

All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 195.

The previous mention of her tail brings in the proverbial expression with the more ease, and seems to have suggested it.

Thus also:

At Quintin he, In honour of this bridaltee, Hath challenged either wide countee, Come cut and long tail. B. Jons., vol. vii, p. 53, Whalley.

+CUTCHY. A coachman.

Inspire me streight with some rare delicies, Or ile dismount thee from thy radiant coach, And make thee a poore cutchy here on earth. Return from Pernassus, 1606.

CUT-PURSE. A person of the ingenious fraternity now distinguished by the name of pickpockets. The purses were then worn hanging at the girdle, and it was easy to cut them and take out the money.

Away, you cut-purse rascal! 2 Hen. IV, ii, 4. To draw CUTS. To draw lots, being papers cut of unequal lengths, of which the longest was usually the

How shall we try it? That is a question. We will draw cuts for the senior; till then, lead thou first.

Com. of Errors, act v, at the end.

After supper, we drew cuts for a score of apricots, the longest cut still to draw an apricot.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 10.

In the Complete Angler (part i, ch. 5) they draw cuts who shall sing:

Pisc. I think it best to draw cuts, and avoid conten-Pet. It is a match. Look, the shortest cut falls to Cordon.

Cor. Well then, I will begin, for I hate contention.
P. 164, Bagster's 2d ed.

Thus the shortest cut was here the loser, or the person to pay the social penalty of a song.

It occurs in the old Scotch song of Bessy Bell and Mary Gray, where the lover thus settles his wish for both lasses:

Wae's me, for baith I canna get, To ane by law we're stented: Then I'll draw cuts, and take my fate, And be with ane contented

Mus. Misc., vol. i, p. 160. CUTTER, s. A cant word for a swaggerer, bully, or sharper; in one sense derived from committing acts of violence like those ascribed to the Mohocks in Addison's time; in the other, from cutting purses. Cotgrave translates "A cutter (or swash buckler)," by "balaffreux, taillebras, fendeur de naseaux." Coles has, "A cutter (or robber), gladiator, latro."

How say you, wife, did I not say so much?

Ho was a cutter and a swaggerer.

Pair Maid of Bristol, 4to, A 3.

He's out of cash, and thou know'st, by cutter's law we are bound to relieve one another.

Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, $55.

The personages who say this are actually lying in wait to rob a traveller; so that we may fairly conclude the latter sense to be the proper one there.

Cowley's Cutter of Coleman Street, or Captain Cutter, is a town adventurer. CUTTING, part. adj. An epithet formed on the same principles as the preceding word. Hence, in the Scornful Lady, when Morecraft the usurer suddenly turns buck, this title is applied to him :

Bld. Love. How's this?

You. Love. Bless you, and then I'll tell. He's turn'd gallant.

Rid. Lone. Gallant?

Morecraft.

Wherefore have I such a companie of cutting knaves to waite upon me? Friar Bacon, &c., 4to, sign. C2, b.

CUTTLE, s. Probably only a corrupted form of cutter; for an allusion to the cuttle-fish, and its black liquor, is much too refined for the speakers in the scene. Doll Tearsheet says to Pistol.

By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. 2 Hen. IV. ii. 4.

Cuttle, and cuttle boung, we are told, were cant terms then in use for the knives of cut-purses.

CUT-WAST, or CUT-WAIST. Meant as an Anglicising of in-sect.

Wilde hornets, (as Pliny saith) do live in the hollow trunks and cavities of trees, there keeping themselves close all the winter long, as the other cut-wasts do. Topsell on Serp., p. 94.

He had before said,

Amongst all the sorts of venomous insects, (or cut-wasted creatures) the soveraigntie and preheminence Ibid., p. 64. is due to the bees. Peculiar, I believe, to that author.

CUT-WORK. Open work in linen, stamped or cut by hand; a substitute for thread lace or embroidery.

Then his band May be disorder'd, and transform'd from lace To cut-work. Shirley (comm. B. & Fl.), Coron., i. i.e., by the swords of the enemy; a pun.

tHave your apparell sold for properties,
And you returne to cut-work.

The Citye Match, 1639, p. 38.

CUZ. A common contraction of cousin. used sometimes as a term of endearment.

Nere in his life did other language use,
But sweete lady, faire mistres, kind hart, deare couse.

Marston, Scourge, In Lectores, J.c.

+CYPRIAN-POWDER. An article of perfumery, of old date in France, and supposed to have been first brought from Cyprus.

In the end he stayed at a perfumers shop, having a deaire to buy some Cyprian powder, and pulling his money out of his pocket (for he never used a purse) he was much astonished to find three times as much money in his pocket as he had put into it, and that they were pieces of more value.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

CYPRUS: spelt also cipres, and cypress. A thin, transparent stuff, now called crape; accordingly Cotgrave translates it creepe. Both black and white were made, as at present, but the black was more common, and was used for mourning, as it is still.

Lawn, as white as driven snow, Cyprus, black as e'er was crow.

Cyprus, black as e'er was crow.

Minter's T., iv, 3.

And shadow their glory as a millener's wife does her wrought stomacher, with a smoky lawn, or a black cyprus.

Every Man in his H., 1, 3. Cobweb lawn, or the very finest lawn, is often mentioned with cyprus, and, what is singular, Cotgrave has made crespe signify both. See that word in his Dictionary.

Your partie-per-pale picture, one half drawn In solemn cyprus, th' other cobweb lawn. B. Jons. Epigr., 78. In the following passage the great transparency of it is alluded to: To one of your receiving,

Enough is shewn; a cyprus not a bosom
Hides my poor heart.

Twelf. N., iii. 1. In the stage direction to the Puritan, we see cyprus used for mourning: "Enter the widow Plus, Frances, Mary, sir Godfrey, and Edmond, all in mourning; the latter in a cyprus hat; the widow wringing her hands, and bursting out into passion, as newly come from the burial of her husband." Suppl. to Shakesp., vol. ii, p. 533. This cyprus hat the commentators explain to signify a hat with a crape hat-band in it, but the expression seems rather to imply that the whole hat was covered with crape: which might probably be the custom, though since it has shrunk to a hatband.

Byssus crispata is the Latin affixed to cipres both by Coles and Minshew, the latter of whom describes it also as "A fine curled linnen."

+CYRING. A syringe.

Moreover, whether a grosse humour, or the stone, or a clod of bloud, or any other thing of that kinde, through stopping do let the passage of the urine, it is good to put in a cyring, unlesse inflammation of the members do let it.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

D.

+DACITY. Still used in the north of England in the sense of activity, which appears to be its meaning here.

I have plaid a major in my time with as good dacity as ere a hobby-horse on 'cm all.

Sampson's Yow Breaker, 1636.

To DADE. An uncommon word, which I have found only in the following passages:
Which nourish'd and bred up at her most plenteous

pap,
No sooner taught to dade, but from their mother trip. Drayt. Polyolb., song i, p. 663.
But easily from her source as Isis gently dades.

Ibid., song xiv, p. 938.

From the context, in both places, it seems to mean to flow; but I have not found it anywhere noticed, nor can guess at its derivation.

[To dade is said of a child in its first attempts to walk; dading strings are leading strings. It means therefore in the preceding extracts to move slowly like a child in leading strings. So Drayton in another passage:]

Hy princes my immortall lines are sung.

My flowing verses grac'd with ev'ry tongue;

The little children when they learne to goe,

By painfull mothers daded to and fro,

Are taught by sugred numbers to rehearse,

And have their sweet lips season'd with my verse.

†DADE. A bird, apparently one which wades in the water.

There's neither swallow, dove, nor dade, Can soar more high, or deeper wade; Nor shew a reason from the stars, What causeth peace or civil wars. The Loval Garland, 1686.

+DADEE.

And for the issue did appoint this dadee.

Historie of Albino and Bellama, 1638, p. 84. To DAFF. A corrupted form of to doff, or to do off, to put away.

I would have day'd all other respects, and made her half myself.

Cland. Away, I will not have to do with you.

Leon. Can'st thou so day'e me?

Where is his son,

The nimble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales,

And his comrades that day'd he world aside,

And bid it pass?

There my white stole of chastity I day. And old it pass?

There my white stole of chastity I deft:
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears.

Lover's Compl., Suppl. to Sh., i, 758.

A DAG, s. An old word for a pistol. "A dag (hand gun) sclopetum manuale." Coles. Minshew also has a dagge or pistol, and derives it from the Daci, for which he is censured by Skinner; who, however, seems to have been ignorant that the word had this sense. Grose says, "A sort of pistol, called a dug, was used about the same time as hand-guns and haquebuts." Anc. Armour, i, p. 153. In the Spanish Tragedy we have, "Enter Pedringano with a pistol;" and presently, when he discharges it, the marginal direction is, "shoots the dag." Ö. Pl., iii, 168.

Whilst he would show me how to hold the dagge,
To draw the cock, to charge, and set the fiint.

Jack Drum's Entert., H 3.

Neither was any thing taken from them but these dags, which the German horsemen, after a new fashion, carried at their saddle bows; these the Turks greatly desired, delighted with the noveltic of the invention, acsired, delighted with the hoveltle of the invention, to see them shot off with a firelock, without a match.

Knolles, Hist. of the Turks, p. 743.

What d'ye call this gun,—a dag?

B. and Pl. Love's Cure, ii, 1.

The charges for a horseman, well horsed and armed; for a light horseman with a staffe, and a case of dagges, is twentie poundes.

ts twentie pounces.

Letter of I. B. in Cens. Lit., vii, 340.

†Powder! no, sir, my dagge shall be my dagger.

Decker's Whore of Bubylon, 1807.

A dag sometimes meant a rag also. DAGGER, s. It appears by some paspages to have been a fashion, for some time, to wear a dagger so as to hang quite behind, or at the back, which explains the following passage of Romeo and Juliet :

This dagger has mista'en, for lo his house
Lies empty, on the back of Montague,
And it missheathed in my daughter's bosom.
Rom. and Jul., v, 3.

A sword was worn also at the same time, whence the description in Hudibras. Canto I:

This sword a dagger had, his page, Which was but little for his age; And therefore waited on him so As dwarfs upon knights errant do. That is, behind.

That 18, Denniu.

Thou must wear thy sword by thy side,
And thy dagger handsumly at thy back.

The longer thou livest the more Pool, &c., 1570.

See you the huge bum-dagger at his backe?

Humor's Ordinarie, 1607.

†DAGGERS-DRAWING. Quarreling. AGGERS-URAWING. Quarrening.
For, being fleshed with the baits of idle gaines comming in with sitting still, and doing little or nought, they are at daggers-drawing among themselves.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

DAGGER, THE. A celebrated ordinary and public-house in Holborn, frequented, indeed, by low gamblers and sharpers, but highly in repute for several of its commodities:

My lawyer's clerk, I lighted on last night, In Holborn at the Dagger. B. Jons. Alch., i. 1. This ale was much celebrated for its strength:

This thy description of dagger ale augmenteth my thirst until I taste thereof. 01. Ulp. Fulscell, Art of Fl., H 8.

ick makes men from words Fall to drawing of swords, And quarrelling endeth their quaffing; Whilst dagger-ale barrels

Whist dagger-aic barreis
Bear off many quarrels,
And often turn chiding to laughing.

Ale against Sack, in Witts Recreation.
But we must have March beere, dooble dooble beere, dagger-ale, Rhenish.

Gascoiane's Del. Diet for Droonkardes. Dagger-pies were also famous:

Good den, good coosen; Jesu, how de'e do? When shall we cat another Dagger-pic? Out, bench-whistler, out; I'll not take thy word for a Dagger pic. Decker's Satiromastiz, p. 115. Hawkins 3. Their furmety also is mentioned: Her grace would have you eat no more Woolsack pies, Nor Dagger-furmety. B. Jons. Alch., v. 2.

DAGGER'D ARMS. See Arms.

DAGGER OF LATH. The weapon given to the Vice in the Old Mora-Supposed to be alluded to by Falstaff in the following speech: A king's son!—If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geene. I'll never wear hair on my face more.

1 Hen. IF, ii, 4. rear hair on my face more. The same weapon is mentioned in the description of Shallow: And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him.

2 Hen. IV, iii, 2.

sworn brother to him.

Again in Tweltth Night:

I am gone, sir, And anon, sir, And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again, In a trice. Like to the old vice. Your need to sustain : Who with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, Ah ha, to the devil.

[Inclination, introduced as the Vice in the play of Sir Thomas More, says, Hack with these boyes and saucic great knaves!

(florishing his dagger.)
What stand ye heere so bigge in your braves?
My dagger about your coxecombes shall walke,
If I may but so much as heare ye chat or talke.

DAGONET. Sir Dagonet was said to be the attendant fool of king Arthur. I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show. 2 Hen. IV, iii, 2.

I'll lose my wedding to behold these Dagonets.

The Wits, O. Pl., viii, 429.

And upon a day sir Dagonet, king Arthur's foole, came into Cornewaile, with two sourers with him.

Hist. of K. Arthur, 4to, 1634, 2d p., N 2.

Then sir Dagonet rode to king Marke, and told him how he had sped in that forrest; and therefore, said sir Dagonet, beware ye, king Marke, that yee come not about that well in the forrest, for there is a naked foole, and that foole and I foole met together, and he had almost slaine mee.

NAINE Stiple Stiple Accessed Administration of the said and the sai Stink; noisome effluvia. +DAINE. Still used in this sense in the west of

From dainty beds of downe, to bed of strawe full fayne,

From bowres of heavenly hewe, to dennes of dains.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1587. DAINTY, phr. To make dainty, to hold out, or refuse, affecting to be delicate or dainty; to scruple.

Ah ha, my mistresses I which of you all Will now deny to dance? She that makes deints.

she, I'll swear, hath corns. Rom. and Jul., i, 5. This is the true reading, doubtless, in the following passage:

And yet make dainty to feed more daintily
At this easier rate.

e. B. and Fl. Wil at Sev. W., ii, p. 279. It is printed daymy, by a most easy change from daynty. The commentators make nothing of it.

To make nice means the same. See

He that would mount To honour, must not make dainly to use The head of his mother, back of his father. &c. B. and Fl. Honest Man's Fort., act iii, p. 421.

DAINTY MAKETH DERTH, prov. A quaint proverb, used by Spenser, signifying that niceness makes an artificial scarcity, without necessity. The affected shyness of the lady, in the following instance, was the only obstacle to familiarity.

With chaunge of chear the seeming simple maid
Let fall her eien, as shamefast, to the earth;
And yielding soft, in that she nought gaiusaid.
So forth they rode, he feigning seemly merth,
And she coy lookes: so dainty, they say, maketh derth.

P. Queen, I, ii, 37.

I have not found it in Ray, or Fuller. †DAMASCEN. The old name for a damson, that species of plum having been, as it is said, brought from Damascus.

The damascens are much commended if they be sweete and ripe, and they are called damascens of the citic of Damascus of Soria: they purge choler, coole heate, quench thirst, refresh and moisten the body.

The Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

Wine of damascens and other hard plumbs.

The Accomplished Female Instructor, 1719.

DAMMAREL. An effeminate person, fond of courtship; from dameret. French, which Cotgrave thus defines: "An effeminate fondling, or fond carpet knight; one that spends his whole time in entertaining or courting women."

The lawyer here may learn divinity, The divine, lawes or faire astrology, The dammarel respectively to fight, The duellist to court a mistresse right.

On Person's Varieties, 1635, in Belos's

Anecd. of Lit., vol. vi, p. 51.

†DAMMEE, or DAMMY. The practice of profane swearing was carried to such an excess among the rakes of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, that dammy, or dammy-boy, came into use as an ordinary term for a riotous person.

To valiant Dammee.

Damme, thy brain is valiant, 'tis confest;
Thou more, that with it every day dar'st jest
Thy self into fresh braules; but call'd upon,
With swearing damme, answer'st every one.
Keep thy self there, and think thy valour right,
He that dares damme himself, dares more then fight.

With Recreations, 1654.

Depriver of those solid joys, Which sack creates; author of noise Among the roaring punks and dammy-boys.

Cleveland's Works.

To DAMN was used sometimes with no further meaning than that of to condemn to death.

demn to death.

Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ast. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
Jul. Cas., iv, 1.

Do this, or this,

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform 't, or else we damn thee. Ant. and Cl., i, 1. Wherefore, shriefe, execute with speedy pace
The dampned wights, to cutte off hopes of grace.

Promos and Cassandra, ii, 3.

It is Johnson's third sense.

To DAMNIFY. To hurt or injure. When now he saw himself so freshly reare,
As if late fight had nought him damnifyde.

Spens. F. Q., I, xi, 52.

DAMOSEL; since contracted to damsel. Damoiselle, old Fr.

C. I was taken with a damosel. K. Was it a pro-claim'd damosel? C. This was no damosel neither, sir; she was a virgin.

L. L. Lost, i, 1.

And straight did enterprize

Th' adventure of the errant damosel.

Spens. F. Q., II, i, 19. DAN. A corruption of Don, for Dominus; originally applied to monks (as the Dom of the Benedictines), afterwards to persons of all respectable conditions. It is common in Chaucer; and used by Spenser and Shakespeare. After it began to grow obsolete, it was used, like other words so circumstanced, in a kind of jocular way; as Dan Cupid, &c. See Todd's Johnson.

†DANCE, phr. To lead a dance, to give trouble. To dance in a rope, to be hanged.

To meete together on such or such a morning to hunt To meete together on such or such a morning to hunt or course a hare, where, if she be hunted with hounds, shee will leade them such a dance, that perhaps a horse or two are kil'd, or a man or two spoil'd or hurt with leaping hedges or ditches.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. If any of them chane'd to be made dance ith' rupe, they thought him happy to be so freed of the care and trouble attends the miserable indigent.

Comical Hist. of Francion, 1655.

ANDIPRAT. A dwarf, or child. Skinner says, perhaps it is derived DANDIPRAT. from danten, to sport, in Dutch, and pract, trifles; or perhaps from our own word dandle. The French dandin is referred to by etymologists, but that means a fool, or blockhead, not a dwarf. Coles translates it by pumilio, nanus, &c.; Cotgrave by nain: and Minshew refers the reader to the word dwarf for the synonyms. Camden says that Henry VII "stamped small coin called dandyprats." Remains, p. 177. But that clearly meant a dwarf coin. It is probably from dandle. Whether prat is formed from brat may be doubted : but from the same source comes Jack-a-dandy. and the very modern abbreviation of it, dandu.

17, (analy.

This Heuresis, this invention, is the proudest Jackanapes, the pertest self conceited boy that ever breathed; because, forsooth, some odd poet, or some such fantastic fellows, make much on him, there's no ho with him; the vile dandiprat will overlook the proudest of his acquaintance. Lingus, O.P.L. v, 173.

There's no good fellowship in this dandiprat, this divedapper, (didapper) as in other pages.

Middleton's More Dissemblers, &c., Anc. Dr., iv, 373.

†Pumilio, Colum nanus, Juvenali. . . Nain. A dwarfe or dandiprat: one of an exceeding small stature.

or dandiprat: one of an exceeding small stature. Nomenclator.

+DANGEROUSLY. In a position of danger.

A poore woman, seeing him sleepe so dangerously, eyther to fal backward, or to hurt his head leaning so against a post.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

DANSKE, Denmark; and DANSKERS, Danes.

By chance one Curan, son unto
A prince in Danske, did see
The maid, with whom he fell in love,
As much as man might be.
Religues of Anc. Engl. Poetry, ii, 240.
Them at the last on Dansk their lingring fortunes drave, Where Holst unto their troops sufficient harbour gave.

Drayt. Polyolb., xi, p. 864. Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris, And how, and who, what means, and where they keep, What company, at what expence. Haml .. ii. 1. The author of the Glossary to Lyndsay considers this as an erroneous interpretation, and says that it means Dantzickers; but, if he had looked at the context, he would have seen that Polonius's speech would have been nonsense with that interpretation; for how were they to find out Hamlet by inquiring for Dantzickers?

Also Danish: It is the king of Denmark doth your prince his daughter crave, And note, it is no little thing with us allie to have;

By league or leigure, Danske can fence or front you, friend or foe.

Alb. Bagl., iii, 16, p. 70. So that he makes a noise when he's on horseback, Like a Danske drummer, O, 'tis excellent.

White Devil, O. Pl., vi 264.

In that work, indeed, it is printed Dantzic, by mistake, or by way of correction to the text; but the true reading is Danske, as indeed the metre shows it should be.

To DARE. One sense of this word was to terrify, as in the following passage. [The A.-S. derian.]

Which drawne, a crimson dew Fell from his bosome on the earth; the wound did dare him sore.

Chapm. Homer, xi, p. 151. Hence it seems to have been applied to the catching of larks, by terrifying them with a hawk. This method is thus described in the Gentleman's Recreation. Of the Wood-Lark: "The way to take them in June, July, and August, is with a hobby (a kind of hawk) after this manner: Get out in a dewy morning, and go to the sides of some hills which lie to the rising of the sun, where they most usually frequent; and having sprung them, observe where they fall; then surround them twice or thrice with your hobby on your fist, causing him to hover when you draw near, by which means they will lie still 'till you clap a net over them, which you carry on the point of a stick." Page 67. This method Fowling, 8vo edition. is alluded to in the following passage:

That hovers over her, and dares her dayly.

B. & Fl. Pilgrim, i, 1.

Thus Chapman also:

A cast of falcons on their merry wings,

Daring the stooped prey that shifting flies.

Gentleman Usher.

All hush, all tremble, like a lark that's dar'd.

But there is another in the wind, some castrell

Other modes of daring larks were also practised, as with mirrors, &c. See the article doring, or daring, in Rees's edition of Chambers. In one method of this kind, scarlet cloth was used to dare or frighten the larks.

If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewel nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks. Hen. VIII, iii, 2.

†Gods! that the man, who singly in the field
Shuns me, as the dar'd lark the tow'ring hawk,
Shou'd yet nourish such presumptuous hopes.

The Recengful Queen, 1698.

In a very obscure passage of Measure for Measure, the most intelligible sense assigned by any of the critics to the verb dare, is that of to challenge, or call forth. See the notes on that play, act iv, sc. 4, p. 131, ed. 1778. DARE was used sometimes as a substantive:

Sextus Pompeius

Hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands
The empire of the sea.

Ant. and Cl., i, 2.

It lends a lustre, a more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprize,
Than if the earl were here.

1 Hen. IF, iv, 1.

DARGISON. An obscure word or name, on which Mr. Whalley, in his notes on Ben Jonson, throws no manner of light. There are traces of the existence of an old song of that name. In Ritson's Ancient Songs, is "a Ballet of the Hathorne Tree, which is directed to be sung "after [i. e., to the tune of Donkin Dargeson;" and a song to the "tune of Dargeson" is there said to be in the possession of John Baynes, Esq. Two fragments of such an old ballad are preserved in the Isle of Gulls, a comedy, by John Day; where it appears that carrying persons "to Dargison," implied catching or detaining them.

The girls are ours,
We have won them away to Dargison.
Act v, sign. H 3, b.

And again.

An ambling nag, and adowne, adowne, We have borne her away to Dargison. In the following, a girl is to be got from Dargison:

But if you get the lass from Dargison, What will you do with her?

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 3. Mr. Gifford, on this passage, says, "In some childish book of knight errantry, which I formerly read, but cannot now call to mind, there is a dwarf of this name, who accompanies a lady of great beauty and virtue through many perilous adventures, as her guard and guide. I have no great faith in the identity of this personage, but he may serve till a better is found." In all the passages. Dargison, whether a person or a place, holds the objects in confinement or captivity. Mr. G. is the most likely man living to catch this catcher.

To DARK, v. for to darken.

Which dark'd the sea, much like a cloud of vultures
That are convented after some great fight.
Nables's Hannibal & Scipio, E 4.
And dark'd Apollo's countenance with a word.
Lingua, O. Pl., v. 211.

15

Reason hath clear'd my sight, and drawn the vail
Of dustage that so dark'd my understanding.
Albumacar, O. Pl., vii, 250.
Sorrow doth darke the judgement of the wytte.
Ferrex & Porrex, O. Pl., i. 137.

DARKLING. A word still current in poetry, having been used by Milton, Involved in Dryden, and others. darkness.

O wilt thou darkling leave me?—Do not so.

Mids. N. Dr., ii. 3.

Steevens

226

O sun,
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in! darkling stand
The varying shore o' the world!

Ant. 5: Cl., iv, 13. Readers of Shakespeare. who are not versed in botany, do not, I believe, in general know, that this is still the English name for the genus lolium, which contains raygrass, a very troublesome weed, called lolium perenne. See Epitome of Hortus Kewensis, p. 25. refers to Gerard.

Her fallow leas The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory Hen. V, v, 2. Poth root upon.

Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds. With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow In our sustaining corn.

Lear,

Lear, iv, 4. Gerard says it is the most hurtful of weeds. Drayton gives it a crimson flower, perhaps mistaking the wild poppy for it. Polyolb., xv, p. 946.

DARNIX, or DARNEX, corrupted from Dornick (Coles, panni Tornacenses). A manufacture of Tournay, used for carpets, hangings, and other purposes; from Dornick, which is the Flemish name for that city.

With a fair Darnez carpet of my own

Laid cross, for the more state.

Laid cross, for the more state.

B. 5: Fl. Noble Gent., v, 1.

Look well to the Durneicke hangings, that it play not the court page with us. Sampson's Von-breaker, act iii. See DORNICK.

In Cotgrave, under Verd, is "Huis verd, a peece of tapestry or Darnix hanging before a door.'

To DARRAIGN. To arrange an army, or set it in order of battle. certain derivation. See Todd.

Royal commanders, be in readiness——
Darraiga your battle, for they are at hand. 3 Hen. VI, ii, 2.

Darraign our battles, and begin the fight.
Guy, Earl of Warnick, Trag. Often for to fight a battle, and even when between two combatants: For one of Edgar's friends taking in hand to darraine battle with Organ, in defence of Edgar's innocencic, slue him within lystes.

Holinsk. Hist. Scotl., R 2.

him within systes. Zooman. Zees. Soor., Therewith they gan to hurtlen grievously, Redoubted battaile ready to darrague.

Spens. F. Q., I, iv, 40.

These were Sansjoy and the Redcrosse knight.

Thus again, I, vii, 11.

A Romish priest, whose DARREL. fraudulent practices and impostures were detected by Harsenet, archbishop of York.

Did you ne'er read, sir, little Darrel's tricks.
With the boy o' Burton, and the seven in Lancashire,
Somers at Nottingham? all these do teach it.

B. Joss. Devil an Ass, v, 3.

Some particulars of their impostures are specified in the same speech. He is mentioned in Ben Jonson's Underwoods:

Take need,
This age will lend no faith to Darrel's deed.
Vol. vi, p. 423. In the folio [1640], and in Whallev's edition, it is printed Dorrel, but clearly the same person is meant. Mr. Gifford has printed it so. See also his notes on the Devil is an Ass. †DASH. To dash through, to bring to an end. Transigitur. The matter is brought to a point, it is ended. Its dispatched. They have made a finall conclusion. Its dasht through. There now no more to doe.

Terence in English, 1618.

+To DASH. To mix wine with some other substance.

Other Substance. Francion afterwards called for the vintner, and complained to him that he had sent up wine so heavily dashed, that those poor men of the city who were not so much accustomed to drink as those of his retinue, were extremely intoxicated, although they had not drunk so much as his servants had done.

Comical Hist. of Francion, 1655.

+DASIBEARD. A fool.

Sir Cayphas, I saye seckerly,
We that bene in companye
Must needes this dosebeirde destroye,
That wickedly hase wroughte.

The Chester Plays, vol. ii.

†DASTARDIZE. To make a coward of. I believe it is not in the power of Ployden, to dastardize or cowe your spirits, until you have overcom him. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

DATES. This fruit of the palm-tree was once a common ingredient in all kinds of pastry, and some other dishes; and often supplied a pun for comedy.

They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Rom. & Jul., iv, 4. Your date is better in your pye and your porridge, than in your check.

All's W. i. 1.
Ay, a minc'd man; and then to be bak'd with no date in the pye,—for then the man's date is out. Tr. and Cr., i, 2.

DAUPHIN MY BOY. See DOLPHIN. †DAVY. The name of a proficient in the practice of sword and buckler, who appears to have been celebrated at the close of the sixteenth century.

At sword and buckler little Davy was nobody to him, and as for rapier and dagger, the Germane may be his journeyman. Dekker's Knights Conjuring, 1607.

227

A DAW. Metaphorically used for a foolish fellow; the daw being reckoned a foolish bird.

I' the city of kites and crows?—What an ass it is!
Then thou dwell'st with dases too. Coriol., iv, 5.
As fit a sight it were to see a goose shodde, or a sadled

As to hear the pratting of any such Jack Straw,
For when hee hath all done, I compte him but a very daw.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 256.

To DAW. To daunt, or frighten.

She thought to dass her now as she had done of old Romens and Juliet, Suppl. to Shak., i, 333. You dase him too much, in troth, sir.

B. Jons. Devil an Ass, iv, 1.

And thinking her to daw,

Whom they supposed faln in some inchanted swound.

Drayt. Polyolb., vi, p. 770. To daw, Mr. Todd says, is now used in the north for to awaken: if so. this is the sense here: and the morning metaphorically awakens when it dawns.

awns.

The other side from whence the morning daws.

Polyolb., x.

A DAWCOCK. A male daw, a jackdaw: but metaphorically an empty, chattering fellow: in the proverb given as equivalent to "Graculus inter musas."

The dosnel dawcock comes dropping among the doctors.

Withals' Dict., p. 558.

Who, with new magicke, will hereafter represent unto you the castle of Atlas full of dawcocks.

Hosp. of Incurable Fooles, 4to, 1600.

To have seen the day, to have +DAY. lived long.

An old woman is one that hath seene the day, and is commonly ten yeares younger or ten years elder by her owne confession then the people know she is. Stephen's Essayes, 1615.

+DAYING. Adjourning; delaying.

Nowe will I goe meete with Chremes; I will intreate him for his daughter to my sonne in marriage; and if I doe obtaine her, why should I make any more daying for the matter, but marrie them out of the way.

Terence in English, 1614.

†DAY-BOOK. A journal.

Diarium. Registre journel. . . . A daie booke, conteining such acts, deedes, and matters as are dailie Nomenclator. Viewing the many rarities, riches and monuments of that sacred building, the deceased benefactors whereof our day-bookes make mention.

MS. Lansd., 213, written in 1634.

A DAY-BED. Doubtless a couch, or sofa; as we find below that they were sometimes in every chamber.

Calling my officers about me, in my branch'd velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.

Ah ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,

But on his knees at meditation.

Rick III, iii, 7.

Above there are day-beds, and such temptations I dare not trust, sir. B. & Fl. Rule a Wife, &c., i, 6.

In the same play:

M. Is the great couch up,
The duke of Medina scut? A. Tis up, and ready.
M. And day-beds in all chambers? A. In all, lady.
Act iii, 1.

The great ducal couch was doubtless more luxurious.

A DAYS-MAN. An umpire, or arbitrator; from his fixing a day for decision. Mr. Todd shows that day sometimes meant judgment. See in Day, 10.

For he is not a man as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgement: neither is there any days-man [marg. umpire] betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both. Job, ix, 33.

The word, though disused, is still retained in late editions.

If neighbours were at variance, they ran not streight

Daissmen took up the matter, and cost them not a straw. New Custome, O. Pl., i, 260.

To whom Cymochles said, For what art thou

That mak'st thyself his dayes-man to prolong
The vengeaunce prest? Spens. F. Q., II, viii, 28.
In Switzerland (as we are informed by Sinderus) they had some common arbitrators, or dayesmen, in every had some common arbitrators, or dayesmen, in every towne, that made a friendly composition betwirt man and man. Burl. Anal., Democr. to Reader, p. 50. 45imus and Crito, my neighbours, are at controversio here about there lands, and they have made me umpire and daictman betwirt them. I will goe, and say as I told you, that I cannot attende on these men to daic. Terence in English, 1614.

+DAYS-WORK.

AYS-WORK. A measure of land.
You must know, that there goe 160 perches to one arre, 80 perches to halfe an arre, 40 perches to one roode, which is a of an arre, ten daies worke to a roode, foure perches to a daies worke, 16 foote and a halfe to a perch.

Norden's Surveiors Dialogue, 1610.

To DAZE. To dazzle.

While flashing beames do daze his feeble eyen.

Spens. P. Q., I, iv, 9.
That being now with her huge brightness daz'd,

Base thing I can no more endure to view, But, looking still on her, I stand amaz'd At wondrous sight of her celestial hue.

Spens. Sonnet. 3.

Let your steele,
Glistring against the sunne, daze their bright eyes.
Heyw. Golden Age, E 4.

Nor noble birth, nor name of crowne or raine, 2... Which oft doth daze the common people's eye. Harr. Ariost., xliv, 61.

Dryden has used it.

†My dreadful thoughts been drawen upon my face In blotted lines with ages iron pen,
The lothlic morpheu saffroned the place,
Where beuties damaske daz'd the eies of men.
Drayton's Shepherds Garland, 1593.

+DEAD-HORSE. This term is applied now to work the wages of which have been paid before it is done. Its meaning in the following passage is not quite clear.

Ply. Now you'l wish I know, you ne'r might wear
Foul linnen more, never be low zy agen,
Nor ly perdue with the fat sutters wife
In the provoking vertue of dead horse,
Your dear delights, and rare camp pleasures.

Carteright's Siedge, 1651.

+DEAD-LIFT. A position of desperation; a last extremity.

Here is some of Hannibal's medicine he carried always in the pommel of his sword, for a dead lift; a very active poison

The recre is conducted by Fortitude, whose assistant is Religion, for these are the two most valiant vertues fittest for dead lifts.

Pathomackia, 1630, p. 20. Aur. Good! this fool will help me I see to cheat him self; At a dead lift, a little hint will serve me. I'l do't for him to the life.

Cowley, Cutter of Coleman Street, 1663.

Phil. Who's there? Mol. Your friend at a dead lift; your landlord Molops.

Cartwright's Royall Slave, 1651.

Expecting now no other then death, they betook Expecting now no other then death, they below themselves to prayer, the best lever at such a dead lift. Select Lives of English Worthies, n.d. Lion. But is there no way to come at her? Thou usest to be good at a dead lift.

Sedley's Bellamira, 1687. Dreams have for many ages been esteemed as the noblest resources at a dead lift; the dreams of Homer were held in such esteem that they were styled golden dreams.

Gent. Mag. for Sept., 1751.

+DEAD-MAN'S-THUMB. An old name for a species of meadow flower.

Then round the medow did she walk. Catching each flower by the stalk. Such flowers as in the meadow grew, The dead man's thumb, an heart all blew. Select Ayres and Dialogues, 1659.

+DEAD-MEN'S-SHOES. Inheritances. And tis a general shrift that most men use, But yet tis tedious waiting dead mens shoes. Fletcher's Poems, p. 256.

DEAD PAY. The continued pay of soldiers actually dead, which dishonest officers took for themselves: a species of peculation often alluded to.

Most of them [captains] know arithmetic so well, That in a muster, to preserve dead-pays, They'll make twelve stand for twenty.

Webster's Appins, v, i., Anc. Dr., v, 437.
O you commanders,
That like me have no dead-pays, nor can cozen
The commissary at a muster.

Mass. Unn. como., iv, ...

Can you not gull the state finely.

Muster your ammunition cassocks stuff'd with straw,
Number a hundred forty-nine dead-pays,
And thank Heaven for your arithmetic.

Davenant's Siege, act iii. Mass. Unn. Comb., iv, 2.

DEAD-STAND. A dilemma; a fix.

I was at a dead stand in the cours of my fortunes, when it pleas'd God to provide me lately an employment to Spain, whence I hope there may arise both repute and profit.

Hossell's Familiar Letters, 1650. +DEAD-STAND.

+DEADLY. Dreadful; very great; excessive.

Cessive.

To the privy seale, where I signed a deadly number of pardons, which do trouble me to get nothing by.

Pepys' Diary, Dec., 1660

Now, sir, what great judges these are, and by what measures they proceed; and how likely they are to be very severe discerners of what is worthy, and what is not, may be easily seen by those deadly with arts they make use of to disparage that holy profession.

Backer's Observations, 1671, p. 181.

DEAD'ST, for deadest. A licentious superlative, from dead, used as in the phrase "dead of night," for the middle or depth of the night. It is, however, but awkwardly applied to the height or meridian of feasting. which surely has nothing dead in it.

Sickness' pale hand

Laid hold on thee, ev'n in the dead'st of feasting.

Decker, Honest W'A., O. Pl., iii, 263.

+DEAF-MAN'S EAR.

But his mawe must be capon-crambd each day, He must ere long be triple beneficed, Els with his tongue hee'le thunderbolt the world, And shake each peasant by his deafe-mans eare.

The Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

DEAL. Simply as a quantity, whether more or less. In modern language, it is either joined with great, or has that epithet implied, without using

All the ground that they had——a man might have bought with a small deals of money.

Ascham, Toxoph., p. 93.

†DEALTH. A portion, or division. From deal, to divide.

Then know, Bellama, since thou aimst at wealth, Where Fortune has bestowd her largest dealth. Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638.

DEAL-WINE. See DELE-WINE.

DEAR, adj. Expensive seems to have been its first sense, whence it was applied to anything highly valued or beloved; and, as we much value what is our own, it obtained occasionally the meaning of a possessive. Such was probably the origin of a peculiar application of φίλοι, in Greek, as we find it in Homer, in many passages, where it is commonly rendered by the Latin possessive, suus (φίλον κήρ, Il., A, 491, &c.; φίλον ήτορ, Il., Γ, 31; φίλα γοῦναθ, Il., Η, 271; and in many other passages). So also Shakespeare:

Shakespeare:
Since my dear soil was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election

West and the stand for thee. Hand, iii, 2.

See Steevens on that passage. By another application of the original sense, it came also to mean high, excessive, or anything superlative, even superlatively bad. As here, So I, made lame by fortune's descret spite, Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth.

Sh. Sonnet. 37. Let us return

And strain what other means is left unto us At our dear peril. Timon Would I had met my dearest foe in heav'n Timon of A., v, 3. . Haml., i, 2.

Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio.
You meet your dearest enemy in love,
With all his hate about him.

B. and Fl. Maid in the Mill. ment. Rom. and Jul., v, S. In dear employment. That is, very important.

Put your known valours on so dear a business, And have no other second than the danger. B. Jone. Catil., i, 4. DEA 220 DEA

A fondling diminutive DEARLING. of dear. So written by Spenser, who chose to antiquate his language. His contemporaries used durling, which is still in use.

DEARN, or DERNE. Lonely, melancholy, solitary. Sax.

By many a derne and painfull perch Of Pericles the careful search— Is made, &c. Pericles, Pr. of Tyre, iii, Induction. Dearne is the reading of the old quartos in the following passage of Lear, instead of

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time.

It there stands.

If wolves had at thy gate heard that dearns time. Lear. iii. 7.

Here it seems to mean earnest:

Who wounded with report of beauties pride, Unable to restrain his derne desire. Wars of Cyrus, 4to, sign. C 2.

In the old Scottish dialect it was used for secret, dark, and is so explained in the Glossary to Gawin Douglas's Virgil, and by bishop Percy in this passage of an old Scottish ballad:

I' deen with thee bot gif I dale.

Doubtless I am bot deid.

Reliques, vol. ii, p. 76.

I' dern, there means in secret. The word occurs frequently in the ballad. DEARNFUL. Melancholy.

The birds of ill presage This luckless chance foretold

By dernful noise, &c. Spens. Mourning Muse, l. 177.

DEARNLY. In a melancholy manner. They heard a ruefull voice that dearnly cride,
With percing shrickes and many a dolefull lay.

Spens. P. Q., II, i, 85.

Some explain it earnestly, but perhaps erroneously; it is rather severely, dreadfully, in the following passage:

Seeking adventures hard to exercise,
Their puissance whylome full dernly tryde.

Sp. F. Q., III, i, 14.

DEARTH. That this word originally meant dearness, is evident from the form of it. (Dearth from dear, as trueth from true, and ruth from rue, &c.) It has long been confined to mean chiefly scarcity of provisions, unless metaphorically applied to other subjects. Dr. Johnson considers it as having the original sense in the following passage, which would otherwise be tautology.

But in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror.

Haml., v, 2.

He explains it thus: " Dearth is dear-ness, value, price. And his internal qualities of such value and rarity." DEATH, with the article the prefixed, occurring in Matth., xv, 4, and Mark, vii, 10, in the common version of the New Testament, it has been thought that the death had been taken up as a scriptural phrase; but the translators could have no motive for introducing such a phrase, had it not been already current; and it is found in Chaucer, and other writers, prior to too literal a version of la mort. They were adradde of him as of the death.

Cant. Tales, 607. It was latterly applied, more particularly, to death by judicial sentence; and in this way the translators of the Gospel have used it:

any established version. It was probably, as Mr. Tyrwhitt observes, only

He that curseth father and mother, let him die the death Loc. cit. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:

Other offenders we will pause upon. 1 Hen. IV, v, 5.
Redeem thy brother

By yielding up thy body to my will,
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness, &c. Meas. for Meas., ii, 4.
For I confess,

I have deserv'd, when it so pleaseth you,
To die the death. Tancr. & Gism., O. Pl., ii, 208.

Instances, however, of other usage, are not wanting:

Are not wanting:

The king is almost wounded to the death,
And in the fortune of my lord your son
Prince Harry slain outright.

1 bleed still, I am hurt to the death.

I found not myself
So far engag'd to hell, to prosecute
To th' death what I had plotted.

B. and Fl. Custom of C., iii, 5.

I'ld be torn in piece With wild Hippolytus, nay prove the death, Every limb over, ere I'ld trust a woman.

B. Jons. Catiline, iv. 6. +DEATHFUL. Mortal, in opposition to deathless, immortal.

That with a deathless goddess lay
A deathful man. Chapm. Hom. H. to Venus. DEATH'S HEAD RING. By a strange inconsistency, similar to the methodistical piety of Mrs. Cole in the Minor, the procuresses of Elizabeth's time wore usually a ring with a death's head upon it, and probably with the common motto, memento mori.

As for their death (that of bawds) how can it be bad, since their wickedness is always before their eyes, and a death's-head most commonly on their middle finger?

Marston's Dutch Courtesas. and a death s-mean Marston's Dutch Courtesan.
Sell some of my cloaths to buy thee a death's head, and put upon thy middle finger; your least considering bawds do so much. Massinger's Old Lase, iv, 1.
As if I were a bawd, no ring pleases me but a death's Northward Hos. See Mr. Steevens's note on the word death's-head, in 2 Hen. IV, ii, 3, which passage seems indeed to imply that the motto usually accompanied the device:

Do not speak like a death's-head; do not bid me remember my end.

DEATH'S-MAN. An executioner.

But, if you ever chance to have a child, Look in his youth to have him so cut off As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince.

For who so base would such an office have As slanderous deathsman to so base a slave?

Shak. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 532.

I'll send a deaths-man with you, this is he.

Death of Rob. E. of Hunt., sig. I 2, b.

Also in K 3.

If a rest can be among the mones
Of dying wretches; where each minute all
Stand still, afraid to hear the deaths-man's call. Browne, Brit. P., ii, 3, p. 68.

DEBASHED, for abashed.

But sillie I Dau same 1,
Daunted with presence of such majestie,
Fell prostrate down, debask'd with reverent shame.
Niccols, Engl. Eliza, Induction.

DEBATE. Contention, discord, fighting.

Each change of course unjoints the whole estate,
And leaves it thrall to ruine by debate.
Ferrex 3: Porrex, O. Pl., i, 122.
Now, lords, if heav'n doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields.
2 Hen. IV, iv, 4.

The debate there mentioned was the rebellion. Mr. Todd properly observed, that debate is not now used of hostile contest.

To DEBATE. To fight.

Well could he tourney, and in lists debate. Spens. F. Q., II, i, 6. This should be the primitive sense, as being nearest to the etymology, debattre, Fr.

DEBAUSH'D. The same as deboshed. below; debauched.

Or I must take it else to say you're villains, For all your golden coats, debaush'd, base villains. B. and Fl. Valentinian, iii, 2.

DEBAUSHMENT, or DEBOSHMENT. Debauching, corruption of modesty.

Here are the heads of that distemperature
From whence these strange debaushments of our nymphes, And vile deluding of our shepheards, springs.

Daniel, Queen's Arcadia, i. 4, p. 338.

A good vicious fellow, that complies well with the deboshments of the time, and is fit for it.

Earle, Microc., § 77.
†Although the heats of my youth did inforce me to debanchments, as I have represented to you, yet even then I entertained thoughts of preferment.

Comical History of Francium, 1655.

DEBELL, v. To conquer by war. This word, which Milton has used, was not introduced by him, but had been in use before.

No better Spanish Cacus sped, for all his wondrous Whom Hercules, from out his realme, debelled at the length.

Warn. Albion, b. ii, ch. 8. DEBOSHED. Formerly a common corruption of debauched.

Why thou debosh'd fish thou, was there ever a man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day?

Tempest. iii. 3.

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave, With all the spots o' the world tax'd, and debosk'd.

Thy lady is a scurvy lady—
And, though I never heard of her, a deboek'd lady,
And thou a squire of low degree.

B. and Fl. Little Fr. Lawyer, ii, 2.
With such a valiant discipline she destroy'd
That deboek'd prince, Bad Desire.

City Night Cap, O. Pl., xi, 863.

Used also metaphorically for spoiled. dismantled, rendered unserviceable: Wonder! what can their arsenal spawn so fast?

wonder! what can their artenal spawn so last?

Last year his barks and gallies were debosh'd;

This spring they sprout again.

Fuimus Troes., O. Pl., vii, 503.

Thus Cotgrave, "Desbaucher, to debosh, marre, corrupt, spoyle, &c." Coles has to deboist also, as synonymous. See also some of the examples in Mr. Steevens's note on the passage cited from the Tempest. Sometimes also deboish. See Todd.

+DEBT-BOOK. A ledger. TDEBT-BOOK. A ledger.

Hear. The Great Turk loves no musick.

Cred. Doe's he not so? nor I. I'l light tobacco
With my sum-totals; my debt-books shall sole Pyes at young Andrew's wedding.

Carturight's Ordinary, 1651.

To DECARD. To discard, to cast away

a card out of a hand in playing.

B. Deth your majesty mark that?

K. Deth your majesty mark that?

You are the king that she is weary of,
And my sister the queen that he will cast away.

Ph. Can you decard, madam?

Qu. Hardly, but I must do hurt.

Ph. But spare not any to confirm your game.

Dunb Knight, O. Pl., iv, 485.

+To DECEASE. To die. We still use the participle.

Baign'd two and twenty yeeres, then did decease.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To DECK, v. To adorn. When I have deck'd the sca with drops full salt. Temp., i, 1.

This line has occasioned many explanations and conjectural readings, which is the only reason for introducing the word. Probably the true sense is that which is still common: When I have grac'd the sea with drops, &c.

A DECK of cards. A pack. But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was slily finger'd from the deck.

3 Hen. VI, v, 1.

I'll deal the cards, and cut you from the deck.

Two Maids of Moreclacke, 1609
Well, if I chance but once to get the deck,
To deal about and shuffle as I would.

Solimus, Emp. of the Turks, 1638. In the following passage, a heap or pile of ballads is so called, in allusion to a pack of cards:

And, for a song, I have
A paper-blurrer, who on all occasions,
For all times, and all seasons, hath such trinkets
Ready in the deck.

Mass. Guardian, iii, 3. See Mr. Gifford's note.

+DECKING. An ornament. Achemes: m. attires, deckings, ornaments for women. Cotgrave.

+To DECLINE. To turn aside.

When feasts his heart might have declined, With which they welcom'd him. Chapman, R., v, 807.

+To DECORE. To adorn.

Her wav'ring hair disparpling flew apart
In seemly shed; the rest with reckles art
With many-a curling ring decor'd her face,
And gave her glashie browes a greater grace. · Du Bartas

To DECREW. To decrease.

Sir Arthegall renew'd His strength still more, but she still more decrew'd.

Spens. F. Q., IV, vi, 18.

+To DECROWN. To deprive of the

Not only claims to be spiritual head of all Christians, but also to have an imperial civil power over all kings and emperors, dethroning and decrowning princes with and emperors, deturoning his foot as pleaseth him.

Wilson's Life of James I, 1658.

+To DEE. To die. A form used either for rhyme, or most frequently as a northern phrase.
The suckling babes upon their mothers knee,
His cruell cut-throats made them all to dee.

Du Bartas. Con. Heaven blisse us, and give us leave to dee first.
Can he be so unkaind, to scorn me so? Wea's me.

Brome's Northern Lass.

Con. I we' not go to't, nor I mun not go to't,
For love, nor yet for fee;
For I am a maid, and will be a maid,

And a good one till I dee. Thid DEED OF SAYING. An obscure expression used by Shakespeare to express "the doing of what has been said."

Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation; performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use.

Timon of A., v, S.

This is fully confirmed by a passage cited from Hamlet:

As he, in his particular act and place,
May give his saying, deed.

Act i, sc. 3.

See the note on the former passage.

+DEEPE. Dieppe, in France. Hall. You shall see a dapper Jacke, that hath been but once at Deepe, wring his face round about as a man would stirre up a mustard-pot, and talke English through the teeth. Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1892.

Used in the following passage for wild animals in general.

Wild animals in gone and deer,
But mice and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Lear, iii, 4.

The reading has been questioned, and altered to geer, and cheer; but is confirmed by the original passage of the ballad, entitled Sir Bevis of Southampton, of which it is a parody:

Rattes and myce, and such smal dere, Was his meate that seven yere.

It was probably used rather for the sake of the rhyme, than as any established sense of the word.

To DEFAIL. To prove defective. Defailler, Fr.

To DEFALK. To cut off. Defalco, Lat.

And doe not see how much they must defalte Of their accounts, to make them gree with ours.

Daniel, Philotas, p. 195.

And to the end, that the policie wisely begun he might by quicke dispatch make safe, out of the seventeene daies provision of corne which the souldiors as they marched forward in their expedition carried on their neckes, he defalted a portion, and layed up in the same holds.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

DEFAME, s. Ill fame, dishonour.

Feast-finding minstrels tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Sh. Rape of Lucree, Suppl., i, 591.
But of the dede throughout the lyfe the shame
Endures, defacing you with foul defame.

Ld. Surrey's Poems, ed. 1717, p. 254.

Used also by Spenser, and others. See Todd.

Also reproach, defamation:

He wanne more dishonour by defame, then he obtained honor by dignity of consull. North's Plut., p. 499. The love I bore to Lacilla was colde water, the love I owe Camilla, hot fire: the first was ended with defame, the last must begin with death.

Buph. Eng., N 4.
Have I committed anie fact worthie either of death or defame? thou canst not reckon what.

Ibid., P 3.

DEFAMOUS. Conveying defamation, reproachful.

Hee added that there was a knighte that spake defamous words of him.

Holinsk., vol. ii, Kk l.

Defeat. DEFEASANCE. As a law term it is still in use. See Todd.

> Being arrived where that champion stout After his foes defeasance did remaine

Sp. P. Q., I, xii, 12. To DEFEAT. To disfigure, or change the features.

the features.
Follow thou these wars; defeat thy favour with an Oth., i, 3.

That is, disfigure thy countenance. DEFEATURE. Alteration of features, deformity. What ruins are in me that can be found By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground Of my defeatures. My decayed fair (beauty) A sunny look of his would soon repair.

And careful hours, with time's deformed hand. Have written strange defeatures in my face

To mingle beauty with infirmities
And pure perfection with impure defeature.

Sh. Venus and Adonis, Suppl., i, 439.

The inequality of our power will yield me
Nothing but loss in their defeature.

B. & Fl. Thierry and Theod., i, 2.

+DEFECT. Imperfect.

Where though their service was defect and lame, Th' Almighties mercy did accept the same. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To damage; to in-+To DEFECT.

jure.

Who is't will say so, men may much suspect;
But yet, my lord, none can my life defect.

Troubles of Queene Elizabeth, 1639.

†DEFECTION. A falling off.
On a discourse of necromancy, the marquess thus delivered himself, that as none can be scholars in a school, and not be subject to the master thereof, so none can study and put in practise the circles and art of magick, without committing a horrible defection from God.

Apothegma of the Earl of Worcester, 1669.

†DEFECTIOUS, or DEFECTUOUS.

Deficient, imperfect.

Perchance in some one defectious peece, we may find a blemish.

Sydney's Apology for Poetry.

Yet in truth it is very defections in the circumstances, which grieves me, because it might not remaine as an exact modell of all tragedies. For it is faultie both in place and time, the two necessarie companions of all oral actions.

DEFENCED, part., for defended, or rather fortified; applied to cities. It occurs four or five times in the public version of the Bible, but the word commonly used there is fenced, which appears much more frequently. It is cited also from Fairfax, and Beaumont and Fletcher. See Todd's

†This Gospell with invincible courage, with rare con-stancy, with hote zeale, she hath maintained in her owne countries without change, and defenced against whe countries without change, and sejences against all kingdomes that sought change.

Lylic's Esphues and his England.

To DEFEND. To forbid. Defendre, Fr. When I like your favour; for God defend the lute should be like the case.

Much Ado, ii, 1. It has been so interpreted in the following passage, but there it is not so clear:

so clear:
And heaven defend your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
Oth., i, 3.

And I defend All melting joints and fingers (that's my bargain), I do defend 'em any thing like action.

B. Jons. Devil's an Ass. i, 4.

Great Jove defend the mischiefes now at hand.

Forces and Porres, O. Pl., i, 129.

This usage has been exemplified from various authors, and some much later; but is now relinquished. See John-Defence has been Bon, Defend, 4. similarly used.

DEFIANCE. Refusal, rejection.

Take my defiance:
Die, perish! might but my bending down
Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed.

Mons. for M., iii, 1.

DEFLY, for DEFTLY, which see.

232

Neat, dexterous, elegant.

For their knowledge is only of things present, quickly sublimed with the deft file of time.

Lingua, O. Pl., v, 175. Brome's Northern Lass. He said I were a deft lass. The following is a purposed corruption of the word deftest:

A pretty court leg, and a doft, dapper personage.

Chapman, May Day, i, 1.

†There he was aware of a doft young man,
As ever walk d on the way.

Robin Hood and his courin Scarlet.

DEFTLY. Neatly, dexterously. Spenser has written it defly and defly.

Come, high or low,
Thyself and office deftly show.

Mach., iv, 1.

Deftly deck'd with all costly jewels, like puppets.

Bechive of Rominh Ch. Z 5.

And perching deftly on a quaking spray,
Nye tyr'd herself to make her hearer stay.

Browne's Brit. Past., ii, 3, p. 92.

To reject, refuse, or re-To DEFY. nounce.

No, I defy all counsel, all redress.

K. Joks, iii, 4.
All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke.

Vain pleasures I abhor, all things defy.

That teach not to despair, or how to die.

Four Prostices of L., O. Pl., vi, 475.

Foole! sayd the pagan, I thy gift defye,
But use thy fortune as it doth befall.

Spons. F. Q., II, viii, 52.
To degenerate. A DEGENDER, v.

word peculiar to Spenser.

So that next offspring of the Maker's love,
Next to Hinnself in glorious degree
Degendering to hate, fell from above
Through pride.

Hymne to Heav. Love, 1. 93.

To DEHORT. To dissuade. Dehortor. Lat.

The gentry from coming hither, letters

Of strange dire news. The Wits, O. Pl., viii, 486. Both this and dehortation are rather affected than obsolete; and have been used by authors of various times.

DEJECT. Dejected, in a low state. And I, of ladies most deject and wretched, That suck'd the honey of his music vows.

What can be a more deject spirit in a man, than to lay his hands under every one's horses' feet, to do him service, as thou dost.

B. & Fl. Love's Cure, ii, 1.

+DELAYED. Diluted.

Vinum dilutum, lymphatum, isaops. Vin trempé. Wine delayed and mixed with water. Nomenclator.

DELE-WINE. Said to be a species of Rhenish: certainly a foreign wine, but I know not whence named, unless it was imported at Deal, and then it should be spelt accordingly. Ben Jonson, who was a correct man, spelt it thus:

Do not look for Paracelsus' man among them, that he promised you out of white bread and Dele-wine. Mase, of Mercury Findic., vii, 253, Giff.

Where Deal a d backragge, and what strange wines

Still flow.

A DELF, DELFT, or DELVE. From the Saxon delfan, to dig. A quarry, ditch, or channel. It is only a different pronunciation.

Before their flowing channels are detected Some lesser delfts, the fountsin's bottom sounding, Draw out the baser streams the springs annoying. Fiel. Purple Isl., iii, 13.

The delfs would be so flown with waters, that no gins or machines could suffice to keep them dry. Ray on Creation.

See DELVE.

+DELICATE. A delicacy.

Come, come, my lovely fair, and let us try
These rural delicates; where thou and I
May melt in private flames, and fear no stander by. Quarles's Roblems DELICES. Delights. Delices, Fr. must be observed, that Spenser always uses it as of three syllables.

And now he has pour'd out his yelle mind In dainty delices and lavish joys. F. Q., II, v, 28. See also IV, x, 6.

It is seldom found in other authors; but Mr. Todd has produced an instance from a modern prose writer, who probably meant only to ornament his style with a French word.

+DELICIOUSNESS. Luxury, extravagance.

Further now to drive away all superfluity and de-liciousness, and to root out utterly desire to get and gather, he made another third law for eating and drinking. North's Plutarch, Lyrurgus.

DELIGHTED is used occasionally by Shakespeare for delightful, or causing delight; delighted in.

And, noble signior,
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black. Oth., i, 3.

Whom best I love, I cross, to make my gift The more delay'd, delighted. Cymb., v, 4. This therefore is the interpretation of the following passage, which has so much exercised the critics:

This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod, and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside In thrilling regions of thick ribbed ice.

†DELIGHTSOMELY, adv. With delight.

Yet laughed delightsomely. Chapm. Hom. Il., ii, 236. DELI'VER. Active, nimble. Skinner says, perhaps for delivered, as being prompt, and ready for delivery or use; but it is from delivre, old Fr., in the same sense. See Cotgrave.

Having chosen his soldiers, of nimble, leane, and deliver men.

Holinsk, vol. i, n 6, col. 1.
All of them being tall, quicke, and deliver persons.

Ibid., vol. ii, Ccc 5.

With collars they be yok'd to prove the arm at length, Like bulls set head to head with mere deliver strength. Drayt. Polyolb., Song 1, p. 663. †Brave archers, and deliver men, since nor before so good:

Those tooke from rich to give the poore, and manned
Dabin Hood.
Warner's Albians England.

+DELIVER. The challenge of the highwayman.

Untill some booty doth aproach him nye,
To whom a loude deliser he shall crye,
Usinge such trickes till he to Tyburne goe;
Yet this not all, I will not leave him soe.
The Newe Metamorphosis, 1600, MS.
†70 DELIVER. To state, to express oneself, to deliver a message.

Who sent Olivares to accompany him back to the prince, where he kneeld and kisd his hand, and hugd his thighs, and deliverd how unmeasurably glad his Cathohe majesty was of his coming.

Honell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

DELIVERLY, adv. Neatly, adroitly.

Swim with your bodies,
And carry it sweetly and deliverty.

B. & Fl. Two Noble K., iii, 5.

+DELIVERNESS. Activity.

But after hee had made choise of a companie very lightly appointed, such as for lively vigour and delivernesse of bodie surpassed all others, with them hee went foorth Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

DELIVERY. Activity.

But the duke had the neater limbs, and freer delisery.

In a passage inadvertently cited by Mr. Todd from Sidney, it is, in fact, used only in the common sense, as the context plainly shows:

Deliver that strength more nimbly, or become the delivery more gracefully.

+DELL. A cant term often met with in old writers.

Dells, are young bucksom wenches, ripe, and prone to venery, but have not yet been debauch'd.

Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

+DELUCITATE.

Delucitating Flora's painted hide,
Redeemes Arion from the hungry wolfe,
And with conglutinating haughty pride,
Threw Pander in the damb'd Venetian gulfe.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

DELVE, s. A ditch, or dell. The verb to delve, or dig, is hardly obsolete; this substantive has long been so. Spenser has it frequently.

Guyon finds Mammon in a delec Sunning his treasure hore. Spens. F. Q., II, vii, Arg. Ben Jonson also has used it. See Todd. It is evidently the origin of DELF, above.

DEMEAN, v. The original sense of this word is certainly to behave, or conduct one's self; whence demeanour, carriage or behaviour: and in my opinion, the use of it in the sense of to lessen or disgrace the person, is altogether a corruption, suggested by the syllable mean. But a compound, signifying to make mean, would properly be to bemean, not demean. Dr. Doddridge, therefore, whom Mr. Todd cites as authority, must be considered as having fallen into a common In the passage from Shakespeare, behave makes equally good sense.

Now out of doubt Antipholis is mad,
Else he would never so demean himself.

Com. Errors, iv. 8. The change should be resisted, because its tendency is to introduce confusion; and the corruption is rowing common.

DEMEAN, s. Behaviour, demeanour.

Of all the vile demeane, and usage bad.

Spens. F. Q., VI, vi, 18.

All kind and courteous, and of sweet demeans.

Lyly's Wom. in the Moon, C 2.

Madness. Occurs in +DEMENCY. the play of Timon, ed. Dyce, p. 32.

DEMERIT was formerly synonymous with merit, and that sense was more classical than the contrary, which bas since prevailed, demereo being even stronger than mereo.

Besides, if things go well, Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius.

My demerits May speak unbonnetted, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd. Othello, i, 2.
We have heard so much of your demerits,
That 'twere injustice not to cherish you.
Shirley's Humorous Courtier.

Cor., i, 1.

Our present sense of the word comes from the French, and both appear to have been upon the change about the time of Elizabeth. See Cotgrave, in Demerite.

†DEMIT. To dismiss.

Let us here demit one spuder and ten flise.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

DEMOGORGON. A formidable deity, by some supposed to be the grandsire of all the gods; made known to modern poets, Italian and English, by the account of Boccace, in his Genealogia Deorum. Bentley on Milton (Par. L, ii, 965) says contemptuously, "Boccace, I suppose, was the first that invented this silly word Demogorgon.'' But it was mentioned by Lutatius, or Lactantius Placidus, the scholiast on Statius. All the learning on the subject is accumulated in Heyne's Opuscula Academica, tom. iii. Prol. 17. He supposes it derived from Demiurous, and drawn from the Oriental systems of magic. The verv mention of this deity's name was said to be tremendous, wherefore Lucan and Statius only allude to it. See Jortin. on Spenser, F. Q., I. i. 37. Spenser also says of Night, Thou wast begot in Demogorgon's hall, And saw'st the secrets of the world unmade.

F. Q., I, v, 22. He is mentioned also in Locrine. Sh. Suppl., ii, 199. Ben Jonson, apparently with the same notion that Dr. Bentley afterwards took up, calls him "Boccace's Demogorgon.

Boccace's Demogorgon, thousands more, All abstract riddles of our store. Alch., ii, 1. Tasso, in imitation of Statius, has alluded to this awful name without mentioning it. The passage is thus rendered by Fairfax:

That enot yet forgot, for want of use,
What dreadful terms belong this sacred feat;
My tongue, if still your stubborn hearts refuse,
That so much dreaded name can still repeat,
Which heard, great Dis cannot himself excuse,
But hither run from his eternal seat;

Which hears, but hither run from his cook.
But hither run from his cook.
But hither run from his cook.
But that he saw the sturdy sprites obey'd.

Pairf. Tasso, xiii, 10.

To look demurely.

Chapeaneare. DEMURE, v. Perhaps peculiar to Shakespeare.

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes, And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me. Ant. and Cl., iv, 13.

DEMURELY, adv., for solemnly. Also peculiar to him.

peculiar to mun.

The hand of death hath raught him,

Hark how the drums demurely wake the aleepers.

Ant. and Cl., iv, 9.

+DEMI-CASTOR. A sort of hat. TDEMI-CASION. A SOIL OF HAL.

Nor shall any hate, called demy-castors, be henceforth made to be sold here; but, as they are demanded in foreign parts, they may be exported beyond sea.

Anderson's Origin of Commerce.

†DEMI-LANCE. A light horseman, armed with a lance, answering to our lancer.

Lancearii. Les lances. The demylances. Nomenclator. DEN. A word of no signification. occurring in the phrase good den, which is a mere corruption of good e'en, for good evening. This salutation was used by our ancestors as soon as noon was past, after which time, good morrow, or good day, was esteemed improper. This fully appears from this passage in Romeo and Juliet:

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen. Merc. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Upon being thus corrected, the Nurse asks. Whether it is good den? that is. whether the time is come for using that expression rather than the other? to which Mercutio replies, that it is; for that the dial now points the hour of noon. ii. 4. "God ye good den' is a contraction of "God give you a good evening."

God-dig you den, is a further corruption of the same, and is put into the mouth of Costard, in Love's L. L., iv, 1. It arose perhaps only from a hasty pronunciation of God you good We now wish good morning till dinner time, though the dinner is put off to supper time.

To DENAY, for to deny.

DENAY, for to derry.

If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the regentship.

2 Hen. VI. i. 3.

The above is the reading of the first folio; the modern editions read deny'd.

And none be left that pilgrims might denay
To see Christ's tomb, and promis'd vows to pay.

Fairf. Tass., 1, 23.
I never ought that they desir'd denaied. Mirr. Mag., p. 22.

Full often as I durst, I have assay'd Full often as I durst, I have assay'd
With humble words, the princess to require
To name the man, which she hath so denayd,
That it abash'd me further to require.

Tancr. and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 189.
Let tribute be appeased and so stayed,
And let not wonted fealty be denayed.

1st Part of Jeron., O. Pl., iii, 100.

DENAY, s. Denial.

Al, S. Dellia..
To her in haste; give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay.
Tweel. N., ii, 4.

Scarce. Perhaps corrupted DENTIE. from dainty.

For horses in that region are but dentie,
But elephants and camels they have plentie.

Harr. Ariost., xxxviii, 29.

Cups, candlesticks, and bowls of stones most dentie, Of precious substance, and of sundrie luc. Ibid., xliii, 126.

+DENTIZE. To change the teeth.

They tell a tale of the old countess of Desmond, who lived until she was seven score years old; that she did dentize twice or thrice, casting her old teeth, and others coming in their place.

Bacon's Natural History. cent. viii, sect. 755.

+To DENUDATE. To strip,

Who ruined have Evanders stock and state, And strongly did th' Arcadians denudate
Of all their arms? Virgil, by Vicars, 1632. Of all their arms?

†To DENY. To refuse.

I clearly do deny
To yield my wile, but all her wealth I'll render willingly. Chapman, Hom. II., vii, 303. My lord, for to denye my soveraignes bountie,
Were to drop precious stones into the heapes
Whence they first came. Play of Sir Thomas More. † To DEPART. To separate, or divide.
Right worshipfull, understanding how like Scilirus the Scythians fagot you are all so tied togither with the brotherly bond of amitie, that no division or dissention

Lodge, Witz Miserie, 1596.

DEPART. .. Departure, or going awav.

But, how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart
I gave this unto Julia. Two Gent., v, 4.
Things, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.

3 Hen. VI, ii, 1.

My lords, I had in charge
At my depart from Spain, this embassage.

Jeronymo, 1st part, O. PL, iii, 76.

DEPARTING, or DEPARTURE. Parting, or separation.

A deadly groan like life and death's departing. 3 Hen. VI, ii, 6.

Where the quartos read, Like life and death's departure.

Still it is not very good sense; for what is the separation of life and death?

To DEPART WITH. To part with. to give up.

IO give up.

John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,

Hath willingly departed with a part. R. John, ii, 2.

Speak what you list, that time is yours; my right

I have departed with. B. Jons. Dev. an Ass., i.,

Paith, sir, I can hardly depart with ready money.

B. Jons. Erry Man out of H., iv, 7.

I may depart with little while I live;

Something I may cast to you, not much.

B. J. Pl. Two Noble K., ii, 1.

The feloe shewed himselfe as lothe to depart with any money, as if Diogenes had said. &c.

Udall, Apophth., fol. 94, C.

In many other modes of usage, also, to depart was synonymous with to In the office of Marriage, in our Liturgy, the form originally stood "till death us depart," exactly as in the following quotation, but now altered to "till death us do part." See Todd.

Aye, 'till death us depart, love.

Mis. of Inf. Marriage, O. Pl., v, 14.

I have departit it 'mong my poor neighbours,
To speak your largess.

B. Jons. Sad Shep., ii, 6. To speak your largess. B. Jons. Sad Sh. To weet the cause of so uncomely fray,

To weet the cause of so uncomer, may, And to depart them if so be he may, Spens. F. Q., VI, ii, 4. The world shall not depart us 'till wee die. Rob. E. of Huntingd., D. 1. To drive away, to +To DEPELL.

rebut.

And where my metre is ryme dogrell,
The effect of the whych no wise man wyl depell.
Borde's Introduction of Knowledge, n. d.
DEPENDANCE, or DEPENDENCY. The term for the subject of a quarrel when duels were first in vogue; meaning, as it seems, the affair depending. The punctilios established by Caranza, and followed by the coxcombs of the age, are a subject of constant ridicule to our early dramatic writers. See particularly As you like it, v, 4, and Ben Jonson's Devil is an Ass, iii, 3.

The bastinado! a most proper and sufficient depend-ance, warranted by the great Caranza.

B. Jons. Er. M. in his H., i, 5.
Your high offers

Taught by the masters of dependencies.

That by compounding differences 'tween others, Supply their own necessities, with me will never carry't.

B. F. R. Ed. Bro., v, 1.

You will not find there

Your masters of dependencies, to take up
A drunken brawl.

Massing. Maid of Hon., i, 1.

This office, of master of dependencies, Meercraft pretends to have formed into a regular court, in the play of the Devil's an Ass. above cited.

The prosecution and termination of a dependance are very humorously represented by Beaumont and Fletcher, in the fifth act of Love's Pilgrimage, the conclusion of which is Why here is a dependance ended.

My love, what say you? Could Caranza himself Carry a business better. Scene last.

+DEPOPULACY. Depopulation. word used by Chapman (Hom. Batrach.)

Mars answered : O Jove, neither she nor I, With both our aids, can keep depopulacy From off the frogs.

+7b DEPRAVE. To traduce, or vilify. My heart is in my mind's strife sad, When Troy (out of her much distress she and her friends have had

By thy procurement) doth deprave thy noblesse in mine cars.

Chapman, Hom. R., vi, 560.

+DEPULSORY. Deprecatory.

And forsaking his couch or pallet that lay upon the very ground (as being risen when it was now midnight) in making supplication and prayer unto the gods by the meanes of certaine depulsorie sacrifices.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

To DERACINATE, v. To root up.

While that the coulter rusts
That should deracinate such savag'ry. Hen. F, v, 2.
Divert, and crack, rend and deracinate The unity and married calm of states Quite from their fixure. Tro. an Tro. and Cr., i, 8.

+DERBY-ALE. Apparently a choice ale in Elizabeth's time. Sir Lionel Rash. in Greene's Tu Quoque, says,

I have sent my daughter this morning as far as Pimlico to fetch a draught of Derby ale, that it may fetch a colour in her cheeks.

+DERISORY. Derisive. The term is used in a pamphlet dated 1646, Brit. Bibl., i, 309.

DERNE, adj. Secret. From the Saxon So Tyrwhitt exdyrnan, to hide. plains it in Chaucer; and so it may mean in the following passage:

Who, wounded with report of beauties paide, Unable to restraine his derne desire. Trag. of Wars of Cyrus; apud Capell.

But its derivatives are differently applied by Spenser and others.

tHe may th' entrusted shaft out let the may th' entrusted snall out les.

With derner maime and winged tayle in hearts blood wet.

A Herrings Tayle, 1598. It was even in Elizabeth's time an almost obsolete word.)

†Merlin him clepid to an herne, And to him told tales derne. Arthony and Merlin, p. 44.

To DERNE, v. n. To hide one's self, to skulk.

But look how soon they heard of Holoferne
Their courage quail'd, and they began to derne.
Hudson [Du Bartas], in Engl. Parn., cited by G. Mason.

DERNFUL, as used by Spenser, or his friend, L. Bryskett, seems to mean dismal. or sad.

The birds of ill presage this lucklesse change foretold By deenfull noise. Thestylis, v. 89. Todd's Spenser, viii, p. 76.

DERNLY, adv. Sadly, or mournfully, in the first of the following passages; severely, rather, in the second.

Had not the ladie, which by him stood bound,
Deraily unto her called to abstain
From doing him to die.

Spens. F. Q., III, xii, 34.
Seeking adventures hard, to exercise Their puissance, whilom full dernly tried.

P. Q., III, i, 14. DEROGATE, adj., for derogated, degraded, degenerated. Dry up in her the organs of increase, And from her derogate body never spring A babe to honour her.

Lear, i, 4. DEROGATELY, adv. With derogation. That I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name It not concern'd me.

DERRICK. The name of the common hangman, at the time when some of our old plays were produced.

Pox o' the fortune-teller! Would Derrick had been his fortune seven years ago!—to cross my love thus.

Puritan, iv, 1, Suppl. to 8th, ii, 602.

He rides circuit with the devil, and Derrick must be in the seven the inner at which he will light. his host, and Tyborne the inne at which he will light.

Belman of Lond., 1616.

It is asserted in an old ballad, that he had been condemned for a rape, and was saved by the earl of Essex:

Derick, thou know'st at Coles I sav'd
Thy life lost for a rape there done,
Where thou thyself canst testife
Thine owner hand three and twenty hung.
Ballad, entitled, Upon the Earle of Esser his Death. Speaking of thieves condemned to be hanged, Gayton says, hanged, Grayton says,

And a father all these have, Derick, or his successor, and the mother of the grand family, Maria ScissMarrapia, (Moll Cutpurse) who is seldom troubled at the loss of any of them, having many, and to spare.

Petitions Notes, p. 120.

It seems therefore that in 1650, when those Notes were published. Derrick was dead. From this wight was formed the mock name of Derrickjastroes, in Healy's Discovery of a New World.

This is inhabited only with serjeants, beadles, deputy-constables, and Derrick-justroes.

Explained in the margin, "Hangmen, and other executioners." P. 174.

DERRING-DO. Deeds of arms, warlike Literally daring deed. enterprise.

For ever, who in derring-do were dread, The lofty verse of hem was loved aye. Spens. Shep. Kal., Sept., 65.

Hence also derring-doers, for warlike heroes, by the same author. F. Q., IV, ii, 38. See Todd. Spenser has also derring for contention, in his Eclogue of December.

DESCANT, s. What is now called variation in music. The altering the movement and manner of an air by additional notes and ornaments, without changing the subject; which has been well defined to be musical paraphrase. The subject thus varied, was called the plain song, or ground. See PLAIN-SONG, and PRICK-SONG.

Good faith, sir, all the ladies in the courte do plainly report,
That without mention of them you can make no morte.

sporte:
They are your playne song to sing descant upon.
Damon and Pithias, O. Pl., i, 182.
Lingua, thou strik'st too much upon one string,
Thy tedious plain-song grates my tender ears.
Ling. Tis plain indeed, for Truth no descant needs,
Una's her name, she cannot be divided.
Lingua, O. Pl., v, 119.

Metaphorically, a discourse formed on a certain theme, like variations on a musical air:

And look you get a pray'r-book in your hand, And stand between two churchmen, good my lord, For on that ground I'll make a holy descant. Rich. III, iii, 7.

See GROUND.

To DESCANT, from the above. To make division or variation on any particular subject. Originally accented like the noun from which it was formed; but now mixed with the class of verbs regularly accented on the last syllable, and in that form not obsolete. See Elements of Orthoppy. p. 164.

[0-] . Unless to spy my shadow in the sun, And descant on my own deformity. Rich. III, i, 1.

Cam'st thou for this, vain boaster, to survey me,
To descant on my strength, and give thy verdict?

Millon, Sams. Agon., 1237.

To DESCRIVE. To describe.

Let her by proofe of that which she has fylde For her own breast, this mother's joy describe. Spens. P. Q., VI, xii, 21. A mirror make likewise of me thou maist,

A mirror make likewise of me thou mans,
If thou my life, and dealings, will describe.

Mirr. for Mag., Caracalla, p. 174.

For who can livelier describe me than I myselfe?

Chaloner's Morta Enc., A 2.

To give notice of; to dis-+DESCRY. cover.

The same the sunne espied,
To Vulcan it descried. The play of Timon. +DESIRE, in the sense of regret. Lat. desiderium.

And warm tears gushing from their eyes, with passionate desire
Of their kind manager Chapm. Il., xvii. 880.

+DESIREFUL. Eager.

ENINDFULL DARGE.
Eyed and prayed Armida past the while
Through the desirefull troupes, and wist it well.
Godfrey of Bulloigne, 1894.

To expend. +To DESPEND. Som noble men in Spain can despend 50000l.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

A DESSE. A desk; and of the same origin, viz., disch, Germ. for a table. And next to her sate goodly Shamefastnesse, Ne ever durst her eyes from ground upreare, Ne ever once did look up from her desse. Spens. F. Q., IV, x, 50.

The word was used by Chaucer, but not quite in the same sense. See Todd.

To DETERMINATE. To end, to bring to a conclusion.

The fly-slow hours shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile. Rich. II, i, 3.
The adjective determinate is also used by Shakespeare in the sense of concluded :

The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.

Sonnet 87. To DETRACT. Sometimes used in the sense of to avoid; from detrecto, Lat., and therefore more properly to de-

Whereupon the French fleete made towardes the English men, who mynding not to detract the battel, sharply encounter their enumies.

sharply encounter their enimies.

Holinsh., vol., ii, B b 7.
Which thing when Theages perceived that Cnemon did detract—he said to him.

Coldocke's Heliodorus, D 3.

Do not detreet; you know th' authority
Is mine, and I will exercise it swiftly,
If you provoke me.

B. Jons. New Inn, ii, 6.

Detrect is here the old reading. The Danes hearing that the Scottes were come. the Danes hearing that the Scottes were come, detracted no time, but foorthwith prepared to give Holinshed, 1577. battayle.

The DEVIL RIDES ON A FIDDLE-A proverbial expression. apparently meant to express anything new, unexpected, and strange.

Heigh, heigh! the Devil rides upon a fiddlestick; what's the matter? This is said on the sudden interruption of the Hostess by the arrival of the

DEV 238 DIC

Sheriff. In the following passage it is applied to a strange fantastic humour of the principal character:

I must go see him presently,
For this is such a gig;—for certain, gentlemen,
The fiend rides on a fiddlestick.

2d Gent. I think so.

B. S. Fl. Humorous Lieut., iv, 5.

It is imperfectly given here:

The devil rid's, I think.

B. & Fl. Wit. at sec. W., i, p. 249. +DEVIL'S-PATERNOSTER, to say.

To grumble. D. What devills pater noster is this he is saying? what would he? what saist thou honest man? Is my brother at hand?

Terence in English, 1614.

+DEVAST. To destroy, lay waste. Whoes that which calls

With horrid terrour and such affrightments, As when skath fires devast our vilages?

Sampson's Vow Breaker, 1636.

DEVOR, for devoir. Duty.

But I was chiefly bent to poets' famous art,
To them with all my deror I my studie did convert.

Turberville's Poems, H 5.

+DEVOTORING. Adulterous. What a devotoring rogue this is! He would have been at both.

The Wizard, a Play, 1640. at both.

+To DEVOW. To devote.

The besieged, who were a picked number of valiant men, and furnished with store everie way, could by no allurements be induced to yeeld, but as making full account either to win the victorie, or derow and betake themselves to be consumed with the ashes of their countrey, withstood their coemies.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+DEUZAN. A species of apple.

Nor is it ev'ry apple I desire,
Nor that which pleases ev'ry palate best;
"Tis not the lasting denzan I require,
Nor yet the red-check'd queening I request.
Quarles's Emblems.

+DEXTERICAL. Dexterous.

Divine Plato affirmes, that those have most dexterical wits, who are wont to be stird up with a heavenly fury.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

DIABLO. The devil; an exclamation. The Spanish name for that personage. Who's that that rings the bell? Diablo, ho! The town will rise.

Diablo! what passions call you these?

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 336. The town will rise Othell., ii. 8.

DIACLETES. An imaginary precious stone, thus described:

For as the precious stone diactetes, though it have many rare and excellent sovernignties in it, yet loseth them all, if it be put in a dead man's mouth.

Braits. Engl. Gent., p. 273.

This, I believe, is a remarkable instance of a practice, if not invented, at least most used by Lyly, in his Euphues and other works, that of imagining a natural object, animate or inanimate, and ascribing to it certain curious properties, merely for the sake of introducing it into a simile or illustration. Instances might be given to a considerable extent. Sometimes they were content with giving imaginary properties to real objects, but not always.

To DIAPER, v. To variegate, or adorn with figures, like diaper. diapre, a French heraldic term, which Du Cange derives from diasperus, in low Latin, for a very fine sort of cloth.

Be strewed with fragrant flowers all along. And diapred lyke the discolord mead.

Spens. Epithal., 1. 50.
Whose locks, in snaring nets, were like the raves

Whose locks, in snaring nots, were use the rayes Wherewith the sun doth diaper the seas.

Brown's Past., B, I, song i, p. 17.

I went alone to take one of all the other fragrant flowers that diapred this valley.

Greene's Quip for an Upstart Conrtier, B.S.

DIBBLE. A gardener's setting stick, usually made of part of the handle of a spade, cut to a point. The word is a spade, cut to a position still in use among gardeners.

I'll not put
The dibble in the earth to set one slip of them.

Wint. T., iv. 5. Through cunning, with dibble, rake, mattock, and spade,

Through cunning, with allower, rake, matteria, and speace, By line and by level trim garden is made.

Tusser, Marches Husbandry, p. 70.

DICH. Apparently a corruption of do it, or may it do.

Much good dick thy good heart, Apemantus,

Tim. Ath., i, 2. Though this has the appearance of being a familiar and colloquial form. it has not been met with elsewhere: which is a circumstance rather extraordinary. Nor is it known to be provincial.

†DICK-A-TUESDAY. The name of a hobgoblin, coupled in the following line with Will-o'th-wisp. It has not been met with elsewhere.

Ghosts, hobgoblins, Will-with-wispe, or Dicke-a-Tuesday. Will-with-wispe, or Dicke-a-Sampson's Fow Broaker, 1636.

DICKER. The quantity of ten, of any commodity; as a dicker of hides was ten hides, a dicker of iron ten bars. See Fragm. Antiq., p. 192. Probably from decas, Lat.

Behold, said Pas, a whole dicker of wit.

I have spent but a groat; a penny for my two jades, a penny to the poor, a penny pot of ale, and a penny cake for my man and me, a dicker of cow-hides cost me.

Heywood, First P. of King Ed. IV, 1800.

DICKON, or DICCON. A familiar form of the name Richard. Thus in the old rhyme against Richard the Third:

Jocky of Norfolk be not too bold. For Dickon thy master is bought and sold. Rich. III. v. 8.

One of the characters in Gammer

Gurton's Needle is Diccon, the Bedlem. O. Pl., vol. ii.

DID

DIDDEST. The second person of did, the pret. of do; now only used in the contracted form didst.

And thou, Posthumus, that diddest set up My disobedience 'gainst the king my father. Cymb., iii, 4.
That I shall live, and tell him to his teeth
Thus diddest them

Thus diddest thou. It is somewhat strange that this original form does not more frequently +DIE. To die in the pain, to die in the attempt to do a thing.

Amongst whom were a v. M. women, wholy bent to revenge the villances done to theyr persons by the Romains, or to die in the payne. Holinshed, 1577.

†DIEGO, DON. A popular name for a Spaniard. See Webster's Works. ii. 298.

Next followes one, whose lines aloft doe raise
Don Coriat, chiefe Diego of our duies.
To praise thy booke, or thee, he knowes not whether,
It makes him study to praise both, or neither.
Taylor's Workes, 1630.
The method I purpose to use, shall be, first to expose your faults (I do not mean all), for that were as Diego said of the poor of his parish, All the parish.
Clifford's Notes upon Dryden, 1887.
The phase was expected.

The phrase was similarly used by the French writers of the same age.

C'est là qu'on délibérera Comment la France guérira, Et non point en vos conférences De dangereuses conséquences, Et dont le seignor don Diego

Les Courriers de la Fronde, ad. Morean, i, 57.

To take diet, to be under a regimen for a disease, which anciently was cured by severe discipline of that

To weep like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet. Two Gent., ii, 1.

Priscus had tane the diet all the while. Priscus had tane the alet all the white.

Springes to catch Woodcocks, a Collect of Epigr., 1606.

Fure the heavens, I look as pale ever since as if I had ta'en the diet this spring.

Marston's What you will, iii, 1, Anc. Dr., ii, 242.

See TUB-FAST.

+DIET-BAG.

OIET-BAG.

Some physitians being mett together to consult about a patient, itt was concluded a dy-t bagg should bee made for him, for which they advised many ingredients, and some would have had more; and one merrily interposed, as wiser than the rest, and bid them put in a haycock, and then to bee sure hee would have enough.

Ward's Diary.

+DIET-BREAD. A sort of sweet cake, for making which we find the following directions in the receipt books of the 17th cent.

How to make fine diet-bread.—Take a pound of fine flower twice or thrice drest, and I pound and a quarter of fine sugar finely beaten, and take seven new laid eggs, and put away 'he yolk of I of them and bent them very well, and put 4 or 5 spoonfuls of rose-water amongst them, and then put them in an slablaster or marble mortar, and then put in the flower and sugar by degrees, and beat it or pound it for the space of 2 hours until it be perfectly white, and then put in an ounce of carraway-seed, then butter your plates or sawcers, and put in of every one, and so put them into the oven: If you will have a glass and ice on the top, you must wash it with a feather, and then strew sugar very finely beaten on the top before you put it †DIET-DRINK. A sort of medicine.

The 30 of Aprill, Wednesday, a.m. at 50 past 9, I began first to tak my diet drinke, and that night my throte begun to be sore.

Forman's Diary.

+DIFFERING. Angry.

His differing fury.
DIFFICILE. Difficult. Chapm. Il., ix, 543. Lat.

FTICILE. Difficult. Lat.

No matter so difficile for man to find out,

No business so dangerous, no person so stowt, &c.

New Custome, O. Pl., i, 273.

Hard or difficile be those thyse that be goodly or honest.

Tarerner's Adagies, D. 5.

This word was once common. Todd.

†DIFFICULTLY. With difficulty.

They nourish much, but difficulty digest, and their nourishment is very bad, because they themselves are nourished in marshes.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1613.

To DIFFIDE. To distrust. Diffido.

For this word, which Dryden has used, but which was common in older authors, see Todd.

DIFFUSED. Wild, irregular, confused.

Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once, With some diffused song.

To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire, And evry thing that seems unnatural. Hen. V, 3. I have seen an English gentleman so diffused in his suits, his doublet being for the weare of Castile, his hose for Venice, &c.

Greene's Farewell to Folis. So Kent, in Lear, i, 4, talks of diffusing his speech, that is, making it so disordered that it may be disguised.

DIFFUSEDLY. Irregularly, wildly, neglectful of dress.

Think upon love, which makes all creatures handsome, Seemly for eye-sight; go not so diffusedly.

There are great ladies purpose, sir, to visit you.

B. 4: Pl. Nice I alour, act iii.

The stage direction immediately preceding this speech, and describing the person to whom it is addressed, explains fully what is meant by going diffusedly: "Musick. Enter the passionate Cousin, rudely and carelessly apparel'd, unbrac'd and untruss'd."

+DIGESTURE. Digestion.

And further, his majesty professed, that were he to invite the devil to a dinner, he should have these three dishes. 1. a pig. 2. a pole of ling, and mustard, and 3. a pipe of tobacco for disjecture.

Apothegms of King James, 1669, p. 4.

To DIGHT. To deck, dress, or prepare; to put on.

Socn after them, all dauncing in a row,
The comely virgins came, with girlands dight.'
Spens. F. Q., I, xii, 6.

But ere he could his armour on him dight, Or get his shield. I did, I, vii, 8. The signs of death upon the prince appear, With dust and blood his locks were loathly dight. Fairf. Tasso, v, 33.

Milton has used the word:

Storied windows richly dight. Il Penseroso. †And as for the cloth of my ladies, Hen. Cloughe put it to a shereman to dight, and he sold the cloth and ran away; and yet after Hen. mett with him, and gart him be sett in the countre, till he founde sewerte to answer at the Gildehall for the cloth.

Plumpton Correspondence, p. 86.

DIGNE, or DYGNE. Worthy.

Make cheer much digns, good Robert.

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 236.

All the worlde universally offreth me, date by date, far dearer and more digns sacrifices than theirs are.

Chaloner's Moriee Encom., K 2.

To DIGRESS. To deviate, or differ. This word and digression are now only applied to the arrangement of matter in discourse. Thus the metaphorical sense has supplanted the literal.

Thy noble shape is but a form in wax, Digressing from the valour of a man.

Rom. and Jul., iii, 8.

This is Johnson's 4th sense, and is rightly said to be no longer in use. DIGRESSION. Deviation.

I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent.

Lore's L. L., i. 2.

Then my digression is so vile and base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

Shaks. Rape of Lucrece. Suppl., i, 485.

DILLING. The same as darling (dearling), a favorite; but used rather for the female, and seems to be a kind of fondling diminutive. Minshew explains it a wanton, but there is nothing in its origin to convey that meaning, even if, with him, we derived it from diligo.

Whilst the birds billing Each one with his dilling
The thickets still filling
With amorous notes.

with amorous notes.

Drayt. Nymphal., 3, p. 1469.

Baint Hellen's name doth bear, the dilling of her mother.

To make up the match with my eldest daughter, my wife's dilling, whom she longs to call madam.

Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 206.

DIMBLE. The same as dingle, that is, a narrow valley between two steep hills.

Within a bushy dimble she doth dwell, Down in a pit, o'ergrown with brakes and briars.

B. Jons. Sad Sheph., ii, 8.

Mr. Sympson thought it necessary to change the word to dingle, against the testimony of all the copies; but dimble has been found in several passages of Drayton:

And satyres that in slades and gloomie dimbles dwell.

Polyolb., song 2, p. 690

And in a dimble near, even as a place divine.

Ibid., song 26, p. 1169.

Dingle is still in use.

DIMINUTIVES appear to be used, in the following passage by Shakespeare. for very small pieces of money:

Most monster-like be shewn,
For poor'st diminutives, to dolts. Ant. and Cl., iv. 10. Capell reads, "for doits." which would explain the former word; "for dolts" is the original reading, which has been changed as above.

To DING. To strike violently down, to dash.

Brought in a fresh supply of halberdiers,
Which paunch'd his horse, and ding'd him to the ground. Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 183.
The hellish prince, grim Pluto, with his mace
Ding down my soul to hell. Battle of Alcazar, D 4.
Is ding'd to hell, and vultures eat his heart. Marston's Satires.

This while our noble king, His broad sword brandishing, Down the French host did ding.

Drayt. Hallad of Aginc., p. 1380.

†The butchers are (like great Alcides bat)

Dings deadly downe ten thousand thousand flat.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. tIt stor'd with onions, figs, and garlick, With scraps of bread, it knows no fare like; For these the neighbours do not swagger, Nor huff, and ding, and draw the dagger Poor Rubin, 1709.

+DING-DING. A term of endearment.

Loe, heere I come a woing my ding, ding, Loe, heere we come a suing my darling, Loe, heere I come a praying, to bide-a. bide-a. Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

DING-THRIFT. A spendthrift; one who dings or drives away thrift, that is prudence and economy.

No, but because the ding-thrift now is poore, And knowes not where i' th' world to borrow more. Herrick, Works, p. 196.

And in Wit's Bedlam, 1617, the dingthrift and the miser are satirised for their opposite extremes of character.

+DINNERLY, adj. Appertaining to dinner, attending upon dinner.

A gent of her majesties privi-chamber comming to a merry recorder of London, about some state affaire, met him by chance in the street going to dinner to the lord major, and profferred to deliver him his encharge, but the dinnerly officer was so hasty on his way that he refused to heare him, posting him over to another season, the gent notwithstanding still urged him to audience, without discovering either who he was or what he would who he was or what he would.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Pancies, 161 s.

DINNER-TIME. The proper hour for dinner is laid down by Thomas Cogan, a physician, in a book entitled the Haven of Health, printed in 1584. It is curious to observe how far we have since departed from the rule.

When foure houres bee past after breakefast, a man may safely take his dinner, and the most convenient time for dinner is about eleven of the clocke before moone. The usuall time for dinner in the universities is at eleaner, or else where about noon. Chap. 211.

So old Merrythought, in Beaumont and Fletcher, says,

I never came into my dining room, but at eleven and six o'clock; I found excellent meat and drink on the table. Kn. of B. Pest., i, 3.

It soon became later:

Or if our meals would, every twelve and seven,
Observe due hours.

Mayne's Amor. War. In another old play, the hours are laid out exactly from six:

laid out exactly from six:

Al. What hour is 't, Lollio?

Lol. Towards belly hour, sir.

Al. Dinner time? thou mean'st twelve o'clock.

Lol. Yes, sir, for every part has his hour; we wake at six, and look about us, that's eye-hour; at seven we should pray, that's knee-hour; at eight walk, that's leg-hour; at nine gather flowers, and pluck a rose, that's nose hour; at ten we drink, that's mouth-hour; at eleven, lay about us for victuals, that's hand-hour; at twelve go to dinner, that's belly-hour.

Middleton & Rosel. Changeling.

It is odd enough that no breakfast hour is introduced!

+DIOGORICAL.

Aquarius joyn'd with Pisces, in firme league,
With reasons and vindictive arguments,
That pulveriz'd the king of diamonds,
And with a diagoricall relapse,
Squeaz'd through the sinders of a butterflye.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Among the Roman +DIRECTORY. Catholics, was the title of the book containing the systematical list of sins to be inquired into at confession. to be inquired into at connession.

The bush upon his chin, (like a carv'd story,
In a box knot) cut by the Directory;
Madams confession hanging at his ear,
Wire-drawn through all the questions, how and where;
Each circumstance, so in the hearing felt,
That when his ears are cropt, he'l count them gelt.

Clearcland's Poems, 1651.

From these generalls she descended to the repetition rom these generals are descended to the repetition of his particular crimes in such open tearns, as had he been in the humour to have gone presently to confession, he needed no better Directory, than her tongue to instruct him what he had to accuse himself of before the priest. Comical History of Francion, 1655.

DIREMPT. Divided.

curs.

Bodotria and Glota have sundry passages into the sea and are clearly dirempt one from the other. Store's Annals, A 2.

The substantive diremption also oc-

DIRIGE. A solemn service in the Romish church, being a hymn beginning, "Dirige gressus meos."

Their diriges, their trentals, and their shrifts.

Spens. Mother Hub., 454. It occurs also in Chaucer; and the verse demands it here, though not so printed in the first edition. Hence, probably, our dirge, though it has been disputed; and the hymn dirige was not exactly a dirge. Yet any other etymology is more forced. For the doubts on the subject, see Todd. It occurs in old English Missals.

Mattins, and mass, and evensong, and placebo, and dirige, and commendation, and mattins of our Lady, were ordained of sinful men, to be sung with high crying.

Wielif. of Prelates, c. 11.

To DIRK. To darken.

Thy waste bigness but cumbers the ground,
And dirks the beauty of my blossoms round.

Spens. Shep. Kal., Feb., 133.

To disgrace by bad To DISABLE. report or censure.

You think my tongue may prove your enemy,
And, though restrain'd, sometimes out of a bravery,
May take a licence to disable ye.

B. F. F. Island Princ., iv.

†DISACQUAINTED. Broken off from acquaintance.

Tis held a symptom of approaching danger, When disacquainted sense becomes a stranger, And takes no knowledge of an old disease. Ouarles's Emblems.

+DISANKER. To raise the anchor. Sixe gallyes they disanter from the isle Cald desert, and their barke incompasse round.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

DISAPPOINTED; that is, unappointed, not appointed or prepared. See APPOINTED. This is the uniform reading of the old copies in the famous line of Hamlet:

Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd. Ham., i, 5.

DISARD, s. See DIZARD.

†DISASTER. For disastrous. Right worthy duke, whose vict rices ever shone
Through clouds of envy and disaster change.
Weakest goath to the Wall, 1618.
†DISAUGMENT. To diminish.

There should I find that everlasting treasure,
Which force deprives not, fortune disaugments not.

Quarter's Emblems.

To DISCANDY. To melt away from the state of being candied, like sugar, or anything of that kind. The hearts

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Crean; and this pine is bark'd
That overtopp d them all.

Ant. 3 Cl. Ant. & Cl., iv, 10. In the above passage, the confusion of metaphor is so great, that the "spaniel'd me at heels" is, as a single expression, a very plausible one, instead of pannel'd, the old reading. It is to be wished that something could be suggested in the place of those four words, which might appear to lead to the subsequent idea of discandying. Hearts that spaniel'd Antony at the heels, melting their sweets upon Cæsar, forms a masterpiece of incongruity, which, amidst the natural, though rapid transitions of Antony's passionate state, we should not expect to find.

DIS

In an earlier passage of the same play, discandying has been well proposed, instead of discandering, a word quite unintelligible. The idea is, that as the stones of the hail melted, or discandied, a person should die for First herself, then her son Cæsarion, then her Egyptian servants.

Till by degrees, the memory of my womb, Together with my brave Egyptians ail, By the discandying of this pelleted storm, Lie graveless.

Ant. and Cl. Ant. and Cl., iii, 11.

The whole passage is obscure, but seems to admit of no better solution; nor of any, without such a change.

Uncandied is used in the same manner:

O my petition was let down in ice, which by hot greefe uncandied, felts into drops. Fletch. Two Nob. Kinsm., i, -Melts into drops.

+DISCENDENCY. Descent.

I could make unto you a long discourse, of their race, bloud, family, discondencie, degree, title, and office, bloud briefly to abut up all they are servants and followers.

The Passenger of Benvenute, 1612.

+DISCERNANCE. Discernment.

Though sometimes it may so fail out, that a man will submit himselfe to feeminine judgement, yet in this case he clearely manifesteth, that either he hath but a blinde discernance, or that in wisedome he is infe-riour to a woman.

Passenger of Bensenuto, 1612.

To DISCIPLE. To exercise with discipline. Accented on the first; whence easily contracted to DISPLE.

That better were in vertues discipled,
Then with vaine poemes weeds to have their fancy fed.

Sp. F. Q., IV, i, 1. To DISCLOSE. To hatch.

Anon, as patient as the female dove, When that her golden couplets are disclos'd.

First they ben eges, and after they ben disclosed. haukes; and commonly goshaukes ben disclosed as soone as the choughes. Book of Huntynge, &c., bl. l.

+DISCOLOURED. Variegated; diverscoloured.

> Menesthins was one That ever wore discolour'd arms.

Chapm. Il., xvi, 159. +DISCONFORMABLE. Non-conform-

Assuring them, that as long as they are disconformable in religion to us, they cannot be but half my subjects, be able to do but half service, and I shall want the best half of them, which is their souls.

Wilson's Life of James I, 1653.

DISCONTENT, e. Used as malcontent, a discontented person.

To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontents.

1 Hen. IF, v, 1.

What! play I well the free-breath'd discontent?, v, 1. Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 25. †Yet when the king his first somes death records, In his resolved thoughts it breeds releating.

The bloudy and unnaturall act affords
His troubled thoughts fresh cause of discontenting.
Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

+DISCORDANCE. Disagreement. But for that there is suche discordance and variable reporte amongest writers.

Holinshed, 1577.

+DISCOVER. To uncover; to unmask.

This done, they discover, i.e., unmask.

Decker's Whore of Babylon, 1607.

The halle chambers seillede with the beste parte of the edifices is covered with leade; whether the kinges pleasure is we shall discover the same or not, we be desierouse to be certified by this bringer.

Wright's Monastic Letters, p. 169.

+DISCOVERY. A declaration.

Then covenant and take oath

Then covenant and take oath
To my discovery.

ISCRASE. To distemper.
So they, when God hath bestowed their bodies upon them, as gorgeous palaces or mansion houses wherein the mind may dwell with pleasure and delight, do +DISCRASE. first, by this evill demeanour, shake and discress them, and then being altogether carelesse of repairing them, do suffer them to run to destruction.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624. +DISCRASIE. A distempered condition.

Gr. δυσκρασία. So we may not unfitly say, that the inveloped and deformed night of ignorance (for the want of that celestial noice leipsum) begets two mis-shapen monsters (which as the sepia's inky humour, doe make turbulent the chrystallinest fountain in man) Somatalgia and Psychalgia, the one the discressie of the body, the other the maladie and distemperature of the soule.

DISCREPANT. Dissimilar.

As our degrees are in order distant.

So the degrees of our strengths are discrepant.

Heywood's Spider and Füe, 1556.

DISCURE. To discover. Singu-

To DISCURE. larly so used by Spenser. See Todd. I will, if please you it discure, assay To ease you of that ill.

Only a change of the original word, discover, discouer, discure. Spenser has elsewhere used discoure, to rhyme with powre.

Or other ghastly spectacle dismay'd, That secretly he saw, yet n'ote a

P. Q., III, iii, 50. DISEASE. Uneasiness, trouble, discontent.

First lean thine aged back against mine arm,

And, in that case, I'll tell you my disease.

I Hen. FI. ii. 5. Reserv'd a place in the mid'st for the sacrificers, without all tumult and disease.

Underwood's Heliodorus, R 6.

To DISEASE, for to make uneasy.

Fie, fie, that for my private discontent I should disease a friend, and be a trouble To the whole house.

Woman killed with Kindness, O. Pl., vii. Also for to disturb, or awaken:

But, brother, hye thee to the ships, and Idomen disease. Chapman's Hind. 6. disease.

And any sleeper, when he wish'd diseas'd.

Ibid., Odyss., β. apman's Iliad, 6.

tMany that would have gone that way so much loved him that they were loth to disease him, but went another way.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1898.

DISEDGED. Deprived of the keepness | To DISHABIT. of appetite, satisted.

And I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedged by her
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.

Cymb., iii, 4. See to TIRE.

+To DISESTEEM. To despise. Then let what I propound no wonder seeme, Though doting age new truthes do dis-esteeme Scot's Philomythie, 1616. +DISFRANK. To set free from the frank, or place in which an animal was confined for feeding.

Intending to disfrank an ore-growne boare.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638, p. 131.

†DISFURNISH. To deprive. See See

Chapman's Homer, Il., ii, 525.

Massinger. I am a thing disfurnish'd of all merit. +To DISGARBAGE. To take out the

B. I thanke you sir. In winter time they are excellent, so they be fat and quickely roasted, without disgarbaging of them.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

To DISGEST. Sometimes used for digest.

cay est.

For though you should like it to-day, perhaps yourselves know not how you should disgest it to-morrow.

B. & Fl. Prol. to Woman Hater.

Could not learne to disgest, that the man which they so long had used to maske their owne appetites should now be the reducer of them into order.

Pembr. Arc., p. 120. I have set you downe one or two examples to try how ye can disgest the maner of the devise.

Puttonk., ii, 11. It still subsists in the mouths of the vulgar.

†DISGLORY, s. Dishonour.

dge. Yes; so that your talke and jeasting be not to the disglorie of God's name, or hurt to your neighbour, you maye.

Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

+DISGRACES. Acts of unkindness. The interchange continually of favours and disgraces.

Bacon, Essay 36.

+DISGUISED. Intoxicated.

The sailors and the shipmen all, Through foul excess of wine, Were so disguis'd that on the sea

They showed themselves like swine.

The Garland of Delight.

Of the two last I was told a tale, that Arminia meeting Baudius one day disgnir'd with drink (wherewith he would be often), he told him, Tu, Baudi, dedecras nostram academiam. Et tu, Armini, nostram religionem.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+DISH. To lay in one's dish, to lay to his charge.

The manifold examples that commonly are alledged, The manifold examples that commonly are alledged, to deterre men from finishing such works as have bene left unperfect by notable artificers in all sciences, eould not make me afraide; howbeit perchance they may be laid in my disk. I know there be many yong geutlemen, and others, whose gift this way, so much excelled my poore abilitie, that there is no comparison betweene them.

Phare's Firgil, 1600.

+DISH-CATCH. A rack for dishes. My dish-catch, cupboards, boards, and bed, And all I have when we are wed. Comical Dialogue between two Country Lovers.

To remove from its habitation.

Those stones—from their fixed beds of lime Had been dishabited.

K. John ii K. John, ii, 1. Dishabited is also used for uninhabited, or in want of inhabitants: habited, or in want of interest poor.

The dishabited towns afford them [the Irish poor]

Carew's Cornwall. See Todd, to whom we are indebted for this second instance.

DISLEAL. Disloval, dishonorable. From leal, Fr.

Disleal! knight, whose coward corage chose
To wreake itself on beast all innocent.

Spens. F. Q., II, v, 5.

+DISHEART. For dishearten.

Have I not seen the Britains-Bond. What? Car. Dishearted.

Beaumont and Fletcher. +DISHONESTED. Disgraced.

To choose rather to die in defence of theyr countrey and auncient liberties, than by cowardize to save a dishonested lyfe. Holinshed, 1577.

+To DISLADE. To unlade.

Ægeons ful-fraught gallies are disladed.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

LANDER. Slander. +DISLANDER.

Master chamberlain hath authority to send or commaster chamberian hath authority to send or command any apprentice to the Counter for their offences and if their offences be great, as in defyling their masters houses by victous living, or offending his master by theft, or distander, or such like, then to command him to Newgate. Calthrop's Reports, 1670.

To DISLIMN. From to limn, for to sketch in colours. To unpaint, to obliterate what was before limned. That which is now a horse, even with a thought The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct

Ant. and Cl., iv, 2. As water is in water. That is, "the movement of the clouds (see RACK) destroys the appearance which before represented a horse."

+To DISLIVE. Is used by Chapman for to deprive of life.

Telemachus dislived Amphimedon. Odyss., xxii.
DISMATCH. To render unworthy +To DISMATCH.

of comparison? Thou happy witnes of my happy watches, Blush not (my book) nor think it thee dismatches.

Du Bartas. DISME. Properly a tenth, French, but used in the following passage for the number ten, so many tens: Let Helen go; Since the first sword was drawn about this question, Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes, Hath been as dear as Helen. Tr. & Cr., ii, 2. It was usually applied to the tax of a

So that there was levied, what of the disme, and by the devotion of the people, &c.

Holinshed in Rick. II.

DISNATURED. Deprived of natural affection. Create her child of spleen; that it may live And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her.

Lear. i. 4.

I am not so disnatured a man, Or so ill borne to disesteem her love.

Daniel's Hymen's Triumph, Works, G g 8. +DISNOBLE. Ignoble.

This Maximinus, after he had bestowed some meane studie in the liberall sciences, and become a disnoble advocat and defendor of causes, when he had also governed Corsica and Sardinia likewise, ruled Thuscia. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

To DISPARKLE, properly dis-sparkle. To scatter abroad, disperse, or divide. See to SPARKLE.

And if it had so happened, he would easily have disparckled the assembly sent to this new king.

Comines' Hist. by Danet, X 3.

Cominer Hist. by Danet, X S.
The brute of this act incontinently was disparkled almost throughout the region of Italy.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii, S 1.
†The gallants his followers, whom feare had disperkled, cryed out unto him on both sides. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

Also in the neuter form:

Whereupon all the armie disparekled and returned Comines, ibid., Z 3.

DISPENCE. Used by Spenser and others for expense. See Todd. They had it from Chaucer.

+To DISPEND. To expend.

O DISTEIND. 10 expend.

Howbeit the said party being demanded, What he might dispend by his art? answered, He got everie day as much as came to the allowance for twentie men in victual, and as much for horse-provender (which they commonly terme capita) also he had a good stipend or salarie by the yeare in money, over and beside many commodious suits and requests graunted unto him. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+To DISPEOPLE. To depopulate.

Let the two and thirty sonnes
Of Eolus break forth at once, to plow
The ocean, and dispeople all the woods.
Randolph's Muses Looking-Glasse, 1643.

+DISPERSED. Spread abroad, published.

And so making marchandize of another mans credit, by their owne divulged and dispersed ignominie, they impudently seeke by anothers dishonour to set a shamelesse face on the matter.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1619. +DISPLAY. Used in the sense of to view.

And from his seat took pleasure to display

The city so adorn'd with tow'rs.

The DISPLE. To discipline. A mere A mere contraction of to disciple.

Was wont him once to disple ev'ry day.

Spen. P. Q., I, x, 37.

Who here is fled for liberty of conscience,
From furious persecution of the marshall,
Here will I disple.

B. Jons. Pos., iv, 9.

In the folio (1616) it is printed disc'ple.

Milton has used it, apparently in allusion to some passage in Chaucer: It is only the merry friar in Chaucer that can disple them. Of Reformation.

†DISPLEASANCE. Displeasure. At which the goddesse high displeasance takes,
And turnes their golden heires to crawling snakes.

Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

+DISPLEASANT. Unpleasant.

Acerbus, a. um. unripe, sowre, displeasaunt, difficulte, harde, soleyne, austere, and peintull. Riotes Dictionarie, 1559.

Marye, this is fayer, plesant, and goodlye, And ye are fowle, dysplesant, and ugiye! The Play of Wit and Science, p. 40.

+Tb DISPOSE. To render any one inclined, to prevail with him.

I continued diverse dayes before I could dispose her to let me go.

Hymen's Prejudie, 1658. let me go.

DISPOSE. Disposal.

POSE. Dispusar.

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose.

K. John, i, l. And, with repentant thoughts for what is past, Rests humbly at your majesty's dispose.

Weakest goeth to the Wall, A 4, b.

Also, disposition:

He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected.

Othello, i, 3.

Also, arrangement:

Also, arrangement.

A. What is his excuse? U. He doth rely on none, But carries on the stream of his dispose.

Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar, and in self-admission.

Tr. and Cr., ii, 3.

See Todd, who brings examples also from later authors.

DISPOSED. Inclined to mirth and jesting.

Aye, he does well enough, if he be disport, and so do 1 too.

Treelfth N., ii, 3.

1 too. Treefth N., ii, 3.

L. You're disposed, sir.

V. Yes, marry am I, widow. B. J. Pl. Wil w. M., v, 4.

Chi. Woudrous merry ladies.

Luc. The wenches are dispos'd; pray keep your way,
sir. P. You are dispos'd, I think.

N. What should we do here else?

Brome, Cov. Gard. weeded, act i, p. 13.

To DISPUNGE. To sprinkle, as with water squeezed from a sponge.

Water squeezeu 11 our & T.
O sovereign mistress of true melaucholy,
The pois nous damp of night dispange upon me.
Ant. and Cl., iv, 9.

+Tb DISPURVEY. To empty, or strip. They dispurse their vestry of such treasure
As they may spare, the work now being ended
Demand their sums squine.

DISROUT. To throw into confusion.

They carried soldiers on each side with crosbowes and other warrelike engins, and they served for good use, being many thousands of them, to disrowte their enemies, breaking their rankes and order, making free and open passage for their horse and foote amongst the scattered squadrons and regiments.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Diss in Norfolk was formerly +DISS. so little frequented by travellers, that it became a proverb to express indifference respecting trivial matters, "He knows nothing about Diss."

To DISSEAT. To unseat, to remove one from a seat.

from a sear.

This push

Will cheer me ever, or dissest me now.

Mach., v, 3.

Seeks all foule meanes
Of rough and boist rous jadrie, to disseats
His lord, that kept it bravely. Fl. Two Nob. Kinsm., v.
DISSEMBLABLE. Unlike, dissimilar.

All humaine things, lyke the Silenes, or duble images of Alcibiades, have two faces, much alike and dissemblable.

Moriæ Encom. by Chaloner, E 3. DISSEMBLANCE. Dissembling.

I wanted those old instruments of state. I wanted those our insurance.

Dissemblance and suspect.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 24.

+DISSENT. For descent.

Refined People feele Naples in their bodies: and An ach 'ith' bones at sixteen, passeth now For high dissent; it argues a great birth. Low blouds are never worthy such infection.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651. +DISSETE. Scattered.

NISSELE. SCRITTERG.

Reither doth any of them ever lay hand to the plough, plant or dresse a tree, nor get his living by tillage of the ground, but wander alwaies they do from place to place, dissecte farre and wide usunder, without house and home, without any abuding seat and positive lawes. Holland's Amminant Marcellinus, 1609.

DISSIMULE. To dissemble, or

To DISSIMULE.

And so beareth and dissimuleth the same, that often-times the evill which she abhorreth, by such bearing and dissimuling, is restrayned and reformed.

Holinsk., vol. i. k 3.

Assuring himselfe of his death, and devising how with distinuted sorrow to celebrate his funeral.

Buphase' Golden Legary, by Lodge, C 2.
†Howbeit, this one thing he could neither distinute nor passe over with silence, but urge instantly.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

†And now went not he to worke by way of shaldowed and dissimuled deceit; but whereas the palace stood without the wals, hee did beset it round about with armed men.

DISSIMULER. A dissembler.

He was close and secrete, a deep dissimuler, lowly of countenance, arrogant of harte.

Holinsk., vol. ii, N n n 7. +DISSIPANDING. Profligate.

Young Noy, the dissipanding Noy, is kill'd in France in a duell, by a brother of air John Biron; so now the younger brother is heir and ward to the king.

Letter to Wentworth, Apr. 5, 1636.

DISTAFF, SAINT. No regular saint, but a name jocularly given to Rock, or Distaff-day, which was the day after Twelfth-day. Rock meaning distaff. This day is celebrated by R. Herrick, in his Hesperides:

Partly work, and partly play, Ye must on St. Distaff's day. And towards the end.

Give St. Distaff all the night,
Then bid Christmas sport good-night. P. 374.
It is alluded to in Warner's Albions England:

Rock, and Plow-Monday's games shall gang. P. 121. Plow-Monday was the Monday following.

†DISTASTIVE. Disgusting.

Thus did they finishe their distastive songe.

The Newe Metamorphosis, 1600, MS. DISTEMPERATE. Immoderate; from | dis and temperate.

Aguinas objecteth the distemperate heat, which he supposeth to be in all places directly under the sun.

Raleigh's History, ap. Johns.

DISTEMPERATURE. Disorder, sickness. This word, though not considered as obsolete by Johnson, seems to have fallen into disuse, and will not be found easily in authors much later than the time of Shakespeare. It is deduced from distemperate, which is itself obsolete.

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue, But moody and dull Melancholy, Kinsman to grim and comfortless Despair; And, at her heels, a huge infectious troop Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life?

Com of Br., v, 1. So, this is well; here's one discovery made; Here are the heads of our distemperature. Daniel, Queen's Arcad, i. 4.

DISTILLATION. Apparently used for chemistry.

Yes, sir, I study here the mathematics
And distillation.

B. Jons, Alch., iv. 1.

DISTRACT was used for distracted.

STRACT was used for distract,

Better I were distract,
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs.

Lear, iv, 6.

DISTRACTIONS. Detachments, parts taken from the main body.

While he was yet in Rome, His power went out in such distractions, as Beguil'd all spies.

Ant. & Cl., iii, 7.

†DISTRAIN. To seize for debt. We may so use the matter, to have most part of the money without the distraining of your own body.

History of Fortunatus.

DISTRAUGHT. The old participle of to distract, distracted.

Ot if I wake shall I not be distraught, Environed with all these hideous fears? Rom. and Jul., iv, 3.

O Jaques, know thou that our master's mind Is much distraught since his Horatio died. Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 193. With diet and correction men distraught (Not too far past) may to their wits be brought.

Drayt., Idea 9, p. 1263.

DISTURB, s. Disturbance.

For never one but she shall have this grace From all disturbs to be so long kept free.

Daniel, Civ. Wars, vi. 47.

To DISTURNE. To turn aside.

And glad was to disturns that furious streams Of war on us, that else had swallowed them.

Dan. Civ. W., iv, 20.

Used also by Donne. See Todd. To DITE. Apparently for to winnow; and diters, winnowers. And as in sacred floores of barnes, upon corn win-owers flies

The chaffe, driven with an opposite wind, when yellow

Ceres dites,
Which all the diters' feet, legs, armes, their heads and shoulders whites. Chapman, Iliad, 5, p. 73

DITT. Contracted from ditty; apparently for tune in these lines:

No branch whereon a fine bird did not sitt,
No bird, but did her shrill notes sweetly sing,
No song, but did contain a lovely ditt. Spens. F. Q., II, vi, 13.

†DIVAST. Devastated; laid waste.
But time will come when th' earth shall lie divast,
When heav'n and hell shall both be fill'd at last.

Owen's Epigrams, 1677. A small bird, called DIVE-DAPPER.

also a dab-chick, or didapper. dive-dapper was really the original word, it was equivalent to small diver. This dandiprat, this dive-dapper.

Middleton, Anc. Dr., iv, p. 372.

DIVERB, s. A proverb. A Latinism found chiefly, if not exclusively, in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy. See Todd.

To DIVEST. To undress. Devestio, Lat.; devetir, Fr. This is the primitive sense of the word, but is not now used.

Friends all but now, ev'n now In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom Directing them for bed. Oth ii A DIVIDABLE. Used for divided, distant. Accented on the first.

Peaceful commerce from di'vidable shores. Tr. & Cr., i, 3. DIVIDANT. Licentiously, as it seems, used for divisible; and apparently accented on the middle syllable.

Whose procreation, residence, and birth Scarce is divident,—bouch them with several fortunes, The greater scorns the lesser.

Tim. of A., iv, 3. Scarce is dividant,—touch thom with Tim. of A., iv, S.
DIVIDE. To make divisions in To DIVIDE.

music, which is, the running a simple strain into a great variety of shorter notes to the same modulation.

And all the while sweet music did divide
Her looser notes to Lydian harmony.

Spens. P. Q., III, i, 40.

And all the while most heavuly melody
About the bed sweet music did divide. Ibid., I, v, 7. In both these passages, however, there seems to be an allusion to the "carmina divides" of Horace. Mr. Warton. who has quoted them in his notes on Milton's Ode on the Passion, must have meant to assign the same sense to the word in that passage; but in this he was mistaken: it means there only to share, or bear a part:

My muse with angels did divide to sing. DIVISION is used by Shakespeare in the musical sense:

Some say the lark makes sweet division. Rom. and Jul., iii, 5 And in the same manner it is still used technically.

+DIVULGATOR. One who divulges; a publisher.

To that great promulgater, And neat disulgater, Whom the citic admires, And the suburbs desires. Harry White's Humour, 1659.

+DIVULST. Rent asunder.

246

Vaines, synewes, arteries, why crack yee not?

Burst and disulst with anguish of my griefe.

Antonio and Mellida, 1603.

A DIZARD, DIZZARD, or DISARD. A blockhead, or fool. Probably from the same Saxon etymology as dizzy, Some have said, from disard, Fr. for a prater, or babbling fellow: but no such word was ever used in French. Their word is discur: nor does the English word mean so much a prater, as a downright dunce, or fool. Thus Cotgrave renders it, not by diseur, or any such word, but by lourdaut.

He that cannot personate the wise man well amongst wisards, let him learn to play the fool well amongst diseards. G. Chapm., Masque of the Middle Temple, C.1. What a revengeful diseard is this!

What a revengeful dizard is this!

Lingua, O. Pl., v, 165.

Whereat the sergeant wroth, said, Dizzard, calfe,
Thou would'st it thou hadst wit or sense to see.

Herringt. Ep., 3, 9.

[In the old English Homer by Art. Hall (1581), p. 10, which was translated from the French, we have :]

†You heraulter high, come on, quoth he, no daunger dread at all,

For by your disards king, not you, their wrong on me doth fall.

The dizard was properly the vice, or fool, in a play; the jester. This would seem to justify the Fr. derivation.

†Pantomimus, Seneces, qui fracto corporis motu turpique gesticulatione quasvis actiones representas, ab omnifaria imitatione indito nomine. παντομέφος. A dizzard or common vice and lester, counterfetting the gestures of any man, and moving his body as him list.

Nomenclator.

DIZZARDLY. The writer of the following passage seems to have pre-ferred the French derivation:

Where's this prating asse, this discardly foole?
Wilson's Cobler's Prophecy, A 4. +To DO AWAY. To kill; to make away with.

The Tartar broke o're the four hundred mil'd wall, and rush'd into the heart of China, as far as Quinzay, and beleagerd the very palace of the emperor, who rather than to becom captif to the base Tartar burst his casile, and did essay himself, his thirty wives, and children.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650. To DO ONE RIGHT, or REASON.

Faire raison, Fr. To pledge a person in drinking.

Do me right, And dub me knight. Part of an old catch, sung by Silence in 2 Hen. IV, v, 3; alluded to, probably, in this also:

Fill's a fresh bottle, by this light, sir knight, You shall do right. All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 189. You shall do right.

All Pools, O. Pl., iv, 189.

'Tis freely spoken, noble burgomaster,
I'll do you right.

B. & Fl. Beggar's Bush, ii, 3.

See also the note on the Widow's Tears, O. Pl., vi. 199.

Your master's health, sir. -I'll do you reason, sir.
Ads. of Five Hours, O. Pl., xii, 26.

See to Dub.

To extinguish, or oblite-To DO OUT.

rate. Contracted to dout in common speech.

The dram of base

Dotk all the noble substance of worth out
To his own scandal.

Haml., i, 4. This passage, which, with twenty lines preceding, is omitted in the folio. stands in the quarto of 1611, thus:

The dram of cale

Dota all the noble substance of a doubt

To his own scandal. Many conjectural attempts have been made to restore the true reading, of which the above is one. But of worth there is no trace in the original. Eale has been made ease, and that changed into base. But Capell conjectured, with probability, that ill was The slightest the word intended. change would be

The dram of ill

Doth all the noble substance often out.

But dout, the contraction of do out, has been preferred by the latest commentators. [This is the reading which appears to be now generally adopted.] Do out might perhaps be confirmed, as Mr. Steevens has produced out-done for put out; but there is little pretence for introducing worth. See Todd in Dout. Dout is perfectly analogous to doff and

To DO TO DEATH, and to DO TO DIE. Phrases still current in Shakeapeare's time, for to kill.

O Warwick, Warwick I that Plantagenet Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption, Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

8 Hen. VI. ii. 1.

For when I die shall envie die with mee,
And lye deep smother'd with my marble-stone,
Which while I live cannot be done to die.
Hall, Prol. to Salires, B. IV.
Only let her abstain from cruelty,
And do me not before my time to dis.

Spens. Sonnet, 43.
Betwist them both they have me doen to die
Through wounds, and strokes, and stubborn handeling.
Spens. F. Q., II, iv, 33. +DOCHES.

Marry I must get me another gate, and put one a newe face, and so I will goe to yonder narrowe streete harde by, there ile stand that the old dockes may see me when they come forth. I will make them believe I went to the market, but I never meant it.

Terence in English, 1614.

†DOCK. In dock, out nettle, a singular phrase indicating unsteadiness or inconstancy, which was popular during a long period.

As hong period.

Shee's like a Janus with a double face,
To smile and lowre; to grace, and to disgrace;
She lov's and loathes, together at an instant,
And in inconstancy is onely constant.
Uncertaine certaine, never loves to settle,
But here, there, every where; is dock, ost nettle.
The man whom all her frownes or favours spurne,
Regardeth not her wheele, how oft it turnes.
Regardeth not her wheele, how oft it turnes.
Now then that we bee not, all our life long, thus off and on, fast or loose, in dock, out nettle, and is nettle, out docke, it will behove us once more yet to looke
back.

Bishop Andrewes, Sermons, folio, p. 391.
Who fight with swords for life sure care but little,
Since 'tis no more than this, in dock, out settle.

Wrangling Lovers, 1677.
As this is now the time of spring.

Young folks do love like any thing; Tho' love be made of diff'rent metal. Tho' love be made of diff rent metal,
Of joy and pain (in dock, out nettle),
A painful pleasure—pleasing pain,
A gainful loss,—a losing gain;
A bitter sweet,—easing disease,
A cool freah stream, salt as the seas.

Poor Robin, 1777.

+DOCTRINABLE. Containing doctrine. Then certainely is more doctrinable the fained Cirus in Xenophon then the true Cyrus in Justine.

Sidney's Apology for Peetry.

†DODDER, v. To slumber? That in the contented ivy bush stays; She dodders all day, While the little birds play;

While the little birds puay; And at midnight she flutters her wings, Hooting at her mopish discontented life, Just like an honest man and his wife. Poem of 17th cent.

+DODDY. A blockhead.

Now purpose I roundly
Trick this prety doddy,
And make him a noddy.

The Mariage of Wit and Wisdoms.

To have the dodye, to be DODGE. s. cheated, or let a person give one the slip. Shall I trouble you so far as to take some pains with me? I am loath to have the dodge.

Wily beguiled, Orig. of Dr., iii, 319.

DODIPOLL. A stupid person, a thick head. From poll.

But some will say, our curate is naught, an asse-head, a dodipoll, a lack-latin.

Latimer's Serm., 98 b. There was an old anonymous comedy, printed in 1600, called, The Wisdome of Dr. Dodypole. See Warton, vol. iii, p. 475.

†Corvi lusciniis honoratiores: Doctor Dodipoll is more honored than a good divine.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 554.

Dodipate was sometimes used in the same sense.]

186.]
†Thus by her scole
Made him a fole,
And called hym dodypate.

The Boke of Mayd Emlyn.

DODKIN, s. A very small coin, the eighth part of a stiver. From duytkin, Dutch; that is, doit-kin, a little doit.

There was at that time [i.e., under Henry V] forbidden certaine other coynes called scakaris and dodina.

Stone's Lond., p. 97.

Well, without halfpenie, all my wit is not worth a dodkin.

Lyly's Mother Bombie, ii, 2.

Just foure in all,

Which, with the other three and quarter, make Seven and a dodkin. Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 101. Still used in +DODMAN. A snail.

this sense in Norfolk. Oh what a dodmans heart have we heare, oh what a fawnes courage, what a minde, an hart, courage, and spirit hast thou? Gentlemen, if you feare the Turkish pyrates, never doubt, for heere is a good fresh-water souldier.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1812.

To DOFF. Contracted from to do off, or put off. Usually applied to something worn on the body. don was made from to do on, and even to dup for to do up. See DUP.

He that unbuckles this, 'till we do please To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm

Come, you must doff this black; dye that pale cheek Into his own colour.

In the following it is used for to remove, or get rid of:

Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight
To doff their dire distresses. Macb., iv, 3. Here for to subject to delay, to put

Every day thou doff st me with some device, Iago.

Oth., iv. 2.

See DAFF.

DOG-BOLT. Evidently a term of reproach, and, I suspect, nearly synonymous with dog, only perhaps more contemptuous. At least, dogbolts are said to snarl, in the following passage:

I'll not be made a prey unto the marshall,
For ne'er a snarling dog-bolt of you both.

B. Jons. Alc., i, 1.

In another place it seems to imply treachery, or what is called a dogtrick:

To have your own turn serv'd, and to your friend
To be a dog-bolt.

B. & Fl. Wit w. Money, iii, 1.

Oh ye dog-bolts!

That fear no hell but Dunkirk.

1bid., Hon. M. Fort., v, 1.

Johnson says, on what authority I know not, that the coarser part of meal is called dog-bolt, or flour for dogs; but this, as Mr. Todd hints, will not explain its use. Butler uses it as an adjective, in the sense of base, or degraded:

raded:
His only solace was that now
His dog-bolt fortune was so low,
That either it must quickly end,
Or turn about again and mend.
Hudib., II, i, 89.

No compound of dog and bolt, in any sense, appears to afford an interpretation of it.

+To DOG-DRAW. A term in the old forest law.

Dogge-draw is, where any man hath striken or wounded a wild beast, by shooting at him, either with crosse bow or long bowe, and is found with a hound or other dogge drawing after him, to recover the same, this the old for +DOG'S-FACE. A term of reproach.

Meane while Achilles kept the peace, But to berogue him did not cease, Quoth he, thou drunken, dogs-face, coward. Homer a la Mode, 1666.

+DOGION. For dudgeon.

They that are of this complexion are very affable in speech, and have a gracious faculty in their delivery, speech, and have a gracious faculty in their delivery, much addicted to witty conceits, to a scholerlike durparatia, being facetosi, not acetosi; quipping without bitter taunting: hardly taking any thing in dogious, except they be greatly mooved, with diagrace especially.

Optick Glasse of Hussors, 1639.

A DOG-KILLER seems to have been an allowed office in the hot months, when those animals are apt to run mad.

Would take you now the habit of a porter, now of a carman, now of the dog-killer, in this month of August, and in the winter of a seller of tinderboxes. B. Jons Bart. Fair, ii, 1.

This practice, Mr. Gifford says, is common on the Continent.

DOG-LEACH. Dog-doctor. From dog and leach. Used also as a general term of contempt.

Empirics that will undertake all cures, yet know not the causes of any disease. Dog-leeckes! Ford, Lov. Mel., iv, 2.

Out, you dogleach!
The vomit of all prisons!

B. Jons. Alc., i, 1.

+DOG-TRICK. A practical joke. The word is explained as meaning sometimes a fool's bauble.

times a fool s Dauble.

I will here, in the way of mirthe, declare a prettie dog-tricke or gibe as concerninge this mayden.

I could have soyled a greater volume than this with a deale of cuptic and triviall stuffe; as puling sonets, whining elegies, the dog-tricks of love, toyes to mocke apes, and transforme men into asses.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. +DOG-WHIPPER. A church-beadle.

The term is an old one.

It were verie good the dog-whipper in Paules would have a care of this in his unsaverie visitation everie Saterday.

Nash's Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

DOLE. A share or lot in anything distributed; distribution. From to deal.

It was your presurmise,
That in the dole of blows your son might drop.
2 Hen. IV, i, 1.

He all in all, and all in ev'ry part,
Doth share to each his due, and equal dole impart.
Fletch. Purple Isl., vi. 33.

Hence the phrase, so very common in ancient writers, of Happy man be his dole, i. e., let his share or lot be the title, happy man. It was, however, used as a general wish for good success in a manner which makes it difficult to give it any literal construction: particularly as an exclamation before a doubtful contest, where it seems equivalent to "Happy be he who succeeds best."

Mine nonest iffering,
Will you take eggs for money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leo. You will! why, happy man be his dole.

Win. Tale, i, 2. Mine honest friend.

Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I; every man to his business. 1 Hen. IV, ii, 2.

So in Hudibras:

Let us that are unhurt and whole

Fall on, and happy man be's dole.
Part I, Cant. 3, v. 637. We find an equivalent phrase in Beaumont and Fletcher, which throws considerable light upon this:

What news? what news?

1st Cit. It holds, he dies this morning.

2d Cit. Then happy man be his fortune, I'm resolv'd.

Cupid's Revenge, act iv, p. 485.

Dole also was used for grief, or lamentation, as derived from dolor:

With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage, In equal scale weighing delight and dole. Haml., i, 1. Not thee that doest thy heaven's joy inherit, But our own selves that here in dole are drent. Spens. Astrophel, v. 809.

Milton also has used the word in this sense.

†But in our life appeares: Our errours misse correcting.
Then let the greatest know,
Dole on their ruine feedes.
Brandon's Octavia, 1598.

DOLE-BEER. Beer distributed to the poor.

I know you were one could keep
The butt'ry hatch still lock'd, and save the chippings,
Sell the dole-beer to aqua-vitee men, &c.

B. Jons. Alck., i, 1.

That lives unburt itself, to suffer give +DOLE-BREAD. Bread similarly distributed. "Pain d'aumosne. Dolebread." Nomenclator.

DOLOUR. Grief, pain, or lamentation. When the tongue's office should be prodigal, To breathe th' abundant dolour of the heart.

Rich. II, i, 8. So all lamenting muses would me waitings lend,
The dolours of the heart in sight again to show.

Mirror for Magist., p. 485.

DOLPHIN. This word was long in current use for the Dauphin of France. In the old edition of The troublesome Raigne of King John, it is so through-

Lewis the dolphin and the heire of France, &c. The turning tide bears back, with flowing channee, Unto the dolphin all we had attain'd, And fills the late low-running hopes of Fraunce. Daniet, Civ. Warz, v, 44. Against his oath from us had made departure To Charles the dolphin, our chief enemie.

To Charles the dolphin, our chief enemue.

Mirror for Mag., p. 313.

The title of dolphin was purchased to the eldest sonne of the king of france, by Philip of Valoys, who began his raigne in France, anno 1328. Imbert, or Hubert, the last count of the province of Dolphinic and Viennois, who was called the dolphin of Viennois, being vexed, &c.

Coryal, v.l. i, p. 45.

Yet I think that usage perfectly misapplied in explaining the following passage:

Why your dolphis is not lustier; 'fore me I speak in All's W., ii, 3.
On this Mr. Steevens says, "By dolphin is meant the dauphin," &c.; whereas it means only that the king is made as lusty as a dolphin, which is a sportive, lively fish; a similar idea probably suggested the following singular passage:

ngular passage .

His delights

Were dolphin-like, and shew'd his back above

Ant. and Cl., v, 2. The element they liv'd in.

The apparently incoherent stuff of "Dolphin my boy, boy, Sessy, let him trot by," is said to be part of an old song, in which the king of France thus addressed the Dauphin:

Dolphin, my boy, my boy, Cesses, let him trot by.

So at least I conjecture it should be. not cease, as it is printed in Mr. Steevens's note. Lear, iii, 4. Hey no nonny was the burden of this ballad, as of some others now extant. Cokes, in Jonson's Barth. Fair, alludes to the same ballad, when he says, "He shall be Dauphin my boy." Act v. BC. 4.

What delight hath heaven,
That lives unburt itself, to suffer given
Up to all domage those poor few that strive
To imitate it. Chapm. Odyss., xiii, 457.

+DOMESTICAL. Domestic.

In our private and domestical matters In our private and domestical matters.
Sydney's Apology for Postry.
By whose good indeavours, vice is punished, vertue rewarded, peace established, forraigne broyles repressed, domesticalt cares appeased.

Lylie's Euphues and his England.

DOMINATIONS. One of the supposed orders of angelical beings, according to the established arrangement of the schools. In Heywood's Hierarchie of blessed Angels (1635), they form the titles of seven books; Michael the archangel presides over the eighth, and the angel Gabriel over the ninth. They are thus specified:-1. Cherubim; 2. Seraphim; 3. Thrones; 4.

Dominations: 5. Vertues: 6. Powers: All but the first two 7. Principats. are comprised by Milton in one finesounding line of address to them : Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers. Titles supposed by some readers to have been invented by him : but Hevwood had before introduced them into verse .

The seraphins, the cherubins, and thrones, Potestates, vertues, dominations, The principats, archangels, angels, all Resound his praise in accents musicall. B. 1X, p. 582.

Ben Jonson also had introduced them into an elegy:

Saints, martyrs, prophets; with those hierarchies,
Angels, archangels, principalities,
The dominations, virtues, and the powers,
The thrones, the cherub, and seraphic bowers,
That planted round there sing before the Lamb.
On Lady Venetia Digby; Underw., ix.

It must be admitted, however, that these names were derived from a book, long esteemed as of the highest authority. The Apostolical Constitutions, where we read

 Ψ Τετρα τῶν ταγμάτων πλήθη, ἄγγελοι, ἀρχάγγελοι, θρόνοι, κυριότητες, ἀρχαὶ, ἐξουσίαι, δυνάμεις.
 Lib. VIII, § 35. And elsewhere to the same effect.

+DOMINO. It does not seem very clear when this word first came into use, but it was customary in France, as early as the sixteenth century, for ladies of rank and fashion always to wear masks over their faces when taking their promenade or travelling. The domino in masquerades appears not to have been known by this name in the latter part of the 17th century, when Dunton wrote and published. Domino, a kind of hood or habit for the head, worn by canons; and hence also a fashion of vail used by some women that mourn.

Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

DOMMERAR, or DUMMERER, in the old cant of beggars, meant one who pretended to be dumb.

pretended to be dumb.

Higgen, your orator, in this interregnum,
That whilom was your dommorar, doth beseech you.

B. and Pl. Beggar's Bush, ii, 1.

These dommerars are leud and most subtyll people, the most of these are watchmen, and wyll never speake, unless they have extreame punishment, &c.

Caveat ag. Com. Cursitors.

Every village will yeeld abundant testimonies amongst us; we have dummerers, Abraham-men, &c.

Burlon's Janat of Mel., p. 159.

In the degree of beggars it is thought he will turne dummerer; he practices already, and is for that purpose many times taken speechlesse.

Stophens' Essayes, 1815, p. 274.

DON. To do on. or put on. See

To DON. To do on, or put on. See to Doff.

Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
For such a petty war.

Ant. and Cl., ii, l.
What! should I don this robe and trouble you?

Tit. And., i, 2.

Some shirts of mail, some coats of plate put on, Some donn'd a cuirass, some a corslet bright.

Fairf. Tass., i, 72.

And, when he did his rich apparel don,
Put he no widow nor an orphan on.

Bp. Corbet's Poems, p. 39.

An old form of to do. To DONE.

He lives not in despair,

As done his servants.

Tancr. and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 209. Again:

Such are the praises lovers done deserve. Ibid., 210. But sped him thence to done his lord's behest.

Fairf. Tass., i, 70, early editions.

DONZEL DEL PHEBO. A celebrated hero of romance, in the Mirror of Knighthood, &c. Donzel is from the Italian, donzello, and means a squire. or young man; or, as Florio says, "A damosell, a bacheler," &c. He seems always united with Rosiclear.

Defend thee powerfully, marry thee sumptuously, and keep thee in despite of Rosiclear or Donsel del Phebo. Malcontest, O. Pl., 11, 1982. Donsel del Phebo and Bosicleer: are you there? The Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 248.

So the Captain in Philaster calls the citizens in insurrection with him, "My dear Donsels:" and presently after, when Philaster appears, salutes him by the title of him by the title or My royal Rosiclear!

We are thy myrmidons, thy guards, thy roarers.

Philaster, v, p. 166-7.

†DOOLE. A boundary post.

Three miles on this side of Bath in the high road, on

Three miles on this side of Bath in the nigh road, on a high hill, are 3 stone dooles, that part 3 great shires, and there tooke I my leave of one with my left leg, possession of another with my right leg, and shaking the third with my left hand all at once, with one moving posture.

MS. Laned., 213. moving posture. DOOMSDAY. To take doomsday seems to mean to fix doomsday as the time for payment.

And sometimes he may do me more good here in the city by a free word of his mouth, than if he had paid me half in hand, and took doomsday for the other.

The Paritan, Suppl. to Shaka, ii, 621.

+DOOR. To set from the door, to drive away.

After he had penetrated into this her hungry feminine enclination, having heard all, to set her from the dores, hee said: My spirituall mistresse, goe your wayes home, and the next night attentively hearken after our mattins bell, which will undoubtedly instruct you, in whatsoever you are to performe.

Passenger of Benzenuto, 1612.

†DOOR-NAIL. As dead as a door-nail is a very old phrase.

But now the thought of the new come foole so much moved him, that he was as dead as a doore-mayle, standing on tip-toe, looking toward the door to belold arrivall.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

+To DOP. To dip, to duck.

Like tonny-fish they be which swiftly dive and dop.

North's Plutarch (Luculus). DOP, s., for dip, or a very low bow.

The Venetian dop, this.

B. Jons. Cynthia's Rev., v, 1.

A DOPER, or DOPPER. An anabaptist; that is, a dipper. Of the first customer in the Staple of News, the margin says, "1st Cust. A she-baptist." The Register afterwards says of her,

This is a doper, a she-anabaptist!
Seal and deliver her her news; dispatch.
B. Jons. Staple of News, iii, 2.
A world of doppers! but they are there as lunatick persons, walkers only; that have leave only to hum and ha, not daring to prophesy, or start up upon stools to relied destricts. to raise doctrine.

Ibid., Masque of the Moon, vol. vi, p. 62, Wh. Thus a dab-chick or didapper was also called a dob-chick, or dopperbird. Minshew. Even Ray has called Dict. Tril., ch. 9. it a didonper.

+DOPT. For adopt.

Stilt. Hold yee there, my lord, I am but a poore fellow and have but a simple living left me; yet my brother, were he a very naturall brother of mine owne, should hee bee dopted, I would dopt him, and herrite him, i'le fit him.

Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

DOR. A drone, or beetle. Lye, Minshew, and others.

What should I care what ev'ry dor doth buz In credulous ears? B. Jons. Cynthia's Revels, iii, 3. To give the dor, a cant phrase for to make a fool of a person, or pass a joke upon him, or outwit him.

There oft to rivals lends the gentle dor,
Oft takes (his mistress by) the bitter bob.
Pletch. Purp. Isl., vii, 25.
You will see, I shall now give him the gentle dor presently, he forgetting to shift the colours which are now changed with alteration of the mistress.

Falsely interpreted, in some editions, as giving them leave to sleep. The changes of his mistress's colours are here also mentioned directly after. The whole progress of that curious design follows, and the joke turning against the person who made the attack, it ends with an exclamation of the Dor! the Dor! the palpable Dor! by which is meant, that he is palpably defeated.

I would not Receive the dor, but as a bosom friend
You shall direct me. B. & Fl. Lover's Progr., i, 1.
And then at the time would she have appeared (as his And then at the time would she have friend) to have given you the dor.

B. Jons. Epicane, iii, 3.

The dor is used also as a mock imprecation:

The dor on Plutarch and Seneca! I hate it: they are my own imaginations, by this light.

Ibid., ii, 8. To DOR. The same as to give the dor; to outwit, impose upon, &c. Skinner notices this word.

Here he comes, whistle; be this sport called dorring the dot'rel. B. Jons. Bart. Fair, iv, 3. Is this the finest tale you can devise? What, hop'd you that with this I could be dor'd?

Harringt. Ariost., v. 39.

To obtain a dor was once also a school term for getting leave to sleep: from dormire.

+DORBELLICAL. Clumsy. Dorbelish is still used in this sense in the dialect of Lincolnshire.

I have reade over thy sheepish discourse it was so ugly, dorbellicall, and lamish.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1593.

+DORMANT WINDOW. A dormar window, or window in the roof of the house.

> Old dormant scindows must confesse. Old dormant semances must contesse, Her beams their glimmering spectucles; Struck with the splendour of her face, Do th' office of a burning glasse. Cleaveland's Poems, 1651.

DORNICK. The Dutch name for Tournay, often applied to the manufactures of that place, but usually corrupted into Darnick, Darnex, &c. See DARNIX. The city had once a flourishing woollen trade, says the Atlas Geographicus, which is now decayed (that is, early in the eighteenth century). We find the traces of that trade in the Dornick hangings and carpets, mentioned by our old authors. But at the latter period we are told that it had a considerable trade "in a sort of table-linen, thence called Dornick." Atl. Geogr., vol. i. p. 948.

DORP. A village. The same as thorp. Saxon, dorp.

The captains of this rascal cow'rdly rout Were Isambert of Agincourt, at hand;
Bifiant of Clunass, a dorp thereabout, &c.

Drays: Battle of Agins., vol. i, p. 75,
And dorps and bridges quite away should bear.

Drayt. Moone., p. 492,
And so it fell out with that ruin'd dorps, or hamlet

And so it fell out with the [Old Yarmouth].

Nash's Lenten Stuff, Harl. Misc., vi, 150.

Amsterdam, a town, I believe, that there are few her fellows, being from a mean fishing dorp come—to be one of the greatest marts in Europe.

Howell's Letters, § i, 6, 1st ed.

We agree in Mr. Hooper's interpretation of dorp bores, i. e., village boors, in the following passage.]

†All the dorp bores with terror fled.

Chapm. R., xi. 597. DORRER. Sleeper, or lazy persou. From dor.

There is a great number of gentlemen which cannot be content to live idle themselves like dorrers.

R. Robinson's Transl. of the Utopia, Dibd. ed., 1, p. 51.

These been for such as make them votarie,
And take them to the months and the ring.

DORTOUR. A sleeping-place, or dormitory. A Chaucerian word. retained by Spenser.

And them pursued into their dortours sad,
And searched all their cels and secrets near.

Spens. F. Q., VI, xii, 24.

DOSNELL, or DASNEL. A word which I have found only in the following proverb, and cannot exactly interpret. The dosnell dawcock comes dropping in among the doctors. Withals' Dicl., p. 558, [ed. 1634.] It is given as the translation of "Graculus inter musas, anser strepit Also, in Howell's inter olores." English Proverbs, p. 15, b. has it

The dasnel dawcock sits among the doctors

And illustrates it by "Corchorus inter olera."

DOSSERS. Panniers, or something of that kind. Dossier, Fr., from dos, a back. Cotgrave translates it by hotte. which is exactly a pannier.

The milkmaids' cuts shall turn the wenches off,
And lay their dossers tumbling in the dust.

Merry Des. of Edm., O. Pl., v, 265.

See Cut.

Chaucer has the word, and makes a difference between dossers and panniers:

> Or makin of these paniers, Or ellis hutchis or dossers.

House of Fame, ini, 849. You ha' some market here—some dosser of fish
Or fowl to fetch off.

B. Jons. Staple of N., ii, 4. Written also dorsers, as from the old French, dorsier:

By this some farmer's dairy-maid I may meet her, Riding from market one day 'twixt her dorsers.

B. & Fl. Night-walker, i, 1.

†DOSSER-HEADED. Literally pannier-headed, i. e., empty-headed, foolish.

I will not play the hypocrite to you (gallants) nor be nice in revealing my youthfull amouretts, in regard 1 find you are not dosser-keaded like divers others, and I know 'tis a glory for me to have followed the instinct of mother nature.

Comical History of Francion, 1655.

†DOTARD, or DOTTARD. Applied to trees, stumpy; cut down to the stumps.

Then beetles could not live

Then beetles could not live
Upon the hony bees,
But they the drones would drive
Unto the doted trees.

Priar Bacons Brazes Heads Prophesic, 1604.

It beares huge nuts which have excellent food in them; it shoots out hard prickles above a fathom long, and those arms them, with the bark they make tents, and the dotard trees serve for firing.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

Manie dottarde and derayde trees are within divers mannors surveyde, which are contynuallie wrongfullie taken by the tenauntes. MS. Land., 165, A.D. 1613.

These been for such as make them votarie,
And take them to the mantle and the ring,
And spenden day and night in dolarie,
Hammering their heads, musing on heavenly thing.

Drayton's Shepherds Garland, 1593.

DOTES. Qualification, endowments; Used by Ben Jonson, and it was thought by him only; but this his best editor, Mr. Gifford, denies, and save he has found it in earlier authors.

I muse a mistress can be silent to the dotes of such a I durst not aim at that, the dotes were such Thereof, no notion can express how much

Their caract was.

Their caract was.

Elegy on Lady Jane Pawlet, vol. vi, p. 18.

It has not hitherto been found or referred to in any other passages.

A bird said to be so DOTTEREL. foolishly fond of imitation, as to suffer itself to be caught, while intent upon mimicking the actions of the fowler.

In catching of dotterels we see how the foolish bird playeth the ape in gestures.

Bacon; quoted by Jehnson.

Drayton describes the action of the bird very minutely:

The dotterel, which we think a very dainty dish, Whose taking makes such sport, as no man more can wish wish.

For as you creep, or cowr, or lie, or stoop, or go,
So, marking you with care, the spish bird doth do,
And acting every thing, doth never mark the net,
Till he be in the snare which men for him have set.

Polyolb., Song 25, p. 1164.

Hence currently used for a silly fellow. a dupe:

E. Our Dotterel then is caught.

As dotterels use to be: the lady first Advanc'd toward him, stretch'd forth her wing, and he Met her with all expressions

Old Couple, O. Pl., x, 483. Dotterel is there the name of one of the persons, and evidently given to mark his character. Thus the cheating of Cokes in Barth. Fair, is called "dorring thé dott'rel." See to Dor, above. The character of Fitz-dottrel is named with the same intention. in Jonson's The Devil's an Ass; and the folly of the bird in stretching out a leg if the fowler does so, is alluded to in the following line:

We have another leg strain'd for this dottrel.

That is, we have another project to insnare him. Thus in this passage

See, they stretch out their legs like dosterels. B. & Fl. Sea Voyage, act iil. †I heare you, why then (with a mischeife) do you mocke me ve dotrells, saying like children, 1 will not, I will, I will, I will not, give me it, take it, ye say, and unsay; ye doe and undoe. Terence in English, 1614.

DOUBLE-BEER. Strong beer, or ale. Bierre double, Fr. [Double-doublebeer, strong beer, much stronger than the double-beer.

Had he been master of good double beer,

My life for his, John Dawson had been here.

Corbet on the Death of J. Dawson.

i. e., had been still alive.

+DOUBLE-RIBBED. Great with child. Now over and besides these mischeifes, this comes also in the very nicke; this same woman of Andros, whether shee be wife to Pamphilus or but his love, I know not, but great with child shee is by him; shee is now double-ribbed.

Terence in English, 1614.

DOUBLE-RUFF. A sort of game at cards. There were also games called English Ruff and Honours, French Ruff, and Wide Ruff.

I can play at nothing so well as double ruff.

Woman k. with Kindn., O. Pl., vii, 295.

+DOUBLETS. An old game, bearing some resemblance to backgammon.

What? where's your cloak? And. Going to foiles ev'n now, I put it off.

Mea. To tell you truth he hath lost it at doublets.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

+To DOUBT. To cause fear. I'll tell ye all my fears, one single valour, The vertues of the valiant Caratach More doubts me then all Britain.

Beaumont and Fletcher, 1647. DOUCET. A custard. In this and other senses variously spelt; as douset, dowset, doulcet; but in all equally derived from dulcet, sweet.

Fresh cheese and dowsets, curds, and clouted cream.

Drayl. Ect., 9, page 1431.

†Heer's dousets and flapjacks, and I ken not what.

The King and a Poure Northerns Man, 1640.

Also used as a hunting term; the testes of a hart or stag:

I did not half so well reward my hounds

As she hath me to-day; although I gave them

All the sweet morsels call'd tongue, ears, and doncets.

B. Jonn Nad Sheph., i, 6.

To love a keeper your fortune will be, But the doucets better than him or his fee. Ibid., Masque of Gipsics, 6, p. 96. Mr. Tyrwhitt, in his Glossary to Chaucer (v. douced), cites a passage from Lydgate, in which doucete evidently signifies some musical instrument:

There were trumpes and trumpettes, Lowde shallys and doucetes. Bailev has dowset, a kind of apple. +DOUDON. A short, fat woman. This is marked as an old English word in the Ladies Dictionary, 1694. +DOUDY. A sloven?

If plaine, or homely, we saie she is a doudie, or a slut. Riche his Farewell, 1681. †DOVE. One of the popular paradoxes of the olden time was a dove without See on this subject a curious song in the Songs and Carols printed from the Sloane MS, for the Wharton Club, and the ballad quoted in the notes. In this ballad we have the lines-

DOV

In this ballad we have the lines—

I must have to my supper

A bird without a ga!.

Among the which, you bring in a dow without a gall, as farre from the matter you speake of, as you are from the mastry you would have; who although she cannot be angry with you, in that she hath no gall, yet can she laugh at you, because shee hath a spleene. Lulie's Euphnes and his England

DOVER-COURT, or, corruptly, DOVER-COT. A parish in Essex, near and leading to Harwich; where was once a miraculous cross which spoke, if the legends may be credited.

And how the rood of Dovercot did speak, Confirming his opinions to be true. Collier of Croyd., O. Pl., xi, 195.

Whether this place was alluded to in the following proverb, or some court. conjectured by the editor of those proverbs to have been kept at Dover. and which was rendered tumultuous by the numerous resort of seamen. may be doubted:

Dover-court, all speakers and no hearers.

Ray, p. 946. Possibly the church which contained that rood was the scene of confusion alluded to in the proverb; for we are told by Fox, that a rumour was spread that no man could shut the door, which therefore stood open night and day; and that the resort of people to it was much and very great. Martyrs, vol. ii, p. 302. However this be, the proverb was long current. It is alluded to in an old copy of verses inscribed on the wall of St. Peter's belfry at Shaftesbury, and quoted above, at the word CLAMOUR: But when they clam, the harsh sound spoils the sport, And 'tis like women keeping Dover-court. So in Stephenson's Norfolk Drollery, 1673:

I'm not a man ordain'd for Dover-court, For I'm a hearer still where I resort

And even as late as Queen Anne's time, in Mr. Bramston's Art of Politics.

Church nor church-matters ever turn to sport,
Nor make St. Stephen's chapel Dover-court.

Dodsley, Coll. of Poems, vol. i.

DOVER'S GAMES. Annual sports, held on Cotswold, in Gloucestershire, instituted by captain Robert Dover, early in the reign of James I, and sometimes called Dover's Olympics. They were celebrated in a tract, now scarce, entitled "Annalia Dubrensia. Upon the yearly Celebration of Mr. Robert Dover's Olympic Games upon Cotswold Hill," &c.; where they are recommended by verses from Ben Jonson, Randolph, Drayton, &c., which appear in their respective works. The games included wrestling, leaping, pitching the bar, handling the pike, dancing by women, and various kinds of hunting.

To DOUT. To do out, to extinguish.

First, in the intellect it douts the light,
Darkens the house, dims th' understanding's sight.

Sylvest. Tobacco batter'd, p. 106.

Mr. Todd says, that dout the candle, and dout the fire, are phrases still common in several counties. Grose. in his Glossary, specifies Gloucestershire as using it; but gives douters as a northern word. I believe it is a general name for the instruments he describes, which extinguish a candle DOWLE. The fibres of down in a feather, or any similar substance; perhaps only a corruption of down.

by pressing the wick.

May as well

Wound the loud winds, or with be-mockt-at stabs

Kill the still-closing waters, as diminiah

One doubt that's in my plume. Temp., iii, 3.

Such trees as have a certain wool or doubt upon them, as the small cotton.

History of Manual Arts, 1661, p. 93.
There is a certain shell-fish in the sea, called pinna, that bears a mossy dowl or wool.

Ibid. E. Coles, after dower, inserts young dowl, which he translates lanugo. See Mr. Steevens's note on the above passage in the Tempest. See also Todd.

†DOWSE. To plunge or duck in the water. Still used in the dialects of the north of England.

Why, could we help it, when he leapt into the river?

Cl. Had your zeal been so hot to serve the king, as you do now make shew of,

You would have dow's' in over head and ears.

Carlell's Passionate Lovers, 1655.

Carlell's Passionate Lovers, 1655.
And by this device, at length after extreame perils, came to the banke on the farther side. All the rest riding upon their horses that swum, and oftentines by reason of the streame dashing round about them, doneed under the water, and tossed to and fro, after they had beene weakned with this daungerous wet that they tooke, were cast upon the bankes against them.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

DOXY. A mistress. Originally taken from the canting language. See Decker's Belman, sign. E.

When daffodils begin to peer—
With heigh the dory over the dale. Wint. Tale, iv, 2.
She has studied

She has studied
A way to beggar us both, and, by this hand,
She shall be, if I live, a dory.
B. J. Fl. Woman's Price, iii, 2.
M. Sirrah, where's your dory? halt not with me.
O. Dory! Mull; what's that?
M. His wench.
Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 109.

It may be observed, that Autolycus, who sings the song above cited, has a spice of the cant language in his dialect: for he says soon after. "I purchas'd this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat; Gallows and knock are too powerful on the highway." It should seem, by the passage quoted from the Roaring Girl, that doxy was not yet adopted into common language. Coles has it, a doxy, meretrix. Cotgrave has it, but not Minshew.

For the use of it among the beggars, see Beaumont and Fletcher in the Beggar's Bush, act ii, 1.

Deggar's Dusti, act it, 1.

Prostitute dosies are neither wives, maids, nor widdows; they will for good victuals, or for a very small piece of money, prostitute their bodies, and then pretent they never did any such thing before, that it was pure necessity that now compell'd them to do what they have done, and the like; whereas the Jades will prove common hacknies upon every slight occasion.

Dunton't Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

To DRAB, from drab, which is still used. To follow loose women.

Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, Quarrelling, drabbing:—you may go thus far.

Haml., ii. 1. Nor am I so precise but I can drab too.

We'll not sit out for our parts.

Massing. Reneg., i, 3.

The miserable rogue must steal no more, Nor drink, nor drab.

Thid., iii. 2.

DRADD. Dreaded. Spenser. See Todd. Saw hys people governed with such justice and good order, that he was both dradds, and greatly beloved. Hotinsk., vol. i, d 2.

Also for affrighted.

DRAFF. Hog-wash, or any such coarse liquor. Milton used this word (see Johnson's Dict.), and it can hardly be reckoned obsolete.

You would think I had an hundred and fifty tatter'd You would think I had an numeric use into prodigals, lately come from swine-feeding, from eating dreff and husks.

And holds up snout, like pig that comes from dreff.

Mirror for Magist., p. 516.

Spelt also draugh:

Spelt also uraugh...
When as the cullian, and the viler clown,
That like the swine on draugh sets his desire.

Drayt. Ed., 8, p. 1434.

DRAFFY. Coarse and bad. From sediment of liquor.

Of a lover, Of a lover,
The dregs and draffy part, disgrace and jealousy.
B. & Fl. Island Princess, iii, last se Qu. Whether for disgrace we should not read distrust?

+DRAGON-WATER. A medicinal remedy which appears to have been very popular in the earlier half of the 17th century.

Whilst beazer stone, and mightly mithridate, whilst beater stone, and mightly mitriante,
To all degrees are great in estimate,
And triacles power is wonderously exprest,
And dragon water in most high request.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Mop. Shut up your doores then; Carduus Benedictus

Thes. What meane you Mopsus?

Mop. Mean I? what mean you
To invite me to your house when 'tis infected?

Randolph's Amyntas, 1640.

+To DRAIL. To trail.

And deadly wounded corps drag'd on the ground, And after him his speare he drailing found. Virgil, by Vicare, 1632.

+DRAKE. A small cannon. Wee had six brasse drakes lay upon the deck; so that she was overtopt with waight.

A. Wilson's Autobiography.

DRAKE, SIR FRANCIS'S, SHIP. The ship in which he sailed round the world was, by order of queen Elizabeth, laid up at Deptford, where it long continued an object of admiration. For some time, it appears to have been usual to make parties to dine or sup on board. When it was so far decayed as to be necessarily broken up, a chair was made of one of the planks, and presented to the University of Oxford.

We'll have our provided supper brought on board sir Francis Irake's skip, that bath compassed the world. where with full cups and banquets we will do sacrifice for a prosperous voyage. Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., 1v, 254. Cowley has the following epigram on the chair:

Upon the Chair made out of Sir Francis Drake's Ship, presented to the University Library of Oxford, by John Davis, of Deptford, Esquire.
To this great ship, which round the globe has run, And match'd in race the chariot of the sun, This Pythagorean ship, (for it may claim Ints rythagorean sanp, for it may claim
Without presumption so deserv'd a name,
By knowledge once, and transformation now)
In her new shape, this sacred port allow.
Drake and his ship could not have wish'd from fate
A more blest station, or more blest estate; For lo! a seat of endless rest is given, To her in Oxford, and to him in Heav'n.

DRALLERY. See DROLLERY. +DRAME. Conjectured to mean a dreg.

Such rascold drames promoted by Thais,
Bacchus, Licoris, or yet by Testalis.
Bacclay's Eclogues, 1570.

DRAPET. A table-cloth. From drap, Fr., or drappo, Ital.

Thence she them brought into a stately hall,
Wherein were many tables fair dispred,
And ready dight with drapets feastival,
Against the viands should be ministerd.

DRAUGHT. A jakes, or cloaca.

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a drenght,
Confound them by some course.

Tim. of A., v, 2.

Sweet draught! sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet

Tr. f Cr., v, 1.

Capell, for what reason I know not. has changed the reading to draff in his edition, and does not notice this. which is the reading of the old quarto, and required by the sense.

The word is used in the translation of the Bible, Matth. v, 17, where the original is ἀφεδρών, literally a jakes.

A godly father sitting on a draught,
To do as need and nature hath us taught,
Mumbled (as was his manner) certaine prayers.

Harington's Epigrams, 1633.

+DRAUGHTY. Pertaining to a draught;

MILITY.

Would it not grieve any good spirits to sit a whole moneth nitting out a lousic beggarly pamphlet, and like a needy phisitian to stand whole yeares, toesing and tumbling the filth that falleth from so many draughty inventions as daily swarms in our printing house?

Returns from Pernasns, 1606.

To DRAW. A hunting term, for to trace the steps of the game.

A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot

Com. of E., iv, 2. To draw dry-foot was, according to Dr. Johnson, to trace the marks of the dry foot, without the scent. Dr. Grey would have it to follow by the scent; but a dry foot can have no scent. Who shall decide when doctors disagree? In this case, perhaps, sportsmen, to whom I refer it. A drawn fox is a hunted fox: "When we beat the bushes, &c., after the fox we call it drawing." Gent. Recr., Hunting, p. 17, 8vo. The tricks and artifices of a hunted fox were supposed to be very extraordinary; hence this expression:

No more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox.

1 Hen. IF, iii, 3. And Morose, a cunning avaricious old man, is called "That drawn fox." Beaumont and Fletcher's Woman's Prize, i, 2.

To draw a book, was to draw †DRAW. up a bill or lawyer's brief. To draw to a head, was, and is still, a term applied to a boil or ulcer. To draw sheep, to select sheep from the flock. Entreating her, that she would vouchsafe in his name to deliver unto her husband that bagge of writings, which were all necessarie for his cause in hand, and he entreated Mr. Doctor her husband, that hee would draw a books, to intimate to the judge his reasons, and hee would he very thankfull to him.

256

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612. Aboutir. To wax ripe, or draw to a keed, as an impostume, also, to end.

Abgrego, to sever or take out of the flocke, to draw skeve.

Eliotes Dictionarie, 1859.

DRAW-GLOVES. A sort of trifling game, the particulars of which the learned have not yet discovered. Herrick has mentioned it several times. and made it the subject of the following epigram:

Draw-Gloves At draw-gloves.
At draw-gloves we'll play,
And prethee let's lay
A wager, and let it be this:
Who first to the sum
Of twenty shall come, Shall have for his winning a kiss. Hesperides, p. 111.

In another poem:

We'll venter (if we can) at wit; If not, at draw-gloves we will play. Ibid., p. 252.

Again:
Puss and her prentice both at draw-gloves play.
Ibid., p. 306.

It is alluded to here:

In pretty riddles to bewray our loves,
In questions, purpose, or in drawing gloves.

Drayt. Heroical Ep., p. 870.
In all the instances it seems to be a game between lovers.

†DRAW-LATCH. A thief.

Well, phisitian, attend in my chamber heere, till Stilt and I returne; and if I pepper him not, say I am not worthy to be cald a duke, but a drawlatch.

Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

Regrey 8

A squirrel's nest. DRAY. Dict.

Dict.

While he, from tree to tree, from spray to spray, Gets to the woods, and hides him in his dray.

Browne, Br. Past., i, 5, p. 134.

In the summer time they (the squirries) build them nests (which by some are called drays) in the tops of trees, artificially with sticks and moss.

Gentleman's Recr., p. 109, 8vo.

The nimble squirrel noting here,

Her mossy dray that makes.

Drayt. Quest of Cynthia, p. 626.

Cowper has used it:

er has used to . Climb'd like a squirrel to his dray. Poems, I, 303.

So that probably it is not yet obsolete in the country.

DRAZEL. A slut, a vagabond wench. The same as DROSSEL, which see.

That when the time's expir'd, the drazels For ever may become his vassals.

Hudibr., III, i, 947. DREAD, as a substantive. A sort of respectful address to a person greatly superior, as an object of dread or Thus Spenser to queen veneration. Elizabeth:

The which to hear vouchsafe, O dearest dread, awhile.

Parry Qu., Induction to B 1.

DREADFUL, for fearful, or apprehen-

Dreadful of daunger that might him betide, She oft' and oft' adviz'd him to refraine From chase of greater beasts. Sp. F. Q., Sp. F. Q., III, i. 37.

+To DREAN. To drain, to exhaust. O DREAN. 10 UPAIII, to CAIRGID.

Ile try if griefe will dream his melting reines,
And hang a crutch upon his able back.

Historie of Albino and Bellama, 1838.

Her thirsty soule, she sayd, would dreams a tin.

Bid.

DREARING. Sorrow. See DRERE.

And lightly him uprearing,
Revoked life, that would have fied away.

—All were myself, through grief, in deadly decering.

Spens. Dephnaids, v. 187.

+DRECEN. To threaten. According to Petheram, this word is very common in the north of England.

The queene descened by the churchinen.

M. Marpelate's Exitome, ed. Petherem, p. 36.

†To DREE. In the dialects of the north of England, to dree is used in the sense of to journey towards a place, perhaps literally to draw. This is evidently its sense in the Robin Hood ballads.

In summer time, when leaves grow green,
And birds sing on every tree,
Robin Hood went to Nottingham
As fast as he could dree.

Robin Hood and the Jolly Tinker. Come thou hither to me, thou lovely page, Come thou hither to me;

For thou must poet to Nottingham
As fast as thou can'st dree.

The exploits of renowned Robin Hood.

To dre, to suffer, belongs to an older period of the language.

Thus es ylk mane, als we may see, Borne in care and kayteftee, And for to dre with dole his dayes, Als Job sothely hymselfe sayse.

Hampole MS. Linc., f. 277.

DRENT. Drowned, overwhelmed. But our own selves, that here in dole are dress Spens. Astroph., 310. With them all joy and jolly merriment Is also deaded, and in dolour drent.

Spons. Tears of the Muses, 210. †If monarchs so would take an instrument Of truth composed to spy their subjects, dent
In foul oppression by those high in seat,
Who care not to be good, but to be greated.

Browne's Britannia's Pastorals.

† Tis sinne hath drawne the deluge downe

Of all these teares, wherein we drowne, Wherein not onely we are drent.

But all the Christian continent.

H. H. Peachem

DRERE, or DREARE. Sorrow. ERE, Or DKEARLE. SOLLS... A ruefull spectacle of death and ghastly drere. Sp. F. Q., I, viii, 40.

DRERIMENT. Sorrow.

Full of sad feare, and ghastly deeriment.

Sp. P. Q., I, ii. 44.

And teach the woods and waters to lament
Your doleful dreriment.

Sp. Spithalamion, v. 10.
The cloudy isle with no small deeriment
Would soon be fill'd.

Pl. Purple Isl., iii, 18.

DRERYHEAD. The same as the foregoing. One of the antiquated forms which Spenser, and they who copied him, delighted to employ.

Ah wretched boy! the shape of dreryhead, And sad example of man's sudden end.

Astroph., 183.

DRESSER. The signal for the servants to take the dinner from the kitchen, was the cook's knocking on the dresser, thence called the cook's drum. And 'tis less danger,

I'll undertake, to stand at push of pike
With an enemy on a breach, that's undermin'd too With an enemy on a breach, that's undermin'd too And the cannon playing on it, than to stop One harpy, your perpetual guest, from entrance, When the dresser, the cook's drum, thunders.

Mass. Unsat. Comb., iii, 1, Giff. ed.
Then, sir, as in the field the drum, so to the feast the

Then, sir, as in the field the drum, so to the feast the dresser gives the alarm. Ran tan tara, &c.

Chapm. May-day, iv, p. 91, repr.

Hark, they knock to the dresser.

Jov. Crew. O. Pl., x, 407.

Then must he warn to the dresser. Gen.:emen, and yeomen, to dresser.

Northumb. Housh. B., p. 423.

+DRESSING-BOARD. A dresser.

A dressing boorde, tabula culinaria: a dressing knife, culter diversorius vel popinarius.

Withats' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 187.

To drink excessively. +DRIFLE.

About this time, Dr. Basire, in his sermon, seasonably reproving the garrison's excessive drinking, called drifting, prevailed so, that the governours forthwith appointed a few brewers in every street, to furnish each family sparingly and proportionablely.

Tullie's Narrative of the Siege of Carlisle, p. 15.

+DRIFT. A course, or road.

Do it then, Faustus, with unfeigned heart,
Lest greater dangers do attend thy drift.

Marlowe's Tragedy of Doctor Paustus.

†DRIFT-WAY. A pack-way.

A foot-way and horse-way, called actus ab agendo, and this vulgarly is called a packe or drift-way, and is both a foot-way and horse-way.

Dalton's Countrey Justice, 1620. +To DRILL. To trickle down.

With that, swift watry drops drill from his eye.

Heywood's Troia Britannica, 1609.

With gold and figures (which to touch were sin)

The geometricke ridge of silver tride,

Fires o're their heads, and drils downe by the wals,

Which scalds the princes as it melting fals. Ibid.

DRILL. A kind of baboon. The word, though used by the writers of queen Anne's time, is now totally left off. It certainly was once common, but how derived, I know not, for it occurs in no old dictionary that I have seen. Smith, in his Voyage to Guinea (1744), speaking of the mandrill (which name Buffon has adopted), says he knows not why it is so called, "except it be for the near resemblance of a human creature, though not at all like an ape." P. 51. Evidently forming it from man and drill.

A diurnal-maker is the antimark [antimask] of an historian, he differs from him as a dril from a man.

Clevel. Char. of a Diurnal-maker.

What a devil (quoth the midwife), would you have your son move his ears like a drill? Yes, fool, (said he) why should he not have the perfection of a drills or of any other animal? Mem. of Scribbrus, chap. 2. The comptrollers of vulgar opinion have pretended to find out such similitude of shape in some kind of baboons, at least such as they call drills, that leaves little difference.

Sir W. Temple on Pop. Disc., sub initio. Bp. Wilkins also has the word. Buffon has applied the name of mandrill to the simia maimon of Linnæus, though that baboon has a deep blue face; whereas Smith (whom he quotes for it) expressly says, that his mandrill had a white face; and tells a jest of a negro, which illustrates it. It was probably the simia sphinx of Linnæus, and Shaw (Gen. Zool., i, p. 16), who describes the face as of "a tawny flesh colour.'

DRINKING HEALTHS. The following rules for drinking healths are extracted from an old book, entitled, The Irish Hubbub, or the English Hue and Crie, by Barnaby Rich, 1623: He that beginnes the health hath his prescribed orders: first, uncovering his head, he takes a full cup in his first, uncovering his head, he takes a full cup in his hand, and setting his countenance with a grave aspect, he craves for audience: silence being once obtained, hee beginnes to breath out the name peradventure of some honourable personage, that is worthy of a better regard than to have his name polluted at so unfitting a time, amongst a company of drunkards: but his health is drunk to, and he that pledges must likewise off with his cap, kisse his fingers, and howing himself in signe of a reverent acceptance: When the leader sees his follower thus prepared, hee sups up his broath, turnes the bottom of the cup upward, and in ostentation of his dexteritie, gives the cup a phillip to make it cry tucango. And thus the first scene is acted. The cup being newly replemished to the breadth of an it cry iscango. And thus the first scene is acted. The cup being newly replenished to the breadth of an haire, he that is the pledger must now beginne his part, and thus it goes round throughout the whole company, provided alwayes, by a canon set down by the founder, there must be three at least still uncovered, till the health hath had the full passage; which is no sooner ended but another begins againe, and hee drinks an health to his lady of little worth, or peradventure to his light hele'd mistress.

This the author calls "The Ruffingly Order of drinking Healths, used by the Spendalls of this age.'

This curious account was discovered by Mr. Reed, who gave it in his Notes on Decker's Honest Whore, O. Pl., ii,

To DRINK TOBACCO. To smoke. Formerly a common phrase.

Fill my discourses up drinking tobacco.

All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 143.

That is, by smoking at intervals. I tell thee. Wentloe, thou canst not live on this side of the world, feed well, drink tobacco, and be honoured into the presence, but thou must be acquainted with all sorts of men. Miseries of Inf. Marr., O. Pl., v, 6. In the Roaring Girl, one of the personages says of some tobacco, "This will serve to drink at my chamber." O. Pl., vi, 29.

See the note on the Honest Whore. O. Pl., iii, 455.

He droop'd, we went; 'till one (which did excel Th' Indians in drinking his tobacco well) Met us. Donne, Sat., i, 87.

I find it said, by an anonymous writer, that the Turks use this phrase. Lit. Gazette, Sept. 11, 1819, p. 588. 1 do not youch for the fact.

† Drinke you tobaccho nere so secretly, Yet by the smoake heele tell the quantitie.

Bastard's Chrestoleros, 1598. Hostard's Carrestoteros, 1: †Old Adam liv'd nine hundred thirty yeere, Yet ne'r dranke none, as I could read or heare: And some men now live ninety yeeres and past, Who never dranke tobacco first nor last.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. ▲ DROIL. A drudge. Some derive it from drevel, Dutch; but that seems too remote. Mr. Lemon deduces it from roißw, tero, but his etymologies are often made as if for sport, to try the patience of his readers. It may possibly be formed from to draw, but I have no great confidence in the conjecture. Junius puts drivel and droile as different forms of the same word: if so, the Dutch derivation is excellent. Then I begin to rave at my stars' bitterness,
To see how [qu. so?] many muckhills plac'd above me,
Peasants, and droyls, caroches full of dunghills,

Whose very birth stinks in a generous nostril.

B. & Pl. Wit at see. W., ii, 1.

She hates to live where she must call her mother that was thy droile.—That droile is now your brother's wife.

R. Brome, New Acad., ii, p. 40.

Droil is used also for labour:

Would you would speak to him though, to take a little More paines, 'tis I do all the droile, the durtwork. Skirl. Gent. of Ven., i, p. 10.

†To DROIL. To drudge.

How worldlings droil for trouble! That fond breast
That is possess'd
Of earth without a cross, has earth without a rest.

Ouerles's Emblems. O who would droil,

Or delve in such a soil,
Where gain's uncertain and the pain is sure? Ibid. †To DROLL. To trifle.

Ars. He attempted me.

Ars. Do not I know, he loves to droll with thee?

Ars. He would scarce droll away the sum he offer d.

The Slighted Maid, p. 7.

+DROLL.

ROLL. A merry fellow.

The two drolls apprehending that news, were as glad as if they had been invited to a wedding. They stayed in his chamber, without making the least noise, having in their hands those armes which were necessary for the execution of the design.

Comical Hustory of Francion, 1655.

†DROLL. A puppet; at a later period it appears to have been used for a tom-fool.

Bartholomew Fair falls out very luckily this year for the lawyers, for now the term being out and not in hope shortly of coming in again, they have time enough to go to Smithfield to see the jack puddings drolls, whores, and pick-pockets. Poor Robin, 1736. A throng of searchers after truth Were cruwding at the siley's mouth, Were crowding at the suey's mouth, Wherein the conventicle stood,

Like Smithfield droll-booth, built with wood.
Hudibras Redivious, part v, 1706.

DROLLERY. A puppet-show.

Alone. Give us kind keepers, heavens! what were Sebast. A living drollery. Now I will believe That there are unicorns, &c. Tem Temp., iii, 8.

Also for a puppet:

O' this side the Alps they're nothing but mere drol-leries.

B. J. Fl. Wildgoose Chase, i, 2.

kries.

B. F.Fl. Wildgoose Chase, 1, 2.

Now heav'n have mery on me and young men,
I'd rather make a drollery till thirty.

B. F.Fl. Valentinian, ii, 2.

That is, "I'd rather keep a puppetshow."

This, being misprinted drallery, much puzzled some modern editors. Also a lively sketch in drawing, or something of that kind:

And for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the German hunting in waterworks. 2 Hen. IF, ii, 1.

DROP-MEAL. By portions of drops; from mæl, Saxon, a portion. Many more compounds of this form were formerly used than are now retained. Makes water with great paines, and by drop-meale.

Dugre's Dialogues, p. 26.

See INCH-MEAL and LIMB-MEAL.

DROSSELL. A slut, a hussey. Now dwells each drossell in her glasse. Warn. Alb. Eng., ch. 47, p. 201.

See DRAZELL.

DROWSYHED. Drowsiness.

The royal virgin shook off drowsyked, And rising forth out of her baser bowre Lookt for her knight. Spens. F. O., L ii. 7. †DROWTH. Thirst. In the following passage it means want. Drowthy was used in the sense of thirsty.

Now noyse prevailes, and he is tan'd for drowth Of wit, that with the cry spends not his mouth. Carew's Porms, 1642.

Bus'ness now calling for my friend,
T' our conversation put an end;
So that I now began to think,
B'ing drowthy, on a little drink.
Hudibras Redisinus, part vii, 170.

DROYL. See DROIL.

DRUM, TOM OR JOHN DRUM'S ENTERTAINMENT. A kind of proverbial expression for ill-treatment, probably alluding originally to some Most of the particular anecdote. allusions seem to point to the dismissing of some unwelcome guest. with more or less of ignominy and insult.

Not like the entertainment of Jacks Drum, Who was best welcome when he went away. Extracts relating to Thomas Coryats, edit. of 1778, vol. iii, Co 3.

In the following passage it is used with a secondary allusion to the drum which Parolles undertook to fetch:

which Tatories undertook to fetch.

O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum; he says he has a stratagem for 't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed.

All's Well, iii, 6. In the last scene of this play, Shakespeare has made Lafeu calls Parolles Tom Drum:

Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkerchief. Act v. 3.-305, b.

Holinshed thus defines it; speaking of the hospitality of a mayor of Dublin, he says, that

His porter or other officer durst not for both his ears ris porter or other other duris not to both in segret the simplest man that resorted to his house, Tom Drum's entertainment, which is, to bale a man in by the head, and thrust him out by both the shoulders.

Hist. of Ireland, B 2, col. 1, cit. cap.

Another speaks of it differently: It shall have Tom Drum's entertainment, a flap with a fox-tail.

Apollo Shroving, 1626.
Packe hence, away, Jacke Drum's entertainment, she will none of thee.

will none of thee.

Comedy of Three Ladies of London, 1584, sign. D.2, b.

†Plato, when he saw the doctrine of these teachers neither for profit necessary, nor to bee wished for pleasure, gave them all Drummes entertainment, not suffering them once to shew their faces in a reformed commonwealth.

Gosson's Schoole of Abuse, 1679. There is an old interlude extant. entitled, Jack Drum's Entertainment, in which that personage appears as an intriguing servant, whose projects are usually foiled.

To DRUMBLE. To be confused, to go about anything confusedly or awkwardly. A provincial term, according to some, for to be dronish or sluggish. to some, for to be urunion of ouggacing what John, Robert, John! Go take up these clothes here quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble?

It is good flahing in drumbling waters.

Scottish Prov., Ray, p. 296.

Also to mumble unintelligibly in speaking:

RKIIIS: Gray-beard drambling over a discourse. Have with you to 8. Wald.

See Todd.

+DRUMLER. A small ship, supposed to represent the older dromon.

The cripple, an old drumler quite past service.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+DRUMSLER. A drummer.

The drum-player, or drumsler. Nomenclator. +To DRUNKARDIZE. To act like a drunken person.

Her deaded heart incens'd, she raves aloud,
Doth madly through the citie drunkardise,
Even as it is the Bacchanalian guise.

Virgil, by Vicare, 1632.

+DRY-FAT. This word was used in the sense of a box or packing case, which appears to be its meaning here.

While hotly thus they skirmish in the vault, Quick Ebedmelech closely hither brought A dry-fat sheath'd in latton plates with-out, With-in with feathers fill'd, and round about Bor'd full of holes (with hollow pipes of brass), Save at one end, where nothing out should pass; Which (having first his Jewish troops retir'd) Just in the mouth of th' enter-mine he fir'd; The smook whereof with odious stink doth make The Pagans soon their hollow fort forsake.

Du Rartas And if the informer or constable doe light upon one of And if the informer or constable doe light upon one of her conceal'd dry-fats, punchions, fardils or (naughty) packs, and having seiz'd it by his office, and honesly laid it up safe in the store-house of Bridewell, yet the bawd will so compound in the businesse, that for a small toye, and a little sufferance, sheele redeeme the commodity and have her ware againe in her owns hands.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+DRY-FELLOW. A miser.

Drye fellow, whom some call a pelt or pinchbecke.

Aridus homo. Huloet's Abecedarium, 1552. DRY FOUT, to draw. See DRAW. Dry foot hunting is often mentioned. Nay, if he smell nothing but papers, I care not for his dry-foot hunting, nor shall I need to pull pepper in his nostrils.

Dumb Knight, O. Pl., iv, 464.

A hunting, sir Oliver, and dry-foot too!

Ram alley, O. Pl., v, 451.

DRY MEAT was thought to make persons choleric.

I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dry'd away; And I expressly am forbid to touch it, For it engenders choler, planteth auger; And better 'twere that both of us did fast, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are cholerick, Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

Than feed it with such over-roasted fiesh.

7 tam. Shr., iv, 1.

8. Dr. No, sir, I think the meat wants that I have.

Ant. In good time, sir, what's that? S. Dro. Basting.

Ant. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry. S. Dro. If it be, sir, pray you eat none of it. Ant. Your reason.

S. Dro. Lest it make you cholerick, and purchase me another dry-basting.

TRY WASHED D

+DRY-WASHER.

Nor call he not drye-masker in disgrace,
For feare shee cast the suddes into thy face;
By her thy linnen's sweet and cleanely drest;
Else thou wouldst stinke above ground like a beast.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To DUB A KNIGHT. He who drank a large potation of wine, or other liquor, on his knees, to the health of his mistress, was jocularly said to be dubb'd a knight, and retained his title for the evening.

for the eveniug.

I'll teach you the finest humour to be drunk in:
I learn'd it at London last week. Both. I' faith!
let's hear it, let's hear it. Sam. The bravest humour!
'twould do a man good to be drunk in it; they call it knighting in London, when they drink upon their finese.
Yorksh. Trag., sc. 1.

To this custom alludes the scrap of a song which Silence sings in the second part of Henry IV.

Do me right, And dub me knight. The whole song or catch was perhaps that which is extant in Nash's Summer's last Will and Testament, and is as follows:

Monsieur Mingo for quaffing doth surpass, In cup, in can, or glass;

God Bacchus do me right. And dub me knight Domingo. ·

This Domingo, Silence corrupts to Sammingo.

DU CAT A WHEE, or DU GAT A WHEE. A scrap of corrupt Welch, of which the proper form is Duw cadw chwi, signifying, "God bless or preserve you." It is given once or twice by Beaumont and Fletcher to characters who were not likely to know anything of that language. as Mons. Thom., i, 2, and Custom of the Country, i, 3. We owe the interpretation to Mr. Colman, the last editor of those dramas. It occurs, as Welch, in the Night-walker, iii, 6.

+DUCATOON. A half-ducat. A foreign coin worth 2s. 6d. to 3s. The large ruffs are characteristic of the heads on the coins of the earlier part of the 17th century.

A face of severall parishes and forts, Like to a sergeant shav'd at innes of court. What mean the elders else, those kirk dragoons, Made up of ears and ruffs like Ducatons? Cleaveland's Poems, 1651.

DUCK, s. A bow.

JCh, 8. A DOW.

As it is also their generall custome scarcely to salute any man, yet may they neither omitte crosse, nor carved statue, without a religious duek.

Discos. of New World, p. 128.

Be ready with your napkin, a lower donke, maid.

B. Brome, New Ac., i, p. 19.

Used also by Milton, in Comus, 960. To DUCK. To bow. To duck down the head is still in use, but not as applied to bowing.

Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,

Duck with French nods, and apiah courtesy.

Bick. III, i, 3.

The learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool.

Still more ducking,
Be there any saints that understand by signs only?

B. 4 Fl. Pilgrim, i, 2.

†DUCK-AND-DRAKE. This is only a part of the name formerly given to this puerile amusement.

Epostracismus. Lusus quo testulam aut lamellam sive apoterschame. James quo estudan aut immenan sive lapillum distringunt super aques equor, numerumque saltuum, quos facit priusquam desidat, ineunt; victoria penes illum relicia, qui saltuum multitudine superet. ἐνοστρακισμὸς. A kind of sport or play with an oister ahell or a stone throwne into the water, and the contraction of the salter, and the salter are stone throwne. making circles yer it sinke, &c. It is called a ducke and a drake, and a halfe-penie cake. Nomenclator.

+DUCK-LEGGED. Having short waddling legs.

That hath short legges (as they call him) duck-legged,

Wilhals' Dictionarie, ed. 1808, p. 287.

Warnelly this was +DUCKING-POND. Formerly this was a common adjunct to any place where a number of habitations were collected together, and was in general use for the summary punishment of petty offenders of various descriptions. The ducking-pond for the western part of London occupied the site of part of Trafalgar-square, Charing Cross, and was very celebrated in the annals of the London mob.

Then full of sawce and zeal up steps Elnathan, (This was his name now, once he had another, Until the ducking-pond made him a brother) A deacon, and a buffeter of Sathan.

Satyr against Hypocrites, 1689. DUDGEON. A peculiar kind of handle to a dagger. Kersey and Bailey say that a dudgeon-dagger was "a small dagger." So, perhaps, it was generally, but it was not thence called dudgeon. E. Coles renders "a dudgeon-haft dagger," by "Pugio cum apiato manubrio;" [aptato in one edition, but wrongly.] Abr. Fleming, in his Nomenclator, from Junius, says, "Manubrium apiatum, a dudaeon-haft." P. 275. Which the Cambridge Dictionary of 1693 explains, by saving, "A dudgeon-haft, manubrium appiatum, (r. apiatum) or buxeum." Here we have the key to It was a box the whole secret. handle; which bishop Wilkins completely confirms, in the alphabetical dictionary subjoined to his Real Character, where he has, "Dudgeon, root of box," and "Dudgeon-dagger. a small sword, whose handle is of the root of box." This is likewise coufirmed by Gerrard, in Johnson's edition, who writes thus, under the article Box-tree:

The root is likewise yellow, and harder than the timber, but of greater beauty, and more fit for dagger-kafts, boxes, and such like uses, whereto the trunk abody serveth.—Turners and cutlers, if I mistake not the matter, doe call this wood dudgeon, wherewith they make dudgeon-kafted daggers.

P. 1410.

Hence we need no longer wonder why Shakespeare uses it for a handle:

I see thee still,
And on thy blade and dudgeon, gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.

Machen Macbeth, ii, l. Lyly also:

The dudgin hafts that is at the dudgin dagger.

Mother Bombis, S. C.

Also the proverbial saying:

When all is gone, and nothing left,
Well fare the dagger with the dudgeon hafte.

R. Greene's Ghost of Coneye. Pronounced heft.

An his justice be as short as his memory, a dudgeon-dagger will serve him to mow down sin withal.

B. f. Fl. Coxcomb, v, 1.

Fleming (above cit.) refers to "Mensa apiata," in another part of his book; which is an expression of Pliny, and perhaps meant a box table; though usually explained as marked with spots, like bees. The explanations and etymologies of dudgeon, by Skinner and Junius, are perfectly unsatisfactory.

To "take in dudgeon," seems but obscurely allied to this, though a forced connection may be made out. Dudgeon seems afterwards to have been used, for brevity's sake, instead Butler says of of dudgeon-dagger. his hero's dagger, that

And Aubrey, in his Biographical Memorandums, speaking of the fashion of wearing daggers, says,

I remember my old schoolmaster, Mr. Latimer, at seventy, wore a dudgeon, with a knife, and bodkin.

Letters from the Bodk., vol. ii, p. 889.

+DUDS. Rags; old clothes; clothes of any kind. Hence no doubt the name duddery, given formerly to one of the quarters occupied by booths in Sturbridge fair, near Cambridge, where articles of clothing were sold. See De Foe's Tour of Gr. B., p. 125.

The bawd being vexed, strait to her did say, Come, off with your duds, and so pack away, And likewise your ribbons, your gloves, and hair, For naked you came, and so out you go bare. Newest Academy of Compliments.

+To DUELLIZE. Vicars seems to use this strange word in the sense of to contend.

The furious duellizing chariots swift Burst from their bounds, use not such headlong drift In field careeres; nor horseman half so fast Runs, jets, curvets, or shakes the loose reins cast

On's horses main, nor loudlier jerks his whip.

Firgil, by Ficars, 1632.

JELLO, s. Duelling. The laws and DUELLO, s. Duelling. maxims of this science were much refined upon in the time of Shakespeare, and were formed into so ridiculous a system, as to afford a constant subject for humorous satire to him and his contemporary drama-The most celebrated authors who wrote treatises upon the subject, were Jerome Caranza, and Vincentio Saviola. Certain forms and ceremonies were laid down as necessary for the reparation of wounded honour. which were considered as indispensable. Zanch. It seems thou hast not read Carauza, fellow, I must have reparation of honour As well as this; I find that wounded.

As well as this; I find that wounded.

Goo. Sir,
I did not know your quality; if I had,
This like I should have done you more respects.

Zanch. It is sufficient by Caranza's rule.

B. & Fl. Love's Pilgrimage, v, 4.

So in Twelfth Night: No in Twelltii luight:

The gentleman will for his honour's sake have one bout with you; he cannot by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you.

The causes and dependencies were much mentioned, particularly the first and second cause, which were quite Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and Cupie's out-snart is too hard for herecules' citis, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second causes will not serve my turn, the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not.

Love's L. L., i, 3.

A duellist, a duellist! a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Rom J. Jul., ii, 4.

cant terms:

Even the seventh cause, or a lie seven times removed, is spoken of by the Clown, in that most admirable ridicule of these affectations, in As you like it, v, 4, &c. An equality in all circumstances was insisted upon among the terms of the duello: thus, as one combatant is lame, in Love's Pilgrimage, above cited, both are to be tied into chairs. This punctilio is successfully ridiculed in Albumazar: cessfully ridiculed in Albumazar:
Stay; understand'st thou well nice points of duel?
Art born of gentie blood, and pure descent?
Was none of all thy lineage bang'd, or cuckold?
Bastard, or bastnado'd? Is thy pedigree
As long and wide as mine? for otherwise
Thou wert most unworthy; and 'twere loss of homour
In me to fight. More, I have drawn five teeth,
If thine stand sound, the terms are much unequal,
And by strict laws of duel, I am excus'd
To fight on disadvantage. Act iv, sc. 7, O. Pl., vii, $18. This doctrine is strictly laid down in

The inequalitye of person is, whereas the defender is labouring or striken with any grevous malady or disease, as the gowte, apoplexis, fallings sicknesse, &c., or els if he bee maymed, lame, or benommed his members. P. 321 See CARANZA, SAVIOLA, DEPENDANCE, TAKING UP. &c.

Ferne's Blazon of Gentrie, publ. in DUKE. Used as a literal translation of dux, a general or commander. Thus, in the 15th chapter of Genesis, and elsewhere, those who are called ηγεμόνες, leaders, in the Septuagint, and in the Hebrew, אלופי, which is equivalent, are in our translation styled dukes. In the play of Fuimus Troes. Nennius, one of the sons of Lud, is called duke Nennius. O. Pl., vii, 448. And in another drama of that period. Æneas is alluded to by the title of Trojan duke.

O to recount, sir, will breed more ruth
Than did the tale of that high Trojan duke
To the sad-fated Carthaginian queen.
The Hog has lost his Pearl, O. Pl., vi, 446.

Also, a name for the piece at chess now called rook, or castle, of which the origin is here given:

the Origin is here given:

E. There's the full number of the game;
Kings, and their pawns, queen, bishops, knights, and dukes.

J. Dukes? they're called rooks by some.

E. Corruptively.

Le rock, the word, custodié de la rock,
The keeper of the forts.

Middleton's Game of Chess, Induction.

Here's a duke
Will strike a sure stroke for the game anon

Your pawn cannot come back to relieve itself.

Ibid., Wom. bew. Women, ii, 2,

†DUKE. A bird of prey, usually explained the horned-owl. Fr. duc.

She doth not prey upon dead fowl for the likeness that is between them; where the eagles, the dakes, and the sakers do murther, kill, and eat those which are of their own kind.

North's Plutarch, Romaius.

DUKE HUMPHREY. The phrase of dining with duke Humphrey, which is still current, originated in the following manner. Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, though really buried at St. Alban's, was supposed to have a monument in old St. Paul's, from which one part of the church was termed Duke Humphrey's Walk. In this, as the church was then a place of the most public resort, they who had no means of procuring a dinner, frequently loitered about, probably in hopes of meeting with an invitation, but under pretence of looking at the monuments. This point is thus distinctly explained by Stowe, where he describes the monuments in St. Paul's: Sir John Bewcamp, constable of Dover, wardon of the portes, kinght of the garter, sonne to Gwye Bewcamp, carle of Warwicke, and brother to Thomas, earle of Warwicke, in the body of the church, on the south side, 1358, where a faire monument remaineth of him: he is by ignorant people minamed to be Humphrey, duke of Gloster, who was honourably buried at Saint Albon's, twentie miles from London; and therefore such as merrily profess themselves to serve duke Humphrey in l'owies, are to be punished here, and sent to Saint Albon's, there to be punished againe, for theyr absence from theyr maister, as they call him.

Survey of London, p. 262.

It is said of some humpry-looking Sir John Bewcamp, constable of Dover, wardon of the

It is said of some hungry-looking gallants,

Are they none of duke Humphrey's furies? do you think that they devised this plot in Paul's to get a dinner.

Match at Mida., O. Pl., vu, 369.

Plots. You'd not do

Plots. You'd not do
Like your penurious father, who was wont
To walk his dinner out in Paul's, whilst you Kept Lent at home, and had, like folks in sieges,
Your meals weigh'd to you.

Nese. Indeed they say he was
A monument of Paul's.

Tim. Yes, he was there
As constant as duke Humphrey. I can show
The prints where he sate, holes i' the logs.

Polow. He wore
More pavement out with walking, than would make
A row of new stone saints, and yet refus'd
To give to th' reparation. City Match, O. Pl., ix, 335.
To seek his dinner in Poules with duke Humphrey.

Gabr. Harvey's Four Letters, 1592. Gabr. Harvey's Four Letters. 1592.

See also Decker's Gul's Hornbook, and other authorities cited by Mr. Steevens in a note on Rich. III. act iv.

Bishop Hall describes the duke's hospitality with much humour:

"Tis Ruffic: trow'es thou where he din'd to day? In sooth I saw him at with duke Humfrey. Many good welcomes, and much gratis cheere, Keeps he for everie straggling cavalere; An open house, haunted with great resort, Long service mir'd with muscall disport. Many faire younker with a feather'd creat To fare so freely with so little cost,
Than stake his twelvepence to a meaner host.

Satires, b. iii, s. 7. See Pauls.

DULCET. Sweet, harmonious. used occasionally in poetry. Applied to every kind of sweetness. Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath, That the rude sea grew civil at her song. Mids., ii, 2.

Such it is As are those dulcet sounds at break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And sunmon him to marriage. Mer. Fea., iii, 9.
For surely such fables are not onely doulcet to pass the tyme withall, but gainfull also to their practisers.

Chaloner's Morie Encomium, H 3.

DULLARD, 8. One stupidly unconcerned and dull, in the midst of any interesting proceeding; a stupid person.

How now, my flesh, my child, What mak'st thou me a dullard in this act? Wilt thou not speak to me? Cym., v, 5.

And thou must make a dullard of the world, And thou must make a second like they not thought,—&c.

Lear, u, i.

What, dullard I would'st thou dont in rusty art?

Histriomastic, 1610.

Used also as an adjective. See Todd. To DUMB. To silence, to make dumb. Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him. Ant. and Cl., i, 5.
She sings like one immortal, and she dances
As goddess-like to her admired lays.
Great clerks she dumbs. Perioles, v, 1.

DUMB-SHOW. A part of a dramatic representation shown pantomimically, chiefly for the sake of exhibiting more of the story than could be otherwise included; but sometimes merely em-blematical. They were very common in the earliest of our dramas. Of the former kind is that in the Prophetess of Beaumont and Fletcher, act iv, sc. 1, where the Chorus assigns the reason, telling the audience that he hopes they will admit it,

And be pleased, Out of your wonted goodness, to behold, As in a silent mirror, what we cannot With fit conveniency of time, allow'd For such presentments, cloath in vocal sounds. Thus also in Herod and Antipater:

What words What worus
Cannot have time to utter, let your eyes,
Out of this dumb-show, tell your memories.

Herod and Antipater.

Subjoined to the play of Tancred and Gismunda, are dumb-shows intended to precede each act as introductions.

See O. Pl., ii, 230. The emblematical dumb-shows may be seen prefixed to each act of Ferrex and Porrex, O. Pl., i, 109, and elsewhere. These exhibitions gradually fell into disrepute, by the improvement of taste : so that in Shakespeare's time they seem to have been in favour only with the lower classes of spectators, the groundlings, as he calls them, Who for the most part are capable of nothing but in-explicable dumb shows and noise. Haml. iii. 2. In his dramas there are few instances of them; that in Cymb., act v. sc. 4, and in the players' tragedy in Hamlet, are the chief. It was certainly a gross way of preserving the unity of time, yet not more so perhaps than that which Shakespeare preferred, as newer, the narrative chorus; which, though made elegant by his pen, is not very dramatic. In the following passage, the dumb-show forms the basis of a very curious sentiment: after a battle it is said,

To him who did this victory bestow, Are render'd thanks and praises infinite. For in so great and so apparent odds The part man acts is the dumb-sheet to God's.

Formerly the received term DUMP. for a melancholy strain in music, vocal or instrumental.

Vocal or instrumental.

After your dire lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber window
With some sweet concert; to their instruments
Tune a deploring dump; the night's dead silence
Will best become such sweet complaining grievance.

Two Gent. of V., iii, 2.

We read of a merry dump in Romco and Juliet, but that is evidently a purposed absurdity suited to the character of the apeaker:

O play me some merry dump, to comfort me. Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now. iv, 5. Belish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps, when time is kept with tears.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 538.

Mr. Stafford Smith gave to Mr. Steevens the music of a dump of the sixteenth century, which he had discovered in an old MS.; and it is given in the notes on the above passage of the Two Gentlemen of Verona. in the last edition of Johnson and Steevens. It is without words. Mr. S. Smith was a man of very curious research into old music, and published a valuable set of old songs, collected from MSS, with the music, which were dedicated to the late king, in

A dump appears to have been also a kind of dance:

He loves nothing but an Italian dump, Or a French brawl. Humour Out of Breath, 1607. But whether Devil's dumps, in the following passage, be interpreted devil's tunes or devil's dances, depends upon whether it be thought to refer to the music preceding, or the dance following; I think the latter.

More of these Devil's dumps!

Must I be ever haunted with these witchcrafts?

B. and Fl. Women pleased, v, 3.

Dumps, for sorrow, was not always considered as a burlesque expression:

This, this, aunt, is the cause, When I advise me sadly on this thing,
That makes my heart in pensive dumps dismay'd.

Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 177.

So also in the singular:

The fall of noble Monodaute's son Strake them into a dumpe, and made them sad.

Harr. Ariost., xiiii, 147.
†Leaving prince Agemennon then in dumpr and in suspense.

Hall's Homer, p. 19, 1681.
†I rather desire to drawe you into delightes, then to droune you in dumphes by revealyng of such unnaturall factes.

Hicko his Parewell, 1681.

It was even applied in the sense of elegy to poetical composition. Davies, of Hereford, has a singular poem of that species, entitled, "A Dump upon the Death of the most noble Henrie, Earle of Pembrooke," printed in Witte's Pilgrimage.

+DUMPISH. Melancholy.

Through thornie paths, and deep, dark, dampish glades. Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

And as it were a thrall unto this dampish humor, is rowzed up with wine and meriment especially, and infranchis'd again into a more ample and heavenly freedom of contemplation.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639. DUN. To draw Dun out of the mire, was a rural pastime, in which Dun meant a dun horse, supposed to be stuck in the mire, and sometimes represented by one of the persons who played. See Brand's Pop. Ant.. ii, p. 289, 4to. Mr. Gifford, who remembers having played at the game (doubtless in his native county, Devonshire), thus describes it, for the relief of future commentators:

A log of wood is brought into the midst of the room A log of wood is brought into the midst of the room: this is Dun (the cart-horse), and a cry is raised that he is stuck in the mire. Two of the company advance, either with or without ropes, to draw him out. After repeated attempts, they find themselves unable to do it, and call for more assistance. The game continues till all the company take part in it, when Dun is extricated of course; and the merriment arises from the awkward and affected efforts of the rustics to lift the log, and sundry arch contrivances to let the ends of it fall on one another's toes. Ben. Jons., vol. vii, p. 283.

It is to this that allusion is made in Hudibras, part iii, canto iii, l. 110, where Ralpho says,

But Ralpho's self, your trusty squire,
Who has dragg'd your dunship out o' th' mire.
Which none of the editors appear to have understood, and therefore silently changed it to donship, according to which reading Dr. Nash explains the passage. But it was dunship in all the editions till 1710.

In an old collection of epigrams, it is proposed to play

At shove-great, venter-point, or crosse and pile, At leaping o'er a Midsummer bonefier, Or at the drawing Dun out of the myer.

So Shirley:

Then draw Dun out of the mire, And throw the clog into the fire.

St. Patrick for Ireland. Which marks what Dun was.

It is alluded to in Romeo and Juliet:

If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire,
Or (save your reverence), love, wherein thou stick'st
Up to the ears. Imn's in the mire, get out again how he can.

B. and Fl. Woman H., iv. 3.

DUN IS THE MOUSE. A proverbial saying, of rather vague signification, alluding to the colour of the mouse, but frequently employed with no other intent than that of quibbling on the word done. Why it is attributed to a constable, I know not.

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word. Rom. and Jul., i. 4.
Why then 'tis done, and dun's the mouse, and undone all the courtiers.
Two Merry Milkmaids, 1620. all the courtiers.

In a passage of the play of Sir John Oldcastle, it seems to mean no more than, all is done, or settled. After arranging his followers, Murley exclaims, without any connection prior or subsequent, "Dun is the mouse." First Part of Sir John Oldcastle, iii, 2, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 311.

"As dun as a mouse." is among Ray's Proverbial Similes, p. 221.

+DUNAKER. A cant term for a stealer of cows and calves.

The seventeenth a dun-aker, that maketh his vows
To go i' the country and steal all their cows.
The eighteenth a kidd-napper, spirits young men,
Though he tip them the pike, they nap him agen.
Then hark well. &c.

Porm of 17th cost. Then hark well, &c. Poem of 17th cest.

Mercury is in a conjunction with Venus, and when such conjunctions happen, it signifies a most plentiful crop that year, of hectors, trappanners, gills, pads, biters, prigs, divers, lifters, filers, bulkers, droppers, famblers, donnakers, cross-biters, kidnappers, vouchers, millikers, pymens, decoys, and slop-lifters; all Newsatebirds, whom the devil prepares ready fitted for Tyburn; ripe fruit, ready to drop into the hausman's mouth.

Page Rakis 1806

Poor Robin, 1693.

†DUNCE-COMB. An ignoramus. word perhaps invented by honest Taylor the water-poet.

The cause, I heare, your fury flameth from.
I said, I was no dunce-combe, cox-combe Tom.
What's that to you (good sir) that you should fume,
Or rage, or chaire, or thinke I durst presume
To speake, or write, that you are such a one?

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

DUNG. Under this word, bread, and the other productions of the earth, are contemptuously alluded to in the following obscure passage:

Which sleeps, and never palates more the dum. The heggar's nurse, and Casar's. Ant. & C. Ant, & Cl., v, 2. Warburton, not understanding it, would have changed the word to dug, but more attentive critics afterwards perceived the true meaning. passage which pointed out the interpretation was doubtless this:

Kingdoms are clay, our dungy earth alike Feeds beast and man. Act i, sc. 1. The idea is, that the productions of the earth are so much indebted to dung for their perfection, that they may fairly be called so. The critics have happily illustrated this by other quotations, as this from Timon of Athens:

The earth's a thief, That feeds, and breeds by a composture stolen From general excrement. And this from the Winter's Tale : The face to sweeten Of the whole dungy earth.

And yet more elegantly by the observation of the Æthiopian king in Herodotus, B. iii, who, hearing of the culture of corn, said, he "was not surprised if men who fed upon dung, did not attain a longer life.

This word is not inserted here as being used in an obsolete sense, but in a singular one.

+DUNG-POT. A dung-cart. The word is said to be still in use in the Isle of Wight.

Wight.
Therakers, scavengers, and officers hereunto appointed, every day in the week (except Sundays and other holydayes) shall bring carts, dung-pots, or other fitting carriages into all the streets within their respective wards, parishes, and divisions, where such carts, &c., can pass, and at or before their approach, by bell, clapper, or otherwise, shall make loud noise and give notice to the inhabitants of their coming.

Calthrop's Reports, 1670.

+DUNKER. Dark.

Or like the velvet on her brow: or, like The dunker mole on Venus dainty check

Du Raetas DUNKIRKERS. The privateers of Dunkirk were long very formidable to our merchant ships, and esteemed remarkably daring; and the situation of that port gave them such an advantage, that the possession or dismantling of it was always an important object to England. It is well known that it was taken in the time of the republic. and sold again by Charles II; and its fortifications demolished by treaty in 1712.

This was a rail, Bred by a zealous brother in Amsterdam, Which being sent unto an English lady,

Was ta'en at sea by Dunkirkers.

The Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 267.

If he were put to it, would fight more desperately than sixteen Dunkirkers.

Honest Whore, part 2d, O. Pl., iii, 375.

Hence it is said to certain sailors, that thev

Fear no hell but Dunkirk.

B. & Fl. Hon. M. Fort., v, 1. +DUNMOW. The ceremony of awarding the flitch of bacon at Dunmow to the married couple who could attest to having lived together a year and a day without quarrelling or dissatisfaction with each other, is often alluded to by old writers. We have not met with the following proverb elsewhere. Do not fetch your wife from Dunnow, for so you may bring home two sides of a sow. Howell, 1659.

†DUNSERY. Would naturally be taken for ignorance, but in the following passage it would seem rather to mean cunning.

C, the dominical letter? It is true, craft and cunning do so dominere; yet, rather C and D are dominical letters, that is, crafty dunsery. Returns from Pernassus, 1606.

DUNSTABLE. Any thing particularly unornamented, particularly language, was often called plain Dunstable, in allusion to a proverb given both by Ray (p. 233) and Fuller. The latter, in his Worthies, under the Proverbs of Bedfordshire, gives this account of

As plain as Dunstable road. It is applied to things plain and simple, without welt or guard to adorn them, as also to matters easie and obvious to be found, without any difficulty or direction.

I find the phrase plain Dunstable noted, as occurring in the old translation of Stephens's Apology for Herodotus: but I had neglected to transcribe the passage.

transcribe the passage.

These men walked by-wayes, and the saying is, many by-walkers, many balkes, many balkes, much stumbling, and where much stumbling is, there is sometime a fail; howbeit there were some good walkers among them, that walked in the kings high way ordinarily, uprightly, plaine Dunatable way, and for this purpose I would show you an history which is written in the third of the Kings.

Latimer's Sermons. †Plaine Dunstable.

Your words passe my capatchity good zar, But ich to prove need never to goe vur; Cha knowne men live in honest exclamation, One anowe have in most extension,
Who now God wot live in a worser fashion.
The poore man grumbles at the rich mans store,
And rich men daily doe expresse the poore.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To DUP. To do up, to raise; analogous to don, doff, &c.

Then up he rose, and don'd his cloaths,
And dupt the chamber door. Haml., iv, 5. Capell changes it to d'op'd, for opened, without the least notice of the true reading; but dup is found elsewhere, as in Damon and Pithias: What devell iche weene the porters are drunk, will they not dup the gate to day.

O. Pl., i, 217. Some gates and doors were opened by lifting up, as port-cullises, and that kind of half door swinging upon two hinges at the top, which still is seen in some shops. Hence the phrase of to do up, for to open, was not uncommon: other instances are given in the notes on the above passage of Shakespeare.

DUPLE. For double. Duple bignesse, in the following passage, is the translation of geminæ magnitudinis, and means properly twins in magnitude, or equal in size to each other.

The same nation also is separated from the Belgze by Mattona and Sequana, rivers of a duple bignesse.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

DURANCE. Duration. A robe of durance, a lasting dress.

And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance ? 1 Hen. IV., i, 2,

It appears that the leathern dresses worn by some of the lower orders of people, were first called of durance, or everlasting, from their great durability. Thus the Catchpole in the Comedy of Errors is described.

A devil in an everlasting garment has him, One whose hard hand is button'd up with steel; A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough, A wolf: nav worse, a fellow all in buff. ir. 2. Hence a stuff of that colour made in imitation of it, and very strong, was called durance:

Where did'st thou buy this buff? let me not live but I will give thee a good suit of durance.

This is the address of a debtor to the officer who had arrested him, in Westward Hoe; whence it seems that the stuff durance was a new improvement, as a substitute for the buff leather. The following passages put out of doubt that there was a stuff so called:

Variet of velvet, my moccado villian, old heart of du-rance, my strip'd canvas shoulders.

Devil's Charter, 1607.

As the taylor that out of seven yards stole one and a half of durance.

Three Ladies of London, cited by Mr. Steevens. Durance is still familiarly used for confinement, especially in the phrase durance vile, for imprisonment.

DURE. Hard, or severe; perhaps from our common law, wherein the punishment of pressing was called peine forte et dure.

What dure and cruell penance dooe I sustaine for none offence at all.

Palace of Pleas., vol. i, Q 4.

To DURE. To continue, or endure. Whose hath felt the force of greedie fates, And dur'de the last decree of griesly death Shall never yeeld his captive arms to claines,
Nor drawn in triumph deek the victor's pompe.

Inghes's Arthur, 1887, sign. D. Whilst the sunshine of my greatness dur'd.

Rob. E. of Huntington, B 3.

To abide, or resist: He that can trot a courser, break a rush, And, arm'd in proof, dare dure a strawes strong push. Marston's Satires, Sat. 1.

DUREFUL. Lasting.

For neither pretious stone, nor durefull brasse, Nor shining gold, nor mouldring clay it was. Sp. F. Q., IV, x, 39. Spenser uses it in other places.

DURESSE. Hardship, constraint, or imprisonment. A term of our old law French, which crept also into common language.

Right feeble from the evill rate Of food, which in her duresse she had found So. F. O., 1V. viii. 19. See also IV, xii, 10.

DURET. A kind of dance.

The knights take their ladies, to dance with them galliards, durets, corantoes, &c.

Beaumont. Masq. at Gray's Ins.

+DUSKISH. Obscure; cloudy. Duskishness, obscurity.

Take heede you adorne not a dvshish name, with some humble simulation. Passenger of Bensensto, 1613. The harts use dictsmus. The swallow the hearbe celedonia. The weasell fennell seede, for the dushishnesse and blearishnesse of her eyes.

†To DUST. To beat.

Observe, my English gentleman, that blowes have a wonderfull prerogative in the feminine sex; for if shee be a bad woman, there is no more proper plaster to mend her, then this; but if (which is a rare chance) so mend ner, then this; out it which is a rare canner, she be good, to dust her often hath in it a singular, unknowne, and as it were an inscrutable vertue to make her much better, and to reduce her, if possible, to perfection.

Passenger of Benzenato, 1812. to perfection.
DUST-POINT.

A rural game. BLOW-POINT. Played also by boys. Down go our hooks and scrips, and we to nine holes

At dust-point, or at quoits, else we are at it hard,
And false and cheating games we shepherds are debarr'd.

Drayt. Nymphat., 6, p. 1496.
He looks

Like a great school-boy, that has been blown up Last-night at dust-point. B. & Fl. Captain, B. & Fl. Captain, iii, 8. I suspect that both this and blowpoint much resembled the illustrious game of push-pin. Mr. Weber, on the passage last cited, has a conjecture about blowing dust out of a hole, but it wants confirmation.

DUTCH GLEEK. A jocular expression for drinking, alluding to the game of gleek; as if tippling were the favourite game of Dutchmen.

Nor could be partaker of any of the good cheer, except it were the liquid part of it, which they call Dulck gleck, where he placed his cards so well, and vied and revied so often, that he had scarce an eye to see withall.

Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 96.

†DUTIES. This word is applied in rather an unusual manner in the following lines. Perhaps it means their offices.

And gave unto his men And gave unto ms men
Their duties when he died,
With large and lordlie recompence:
This can not be deutied.

Epitaph on Bishop Joseell, 1571.

DWALE, or DWALL. The deadly nightshade; now called Atropa Belladonna. It is narcotic in a high degree, and was therefore called also "sleeping nightshade."

Deale, or sleeping nightshade, hath round blackish stalkes, &c. This kind of nightshade causeth sleep.

Johnson's Gerard, lib. ii, cap. 56.

Hence used to express a lethargic disease:

A sleepie sickuesse, nam'd the letharzye,
Opprest me sore, and feavers fearce withall,
This was the guerdon of my glottonie,
Jehova sent my sleepie life this dwall.
Mirr. for Mag. King Jago., edit. 1587.

DYED BEARDS. Bulwer is very severe upon superannuated coxcombs in his time, for dyeing their beards to conceal their age. After citing Strabo for the practice in Cathea of dveing them of many colours, he adds:

Nor is the art of falsifying the natural hue of the beard wholly unknown in this more civilized part of the world; especially to old, &c.

He then expatiates at large upon the folly of it, and says,

In every haire of these old coxcombs you shall meet with three divers and sundry colours; white at the roots, yellow in the middle, and black at the point, like unto one of your parrat's feathers.

Artificial Changeling, ch. xii.

See BEARDS.

DYE THE DEATH. See DEATH. DYLDE; GOD DYLDE YOU. ruptly for God 'ild you, or vield you

God dylde you, master mine.

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii, 64. See GOD ILD YOU.

EACH, AT. An expression which, if it be right, can only mean, "Each joined to the other." It is the reading of the old editions in the following lines of Shakespeare:

Ten masts at each make not the altitude Which thou hast perpendicularly fallen. Lear, iv, 6. All that can be said for the phrase is, that, though it be singular, it is perhaps as probable as that it should have been substituted by mistake for any of the readings since proposed: such as, attach'd, at least, on end, at reach.

EAGER. Sour. From aigre, Fr. And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood.

Haml., i, 5.

Hence metaphorically:

If thou think'st so, vex him with sager words.

3 Hen. VI, ii, 6. So also in the first scene of Hamlet:

It is a nipping and an eager air.
See EME. EAME.

To EAN, usually written to yean. To bring forth young. Applied particularly to ewes. The Saxon etymology demands ean rather than yean; the former is therefore restored in the following passage:

following passage:
Who then conceiving did in sensing time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.
Mer. Fen., i, 3.

See Todd.

EANLINGS. Young lambs just dropped or ean'd. The spelling should certainly be analogous to the other.

That all the entings which were streak'd and pied,
Should fall as Jacob's hire.

Mer. Ven., i, 3.

+EAR. Up to the ears, or over the ears, i. e., beyond one's depth, irrecoverably, applied almost invariably to people in love. Over head and ears is the modern phrase.

ears is the modern phrase.

Mis. Pa. O woman I am I know not what:
In love up to the kard cares. I was never in such a case in my life.

First ed. of Merry Wises.
Our masters sonne Antipho at the first behaved himselfe well; but this Phedria out of hand got him a certain singing wench, skiifull in musicke, and fell in love with her over the sares. Terence is English, 1814. She had neither seen nor spoken with the Palstine in her life; only she was in love with him up to the care for the sake of his spreading glory.

Deperit puellulam. Hee is over head and cares in love with thee maid; he loves her better then his owne life.

life Terence in English.

To EAR. To plough, or till. From the Saxon erian.

That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To ear the land, that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none.

Rick. II, iii, 2. Here it is used metaphorically, as to plough the sea:

Make the sea serve them; which they ear and wound With keels of every kind.

Whose crazed ribs the furrowing plough doth, est., Drayt. Rob. D. of Normandy.

It is used several times in our translation of the Bible:

And will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest.

1 Sam., viii, 12, The oxen likewise, and the young assess that ear the ground, shall eat clean provender.

1 fain, xxx, 24.

I find it in the following passage used for to hear, or give ear to, as to eye is to look at:

eye is to 100k at:

But if
Thou knew'st my mistress breath'd on me, and that 1 car'd her language, liv'd in her eyes.

Fletch. Two Noble E., iii, 1,

EARABLE, from to EAR. Fit for cultivation with corn. The word is now changed to arable. In Heresbachius's Husbandry, translated by Barnabe Googe, the first book, out of four, treats "Of earable ground, tillage. and pasturage."

HILD PASTUTAGE.

Hee [the steward] is further to see what demeanes of his lordes is most meete to be taken into his hanndes, so well for meddowe, pasture, as exersite, &c. Order of a Nobleman's House, Archeol., xiii, p. 315.

A plow band shall continue cound by acres of carable ground. Then can there not lie, in any country

-so much earable land together, but there almost——so much earable land together, but there will lie also entermingled therwith alopper, stps, and bottomes, fitte for parture and meading.

Letter sent by J. B. (1872) in Centura Literaria, vol. vii, p. 287.

†Also the indictment ought to expresse the quality of the thing entered upon, &c., whether it be a messuage, cottage, meadow, pasture, wood, or land earable.

Dalton's Countrey Justice, 1620.

+EAR-FINGER. The little finger. In Lat. auricularia.

Or if that cannot be found, let bloud of the veine which is betweene the ring finger and the carefuger.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

EARING, s. Tilling, or cultivation.

For these two years bath the famine been in the and; and there are yet five years in the which there ahall be neither earing nor harvest.

O then we bring forth weeds,

When our quick winds lie still; and our ills told us, Is as our earing.

Ant. and Cl., i, 2.

It has been suggested to read minds here, instead of winds: which certainly much improves the sense, and seems almost necessary. "We bring forth weeds, when our quick [i. e. pregnant, or fertile] minds lie still, but telling us of our ills [i. e. faults] is like ploughing them," which leads to a good produce. How it can be made sense with winds it is not easy to say. The inversion of an m makes the whole difference.

To EARNE, for to Yearn. So Spenser writes the word; but yearn is considered as more proper, the y representing the Saxon initial in gurnan. to desire.

And ever as he rode his heart did earne To prove his puissance in battel brave.

So. F. O., L.i. 3. Besides being thus improper, it forms an unnecessary confusion with the verb to earn, to obtain by labour.

+EARNEST-PENNY. Deposit money in a bargain.

So that nowe (by consyderacion of these thynges) I am thoroughly perswaded, that I can not accomplishe the duitee of a kyade and lovynge subjecte, unlesse I dooe with this simple token or poore earnest pennie geve due testimonie of my good hert toward your majestee. Eliot's Dictionaris, 1559, Ded. Arra. An earnest penie, or a Guds penie, which is given to confirme and assure a bargaine.

Nomenclator. To EARNEST, for to use in earnest.

Let's prove among ourselves our armes in jest,
That when we come to earnest them with men,
We may them better use. Pastor Fido, 1602, E 1. +EAR-RENT. Losing the ears in the pillory. "You should pay ear-rents." B. Jons. Alch., x, 1.

EAR-RINGS. The coxcombs in Shakespeare's time wore rings in their ears; to which Dogberry perhaps alludes, when he says of " one deformed, they sav he wears a key in his ear," &c. Much Ado ab. N., v, 1. Or it is a mere blunder, instead of wearing a It is also alluded to here: lock

For if I could endure an ear with a hole in't, Or a pleated lock, or a bare headed coachman, That sits like a sign where great ladies are To be sold with agreement betwirt us Were not to be despair'd of.

B. and Fl. Woman Hater, iii, 9. He means, "Could I bear to see ladies' men, or anything that marked their being near, then," &c.

EARTH. Perhaps made from to ear, (or plow) as tilth from to till. It is singularly used for land in the following phrase, "lady of my earth," for heiress or mistress of my land. It is used by Capulet, who, speaking of his daughter Juliet, says she is his only remaining child, and

She is the hopeful lady of my earth.

Rom. and Jul., i, 2.

Mr. Steevens says it is a Gallicism. fille de terre meaning an heiress. Dr. Johnson proposed an alteration of the text, which he called bold, and indeed with the greatest reason:

She is the hope and stay of my full years.

†SON-OF-EARTH. A person of mean birth, from the Latin terræ filius. "Clasp'd with this son of earth." Bird in a Cage, v, 1.

+EARTH-PUFF. A puff-ball fungus. "Tuberes, mushrooms, tadstooles, earthturfes, earthpuffes." Nomenclator, 1585.

+EAREWICKE, or EARWICK. The old form of earwig.

I'm afraid Tis with one worm, one earewick overlaid.

Cartwright's Poems, 1651. †EASELESS. Uneasy.

Thus as I ceaselesse, caselesse pri'd about
In every nock, furious to finde her out.

Firgil, by Vicers, 1633.

EASTER, or ESTER, for Eastern. Hence the name of Easter from its falling frequently in April, which, on account of the usual prevalence of easterly winds at that time, was Verstegan, chap. iii.

Verstegan, Chap. 111.
Till starres gan vanish, and the dawning brake,
And all the Easter parts were full of light. Harringt. Ariost., xxiii, 6.
Both borne farre hence, about the Ester parts. Id., xviii, 75. Some say, however, that it is rather derived from Eastre, a Saxon goddess, whose festival was celebrated in the month of April; and other derivations have been suggested. See Brady's Clavis Cal. under Easter Sunday.

The goddess is called Eostre by Mr. Turner, in his History of the Anglo-Saxons, and he confirms the naming of April Eostre-monath, from her. Vol. ii, p. 15, 4to ed. [There can be no doubt that the latter is the true derivation.]

EASTER-EGGS. See PASCH-EGGS. EATH. A Saxon word, eath, easy. See UNEATH.

Where case abounds yt's eath to do amiss.

Where case abounds yt's eath to do amiss.

Sp. F. Q., II, iii, 40.

For much more eath to tell the stars on hy.

Ib., IV, xii, 1.

For why, by proofe the field is eath to win.

Gascovyne's Works, a 8.

All hard assayes esteem I eath and light.

First. Tasso, ii, 46.

Who thinks him most secure, is eathest sham'd.

Id., x. 42.

†At these advantages he knowes 'tis eath To cope with her quite severed from her maids.

Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

THS, adv. Easily, commonly.
These are vain thoughts or melancholy shews
That wont to haunt and trace by closter'd tombs;
Which eaks appear in sad and strunge disguises
To pensive minds, deceived with their shadows. EATHS, adv. Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 263.

To ECHE. The same as to eke, or lengthen out.

gthen out.
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly ccke,
What's dumb in show, I'll plain in speech.
Pericks, act iii, chorus.
I'm other

Here the rhyme fixes it. In other passages it has been silently changed to eke. In the chorus to the 2d act of Henry V the same thought and expression occur, but in the first folio is spelt eech:

Still be kind,
And eeck out our performance with your mind. It occurs again in the 4to edition of the Merchant of Venice, 1600. Ma-+BCHOICAL. Having the nature of an echo.

An echoicall verse, wherein the sound of the last syllable doth agree with the last save one: as in an acho. Nomenclator.

called the Easter month. So says | † ECHONING, for echoing, Virgil, translated by Vicars, 1632.

ECSTASY. Madness. In this sense it is now obsolete, nor does it seem much less so in the kindred signification of reverie, or temporary wandering of fancy, which Mr. Locke calls "dreaming with our eyes open." B. II, c. xix, § 1. It is now wholly confined to the sense of transport, or In the usage of Shakespeare, and some other-, it stands for every species of alienation of mind, whether temporary or permanent, proceeding from joy, sorrow, wonder, or any other exciting cause; and this certainly suits with the etymology. Eroraois.

From sorrow:

269

Where sighs, and groans, and shricks that rent the air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern [i.e., common] ecstasy.

Macb., iv, Mach., iv. 3. From wonder and terror, mixed with anger:

Follow them swiftly rollow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.

Temp., iii, 8. Madness, a particular fit or paroxysm of it:

C. How say you now, is not your husband mad?
A. His incivility confirms no less.—

C. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy.

Com. E., iv, 4.

Fixed insanity:

That noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled out of tune, and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth
Blasted with ecclary.

Haml, Haml., iii, 1.

Ecstasy !

My pulse as yours doth temuerately keep time,
And makes as healthful nusic. It is not madness
That I have utter'd; bring me to the test,
And I the matter will reword, which madness
Would gambol from.

Most of these instances, and some others, are noticed by Johnson; but it is not mentioned that these senses are no longer given to the word.

EDDER, for a viper, is found in some old authors, and is evidently the same as adder, which is still in common use. Both from the Saxon, ædder. It is the only poisonous serpent of this country.

To EDIFY. To build. The primitive sense of the word, from its etymology; and long the only sense in use.

bullied, or cheated? The answer is suitable to this interpretation: No, my lord, I'll fight.

An insult of this kind seems to be shown in the following passage:

And for the rest of your money, I sent it to one captain Carvegut; he swore to me his father was my lord mayor's cook, and that by Easter next you should have the principal, and eggs for the use, indeed, sir, Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 432.

This seems the purposed insult of a bully, who thought any answer sufficient for the fool he took the money from; and the reply of him to whom this answer is reported, seems to show that it was a matter of notorious ignominy to be so put off:

O rogue, rogue, I shall have eggs for my money; I must hang myself.

Who, notwithstanding his high promises, having also the king's power, is yet content to take egges for his money, and to bring him in at leisure.

Slow's Annals, M m m 6.

In the character of Coriat, prefixed to his Travels, where it is said in the text, 'He will buy his eggs, his puddings, &c., in the Atticke dialect," it is added, in a note, "I meane when he travelled. A thing I know he scorned to do since he came home." Sign. [b 5].

1 EGG-STARCH.

Whose calves eg-starck may in some sort be taken As if they had beene hang'd to smoake like bacon.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

EGLANTINE. The sweet briar. Aiglantine, or aiglantier, Fr., which Menage derives from acanthus. In modern French it is written eglantine, as in English. Bomare, in his Dictionary of Natural History, describes it as the cynorrhodon, or wild rose. The sweetness of the leaf is noticed by Shakespeare:

The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, Out sweeten'd not thy breath. Cymb., iv, 2 Herrick has an epigram upon it, which has merit:

From this bleeding hand of mine
Take this sprig of eglantine,
Which, tho' sweet unto your smell,
Yet the fretful bryar will tell,
He who plucks the sweets shall prove
Many thorns to be in love.
Wilton has distinguished the sweet briar and the eglantine:

Through the sweet-briar, or the vine.
Or the twisted eglautine.

Eglantine has sometimes been erroneously taken for the honey-suckle, and it seems more than probable that Milton so understood it, by his calling it twisted. If not, he must have meant the wild rose. It is still a common word in poetry.

EGMA. A purposed corruption of enigma, which it immediately follows.

A. Some enigma, some riddle; come,—thy l'envoy, begin.

C. No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve in the male, sir.

In the male, certainly means in the packet or budget. Costard mistakes these words for the names of plasters for his broken shin, and prefers a plantain-leaf. See Male.

†EGRITUDE. Sickness. Lat.

Now, now we symbolize in egritude,
And simpathize in Capids malady.

The Cyprian Academy, 1847, p. 34.

†EILES. Beards of corn. See AILS.

Dyce, Peele's Works, ii, 206, alters this word unnecessarily to ears.

EILD. See ELD.

EIRIE. The same as AIERY, q. v. In the following passage it means a hawk, or falcon; or, perhaps, brood of them:

Strove for that eirie, on whose scaling wings
Monarchs in gold refin'd as much would lay
As might a month an army royal pay.

Browne, Brit. Past., vol. ii, p. 23.

And again:

Nor any other lording of the air
Durst with this siric for their wing prepare. Ibid.

ISEL. Vinegar. A Saxon word, used

EISEL. Vinegar. A Saxon word, used by Chaucer:

haucer:
She was like thing for hungir ded,
That lad her life only by bred
Knedin with eisel strong and egre.

Rom. of the Rose, v, 215.

And Skelton:

He paid a bitter pencion
For man's redemption,
He dranke cise! and gall
To redeme us withal.
Poems, sign. P 5.
It occurs also in an old ballad:

God that dyed for us all, And drank both eyest and gall, Bring us out of bale. Ritson's Anc. Pop. Poetry, p. 85.

Dr. Johnson quotes a similar passage from sir Thomas More.

There is indeed no doubt that eisel meant vinegar, nor even that Shakespeare has used it in that sense:

Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eysell, 'gainst my strong infection.

Source 111

But in the following passage it seems that it must be put for the name of a Danish river:

Show me what thou'lt do!
Wou't weep? wou't fight? wou't fast? wou't tear thyself?

Wou't drink up Bisel? eat a crocodile? Haml., v. 1. There is said to be a river Oesil in Denmark, or if not, Shakespeare might think there was. Yssel has been mentioned, but that is in Holland: and even Nile, but that is as remote from the reading as from the place. The question was much disputed between Messrs. Steevens and Malone, the former being for the river, the latter for the vinegar; and he endeavoured even to get over the drink up, which stood much in his way. But after all, the challenge to drink vinegar, in such a rant, is so inconsistent, and even ridiculous, that we must decide for the river, whether its name can be exactly found or not. To drink up a river, and eat a crocodile, with his impenetrable scales, are two things equally impossible. There is no kind of comparison between the others. In the folios it is printed Esile.

EKE. Also. Saxon.

And I to Page shall eke unfold, How Falstaff, variet vile, His dove will prove, his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.

Mer. W. W., i. 8. Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew.

Mids. N. D., iii, 1. This word occurs almost in every page of Spenser, and in the Mirror for Magistrates.

Accusing highest Jove and gods ingrate,
And eke blaspheming Heaven bitterly.
F. Q., II, vii, 40.
Eke lustfull life, that sleepes in sinks of sin,

Procures a plague.

Mirr. for Mag., Legend of Mempricius.

I lusted eke, as lasie lechers use.

Ibid. But it was then growing obsolete, and is therefore admitted by Shakespeare only in burlesque passages.

+ELA. The highest note in the scale of music. Our old dramatists frequently use the expression to denote the extreme of any quality.

ELD. Old age, old people; eald, Sax.

For all thy blessed youth

Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms

Of palsied etd.

Mess. for M., iii, 1.

And well you know,
The superstitious idle-headed cld
Receiv'd and did deliver to our age
This tale of Hearne the hunter for a truth. Seems that through many years thy with thee faile, And that weak eld hath left thee nothing wise. Spens. F. Q., II, iii, 16. Mer. W. W., iv, 4. It is sometimes written eild:

Whose graver years would for no labour yield: Whose graver years would for no labour year.
His age was full of puissance and might;
Two sons he had to guard his noble cild.
Fairf. Tasso, iii, 35. For age, or time of life in general, even infancy:

I IIIMICY;
The angel good appointed for the guard
Of noble Raimond from his tender cits.
Fairf. T., vii, 80.

ELDER. To be crowned with elder was a disgrace.

You may make doves or valtures, roses or nettles, laurel for a garland, or elder for a diagrace.

Epil. to Alex. and Camp., O Pl., ii, 150. Probably this was owing to the anecdote which Shakespeare has noticed, that Judas was hanged on a tree of that kind:

Well follow'd; Judas was hang'd on an elder.

Love's L. L., v, 2. This legend of Judas. however it Originated, was generally received.

He shall be your Judas, and you shall be his eldertree to hang on. B. Jons. Es. M. out of H., iv, 4.

Our gardens will prosper the better, when they have in them not one of these elders, whereupon so many covetous Judases hang themselves.

Nicolar Strange Footnet. Nizon's Strange Foot-post.

Shakespeare also makes it an emblem of grief:

Grow patience, And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine His perishing root, with the increasing vine. Cymb., iv, 2.

That is, let grief, the elder, cease to entwine its root with patience, the vine. It is obscurely expressed, but does not seem to require the alterations which have been proposed.

†ELEGIOUS. Lamenting; melaucholy.
If your elegious breath should hap to rouze
A happy tear, close harb'ring in his eye.
Quarles's Embleus.

The ELEMENT was often used formerly, for the air, or visible compass of the heavens; and I believe still is so in very low colloquial language.

The element itself, 'till seven years hence,
Shall not behold her face at ample view.

And the complexion of the element,
It favours like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.
Jul. Ces., i, 3.

That is, the look of the sky.

These watergalls in her dim element,
Foretell new storms to those already spent.
Sh. Rape of Lucr., Sappl., i, 662.
Milton has used it, Comus, 299. There was a notion, that all the elements were combined in the atmosphere, which therefore was the element of elements. When Cæsar says to Octavia, "The elements be kind to thee," he probably means only, "May you have fair and favourable weather in your voyage." and Cleop., iii, 2. This seems to be the simple meaning, which some would obscure by refinement. Coriolanus swears by the elements, which I fancy is equivalent to by the

By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his.

Cor., i, 10. ELEMENTS. Man was supposed to be composed of the four elements, the due proportion and commixture of which, in his composition, was what produced in him every kind of perfection, mental and bodily. The four temperaments, or complexions, which were supposed immediately to arise from the four humours (see HUMOURS). were also more remotely referred to the four elements. Thus, in Microcosmus, the four complexions enter, and, being asked by whom they are sent, reply, "Our parents, the four elements;" and each afterwards refers himself to his proper element: Choler. to fire; Blood, to air; Phlegm, to water; and Melancholy, to earth. O. Pl., ix, 122. No idea was ever more current, or more highly in favour, than this, particularly with Hence Sir Toby Belch the poets. inquires. "Does not our life consist of the four elements?" Twel. N.. ii, 3. It is said, as the highest possible commendation of Brutus,

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand np
And say to all the world, This was a man.
Jul. Cas., v. 5. The following passage of Drayton's Baron's Wars has been remarked for its striking similarity: In whom so mix'd the elements all lay,

That none to one could sovereignty impute; Anall did govern, so did all obey;
He of a temper was so absolute
As that it seem'd, when Nature him began,
She meant to shew all that might be in man.
iii, 40. It has been doubted which author copied the other; but the thought was so much public property at that time, as to be obvious to every writer. So Browne says of a lady, that such a iewel

Was never sent
To be possest by one sols element;

But such a work Nature disposde and gave, Where all the elements concordance have. Brit. Past., i, 1, p. 8. The thought of Shakespeare's 44th and 45th Sonnets, which form but one poem, turns chiefly upon this supposed combination: among other things he says.

My life being made of four, with two alone Sinks down to death oppress'd with melancholy. Suppl. to Sk., i, 618. So Higgins, in the Mirror for Magis-

If we behold the substance of a man How he is made of elements by kind, of earth, of water, aire, and fire, than
We would full often call unto our mind,
That all our earthly joys we leave behind King Perres, p. 76.

Massinger has further pursued the thought: I've heard

Schoolmen affirm, man's body is compos'd Of the four elements; and, as in league together They nourish life, so each of them affords Liberty to the soul, when it grows weary Of this fleshy prison, &c.

Renegado, iii.

And as the above passage composes the body thus, the following declares that some thought the soul had the same origin :

IME OFIGIN;
One thinks the soul is air; another, fire;
Another, blood diffus'd about the heart;
Another saith, the elements conspire,
And to her essence each doth give a part.
Sir John Davies, Im. of Soul, Exordium.

Cleopatra, about to die, says,

I'm fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.

Ant. and Cl., v, 2. On the contrary, when the mental qualities were in any way deranged, the elements were supposed to be ill mixed. Thus a madman is addressed in these terms:

Debe Cerine:
I prithee, thou four elements ill brew'd,
Torment none but thyself; Away, I say,
Thou beast of passion, &c.
B. J. Pl. Nice Valour, act i, p. 312.

ELIZABETH, SAINT. A Hungarian princess, daughter of Alexander II king of Hungary, a long account of whose life and miracles is given by Alban Butler, on the day dedicated to her memory, which is the 19th of November, from sources considered by him as authentic. She is called, in the French Service Books, Saint Elizabeth, veuve. By a species of adulation very absurd, as addressed to queen Elizabeth, (the bulwark of the Protestant cause,) this saint's day was kept as a festival in her reign.

These the 19th day, beying Saynt Elyrabeth's day, thi erle of Comerland, thi erle of Essex, and my l. Burge, dyd chaleng all comers, sex courses apeace, whiche was very honorably performed.

Lodge's Illustrations, vol. iii, p. 13.

The honour of a festival day seems not to have been granted to Elizabeth, mother of John the Baptist. Relics of the Hungarian saint are preserved at Brussels, and in the electoral treasury at Hanover! So says Butler. To ELF. To entangle in knots, such as elf-locks. It was supposed to be a spiteful amusement of queen Mab, and her subjects, to twist the hair of human creatures, or the manes and tails of horses, into hard knots, which it was not fortunate to untangle.

Was not fortunate to unrange...

My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots.

Leer, ii, 8.

+ELF-CAKE. An affection of the side, supposed, no doubt, to be produced by the agency of the fairies.

Take the root of gladen, make powder thereof, and give the diseased party half a spoonful to drink in white-wine; or let him eat thereof so much in his potage at a time, and it will help him.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

ELF-LOCKS. Locks clotted together in the manner above mentioned. is not probable that the terrible disease called plica polonica could have been alluded to, as some have supposed.

This is that very Mab,
That plats the manes of horses in the night,
And cakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, Which once untangled much misfortune bodes.

Rom. and Jul., i, 4.

She tore her elrish knots of haire, as blacke, And full of dust, as any collyer's sacke.

Browne, Brit. Past., ii, 1, p. 13.

His black haire hung dangling about his eares like elfe-lockes, that I cannot be persuaded but some succubus begot him on a witch.

Fennor's Compler's Common-wealth, in Cens. Lit., x, p, 301.

To remove to a distance

+ELOINE. And bysydy thys hit ys not to be dowbtyde that he knowynge hymeselfe to be gyltye in the mater before rehersyde wyll eloyse owt of the same howse into the handys of hys secrett fryndys thowsandys of poundes.

Wright's Monastic Letters, p. 90.

How I shall stay, though she eloigase me thus,

And how posterity shall know it too.

Donne's Poems, p. 23. ELSE. Rather licentiously used for others.

Bastards and els K. John. ii. 1. ELTHAM MOTION. A contrivance shown at Eltham, and pretended to be a perpetual motion.

I dwell in a windmill! the perpetual motion is here, and not at Bitham.

B. Jons. Epicarne, v. 3. It is alluded to in one of Jonson's enigrams, under the name of The Eltham Thing: See you vond' motion ?--not the old fa-ding.

ore you your motion:—not the old in-ding,
Nor captain Pod, nor yet the Eltham thing. Ep., zerii.
And think them happy, when may be shew'd for a penny.
The Fleet street mandrakes, that heav'nly motion of Eltham.

Verses prefixed to Coriat [13]. EMBALLING. The ceremony of carrying the ball, as queen, at a coronation. The word was probably coined by Shakespeare for the occasion. Mr. Tollet objects to that interpretation, because, he says, a queen consort has not that ensign of royalty. But the sense of the passage enforces this meaning upon us, and Shakespeare might not think of that distinction. He would know that queen Elizabeth carried the ball, and might naturally conclude the same of other queens.

In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing; I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there longed
No more to the crown but that. Hen. VIII, ii, 3.
This is Dr. Johnson's explanation, and it is clearly the best, among many. One of them is offensive, without being at all probable.

To make base. Debase To EMBASE. is now used instead of this.

But then the more your own mishap I rue. That are so much by so mean love embas'd. Thou art embas'd; and at this instant yield'st Thou are emous a; and as the mount of the Thy proud neck to a miserable yoke.

Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 263.

It was used by later writers, as South, and others, as may be seen in Johnson's Dictionary.

†This warlike order of souldiors is in these our dayes much embar'd.

Knoller's History of the Tarks.

†If a lascivious speaker learne a better and more gracefull language, then that which wont to defile and embace an obscene tongue.

Reading's David's Soliloguie, 1627.

Sometimes used in the sense of to lower.

†When God, whose words more in a moment can, Then in an age the proudest strength of man, Had severed the floods, levell'd the fields, Embas't the valleys, and embost the hils. Da Bartas.

To EMBAYE, for embathe. To bathe. Metaphorically, to delight.

Whiles every sence the humour sweet embay'd, And slumbring soft my heart did steal away.

In the warm sun he doth himself embey.

In the warm sun he doth himself embey.

Bid., Malopotmos. v. 206.

Their swords both points and edges sharp embey
In purple blood, where'er they hit or right.

Fairf. Tasso, xii, 62.

To EMBAYLE, or EMBALE. To enclose, or pack up as in a bale. And her straight legs most bravely were embay!'d In gilden buskins of coatly cordwayne. Sp. F. Q., II, iii, 27.

EMBERINGS. weeks. See Todd.

+To EMBLEM. To remind by emblem.

Could be forget his death that every hours

Was emblem'd to it, by the fading flower?

Witts Recreations, 1654.

EMBOSSED. Blown and fatigued with being chased, so as not to be able to hold out much longer; or, according to some, swollen in the joints. From bosse, a humour, Fr. Mr. Malone deduces it from emboçar, Spanish; but it is not likely that we should have a hunting term from Spain. France was most probably our mistress in this, as well as many other sports, and we must have it from emboucher, or embosser; the former most probably, if Turberville's definition be right: "having the mouth full of foam." See IMBOST. A term of hunting. When the hart is foamy at the mouth, we say, that he is smboss'd.

Turberville on Hunt., p. 243.

It seems in the following passage to mean "foaming with rage," and not anything of fatigue:

O he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so embossed.

Ant. & CL, iv, 11.

In the next, it appears rather more likely to mean swelling with protuberances, which is the common and still current sense of the word:

Which once a day with his embossed froth
The sea shall cover.

Tim. of A., v, 3. So we have "emboss'd carbuncle," in Lear, ii, 4.

Here it means worn out with fatigue: I am emboet
With trotting all the streets to find Pandolfo.

Albumazar, O. Pl., vii, 235, In the passage of Spenser which Upton thought so difficult, I have little doubt that to emboss means simply to fatigue:

mply to ratigue:

But by ensample of the last dayes losse,

None of them rashly durst to her approch,

Ne in so glorious spoile themselves embose.

F. Q., III, i, 64.

That is, "Nor fatigue themselves by attempting so glorious spoil."

EMBRASURES, for embraces.

Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows.

Tr. and Cr., iv, 4. Forcibly prevents

To EMBRUE, in the sense of to strain. or distil.

GISCII.

Some bathed kisses, and did soft embrew

The sugged liquor through his melting lips.

Spens. F. Q., II, v, 33.

The fasts of the ember | EME, or EAM. An uncle. Eame, Sax. Eam is more proper, on account of the etymology, but eme is perhaps more common.

While they were young, Cassibelan their eme
Was by the people chosen in their sted.
Spens. F. Q., 1I, x, 47.
Henry Hotspur, and his came
The earl of Wor'ster.
Drayt. Polyolo., 22, p. 1070-

See the First Part of Henry IV. Daughter, she says, fly, fly; behold thy dame Foreshews the treasons of thy wretched cam.
Fairf. Tasso, iv, 49.

The nephues straight depos'd were by the came.

Mirror for Mag., p. 438. Mr. Todd says it is still used in some parts of Staffordshire. Grose's, and other Glossaries, mark it as a northern word EMERALD. To look through one. apparently to look with pleasure and ease; perhaps from the pleasant green hue of the stone, or some supposed occult quality in it.

But alwaies, though not laughing, yet looking through an emercus at others jarres.

Buph. Engl., ii. 1. an emerand at others jarres.

This is said of England, on account of her security in foreign contests.

+EMEROD. 1. An emerald.

Ameril. A stone that glasiers use to cut their glasse withal, callen an smrod.

Nomenclator. In the Laned. MS., Brit. Mus., No. 70, there is a letter from Mr. Richard Champernowne to sir Robert Cecil, dated in 1592, referring to the discovery of some articles pillaged from a Spanish carrack, amongst which is one thus described: "An emerod made in the form of a cross, three inches in length at the least, and of great breadth. 2. An hæmorrhoid.

EMMANUEL. Formerly prefixed, probably from pious motives, to letters missive, and other public deeds.

C. What is thy name? Cl. Emmanuel.

D. They use to write it on the top of letters; 'twill go hard with you. 2 Hen. VI, iv, 2. In the old play of The famous Victories of Henry V, &c., the broad seal of the king is called by this name:

I beseech your grace to deliver me your safe Conduct, under your broad seal, Bmanuel. Which the king does, and issues the order almost in the same words. See the note on the above passage.

+EMMANUEL. The name of an ointment for wounds and sores, which appears to have been celebrated in the latter part of the sixteenth century. The following directions for making it give rather a curious example of the old practice of medicine.

Old practice of medicine.

To make a treate called emanuel.—Take vervaine, ditany, pimpernell, centory the more, gratia dei, of each one handfull, hearbe John, avence, celondine, acus muscata, alaivia, plantaine, spurge, egrimonie, of each one handfull, grind al in a morter, and put them in a gallon of wine, and boyle them in a pan till the third part be wasted, then straine it through a canvas cloth, and set it over the fire, and put therto waxe foure ounces, pitch as much, rozen as much, channum two nunces, mastick two ounces much and colleanum two nunces mastick two ounces much as the contract of ollanum two ounces, mastick two ounces, mirrhe two ounces, aloes two ounces, turpentine two ounces, sheepes sewet halfe a pound, beate them all into powder, and boyle them all together save the turpentine, the which must be put in last of all, then straine the same through a cloth, and keepe it till you have neede thereof: and this is a speciall healer of all wounds and sores, bruses, and broken bones, and apostumes that be broken; also it hath a special vertue to draw, cleuse, and re-engender good fiesh, it healeth and doth away all kind of achies whatsoever, all cankers and festers, it healeth morimals, it passeth all other oyntments; and if you wil have it soft, put thereto a quantity of oyle of roses, so much as you thinke good. Prooved. The Pathway to Health, bill. ol:banum two ounces, mastick two ounces, mirrhe two

To EMMEW. To restrain, to keep in a mew, or cage, either by force or terror.

This outward-sainted deputy,
Whose settled visage and deliberate word
Nips youth i' th' head, and follies doth emmes
As faulcon doth the fow!

Mess. for M., iii, 1.

EMMOVE. A compound of move, used by Spenser, and in imitation of him by Thomson, when writing in his stanza, in the Castle of Indolence. See Todd.

EMONY, for Æmonia, or Hæmonia. Part of Thessaly, where was Pharsalia. War that hath sought th' Ausonian fame to rear In warlike Emony. Cornelia, O. Ph., ii, 244. In warlike Emony.

EMPEACH, v. To hinder: from empescher, Fr. It has been thought that this should be used, as a distinct word from impeach, for to accuse; but the similarity is perhaps too great for confusion to be avoided. Mr. Todd exemplifies this sense from Elyot and Spenser.

EMPERY. A kingdom; from empere, old Fr.

> A lady So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
> Would make the greatest king double.

More commonly, sovereign authority, dominion:

Or there we'll sit Ruling, in large and ample empery
O'er France, and all her almost kingly dukedom Hen. V. i. 2.

Do exercise your mirthless empory.

Cornelia, U. Pl., ii, 246.

Bring all the nymphes within her emperic To be assistant in her sorrowing.

Browne, Brit. Past., i, 5, p. 120. Proud Mersey is so great in entering of the main, As he would make a shew for empery to stand. Drayt. Polyols., 11, p. 861.

+EMPILL. To drug.

That, in the sugar (even) of sacred writ, He may em-pill us with som bane-full bit. EMPIRICUTICK, for empirical. Whether a licence of the author, or an intended error of the speaker, or a real error of the press, is not quite

The most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricutick. The first folios have it emperickqutique. The speaker is Menenius, who coins words at pleasure. Alluding to Aufidius, he says, "I would not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli." Ibid.

EMPLOYMENT. Apparently used for implement.

See, sweet, here are the engines that must do 't. (Namely, an iron crow and a halter.)

[Namely, an it one crow and My stay hath been prolonged With hunting obscure nooks for these employments.

Widow's Tears, O. PL, vi, 230. So Malvolio, taking up the feigued letter of Olivia, says,

What employment have we here? Twel. N., ii, 5. Which however might bear its usual sense, without much violence. Warburton says it is equivalent to "What have we to do here?"

EMPRESA, the same as impresa. Device or motto on a shield. &c.

Thy name as my empress will I beare.

Drawton's Matilda.

See IMPRESA.

EMPRISE. Enterprise. Emprise. Fr. Very commonly used by Spenser.

Therewith sir Guyon left his first emprise, And turning to that woman fast her hent.

Sp. F. Q., II, iv, 12.

Not hope of praise, nor thirst of worldly good,
Inticed us to follow this emprise. Pairf. Tasso, ii, 83. It is still a poetical word, having been used by Milton and Pope.

tA slender number for so great emprise.

Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

+EMPT. To empty. To fill my pate with verse, and empt my purse.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

ENACTURE. Action, or effect. The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy.

Ham., iii, 2.

+ENAGE. To make aged? That never hail did harvest prejudice;
That never frost, nor snowe, nor sloppery ice
The fields en-ag'd; nor any stormy stowr
Dismounted mountains, nor no violent showr Poverisht the land.

†ENAMBUSH. To place in ambush. His enambushed enemies. Chapm. Il., x, 257. ENAUNTER, adv. Lest. A word peculiar to Spenser; whether provincial or antiquated, has not been made out.

Anger nould let him speak to the tree,

Enaunter his rage mought cooled be.

Spens. Sh. Kal., Feb., 199.

With them it fits to care for their heir, Enaunter their heritage do impair +ENBREAME. NBREAME. Strong; sharp.

We can be content (for the health of our bodies) to drink sharpe potions, receive and indure the operation of cubrease purges, to observe precise and hard diets, and to bridle our affections and desires. Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

ENCAVE. To hide, as in a cave.

Do but encare yourself,
And mark the fleers, the giles, and notable scorns,
That dwell in ev'ry region of his face.

Oth., iv, l.

Compounds with en were almost made at pleasure, while our language was forming, and hardly require explanation.

+ENCHARGE. An injunction.

A nobleman being to passe through a water, com-maunded his trumpetter to goe before and sound the depth of it, who to shew himselfe very mannerly, refus'd this encharge and push'd the nobleman himselfe forward, saying. No sir, not I, your lordship shall pardon me. Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

+To ENCHASE. To ornament.

ENCILEASON. Occasion. Enchaison. old Fr. See Roquefort.

Thou railest on right without reason,
And blamest hem much for small encheaso

Spens. Shep. K., May, 146.
Certes, said he, well mote I shame to tell
The fond encheason that me bether led.
Spens. F. Q., II, i, 30.

An antiquated word in Spenser's time. +ENCHEST. To shut up in a chest.

Thou art Joves sister and Saturnus childe; Yet can they breast enchest such anger still? Virgil, by Vicars, 1639.

Not to care which end goes forward, to be reckless or negligent. Negligen'em eum fecit. He had made him retchles, negligen'em eum fecit. He had made him retchles, negligent, carelesse, not to regard which ende goes forward.

Terence in Baglish, 1814.
Slowly, easily, gently, noftly, negligently, na caring not what ende goes forward.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 86.

†ENDENIZE. To establish in a country. And having by little and little in many victories vanquished the nations bordering upon them, brought them at length to be endesized and naturalized in Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. ENDIAPRED. Variegated, diversified in colour. See DIAPER.

Who views the troubled bosome of the maine Endiapred with cole-blacke porpesies.

Cl. Tib. Nero, Tragedy, sign. G 2.

ENDOSS, v. To put on, or mark upon. Endosser, Fr. This and endorse are of the same origin; only end weer is older French than endosser. mean originally to put on the back. from dorsum.

Gave me a shield, in which he did endoss
His dear Redeemer's badge upon the boss.

Spens. F. Q., V, xi, 53.

Both here, and in his Colin Clout, 1. 632, it is used for to put on by painting or engraving.

+ENDUGINE. Apparently equivalent to dudgeon. The word occurs twice in the following work.

Which shee often perceiving, and taking in great endugine, roundly told him that if hee used so con-tinually to looke after her, shee would clappe such a paire of hornes upon his head.

Gratia Ludentes, 1638, p. 118. †ENEWED. Coloured; hued.

And soo they rode thorowoute a forest, and at the last they were ware of two pavelions even by a pryory with two sheldes, and the one sliylde was excused with whyte, and the other shelde was reed.

Morie d'Arthur, i, 81.

To ENFEOFF. To grant out as a feoff, fief, or estate; to give up.

Grew a companion to the common streets.

Esteof 4 himself to popularity. 1 Hes. IV, iii, 2.

+ENFORCIVE. Compulsive.

A sucking hind-calf, which she trussed with her en-forcive seres. Chapm Il., viii, 212. ENFOULDRED. A word peculiar to Spenser, and conjectured to be made from fouldroyer, the antiquated form of foudroyer, in French. If so, it must mean "thundered out with it."

With fowle enfouldred smoake and flashing fire.

Spens. P. Q. I. xi. 40.

†ENGAGED. "Indebted." Acad. Compl., 1654.

+ENGENY. Ingenuity; invention; mechanical skill. See INGINE. Chanical Skiii.

In midst of which, by rarer engray,
Then Mars and Venus hang in Lemnian net.

Zonche's Dore, 1613.

ENGHLE, or ENGLE. I fear nothing better can be made of this word than a different spelling of ingle, which is often used as a favorite, and sometimes of the worst kind.

What between his mistress abroad, and his engle at home, high fare, &c.—he tuinks the hours have no wings.

B. Jons. Silent W., i, 1. Possibly it was a cant term among the players, for the boys belonging to the theatre:

What, shall I have my son a stager now? for the players to make enghics of. Ibid., Poetaster, i. l. No, you mangonizing slave, I will not part from ean. You'll sell them for enghics, you. Ibid., iii, &

The children who speak the prologue to Cynthia's Revels, call themselves enghles:

And sweat for every venish trespans we commit, as some author would if he had such fine englise as we. Prot. gross. Shakespeare, to his credit, has not the word at all, unless we turn the "ancient angel," in the Taming of the Shrew, into an engle, which I should much scruple to do. See INGLE. To ENGHLE. To coax, or cajole, as a favorite might do. To ingle is used exactly in the same manner.

I'll presently go and englie some broker for a poet's gown, and bespeak a garland.

B. Jons. Poetaster, ii, 2, at the end.

ENGIN, for ingin; from ingenium, wit.

These quaynt questions (wene I) the apostles woulde never have soluted with like quickness of engin, as our Dunsmen do. Chaloner's Morie Enc., M. 1. See Inging.

An ENGINE sometimes meant the rack. Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature From the fixt place.

From the firt place.

Shall murderers be there for ever dying,

Their souls shot through with adders, torn on engines?

B. f. Pl. Night-walker, act iv.

In Temp., ii, 1, it may mean a rack, or other instrument of torture. It signified also a warlike engine, or military machine, used for throwing arrows, and other missiles:

When he walks he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. Coriol., v, 4.

So also in Tr. & Cr., ii, 3.

Arcite is gently visaged, yet his eye

Is like an engine bent. Two Noble Kinsm., v, 4.

Though h, as engines arrows, shot forth wit, Yet aim'd withall the proper marks to hit, His ink ne'er stain'd the surplice.

West's Poem, prefixed to Randolph's Poems, B 5.

+ENGINOUS. Ingenious: mechanical

For that one acte gives, like an enginous wheele, Motion to all, sets all the state agoing.

Decker's Whore of Babylon, 1607.

By open force, or projects enginous.

Chapm. Odys., i, 452.

The name of an ENGLAND'S JOY. old play, now lost; written perhaps by Nich. Breton.

Let me see—the author or the And England's Joy.

P. The last was a well writ piece, I assure you;

A Breton, I take it, and Shakspeare's very way.

Goblins, O. Pl., x, 172.

And poore old Vennor, that plain dealing man,

Who acted England's Joy first at the Swan.

Taylor, Water P., p, 163.

To ENGRAVE. To put into a grave, to bury.

The sixt had charge of them now being dead, In seemly sort their corses to engrave.

Spens. F. Q., I, x, 42.

See also II, i, 60.

Ten in the hundred lies here engrav'd,
Tis a hundred to ten his soul is not sav'd.

Epitaph on John a Coombe, attributed to Shakep., Prolog. to Sh., p. 180.

The quicke with face to face engraved he, Each other's death that each might living see.

Mirror for Mag., p. 441.

To fatten, or make gross.

Not sleeping to engross his idle body, But praying to enrich his watchful soul. Rick. III. iii. 7.

Also, to make large, or heap together:
For this they have engressed and pil'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-atchieved gold.
2 Hem. IV, iv, 4.

ENGROSSMENTS. Accumulations

heaps of wealth.

This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

8 Hen. IV, iv, 4. That is, "Such is the unpleasant consequence of his gains, to a father at the close of life."

To ENHALSE. To clasp round the neck; from halse, a neck. See HALSE.

First to mine inne cometh my brother false;
Embraceth me; well met, good brother Scales,
And weeps withall; the other me calales,
With welcome cosin, now welcome out of Wales.

Mirror for Majist., p. 408.
ENHEDGE. To surround with a +ENHEDGE.

These, all these thither brought; and their young boyes

And frightfull matrons making wofull noise,
In heaps enhedg'd it. Firgil, by Ficers, 1633.

†ENJOIN. To join together, or unite.
My little children, I must shortly pay
The debt I owe to nature, nor shall I,

The debt I owe to nature, nor annu.,
Live here to see you both enjoyn'd in one.

Phillis of Soyros, 1655.

ENMESH, v. To enclose in the meshes of a net. Found only in the following passage;

And out of her own goodness make the net That shall sumesh them all. Othello, ii, 3.

†ENORME. Enormous. Fr.

At this answer, the pitfull citizen being astonied, and avouching they were not able after such wastings and burnings to provide any remedie of their exceeding great losses, by the meanes of such renorms and huge a preparation. Holland's Ammienus Marcel., 1609.

+ENORMIOUS. For enormous.

Observe, sir, the great and enormious abuse hereof amongst Christians, confuted of an Ethnicke philosopher.

Passenger of Benvenute, 1612.

†ENOUGH. "It is enough," i. e., it is roasted or boiled enough. Palsgrave.

ENOW. Though Dr. Johnson considers this as the plural of enough, and gives examples accordingly, there is no doubt that it is now obsolete, except in some provincial dialects. We now say men enough, horses enough, &c. Probably it never was more than a different pronunciation of enough, there being no etymological reason for the two senses. The last syllable was sounded like the adverb now.

Am. When wilt thou think my torments are enow: Rand. Amyntas, act v, sc. 8. In some counties they say enew.

†The great Turk keeps not mistresses enow.

The Slighted Maid, p. 6.

+ENPRENABLE. Impregnable. Heywood, 1556.

To ENRACE. To implant. Enraciner, Fr. Spenser says of the human soul. Which power retaining still, or more or lesse
When she in fleshly seede is eft enraced,
Through every part she doth the same impresse,
According as the heavens have her graced.

Hymnon Beauty, 1, 113.

To fortify, to pro-To ENSCONCE. tect as with a fort; a sconce signifying a kind of petty fortification. Written also insconce.

And yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cata-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold, beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour. I will enseence me behind the arras. Ibid., iii. 8.

So in All's W., ii, 3. Against that time do I ensconce me here, Within the knowledge of mine own desert.

Sh. Sonnet, 49.

Convey him to the sanctuary of rebels,
Nestorius' house, where our proud brother has Enscone'd himself. B. & Pl. or Shirley, Coronat., v, l.
And therein so enscone'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 558. +ENSAMPLE. The common word answering to the modern example.

As for an ensample, unto great men God alloweth hunting and hanking at sometimes.

. Latimer's Sermons. And mayntenantly herewith the Saxons encouraged with suche comfortable speache as Hengist uttered amongst them, required to have battayle without delay; whose ensample the Brytains following.

Holinshed's Chron., 1877.

So many are wonte to speake by those persons whiche have fallen to the committying of some haynous enormitie; as for an ensample, of advoutry, inceste, enormitie; as 101 an thefte, or manslaughter.

Paraphrase of Brasmus, 1548.

To fatten, or grease; To ENSEAM.

from seam, grease.
In the rank aweat of an enseamed bed. Haml., iii, 4. Also, as from seam, a juncture made by sewing, to unite or enclose. "Come. I'll enseam you," are the words of Monsieur, to Bussy d'Ambois, introducing him to the ladies; meaning, "Come, I'll unite you to their party, or, as the French call it, faufiler. Hence surely it ought to be interpreted encloses, or contains, in the following passage of Spenser:

following passage of the inhimself enseams

And bounteous Trent, that in himself enseams

Both thirty sorts of fish, and thirty sundry streams.

F. Q., IV, xi, 35. The commentators, who here explain it fattens, do not seem to have observed that the word is applied not only to the fishes, which might be fattened, but also to the streams. See SEAM and INSEAME.

ENSEAR, or perhaps ENSERE. Dr. Johnson explains it sear up, or cauterize: but I suspect that no more is meant than dry up, from sere, dry.

Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb,
Let it no more bring out ungrateful man.

Timon iv. 8. ENSHIELD, for enshielded. Covered as with a shield. Some have coniectured inshelled, which word occurs in Coriolanus. The difference is not important.

As these black masks
Proclaim an enshield beauty, ten times louder
Than beauty could display d. Meas. for M., ii, 4

To ENSNARLE. To insnare, or entangle. Spenser uses the word snarl in the sense of twisted or knotted. applied to hair:

applied to Hair:
They in awayt would closely him ensuerie,
Ere to his den he backward could recoyle.
F. Q., V, ix, 9.

+To ENSTATE. To establish. After this, for the better encouraging of learning, and the enstating of this her college in a flourishing condition, she gave several scholarships for the maintenance of poor students. Broomés Travets.

+ENSTOCK. To put in the stocks. Not that (as Stoiks) I intend to tre
With iron chains of strong necessity
Th' Eternal's hands, and his free feet ensteck
In destinies hard diamantin rock.

Du Bartas.

†ENSWEETEN. To make sweet,

The manner also of sleepe must bee duely regarded, to sleepe rather open mouth'd than shut, which is a great help against internall obstructions, which more enroesteneth the breath, recreateth the spirits, comforteth the braine, and more cooleth the vehement heate of the heart.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

ENTAYLD, part. Engraved, cut in like a seal. Intagliato, Ital. All bar'd with golden beudes, which were entayPd
With curious antickes. Sp. P. Q., II, ii, 97.
Over the doore whereof yee shall find the armes of my husband entayPd in marble.

Palace of Pleas., vol. ii, H h 7.
Spenser uses entail also for carving.

F. Q., II, vii, 4.

tHis importunity soc far prevailed,
She seemd contented for to be estayled.

The News Metamorphosis, 1600, MS., i, 89.

+To ENTERBLINNE. To intermingle.

Do not anticipate the worlds beginning; But, till to-morrow, leave the enter-blinning Of rocky mounts and rouling waves so wide

ENTER-DEALE, s. Meditation, design; or perhaps rather intercourse, dealing together. See INTER-DEAL.
for he is practis'd well in policy.

For he is practic'd well in policy, And thereto doth his courting most apply To learn the enterdeals of princes strange, To mark th' intent of counsels, &c., Sp. Moth. Hubb. T., 763. +ENTHEAN. Inspired.

Amidst which high
Divine flames of esthean joy, to her
That level'd had their way.
Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

ENTHRONISED, part. Enthroned. Should be there openly enthronised as the very elected king.

Knolles, Hist. of the Turks, 922. Accented enthronised. See INTHRO-

To ENTRAIL, v. To entwine, or twist together.

And each one had a little wicker basket
Made of fine twigs, entrailed curiously.

Spenser's Prothalamion, v. 25.

Before they fastned were under her knee In a rich jewell, and therein entray!'d

The ends of all the knots. Ibid., F. Q., II, iii, 27. ENTRAILE. Fold, or twist. lasciare, Ital., or entraille, Fr.

lasciare, Ital., Or encresses, ____ Whose folds displaid, Were stretch'd now forth at length without entraile. Spens. F. Q., I, i, 16.

The bowels might be called entrails from being so curiously twisted as they are, unless the word was borrowed from the French.

To ENTREAT. To treat or use well or ill. The second sense of the word in Johnson.

Uncle, you say the queen is at your house, For Heav'n's sake fairly let her be entreated.

Who for the same him foully did entreate.

Spons. Moth. Hubb. Tale, v. 923.

Hence, to entertain or to receive, metaphorically:

In which she often us'd from open heat
Herselfe to shroud and pleasures to entreat.

Spens. F. Q., 11, vii, 53.

Treatment; beha-+ENTREATANCE. viour.

NUT.

For (said he) that may by petition and faire entreatsace be easily obtained of that heroicall prince...
which will never be got from him by force of armes.

Knotles, Hist. of the Turks.

ENTREATMENT. Entertainment.

conversation.

From this time Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence; Set your entreatments at a higher rate Than a command to parley.

So also entreaty, in Johnson. †To ENTROUP. To form in troops.

And whiles at the very point of the medley on both sides, the horsemen strongly entrouped themselves, and the footmen stoutly fortified their owne sides, making a front by joyning their bucklers most close and fast together. Holland's Ammianus Marc. 1609.

+ENUCLEATE. To solve; to unriddle.

Sel. What makes your grave lordship in it, I do beseech you? But sir, mark me, the kernel of the text suncleated, I shall confute, refute, repel, refel. Chapman's Res. for Honour, 1654.

+ENVIOUS. Angry, indignant.

And as keen dogs keep sheep in cotes or folds of hurdles bound,

And grin at every breach of air, enrious of all that moves. Chapm. Il., x, 159. ENVIRON, adv. All around. Exactly the French adverb environ. The original French word was viron, of which this is a compound. See Menage. Origines.

Lord Godfrey's eye three times environ goes, To view what count'nance ev'ry warrior bears. Fairf. Tass., ii, 80.

The verb and substantive from this origin are still in use.

ENVÔY. See L'ENVOY.

ENVY, for hatred, or ill-will. Not now used in that sense: but envy too frequently produces hatred.

I forgive all.

There cannot be those numberless offences 'Gainst me, I can't take peace with; no black Hen. VIII. il. 1. Shall make my grave.

And here I cannot but applaud the ingenuity of Dr. Johnson's conjecture, who, for the clearing up of the passage, supposes take and make to have changed places.

I can't make peace with ; no black every Shall take my grav

To take would then mean to blast, as it does not unusually. In the same sense envy occurs again in that play:

Madam, this is a mere distraction, You turn the good we offer into easy. Many such instances are given in the notes, and at Merch. Ven., iv, 1, and O. Pl., ii, 319. Hence enviously is used by Shakespeare for angrily, indignantly:

And hems, and beats her heart, Spurns enviously at straws. Hem. iv. b.

To ENVY was also used in the sense of to hate.

Of to fire.

I suppose it is bicause you are aged, and nowe are not able to doe as other yong men and women do, and this maketh you to every it so much.

Northbrooke against Dicing, 1877.

Ile speake to him, and gently him salute,
Tho in my heart I ewie much the man.

True Tragedie of Rickard III, 1894.

EPHESIAN. Evidently a cant term, probably signifying a toper, or jovial companion, as Dr. Johnson conjectured.

Art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

Mer. W. W., iv, 5. On the above passage Mr. Steevens says, that this word is like Anthropophaginian, which precedes it, merely a sounding word, to astonish Simple. This is refuted by the recurrence of it in 2 Hen. IV, where the context sufficiently explains it. Inquiring who are with Falstaff, the prince!

BRYN,
P. H. What company?
Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old church.
2 Hem. IF, ii, 3. He means "Jolly companions of the old sort." Why they were termed Ephesians is not clear; and it would be in vain to conjecture the origin of so idle and familiar an expression.

EPICED, or EPICEDE. A funeral song. Epicedium, Lat.

And on the banks each cypresse bow'd his head,
To heare the swan sing his own epiced.

Browns, Brit. Past, I, v, p. 112.

Mr. Todd gives instances of epicede. The Latin form, epicedium, has been more commonly used.

+EPISCOPIZE. To act the part of a

Who will episcopies, must watch, fast, pray,
And see to worke, not oversee to play.

Scot's Philomythis, 1616.

†To EQUALIZE. For to equal.

Outsing the Muses, and did equalities.
Their king Apollo. Chapm. Bp. ded. to Iliad.
No woe her miserie can squallise,
No griefe can match her sad calamities.
Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†EQUINAL. Pertaining to a horse.
Chalchas devisde the high squinsal pile,
That his huge vastnesse might all entrance bar.
Heywood's Trois Britannics, 1609.

EQUIPAGE appears to have been a cant term, which Warburton conjectured to Dr. Farmer mean stolen goods. proves that it was a cant word, but does not quite ascertain its meaning. Why then the world's mine oyster, which I with sword will open. I will retort the sum in equipage.

Mer. W. W., ii, 2.

Mr. Steevens thinks it means attendance; that is, "If you will lend me the money, I will pay the sum by waiting on you;" and quotes a passage in support of it, where it means rather state.

+ERINGO. The eringo (Eryngium maritimum) was much used as a delicacy, and was believed to possess strong aphrodysiac qualities.

Let the sky rain potatoes, hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation.

M. W. of W., v. 5.
And yet I heare, sir Amorosus, you cherish your loynes with high art, the only ingresser of eringoes, prepar'd cantharides, cullesses made of dissolved pearle and brus'd amber, &c.

Marston, The Fische, ii, 1.

This was formerly ERRA PATER. very current as the name of an old astrologer, but who was meant by it, cannot so easily be determined. In Sion College Library there is a tract. entitled Erra Pater's Predictions (see Reading's Catalogue). But this, on examination, proves to be nothing more than a companion to the English Almanack, dated 1694. [There were much older editions.] The title is, "A Prognostycation for ever, made by Erra Pater, a Jewe born in Jewry, Doctor in Astronomy and Physic. very profitable to keep the body in health." Black letter. But the contents are only the usual idle rules for health, with an account of the fairs and highways subjoined. Almanacks also borrowed this name, with equal reason. Mr. Warton says of Borde's Astronomical Tracts, that he thinks they were "epitomized and bound up with Erra Pater's almanacs." Hist. Engl. Poetry, iii, 77.

High. Foetry, 111, //.

Then walks a turn or two in Vid Lacted,
And after six hours' conference with the stars,
Sleeps with old Erra Pater.

This was a hidden blessing, whose effects are not yet to be seene. The one of Erra Pater's predictions, 'tis intailed upon his issue.

Taylor's Cast over the Water, Dedication to the Reader, p. 156.

Butler mentions him with Tycho Brahe: er mentious mine was greater
In mathematics he was greater Than Tycho Brahe, or Erra Pater.
Hudib., i, 1, 1, 1, 119.

But he had given that nick-name to William Lilly, the astrologer. He says, "O the infallibility of Erra Pater, Lilly!" Mem. of 1649 and 50, p. 97. In the above passage, however, it is most probable that he alluded to the original Erra Pater, for it does not appear that the other was more than an occasional sarcasm. An Erra-Pater sometimes meant an almanack:

Millianacia.
Yea, leat I erre in rules of husbandrie,
An Erra Pater keeps me companie,
To tell me which are good days, which are ill.
Honest Ghost, p. 106.

Honest Ghost, p. 106.

t Besides, we have an old prognosticater,
An erring father, quasi Brea Pater.
His everlasting almanack tels plaine,
How many miles from hence to Charles his waine;
From Luna unto Mercury how farre,
To Venus, Sol, and Mars that warlike starre;
From Mars to merry thunder-thunging Jove;
And thence to sullen Saturne highest above.
This if I lye not, with advice and leasure,
Old Erra Pater to an inch did measure.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

tif no great person die this month, either in Europe, Asin, Africa, or America, you may light tobacco with old Erra Pater, and make bum-fodder of all our Poor Robin, 1738. ERST. Formerly: the superlative of | ESLOYNE, v. To remove. the Saxon ere, which means before: therefore properly erest, first. occurs so perpetually in all early authors, that instances seem hardly necessary:

Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,

I will endure.

As you l. it, iii, 5.

That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels. 2 Hen. VI. ii. 4. Shakespeare has not used it very frequently; it was beginning in his time to be antiquated. Yet it is still retained in poetry. +ESBRANDILL. To shake or disquiet. Fr. ebranler. Queen Elizabeth uses the term in a letter dated 1588. ESCAPE. An irregularity, or transgression; an escape from the strict ties of duty. Often written 'scape.

Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Tit. And., iv, 2. O thou great thunderer! dost thou behold

With watchfull eyes the subtile 'scapes of men.

Tancred and Gismunda, O. PL, ii, 197.

+ESCHANSONNERY. The butlery. The eschansonnery celler is mentioned in a MS. printed in the Rutland Papers, p. 26, as containing "in wyn ESPI'AL. iiij. septiers."

To ESCHEW. To avoid or shun. From eschever, old French, which meant the same. Dr. Johnson has preferred the false etymology, escheoir, though Skinner, his usual guide, pronounces eschever the better. It is indeed undoubted; the word, and all its derivatives, may be seen in Cotgrave. The French word is itself deduced by Menage from excavere, to take care. See him in echever.

What cannot be sechew'd must be embrac'd Mer. W. W., v. 5. The word occurs often in the translation of the Bible. See Job, i, 1 and 8, and ii, 3, and in 1 Pet., iii, 11. Those dangers great you say to be foreshowne, &c.
—Cannot be knowne, or cannot be eschered.

Harr. Ariost., iv, 26.

ESCOTED. Paid. From scot, a contribution, which is formed, as Du Cange says, from the Anglo-Saxon. sceat, money. See his Glossary, in Escotum and Scot: hence scot and

Who maintains them? how are they escoted. ESILE, or OISEL. Probably a Danish river. See Eisel.

Esloygner, old Fr.

From worldly cares he did himself esloyne, And greatly shunned manly exercise.

xercise. Spens. F. Q., I, iv, 90. Donne has used it in the form of the more modern French, without the s. eloigner.

How I shall stay, though she sloigne me thus,
And how posterity shall know it too.

Donne, Valediction to his Book.

Mr. Todd has found eloignment even in Sheustone.

But ah the Heavens are too far esloies'd Above our reach, nor can our humane sence Attain to see what is decreed above.

Phillis of Scyros, by J. S., 1655. Hope. French. Shake-ESPERANCE. speare uses it as if perfectly adopted into our language. In the Scottish dialect it was, as Dr. Jamieson shows.

To be wors

The lowest, and most dejected thing of fortune, Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear. Lear, iv, 1. Where it is used as a word of battle by Percy, it has the final e pronounced, as a French word. 1 Hen. IV, v, 2.

A spy. From the French. espier.

—By your espials were discovered Two mightier troops than that the dauphin led 1 Hen. FI. iv, 3.

Her. FI, iv, S.
Her father and myself, lawful espials,
Will so bestow ourselves, that, &c. Heml., iii, 1.
They hurt no man that is unarmed, onles he be an espiall.
More's Utopia, by Robinson, P 7.
The Frenche king, advertised by espials of their determination, prepareth also for the wares.

Holizateral iii M 1. Holinsk., vol. ii, M l.

Also for observation, or discovery. See SPIAL.

†ESPRED. Spread. For yspred.
He layde him then downe by the alters side

Upon the white hindes skin espred therefore.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1887.

ESPRYSED. Taken. Esprise, old Fr. But she that was so mutch or more coprysed with the raging and intollerable fire of love.

Palace of Pleas., vol. fi, S s &.

ESSAY. To take the essay of a dish, or to try it, was the office of the maître d'hôtel, or, in very great houses, of the master carver, écuyer tranchant. It appears to have been done by dipping in a square piece of bread, and tasting it. When the company is seated, he is to Come and uncover the meat, which was served in covered dishes, then taking the essay with a square slice of bread which was prepared for that use and purpose.

G. Rose's Instruct. for Officers of the Month, 1662, p. 20.

Often contracted to 'say. See Say.

ESSES. The turnings of a river are oddly and quaintly compared by Browne to the collar of SS, or esses, worn by the knights of the Garter:

> Or to a mead a wanton river dresses. Or to a mead a wanton river urcases,
> With richest collers of her turning esses.
>
> Brit. Past., I, iv, p. 94.

Minshew tells us that they were worn by "great counsellors of estate, judges of this land," &c., but he does not say why they were formed like SS.

ESSOINE, or ESSOIGN. Excuse, indulgence for not appearing. From the French, essoine, or exoine. has been variously derived, from έξομνύσθαι, from exonerare, or exideonare, barbarous Latin; but the best etymologists, as Du Cange, Menage, Vossius. Spelman, agree to deduce it from the barbarous Latin, sunnis, sumnis, or somnis, which meant an impediment. Sunnis itself is derived from saumnis, delay, Germ., or, as Hickes says with less probability, from sunia, truth, Mœso-Goth.

From everie worke he chalenged essoyne, For contemplation suke. Spens. F. Q., I, iv, 20. Essoign is still a term in the common law; the essoign-days being those days on which the court sits to take esspians or excuses for such as do not appear according to the summons of the writ. The topics of essoign are classed into five kinds :- 1. De ultra mare; 2. De terra sancta; 3. De malo veniendi; 4. De malo lecti; 5. De servitio regis. For being beyond sea, in the holy land, infirm, sick in bed, or on the king's service. There is an officer called clerk of the essoigns, by whom these pleas are registered. Law Dict.

†For swearing and for forswearing, and blaspheming the blessed name of the eternali God, where no excuse the blessed name of the eternian Gru, where and excess can serve, no advocate can plead, no proxey or easyme is to be granted, but presently the guilty caitif is commanded to utter darkenesse and perpetuall torments.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

ESTIMATE. Used for estimation, value. And in it are the lords York, Berkeley, and Seymour, None else of name and noble estimate Rick. II, ii, 8.-424, b. +ESTOPLE. A stoppage, or impediment. But estoples of water courses, doe in some places grow by such mennes, as one private man or two cannot by force or discretion make remedie.

Norden's Surveiors Dialogue, 1610. ESTRADIOTS. A kind of dragoons used by the French. Menage derives it from the Italian, stradiotti, which, according to Guiccardini, were Greek soldiers in the service of Venice, who retained the appellation proper to them in their own language, stratiota. στρατιώται. Otherwise, it seems more obvious to derive them from estrade. or strada, as being light troops emploved battre l'estrade, to scour the ways, for intelligence, and other pur-[The Greek derivation is poses. correct.

Accompanied with crosse-bowe men on horsebacks, estradiots, and footmen. Comines, by Danet, Ff 3. Ph. de Commines describes the particular manner in which they were armed.

ESTRIDGE. The ostrich.

All plum'd like estridges, that with the wind Bated, like eagles having newly bath'd.

I Hen. IV, iv, 1.

To be furious,
Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge. Ant. f. Cl., iii, 11.
Let them both remember that the estridge diagnesteth hard yron to preserve his health. Bupknes, N. 4, b.
Should the estridge snatch off the gallant's feather, the beaver his hat, the goat his gloves, the sheep his sute, the silkworm his stockings, the neate his shoes
—he would be left in a cold condition.

Fuller, Holy War, p. 154.
†Tis dyet onely for an estrick tooth,
It cannot cue, yet very much doth smooth.

It cannot cog, yet very much doth smooth.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. ESTRO, s., for astrum. Literally the gadfly; metaphorically, any violent and irresistible impulse.

ETERNE. Eternal.

ln E. Eterum.
But in them Nature's copy's not eterne.
Macb., iii, 2.

On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof storn Haml., ii, 2. O thou Eterns! by whom all beings move Browne, Brit. Past., I, iv, p. 89.

For which we ought in all our haps rejoice,

Because the eye eterne all things foreseeth.

Mirour for Mag., p. 384,
ERNESS. The quality of being +ETERNESS. eternal.

Corruption, and eternesse, at one time, And in one subject, let together, loosse? Byron's Tragedy, †ETRIED. For tried.

Hereby you see th' unsteady trust in warre, Hereby you see the stay of states etride.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1587,

ETTICKE, or ETHIKE, adj. Hectic. Etique, Fr. Here evidently ague fits. A sicknesse, like the fever etticke fittes, Which shakes with cold when we do burne like fire.

Promos and Cassand., iii, 1.

What saide I? lyke to etticke fittes? nothing neare.

Quhil sie thyngis war done in Scotland, Ambrose kyng of Britonis fell in ane dwynaud seiknes namyt the ethic fevir.

Bellenden, cited by Dr. Jamieson. This ethic, or ettick fever was, in fact, the consumption, but was also called an ague. An old medical book says. "Of the Consumption or Ethic Hec-This is one of the most perilous agues that may light upon a man." Moson's General Practice of Physick. part vi, cap. xi, p. 679.
I have the fever ethike right,

I have the level exacte right,
I burne within, consume without,
And having melted all my might,
Then followes death, without all doubt.

Willobie's Avisa, cant. 43. ETTIN. A giant. From eten, Sax. id. So derived by Dr. Leyden, in his Glossary to the Complaynt of Scotland. Dr. Jamieson rather inconsiderately objected to this etymology: but both Lye and Benson give eten, gigas, which they derive from etan, to eat. The origin is therefore unde-

For they say the king of Portugal cannot sit at his meat, but the giants and the ettins will come and snatch it from him. B. F. R. Knight of B. P., i, 1. And, whether thou with doughty fnight, Arm'd or unarm'd, shalt enter fight;

Nay, with a gyant or an ettin, Thou shalt be ever sure to beat him.

Cotton, Scoffer Scoft. Eyttin is also preserved in the Scottish dialect, of which many examples are given by Jamieson, quarto Dict. As ettin, from its etymology, implies cannibalism, every giant might not deserve the name. [This is not correct.] See also Chalmers's Glossary to Sir David Lyndsay.

EVARGY. An affected expression, supposed to be used for facility; from εὐεργὸς, easy. I rather suspect the passage to have been corrupted at the press.

In plainer evergy, what are they? speak.

Miser. of Inf. Mar., O. Pl., v, 96.

EUBIDES. A collective name for some of the western islands of Scotland A corruption of Ebudæ, which is the name given to them by Pliny. They are now called Hebrides, which is perhaps only a further corruption.

As in th' Albanian seas,
The Arrans, and by them the scatter'd Eubides. The Orcades, and all those Eubides, imbrac'd
In Neptune's aged arms. Ibid., B. X, p. 844.

†EVECKE, or EVICKE. A species of wild goat.

Ibex, rupr-icaprae alterum genus, rota, Varroni, ut creditur, quam vocem sunt qui in platycerota commutarunt. αἰξ ἰξαλος, Home. Une espece de chevrel. A kind of wild goate, and supposed to be that which they call the execte.

*Nomenclator, 1856. Which archer-like (as long before he took his hidden brete atand,

The evicke skipping from a rock) into the breast he smote.

Chapm. II., iv, 122

To EVEN. To equal, or make equal. Madam, the care I have to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours. All's W., i, 8.

There's more to be consider'd; but we'll each
All that good time will give us.

Cyssb., iii, 4.

In Othello, ii, 1, the folios read,
Till I am exper's with him, wife for wife;
instead of "even with him," as in the quarto and the modern editions.

But now the walls be even'd with the plain.

Tanc. F. Giss., O. Pl., ii, 213.

The stately walls he rear'd, levell'd, and even'd.

Heywood, Iron Age, part ii.

EVEN, adj. Equal. Singularly used in the phrase even Christian, for fellow Christian; a customary expres-

And the more pity; that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian.

Handl, v, 1.
Proudly judging the lives of their even Christen, disdaining other men's virtue, envying other men's praise.

Sir Thou. More's Works, fol., p. 83.

And where their maie not fighte against the Turks, arise in greate plumpes to fighte against their even Christen.

Were no trustic frende to you, nor charitable man to mine sees Christian.

mine even Christian.

Hall's Chronicle, Hen. VIII, p. 961. It is in fact a remnant of older language; for Mr. Todd shows that Wickliff used even servant for fellowservant.

+EVEN. On an even, i. e., on an equality; on par.

We on an even lay venture soules and bodies,
For so they doe that enter single combats.

Carlell's Descroing Favorite, 1629.

EVIL EYED. Envious, malicious. Envy is denoted by an evil eye in the New Testament, and is warranted by the original. "Is thine eye evil because I am good." Matth., xx, 15. See also Mark, vii, 22, and other passages.
You shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you.

Cymb., i, 2.

†EVILNESS. Perversity of disposition. I perceyve that nothing is to be had or gotten in absenting from sermons, but esilnesse and losse of good doctrine and instructions, which I have done through vaine ydle pastymes and playes.

Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1877.

†EVIRATE. Emasculated.

VINATE. Emasculateu.

In this conflict there dyed of our part also, men of no small account, among whom was Valerianua, the principall of all the guard in ordinarie, and a certaine esquier or targuetier, borne a verie veirate cunuch, but such an expert and approved warriour, that he might be compared either with old Sicinius or Sergius.

Holland's Ammianus Marcel., 1609.

+EVITE. To avoid. Lat. evito. Wonder of wonders! what we ought t'evite As our disease, we hug as our delight. Ouarles's Emblems.

+EVITERNALL. Everlasting.

He that so many galling steps hath trac'd. He that so many galling steps main true u, That in so many countries earst lath bin, And to his eriternal! (ame is grac'd, To be well welcom'd unto Bossoms inne. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

EUPHUISM. An affected style of conversation and writing, fashionable for some time in the court of Elizabeth. from the fame of Lyly's two performances, entitled Euphues, or the Anatomy of Wit, and Euphues and his England. This we learn only on the authority of Mr. Blount, who published six of his plays in 1632: he says, "Our nation are in his debt for a new English which he taught them. Euphues and his England began first that language. All our ladies were then his scollers, and that beautie in court who could not parley Euphuesme. was as little regarded as shee which now there speaks not French."

The work which had this extraordinary effect, is well characterised by R. Dodsley, in his preface to the old plays, who says, "It is an unnatural, affected jargon, in which the perpetual use of metaphors, allusions, allegories, and analogies, is to pass for wit; and stiff bombast for language." It may be added, that the author perpetually takes the liberty to allude to things that never had existence but in his own brain, as acknowledged and known, of which the following is a curious specimen:

The peacock is a bird for none but Juno, the dove for none but Vesta: none must wear Venus in a table but Alexander; none Pallas in a ring but Ulysses: for as there is but one phoenix in the world, so there is but one tree in Arabia where she buildeth.

Here the circumstances in italic were. I believe, never thought of but by this author: which affectation of learning, without any sound foundation, has the coldest effect imaginable. same he does with respect to the names and properties of natural productions. I have remarked above, in CAMOMILE, that Shakespeare meant to ridicule Lyly in what he introduces about it in I Hen. IV. And in the character of Osrick, and Hamlet's burlesque of his affected language, we have a complete specimen of Euphuism. Haml., v, 2. Very fine people were sometimes said to be Eunhuis'd.

When the Arcadian and Emphais's gentlewomen have their tongues sharpened to set upon you.

Decker's Gul's Hornb., ch. vi.

By Arcadian it should appear that a fashion was taken from the Arcadia of Sidney, as well as the Euphues. In Beaumont and Fletcher, Euphues is said in ridicule to be part of the furniture of an affected courtier:

H'as nothing in him, but a piece of Euphues,
And twenty dozen of twelvepenny ribband.

Honest Man's Fortune, v, p. 451.

Drayton gives sir Philip Sidney the credit of putting an end to Euphuism; but, alas! without discarding affectation, for the Arcadia is almost as absurdly affected as Euphues. absurdly affected as Euphues.
The noble Sidney with this last arose,
That héros for numbers and for proce,
That throughly pac'd our language, as to show
The plenteous English hand in hand might go
With Greek and Latin; and did first reduce
Our tongue from Lilly's [Lyly's] writing then in use:
Talking of stones, stars, plants, of fishes, fices,
Playing with words, and idle similies;
As th' English apea, and very ranies be,
Of ev'ry thing, that they do hear and see,
So imitating his [Lyly's] ridiculous tricks,
They speak and write all like mere lunaticks.

Draylon, Of Poets and Poesy, p. 1256.

Ben Jonson strongly lashes this affectation of his times, in his Discoveries: tation of his times, in his Discoveries:
I do hear them say often, some men are not witty because they are not every where witty, than which nothing is more foolish. If an eye or a nuse be an excellent part in the face, therefore be all eye or nose?
I think the eyebrow, the forehead, the cheek, chin, lip, or any part clae, are as necessary and natural in the place. But now nothing is good that is natural; right and natural language seems to have the least of the wit in it; that which is writhed and totrued is accounted the more exquisite.

Vol. vii, p. 88.

Drayton, Of Poets and Poesy, p. 1256.

Used here as the name of a flowering plant.

The flowers of plants having the resemblance of butterflies, conduce to fruitfulness; as our English gandergoose, the flower of beans, woodbine, so, and ragwort.

Saunders's Physiogramia, 1653.

EWES. The price of ewes in the time of Shakespeare is preserved in the following passage:

A score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

2 Hen. IV, iii, 2. Violently agitated. +EXAGITATED. The same writer has exagitation. Then fear could ere have done, and did presage
Th' ensuing storms exagitated rage.

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1

Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659. EXCALIBOUR, or ESCALIBOUR. The name of king Arthur's sword, whose spear and shield had also their proper names; the one being called Rone, the other Pridwin.

revenged of his landlord for reducing him to such an exigence.

History of Francion, 1655.

EXIGENT; frequently used for exigence. Situation of difficulty; as in the following:

Why do you cross me in this exigent? Jul. Cas., v, 1. But Shakespeare, or some one of his time, has used it for extremity, in the sense of end or termination:

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent, Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent. 1 Hen.VI, ii, 5. The following passage is cited as parallel, and probably is so:

Hath driv'n her to some desperate esigent.
Wisdome of Dr. Dodypole, 1600. The next is so without doubt, as the speaker alludes to his own immediate death:

And now arrived upon the armed coast, In expectation of the victorie in expectation of the victory Whose house lies beyond this exigent, Through mortall danger, with an active spirit, Thus I aspire to undergoe my death.

C. Tourneur, Atheist's Tragedy, I 4.

+EXILED. Slender; weak.

Which (to my exiled and slender learning) have made this little treatise againste diceplaying, dauncing, and vaine playes or entertudes.

Northbrooks, against Dicing, 1677.

†EXISTIMATION. Exteem; estimate.

As thoughe the hole existinacion of theyr wisdome were in jeopardy to be overthrowne, and that ever after they should be counted for very diserdes.

More's Utopia, 1551.

+EXITIAL. Fatal; ruinous.

Like to a threatning meteor in the aire,
Which where it lights exitiall ruin brings.

Heywood's Trois Britannics, 1609.

†EXORNATION. Embellishment.

Idlenesse againe is the sister of doltishnesse, both enemics to art; whereas exercise, conference, and experience make both arte and wit to yeeld forth

Experience many war-fruit and exponention.

Rich Cabinet furnished with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

EXPECT, e. Expectation.

Be t of less espect, That matter needless, &c. Tro. & Cr., i, 8. I have not seen another instance of it. It has been thought that Shakespeare considered it as an allowable licence to make substantives from verbs, and vice versa. He generally followed the practice of his time.

EXPEDIENCE. Expedition, celerity. Three thousand men of war Are making hither, with all due expedience

The French are bravely in their battles set, And will with all expedience set on us. Hen. F, iv, S. Also, in the sense of enterprise, un-

In forwarding this dear expedience. 1 Hen. IV, i, 1. That is, the expedition to the Holy

The cause of our expedience to the queen.

Ant. and Cl., i, 9. I shall break

EXPEDIENT, adj. Expeditious, quick: like the preceding substantive.

Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere further leisure yield them further means.

Rich. II, i, 4. His marches are expedient to this town.

John, ii, 1. EXPEDIENTLY. Expeditiously; still with the same analogy.

ith the same analogy.

Do this espediently, and turn him going.

As you l. it, iii, 1.

Christened. +EXPENED. This singular corruption is not unfrequently met with in old parish registers, and the error may have originated in the misinterpretation of the Greek Xo, the first two letters of the name of Christ, which were not unfrequently used for the name itself. In the same way we find Xpofer for Christopher.

+EXPENSEFUL. Expensive; lavish. Hereupon the States made up the sum presently, which came in convenient time, for it serv'd to defray the expenseful progresse he made to Scotland the summer following. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

To EXPIRE, v. a. To exhaust, or wear out.

Now when as time flying with winges swift

Expired had the term that these two Javels

Should, &c. Spens. Moth. Hubb. Tale, 308. So also Shakespeare in Romeo and Juliet, and Selden. See Todd. † To EXPISCATE. To fish out; to Inquire.

Expiscating if the renown'd extrems
They force on us will serve their turns.

Chepm. R., z. 181.

To EXPLATE. To explain, or unfold, for expleat or unpleat: a word supposed to be peculiar to Jonson. Mr. Gifford says that explation is in Coles's Dictionary; but it is not in some editions which I have seen.

Like Solon's self explairs the knotty laws
With endless labours. Epigr. 65, on Sir Ed. Coke.
+EXPLOIT. To perform.

He returned to Sitifis, and assembled the souldiors there inhabiting, together with those whom he brought with him; and impatient of farther delayes, brought with nim; and impatient of lartner delayes, he made hast to esploit some warlike service.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

Which enterprise he judged verye necessarie to be esployted, for better keeping of the Brytaynes in obedience.

Holinsked, 1877.

EXPOSTURE. Exposure; the being exposed.

Determine on some course More than a wild exposture to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee. Coriol., iv, 1.
As this word is found only here, it has been supposed to be an error of the press, for exposure, but it is the reading of the first folios.

†EXPROBRATE. To reproach.

Rud. When that he End. When that he Shall loath thy foul embraces, and avoid
Thy sight, as somthing that doth exprobrate
His sins unto him. Cartwright's Siedge, 1651.
Hip. Howe'r don't exprobrate our poverty,
Though all our wealth hath been the Persians spoyl.
Cartwright's Royall Slave, 1651.

+EXPUATE. Spit out.

And force a gate in jumps, from towre to towre,
A poore and espuate humor of the court.

Chapman's Byron's Conspiracy, 1608.

+EXPUGNATION. The conquest of a

In the history of Agathocles, it is also recounted, that Amuclar the Carthagenian, being one day at the expugnation of Siracusa, he heard a voyce which said to him in a dreame: To-morrow thou shalt sup in him in a dreame: 10-morrow
Siracusa, which came to passe.

The Passenger of Benzenuto, 1612.

+EXPUGNER. One who reduces a fortress.

It have my lord, and doubt not he will proove,
Of the yet taintlesse fortresse of Byrun,
A quicke expugner, and a strong abider.
Chapman's Byron's Conspiracy, 1608.

To EXPULSE. To expel, or drive out. Expulsus, Lat.

For ever should they be arpuls'd from France.

For he was expulsed the senate. North's Plut., p. 499.
If he, expulsing king Richard, as a man not meet for the office he bare, would take upon him the scepter.

Holiasked, vol. ii, V v 8.

EYSUFFLICATE, adj. Contemptible, abominable. From exsufflare, low Lat., which Du Cange explains "contemnere, despuere, rejicere." derived, he says, from the old ecclesiastical form of renouncing the devil, in the ancient baptism of catechumens, when the candidate was commanded by the priest to turn to the west, and thrice exsufflate Satan (exsufflare, or insufflare). He refers to Cyril, and others of the fathers, for authority. The English word is found only in this passage of Shakespeare:

When I shall turn the business of my soul To such exsefficate and blown abuses. Othello, iii, 3, This not being understood, exsuffolate was proposed by Hanmer, and adopted by Johnson and others; but the other (or rather exufflicate) is the reading of the old copies, and is probably right. Rider and Thomasius both acknowledge exufflo as equivalent to efflo, but as a word then disused. Sulpicius Severus has exsufflo, in his third Dialogue, but confesses that it is not pure Latin. It was, however, a regular ecclesiastical

In Schmidius's Lexicon Ecclesiasticum Minus, exsufflare is thus explained: "Mos erat antiquorum, in signum detestationis, in expulsione malignorum spirituum, quemadmodum etiam in baptismi ritibus ecclesiæ Romanæ solet adhiberi à sacerdote, olim quoque à catechumeno." He also quotes Cyril, Augustin, and others; and adds, that it is still done by the priest in the Roman Church.

To EXTEND. To seize, A law term.

Labienus (this is stiff news)
Hath with his Parthian force extended Asia.

Ant. & Cl. i. 2.

But when
This manor is extended to my use.

This manor is extenses to my way.
You'll speak in humbler key.

Mass. Now Way to p. O. D., v, l. Also, to praise, probably from the idea of extending or augmenting the commendation or qualities of a person. The following passage contains a singular contradiction of expressions: Wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgement. judgement.

EXTENT. A seizure. This is also a legal expression.

Make an estent upon his house and lands.

As you l. it, iii, l.

And the sheriff with them is come to serve an estent upon your land. Miseries of Inf. Marr., O. Pl., v. 90. Used also to signify a violent attack, such as is made in serving an extent: In this uncivil and unjust extent Assingt the neace. Theel. N., iv, l.

EXTERN. An abbreviation of external, outward. The native act and figure of my heart

The compliment extern.

Othello, i, L. In compliment extern. It is exemplified in the new edition of Johnson, from Bacon, bishop Taylor, †EXTINCT, n. s. Extinction.

and Howell.

To the uttermost extinct of life.

Foru's Honor Triumphant. 1606. To extirpate. Lat. To EXTIRP. But it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, 'till eating and drinking be put down. Meas. for M., iii, S. and drinking be put down. Mess But be extirped from our provinces. 1 Hen. VI. iii, 8.

Began to hate the benefit, and in place Of thanks devise t' extirp the memory Of such an act.

Which to extirps, he laid him privily

Down in a darksome lonely place far in.

Spens. F. Q., I, x, 25.

+EXTRAORDINARY. In the sense of foreign, applied to mercenary troops. Milites adventitii, Cic. externi, Eid. extraordinarii.

estrangiers. Souldiers of another country that come to serve for paye: estraordinaris souldiers.

Nomenclator.

+EXTRAVAGANCY. A caprice.

Baiamond was then in his extravancies, and would take by water than by land.

and. Comical History of Francism, 1655. EXTRAVAGANT, in the literal sense of its etymology, wandering about, going beyond bounds. Extra vacans.

Th' extraogant and erring spirit hies
To his confine.

Haml., i, 1.

To his confine.
To an extravagant and wheeling stranger.
Othello, i, 1.

EXTREAT. Extraction. Extrait. Fr. CTREAT: EXTRICTION: Exercises, and charkes doe doubt, in their devicefull art, whether this heavenly thing, whereof I treat, To weeten mercie, be of justice part, Or drawne forth from her by divine extracte.

Sp. P. Q. V. x. 1.

+EXTRINSECATE. Coming from without. Lat.

out. Lat.

Which nature doth not forme of her owne power,
But are extrinsecate, by marvaile wrought.

Wisdom of Dr. Dodipol, 1600.

XTRIP. To spoil. Or perhaps a +EXTRIP. To spoil. misprint for extirp, to extirpate.
Subducth Soba; foyls the Mosbite;
Wholly extrips the down-trod Jebusite.
Dw Du Rartas

+EXULCERATE. Galled; mortified.

Or, if that should misse, yet Uraicinus, alreadie exulcerate, and carrying rancour in his heart, be utterly abolished, to the end that no scruple should remaine behind, greatly to be feared.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

EXUFFLICATE. See Exsufflicate. EYAS. A young hawk. From ey, Sax., an egg, as being newly hatched. Such is the derivation given by Church and others. It is certain also that Latham and other writers on falconry use eyas; yet it is more likely that an eyas is only an erroneous pronunciation of a nias, the latter having a direct derivation from the French, whence other terms of falconry are deduced. The former is more remote and fanciful. See Ney, in Ritson's Glossary to his Metrical Romances. Mr. Malone testifies that it is sometimes written nuas. See his note on He adds, the following passage. "Some etymologists think nyas a legitimate word." The above account was written long ago, and I see with pleasure that Mr. Todd adopts the same opinion. See his Johnson, in

But there is, sir, an aiery of children, little cyases, that cry out on the top of the question. Haml., ii, 8.
Like cyas hawk up mounts into the skies,
His newly budded pinions to assay.

авану. Spens. F. Q., I, xi, 34.

The French word is thus defined ! "On appelle oiseau niais, un oiseau de fauconnerie qu'on prend au nid. et qui n'en est encore sortie. Ce mot paroît formé du nid même, où le d ne se prononce pas." Prevôt, Manuel Lexique.

EYAS-MUSKET. A young hawk. From eyas and musket, a young sparrowhawk; which is derived from mouschet, Fr., of the same meaning. See Minshew. Muscetus in low Latin means the same. See Du Cange. Musquet, a gun, comes from the same mouschet; and muschetta meant a missile weapon of war before the invention of artillery; all in allusion to falconry. Du Cange and Menage. Metaphorically, this word eyas-musket is used as a jocular term for a small child.

How now, my systemusket! what news with you?

Mer. W. W., iii, 8.

See NIAS and MUSKRT.

An EYE. A small tint of colour; probably as much as is just sufficient for the eye to discern.

eye to discern.

Ant. The ground indeed is tawney.

Seb. With an eye of green in 't. 17emp., ii, 1.

None of these beards will serve;

There's not an eye of white in them.

Gobling, O. Pl., x, 146.

Red, with an eye of blue, makes a purple.

Boyle, quoted by Steevens.

†EYE. The brightest ornament.

Your daughter was the verie eye of the solemnitie.

Gough's Strange Discovery, 1640.

†EYE. To see with half an eye, was an old and common phrase for to see

Are not the little dice cast downe upon the table, that every man may see them that hath but halfe as eps, and may easily tell every pricke and poynt upon them? and therefore I cannot see howe any man should thereby be deceyved.

Northbrooke's Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

Yet one with half an eye may see, wee cannot be secure, while such huge fleets of men of war, both Spanish, French, Dutch, and Dunkirkers, etc.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+EYE-BITING. Fascination: the effect of the evil eve.

of the evil eye.

Fascinus, Virg. Horat. Morbus quo pueri emaciantur, cujus originem obliquis invidorum oculis tribuerunt veteres, cujusmodi oculos urentes vocat Persius.

Barazia, Plutarch. wapa rò roit pater activi. Hesychio ctiam spanyò dicitur. A bewitching or sysbiling: a disease wherewith children ware leane and pine away, the originall whereof they in olde time referred to the crooked and wry lookes of envious and malicious people.

Nomenchor, 1885.

Master Scot, in his Discovery, telleth us that our English people in Ireland, whose posterity were lately barbarously cut off, were much given to this idolatry in the queen's time, insomuch that, there being a disease amongst their cattle that grew blinde, being a common disease in that country, they did commonly execute people for it, calling them eye-biling witches.

Adey's Candle in the Dark, p. 104.

EYE-BRIGHT. An unknown personage, coupled with another of the name of Pimlico, and both mentioned as of great celebrity at Hogsden.

Gallants, men and women,
And of all sorts, tag-rag, have been seen to flock here
In threaves, these ten weeks, as to a second Hogsden
In days of Pimilico and Eyebright. B. Jons. dick., v, 2. What illustrious personages bore these names, has not yet been discovered; but the former has given his appellation to more than one suburban district. One is near Hogsden, as here mentioned, another in the way from Westminster to Chelsea.

Eyebright was also the name of an herb, called in the Linnean system, euphrasia officinalis, and alluded to by Milton, for its virtue in clearing the sight:

Then purg'd with suphrasy and fue
The visual nerve, for he had much to see.

Par. Lost, xi, 415.

+EYEFUL. Visible, remarkable. With this, he hung them up aloft upon a tamrick bough As eyeful trophics.

Chapm. Il., x, 396.

EYERIE. See AIERY. A nest, or a young brood of eagles or hawks. This form of the word is more correct, though the other is more prevalent, the origin being ey, an egg.

For as an eyerie from their seeges wood,
Led o're the plains, and taught to get their food
By seeing how their breeder takes his prey,
Now from an orchard doe they seare the jey,
Then, &c.

Browne, Brit. Past., ii, 4, p. 115.

Dryden uses it as a nest:

Some haggard hawk, who had her eyry nigh, Well pounc'd to fasten, and well wing'd to fly. Hind and Pather, part iii. EYES, KISSING OF. The commentators on Shakespeare have very sagaciously told us that, "It was formerly the fashion to kiss the eyes, as a mark of extraordinary tenderness." See the note on the Winter's Tale, iv, 3. Say rather, that it was the natural impulse of affection in all ages, without any regard to fashion. Greek and Latin authors might be quoted in proof of it.

EYLIADS. Ogles, wanton looks of the eyes; a word which, being uncommon, is corruptly spelt in all the old copies of Shakespeare: as iliads, aliads, &c. The best guide for the orthography is the French original cillade; which Cotgrave translates "a sheep's-eye.' Who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious cyliads. Mer. W. W., i, 3. It occurs again in Lear, iv, 5, where the folios spell it eliads, and iliads; the quarto aliads. See OEILIAD. EYSELL. See EISEL.

F.

FABELL, PETER. The name of a celebrated scholar, and reputed magician of Edmonton, of whom it was reported that he outwitted the devil. He is the hero of the old comedy entitled the Merry Devil of Edmonton: and by the manner in which he is mentioned in that play, one should conceive him to have lived at a more distant period than his history notes.

Tis Peter Fabell, a renowned scholar, Whose fame hath still been hitherto forgot By all the writers of this latter age. It then states that he was called "the merry fiend of Edmonton," and adds.

If any here make doubt of such a name,
In Edmonton, yet fresh unto this day,
Fix'd in the wall of that old ancient church,
His monument remainent to be seen;
His memory yet in the mouths of men.

Merry Devil, O. Pl., v, 249. By the prologue to Jonson's Devil is an Ass, the comedy appears to have been extremely popular; as is known also by other proofs:

And shew this but the same face you have done
Your dear delight, The Devil of Edmonton. The comedy was anonymous, and the author is still unknown. It has been falsely ascribed to Shakespeare and to Drayton.

A monument, reputed to be his, was shown in Edmonton church, in the time of Weaver and of Norden; but it was without inscription, and therefore could throw no light on his history. The fullest account of him is given in a very scarce old tract, entitled, "The Life and Death of the Merry Devil of Edmonton, &c., by T. B." This tract was reprinted in 1819, by Mr. Nichols, with an exact copy of the original woodcut. T. B. signs himself at the end Thomas He says of Fabell, "In Brewer.

Edmonton he was borne, lived, and died. in the reigne of king H. VII." This is the only date relating to him. But Warton mentions a thin folio of two sheets, black letter, entitled, "Fabyl's Ghoste, printed by John Rastal in 1553." Brewer says,

He was a man of good discent; and a man, either for his gifts external or internall, inferior to few. For his person he was absolute. Nature had never showne the fulnesse of her skill more in any then in him. For the other, I meane his great learning (including many misteries), hee was as amply blest as any.

See also Robinson's History of Edmonton, 1819, p. 111.

Short as the period was between his death and the publication of Brewer's tract, a sufficient number of fabulous tales had been invented of him, as may be seen there.

+FABELL, for favel. Favour. A word which was becoming obsolete in the

Which was sixteenth century.

Andye shal understand that fabell is an olde Englyshe worde, and signifieth as much as favour doth nowe a Taverner's Adagies, 1552.

+FABULIZE. To tell fables.

fab. 1120 foole, who fondly giving credit to them, they fish, draw, wring from, deceive, get into their fingers, and receive mony out of their purse, then endleady among themselves, they fabulize, nourish the mistery, laugh, play, jeast, damee, leap, skip.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

ABURTHEN. A word apparently +FABURTHEN. compounded of fa and the word burthen (of a song), and equivalent to the cum notal which occurs in college and cathedral statutes. It became gradually used in the sense of lofty, high-sounding.

Et bi cantavimus in honore Dei et sancti Georgii, miles Christi gloriose, in faburthyn. . . . Et ibi cantavimus in capella, etc., Beata Ici genetrix Maria, in faburthen. Itenerery of W. Way, printed by the Roxburgh Club, pp. 95, 97.

But I let that passe lest thou come in againe with thy faburthen, and hit me in teeth with love, for thou hast so charmed mee, that I dare not speake any word that may bee wrested to charity, lest thou say, I meane lave. Lylie's Euphues and his England. He condemneth all mens knowledge but his owne, raising up a method of experience with (mirabile. raising up a method of experience with (mirabile, miraculoso, stupendo, and such faburthes words, as Fierovanti doth) above all the learned Galienists of Italie, or Europe.

Lodge's Wite Miserie, 1596.

To show one's face, in the sense of to appear, and to throw in the face, for to reproach, are phrases of considerable antiquity.

Is not the young heir
Of that brave general's family, Giulio,
80 poor, he dares not show his face in Naples?
The Slighted Maid, p. 19.
Upon my parents I've brought duagrace,
I hope none will throw it is their face,

For if they do they'll be to blaine, I beg that I may bear the shame. Ballad of Sarak Wilson.

To FACE IT WITH A CARD OF TEN. A common phrase, which we may suppose to have been derived from some game (possibly primero) wherein the standing boldly upon a ten was often successful. A card of ten meant a tenth card, a ten. See that word. Warburton was wrong in saying a ten was the highest, for coat cards are of equal antiquity.

A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide.
Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten. Tam. Shr., il.
Some may be costs, as in the cards; but then
Some must be knaves, some variets, bawds, and ostlers,
As aces, duces, cards o' ten to face it
Out, i' the game which all the world is.

B. Jons. New Inn. i. 8. Skelton is also quoted for the ex-

First pycke a quarrel and fall out with him then, And so out face him with a card of ten.

I conceive the force of the phrase to have expressed originally, the confidence or impudence of one who with a ten, as at brag, faced, or out-faced one who had really a faced card against him. To face meant, as it still does, to bully, to attack by impudence of face.

Face not me: thou hast brav'd many men; brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor bruv'd.

Tam. Sår., iv, 8. FACES ABOUT. A military word of command, equivalent to wheel.

Or when my muster-master
Talks of his tacticks, and his ranks and files,
His bringers-up, his leaders-on; and cries,
"Faces about, to the right hand," "the left,"
Now, "as you were." B. Jons. Staple of News, iv, 4. Ralph, exercising his men in the Knight of the Burning Pestle, uses both this phrase and the curious one of "as you were."

"Double your files;" "as you were;" "faces about." Act v. Good captain, faces about, -to some other discourse. Every Man in his H., iii, 1.
Cutting Morecraft, faces about,—I must present another.

B. & Fl. Scornful Lady, act v. Sweet virgin, Faces about, to some other discourse.

Antiquery, O. Pl., x, 50.

Thou know'st nothing but the earthly part, and can'st cry to that, Faces about.

Parson's Wedd., O. Pl., xi, 376.

Said to a captain.

Mr. Pye has noticed this phrase in the 19th of his Sketches, p. 95. In the Soldiers' Accidence, the officers are directed to give the word of command in these terms, used, says the author, both here and in the Netherlands.

Faces to the right. Faces about, or Faces to the reare. which is all one. Gifford's note on Every Man in his H., act i, sc. 1.

FACT. Unusually put for guilt.

recollect an authority.

As you were past all shame (Those of your fact are so) so past all truth. Wint. Tale, iii, 2. If the reading be right, it means "those who commit such facts as you have;" but the expression is singular. Some have conjectured sect, but sect is only used as an ignorant corruption of sex. Fact might possibly be used for faction, party, or set, but I do not tainly wrong. [The following examples illustrate Shakespeare.] tFor the not punishing this fact (almost)

The tribe of Benjamin were slaine and lost.
Taylor's Workes, 1630.
†And thus to her sad sister do'h she say;
(Cheere in her cheeks, her fact hid in her face.)
Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

Pack is cer-

+FACTOTUM. This word has taken the place of the older phrase dominus fac totum.

He was so farre the dominus fac tolum in this juncto that his words were laws, all things being acted according to his desire.

Foulis' Hist. of Plots of our Pretended Saints, 2d edit., 1674.

We spoil all, if we forget Robert Passellew, who was dominus fac tolum in the middle—and fac nikil towards the end—of the reign of Henry 111.

Ibid. p. 278.

Ibid., p. 278. Before the pope had a great house there, and became dominus factolum, dominus Beus noster Papa.

Head of Nile, 1681, p. 41.

+FACULTIES. Chapman uses this word for the properties of inanimate objects. Thus (Il., i, 234) speaking of the sceptre of Achilles, he says,

And had his faculties
And ornaments bereft with iron. †FACUNDITY. Eloquence.

Upon my facundity, an elegant construction by the fool. So, I am cedunt arma toges.

Brome's Queen and Concubine, 1659.

To FADGE. To suit, to fit. This was perhaps never any better than a low word, and as such is hardly obsolete yet. Etymologists derive it from the Saxon.

How will this fadge? my master loves her dearly, And I, poor monster, fond as much on him. Twel. N., ii, 2.

We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. 1 besecch you follow. In good sooth, sir, this match fadged him.

Promote Case, part i, v, 6.

With flattery my muse could never fadge.

Drayt. Eclog., 3, p. 1398.

I am one of those, whose opinion is, that 'livine pocaie doth never fadge so well—as in a youthful, wanton, and unbridled_subject.

Florio, Transl. of Montaigns, b. i, ch. 28. †A beggar, quoth you, this ware begines to fadge.

Mariage of Witt and Wisdome, p. 50. It was hardly obsolete at the end of the seventeenth century.

tWell, sir, how fadges the new design? have you not the luck of all your brother projectors, to decrive only your self at last. Wyckerley, Country Wife, 1888. FADING. The name of an Irish dance, and a common burden for a song. In the Irish Masque performed before James I at court, an Irishman says, BRITISH THAN SAYS,

But tish marriage bring over a doshen of our bealt mayshters to be merry, perht tee shweet faish, ant be;
and daunsh a fading at te wedding.

B. Jons. Works, vol. v, p. 421.

George, I will have him dance fading; fading is a fine jig, I'll assure you, gentlemen.

B. & F. E. Knight of B. Pestle, iv, 1.

So Jonson:

D JONSON:
See you youd motion? not the old fading,
Nor captain Pod, nor yet the Eltham thing, Epigr., 97. It is used as the burden of a song, in

the following passage:

Not one amongst a hundred will fall,
But under her coats the ball will be found,
With a fading, &c.
Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 262.

And is so mentioned in the Winter's Tale, iv, 3. Mr. Gifford thinks that both the song and the dance were naught.

+FAGARIES. Apparently the name of a dance, vagaries.

She was stark mad for that young fellow Paris, And after him she dane'd the new fagaries. Orid Travestie, 1681, p. 25.

+FAGGOT-STICK. A staff.

Brave Bragadocia whom the world doth threaten, Was lately with a fuggot-sticke sore beaten. Taylor's Workes, 1630. †FAGGOT-WASTED. Arranged in pleats like a bundle of faggots? Their dublettes sometyme fuggot-wasted above the navill, sometymes cowe-beallied belowe the flanckes.

Riche, Farew. to Militarie Prof., 1501.

FAGIOLI. French beans. The Italian name for that vegetable. The old English name was kidney beans (see Gerrard); but when they came as an Italian dish they were called fayioli, when among French cookery French

He doth learn to make strange sauces, to eat anchovies, macaroni, bovoli, fagioli, caviare.

B. Jons. Cynthia's Rer., ii, 1.

Bovoli, in the same place, means periwinkles, or snails.

FAIL, s. Failure.

Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd From thy great fail. Mark, and perform it, (see'st thou?) for the fail Of any point in 't shell, &c. Wist. T., ii, S. And again:

What dangers by his highness' fail of issue
May drop upon his kingdom.

Ibid., v, 1. We still say without fail, but in the other senses it is not used.

FAIN, adj. Glad. This word is still used in some phrases, but not simply, as in the following:

s in the following:
Yes, man and birds are fairs of climbing high.
9 Hen. VI, ii, 1. Ah York, no man alive so fais as I. Fid., iii, 1. And in her hand she held a mirrhour bright, Wherein her face she often viewed fais.

Spens. F. Q., 1, iv, 10.

For the other senses of fain, see Todd's Johnson.

FAIR, s. Fairness, beauty. Very common with Elizabethan authors.

My decayed fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair. Com. B., ii, 1.

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air Lurk'd like two thieves to rob him of his fair. Sh. Fenns & Adonis, Suppl., i, 458. See also his 18th Sonnet.

Then tell me, love, shall I have all thy fair?

George a Greene, O. Pl., iii, 15.

The lovely lillie, that faire flower for beautic past compare,

Whom winter's cold keene breath hath kill'd and blasted all her fairs.

Mirror for Mag., Ind. to Winter's N., p. 556.

Some well I wot, and of that some full many, Wisht or my fairs or their desire were lesse.

Lodge's Glaucus and Silla. These, and many other instances which might be produced, prove that fair, which was the reading of the old copies in the following passages, ought not to be changed.

Demetrius loves your fair, O happy fair.

Mids. N. Dr., i, 1.

And,

Let no face be kept in mind, But the fair of Rosalind. As you l. it, iii, 2. Some modern editors in the former place substituted "you fair," and in the latter "the face."

To FAIR. To make fair, or beautiful.

FAIL. 10 means and, nature's power, Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face, Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy hour.

Sh. Sonnet, 127.

FAIRY-CIRCLES. Certain green circles, frequently visible on short grass, and supposed to have been made by the dancing of fairies. In reality, formed by the growth of a particular fungus.

Ye demy-puppets, that

By monlight do the green sour ringlets make,
Whereof the ewe not bites.

Near to this wood there lay a pleasant mead,
Where fairies often did their measures tread,
Which in the meadows made such circles greene,
As if with garlands it had crowned beene.

Recomer's Rif! Park I iii. Browne's Brit. Past., I, ii, p. 41.

To FAITH. To give credit to. Peculiar to this passage:

Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee,
Make thy words faith'd?

FAITHFUL. One of the popular terms for a drunkard.

OF a UTILIABLE.

"This fellow is one of the faithfull, as they prophanelle terme him," said Opinion; "no Heliogabalus at meat, but he will drinke many degrees beyond a Dutchman.

The Man in the Moone, 1809.

FAITOR. A malefactor, a traitor: literally only a doer. Faiteur, Fr. Down, down, dogs! down, faitors!

2 Hen. IV, ii, 4. Into new woes unweeting I was cast
By this false faylor. Spens. P. Q., I, iv, 47.
A false infamous failour lute betell
Me for to meet. Ibid., IL i. 30.

FALCON. A species of cannon. Having names given them, some from serpents, and ravenous birds, as culverines or colubrines, serpentines, basilisques, faulcons, sacres, &c.

Camdon, Rom., p. 208. To FALL, active. To strike down. or let fall. Dr. Johnson has not noted this sense as obsolete, but it is so.

The common executioner

Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But first begs pardon.

As you l. it, iii, b.

Aye, but you l.

Let us be keen, and rather cut a little,
Than fall and bruise to death.

Meas. for M., ii, l.

Which explains the following passage: Infect her beauty

You fen suck'd fogs, drawn by the pow rful sun To fall and blast her pride.

Lear, That is, "Drawn by the sun in order to beat down and blast her pride." This usage was not uncommon. See Johnson.

Johnson.

†FALL TO. To begin anythment of the little boy his dinner drew,
And gave it the old man,
Saying, Dear father, pray fall to,
Eat heartily, if you can.

The Fryer and the Boy, let part.

of dress, now usually called a vandyke; it fell flat upon the dress from the neck, and succeeded the stiff ruffs. It seems that at one time both were worn together. Bellafront says, So, poke my ruff now. My gown, my gown! have I my fall, where's my fall, Roger? O. Pl., iii, 281. So also,

Nay, he doth weare an embleme bout his neck; For under that favre ruffe so sprucely set Appeares a fall, a falling-band, forsooth!

Marston, Sat, iii, p. 148.

Why Women wear a Pall.
A question 'tis why women wear a fall?
The truth on't is, to pride they're given all,
And pride, the proverb says, will have a full.

Wills Recreat., Epigr. 246. Why Women wear a Fall

Evelyn says, "This new mode succeeded the cumbersome ruff; but neither did the bishops or judges give it over soon, the lord keeper Finch being, I think, the very first." Disc. on Medals, p. 108. There is also a passage in the works of Taylor the +FAMILIAR. The assistant of a magiwater poet, which says that the falling band preceded the ruff. P. 108. It certainly followed too.

CETTAINIY IOHOWEU LOO.

And, do you hear? you must wear falling bands, you must come into the falling fashion; there's such a deal of pinning these ruffs, when the fine clean fall is worth all; and again, if you should chance to take a nap in the afternoon, your falling band requires no point stick to recover its form: believe me, no fashion to the falling band, I say.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 99.

Yet a passage is quoted where a woman is said to have Sat with her poking stick, stiffening a fall.

Laugh and lie down.

It is sometimes called "The French fall." O. Pl., iv, 423.

tOnely Morizet's ingenuity furnish'd him with the invention to put his handkerchief about his neck, which serr'd instead of a falling band.

Comicall flut. of Francion, 1855.

To FALSE. To falsify, to betray.

She fals'd her faith, and brake her wedlock's band.

Edw. IF, 1626, sign. F 1.

Whom prince's late displeasure left in bands

For falsed letters and suborned wyle.

Spens. F. Q., II, i, 1.

It was probably intended to be used as a verb in the following passage; the adjective will make sense, but not so clearly:

Tis gold
Which buys admittance; off it doth; yea, and makes Diana's rangers false themselves. Cymb., ii, 3.
FALSE-BRAY. A term in fortification, exactly from the French fausse-braie, which means, say the dictionaries, a counter-breast-work, or, in fact, a mound thrown up to mask some part of the works.

And made those strange approaches by false-brays, Reduits, half-moons, horn-works, and such close ways. B. Jons. Underwoods, p. 446, Wh. See BRAY.

†To FALSIFY. To betray.

But assoone as he had got them within his reach, he falsified his faith.

Knoller's Hist. of the Tarks. To FAMBLE is a word acknowledged by most of the old dictionaries, for to stammer. Coles has it: "To famble in one's speech, in sermone hæsitare.' But I have not met with it in other authors.

FAMBLES, in the old cant language of the beggars, meant hands. See Beggar's Bush, ii, 1; and O. Pl., vi, 110. "Famble-cheats, rings or gloves." Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary, 1694.] † To FAME. To give fame to.

Here then receive this one worke, royall James,
Which now reflects upon thee, and more fames
This church and kingdom, then thy birth, crown, pen,
Or what else makes thee the good king of men.

Scots Philomythis, 1616.

Cian.

O, if in magick you have skill so rare,
Vouchsale to make me your familier.

Colgrave's Wits Interpreter, 1671, p. 160.

As often as Francion did propound any thing unto him, he would turn himself towards one of the most faithfull of all his grooms, and would say unto him, Guerin, Guerin, surely this man is a femiliar.

FAMILY OF LOVE. A fanatical sect, founded by one David George, of Delph, in Holland. He died Aug. 2d, 1556, and his tenets are supposed to have been first received into England about 1580. His followers were called Familists, or of the Family of Love, from the affection they bore to all people, however wicked, and their obedience to all magistrates, however tyrannical. See Ross's View of all Religions, p. 256, ed. 6.

Almost of all religions i' the land, as papist, protestant, puritan, Brownist, anabaptist, millenary, family o' love, Jew, &c.

Eastward Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 284. Kersey has the word familists.

To FAMOUS. To make famous, to celebrate.

celebrate.

To famouse that house that never hath been found without men approved in chivalry.

Esphace, Golden Legacy, B 4.

The haleyon famoused

For colours rare, and for the peacefull seas

Round the Sicilian coast, her brooding dayes.

Browne, Brit. Past., II, i, p. 33.

The painfull warrior famoused for worth.

Shakesp. Sonnet, 25.

Hither did those cares and ships, so famoused through the whole world, and praised by the verses of all ages, bend their course.

Denu steir course.

Coryst, Oration in praise of Travell [m 7], vol. i.

†What age wil not prayse immortal air Philip Sider, whom noble Salustius (that thries airgular French poet) hath famousod.

Nath, Pierce Panitese, 1892.

FAN. The fan of our ancestors was not at all in the shape of the implement now used under the same name, but more like a hand-screen. It had a roundish handle, and was frequently composed of feathers.

The feathers of their (the ostriches) wings and tailes, but especially of their tailes, are very soft and fine; in respect whereof they are much used in the feases of centlewomen.

Coryst, vol. i, p. 40.

The handles were often silver:

While one piece pays her idle waiting-man, Or buys a hood or silver-handled fan. Hall's Satires, v, 4. It appears that these fans were sometimes very costly, the handles being of gold, silver, or ivory inlaid; sometimes as much as 40l. in value.

Nichols's Progress of Eliz., vol. ii. Churchyard's Acc., p. 53.

Hence they were an object of plunder:
And when Mrs. Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.
Merr. W. W., ii, 2.

295

Mrs. Bridget's handle apparently produced half a crown, for Pistol immediately asks,

Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Four of these fans are delineated in the notes on this passage, from Titian, and other ancient designs, in Johnson and Steevens's edition.

The feathers of these fans are very frequently mentioned:

For a garter
For the least feather in her bounteous fes B. Jons. Cynthia's Rev., iii, 4.
Ravish a feather from a mistress' fan,
And wear it as a favour.

Mass. Bondm., i, 1.

See Harr. Epig., i, 70. It was a piece of state for a servant to attend, on purpose to carry the lady's fan when she walked out: this was one of the offices of her gentleman The Nurse in Romeo and Juliet affects this dignity. Act ii, sc. 4. The mistress must have one to carry her cloake and hood, another her fanne. Servingman's Comfort, 1598. It appears that men were sometimes effeminate enough to use such a fan. Phantastes, a male character, is so equipped in the old play of Lingua; and Greene reproaches the men of his day for wearing plumes of feathers in their hands, which in wars their ancestors were on their heads. Farewell to Folly. Looking-glasses were sometimes set in these fans, in the broad part, above the handle, near the setting on of the feathers:

In this glasse you shall see, that the glasses which you carry in your fans of feathers, shew you to be lighter than feathers.

Euph. Engl., F f 1. Lovelace addressed a copy of verses to his mistress's fan, which he describes as made of ostrich's feathers dyed sky-blue, with a looking glass set in it:

A crystal mirror sparkles in thy breast.

Poems, p. 84. Corvat very awkwardly describes Italian fans, which, as far as can be collected from his account, seem to have been such as are now in use, but were quite new to him:

Here will I mention a thing, that although perhaps it will seem but frivolous to divers readers that have already travelled in Italy, yet because unto many that neither have beene there, nor ever intend to go thither while they live, it will be a meere novelty, I will not let it passe unmentioned. The first Italian fannes that I saw in Italy did I observe in this space, betwit Piziphiton and Cremona. But afterward I observed them common in most places of Italy where I travelled. These fannes both men and women of the country doe carry to coole themselves withall in the time of heate, by the often fauning of their faces. Most of them are very elegant and pretty things. For whereas the fanne consistent of a painted peece of paper and a little wooden handle; the paper which is fastened into the top is on both sides most curiously adorned with excellent pictures, either of amorous things tending to delliance, having some wity Italian adorned with excellent pictures, either of amorous things tending to dalliance, having some witty Italian verses, or fine emblems written under them; or of some notable italian city, with a brief description thereof added thereunto. These fannes are of a meane price. For a man may buy one of the fairest of them for so much money as countervalieth our English groate.

Crudities, vol. i, p. 134.

He then proceeds to speak of umbrellas

The ladies of ancient Rome used fans made of feathers, like those above described as worn by the English ladies. Propertius speaks of Pavonis caude flabella superbee. El., II, xxiv, 11. FANCIES. A name for a sort of light ballads, or airs.

And sung those tunes to the over-scutcht huswives, that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies, or his goodnights. 2 Hen. IF, iii, 2. One part of the collection called Wit's Recreations, is entitled, "Fancies and Another publication Fantastics. gives us, "Wits, Fits, and Fancies." FANCY, s. Used for love, as depending much on fancy.

Fair Helena in fancy following me. Mids. N. D., iv, 1. In Troilus and Cressida we have it as a verb :

Never did young man fancy With so eternal and so fix'd a soul. We may observe, therefore, that the famous passage supposed to delineate queen Elizabeth,

In maiden meditation, fancy-free,
Mids. N. D., ii, 2. means, "free from the attacks of love."

† To FANCY. To imagine.

Hav. I fancy'd you a beating; you must have it.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651. An irregular preterite of find, for found. It was very common with the Elizabethan poets.

At last, (nigh tir'd,) a castle strong we fand,
The utmost border of my native land.
Fairf. Tasso, iv, 55. We conquer'd all the realme my focs we fand,
Which were in armes stout, valiant, noble wights.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 94. The author means, "All whom we found my foes." Spenser used it also. Dr. Jamieson shows that it is also Scotch.

To FANG. To tear or seize, with teeth or fangs.

Destruction fang mankind! earth yield me roots!

Timon of Alh., iv. 3.

So Decker:

Bite any catchpole that fangs for you.

Match me a Lord.

FANGLE. Trifle, or toy; trifling attempt. From the Saxon. See Johnson.

What fangle now thy thronged quests to winne.
To get more roome, laith, goe to lune and lune.
Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 230.
A hatred to fangles and the French fooleries of his time.
Wood's Athena, II, col. 456.

FANGLED, part. Trifling.

A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers.

Sh. Co Nobler than that it covers. Sh. Cym., v, 4. Hence new-fangled, which is still in use, means properly, fond of new toys or trifles.

+FANKIT. Sheathed or confined?

Brave Parry rais'd his fashit sword, And fell'd the foremost to the ground. The Death of Parry Reed, a ballad. TASTICALITY. The character +FANTASTICALITY. of being fantastic.

Which in mocking sort described unto Fido the fan-tasticality or each man's apparell, and apinhnesse of gesture.

The Man in the Moone, 1609.

FANTASTICO. A fantastical, coxcombical man. Ital. This is the word of the old editions, which had been changed without reason.

The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents. Rom. & Jul., ii, 4. I have revelled with kings, danc'd with queens, dallied with ladies, worn strange attires, seen fantasticos, convers'd with humorists.

Decker's Old Fortunatus, Anc. Dr., iii, 148. FAP seems by the context to mean drunk, but has yet not been fully traced. It was probably a cant term.
Why, sir, for my part I say the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five senses—and being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashier d.

Mor. W. J. 1. It has been attempted to derive it from vappa, but that, as Mr. Douce observes, is too learned. I have not met with it in any Glossary.

To FARCE. To stuff. Furcer, Fr. The entertissued robe of gold and pearl,
The farsed title running fore the king.

Hen. V, iv, 1.

Farced means there pompous or swelling.

And with our broth, and bread, and bits, sir Friend,

And with our broth, and bread, and one, see Kirking, Yave farced well; pray make an end.

Herrick's Works, p. 169.

What broken piece of matter so e'er she's about, the name of Palamon lards it, so that she farces every business withal, fits it to every question.

Two Noble Kirken, iv, 3.

Farcing his letter with like fustian, calling his own court our most happy and shining port, a port of refuge for the world.

Sandys' Travels, p. 47. It is tarced with fables, visions, legends, and relations

†These might well farce and cram their maves with far more aliment, because their ventricles, cels, veines, and other organs of their bodies were farre more ample and spatious. Optick Glasse of Humors, 1839.

†To FARD. To paint the face.
That I assure you I thought they would have fleved me to search betweene the fel and the flesh for fardinas. Gascoigne's Works, 1887.

dings. Gascongus s who bare a rock in steed of royall mace, And for a man with woman changeth grace In gestures all; he frisles and he fards, He oynts, he bathes, his visage he regards

He oynts, he bathes, his vissage as Incrystall glasse. Her husband having been now three or four years beyond the seas (sick with absence from her whom his desires longed after), come over again, and found that beauty, which he had left innocent, so furded and sophisticated with some court drug which had wrought upon her, that he became the greatest stranger at home.

Witson's History of James 1.

FARDEL, or FARTHEL. A burden. Fardellus, low Latin; from which, probably, the Italian fardello, the French fardeau, and the Dutch fardeel.

There is that in his farthel will make him scratch his beard.

d. West. Who would fardels bear, To groan and sweat under a weary life?

Other men's sins we ever beare in mind, None sees the fardel of his faults behind. Herrick's Poems, p. 296.

To FARDEL, or FARDLE. To pack up. From the noun.

For she had got a pretty handsome pack, Which she had fardled neatly at her back. Drayton, Nymphal., 7, p. 1500. To FARE. To proceed.

At last resolving forward still to fare.

Spens. F. Q., 1, i, 11.
One knocked at the door, and in would fare,

Bid., I, iii, 16.

[To behave.]

†His bottles gone, stil stands he strangely faring, Hands heav'd, necke bent, mouth yawning, cies broad staring. Heywood's Trois Britanics.

FARLIES. Strangethings. From faerlic, strange, Saxon. Ferly is in Chaucer, C. T., 4171, and in Gavin Douglas. Whilst thus himself to please, the mighty mountain

Such farlies of his Cluyd, and of his wondrous wells.

Drayt. Polyolo., 10, p. 847.

It occurs in the old metrical version of the Ten Commandments, by William Wisdom, as an adjective.

Attend my people and give care,
Of ferly things I will thee tell.

Ps. by Sternh. & Hop.

Minshew erroneously supposes it to be made from yorely. See Lye's Junius, where it is abundantly illustrated from the Scottish dialect. Ferly occurs also in Percy's Reliques, vol.

+FARTHING. See THREE-FARTHINGS. FASHIONS. Corrupted from farcins, Fr. for the farcy, a disease to which horses are subject.

Troubled with the lampass; infected with the fashions.

Tam. Shr., iii, 2.

Pashions was then counted a disease, and horses died of it.

Decker's Gul's Horn-book.

Sh. What shall we learn by travel?

An. Fashions.

Sh. That's a beastly disease.

Old Portunatus, 1600; Anc. Dr., iii, 158. A song on the various modes of dress concludes with the same bad pun:

Thus are we become As apes of Rome,
Of France, Spain, and all nations;
And not horses alone, But men are grown Diseased of the fashions. Acad. of Compl., 1713, p. 218.

+FAST. Tenacious, retentive.

Rose, damask and red, are fast flowers of their smells, so that you may walk by a whole row of them, and nothing of their sweetness, yea, though it bee in a morning's dew.

Bacon, Essey xlvi.

FAST AND LOOSE. A cheating game, whereby gipsies and other vagrants beguiled the common people of their money. It is said to be still used by low sharpers, and is called pricking at the belt or girdle. It is thus described:

A leathern belt is made up into a number of intricate folds, and placed edgewise upon a table. One of the folds is made to resemble the middle of the girdle, so that whoever should thrust a skewer into it would think he held it fast to the table; whereas, when he has so done, the person with whom he plays may take hold of both ends and draw it away. Sir J. Hawkins. The drift of it was, to encourage wagers whether it was fast or loose, which the juggler could make it at his option.

Like a right gipsey, hath, at fast and loose, Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.

Charles the Egyptian, who by juggling could Make fast or loose, or whatsoe'er he would.

An old Epigr, quoted by Mr. Steevens.

In Promos and Cassandra, part i, the hangman says,

At fast and loose with my Giptian I mean to have a Tenne to one I read his fortune by the Marymas fast.

Act ii. ac. 5. He like a gypsy oftentimes would go,
All kinds of gibberish he hath learn'd to know;
And with a stick, a short string, and a noose,
Would show the people tricks at fast and loose.

Drayton's Mooncalf, p. 560.

To this piece of the sharper's trade Falstaff means to recommend Pistol, when he says,

Go-a short knife and a thong,—to your manor of Pickt-hatch—go.

Merr. W. W., ii, 2. In Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, ch. xxix, p. 336, is described the manner of playing at fast and loose | To FAULT. To commit a fault.

with handkerchiefs. The phrase is not yet disused, but its origin is unknown to many.

+FATAL. Decreed by fate.

With which the slaughter makes

Of armies fatal to his wrath.

Chapm. Il., viii, 344; Conf., ix, 241.

ATHER. In Kent, says Howell, +FATHER. they have a proverb touching gavelkind.

The father to the bough,

The son to the plough.

FATIGATE. Fatigued, wearied. Then straight his double spirit
Requicken'd what in ficah was fatigate,
And to the battle came he.

Cor., ii, 3.

+FAUCHIN. A faulchion, or sabre.

Having (as I said) boarded our ship, hee entred on the larbord quarter, where his men, some with sabels which we call funchins, some with hatchets, and some with halfe pikes. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

FAVELL. Favour. This corruption seems only to have existed in the one phrase to curry farell. Now changed to curry favour. [It is a good old word.] Whereunto were joined also the hard speeches of her pickthanke favourits, who to curry favell, spared not, &c. Knowles, Hist. of Twrks, p. 108. But if such moderation of words tend to flattery or soothing, or excusing, it is by the figure paradiastole, which therefore, nothing improperly we call the curry-favell, as when we make the best of a bad thing, or turne a signification to the more plausible sence.

Puttenham, Art of Poeris, p. 154.
Yet sometimes a creeper and a curry-favell with his superiors.

This phrase has been traced to Chaucer, and has been fully discussed by Mr. Douce in his Illustrations of Sh., i, 474. Favel being a name for a yellow (or light bay) horse, and joined with curry, he supposes it derived from the stable. But it was originally fabel, so there is still some doubt as to its origin. [Understood to be from Lat. fabula.] To curry favell, as derived from the stable, could only mean to curry a favorite horse of that colour. But why not to curry a Bayard, or any other coloured favorite?

tWere I oute of my hermyte wede,
Off thy favyll I wold not dred.

MS. Askmole, 61, xv cent.

+FAULT. At a fault, i. e. not as it ought to be; deficient.

A courtiers man came to queene Isabels harbinger, and tolde him that the chamber which he assign'd his maister was much at a fast; with that the harbinger pointing him to a gibbet that stood before the court-gate, answered: If your masters chamber be at a fault, see yonder wher stands a gibbet.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Funcies, 1614.

298 If shee find fault,
I mend that fault; and then shee saies I faulted
That I did mend it. B. Jons. Every Man out of H., ii, 4. He that faulteth, faulteth against God's ordinance, who hath forbidden all faults. Holinsh., vol. ii, K k k k 7.
So deeply faulteth none, the which unwares
Doth fall into the crime he cannot shun. Gasc. Works, F 8. +FAULTER. One who commits a fault.
Oh for some few offenders do not blame
All of their sex; let not a general shame
For some few faulters their whole brood inherit,
But every one be censured as they merit.
Ovid de Arte Amandi, 1677, p. 64. FAVOUR. Look, countenance. For surely, sir, a good favour you have, save that you have a hanging look.

Meas. for M., iv, 2. have a hanging look.

But there's no goodness in thy face; If Antony
Be free and healthful,—so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings.

Ant. 3. Cleo., ii, 5. A tart favour, is a sour countenance. See Todd, Favour, 9. Appearance in general: And she had a filly too that waited on her,
Just with such a favour. B. 3: Fl. Pilgrim, v, 6.
†1 well remember once I kissed Venus
In Paphos ile, but I forgett her favour.

The Play of Timon, p. 24. To FAVOUR. To resemble, to have a similar countenance or appearance. And the complexion of the element, lt fasours like the work we have in hand. Good faith, methinks that this young lord Chamont Favours my mother, sister, doth he not?

B. Jons. Case is alter'd, iii, 1. The mother had been dead some time. Apparently, for coarse, clumsy, &c. It is explained by Kersey as a substantive, meaning a sort of large eel. All of which were fausen sluts, like Bartholomew-fair pig-dressers.

Gayton, Festiv. Notes, p. 57. Mr. Todd quotes Chapman for it, in the sense given by Kersey:

He left the waves to wash
The wave-sprung entrails, about which fausens and other fish Did shole. Transl. of Iliad [xxi, 190]. FAUTORS. Abettors, supporters. Lat. Lewes the Frenche kinges sonne, with all his fau-tours and complices.

Her fautors banish'd by her foes so high.

Drayt. Mooncalf, p. 489. It is rather an unusual than an obsolete word, being used in later times. [It is commonly used in Chapman's Homer for a patron or protector.] +FAWKNER. A falconer. Now negligent of sport I ly, And now as other fawkners use Donne's Poems, p. 45.

+FAWTING. Favouring.

my fay.

They turne away their friendly familing eye, And others cache as fixed locs defie.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1587.

FAY. Faith. Usually as an oath, by These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

Tam. Shrew, Induct, 2

Ah sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;
I'll to my rest.

Rom. and Jul., i, 5. I'll to my rest.

Shall we to the court, for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Haml., ii, 2. Spenser, however, has used it without that connection: From her unto the miscreant himselfe. From her unto the miscream.

That neither hath religion nor fay.

P. Q., V, vii, 19. YLES. A kind of game at tables.

He's no precisian, that I'm certain of,
Nor rigid Roman Catholic. He'll play
At fayles and tick-tack; I have heard him swear.

B. Jons. Every Man in H., iii, S. FAYLES. Mr. Douce has thus explained it from a MS. in the British Museum: It is a very old table game, and one of the numerous varieties of back-gammon that were formerly used in varieties of back-gammon that were formerly used in this country. It was played with three dice, and the usual number of men or pieces. The peculiarity of the game depended on the mode of first placing the men on the points. If one of the players threw some particular throw of the dice, he was disabled from bearing off any of his men, and therefore fayled in winning the game; and hence the appellation of it. In Mr. Gifford's note on the above passage of Jonson it is said: "It was a kind of tric-trac, which was meant by tick-tack in the same passage." Mr. Douce refers also to the English translation of Rabelais. Strutt mentions it, and refers to the same MS.. but gives no particulars. Sports and Pastimes, p. 283. FEAKE. A word of which I have met with no example but this: Can set his face, and with his eye can speake, And dally with his mistres' dangling feake, And wish that he were it, to kisse her eye, And flare about her beauties deitie. Marston, Sat., 1, repr., p. 138. So it is also in the original edition. The context seems to point to the hanging curl called a lovelock. or some part of the head-dress. [It is here used in a different sense.] †Three female idle feaks who long'd for pigs head.

Bold's Poems, 1664, p. 134. To FEAR, v. a. To terrify, to frighten.
We must not make a scare-crow of the law, We must not make a scare-crow or the Setting it up to fear the birds of prey.

Meas. for M., ii, l. I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine Hath fear'd the valiant. Merch. of F., i
And frame my steps to unfrequented paths,
And fear my heart with fierce unfamed thoughts. Merch. of V., ii, 1. Spanisk Trag., O. Pl., iii, 161.
Art not asham'd that any flesh should fear thee?

Mad World, O. Pl., v, 381. FEARE-BABES, .. A vain terror, a bugbear, fit only to terrify children. From the above sense of to fear. As for their shewes and words, they are but fear-bobes, not worthy once to move a worthy man's con-ceit.

Pembr. Arc., p. 299. FEARFUL. Dreadful, causing fear.

A mighty and a fearful head they are. 1 Hen. IV, iii, 2. My queen

My queen
Upon a desperate bed; and at a time
When fearful wars point at me. Cy
Now like great Phœbus in his golden carre,
And then like Mars the fearful god of warre. Cymb., iv, 3.

Drayton's Matilda. But we must not give it this sense, as some commentators have, in the Tempest, where Miranda says of Ferdinand, "He's gentle, and not fearful." i, 2. Dr. Johnson's explanation is certainly best: "As he is gentle, rough usage is unnecessary; and as he is brave, it may be dangerous." This connects it with the preceding words, "make not too rash a trial of him."

+FEARFUL. Full of fear: timid. For on their left hand did an eagle soar,

And in her seres a fearful pigeon bore.

Chapm. Odyss., xx. FEARLE. Perhaps wonder, from the same origin as farlie.

Ry just descent these two my parents were,
Of which the one of knighthood bare the fearle,
Of womanbood the other was the pearle.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 273.

FEASTINGS EVEN. This obsolete term for Shrove Tuesday evening was perhaps peculiar to North Britain, as we find it only in an account of Scotland, and there explained in the margin.

The cattle of Roxburgh was taken by sir James

The cattle or revisions.

Dowglas on Feastings even.

Holinsh. Hist. of Scott., sign. U.5. The feasting of that season much scandalised the worthy Bourne. See Popular Antiq., last octavo ed.. p. 232.

FEAT. Neat, dexterous, elegant. From the Fr. fait.

r. fatt.
So tender over his occasions, true,
Cymb., v, 5 So feat, so nurselike. Cymb., v, 5 And look how well my garments sit upon me, Much feater than before. Temp., ii, 1.

Defined by Barrett, "proper, well-fashioned, minikin, handsome." Alvearie, in loc.

Used by Steele in the Tatler:

In his dress there seemed to be great care to appear no way particular, except in a certain exact and feat manner of behaviour and circumspection.

No. 48, p. 428, Nich. ed.

To FEAT. To make neat, &c. A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that feated them. Cymb., i, 1.

This word not being understood, the modern editions in general read featured, till lately.

+FEATHER-COCK. A coxcomb.

I both know and well discerne your humour and genius; thou wouldest make me one of Diomedes or Antiphanes scholler, in imitating of these Gaminedes, Antiphanes scholer, in inhacing of these Galinedes, finicall, spruce-ones, muskats, syrenists, feathercockes, vaineglorious, a cage for crickits.

Passenger of Benzenuto, 1613.

FEATHER-MAKERS. Feathers were much worn by gentlemen in their hats, by ladies in their fans, &c., so that a plume of feathers is used as a phrase for a beau. Love's L. L., iv, The manufacturers of these commodities for sale were chiefly puritans. and lived in Blackfriars. See BLACK-FRIARS.

FRIARS.

Now there was nothing left for me, that I could presently think of, but a feathermaker of Black-friars, and in that shape I told them surely I must come in, let it be opened unto me; but they all made as light of me as of my feather, and wondered how I could be a purifas, being of so vain a vocation.

B. Jons. Masque of Love Restored, vol. v, p. 404.

All the new gowns i'th' parish will not please her, If she be high-bred, (for there's the sport she aims at)

Nor all the dether in the Fewer.

Nor all the feathers in the Fryars.

B. and F. Mons. Thomas, ii, 2.

FEATLY. Neatly, dexterously, &c.
Foot it feetly here and there. Trop., i, 2.
FEATURE is said, in a note on As you like it, iii, 3, to be synonymous with feat, or action. I do not recollect any instances of that usage; and the passage may as well be explained, by supposing only that the word feature is too learned for the comprehension of the simple Audrey.

Am I the man yet? doth my simple feature content your

And. Your features! Lord warrant us, what features?

Feature is sometimes used for form. or person in general: Rid him

Report the feature of Octavia. Ant. and Co. She also doft her heavy haberjeon,
Which the fair feature of her limbs did hide. Ant. and Cl., ii, 5.

As a magical appearance: Stay, all our charms do nothing win
Upon the night; our labour dies!
Our magick feature will not rise.
B. Jons. Masque of Queens.

On the preceding charm Jonson's own note says,

Here they speake as if they were creating some new frature, which the devil persuades them to be able to do often, by the pronouncing of words, and pouring out of liquors on the earth.

4th Ukarme.

FEAZE. See PHEEZE.

To FEAZE. To cause. Faiser, Fr.

Those eager impes whom food-want feat'd to fight amaine. Mirror for Magist., p. 480.

FEDERARY. An accomplice, or confederate.

More, she's a traitor, and Camillo is

A federary with her.

Wint. T., ii, 1. See FEODARY.

+FEDIFRAGOUS. Breaking treaties. And let great Jove heare thus, whose thunders great
Do truces tie, fright the fedifragous.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

FEE. A regular salary. From feof.

Gives him threescore thousand crowns in annual fee.

Two liveries will I give thee every year,
And forty crowns shall be thy fee.

George a Greene, O. Pl., iii, 47.

+FEE-BUCK.

Pyl. You rate your looks, perhaps, have faces of All prizes, pay your debts with countenance; Put off your mercer with your fee-buck for That season, and so forth. Cartwright's Siedge, 1651.

FEE-GRIEF. A private grief, appropriated to some single person as a fee or salary. Apparently an arbitrary compound.

What, concern they
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some private breast?

Macb., iv. 3.

To FEEBLE. To weaken: we now say to enfeeble.

Shall that victorious hand be feebled here, That in your chambers gave you chastisement? K. John. v. 2.

Making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking
Below their cobbled shoes.
An old man feebled with age.

North's Plut., p. 571.

FEEDER. A servant. It was much disputed, between Mr. Steevens and Mr. Malone, whether this sense should or should not be given to the word, in one or two passages of Steevens maintained Shakespeare. the affirmative; Malone doubted. I think the former was right. In the first passage, Antony says, in a rage, to Cleopatra, on her having suffered Thyreus to kiss her hand,

You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd at Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of woman, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders?

He means, "Have I done all this, to be abused by a woman that stoops to look on feeders?" The feeder, therefore, must be Thyreus, whom, in his anger, he represents as a menial servant of Cæsar's. "This Jack of Cæsar's," he calls him; and, afterwards, one who "ties Cæsar's points." In the other passage, the Steward tells Timon that he has often retired to weep,

When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders. Timon of A., ii, S. That is, he has retired from the offices, where the servants were rioting, when the rooms above also blazed with lights, and rang with minstrelsy, as he proceeds to say. But for the connection of the sentence, feeders might here well mean eaters, gormandizers; but the context fixes the sense, which is, therefore, well illustrated by the passage of Jonson, where Morose calls his servants "eaters." We may add, that the very same seems to be the meaning in another passage, where the speaker has already been promised wages.

If you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be. As you l. it, ii, 4. That is, your provider, your caterer. See Office.

FEEDING. Pasturage, tract of pasture land.

They call him Doricles, and he boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding.
Finding the feeding, for which he had toil'd
To have kept safe, by these vile cattle spoil'd.

Dray! Moncelf, p. 512.

So much that do rely
Upon their feedings, flocks, and their fertility.

Ibid., Polyals., Song 6.

FEERE. See FERE.

+FEESE. The short run before a leap. And giving way backward, fetch their feese or beire againe, and with a fierce charge and assault to returne full butt upon the same that they had knocked and beaten before.

Amsiansa Marcellians, 1609.

+FEGARY. A vagary. At last I tooke my latest leave, thus late At the Bell Inne, that's extra Aldersgate. There stood a horse that my provant should carrie,
From that place to the end of my f-garis.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To FEIZE, or FEEZE. See PHEEZE. +FELICITY. Good fortune; success.

And therefore in wicked and impious counsels which Cessar tooke to, there could be no felicie.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

FELL. The skin; generally with hair.

NAXOI.

Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells, you know, are greasy.

My fell of hair

Would at a diamal treatise rouse, and stir

As life were in t.

Macs., v, 5.

So "Flesh and fell," Lear, v, 3.

They are often joined.

To feed on bones, when flesh and fell is gone.

Gasc. Steet Gl., Chalm. Poet., ii, 556, b.

Lest if the cat be curst, and not tam'd well,

She with her nails may claw him to the fell.

Mirror for Mag., p. 283.

I thought they would have flayed me, to search betweene the fel and the flesh for fardings.

Gasc. Works, sign. D 8.

And where the lion's hide is thin and scant,

I'll firmly natch it with the force Gell.

I'll firmly patch it with the foxes fell.

Chapman's Alphoneus, sign. B 2.

Proverbial, to eke out the lion's hide with the fox's skin; i. e., to make up in cunning what is wanted in force or courage.

FELL. Ahill, or mountain. Supposed to be derived from the German, or Icelandic. In this sense it is used in Lancashire; but Drayton had a different idea of it, for he explains it, "Boggy places;" and adds, "a word frequent in Lancashire." Note on these lines:

Or happily be grac'd With floods, or marshy fells. Polyolb., 3, p. 707. Again:

As over holt and heath, as thorough frith and fell.

Ibid., 11, p. 862.

Mr. Todd has inadvertently quoted the following line as an instance of this sense, which belongs clearly to the other:

So may the first of all our fells be thine. Jons. Pan's Anniv. Masque. It means the first skin or fleece, i. e., a part of the first fruits, and mentioned with others, as promised to Pan. Jonson has it elsewhere, in the Masque of Gipsies. ELL'FFES. The felly, felloe, or cir-FELL'FFES. cumference of a wheel. Apparently contracted from felloffe.

In hope to hew out of his bole
The fell'fis, or out parts of a wheele, that compasse in the whole.

Chapm. Hom. Il, iv, p. 61. FELLON, or FELON. A boil, or whitlow. Where others love and praise my verses still,

Thy long black thumb-nail n arks them out for ill;
A fellon take it, or some whit-flaw come,
For to unslate or to untile that thumb.

Herrick, Works, p. 72.

Gerrard says,

The roots of asphodill, boiled in dregs of wine case the fellos, being put thereto as a pultesse. B. I, ch. 70.

He gives several other prescriptions for fellons. A learned physician says, The imposthumation which some do call panaricium, and we a fellow or ancome, is, &c.

Mosan's Physick, ch. i, p. 4, § 12.

†A little bay-salt stamped small, mixt with the yolk of an egg, and applied to a fellow, and so used divers times.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

FELLOW. Companion; even a female. I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid, to be your fellow
You may deny me.

To

So Jephthah's daughter desires to be allowed to go upon the mountains, she, "and her fellows." Judg., xi, And in the common translation of the Psalms,

The virgius that be her fellows shall bear her com-"The fellow with the great belly," spoken of by Falstaff, alluded probably to some particular object, then well known.

The youthful prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he is my dog. 2 Hen. IV, i, 2. The fellow seems sufficiently to mark such an allusion.

†A FELLOW OF HIMSELF, a felo de se. The following is one of a juror's duties to inquire at an inquest.

Item, whether he is a fellow of himself not having the feare of God before his eies, wilfully did drowne himself, yea or no; and then what goodes and cattell he had the same tyme.

MS. Stratford on 400s.

+FELLOWSHIP-PORTERS.

There is a very remarkable custom among the fellow-skip porters, as an ingenious person that belongs to their society informed me, which is thus: The next Sunday after every Midsummer-day, they have asermon preached to them, so order'd by an Act of Common-Councel, in the parish-church of St. Mary-on-the-hill, preparative to which, this order is observed, they furnish the merchants and their families about Billiusz-net with nonecays or posies over-night and in furnish the merchants and their families about Billings-gate with nosegays or posies over-night, and in the morning they go from their common hall, or place of meeting, in good order, each having a posie or nosegay in his hand; they walk through the middle isle to the communion-table, where are two basons, and every one offers something to the relief of the poor, and towards the charges of the day. After they have all past, the deputy, the merchants, their wives, children, and servants, do all come in order from their seats, and bestow their offerings also; which is a ceremony of much variety. I am certainly informed, that the very charges of their nosegays cost them, in one year, not long ago, near 20th.

Delaune's Precent State of London, 1681.

ELLOWLESS. Peerleas without +FELLOWLESS. Peerless: without fellow or equal.

Whose well-built walls are rare and fellowless.

Chapm. II., ii. 484.

FELLOWLY. Sociable, sympathetic. Mine eyes, ev'n sociable to the shew of thine, Fall fellowly drops. Tems FELLY, adv. and adj. Cruel; vicious.

Acharné. Also felly minded, cruelly bent against, prosecuting extreamly, bloudily persecuting, pursuing unto death without remore, or mercie.

But (for his sake) hath set at mutuall strife Serpents with serpents, and hast rais'd them foes Which, unprovoked, felly them oppose.

Du Bartas.

+FELT. A hat.

A faire cloke on his backe, and on his head a felt.

Thynn's Deb. bet. Pride and Lowliness. +FELTED. Matted.

Or els verily, as Anazagoras affirmeth, by reason of violent winds getting close within the ground below; which when they happen to hit and beat upon the sides thereof, hard baked or felted together, finding no way of issue, sluke those parts of the earth at which they entred when they were moist.

LITER'D. The same as feutred.

FELTER'D. Twisted; matted close together, like felt; entangled. Feutre is felt. His felter'd locks that on his bosom fell.

On rugged mountains briers and thorns resemble. Pairf. Tasso, iv, 7. [Chapman, Il., iii, 219, speaks of a "feltred ram."]

See FEUTRED.

Feltre is put for filtre, or filter, by Ben Jonson, both as a verb and subsuntive:

Let the water in glass E be feltred. Sir, please you, Shall I not change the feltre? Alchem., ii. 3. Thid +FEM. Apparently for female.

Whiche are three ills that mischefe men,
To know dost thou desire?

To know dost thou desire: Have here in few my frend exprest, The fem, the flud, the fire. Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1877.

FEMALE CHARACTERS, in our early dramas, were acted by boys or men. If the face did not exactly suit, they took advantage of the fashion of wearing masks, and then the actor had only his voice to modulate.

Flute. Nay, faith, let me not play a woman; I have a beard coming. Quince. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Mids. N. Dr., 1, 2.

See Actresses.

+FENCE. Defence; guard, or protec-

His buckler prov'd his chiefest fence : For still the shepherd's hook Was that the which king Alfred could

In no good manner brook.

King Alfred and the Shepherd.

†FENCE-FABRIC. A structure for de-

And now, when the fence-fabrickes and all devices else requisite for a siege, were in readinesse.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

another in manner of a fence-roufe, stood their ground and resisted.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+To FEND. To defend; to keep off. So might we starve like misers wo-begon, And fend our foes wyth blows of English blade. Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

FENNE. Apparently a dragon; being said of that which watched the golden fleece.

Meece.

And that the waker fense the golden spoyle did keepe.

Turbers. Ov. Epist., p. 84. Topsell, who gives an elaborate account of this not non-descript, but non-existent animal, divides the Indian dragons into two kinds, "the fenny, living in the marshes," and those in the mountains; and tells us wherein the latter differ from the "dragons of the fennes." Hist. of Serpents, p. 158. But this hardly accounts for a dragon being called a fenne.

FENNEL was generally considered as an inflammatory herb; and, therefore, to eat conger and fennel, was to eat two high and hot things together. which was esteemed an act of libertinism.

Dism.

Because their legs are both of a bigness, and he plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fem.el.

2 Hon. IF, ii, 4. One of the herbs distributed by Ophelia, in her distraction, is fennel, which she either offers to the old as a cordial, or to the courtiers, as an emblem of flattery; joining it with columbines, to mark, that though they flattered to get favours, they were thankless after receiving them. There's fennel for you, and columbines Haml., iv. 5. Fennel was certainly regarded as emblematical of flattery, several instances of which have been produced by the commentators; to those, the following may be added:

Flatter, I mean lie, little things catch light minds, and fancie is a worme that feedeth first upon fensel.

Lyly, Sappho, ii, 4.

Fencil I meane for flatterers. Fencil 1 means for flatterers.

Green's Quip for an Upstert Courtier.

Some will say that fennill is to flatter;

They over teache, their tongues too much do clatter.

Foress in praise of Fennill and Woodbing,

Yater's Ditties, f-c., 1562.

Nor fennell-finkle bring for flattery,

Begot of his, and fained courtesie.

Physia Lachrymarum, 1684.

See COLUMBINE.

†FENNY. Earthy; muddy.
Lord, what a nothing is this little span,
We call a man!

What fenny trash maintains the smoth ring fires Of his desires! Quartes's Emblens.
FENOWED. Mouldy. A word regularly formed from the Saxon, fennig, or fynig, of the same sense. It was afterward corrupted into finewed, and vinew'd. Junius acknowledges fennow, finnow, and vinney, to be the same, yet unnecessarily fetches them from dif-See VINEW'D and ferent dialects. WHINIDST. The translators of the Bible, in their excellent address to the readers, speak of Scripture, as A panary of wholsome food, against fenoused traditions.

The old moth-eaten leaden legend, and the foisty and fenouned festival.

Dr. Favour, cited by Todd. Why H. Tooke derived it from the verb fynigean, rather than from the adjective, its immediate origin, it is not easy to say. Div. of Purley, ii, 61.

FEODARY. One who holds a feod, or feud, on the tenure of feudal service; probably pronounced feudary, like feod. The word seems to be used generally by Shakespeare in the sense of an accomplice, or confederate.]

A. We are all fruil. Is. Else let my brother die,
If not a feodary, but only he,
Owe, and succeed by weakness.

That is, I think, "if he is the only subject who holds by the common tenure of human frailty." "Owes." i. e., possesses, and "succeeds by, holds his right of succession by it. In another passage, it seems to mean a subordinate agent, as a vassal to his

O damn'd paper! Odamn'd paper!

Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble!

Art thou a feedary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without.

Cymbeline, iii, ! Cymbeline, iii, 2. It seems to me quite a mistake, to suppose that federary, in the Winter's Tale, was meant for the same word. Another author has feodar, in three syllables, for feodary:

chief:

For sev'nteen kings were Carthage feodars.

Marston's Wonder of Women. I cannot think Mr. Malone's law officer, feodary, at all likely to have been thought of by Shakespeare, occurring only in an old act of par-Feodary is explained by Minshew as synonymous with feoffour. i. e., feudi possessor. He has also feudary, which he refers to feodary. To FER, v. A word of no meaning, seemingly coined by Pistol, for the sake of the others which he introduces after it. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him: discuss the same to him in French. Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.

I could have fer'd and ferk't, &c.

Barret's Ram Alley, sign. C.

FERE, FEERE, PHEARE, or PHEER. A companion, partner, husband, or From gefera, Saxon, of the same signification.

And swear with me, as with the woeful feere And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame. Titus Andr., iv. 1.

But faire Charissa to a lovely fere
Was lineked, and by him had many pledges dere.
Spens. F. Q., I. x. 4.
Therewith I chose him for my lord and phere,
Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 204.

A goodly swaine to be a princesse pheare.

Fairf. Godf. of Brill., iv, 47. +FERMARY. An infirmary, or hospital.

A fermarie, valetudinarium. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p, 250. FERN-SEED was supposed to have the power of rendering persons invisible. The seed of fern is itself invisible; therefore, to find it was a magic operation, and in the use it was supposed to communicate its own property.

We have the receipt of forn-seed, we walk invisible.

Because, indeed, I had
No med'cine, sir, to go invisible;
No fern-seed in my pocket

No med'cine, sir, to go invisione; No fern-seed in my pocket.

B. Jons. New Inn, i, 6. This seed was to be gathered mysti-cally on some particular night:

When coming nigher, he doth well discern,
It of the wond'rous one-night-seeding fern
Some bundle was. Browne's Brit. Past., II, 2, p 54.

+FERNSMUND.

Is an herb of some called water-fern, hath a triangular stalk, and is like polipody, and it grows in bogs and hollow grounds.

Markham's Cheap and Good Husbandry, 1676. †FEROUS. Wild; savage.

And in this he had a special aim, and hope also, to establish Christian laws among infidels; and by domestical, to chace away those ferous and indomitable creatures that infested the land.

Wilson's Life of James I.

+FERRAGE. The toll at a ferry.

Peage. Monie paid for passage over sea, in a shippe, or over the water in a ferrie: ferrage pay. Nomenclator.

†FERRARY. The art of working in

And thus resolv'd, to Lemnos she doth hie, Where Vulcan workes in heavenly ferrarie. Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609. So took she chamber, which her son, the god of ferrary,

With firm doors made. Chapm. Il., xiv.

+FERRIER. A ferry-man.

Also, if any boteman or feriour be dwelling in the ward, that taketh more for botemanage or feriage, then is ordained.

Callbrop's Reports, 1670.

FERRIL, for ferule, appears only in an unnecessary conjecture of Mr. Seward's, on the Two Noble Kinsmen. The original is,

A fire ill take her, does she flinch now? Act iii, 5. Had the schoolmaster been the speaker, there would have been some probability in the conjecture; but it is one of the bumpkins. A fire-ill take her, is, doubtless, equivalent to "p-x take her."

+FERVENCE. Heat.

The sun himself, when he darts rayes lascivious, Such as ingender by too piercing ferrence.

Chapman's Rev. for Hon., 1654.

FESCUE. A wire, stick, or straw, chiefly used for pointing to the letters, in teaching children to read. festuca, Latin, in the same sense, by abbreviation, and transposition of the The French, by abbreviation only, made it festu. A fescue is particularly and humorously described by Swift: There is a certain little instrument, the first of thos in use with scholars, and the meanest, considering the materials, of it, whether it be a joint of wheaten straw

FES

(the old Arcadian pipe), or just three inches of alender wire, or a stripped feather, or a corking pin. Furthermore, this same diminutive tool, for the posture of it, usually reclines its head on the thumb of the right hand, sustains the foremost finger upon its breast, and is itself supported by the second. This is commonly called a fescue.

Works, by Scott, vol. ix, p. 390.
Nay then his Hodge shall leave the plough and waine, And buy a booke and go to schoole againe.
Why mought not he, as well as others done, Rise from his feacue to his Littleton? Hall's Sat., IV, 3.

The style of a sundial has been called a fescue, from its analogous use in pointing to the hour:

The fescus of the dial is upon the Christ-cross of noon.

Puritan, iv, 2; Suppl., ii, 607. i. e., like a fescue pointing to the alphabet.

A still more extraordinary application of the word occurs in an old poet, quoted in the first edition of Poole's Parnaasus.

And for a fescue, she doth use her tears,
The drops do tell her where she left the last. P. 410. The word occurs in Dryden.

It is rather odd, that another pedagogical instrument should have, in French, a name of exactly the same sound as fescue, and yet have no connection in signification or etymology. This word is fesse-cul, a rod; the component parts of which express its use.

+FESTENNINE. A marriage song or serenade.

Serenade.

How came you
To sing beneath the window?
Rime. Mr. Hearsay
Told us that Mr. Meanwell was new married,
And thought it good that we should gratifie him,
And shew our selves to him in a festenine.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

FESTINATE, adj. Hasty. Latin. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation.

Lear, iii, 7. It is a conjectural emendation of the old folios, which read festivate. But it seems indubitable.

To FET. To fetch; said to be still used in some counties.

Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof. Whose blood is fet from invariant.

Hen. V, iii, 1.

I, writing nought myself, will teach them yet
Their charge, and office, whence their wealth to fet.

B. Jons. Hor. Art of Poetry, vol. vii, 189.

That looks ech houre when prouling shreevs will fet
Himself to ward, and of his goods make seasure,

If some unlookt for gaine he hap to get.

Harring. Ariost., xxx, 57.

The marble fet from far, and dearly bought.

1bid., xlii, 70.

It still remains in some passages of the English Bible. See Jerem., xxxvi, 21, &c.; and Acts, xxviii, 13. "From thence we fet a compass." Such To FEUTRE. To set close. Feutre, obsolete forms were not generally changed in the editions of the Bible, till after the beginning of the 18th century, nor then completely.

We find also far-fet, for far-fetched. Some far-fet trick, good for ladies, some stale toy or other.

Malcont... O. Pl., iv. 98.

FETT. Probably only an error of the press, for frett, which commonly means raised work or protuberance, in the following passage of Drayton:

And told me that the bottom clear,

Now layd with many a fett

Of seed-pearl, ere she bath'd her there,

Was known as black as jet.

Quest of Cynthia, p. 633.

So Drayton uses frett: The yellow king-cup, wrought in many a curious frett.

Polyolo, 15.

 ${\it Fet}$ is nowhere so used.

FETTLE, v. To go intently upon any business. Certainly an English word, being acknowledged by our old dic-Phillips has "to tionary-makers. fettle to, to go about, or enter upon a business." Kersey, as usual, copies him. Coles has "to fettle, se accingere ad aliquid, aggredior." uncertain derivation, though it seems like a corruption of settle. It was, probably, always a familiar, undignified word, and still exists as a provincial term. Ray speaks of it as in common use in the north, and defines it. "to set or go about anything, to dress, or prepare." Hall is the only old writer hitherto quoted for it:

Nor list he now go whistling to the ear, But sells his team, and fettleth to the war. Set., iv, 6.

I can add Sylvester:

They to their long hard journey fottling them, Leaving Samaria and Jerusalem. Maiden's Blush. Swift also used it, in his directions to See Todd. servants.

In the Glossary to Tim Bobbin, we have fettle explained as a substantive, by "dress, case, condition."

FETUOUS, or, more properly, FETOUS. Neat; the same as feat, from which it is formed. Some of the dictionaries have it fetise. See also Skinner in that word. It is so spelt in Chancer. See FEAT.

Upon this fetuous board doth stand
Something for shew-bread; and at hand, &c.

Herrick's Poems, p. 103.

Full fetise was hire cloke, as I was ware.

Cant. T., Prol., 157. Upon this fetuous board doth stand originally feultre, in French, is our | FICO. A fig, a term of reproach. felt, or fur, worked into a close mass. as for hats. Hence feutrer, to set thick or close; and in Gavin Douglas's translation of Virgil,

They fewter'd foot to foot, and man to man,

as a translation of Hæret pede pes densusque viro vir. In Spenser, it means to fix the spear in rest, probably from setting it close. and holding it so:

His speare he festred, and at him it bore.

P. Q., IV, iv, 46.

In this usage it seems to have been technical, for it is found in the prose History of King Arthur.

In the O. Pl., vol. i, p. 88, the word feutred occurs, but so obscurely used, that the context throws no light on its meaning.

FEWMETS (hunting term).

of a deer.

A Geer.

For by his slot, his entries, and his port,
His frayings, fewmets, he doth promise sport.

B. Jons. Sad Shep., i, 2.

Called also fewmishings:

He [the buck] makes his fewnishings in divers man-ners and forms, as the hart doth.

Gentl. Recreation, p. 77, 8vo.

FEWNESS AND TRUTH. A quaint, affected phrase, meaning in few words and true.

Peroness and truth, 'tis thus Your brother and his lover have embrac'd, &c.

Meas. for M., i, 5. FEWTERER. A term of the chase, explained a dog-keeper, or one who lets them loose in the chase; and is a corruption of the French, vautrier, or vaultier.

Or perhaps stumble upon a yeoman feuterer, as I do now.

B. Jons. Every Man out of H., ii, 3. Puntarvolo is so called there, because he stands holding his dog:

A dry nurse to his coughs, a feeterer, To such a nasty fellow. B. & Fl. Tamer T., ii, 2. Alluding to the treatment of dogs in a kennel, it is said,

If you will be An honest yeoman pheuterer, feed us first, And walk us after. Mass. Picture, v, 1. In some editions it is foolishly printed phenterer. In the Maid of Honour, ii, 2, it is used as a mere term of contempt, for slave, or menial.

To FIANCE, for to affiance. To betroth. To have the daughter of the earle of Leycester, his fanced wife, delivered to hym. Holinah., vol. ii, A a 5. John, king of Scotlande, fanceth his sonne, Edward Ballioll, with the daughter of Charles du Valoys.

18id., C c 4.

See Todd.

Fig.

Convey the wise it call. Steal! fob. a fco for the phrase.

Behold next I see contempt, giving me the fco with his thombe in his mouth.

Wil's Misery, sign. D. 4.

And yet the lye, to a man of my coat, is as ominons a family a f fruit as the fice. B. Jons. Every Man in his H., i. See Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 458.

†FICT, adj. Fictitious.

Prophets of things to come the truth predict:
But poets of things past write false and fict.
Owen's Epigrams, transl. by Harvey. The adverb also occurs.

When in the temple with the rest you pray, You two, not fictly, Abba, Father, say. Ibid.

+FIDDLE-CUM-FADDLE. Nonsense: what we now call fiddle-faddle.

Boys must not be their own choosers, colonel, they must not 'ifath; they have their sympathies and fiddle-come-faddles in their brain, and know not what they would ha' themselves.

Cowley's Cutter of Coleman Street. FIERCE.

RCE. Sudden, precipitate.

This serve abridgement
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. O
So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd, Such temp'rute order in so fierce a cause, Doth want example. King John, iii, 4.

Ben Jonson has

And, Lupus, for your fierce credulity, One fit him with a pair of larger cars

Poetaster, v, 3. FIG. TO GIVE THE. An expression of contempt or insult, which consisted in thrusting the thumb between two of the closed fingers, or into the mouth; whence BITE THE The custom is generally regarded as being originally Spanish. According to some authors, it conveyed an insulting allusion to a contemptuous punishment inflicted on the Milanese, by the emperor Frederic Barbarossa, in 1162, when he took their city. See Minshew, who quotes Munster and Krantz for it, and several French books on Proverbs, as Matinées Sénonoises, No. 85. But this has much the air of a fable, and the Spanish expression for it, Dar una higa, does not support it; for higo is a fig, not higa; though the similarity of the words may have caused the error or equivoque; and the same The real origin, exists in Italian. I presume, may be found in Steevens and Pinedo's dictionaries, under Higa: and, in fact, the same phrase and allusion pervaded all modern Europe. As, Far le fiche, Ital.; Faire la figue, Fr.: Die feigen weisen, Germ.; De vuahe setten. Dutch. See Du Cange. in Ficha. See Mr. Douce's Illustrations, vol. i, p. 492, &c.

A fig for you is still known as a familiar expression of contempt; and must have arisen from the other, as figs were never so common here as to be proverbially worthless.

Be this as it may, the persuasion that the fig was of Spanish origin was here very prevalent. Hence Pistol

A figo for thy friendship!—— The fig of Spain. Hen. F, iii, 6.

And again,

When Pistol lies, do this, [i. e., make the action of reproach] and fig me, like the bragging Spaniard.

2 Hen. IV, v, 3.

And so farewell, I will returne To lady Hope agayne. And for a token I thee sende

A doting fig of Spayne.
Ulp. Fulw. Art of Flattery, C 4.

But there was a worse kind of Spanish fig, the notoriousness of which, perhaps, occasioned some confusion, so that one fig was mistaken for the This was the poisoned fig. employed in Spain as a secret way of destroying an obnoxious person. To this fatal fig many passages unequivocally refer.

There, there's the mischief, I must poison him,
One fig sends him to Erebus.

Skirley, Brothers, iii, p. 37.
I do now look for a Spanish fig or an Italian sallet daily.

White Dev., O. Pl., vi, 314.
It may fall out that thou shalt be entic'd

To sup sometimes with a magnifico, And have a fico foisted in thy dish.

Gascoigne's Works. Is it (that is, the poison) speeding?

As all our Spanish figs are. Noble Soldier, 1634. Whether Pistol refers at all to this kind of fig, may be doubted. Steevens thought he did. The Spanish poisoned fig was proverbial also in France. See Les Illustres Proverbes, tom. ii, p. 58.

+FIG'S-END. For a thing of small value.

Fumi umora non emerim: I will not give a fig's-end for it. Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 557.

+To FIG. To fidget about.

But since I trotted from my trotter stall
And figd about from neates feete neatly drest.

A Quest of Enquirie, 1595.

+FIG-SUNDAY. A popular name for the Sunday before Easter, perhaps in allusion to our Saviour's desire to eat fruit of the fig-tree on his way from Bethany on the Monday follow-

FIGENT. A familiar term, not acknowledged, as far as I have found, by any of the dictionaries or glossaries of provincial terms. If we suppose it to have been spoken figent (with the i short), it will be evidently of the same origin as fidget; and will then mean fidgety, restless, &c., which well enough suits the comic passages where it occurs.

I have known such a wraugling advocate, A little figent thing. B. & Ft. Little Fr. L., iii, 2. A girl, who is asked what courting is. describes her lover as being rather figent :

Faith, nothing, but he was somewhat figent with me.

Ibid., Corromb, iv, 3.

In the comedy of Eastward Hoe it is applied to memory and wit:

Q. Slight, God forgive me, what a kind of figent memory have you! Sir P. Nay, then, what kind of figent wit hast thou?

O. Pl., iv, 246. Here unsteady will suit both speeches. If you call it figent, which is more regular, the derivation will not be so easy.

FIGGUM. Conjectured by Mr. Gifford to be a popular term for the jugglers' trick of spitting fire. One character says of Fitzdottrel.

See! he spits fire; another answers.

O no, be plays at figgum.

The devil is the author of wicked figgum.

B. Jons. Devil is an Ass, v, 8.

The marginal direction, in the original, subjoins, "Sir Poule interprets figgum to be a juggler's game." The interpretation, therefore, is very plausible. The same sound critic considers the whole scene as a burlesque of the tricks played by Darrel and Somers, and exposed by bishop Harsnet. Fitzdottrel represents the boy Somers. This is also highly probable. Figgum, as a game, is not known.

†FIGHTINGLY. Pugnaciously.

Wid. I warrant 'tis my sister. She frown'd, did she not, and look'd fightingly. Brome's Northern Lass.

FIGHTS. In navigation;
Are the wast-cloaths, which hang round about the ship, to hinder men from being seen in fight; or any place wherein men may cover themselves, and yet use their arms.

Phillips's World of Worls.

So also Florio, in Pavesata:

A pavesado. Also the fights in a ship, or the arming of a ship with cloth and canvase, to hide the mariners from sight of the enemie.

An astrologer.

of a single of the enemie.

Their upper deckes, all trim'd and garnish't out
With sterne designs for bloodie warre at hand,
With crimson fights were armed all about.

England's Eliza, 1588, in Mirr. for Magist., 816.
This pink is one of Cupid's carriers;
Clap on more sails; pursue; up with your fights,
Give fire; she is my prize, or ocean whelm them all.

Mer. W. W., ii, 2.

While I were able to endure a tempest,
And bear my fights out bravely, 'till my tackle
Whistled i' th' wind, and held against all weathers,
B. f. N. Valent., ii, 2.

May I-suffer-This pinck, this painted foist, this cockle-boat,
To hang her fights out, and defie me, friends,
A well known man of war. Ibid., Woman's Prize, ii, 6. It has been quoted from Dryden also.

+FIGLIN. The diminutive of fig. A. I finde in my selfe daily a great desire to these

A. I finds in my sens unity - of figges, or fat failus.

P. They nourish more then any other fruit, they queuch thirst, discharge the breast, fatten, &c.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

Stand back, you figure-flingers, and give place, Here's goodman Gosling will you all disgrace. You that with heavens 12 houses deale so hie, +FIGURE-FLINGER.

You oft want chambers for yourselves to lie. Rowlands, Knave of Spades and Diamonds.

FILE. List, catalogue, number.

The greater file of the subject held the duke to be Their names are not recorded on the file of M., iii, 2.

Their names are not recorded on the file
Of life, that fall so.

B. Jons. Underw., vol. vii, p. 6.

Armes and the men, above the vulgar file.

Fanskar's Lus., I, i, 1.

As we meant to lose Our character and distinction, and stoop Our character and unstitution, _____ To th' common file of subjects. Shirley, Doubtf. Heir, A. iv, p. 54.

In Macbeth, iii, 1, "the valued file," means the list, with accounts of the value of each in it. So afterwards, "I have a file of all the gentry," v, 2.

To FILE, was used for to polish, and was very often applied to the tongue of a delicate speaker.

of a delicate speaker.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk.

Sk. Pass. Pilgr., Suppl., i, 726.

The sly deceiver, Cupid, thus beguil'd

The simple damsel with his filed tongue.

Fairf. Tasso, vi, 73.

Thereto his subtile engins he does bend, His practick witt, and his fayre-fyled tongue. Spens. F. Q., II, i, 3.

Ben Jonson, therefore, prays that the king may be delivered

From a tongue without a file, Heaps of phrases and no style. Masque of Gipsies, vol. vi, p. 118. To FILE. Contracted from to defile, by dropping the first syllable, and in signification the same.

If it be so, For Banquo's issue have I fild my mind.

Macb., iii, 1. By that same way the direfull dames do drive
Their mournefull charett, Al'd with rusty blood.
Spens. F. Q., I, v, 33. He call'd his father villain, and me strumpet,

A word that I ablier to file my lips with.

Revenger's Trag., O. Pl., iv, 348.

As not to file my hands in villain's blood. As not to file my hands in villain's blood.

Miseries of Inf. Marr., O. Pl., v, 100.

Such guilts whereby both earth and aire ve file.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 436.

FILL, now called THILL. [Thill was the correct old word also.] The shafts of a cart or waggon. This is the reading of the old 4to and first folio of Troilus and Cressida, in the following passage, and is undoubtedly the genuine word: as the expression. "draw backward," proves.

Come your ways, come your ways, an you draw backward we'll put you i' the fills. In the first quarto it is filles; in the first folio, fils. Files, which modern editors have preferred, as supposing it a military phrase, appeared first in the folio of 1632, i. e., the second. So also we should read fill-horse in the following:

Thou hast gotten more hair on thy chin, than Dobbin, my fill-korse, has on his tail. Mer. of Ven., ii, 2. The first folio has phil-horse; the second, and the quartos, by an evident blunder, pil-horse. Both readings are supported by other authorities.

I will Give you the fore horse place, and I will be
I' th' fills. Woman never Vesed, 1632, cit. St.
Acquaint you with Jock, the forehorse, and Flub, the fil-horse, &c.

Heyw. and Rowl. Fortune by Sea and Land, cit. St. It is cited by Johnson, from Mortimer's Husbandry, which shows that it was common.

†FILLING-STONES. In masonry;

The filling-stones, rubbish conveyed between the two outsides of a wall in the middeste thereof.

Nomenclator, 1585.

+FINATIVE. Conclusive.

Richard had no sooner thus added his finative conclusion, but we might sodainly heare a loud and pitteous skrike.

Greene's Newes both from Heaven and Hell, 1593. †FINS. The evelids. The word is so used by Webster (Duchess of Malfi) and Marston (Malconteut, i, 1).

FINCH-EGG. Evidently meant as a term of reproach, being put into the mouth of the railer Thersites. meaning of it is by no means clear. Mr. Steevens says that a finch's egg is remarkably gaudy. If so, it may be equivalent to coxcomb. and Cr., v, 1. But what finch did Mr. Steevens mean? The chaffinch, bulfinch, and goldfinch, have all eggs of a bluish-white, with purplish spots | †FINIFY. To make fine. or stripes. There is no bird simply called a finch.

To FINE. To adorn, to make fine.

FINE. TO SHOPE, SO MANUAL TO fine his title with some shew of truth, Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught.

Hen. V, i, 2. In the following passage it seems to be put for to make an end of: fine was, and yet is sometimes, used for end.

Time's office is to fine the hate of foes,

To eat up error by opinion bred.

SA. Rape of Lucr.. Suppl., i. 527. It can hardly mean to refine, as that word will not well bear the sense of to soften or relax.

FINELESS, for endless; used by Shakespeare. Fine was formerly more used for end than it is now; as, in fine, &c.

FINEW. Mouldiness, or mustiness. Coles has it, "finew. Situs, mucor." Kersev explains it by mouldiness, or See HOAR. Minshew hoariness. derives it from finegian, Saxon, of the same signification. See also VINEW.

FINEW'D. Mouldy. "Mucidus, situ sentus," Coles.

A souldier's hands must oft be died with goare, Lest, starke with rest, they fixee'd waxe, and hoare. Mirror for Mag., p. 417.

See FENOWED.

+FINGER. To fork the fingers at any one was a mark of contempt.

His wife Having observ'd these speeches all her life, Behind him forks her fingers, and doth cry, To none but you, I'de do this courtesie.

Witts Recreations, 1654. The exact meaning of the phrase a wet finger in the following passage is not quite clear.

He darting an eye upon them, able to confound a thousand conjurors in their own circles, though with a wet finger they could fetch up a little diveil.

Dekker, A Strange Horse-Race, 1613, sig. D 3.

FINGERS, SWEARING BY. A customary oath.

By these ten ends of flesh and blood I sweare.

Death of Rob. E. of Hunt., K 2. See TEN COMMANDMENTS.

+FINIAL. An architectural term—a pinnacle.

And if he finde not in one edifice And if he finde not in one edifice
All answerable to his queint device;
From this fair palace then he takes his front,
From that his finials; here he learns to mount
His curious stairs, there finds he frise and cornish,
And other places other peeces furnish;
And so, selecting everywhere the best,
Doth thirty models in one house digest.

Du Barlas.

The printer's profit, not my pride,
Hath this idea finify'd.
For he push'd out the merrie pay,
And Mr. Gaywood made it gay.

Occasion's Offering, 1654.
All the morning he wasteth in finifying his body to please her eye.

Men in the Moone, 1609.

+FINIT. A limit.

And see wee early ended our fifth weekes travell, with the finit of that sheere, at the noble city of Bristow.

MS. Laned., 213.

FINSBURY. A manor, north of Moorfields, famous for the exercise of archers, now covered with buildings, except one spot; of which the following account is given:

In 1498, certain grounds, consisting of gardens, or-chards, &c., on the north side of Chiswell-street, and called Bunhill, or Bunhill-fields, within the manor of Finsbury, were by the mayor and commonalty of London converted into a large field, containing eleven acres and eleven perches, now known by the name of the Artillery Ground, for their train-bands, archers, and other military citizens to exercise in.

Butick's Hist., i, 441.

Stowe says it was called Finsbury field, and that here it was where they usually shot at twelvescore.

usually shot at twelvescore.

And givest such sarcenet surety for thy oaths, as if thou never walk'd'st further than Frashry,

I Hen. IV, iii, 1.

Because I dwell at Hogsden, I shall keep company with none but the archers of Frashry.

B. Jons. Beery Man in H., i, 1.

Non, sir, stand not you fix'd here, like a stake in Frashry, to be shot at.

B. Jons. Barth. Fair, v, 6.

1Yes, the most excerementaric dislikers of learning are growne so valiant in impudence, that now they set up their faces (like Turks) of gray paper, to be spet at for silver game in Frashric Fields.

Nash, Pierce Pesilesse, 1592.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1692.
FIRCUG. A corrupted word, or false print, which criticism has not yet set right; it evidently means something dangerous. Firecock and firelock have been conjectured.

March off amain, within an inch of a fireng,
Turn me on the toe like a weathercock,
Kill every day a scripent, for twelve months.
B. & Fl. Wit without M., ii, 1.

Either conjecture is better than non-+FIRE-BALLS. Inflammable missiles. Fiery darts, or fire bals, and such like harmefull things that be throwne.

Nomenclator.

†FIRE-BRIEF. Letters sent round to the parishes to beg collections for sufferers by fires.

We laugh at fire-briefs now, although they be Commended to us by his majesty; And 'tis no treason, for we cannot guess Why we should pay them for their happiness. Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

+FIRE-COAL. A live coal.

On a Candle. Here lies (I wot) a little star That did belong to Jupiter, Which from him Prometheus stole, And with it a fire-coale.

Or this is that I mean to unnum,
Here doth he a farthing candle.

Wilts Recreations, 1654.

FIRE-DRAKE. A fiery dragon; draco

It may be, 'tis but a glow-worm now, but 'twill Grow to a firedrake presently.

B. & Fl. Begg. Bush, v, 1.

So Drayton:

By the hissing of the snake, The rustling of the fire-drake. Nymphidia.

Also a fiery meteor, particularly the ignis fatuus, or Will o' the wisn.

ignis fatuus, or Will o' the wisp.

Who should be lamps to comfort out our way,
And not like fire-drakes to lead men astray.

Mis. of Inf. Mar., O. Pl., v, 109.

A moon of light
In the noon of night,
Till the fire-drake has o'ergone you.
B. Jons. Gips. Met., vol. vi, 79.

Fiery spirits or devils are such as commonly work by firedrakes, or ignes fatui, which lead men often in flumina et pracripitia.

Burt. Anat. Mel., p. 46.

Jocularly, for a man with a red face:
That firedrake did I hit three times on the head. and That fredrake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me.

Heu. VIII, v, 3.

Some sort of fireworks appear also to have been so called. The following seems to describe a rocket:

But, like fredrakes,
Mounted a little, gave a crack, and fell.
Middleton's Fire Gallants.
The alchemist's man is called his firedrake, probably from working so much in the fire:

nuch in the nre.

That is his fre-drake,

His lungs, his Zephyrus, he that puffs his coals.

B. Jons. Alc., ii, 1.

Lac.

Fire-men were also called fire-drakes.
+FIRE-FLASH. A flash of lightning.
Brutish Thunderbolt; or, Feeble Fireflash of Pope
Sixtus V. against Hearie, King of Navarre, and Heary, Prince of Conde, translated by C. Fetherstone.

Title, dated 1586. +FIRE-FORK. The implement for dressing the fire on the hearth.

A fire-forke, furca ignaria.

Tithals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 185.

Item 2 aundeyerns, a fyer fercke, a fyer panne, and a paire of tonges, xxd.

Insentory, 1536.

+FIRE-HOOK. An implement for pulling down houses, to stop the progress of a fire.

Hama, Digest. Instrumentum arcendis restinguen-disque incendiis accommodum. A firehooke, such as they occupy to pull downe houses set on fire. Nomenclator.

+FIREHOT. Hot as fire.

Those pretty faggots which frehot being eat
In a cold morning, scarce would make one sweat.

Scots Philomythis, 1616.
This revolted traitor full soberly incensed the king, fire-hole of himselfe, presuming also upon his great fortune.

Holland's Ammian. Marcel., 1609.

Newly come from the fire; said originally of things manufactured in metal. Afterwards applied to all things new, as we now say,

· with less evident meaning, bran-new; which, however, is explained brandnew. The two words are thus brought together.

And with some excellent jests fire-new from the mint, you should have bang'd the youth into dumbness. Twel. N., iii. 2.

Peace, master marquis, you are malapert, Your fre-new stamp of honour is scarce current.

Rick. III., i, 3.

A man of fre-new words, fashion's own knight.

Love's L. L., i, 1.

See also Lear, v, 3.

+FIRE-PAN. A moveable receptacle for a fire; a chafing-dish.

Ignis receptaculum, quod tempestate frigida transferri potest, prunas candentes continens, quod hodie et ferreun et fictile in usu est. Reschaut. A fire pas, such is used in barbers shops and others, in cold weather. The place where fire is made, as a harth moveable or a fire-panne, focus.

withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 188. +FIRE-POT. An inflammable missile used in sea-fights.

The Portugals seeing them still stand away, came both aboord of us, the one in the one quarter, and entred at least 100 of their men, having fire-pots, and the other in the other, and divers sorts of fire workes upon our decks, the frigots (as many as could lye about us) threw fire-pots in at the ports, and stucke fire pikes in her sides; all which (by the great mercy and assistance of God) we still put out.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+FIRE-STEEL and FIRE-STONE were the ordinary names of the steel and flint used for striking fire.
A fire-steele wherewith to strike fire out of a flinte

Nomenclator, 1585.

A fire-stone to strike fire with, silex.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 206. A FIRK. A trick, or quirk; or, perhaps, freak.

Sir, leave this firk of law, or by this light I'll give your throat a slit.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 467. Why this was such a firk of piety
I ne'er heard of.

Wits, O. Ph., vini, 498.

To FIRK. To beat; said to be from ferio. Latin.

I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him. Hen. V, iv, 4.

Nay, I will firk My silly novice, as he was never firl'd
Since midwives bound his noddle.

Ram A., O. Pl., v, 466.

Mr. Steevens justly observed, that this word was so licentiously used. that it is not easy to fix its meaning. And when you have spoke, at end of every speech,
Not minding the reply, you turne you round
As tumblers doe; when betwitt every feat
They gather wind, by firking up their breeches.

Brome's Antipodes, 1640.

FIRM. To confirm. This usage

To FIRM. should not, perhaps, be considered as obsolete, being employed by Dryden and Pope; but it would hardly be ventured by a modern writer.

Your wishes blest: Your wishes blest:
Jove knocks his chin against his breast
And firms it with the rest.

B. Jons. Masque of Aug., vi, 136.

Cynna, as Marius and the rest agree.

Firme the edicte, and let it pass for me.

Lodge's Wounds of Civ. War. F 3.

+FIRMENTIVE. Affirmative. wood, 1556.

FIRST-BORN OF EGYPT. Dr. Johnson says that this is a proverbial expression for high-born persons; but it has not been met with, except in the following passage:

I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

As you like it, ii, 5. Perhaps Jacques is only intended to say, that, if he cannot sleep, he will, like other discontented persons, rail against his betters.

+FISH. Proverbial phrase.

Fresh fish and new come guests smell by that time they be three dayes old.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 577.

What we now

+FISHER'S FOLLY. call a shooting or fishing box; a country house for one who dwells in

As one who had taken a surfeit of the city has built himselfe a new fisher's fully in the countrey. Braithrait's Survey of History, 1638.

+FISHFUL. Abounding in fish. We went next to that strong, spacious and stately castle scituated close upon the banke of that famous, swift-gliding, and fishfull river of Trent. Lansd., 213. Much like a bird, which 'bout the shores and sides Of fishfull rocks, with hoverings smoothly glides Above the waves, about the banks.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

+To FISK. To frisk or jump about.

Then in a cave, then in a field of corn,

Creeps to and fro, and fisketh in and out.

His rovyng eyes rolde to and fro, He fiskyng fine did mincyng go. Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

FISKE. A notorious cheat, connected with Foreman, and others. BRETNOR. Often mentioned by Lilly the astrologer. Possibly the evil repute of his name might lead Beaumont and Fletcher to make La Fiske one of "five cheating rogues" (so described in the dramatis personæ) introduced in the fourth act of the Bloody Brother. He is described as an astrologer,

And then La Fiske The mirror of his time; 'twas he that set it. Act iv, 1. (viz., the astrological figure.) In the next scene we find him dealing out the imposing jargon of astrology, to cheat his customer.

Fiske is also mentioned by Butler: And nigh an ancient obelisk
Was rais'd by him, found out by Fisk.
Hudibr., part ii, cant. iii, 1. 403.

Where the note tells us, from the information of Lilly aforesaid, that Fiske was born near Framlingham, in Suffolk, and that he died in the 78th year of his life: with a few other particulars.

+FISTICUFFS. Boxing; fighting with the fists.

But thou art excellent at these windy puffes, And darst encounter boyes at fisticuffes.

A division of a song, or dance. In the former sense it is fully explained in the first volume of Dr. Percy's Reliques of Ancient Poetry. But what can it have to do with the following passage?

Well, my lord, you say so, in fits.

Tro. and Cr., ii, 3.

Mr. Steevens says, perhaps a quibble is intended. What quibble, it is not easy to guess; probably the reading should be, "it fits;" that is, it suffices, it satisfies us.

FIT OF THE FACE. A grimace, an affected turn of the countenance.

As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage, is but merely Aft or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
For when they hold them, you would swear directly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Hen. FIII, i, 3.

+FITCH. This word is still used in Lincolnshire for a small spoonful.

And when it is raised and removed, put in a peece of a sponge, as much as a fitch, in the hole which the powder made, and it will purge the drinesse of the wound.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1824.

A FITCHEW. A polecat. Fr. Also fitchat, or fitchet.

To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a ficker, a toad, &c.—I would not care: but to be a Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny.

Tro. and Cr., v, l. spire against destiny.

Tro. and Cr.,

'Tis such another fitchev !—marry, a perfum'd on Oth., iv, 1.

This animal was supposed to be very amorous; and Mr. Steevens tell us, that its name was often applied to ladies of easy or no virtue.

A FITMENT. An equipment, or dress.

The soldier that did company these three In poor beseeming; 'twas a filment for The purpose I then follow'd. Ci FITTERS. Small fragments. A low. familiar word, said by Skinner to be derived from the German.

Then doubt not you a thousand flaffing flags, Nor horrible cries of hideous heathen hags. Du Barias.

None of your piec'd companions, your pin'd gallants, That fly to filters with ev'ry flaw of weather. B. and Fl. Pilgrim, i, 1.

B. and re. xugrim, i, i.
They look and see the stones, the words, and letters,
And cut and mangled, in a thousand fitter.

Harr. Ariosto, xxiv, 40.

Cost them upon the rockes by the town walls, and splitted them all to fitters.

Only their bones, and ragged fitters of their clothes, romuined Coryat, vol. i, p. 55.

A FITTON. A fiction, or falsehood; how formed. I know not, unless by corruption from fiction.

He doth feed you with fillows, figments, and leasings.

B. Jons. Cysth. Revels, i, 4.

To tell a fittone in your landlord's ears.

Gasc. Works, C 3. To FITTON. To form lies, or fictions. Although in many other places he commonly useth to fitton (or fitten), and to write devises of his own head. Plut. Lives, by North, p. 1016, A.

FIVES, more properly VIVES; in French, avives. A disease in horses. little differing from the strangles.

Past cure of the fires, stark spoil'd with the staggers.

Tam. of Shr., iii, 2.

For the rices, which is an inflammation of the kirnels between the chap and the neck of the horse, take, &c.
G. Markh. Way to get W., b. i, ch. 39.

FIXURE. Fixture, fixedness; that by which anything is fixed.

The firmes of her eye has motion in 't,

As we are mock'd with art. Wint. T, v. 8. That is, the attachment of the eye, that by which it is fixed into the head, has motion; as a string, or some such contrivance.

Rend and deracinate The unity, and married calm of states Tro. & Cr., i, 8.

Quite from their fixure. Tro. f. Cr., i, 3.
Whose glorious fixure in so clear a sky.
Drayt. Baron's W., canto i.
†FIZGIG, or FISGIG. This word had several meanings. 1. It was used for a light woman.

For when you looke for praises sound, Then are you for light fisgiggs crownde, Gosson's Pleasant Quippes, 1596.

2. A sort of harpoon used in fishing.

Which we scarce lost sight of, when an armade of dolphins assaulted us; and such we saulted as we could intice to taste our hooks or fissiggs.

Canst thou with fix-gigs pierce him [levisthan] to the quick?

Sandys's Paraphrases on Job.

3. A common kind of firework. The method of making it is described in White's Artificial Fireworks, 1708, p.

+FLABBERKIN. Flabby.

For besides nature hath lent him a flabberkin face, like one of the foure windes, and cheekes that sagge like a womans duggs over his chin-bone. Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

A sort of fan. Lat. fla-+FLABEL. belluin.

Esventoir. A fan or flabell to gather wind.

Nomenclator.

+To FLAFF. To flutter.

FLAGS. Our old play-houses exhibited flags on their roofs when there were performances at them. This originated, probably, from the situation of several of them on the Surrey side of the Thames; since, by this device, they could telegraphically inform those on the opposite shore, when there was to be a play. In Lent, of course, as there were no plays, there were no flags out. The Globe playhouse, with its flag, is delineated in Steevens's Shakespeare, edition 1778, at page 85 of the prefaces. N.y, faith, for blushing, I think there's grace little enough amongst you all; 'tis Lent in your cheeks, the flag's down.

Mad World, O. Pt., v. 314.

The hair about the hat is as good as a flag upon the pole at a common playhouse, to wast company.

Soid., p. 364.

pole at a common playhouse, to wait company.

bid., p. 364.

Each play-house advanceth his flagge in the aire, whither quickly, at the waving thereof, are summoned whole troops of men, women, and children.

Curtain Dr. of the W., p. 47.

+FLAKE.

A piece; a share.
Yet by your leve
A frere dyd she gyve
Of her love a fake.
The Boke of Mayd Emlyn, p. 18.

Acting like flails. +FLALY.

At once all furrows plow, the struging streams.

O're all the main gape wide, boile foamic streams,
With flaly-oares and slicing forcdecks flerce,
Which through the bustling billows proudly pierce.

Firgil, by Ficars, 1632.

A falsehood, or deception. +FLAM. Also used as a verb, to deceive.

ARO USEU AS A VCI. O. C. GLOCATO.

Beil. Can your drunken friend keep a secret?

Merry. If it be a truth; but it prove a lye, a fam, a wheadle, 'twill out; I shall tell it the next man I meet.

Selley's Bellamire. meet. Scalley's Bellamira.
Perjury among some Rhodomontado pretenders to love, even of either sex, is set lightly by, and in excuse for the breach of their oatlis, rows, and solemn protestations, they would fams us with an old tale of the antient poets, that Jupiter, having in his many scapes and transformations, been guilty himself.

Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary.

FLAMED. Inflamed.

And fan'd with zeale of vengeance inwardly,
He askt, who had that dame so fouly dight.

Spens. F. Q., V, i, 14.

And since their courage is so nobly fam'd,
This morning we'll behold the champions

Within the list.

Coronation, by Shirley, (in B. & Fl.) act ii.

l am fam'd

With pity and affection; whether more!

Purslow's Honest Lawyer, C 1.

+FLANDAN. An old term in fortification? Also, a kind of pinner used by ladies. Will it not be convenient to attack your flandan first, says the maid? More anger yet? still military terms?

Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary.

+FLANG. The preterite of fling.

Even so through thicke and thin we flang, throgh foes and weapons pight. Firgil, by Phase, 1600.

Into the fleet she flang it furiously.

Firgit, by Ficars, 1632. +FLANKER. An entrenchment protecting the flank of a position.

Of outworkes, half moones, spurres, and parrapets, Of turnepikes, Hankers, cats, and counter-scarfs.

Skirley, Honoria and Mammon, 1659.

+To FLANKER. 1. To fortify. From the preceding word.

The philosopher also functers this intention of ours, when he saith, that nobilitie is a vertue of race and kinde.

Passenger of Rennemato, 1612.

2. To emit sparks, or to flicker.

By flanckeryng flame of firie love
To cinders men are worne.

Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577. FLANNEL. A ridiculous expression for a Welchman, because Wales is famous for the manufacture of it.

Flannel is speciously derived from grolanen, which means woollen. To this day, the very softest and most delicate flannel of this nation is manufactured in Wales.

I am dejected, I am not able to answer the Welch Mer. W. W., v, 5. Meaning sir Hugh Evans. In the same scene Falstaff uses several similar characteristics of the Welch-

Am I ridden with a Welch gout too? Shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'tis time I were choak'd with a piece of toasted cheese.

To strike. To flap in the +FLAP.

mouth, to taunt.

Cred. With what a lie you'd flap me in the mouth?
Thou hast the readiest invention
To put off any thing. Cartscright's Ordinary, 1651.
Rascall, dost flappe me in the mouth with tailer?
And tell'st thou me of haberdasher's ware?

Rowlands, Knave of Harts, 1613.

FLAP-DRAGON. A small combustible body, set on fire, and put afloat in a glass of liquor. The courage of the toper was tried in the attempt to swallow it flaming; and his dexterity was proved by being able to do it unhurt. Raisins in hot brandy were the commonest flap-dragons.

Thou art easier swallow'd than a flap-dragon.

Love's L. L., v, 1. The Dutch appear to have been famous for this feat: My brother My brother

Swallows it with more case than a Dutchman

Does fap-dragons.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 436.

Our Flemish corporal was lately choak'd at Delph

[i.e., Delft, in Holland] with a fap-dragon.

Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 883.

As candles' ends made the most formidable flap-dragons, the greatest merit was ascribed to the heroism of See CANDLES'swallowing them. ENDS.

To FLAP-DRAGON. To swallow whole. like a flap-dragon, or to be agitated in a liquid as that is: a word coined from the preceding.

But to make an end of the ship; to see how the sea

Wint. Tule, iii, 3.

A FLAP-JACK. A pancake; some say, an apple puff; but we have below express authority for the former Sense.

We'll have fish for holy-days, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap jacks.

Pericles, ii, 7; Suppl. to Sh., ii, 47.

And 'tis in request among gentlemen's daughters to devour their cheese-cakes, apple-pies, cream and custards, flap-jacks, and pan-puddings.

Jorial Crew. O. Pl., x, 353.

Untill at last by the skill of the cooke, it is transform'd into the forme of a flap-jack, which in our translation is cald a paneake.

Taylor's Jack-a-lent, i, p, 115.

†FLAP-MOUTHED. Applied to a dog. He hath one dog for hunting of the cunny. Worth a whole kenell of your fap-mouth's hounds.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

†FLAPPER. An instrument for driving flies away.

It would be as a rudder to stirre and conduct him into a secure port, and an effectuall fapper to drive away the flies of all worldly vanities.

Passenger of Benrenulo, 1612. FLAPSE. A term of reproach, which I have not seen, except in the following instance:

What, what! how now, ha? You are a fapse to terme my son so. Brome, New Acad., act iv, p. 81.

†FLASHY. Going by flashes.

LASTII. COING by Incourse.
Thus spake the ladic, who in this meanwhile
With light-heel'd flasky haste the horse o'retook,
Layes hold on's bridle, at him fiercely strook;
And thus in's bloud reveng'd his knavish wrong.
Firgil, by Ficars, 1633.

A FLASK OF ARROWS. Apparently a set of them.

Her rattling quiver at her shoulders hung, Therein a flask of arrows featherd well. Fairf. Tasso, xi, 28.

FLAT-CAP. A term of ridicule for a citizen. In Henry the Eighth's time flat round caps were the highest fashion; but, as usual, when their date was out, they became ridiculous. Citizens of London continued to wear them, long after they were generally disused, and were often satirised for it. Come, sirrah, you flat-cap, where be those whites?

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 304.

This the citizen resents, as a great insult.

Make their loose comments upon ev'ry word, Gesture, or look I use; mock me all over From my flat-cap, unto my shining slow. B. Jons. Beery Men in H., ii, l. Trade? to the city, child,

A flat-cap will become thee.

B. and Pl. Hon. Man's Fort., V. ult.
Wealthy flat-caps, that pay for their pleasure the best of any men in Europe. Marston's Dutch Court., ii, l.

See the notes on the first passage: also Stowe's Survey of London, p. 545, ed. 1603.

In the second part of the Honest Whore, is a ludicrous oration, to prove that a flat round can is fittest for a citizen, and extolling it highly. Among the rest, it is said,

Flat-caps as proper are to city gowns,
As to armour helmets, or to kings their crowns.

In another place,
The city cap is round, the scholar's square,
To shew that government and learning are
The perfect'st limbs i' th' body of a state.

See O. Pl., iii, 390, et seq. LATIVE. Windy, or rather causing FLATIVE. wind. We now say flatulent.

Eat not too many of those apples, they be very flative.

Lingua, O. Pl., v, 235.

No other instance has been produced. FLATLING. Flat; applying the broadest side to the object. Shakespeare has flatlong. Temp., ii, 1.

Rogero never foyn'd, and seldom strake
But flatling. Harr. Ariost., xxxvi, 55.
Fell to the ground, and lay flatling there a great while. North's Plut., p. 893.
Spenser has it somewhere, but I have not marked the passage.

†But him the woorthy stounded with a blow,
A flatting blow that on his beaver glanest.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

+FLAT. Apparently, contradictions.

He thought with banding brave to keepe the coyle,

Or else with flatts and facings mee to foyle.

Mirrows for Magistrates, 1587.

+FLATUOUS. Windy.

Therefore, saith Galen, there must of necessitie be a place voide in the middest, which borroweth either some flatwoss, moist, or tempered, or mixed substance from the parts. Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624. Having now finished (I will not say perfected) my little work of this great king, without prejudice to his person, or envy to his dignity, not having (for fithy lucre sake) any man in admiration, and willing to be less than the least in the times flatuous opinion.

Wilson's Life of K. James I.

+FLAVEL.

Un cotillon d'esté. A flavell peticoate: a summer carment.

FLAUNTS. Fineries, gay attire that girls flaunt in. Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold The sternness of his presence? Winter's T., iv, 3. A FLAW. A sudden gust of violent wind. "It was the opinion," says Warburton, "of some philosophers, that the vapours being congeal'd in the air by cold (which is the most intense in the morning), and being afterwards rarefied and let loose by the warmth of the sun, occasion those sudden and impetuous gusts of wind, which were called flaws." Thus he comments on the following passage:

As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day.

2 Hen. IP, iv, 4. And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

2 Hess. VI, iii, 1.

What flaves, and whirles of weather,
Or rather storms, have been aloft these three days.

B. f. Ff. Pilgrim, iii, 6.

Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seamen, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, wee unto the birds,
Gust, and foul flaves to herdsmen and to herds.

Sh. Venus f. Adonis, Suppl., 1, 425.

It appears that, in the Cornish dialect. a flaw signifies primitively a cut. Poliohele's Cornish Vocab. But it is also there used in a secondary sense. for those sudden or cutting gusts of wind:

P. Are they not frequently exposed, however [in Cornwall] to what they call fases of wind? T. Yes, and they sometimes prove not only very boisterous, but very fattal in their consequences. P. From whence are those casual winds called face? T. In the Cornish vocabulary that term signifies to cu!.

Theoph. Botanista, on Cornwall, p. 5.

He proceeds to derive the word from the Greek; but φλαώ in Greek means not to cut, but to crush or break. It is usually derived from flo. Milton uses it in this sense more than once. See Todd.

In the following passage flawes is unintelligible:

Who, falling in the flawes of her own youth,
Hath blister'd her report. Mees. for Meas., ii, S.
Warburton proposed flames, which has since been adopted, being found to be confirmed by sir W. Davenant, and suiting the sense so exactly, blister'd especially. The inversion of the letter m seems to have produced the error. Dr. Johnson rather petulantly rejected the emendation; probably because it came from Warburton. A FLAWN. A custard; from the French, flan. See Menage, in that word; and Du Cange in flato and flanto. Cotgrave renders the French flans, by flawnes. See him in Voc. With green cheese, clouted cream, with flowns and custards stor'd.

whig, cyder, and with whey, I domineer a lord.

Drayt. Nymphal., 6, p. 1496.

Kersey defines it, "A kind of dainty, made of fine flour, eggs, and butter; which is not exactly a custard, though approaching to it.

+FLEA-BITE. A trifling damage.

If they doe lose by pirates, tempests, rocks,
"Itis but a fleabile to their wealthy stockes;
Whilst the poore cutpurse day and night doth toile,
Watches and wardes, and doth himselfe turmoile. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+FLEA-POWDER. A remedy against fleas, which appears to have been popular in the seventeenth century.

Since Scoggin found out his flea-powder,

An excellent med'cine being us'd aright An excellent med'cine being us a might.
To put those negro back-biters to flight.

Poor Robin, 1699.

FLEAK. A small lock, thread, or twist. Johnson, who cites More against We find it also used Atheism for it. as a term of reproach from one woman to another; in which case, it seems that it can only mean, "little insignificant thing." Apparently the same as flake, or nearly so.

Fie upon me! tis well known I am the mother Of children, scurry fleak! 'tis not for nought You boil eggs in your gruel.

The Wits, O. Pl., viii, 450.

Mr. Steevens, in a note, says a fleak of bacon means a flitch; so it may, but what is that to the purpose? The word is found also in the sense of a hurdle, or grate; but that is equally

To FLECK. To spot. German, Gothic, and Danish.

And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels And fiecked darkness like a drunkard reeis
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's wheels.

Rom. 3: Jul., ii, 3.
We'll fleck our white steeds in your Christian blood.

Four Prentices, O. Pl., vi, 538.

And full of gergon as is a fiecken pye.

The Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 235.

That is, "full of chattering as a spotted mag-pie.''

All jag'd and frounst, with divers colours deckt. They sweare, and curse, and drink till they be fleckt.

Mirror for Magist., p. 292.

Fleckt sometimes means usual.

They sweare, and curse, and drinke till they be fleckt.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 292.

For fledged. part. Fur-Fleckt sometimes meant drunk:

FLEDGE, adj. for fledged, part. nished with feathers.

And Shylock, for his part, knew that the bird was fledge; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Morch. of Fen., iii, 1.

Whose downy plumes, with happy augurre,
Presage betimes what the fledge soul will be.

Proeme to Poole's Parmass.

There are likewise on either side of him discovered

Incre are income on either side of him discovered two great bunches so big as a large footeball, and (as some thinke) will in time grow to wings; but God, I hope, will that he shall be destroyed before he grow so fledge. Disc. of Serpents, Harl. Misc., iii, p. 111.

To FLEDGE, v. To become fledged, to acquire feathers. Sometimes written flidge.

In Westminster, the Strand, Holborn, and the chief places of resort about London, doe they every day build their nests, every houre fidge, and, in tearm-time especially, flutter they abroad in flocks.

R. Greene, Harl. Misc., viii, 383.

To FLEER. To look with scorn and sly impertinence: much the same as to sneer. It is no longer in common Tush, tush, man; never fleer and jest at me, I speak not like a doturd nor a fool.

Much Ado, v, l.

You speak to Casca; and to such a man
That is no feering tell-tale. Jul. Ces., i, 3.
†A crafty fellow I feare, he is so full of courtesie, and some cousoning companion, he hath such a feering countenance.

The Man in the Moone, 1609.

A FLEER, s., made from the above. A sneer, a contemptuous look.

Do but encave yourself,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns
That dwell in ev'ry region of his face. Othell., iv, l. FLEET. A small stream. Saxon. Fleet of ships, float, &c., are from the same origin.

Together wove we nets t' entrap the fish,

Together wove we nets to control of the following sedgy fleetes.

Matthewee's Aminta, C.

Matthewee's Aminta, C. In which lane standeth the Fleete, a prison-house, so In which lane standeth the Fiete, a prison-noise, a called of the fleet, or water, running by it.

Stone's Lond., p. 317.

To FLEET. To float. Saxon.

FLEET. To float. Saxon.

Our sever'd navy too

Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like.

Ant. f. Cl., iii, 11.

At length breakes down in raine, and haile, and sleet,
First from one coast, 'till nought thereof be drie;
And then another 'till that likewise fleet.

Spens. F. Q., IV, ix, 33.

This isle shall fleet upon the ocean,
And wander to the unfrequented Inde.

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 336.

Used as a verb active, for to cause to float :

They say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

As you like it, i, l.

+FLEETEN-FACE. What we now call a whey face. To fleet is to skim milk. You know where you are, you fleeten-face. B. & R. + To FLESH. To excite.

And when he falls the hunter's gladd, The hounds are flesh'd, and few are sadd Old hallad

FLESH AND FELL. Muscle and skin. See FELL.

FLESHMENT. Pride, encouraged by a successful attempt; being Reshed with, or having tasted success.

And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit.

Drew on me here again.

Les See to flesh, in 1 Hen. IV, v, 4.

FLETCHER. An arrow-maker. Flechier, Fr., from flêche, an arrow.

Her mind runs sure upon a felcher, or a bowyer: however, I'll inform against both: the felcher for taking whole money for pieced arrows; the bowyer for horning the headmen of his parish, and taking money for his pains. Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii. 378. N.B. The extremities of bows were generally finished with horn.

It is unseemlie for the painter to feather a shaft, or for the fletcher to handle the pencil.

Buphwes, Epist. Dedic., A 2 b.

Moreover, both the fletcher in makinge your shaft, and you in nockinge your shaft, must take heede that two feathers equally runne on the bow.

Ascham, Tozoph., p. 177.

FLEW'D. Having large hanging chaps, which, in a hound, were called flews.

My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so sanded, and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew.

Mids. N. Irr., iv, 1.

The one of them call'd Jolly-boy, a grete And large-flew'd hound.

Arthur Golding's Orid, b. iii, p. 83. +FLEW-NET. "A float-net, flew-net, reteniculum." Withale Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 125.

FLIBBERGIBBE. Used by Latimer for a sycophant.

And when these flatterers and flibbergibbes another day shall come and claw you by the back, your grace may answer them thus.

Sermons, fol. 39.

FLIBBERTIGIBBET. The name of a fiend, mentioned by Shakespeare; and, though so grotesque, not invented by him, but by those who wished to impose upon their hearers the belief of his actual existence; this, and most of the fiends mentioned by Edgar in Lear, being to be found in bishop Harsenet's book, cited below, among those which some Jesuits, about the time of the Spanish invasion, pretended to cast out, for the sake of making converts. The principal scene of this farce was laid in the family of Mr. Edmund Peckham, a Roman Catholic; and Dr. Harsenet, by order of the privy council, wrote and published a full account of the detection of it.

This is the foul fiend, Flibbertigibbet; he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock.

Lear, iii, 4.

See also act iv, 1.

See also act 1v, 1.

Fratereto, Phiberdigibet, Hoberdidance, Tocobatto, were four devils of the round or morice: these four had forty assistants under them, as themselves do comfesse. Harsenet, Decl. of Popish Impostures. Thou Flebergibet, Flebergibet, thou wretch! Wot'st thou whereto last part of that word doth stretch? Heywood, in his Sixte Hundred of Epig.

To flutter. To FLICKER.

Certain little birds only were heard to warble out their sweet notes, and to ficker up and downe the greene trees of the gardens. North's Plut., p. 834.
But there's another in the wind, some castrel That howers over her and dares her daily, Some fickering slave.

With gaudy pennons fickering in the air.
Fuimus Trocs, O. Pl., vii, 471.

It seems, in the next instance, to mean sparkling or flaming; but the speech is intentionally bombastical:

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire On flick ring Phorbus' front. Lear, Lear, ii. 2. Metaphorically applied to other motions. Dryden used the word.

I cannot boast of that flight-fading gift
You men call beauty. Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

FLICKER-MOUSE, or FLITTER-MOUSE: that is, fluttering mouse.

Once a bat, and ever a bat! a rere mouse, And bird o' twilight; he has broken thrice.

Come, I will see the flicker-mouse, my fly.

B Jons. New Inn, iii, 1. The above sentences are at some disstance from each other, but they are spoken of the same person. same author uses flitter-mouse also:

Me author uses journel.

And giddy fitter-mice, with leather wings.

Sad Sheph., ii, 8.

FLIGGE. Apparently for fledged. This is no doubt the correct mean-

Kill bad chickins in the tread, Nil Dad chickins in the tread, Fligge, they hardly can be catch'd.

R. Southwell's Poems, 1st ed., p. 51.

†Why do the eagles drive away their young ones before they be feathered or fligge?

Delectable Demanndes and Pleasant Questions,

1596, p. 48.

+FLIGGER. To sneer.

Then Nature has with beauty, more with scorne,
That they must figger, scoffe, deride, and jeure,
Appoynt their servants certaine houres t' appeare.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638.

+FLIGHT. Swift in transit.

So flight is melancholie to darke disgrace.

And deadly drowsie to a bright good morrow?

Copley's Fig for Fortune, 1596, p. 11.

A FLIGHT. A kind of arrow, formed for very long shots, well feathered, light, and flying straight.

of yes, here be all sorts, flights, rovers, and butt-shafts; but I can wound with a brandish, and never draw bow for the matter. B. Jons. Cynthia's Rev., v, 10, Thus would he speake: I would at welvescore pricks Have shot all day an arrow of a pound, Have shot the flight full fortie score and sixe.

Harringt. Epigr., II, 78.

Also the sport of shooting with such

He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the fight.

Much A.lo, i, 1. A flight, or flight-shot, was frequently spoken of as a mea ure of distance:

Heart of chance!
To throw me now, within a flight o' the town.
Forkshire Trag., sc. 8; Sh. Suppl., ii, 665. The distance of a flight-shot is stated by Leland, in his Itinerary, to be about equal to the breadth of the Thames above London Bridge:
The passage into it at ful se is a flite-shot over, as much as the Tamise is above the bridge.

Vol. iv. p. 44.

The flight arrow, in the Latin of the middle ages, was called Aecta, and was a fleet arrow, with narrow feathers. See Blount's Tenures; or the republication of them, entitled, Fragmenta Antiquitatis, where it is said that "Ralph le Fletcher held land of the king, by the service of paying viginti flectas (twenty flights) yearly at the exchequer." p. 110.

+FLIGHT-HEAD. A wild-headed per-

SOM: Some insurrection hath been in Warwickshire, and begun the very same day that the plot should have been executed; some Popish flight-heads thinking to do wonders.

+FLIGHT-WINGS. Appears to mean wings which take first one way and then another.

then another.

This man, a certain twofold fortune (as the poets faine) carrying with her flight-wings, shewed unto the world one while a bountifull benefactor and advancer of his friends to great fortunes, otherwhiles againe a vengible wayt-layer.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

FLIM-FLAM; a reduplication of flam, meaning the same. An imposition. This word was not originally in Johnson, but has been introduced by Todd.

This is a pretty fim-fiam. B. & Fl. Little Fr. L., act ii. These are no fiim-fiam stories.

Ozell's Rabelais, Prol. to B. II, vol. ii, p. iv.

In his Catalogue of Imaginary Books, he introduces also "the flim-flams of the law." Ibid., vol. ii, p. 50.

Affirming things which babies would scarce believe; and all the magpies in a countrie would hardly youchsafe to chatter such foolish film-flams as they do.

Hosp. of Inc. Fooles, p. 3.

An ingenious and amusing modern book was entitled Flim-flams; but the author seems to mean by it, Satires. He coins also the verb to flim-flam, for to satirise. See Brit. Crit., vol. xxvii, p. 207.

†They with a courtly tricke, or a fim-fiam, Do nod at me, whilst I the noddy am.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.
†And sit with patience an hour by the heels
To learn the non-sence of the constables.

Such jig-like film-flams being got to make
The rabble laugh and nut-cracking forsake.

Randoph's Poems, 1643.

†They took their leaves of the Palatine, telling him a They took their leaves of the Palatine, telling him a hundred stories and fiim-fams of their veneration for his person, and their readmess to serve his interests.

The Pagas Prince, 1690.

It wil not be troubled, colonel, with his meanings, if he do not marry her this very evening (for I'le ha' none of his fiim-fams and his may-be's.

Cowley's Cutter of Coleman Street, 1663.

+FLIMMERS. Seems in the following passage to mean common people.

But rurall fimmers and other of our sort, Unto thy lodging or court when they resort. Barclay's Belogues, 1570.

A FLING, s. A slight, trifling matter: in the following proverb:

England were but a fling,
Save for the crooked stick, and the gray goose wing. That is, England would be of no consequence, were it not for the bow and arrow. So explained by Fuller, in Barkshire, p. 85, 4to ed.

+To FLING. To kick. A flinging or kicking horse.

Nomenclatur

+FLIPPIT. A wanton woman.

How now my wanton flippitt?
Where are thy ging of sweetnes? this is mettle To coyne young Cupids in.

A. Wilson's Inconstant Ladv. A FLIRT-GILL. An arbitrary transposition of the compounded word gillflirt. that is, a flirting-gill, a woman of light behaviour. See GILL-FLIRT.

light behaviour. See Scurvy knave! I am none of his firt-gills Rom. and Jul., ii, 4

You heard him take me up like a firt-gill.

B. & Fl. Kn. of B. Pestle, iv. 1. Where, the last editor tells us, the second quarto reads gill-flirts. another place we have it more at length.

Thou took'st me up at every word I spoke As I had been a mankin, a furt-gillian.

Chances, iii, 1. The gilly-flower, from the resemblance of its name to the word gill-flirt, was considered as an emblem of falsehood. Shakespeare says, "some call them nature's bastards." Winter's T., iv, 3. See the note there. More anciently they were called gillofers (see Langham, Gard. of Health, p. 281), and are oddly enough, though very truly, derived from caryophyllum; for from that word is formed giroftee, Fr. Whence gillofer, and, lastly, gilly-Dr. Johnson hesitates between that etymology and the popular deduction of the word from Julyflower, which in truth deserves no attention. Gilly-flower meant originally a pink.

+To FLISK. To skip. Perhaps the same as Fisk.

Were fannes, and flappes of feathers fond,
To flit away the flisking flies.
Gosson's Picasant Quippes, 1596.

To FLIT. To fly or fleet away.

For on a sandie hill, that still did fitt And fall away, it mounted was full hie. Alas, that cannot be, for he is fit Out of this camp, withouten stay or pause.

Pairfax, Tasso, v, 58.

+FLITCHIN. A flitch of bacon.

Fower fitchins of bacon in the chimney.

MS. Insentory of Goods, 1658. FLITTER-MOUSE. See FLICKER-MOUSE.

FLIX. The flux, a well-known disorder.

What with the burning feaver, and the flise, Of sixtie men there scant returned sixe.

Harringt. Ariosto, xxxiii, 13.
The father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a bloody fiz.

Acts. xxviii, 8, in the authorised version. The change to flux was tacitly made, like many others of the same kind, early in the last century.

See Grubb's famous ballad of Honi soit qui mal y pense, for the situation to which St. George reduced the dragon.

+To FLOCK. To crowd.

Though in the morning I began to goe,
Good fellowes trooping, fock of me so,
That make what haste I could, the sunne was set,
E're from the gates of London I could get.
Taylor's Workes, 1609.

+FLOCKLINGS. Sheep.

But she takes not so much for curing of a thousand mortal people, as I have spent in turpentine and tarre to keep my flocklings cleanly in a spring-time.

Brome's Queen and Concubins, 1659.

+FLOCKS. Sediment.

Not to leave anie flockes in the bottome of the cup.

Nash. Pierce Penilesse. 1593.

FLORENTINE. A kind of made dish. for which there are three curious receipts in May's Accomplished Cook, pp. 259, 260, and 261. Coles says, "Florentine, a made dish, torta;" but in the other part of his dictionary he renders torta, "a cracknell." One author savs that custards were called Florentines: but he is not supported by others.

I went to Florence, from whence we have the art of making custards, which are therefore called Floren-Wit's Interpreter, p. 23.

If stealing custards, tarts, and Florespieter, p. 20.

By some late statute be created treason.

B. f. Fl. Woman Haler, v, 1.

The last editor, Mr. Weber, says it is "a kind of pie, differing from a pasty, in having no crust beneath the meat. A veal Florentine is a dish well known in ancient Scottish cookery." Dr. Jamieson confirms this, describing it thus: "a kind of pie; properly meat baked in a plate, with a cover of paste." May's Florentines are made with or without paste.

The following receipts are given for making Florentines.]

tilow to make a Florentine.—Take the kidney of a loyn of real, or the wing of a capon, or the leg of a rabbet, mince any of these small, with the kidney of a loyn of mutton, if it be not fat enough, then season it with cloves, mace, nutmega, and sugar, cream, currans, eggs, and rose-water, mingle these four together and put them into a dish between two sheets of paste, then close it, and cut the paste round by the brim of the dish, then cut it round about like virginal keys, then turn up one, and let the other lie.

A True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676, p. 98. tTo make a Florendine, or dish without paste, or on paste.—Take a leg of mutton or veal, shave it into this slices, and mingle it with some sweet herbs, as sweet marjoram, thyme, savory, paraley, and rosemary, being minced very small, a clove of garlick, some batten nutmeg, pepper, a minced onion, some grated manchet, and three or four yolks of raw eggs, mix all together, with a little salt, some thin slices of interlarded bacon, and some oister-liquor, lay the meat round the dish on and some oister-liquor, lay the meat round the dish on a sheet of paste, or in the dish without paste, bake it, and being baked, stick bay leaves round the dish. Queen's Royal Cockery, 1718.

FLORENTIUS. A knight, whose story is related in the first book of Gower's Confessio Amantis. He bound himself to marry a deformed hag, provided she taught him the solution of a riddle, on which his life depended. She is described as being

The lothest wight

That ever man cast on his eve. And under that description is alluded to by Shakespeare:

Be she as foul as was Florentine' love Tum. Shr., i, 2.

+FLOURISH. The condition of flourishing.

Present Rome may be said to be but the monument of Rome pass'd, when she was in that fourial that saint Austin desired to see her in; she who tam'd the world, tam'd her self at last, and falling under her own weight, fell to be a prey to Time.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

FLOTE. Sea or waves. Saxon. The same as fleet. [Explained a wave by Minsheu. It is the Fr. flot, from fluctus, still used in the same sense.]

They all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean fole,
Bound sadly home for Naples.

Temp., 1, 2.

+FLOUT. A water-course.

Item they do further present one sewer in Scotterings at the ould fout shall be sufficiently diked in breadth ten foot in the toppe and six in the bottom from the head thereof unto the carre.

Inquisition in Lincolnshire, 1883.

To FLUCE. Apparently, for to flounce, or plunge. Only found in these lines: They flirt, they yerk, they backward fuse, and fling As if the devil in their heels had been.

Drayten, Moone., p. 513.

†FLUERS. Fishing-boats from eight to twenty tons burthen using flue MS. Customal of Brighton. nets.

FLUITS wants explanation, in the following passage:

And now they sound Tantara teares alarme, the finite fight, fight anew,

And there awhile the Romans fall to ground,
The cries and shouts of men to skies resound,
They fall, fall, file, the fluits, downe, downe the droms do crie.

Probably it means flutes [or fifes]. To fluits, horse-coursers, sellers, and to buyers.

To prisoners, to night-farmers, and to buyers,
To prisoners, to night-farmers, and freemen.
To all estates of forraigners, and freemen.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. +FLUMMERY. Oatmeal reduced to jelly.

To make fummery that will thicken sauce excellently, instead of grated bread or flower; take a good handful of beaten ost-meal, put it into a quart of water, and boil it half away, then strain it through a sieve; let it stand by you for use, it is much better than grated bread or flower, or in most cases than eggs.

To make fummery.—Take half a peck of wheat-bran that has not been over-much boulted or sifted, let it soak three or four days in two gallons of water, then strain out the liquid part, pressing it hard; boil it to the consumption of a third part, so that when it cools it will be like a jelly, and keep long. When you heat any of it, season it with sugar, and a little rose or orange-flower-water, and add a little cream or milk, and it will be very pleasant and nourishing. and it will be very pleasant and nourishing.

The Way to get Wealth, 1714.

+FLUNDERING, ? floundering.

Report (which our moderners clepe flundring fame) puts mee in memoric of a notable jest.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

+FLURN. To sneer.

LUKN. 'To sneer.

And for those abortive births alipp'd from my brain which can carry neither worth nor weight in the scale of this pregnant age, so fraught and furnish'd with variety of gallant pieces and performances of the choicest of writers, give me leave to flurn at them, as the poor excrescencies of nature, which rather blemish than adorn the structure of a well-composed body.

Rictcher's Poems, Pref.

+FLURT. A satirical jesture.

And must these smiling roses entertain
The blows of scorn, and flurts of base disdain?

Quarles's Emblems.

†FLURTING. Scorning? First, know I have here the furting feather, and have given the parish the start for the long stock.

Pecle's Old Wives Tale, 1595.

Ripe, full.
The borders maritime FLUSH.

Lack blood to think on't; and flush youth revolt.

Ant. and Cl., i. 4.

Now the time is flush,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Timon A., v, 5. With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May.

Haml., iii, 8.

To FLUSH. To fly out suddenly, as a bird disturbed.

So flushing from one spray unto another, Gets to the top, and then embolden'd flies Unto a height past ken of human eyes. Browne, Brit. Past., I, iv, p. 83.

It is still retained as a sporting term: When a woodcock I flush, or a pheasant I spring.

Song.

+FLUTE. A cask?

TE. A CRRK!

For cherries plenty, and for coran's
Enough for fifty, were there more on's;
For elles of beere, flutes of canary
That well did wash downe pastics-mary;
For peason, chickens, sawces high,
Pig, and the widdow-venson-pye.

Lovelace's Lucasia, 1649.

FLUXIVE. Flowing with moisture. These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear.

A Lover's Complaint, Suppl. to Sh., i, 743.

FLY. A familiar spirit. Apparently a cant term with those who pretended to deal in magic, and similar impostures. Of Dapper, in the Alchemist, it is said that he wishes to have

A familiar To rifle with at horses, and win cups. The pretended necromancer, Subtle, afterwards says,

Give you him all you play for; never set him,
For he will have it.

He is answered.

You are mistaken, doctor, Why, he does ask one but for cups and horses, A rifting fly, none of your great familiars. B. Jons. Alck., act i.

This is what is meant, when he speaks, in the argument to the play, of Casting figures, telling fortunes, news, Selling of flies.

He is instructed afterwards how to keep and feed his Av. See act v. sc. 2. Fl_{y} also is used for a parasite:

Courtiers have fies
That buzz all news unto them. Massing. Virg. Mart., ii, 2. So also Ben Jonson, who by Mosca means the same; as well as his Fly, in the play of the Light Heart. The allusion is classical. +FLY. Phrase. See preceding article.

His name is Curiositie, who not content with the studies of profite and the practise of commendable sciences, setteth his mind wholie on astrologie, nerromancie, and magicke. This divel prefers an Ephamerides before a Bible; and his Ptolemey and Hall before Ambreas colden. Chrisostome, or S. Augustine, pre-Ambrose, golden Chrisostome, or S. Augustine: promise him a familiar, and he will take a file in a bos for good paiment.

Lodge, Incarnate Devils, 1596.

+FLY-FLAP. An implement for driving away flies.

A fire-flap wherewith to chase them away from blowing of meate, flabellum.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 207.

That you had a brow Hung o're your eyes like flie-flaps.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646.

+FLYING-COACHES. The machines in fairs by which people are carried round in a verticle circle.

Now comes Bartholomew-tide, a universal holiday time in London, if not all over the bills of mortality; time in London, if not all over the bills of mortality; the acholars break up for about a fortnight, because it is customary; and they are very easy under the affliction. The lawyers break up for almost five months, because it is the long vacation. The apprentices go to the fair because their masters give them leave, and the masters go, because they take leave; while the flying-coaches are planted in proper places, and like the fickle wheel of fortune, toss their inhabitants into all the varieties of life. Now at the top, and with one turn at the bottom, and then to add to their affliction ride backwards, but then their next turn is to rise to the top, and ride forwards. The lowest ebb has the highest flood—fear not.

Poor Robin, 1733.

FOBEDAYS. Apparently, mysteries or feasts.

Likewise Titus Livy writeth, that in the solemnization time of the Bacchanalian foledays at Rome, &c.

Rubelais, Engl., B. iii, ch. 45.

Ozell says upon this, "If this be a Scotch word for holydays, be it so." The word, therefore, was sir F. Urquhart's; but Dr. Jamieson has it not. Perhaps it is from fow; quasi, drunken The original has only "es davs. Bacchanales."

As we for Saunders death have cause in fods of teares to saile. Paradyse of Dayntie Devises, 1576.

+To FODDER. To supply with food. I'll tell thee plainly, such doe entertaine mee, That for thy rayling basenesse will disdaine thee. Had they thy hungry chappe once foddered, Thou wouldst not title them embrodered.

To FODE OUT, or FODE FORTH, To keep in atten-WITH WORDS. tion and expectation, to feed with words. Probably from fodan, Goth., the same etymology as that of to feed. No dictionary that I have seen acknowledges this phrase; but it is in Capell's School of Shakespeare, to which I own my obligation for the last two of these examples.

> In this means time with words he foded out The worthy earle, until he saw his men According as he bade them come about Harringt. Ariost., ix, 59.

In the original:

+FOD.

Il traditor intanto dar parole

Fatto gli area, sin che i cavalli, &c. St. 65.

But the king alter'd his minde, and foded him foorth with faire words, the space of a year or more.

Danet's Commines, sign. Q. 1.

Knoweyng perfectly that there he should bee foded furth with argumentes so long that he should be in a manner wery.

Stow's Annals, Hen. VIII, p. 183.

FOEMAN. A foe. Perhaps not altogether obsolete; once very common.

Desyr'd of forreine formen to be known.

Spens. F. Q., I, vi, 29.

He presents no mark to the enemy; the formen may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife.

2 Hen. IF, iii, 2.

Used also Rank strong grass. in the northern counties, for latter grass. Ray defines it, "long grass, remaining in pastures till winter;" which agrees with Du Cange's definition of fogagium.

One with another they would lie and play,
And in the deep fog batten all the day.

Drayt. Moonc., p. 512.

The thick and well grown fog doth matt my smoother alades.

Drayt. Pol., 13, p. 924.

Fog-cheeses, in Yorkshire, are such as are made from this latter grass, as eddish-cheeses, in some other counties.

To FOG. To hunt in a servile manner: whence pettifogger; not from petit voque, as Grose conjectures: which words, probably, were never current in England. A soldier says to a lawyer, in reproach, Wer't not for us, thou swad (quoth he) Where wouldst thou fog to get a fee? But to defend such things as thee,

But to defend such inner as three, 'tis pity.

Counter-Scriffe, is Dryd. Misc. iii, p. 840.

†P. Were I not afraid of my father, I could tell him that which would satisfie him in this point well enough
S. Hah, fogging knave. Terence in English, 1614.

+FOGGER. A cheat, a flatterer. Hence pettifogger.

pettsfogger.

I shall be exclaimed upon to be a beggerly fogger, greedily hunting after heritagh. And moreover it were no reason to spoile her of that she hath.

Terence in English, 1614.

+FOGGY. Fat: bloated.

She was nor dwarfe-like statur'd, nor too tall.

She was nor dwarfe-like statur'd, nor too tall,
Nor foggy fat, nor yet consumptive leane.

Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

Travelling on the way, the weather being extreame hot and the horse no lesse fat and foggis with over much former case, fell downe and died.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

To FOIL. To trample. Probably from fouler, Fr.

Whom he did all to peeces breake, and foyle
In filthy durt, and left so in the loathely soyle.

Speas. F. Q., V. 11, 33.
But the third she beare tooke overthrew, and foiled under hir feete.

Danet's Commines, sign. M 3.

To FOIN. To push, in fencing. Skinner derives it from poindre, to prick; Junius, from φονεύω; both very improbably. It seems to be more likely to have arisen from fouiner, to push for eels with a spear; which Menage says the Flemings used, having formed it from fouine, the harpoon or trident with which it was done, that word being itself from fuscina, Latin.

To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee.

Merry W. W., ii, 8. Sir, boy, I'll whip you from your foining tence;
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will. Much Ado, v, 1.
Will he foin, and give the mortal touch?

Will he foin, and give the mortal touch?

Gobling, O. Pl., x, 183.

Rogero never foynd, and seldom strake

But flatling.

She lets us fight;

If we had no more wit, we might foin in carnest.

Shirley's Imposture, iv, p. 47. The word was in use in Chaucer's time.

A FOIN. A push of the sword or spear.

. First six foines with hand speares. Holingsh., p. 838.

Now he intends no longer to forbeare, Both hurleth out a forme with force so maine.

Harringt. Ariast., xxxvi, 55.

Plenty, parti-FOISON, or FOIZON. cularly of harvest. Foison, Fr., which Menage and others derive from fusio. See Du Cange.

All foizon, all abundance. Temp., ii. 1.

As blossoming time,
That from the seedness the bare fallow brings Meas. for M., i, 5. To teeming foyson.

This passage has been thought corrupt; the word that most offends me in it, is seedness, which I would change to seeding. Blossoming time. I presume, means summer; but, without more alteration, the allusion is incorrectly applied.

Scotland has foysons to fill up your will Of your mere own. Macb., iv. 3. As our modern editions of Shakespeare undertake to give a corrected orthography, it is foolish that this word should in these places be spelt with y. Fifteene hundred men, and great foison of vittels.

Holingsh., p. 1613.

As the good seeds sowen in fruitful soil

Bring forth foyson when barren doth them spoil.

Puttenham's Art of Poetry.

Cartwright, whose play of the Ordinary was published in 1651, puts foison into the mouth of Moth, the antiquary, as an obsolete word, which in Shakespeare's time it certainly was FOIST. A barge, or pinnace. From fuste, Dutch and French.

Yet one day in the year, for sweet 'tis voic'd,
And that is when it is the lord mayor's foist.

B. Jons. Epig., 134; On the Famous Foyage, p. 287.
These are things that will not strike their topsails to a foist; and let a man of war, an Argosy, hull, and cry cockles.

Philaster, v, p. 165. That is, "They will not yield to an inferior vessel, and suffer a man of war, in which they are, to lie inactive, and in base traffic."

In an old poem, called The Shippe of Safegarde, 1569, it is used figuratively:

Safegarde, 1509, it is used figuratively: Even so the will and fansie vayne of man, Regarding not the hasard of him selfe, Rogarding not the hasard of him selfe, Full fraught with sin and care of worldly pelfe, Makes no account of weather, winde, or tide. Commandment was given to the haberdashers, of which craft the maior was, that they should prepare a barge for the bachelors, with a master, and a forste, garnished with banners, like as they use when the maior is presented at Westur. Nich. Prog. of Eliz., l, p. 1. It fortuned that the other fregate of Moores, that had founde and taken Finco. met with this other had founde and taken Fineo, met with this other foiste, or galleie, wherein Fiacuma was.

Riche, Farew. to Militarie Profession, 1581.

See GALLEYFOIST.

Foist meant also a sharper, and is, perhaps, derived from to foist, in the sense of to thrust in improperly, which is said to be from fauser, French.

320

Prate again, as you like this, you whoreson foist, you.
You'll controll the point, you?

B. Jons. Every Man in his Humour, iv, 7.

This brave fellow is no better than a foist. Foist! what is that? A diver with two fingers; a pickpocket; all his train study the figging law, that's to say cutting of purses and foisting.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 113. There is enough about foysts in R. Greene's Theeves falling out, &c., Harl. Misc., viii, p. 382, &c. Thus also foister:

When facing foisters fit for Tiburne fraies, Are food-sick faint, or heart-sick run their waies Are food-sick faint, or heart-sick run their wase.

Mirror for Magist., 483.

†Which branded him with names of infamic,
Foyst, sple-squire, and pander base.

The Newse Medamorphosis, 1, 17, 1600, MS.

TO FOIST. To cheat. From the above.

Thou cogging,
Base, foysting lawyer, that dost set
Thy mind on nothing, but to get Thy living, by thy damned pettifogging.

Dryd. Misc., 12mo, iii, 339.

FOISTING-HOUND, or CUR. A small dog, of the lap dog kind. A stinking hound HOUNG.

And alledging urgent excuses for my stay behind, part with her as passionately as she would from her foisting-hound.

Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 259.

As for shepherds' dogs, foisting curs, and such whom some fond ladies make their daily, nay nightly companions too, I shall pass over, being neither worthy to be inserted in this subject, nor agreeable thereto.

Gentl. Recreat., p. 23, 8vo.

Though it be a privilege of the lady Brach, "to stand by the fire, and stink" (Lear, i, 4), and to foist sometimes bears a kindred sense, it is not quite clear that this name is so derived; yet it is probable enough, as given in contempt. Coles, indeed, decides it; having "A fysting (i. e., foisting) cur, catellus graveolens." Dict. See FYST.

†FOGUE. Passion; fury. (Fr.) The term occurs in the Memoirs of Colonel Hutchinson, 1644.

In FOLIO. In abundance, in a great style.

The flint, the stake, the stone in folio flew, Anger makes all things weapons when 'tis heat. Fanshaw's Lus., I, 91.

FOLIOT, from the Italian, Folletto, or the French, Follet. An imaginary demon, supposed to be harmless.

demon, supposed to de narmiess. Another sort of these there are, which frequent forlors houses, which the Italians call Foliots, [but N B. they have nothing nearer than Folletto] most part innoxious, Cardan holds; they will make strange noyses in the night, howe sometimes pittifully, and then laugh again, cause great fiame and sudden lights, fing stones, rattle chains, shave men, open doores and shut them, fling down platters, stooles, chests sometimes appeare in likeness of hares, crowes, black dogs, &c. Burton, duat. of Melanch., p. 48, ubi plura. FOLK-MOTE. An assembly of people; mote, a meeting, folk, people, Sax.

To which folk-mote they all with one consent, Sith each of them his lady had him by. Suens. P. O., IV. 6.

+FOME. Scum.

Fone that commeth of lead tried, being in colour like +FOMERILL. A turret on the roof of a hall or kitchen; another name for a louver.

The lovir or fomerill, fumarium et infumibulum.
Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 168.

FON. A fool: or fond, in the northern dialect. Used by Spenser, in imitation of Chaucer, though obsolete in his time.

Thou art a fon of thy love to bost, All that is lent to love will be lost.

Spens. Sh. K., Feb., 69. OND. Foolish; from fon, quasi fonned, which may be found in FOND. Wicliffe. Fond, therefore, in the modern sense of tender, evidently implied, in its origin, a doting or extravagant degree of affection.

Thou fond mad woman,
Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?
Rick. II, v, 3.

Tell these sad women

Tell these sad women

Tis fond to wall inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at them. Cor., iv, 1.
To starve in full barns were fond modesty.
He that is young thinketh the olde man fond, and the olde knoweth the young man to be a foole.

Euph. and his Eng., p. 9.

+FOND-LIKE. Foolish.

But streight anon mine uncle and he fell on other talk, of lords and ladies, and many fond-like things, I minded not; for I is weed sure, this keep't me waking e're sine.

Brome's Northern Lass.

+FONDLING. A term of endearment. Findling, she said, why striv'st thou to be gon? Why shouldst thou so desire to be alone?

Beaumont's Poems, 1640. Fondling was also used in the sense of an idiot, or fool. See under ASPIRE.

So also,

FONDNESS, and the other derivatives. Fondness it were for any, being free, To covet fetters, tho' they golden be Spens. Sonnet, 87. See Johnson's Dictionary.

FOND, for found. A licence used in imitation of Chaucer.

And many strange adventures to be fond. Spens. F. Q., III, ii, 8. Used also for tried, on the same authority. See Junius on these words.

For in the sea to drowne herselfe she fond, Rather then of the tyrant to be caught, Ibid., P. Q., III, vii, 26.

FONE, for foes. An obsolete form, frequently employed by Spenser: as But ere he had established his throne,
And spred his empire to the utmost shore,
He fought great battells with his salvage fone.
F. Q., II, x, 10.
He shook his golden mace, wherewith he dare
Resist the force of his rebellious fone.
Fairf. Tasso, vili, 78.

+FOOD-FIT. Capable of feeding. I see not how, in those round blasing beams, One should imagine any food-fit limbs;
Nor can I see how th' earth, and sea should feed So many stars, whose greatnes doth exceed So minn times (if star-divines say froth)
The greatnes of the earth and occun both. Du Bartas.

+FOODING. Provisions? Ralph reads a line or two, and then crys mew; Deeming all clue according to those few;
Thou might'st have thought and prov'd a wiser lad,
(As Joan her fooding bought) son good, som had.
Witts Recreations, 1654.

†FOODY. Food-bearing; fertile.

Who brought them to the sable fleet from Ida's foody leas.

Chapm. I., xi, 104.

FOOL. A personage of great celebrity among our ancestors, whose office in families is very fully exemplified in many of Shakespeare's plays. business was to amuse by his jests, in uttering of which he had complete licence to attack whom he pleased. The peculiar dress and attributes of the fool are fully illustrated by the plate subjoined to the first part of Henry IV, in Johnson and Steevens's edit. 1778. See also BABLE, &c. A few particulars will be sufficient on a subject so familiarised by perpetual recurrence. When Justice Overdo personates a fool, in the play of Bartholomew Fair, in order to spy out the proceedings of the place, he says he wishes to be taken for "something between a fool and a madman. Act ii, 1. This is literally the character, a fellow who, pretending folly, has still the audacity of a madman. The licence allowed to these privileged satirists was such, that nothing which they said was to be resented. be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition," says Olivia to Malvolio, "is to take those things for birdbolts, that you deem cannon bullets. There is no slander in an allowed foul, tho' he do nothing but rail." Tw. Night, i, 5.

This licence cannot be more fully exemplified than by the Fool in Lear, who seems to us to carry his jests much too far.

Their dress is alluded to here:

Or to see a fellow In a long motley coat, guarded with yellow. Prologue to K. Hen. VIII. And by Jaques, in As you like it, when he repeats that motley's the only wear. &c.

In the earliest attempts at dramatic exhibitions, a fool was an indispensable ingredient; and, like the Harlequin of the Italian theatre, he was always falling into mischief, and meeting the very persons he wished to avoid. Thus:

Merely thou art death's fool,
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet run'st toward him still. Meas. for M., iii, 1. The fool was usually a part of great licence and facility to the actor, who was allowed almost to fabricate his own part. See Hamlet's directions to restrain this abuse. The fool was always to be merry.

I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano, A stage where every man must play his part, And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the fool, With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come. Mer. of V., i, 1

Hence the phrase of playing the fool seems to have arisen.

The Lord Mayor's Fool was a distinguished character of that class; and there was a curious feat which he was bound by his office to perform, in the celebration of the Lord Mayor's day. He was to leap, clothes and +FOOL'S-PARADISE. Deceptive good all, into a large bowl of custard: a jest so exactly suited to the taste of the lower classes of spectators, that it was not easily made stale by repe-This is alluded to here:

You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leapt into the custurd. All's W., ii, 5.

He may perchance, in tail of a sheriff's dinner, Skip with a rime o' the table, from new nothing, And lake his admin leap into a custard, Shall make my lady mayoress and her sisters Laugh all their hoods over their shoulders.

B. Jons. Devil's an Ass, i, 1. Perhaps it is this custard which, in the Staple of News, is called, "the custard politick, the mayor's." A. ii. sc. 3. See PATCH, MOTLEY, &c.

+FOOL. A confection. Perhaps what we call gooseberry fool.

Apple-tarts, fools, and strong cheese to keep down. The steaming vapours from the parson's crown.

Canary too, and claret eke also, Which made the tips of their ears and noses glow. Satyr against Hypocrites, 1689.

+FOOL OF ALL FOOLS. A very great

Every man pitied Scogin, and said, this fool will die under the spout; then said the knight and every man. Go you, master Nevil, and fetch him away, for it is fool of all fools. Scogin's Jasta, p. 36.

+FOOL'S-FEVER. Folly.

And you seeing my pulses beat, pleasantly judge me apt to fall into a fooles fearer; which lest it happen to shake mee hereafter, I am minded to shake you of.

Lylie's Emphases and his England.

FOOL-BEGG'D, adj. Absurd; so foolish that the guardianship of it might well be begged. See to BEG FOR A FOOL.

But if thou live to see like right bereft, This fool-begg'd patience will in thee be left.

Com. of E., ii, 1. Qu. Should it not be "of thee," meaning "by thee?"

FOOL-HAPPIÉ. Unwittingly happy, fortunate rather than provident.

And yet in doubt ne dares
To joy at his fool-kappie oversight.

Sp. F. Q., I, vi, l. Church conjectures fool-hardy, but that is not so well suited to the sense of the context.

+Tb FOOLIFY. To make a fool of.

That himselfe, but one, shrunke now (which hee never had done before) under the burthen of so many necessities and troubles comming so thicke upon him: they being throughly taught how with excessive flatterie to beare him up. fooligied and gulled the man, telling him ever and amone, That there was nothing in the world so adverse, &c.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

FOOLS, FEAST OF. See the particulars of this ceremony, in Archæologia, xv, p. 225, &c.

Knowyng the fashion of you men to bee suche, as by raising of our beautic you thinke to bring us into a praisying of our neutro of fooles paradyse.

Riche, Parew. to Militaria Profession, 1881.

Nos opinantes ducimur falso gaudio. He brings us silly ones into a fooles paradise.

Terence in English, 1614.

Of trust of this arte riseth joyes nice,
For lewde hope is fooles puradice.

Ashmole's Theat. Chem., 1653.

+FOOT. To know the length of one's foot, to be well acquainted with his character.

character.

Nose teipsum: take the length of your owne foot.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 570.

If you meane either to make an art or an occupation of love, I doubt not but you shall finde worke in the court sufficient; but you shall not know the length of my foot, untill by your cunning you get commendation. Lylic's Euphnes and his England.

Animum alterius ex animo spectat smo, Hee thinkes others to be like himselfe. He judges an other mans minde by his owne. He measures an other mans foote by his owne last. Hee considers an other mans meaning by his owne intent. Terence in English, 1614.

323 FOO

FOOT, THE, OF A SONG. The burden of it. Refraine, in French.

File, less, ions, ions: whereof the first is the cry and voyce they commonly use to one another to make haste, or else it is the foot of some song of triumph.

North's Plat., p. 11.

This strange version is from Amvot. not Plutarch: hence the division of Eleleu, and the addition of an f at the end. There also he found the refrain, which he has translated the foot. It is curious to see how different are Plutarch's own words: Επιφωνείν δέ ταίς σπονδαίς έλελευ, ιου, ιου τους παρόντας ων τὸ μέν σπεύδυντες άναφωνείν, καὶ παιωτίζοντες είωθασι το δέ. &c. Vit. Thesei, cap. 22. I am tempted to add the version of Amvot, as another curiosity: "Ele-leuf, iou, iou: dont le premier est le cry et la voix dont usent ordinairement ceulx qui s'entredonnent courage l'un à l'autre, pour se haster, ou bien est refrain d'un chant de triomphe.

+FOOT-BACK. Singularly used here.

Should foot-back trotting travellers intend.
To match his travels, all were to no end.
Let poets write their best, and trotters run, They n'er shall write nor run as he hath done.

Taylor's Works. 1630.

FOOT-CLOTH. A cloth protecting the feet: i. e., housings of cloth, which hung down on every side of a horse, and were used for state at some times, and affected merely as a mark of gentility at others. Mr. Bayes's troops, in the Rehearsal, were usually dressed in foot-cloths, that the legs of the men might serve unperceived for the horses.

Thou dost ride on a fool-cloth, dost thou not? Say. What of that? Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a closk, when honester men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 2 Hew VI, iv, 7.

It was an ornament used in peace only, as ill suited to any but a slow and pompous pace:

Bees make their hives in soldiers' helmets, our steeds are furnished with foot-cloths of gold, instead of saddles of steel.

Alex. and Camp., O. Pl., ii, 131. There is one sir Bounteous Progress newly alighted from his foot-cloth, and his mare waits at door, as the fashion is.

Mad W. my Mast., v, 349.

It was long considered as a mark of great dignity and state:

I am a gentleman,
With as much sense of honour as the proudest
Don that doth ride on's foot-cloth, and can drop
Gold to the numerous minutes of his age.
Shirley's Brothers, i, 1.

But beware of supposing the beast itself to be called foot-cloth, as some would have it. Sir Bounteous is said to "alight from his foot-cloth." as one might say "alighted from his saddle.

A guarded foot-cloth meant only a laced or ornamented foot-cloth:

Ye can make
Unwholsome fools sleep for a guarted fool-cloth.
B. & Fl. Thierry. &c., act v. This puzzled Mr. Seward. So in the Case is altered, by Ben Jonson:

I'll go in my foot-cloth, I'll turn gentleman. Act iii, p. 856. In, not on, as quoted in a note on Rich. III, to give more colour to the opinion that the horse himself was so called. It means only, I will go in that state and pomp. So in the other passage cited for the same purpose:

Thou shalt have a physician, The best that gold can fetch, upon his foot-cloth. That is, a genteel physician, who rides on a foot-cloth, or with a foot-cloth thrown over his saddle.

Yet, notwithstanding the parade of the mule and foot-cloth, the fee of the physician was miserably small. Howell writes, in 1660.

writes, in 1660,

Nor are the fees which belong to that profession—any thing considerable, where doctors of physic use to attend a patient, with their nules and foot-cloths, in a kind of state, yet they receive but two shillings for their fee, for all their gravity and pains.

Parly of Beasts, p. 73.

Hervey rode on horseback with a foot-cloth to visit his patients, his man following on toot, as the fashion then was, which was very decent, now quite discontinued. The judges rode also with their foot-cloths to Westminster-hall, which ended at the death of sir Rob. Hyde, lord ch. justice. And E. of Shaft. would have revived it, but several of the judges, being old and ill-horsemen, would not agree to it.

Abbry, in Letters from Bodt. Libr., ii, 386.

If we had such horse-takers amongst us, and that surfet-swolne churles, who now ride on their foot-cloathes, might be constrayned to carrie their flesh budgets from place to place on foote, the price of velvet and cloath would fall with their belies.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1593.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1599.

FOOT-CLOTH-HORSE, or One of those animals so ornamented, and probably trained on purpose for that service; for a spirited horse would not bear such an incumbrance. till reconciled by much use.

Three times to-day my foot-cloth-horse did stumble, And started, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loth to bear me to the slaughter house.

Rich. III, iii, 4. Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrop? And barchead plodded by my foot-cloth-mule?

Nor shall I need to try,
Whether my well-grass'd, tumbling foot-cloth-nag,
Be able to out run a well-breath'd catchpole.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 473. Mr. Steevens quotes it well-greus'd;

but the other is probably right.

+FOOTING-TIME. "When the childbed woman gets up." Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary.

+FOOTMAN'S-INN. A poor lodging.

Those that depend on destiny, and not on God, may chance look through a narrow lattice at footmans inn.

Penniles Parliament of Threed-bare Poets, 1608. Which at the heeles so hants his frighted ghost, That he at last in footman's-inne must host, Some castle dolorous compos'd of stone,

Like (let me see) Newgate is such a one.

Rowlands, Knave of Harts, 1613.

A common messenger. +FOOT-PAGE. Un messagier, un va luy dire. A messenger, or he that is alwayes ready at his maisters becke to runne of errands: a lackey: a foote-page. Nomenclator.

+FOOT-PASE. A mat.

Storea, Plin.; teges, Colum.; matta, Ovid. φορμὸς, ψίαθος, ρίπος. Nutte. A mat: a footepase of sedges. Nomenclator.

+FOOT-POST. A letter-carrier who went on foot.

He takes away the relation betwixt a lawyer and his client; and makes it generally extend to the clearks client; and niakes it generally extend to the clearks in offices; under whose safegard hee hath his licence seal'd to travalle; a foot-post and hee differ in the discharge of their packet, and the payment; for the informer is content to tarry the next tearme (perhaps) till a judgement. Stephens's Essays and Char., 1615.

Ant. Tridewell well met. Why so fast, sir I took you for a foot-post.

Tri. A foot-post! indeed your fine wit will post you into another world one of these days, if it take not the whipping post i' th' way. And why foot-post, in your little witty apprehension?

Brome's Northern Lass.

+FOOT-SOLE.

Sole is as much to say, as be alone,
And never Soleand goose did hatch but one:
Or else the name of them may well proceede
From the Dams foot-sole, whence they all do breede,
Which in her claw she holds untill it hatch, The gander fetches food, the goose doth watch.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+FOPPERY. Seems to have been equivalent to a farce.

VAIGHT TO A TRICE.

And I am sorry to hear how other nations do much tax the English of their incivility to public ministers of state, and what ballads and pasquils, and fopperies and plays, were made against Gondamar for doing his masters busines. Howell's Pamiliar Letters, 1650. and plays, were made against Gondamar for doing his masters busines. Howell's Pamiliar Letters, 1650. If there be any broken intervals, which cannot be so well devoted to these set and soleum fopperies, those are commonly glean'd up by some other little insignificant trifles; so that the main of his whole life, is nothing else but one continued scene of folly and impertmence.

Country-Gentleman's Vade-Merum, 1699. +FOPPITY. A simpleton.

Why does this little foppites laugh always? 'tis such a ninny that she betrays her mistris, and thinks she does no hurt at all, no, not she.

Coulry's Cutter of Coleman Street, 1633.

FOR. Not inelegantly used instead of since, or because.

Then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge, and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law?

Cymb., i Cymb., iv, 2. And heav'n defend your good souls, that you think I will your serious and great bus'ness scant, For the is with me Nor, for he swell'd with ire, was she afraid.

And, for I know the minds

Of youth are apt to promise, and as prone To repent after, 'tis my advice, &c. Albumatar, O. Pl., vii, 240.

Also, for fear of:

We'll have a bib for spoiling of thy doublet.

B. 5. Pl. Captain, iii, 5.

Ah, how light he treads,

For spoiling his silk stockings

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v. 416.

If he were too long for the bed, they cut off his l.gs.
for catching cold.

Now the women are not permitted to come into their temples (yet they have secret places to look in thorove grates), partly for troubling their devotions.

Sandys' Travels, p. 55.

His valour is commouly three or foure yards long, fastned to a pike in the end for flying off.

Overbury's Char., 1, 2, b.

The following passage, therefore, ought not to be altered:

He's well wrought, put him on apace for cooling.

B. 5. Pl. False One, iv, last line. Where Mr. Sympson proposes and prefers "'fore cooling."
+FOR ME. A phrase for, as far as regards me.

Well, I deliver you my masses, , , , of them by any torment for me.

Terence in English, 1614. Well, I deliver you my maids, you may search it out

FOR THE HEAV'NS. Merely a corrupted orthography, instead of "'fore the heav'ns," an oath.

I have determined that here shall be a nitcht field this day, we mean to drink, 'for the heav'as.

Creede's Menachmi, sign. Bl.

Then boots, hat, and band; some ten or eleven pounds will do it all, and suit me, 'for the heavens.

B. Jons. Every Man out of H., ii, 3.

FOR, or FORE, in compounds, had sometimes the force of expressing a contradiction to the verb combined with it: as, to forbid, is to bid not. See also FORSPEAKE, FORTHINK, FOR-TEACH, &c. Sometimes it had, on the contrary, an intensive power, increasing the force of the word; as, forlorn. In this way it is nowhere so arbitrarily used, as by Sackville, in his legend of Buckingham, where it may be seen joined with a multitude of words nowhere else united with it. We find there, forlet (much hinder), foreirking (much hating), forfaint (completely faint), forwander'd (quite wandering), foregald (much galled), and many others, not to be met generally in authors of that time. Its use, as taken from before, is sufficiently known; as to foredoom, to condemn beforehand, &c. prefix, in its various senses, was so freely employed, that I have not attempted to exhaust the instances of it, but have given ample specimens.

To FORAGE. To range abroad, which, Dr. Johnson says, is the original sense; but fourrage, the French source of it. is formed from the low Latin, foderagium, food: the sense of ranging, therefore, appears to be secondary, and is derived from the necessity of ranging far in foraging parties in quest of food.

Arties in quest of food.

Porage, and run
To meet displeasure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

K. John, v, 1.

+FORBOND. The extreme boundary. And soo they thre departed thens and rode forthe as faste as ever they myst tyl that they cam to the forbond of that mount.

Morte d'Arthur, i, 139.

To FORCE. To regard, or care for. Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear. Love's L. L., v, 2.

Yor me I force not argument a straw, Since that my case is past the help of law.

Sk. Rape of Lucr, Sappl., vol. i, p. 533.

Astolfo of their presence dues not force.

Harringt. Ariost., xxii, 13.

See also xxiii, 27.

But when he many monthes, hopeless of his recure, Had served her, who forced not what pains he did en-dure. Romens and Jul., Suppl. to Sh., i, 281.

In Spenser it sometimes means to strive:

Forcing in vaine the rest to her to tell. Howbeit in the ende, perceiving those men did more flercely force to gette up the hill.

North's Plut., p. 327.

Also, to urge in argument:
C. Wby force you this? Fol. Because, &c.

Cor., iii, 2. Also, to stuff, the same as to farce. q. v.; hence forced meat, still used for stuffing.

He's not yet thorough warm, force him with praises.

To what form, but that he is, should wit larded with mealice, and malice forced with wit, turn him? Ibid., v. 1.

Also, to exaggerate:

With fables vaine my historie to fill,

Forcing my good, excusing of my ill.

Mirror for Magist., p. 521.

FORCE, s. The phrase "no force for that," is equivalent to the present one of "no matter for that." Easily deducible from the above sense of the doo so.

Promos and Cass., ii, 4.

No force for that; who others doth deceyve,
Deserves himselfe lyke measures to receyve.

Ibid., v, 4 No force for that, each shift for one, for Phallax will doo so. Promos and Cass., ii. 4.

The skar there still remains. The skar there still remains,

No force,—there let it bee:
There is no cloud that can eclipse
So bright a sunne as shee.

Gascoigna's Praise of Fair Bridget, Percy's tascogns's Praise of Fair Bridget, Percy's Reliques, ii, 142.

† Nay, nay, no force! thou mightest a further stood.

Maring of Writt and Wisdoms, p. 35.

† And dyde no force of the kynges honour, ne of his wele, ne of the comone wele of the londe.

Warkworth's Chronicle.

+FORECLOSED. Stopped up. A law

Also, if any common way or common course of water be foreclosed or letted, that it may not have his course as it was wont, to the noyance of the ward, and by who.n it is done. Callkrop's Reports, 1670.

†FORE-COVERT. Protection.

There were cunning mechanikes also, that planted engines and peeces of ordnance, to batter the wals, such as wold as they were discharged make a horrible and deadly noyse. And verily of undermining and the fabrickes fore-covert and defence, Nevita and Dagadaiphus had the charge: but the emperour himselfe gave direction for aktimish, as also for saving the framework acceptance as well from figure as all the contract of the second contract of the contract of t frames and engines as wel from fire as sallies.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

To FOREDO. To undo, to destroy; fore, or for, with its negative power.

This is the very ecstasy of love, Whose violent property foredoes itself.

. Haml., ii, 1.

This is the very night That either makes me or foredoes me quite Othel., v. 1.

To lay the blame upon her own despair
That she fordid herself.

Lear, v, 3.
It either salves, or o.les, or herbes, or charmes,
A fordonae wight from dore of death might raise.

Spens. F. Q., I, v, 41.

Appointed by that mightic fairie prince,
Great Gloriane, that tyrant to fordoo.

Can I excuse myselfe devoid of faut,
Which my deare prince and brother had fordones.

Mirror of Magist., Porres, p. 79.

FOREDULLED. In this word it has its intensive power; it means much dulled.

What well of tears may serve
To feed the streams of my fore-fulled eyes.

Tancred and Gism., U. Pl., ii, 170.

FORE-END. Former, or prior part. One end out of two. Pay'd

More pious debts to heaven, than in all The fore-end of my time. Cymb., iii, 8. It has been found in Bacon also. See placed in advance of the main force. Whiles part of the souldiers maketh fore-fences abroad in the fields, and others againe gather corne warily, for feare of ambushments.

Todd. †FORE-FENCES. Bodies of soldiers

for feare of ambushments.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

Therefore, within a while after, when they could find nothing thither brought, leaving the sea coasts, they went into Lycaonia, adjoyning hard unto Isauria, and there within their thicke growne fastnesses and forefences, after the manner of those that lye in ambush for such as passe by, they maintained and enriched themselves with the goods as well of the provinciall inhabitants as the way faring folke. tants as the way-faring folke.

To FOREFEND. To forbid, or prevent; that is, to fend off, or keep off.

There's no disjunction to be made, but by (As heav'ns forefend) your ruin. Winter's T., iv, 8. When two vex'd clouds justle, they atrike out fire, And you, I fear me, war; which peace forefend.

Jeronimo, P. 1st, O. Pl., iii, 69

It is most commonly used in such phrases as "Heaven forefend." "God. or some deity, forefend;" but in Lear, v, 1, forefended is put for prohibited. +FOREFRONT. The preface?

Yet it shall please him that your ladiships names are honoured in the forefront of his writings.

Cornwallyes, Essayes, 1632, ded.

FOREHAND is here used for previous. If I have known her

You'll say she did embrace me as a husband, And so extenuate the forehand sin. Much Ado, iv, 1. FOREHAND SHAFT. An arrow particularly formed for shooting straight forward; concerning which Ascham says, that it should be big-breasted. His account is, however, rather ob-Agnyne the bygg-brested shafte is fytte for hym which shotelt right afore him, or els the brest, being weke, should never wythstande that strong piththy kinde of shootynge; thus the underlande must have a small breste, to go cleane awaye out of the bowe, the forehande must have a bigge breste, to bere the great workte of the bowe. myghte of the bowe. Toxophilus, Q. 3. mygnite of the bowe.

Toxophilus, Q. S.
He would have clapp'd i' the clout at twelve score;
and carry'd you a forchand shaft, a fourteen, and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.

2 Hen. IF, iii, S.

Presumption. +FOREHEAD. They knew he was dead; and therefore one had the forhead to affirm that himself made verses this last summer, which our author wrote (and whereof we had coppies) ten years since. Carter. Poems, 1651, pref. FOREHEAD, HIGH. A high forehead was formerly accounted a great beauty. and a low one a proportionable deformity: so completely has taste changed in this respect.

Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine; Aye, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high

Two Gent., iv, 3.

For this is haudsomeness, this that draws us
Body and hones; Oh, what a mounted forehead,
What eyes and lips, what every thing about her.
B. and Pl. Mons. Thomas, i, 1.

Her yvorie forhead, full of bounty brave,
Like a broad table did itselfe dispred,

For love his lofty triumphs to engrave, or love his lofty triumphs to engrave,

And write the battles of his great godhead.

Spens. P. Q., II, iii, 24. This is part of the description of a perfect ideal beauty:

Derfect lucar occurs, if the forehead smooth, full, polish'd, bright, and high, Bears in itself a graceful majesty.

Witts Recreations, sign. V. 2, b.

Thus also sir Philip Sidney describes the beautiful Parthenia:

the Deauthtin I attribute.

For her great gray eye, which might seems full of her own beautie, a large and exceedingly faire furchead, with all the rest of her face and bodie, cast in the mould of noblenesse, was yet so attired, &c.

Book I, p. 59.

A lady, jocularly setting forth her own beauty, enumerates,

True complexion

If it be red and white, a forehead high.

B. and Pl. Woman Hater, iii, l. Cleopatra, when full of jealousy, is delighted to find that her rival has a low forehead :

Cleop. Her hair what colour?

Mes. Brown, madam; and her forehead

As low as she would wish it.

Ant. and Cl., iii, 3.—783, b. (Said ironically, for much lower.) The dialogue, perhaps, would be improved a little in spirit, if we might read it thus:

Mess. Brown, madam. Cleop. And her forehead? Mess. As low as she could wish it. A low forehead is humorously mentioned as the most striking deformity of apes:

We shall lose our time, And all be turn'd to barnacles, or apes,
With foreheads villainous low.

Temp., iv. 1.

†FOREHEAD-CLOTH. A bandage used by ladies to prevent wrinkles.

E'en like the forehead-cloth that in the night E'en like the forchead-cloth that in the night,
Or when they sorrow, ludies used to wear.

Marlow and Chapm., Museus in fin.
First he brings always with him a sweet savour
To win the courtier's love, and courtier's favour;
Then she puts on a forc-head-cloath to please
The city and the godly folk, she says;
And so with case, and without cost or pother,
They get a world of friends one way or other.

Buckingham's Poems, 1705, p. 84.

FOREHEND, v. To seize beforehand, or before escape could be made.

Doubleth her haste for feare to bee forekent.

Spens. P. Q., 111, iv, 49. The original editions had for-hent, but probably with the same meaning, or as intensive of hent. Waylaid. +FORELAID.

For he, being many times forclaid by the trains of traitors indeed.

e mine; et aus high. Two Gent, iv, 8 FOREMAN, DR. A pretended conjuror, who made his dupes believe that he dealt with spirits, to recover lost spoons, &c.; yet of such fame in his day, that it is said of a woman, much in fashion for selling cosmetics, that all women of spirit and fashion flocked to her,

More than they ever did to oracle Poreman.

B. Jons. Dev. is an Ass, ii, 8. Cosmetics were also a part of his trade, and philtres, or love-potions:

I would say, thou hadst the best philtre in the world, and couldst do more than madam Medea or Dr. Foreman.

Ibid., Silent Wom., act iv.

He is mentioned in another passage in very bad company, some of whom were hanged, and all deserved it. See Dev. is an Ass, i, 2. He was a quack

Mr. Gifford says, he was a poor stupid wretch; but it is plain that he was taken for a conjuror, and he was so, even by the famous astrologer Lilly. All the set were probably less fools than knaves. See Mr. G.'s note on the passage from the Silent Woman. [Foreman's Diary, published by Mr. Halliwell, will give the best notion of his history and character.

FORENENST. Opposite to, over against; fore anenst.

The land foreness the Greekish shore he held From Sangar's mouth, to crook'd Meander's fall. Fairf. Tasso, ix. 4.

The front. +FORENT.

A gowne of taffita velvet, lyned with wright black satyn; the forent, the cap, and the hynder parte, with black sarcenet.

Stafford MSS., 13 Hen. VIII.

+FORE-READ. To predestine.

+FORE-RIDDEN. Worn out with riding, used here in a coarse sense Young bold-fac't queanes, and old fore-ridden jades.

Cranley's Amanda, p. 28.

+FORE-RIGHT. Straight forward: right before.

Though he foreright

Both by their houses and their persons pass'd.

Chapm. Odyss, vii.

Fil. Hey boy! how sits the wind?
Gios. Fore-right, and a brisk gale.
The Slighted Maid, p. 3.

To FORESAY. To foretell, or decree. Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it; howsoe'er My brother has done well. Cymb., iv. 9. To FORESLACK. To relax, or render slack; to neglect.

Through other great adventures hetherto Had it forslackt. Spens. F. Q. Had it forstack! Spons. P. Q., V, xii, S. So also in the View of Ireland:

It is a great pittie that so good an opportunity was omitted, and so happie an occasion fore-slacked.

Todd, vol. viii, p. 305.

To FORESLOW. To delay, to loiter.

ORESLUW. 10 ac., For yet is hope of life and victory;

For yet is hope of life and victory;

Foreslow no longer, make we hence amain.

3 Hen. FI, ii, 3.

But by no means my way I would forelow,
For ought that ever she could do or say.

Spens. P. Q., IV, x, 15.

Forslow no time, sweet Lancaster, let's march.

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 358.

See also Harringt. Ariosto, xli, 47; Drayt. Polyolb., xii, p. 895. +FORETOP. A tuft of hair on the forehead. A most courteous creature," answered Mockso, "so, stroke up your fore-toppe in any case; pish, your band hangeth right enough." The Man in the Moone, 1609. +FORE-WASTED. Entirely wasted.

Then set aside these vaine forewasted words.

Gascoigne's Workes, 1587. +FOREWATCHED. Weary with waking. His eyes were red, and all forewatcht,
His face besprent with leares,
It seem'd unhap had him long hatcht,
In midst of his dispaires.

England's Helicon, 1614.

+FORFALTED. Forfeited; confiscated. In the same parliament sir William Creichton was also forfalted for diverse causes. . . This forfalture was concluded, &c. Holinsked, 1577.

FORFEITS IN A BARBER'S SHOP. lt has been observed, in the word BARBER, that those shops were places of great resort, for passing away time in an idle manner. By way of enforcing some kind of regularity, and perhaps at least as much to promote drinking, certain laws were usually hung up, the transgression of which was to be punished by specific forfeitures. It is not to be wondered. that laws of that nature were as often laughed at as obeyed.

Laws for all faults, But laws so countenanc'd, that the strong statutes Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.

Meas. for M., ii, 2. Kenrick, with some triumph over Dr. Johnson for being deficient in so important a point of knowledge, produced the following, as a specimen of such rules, professing to have copied them near Northallerton, in Yorkshire:

Rules for seemly Behaviour

First come, first serve—then come not late; And when arrived keep your state; For he who from these rules shall swerve, Must pay the forfeits,—so observe.

Who enters here with boots and spurs, Must keep his nook; for if he stir.
And gives with armed heel a kick,
A pint he pays for ev'ry prick.

Who rudely takes another's turn, A forfeit mug may manners learn.

Who reverentless shall swear or curse, Must lug seven farthings from his purse.

Who checks the barber in his tale, Must pay for each a pot of ale.

Who will or can not miss his hat While trimming, pays a pint for that.

And he who can or will not pay, Shall hence be sent half trimm'd away, For will he, nill he, if in fault He forfeit must in meal or malt. But mark, who is alreads in drink, The cannikin must never clink.

That they were something of this kind is most probable, though the above lines wear some appearance of fabrication; particularly in the mention of seven farthings, evidently put as equivalent to a pint of ale, but in reality the price of a pint of porter in London, when Dr. Kenrick wrote, and not at all likely to have been the price of a pint of ale, many years back. The language, too, has not provinciality enough for the place assigned. Objections might be made also to several of the expressions, if the thing deserved more criticism.

FORGETIVE; from to forge, in the sense of to make. Inventive, full of imagination.

Makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, flery, and delectable shapes. 2 Hen. IV. iv. 3.

A fork was a new article of luxury in Ben Jonson's time, and the use of it was introduced from Italy. Have I deserv'd this from you two? for all Have I deserv'd this from you two? for all My pains at court to get you each a patent? Gitt. For what?

Meere. Upon my project o' the forks.

Sie. Forks? what be they?

Meere. The laudable use of forks

Brought into custom here, as they are in Italy,

To th' sparing o' napkins. B. Jon. Devil's an Ass., v, 4.

Hence travellers are often remarked for their use of them:

And twifold doth express th' enamour'd courtier,

As much as the fork-carving traveller.

B. and Pl. Qu. of Cor., iv, 1.

Then you must learn the use And handling of your silver fork at meals,
The metal of your glass; (these are main matters
With your Italian.)

B. Jons. Fox, iv, 1, This grand improvement is announced with prodigious form by the memorable traveller, Corvat:

rable traveller, Coryat:
Here I will mention a thing that might have been spoken of before in discourse of the first Italian towns. I observed a custom in all those Italian cities and townes through the which I passed, that is not used in any other country that I saw in my travels, neither do I thinke that any other nation of Christendome doth use it, but only Italy. The Italian, and also most strangers that are commont in Italy, doe always at their meals use a little forke when they eat their meate.

He then details the manner of using it, the materials of which it was composed, the extraordinary delicacy of the Italians about touching the meat with their fingers; and relates that a friend of his called him "a table furcifer, only for using a forke at feeding, but for no other cause." Coryat's Crudities, vol. i, p. 106, repr. of 1775.

+FORKER.

Why? my lord, 'tis nothing to weare a forker.

Marston, The Faune, ii, 1. FORLEAD. Mislead?

And Guthlake, that was king of Denmarke then, Provided with a navie mee forlead.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1887.

FORLEND. To give up.
As if that life to losse they had fortent,
And cared not to spare that should be shortly speat.

Speas. P. Q., IV, iii, 6. To FORLEND.

But Timias, the prince's gentle squyre,
That ladie's love unto his lord forlent,
And with proud envy, and indignant yre,
After that wicked foster fiercely went.

Ibid., III. iv. 47. Church conjectures that it means, in the latter of these citations, mistouk; but it is plain that the sense is the same as in the other, if we compare it with III, i, 18. Arthur and Guyon went after the lady, "in hopes to win thereby most goodly meade, the fairest dame alive;" but Timias. giving up that prospect to his lord, went after "that foule foster."

FORLORN, s. A forsaken, destitute person; from for, intensive, and lorn. Mr. Todd has found it also in the Tatler, otherwise it might have been referred to man, in the preceding line.

That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a forform.

3 Hen. FI, iii, 3.

As a participial adjective, deprived:
And when as night hath us of light forton.

Sp. Sonnet. 86. Shakespeare has ludicrously used it

Shakespeare man remainder to signify thin, diminutive;
He was so forlors, that his dimensions were, to any thick eight, invisible; he was the very genius of 3 Hos IV, iii, 2.

+FORLORN-HOPE. A person who lost at a gaming-table. Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1620.

FORLORE. The same as forlors.

And mortal life 'gan loath, as thing forlors.

Speas. F. Q, I, x, 21. Also as a verb, forsook:

Her feeble hand the bridle reins forlore.

Fairf. Tasso, vi., l.

+FORMA-PAPER. A corruption of in forma pauperis, sometimes duced comically in old plays.

FORMAL. Sober; having the regular form and use of the senses; opposed to mad.

Be patient; for I will not let him stir Till I have us'd th' approved means I have, With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy pray'ra, To make of him a formal man again. Com. of B., v, l. She had just before said, more expressly, that she would keep him "till she had brought him to his wits again."

Why this is evident to any formal enpacity.

Twelfth N., ii, 5. In a right form, a usual shape:

If not well,
Thou should'st come like a fury crown'd with snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Ant. and Cl., ii, 5.

Thus, "the formal vice, iniquity," means the regular, customary vice. Todd. 7. See INIQUITY.

FORMALLY. In the form of another, in a certain form.

10 & CERTAIN TOFM.

The very devil assum'd thee formally.

That face, that voice, that gesture, that aftire.

A Mad World, O. Pl., v, 376.

A subtile net, which only for that same

The skilfull Palmer formally did frame.

See F. O. II, xii. 81.

Spens. F. Q., II, xii, 81. Formerly is also read in that place. FORPINED. Pined, or wasted away.

He was so wasted and forpined away,
That all his substance was consum'd to nought.

Spens. F. Q., III, x, 57.

FORRAY. A plundering incursion on a neighbouring enemy.

A band of Britons ryding on forray,
Few days before, had gotten a great pray
Of Saxon goods.

Spens. F. Q., III, iii, 58.

This species of warfare has been lately much illustrated by the writings of sir Walter Scott. William of Deloraine, a stout moss-trooper, says to a monk,

Penance, father, will I none; Prayer know I hardly one: For mass or prayer can I rarely tarry. Save to patter an Ave Mary,
When I ride on a border foray.

Lay of Last Minstr., II, St. 6.

To FORRAY. To ride on such an incursion, to ravage.

Fairf. Tasso, lx, 42.

+ To FORSAKE. To abandon; to decline. S. Peter, with the rest of the company, hearing the mad disposition of the fellowe, departed, leavyng behinde him myselfe. Velvet Breeches, and this bricklayer who forsooks to goe into Heaven because his wife was there.

Greene's Newes both from Heaven and Hell, 1593. +FORSET. A casket.

Capsella. Layette, boite. A forset, casket, litle box, chest, or coffer.

To FORSHAPE. To render misshapen. Out of a man into a stone Forshape. Gower, de Conf.

To FORSLACK, the same as to foreslow. To delay.

Through other great adventures hethertoo Had it forslackt. Sp. F. Q., V, xii, 3.

+ To FORSOOTH. To treat with respect? OFURSOUTH, 10 tient with 100pt for The sport was how she had intended to have kept herself unknown, and how the captaine (whom she had sent for) of the Charles had forsoothed her, though he knew her well enough and she him.

Pepps' Diary, Jan., 1661.

To FORSPEAK. To forbid. All these words are written indifferently with for or fore.

Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars Ant. and Cl., iii, 7.

Thy life forspoke by love.

Arraignm. of Paris, 1680, quoted by Steevens. Also to bewitch, or destroy by speak-

Ing:
Their hellish power, to kill the ploughman's seed,
Or to forspeake whole flocks as they did feed.
Drayt. Her. Epist., p. 801.
Urging
That my bad tongue, by their bad usage made so,
Forespeakes their cattle, doth bewitch their corn,
Themselves, their servants, and their babes at nurse.
Witch of Edmonton.

They are in despaire, surely forespoken, or bewitched.

Burton, Anal. of Mel., p. 203.

FORSPENT. Worn away. With hollow eyes, and rawbone cheekes forspent.

Spens. F. Q., 1V, v, 34.

To FORTEACH. To unteach, to contradict

And underneath his filthy feet did tread
The sacred thinges, and holy heastes fortaught.
Spens. F. Q., I, vii, 15.

To FORTHINK. To repent. Therfore of it be not to bolde, Lest thou forthink it when thou art olde.

Interlude of Fouth. So used by Spenser also: And makes exceeding mone, when he does thinke That all this land unto his foe shall fall, For which he long in vaine did aweat and swinke,

That now the same he greatly doth forthinks.

F. Q., VI, iv, 32. +FORTH-RIGHT, adv. At once.

S. Away with him.
D. If you doe find that I have tolde you any lie, kill me forth-right.

Terence in English, 1614.

FORTH-RIGHT, s. A straight or direct path; from right forth, straight on.

Through forth-rights and meanders. Temp., iii, 3.
If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forth-right,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost. Tro. and Cr., iii, 3.

"Master Forthright, the tilter," is, therefore, the same as Master Straightforward. Meas. for M., iv, 3.

FORTHY. Therefore, on that account. A Chaucerian word.

A Chaucerian word.

Forthy appease your grief and heavy plight,
And tell the cause of your conceived payne.

Spens. P. Q., II, i, 14.

For the looseness of thy youth art sorry,
And yow'st forthy a solemn pligrimage.

Drayl. Ect., 6, p. 1418.

So it was in the old editions; in the octavo "therefore" is substituted as equivalent. It is plain by Mr. Capell's qu.? in his School of Shakspeare, p. 102, that he did not understand the word. In p. 211 he also prints it as two words.

+FORTINABLE. Fortunate; propitious.

Rychard Curdelyon they callyd hym in Fraunce, Whych had over enymyes most fortynable chaunce. Bale's Kynge Johan, p. FORTITUDES and FORTUNATES.

Astrological terms for favorable planets.

Let the twelve houses of the horoscope Be lodg'd with fortitudes and fortunates To make you blest in your designs, Pandolfo.

Albumasar, O. Pl., vii, 147.

The FORTUNE, a playhouse in Goldenlane, near Whitecross-street, where is still a small street called Playhouse-vard. Allevn the player, the founder of Dulwich College, bought the lease, and rebuilt the playhouse in 1599. By some extracts from his accounts, preserved by Dr. Birch, it appears that it cost him, on the whole, £880.

I took him once in the two-penny gallery at the Fortune.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi. 113.
Then I will confound her with compliments drawn from the plays I see at the Fortune and Red Bull.

Albumazar, O. Pl., vii. 155.

The Fortune was destroyed by fire about the time when the same fate befell the Globe on the Bank-side. Speaking of Vulcan's rage against the former, Ben Jonson says.

Portune, for being a whore, 'Scap'd not his justice any jot the more, He burnt that idol of the revels too.

Execrat. upon Vulcan, vol. vi, p. 410. There is a view of its front towards Golden-lane, with a plan of the adjacent streets, in Londina Illustrata. It has no appearance of a theatre, except the king's arms against the wall.

To FORTUNE, v. n. To happen.

That you will wonder what hath fortuned. How fortuneth this foule uncomely plight?

Spens. F. Q., VI, vii, 14.

It fortuned out of the thickest wood, lean rushed suddenly.

Fid. I, iii, 5.

A ramping lyon rushed suddenly. Ibid., I, iii, 5. Not now in use, though found by Todd in Pope and Evelyn.

FORTUNE, n. s. A hap, an occurrence.

Albeit they affirmed that he might be well assured that in all accidents and fortunes that citie should not faile to minister to him. Fenton's Guicciardin, p. 21.

FORTUNE MY FOE. The beginning of an old ballad, probably a great favorite in its time, for it is very often mentioned. Yet it does not appear that any complete copy of it is extant.

O most excellent dispason! good, good; it plays fortune my foe as distinctly as may be.

Lingua, O. Pl., v, 188.

Take heed, my brother, of a stranger fortune
Than e'er you felt yet; fortune my foe's a friend to it.
B. & Fl. Custom of Country, i, l. Mentioned also in the Knight of the Burning Pestle, and several other places specified in the notes to the above passages.

Mr. Malone has recovered the first stanza of it. which may lead to the rest: it is this:

For time my foe, why dost thou frown on me? And will my fortune never better be? Wilt thou, I say, for ever breed my pain? And wilt thou not restore my joys again?

It does not appear in any of the common collections. The first line is quoted in Fragmenta Regalia, by sir Rob. Naunton.

FORTY-PENCE. The sum commonly offered for a small wager; for the same reason that several law fees were fixed at that sum, viz., 3s. 4d.; because, when money was reckoned by pounds, marks, and nobles, fortypence was just the half noble, or the sixth of a pound.

How tastes it? is it bitter?—forty pence, no.

How. FIII, ii, 3. That is, "I will lay forty pence it does not." Wagers laying, &c.—forty pence gaged against a match of wrestling. Greene's Groundse. of Consynatch. I dare wage with any man forty-pence. The longer thou livest, fc.

See TEN GROATS, which was another current term for the same sum.

+FORWARD. To go forward, to succeed.

Per me stetit, I was in the fault that it went not forward.

Terence in English, 1614.

To set forward, to prepare.

Clit. Dost thou not consider that it is a great way hence? and thou knowest the old use and custom of women, that they are a whole yere in setting forward and trimming themselves.

Torsace in English, 1614.

+FORWARD. The vanguard of an army.

And kynge Herry, beynge in the forwards durynge the bataylle, was not hurt; but he was broughts ageyne to the Toure of Londone, ther to be kept. Warkworth's Chronicle.

FORWASTED. Much wasted, or wasted For, intensive. away.

Till that infernal feend with foul uprore
Forwasted all their land, and them expeld.

Spens. F. Q. 1. i. 5.

FORWEARIED. Much wearied. For, intensive. Whose labour'd spirits,

Forweary'd in this action of swift speed, Crave harbourage within your city walls Forecaried with my sportes, I did alight
From leftie steed, and down to sleepe me layd.

Spons. F. Q., I, 12, 13. FORWORN. Much worn. See FOR.

331

A silly man, in simple weeds, forworn,
And soild with dust of the long dried way.

Spens. F. Q., I, vi. 35.

FOSTER, or FORSTER. A contraction of forrester, in which form it still exists as a proper name. It is several times used by Spenser.

Lo where a gricely faster forth did rush, Breathing out beastly lust her to defyle Spens. P. Q., III, i, 17. So also St. 18, and III, iv, 50. word is found in Chaucer, and the romance of Bevis of Hampton.

And forty fosters of the fee
These outlawes had yelsw.

Ballad of Adam Bell, Jc.

Explained by Percy, "forresters of the king's demesne." Reliques, vol. i, Glossary.

+FOSTER-CHILD. A child nourished at the breast of a woman not its own mother, or who was brought up in another family. A relationship was thus formed which was formerly considered of much importance.

Puer collactaneus, qui pariter mammam suxit. σύν-τροφος. Enfant nourri de la mesme tette ou nourice. A joster-child, or which sucked of the same milke.

A foster-childe that sucked of the same milke at the same season, puer collectaneus.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 271.

FOTIVE. Nourishing, invigorating; from foreo.

If I not cherish them
With my distilling dues, and fotice heat, They know no vegetation.

T. Carew's Calum Britann., 4to, 1633, C 4.

FOUCH. A quarter of a buck. Coles has, "to fouch (among hunters) cervum in quatuor partes dissecare."

When he is to present some neighbouring gentleman, in his master's name, with a side or a foach, hee has an excellent art in improving his venion to the best. Cilius's Whinzies, p. 45.

FOUL CHIVE HIM. Evil success attend him, ill may he succeed. See CHIEVE, where this should have been added, had it been noted in time.

Ay, foul chies him! he is too merry.

B. J. Fl. Kn. of B. Pestle, i, 3.

"Ill mote he cheve," is in Chaucer. Cheve, chieve, and chive, are only different forms of the same word, chevir, old French; and still existing here as a provincial word, to prosper. "Unlawful chievances," cited by Todd from Bacon, are clearly "illegal profits." Chevin means succeeded, in Scotch. Sec Jamieson.

FOULDER, s. Evidently put for lightning, in this line:

This fir'd my heart as foulder doth the heath.

Baldwin, in Mirr. Mag., p. 389. Which enables us to decide upon the meaning of the following word in Spenser.

FOULDRING. Flaming, as lightning; from the old French, fouldroyant (now foudroyant), of the same signification.
Seem'd that loud thunder, with amazement great,
Did rend the rathing skies with finnes of fould ring heat.

Spens. F. Q., II, ii, 20.

Church, in his edition of the Faery proposes smouldring for fould'ring, in that passage: though he confesses that all the editions are against him. Mr. Todd, in Johnson's Dictionary, rightly rejects the emendation. Fouldre (now foudre) properly meant lightning.

FOUNDED, for confounded. To dumbfound is still used sometimes, and means to confound so as to take away the use of speech.

What, George a Greene, is it you? a plague found you. George a Gr., O. Pl., iii, 51. FOUR PRENTICES. See PRENTICES.

FOX. A familiar and jocular term for a sword.

8 SWOTG.
O signieur Dew, thou dy'st on point of fos, Except, O signieur, thou do give to me Egregious ransom.
What would you have, sister, of a fellow that knows nothing but a basket-hilt, and an old for in it?
B. Jons. Bart. Fair, ii, 6.
To such animals

Half-hearted creatures as these are, your fos Unkenneld, with a cholerick ghastly aspect, Or two or three comminatory terms Would run, &c. Ibid., Magn. Lady, i, 1.

Your "fox unkenneld," means. I fancy, your sword drawn.

fancy, your sword drawn.

O, what blade is it?

A Toledo, or an English for.

White Dev., O. Pl., vi. 370.

A cowardly slave, that dares as well eat his for, as draw it in earnest. Parson's Wedding, O. Pl., xi, 389.

Put up your sword,

I've seen it often, 'tis a for. Jac. It is so.

B. J. Fl. Captain, iii, 5.

This, and the preceding quotation, seem to prove that a fox was not a cant term, in this sense, but a specific name for some kind of blade manufactured in England; perhaps with the steel browned, which might give occasion to the name: or it might be named from the inventor. "Old foxes are good blades." Brome, Engl. Moor, ii, 2.

†I went as sharp steel as another man, and my for bites as deep.

B. J. Fl. King and no K., iv, 4.

To FOX. To make drunk; a cant term. Shakespeare your Wincot ale hath much remown'd,
That for'd a beggar so.

Epigr. by Sir Ast. Cockayne, quoted on
Tam. Shr., Induct.

Your Dutchman, when he's fort, is like a fox,
For when he's sunk in drink, quite earth to a man's

For when he's sunk in unine, yellowing, thinking,
Tis full exchange time with him, then he's subtlest.

B. § Fil. Fair Maid of the Isn, act it, p. 363.
Faith, and so she may, for 'tis long ere I can get up, when I go for'd to bed.

Hog, § c., O. Pl., vi, 398.
iYet alwayes 'twas my chance, in Bacchus spight,
To come into the Tower unfor'd, upright.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+But as the humble tenant that does bring A chicke or egges for's offering,
Is tane into the buttry, and does for Equall with him that gave a stalled oxe.

quall with him that gave a stalled oxe.

Verses prefixed to Lucasts, 1649.

†The tapaters in small cans fill beer,
By which a for is purchast dear,
And for a truth may be held forth,
Will cost more than the skin is worth. And therefore at such rate, I think,
Men better had canary drink. Poor Robin, 1699.
†Then such as had but little coin I hen such as had out little coin Laid up in store to purchase wine,
Must drink fair water, cyder, perry,
Or mead, instead of sack and sherry;
Or have their throats with brandy drench'd,
Which makes men fox'd e'er thirst is quench'd, Ibid., 1738.

FOX I' TH' HOLE. An old Christmas game, twice mentioned by Herrick, in the same words, but not once explained.

Of Christmas sports, the wassell boule, That's tost up, after fox i' th' hole. Hesper., p. 146; also p. 271.

+FOY. A boat attendant upon a ship. To Westminster with captain Lambert, and there he did at the Dog give me, and some other friends of his, his foy, he being to set sail to-day toward the Streights.

Prpys' Diary, 1661.

FOYSON. See Foison. FOYST. See Foist.

FRACTED. Broken.

Hen. V, ii, 1. His heart is fracted. His days and times are past,
And my reliance on his fracted dates
Hath smit my credit.

Timon of A., ii, 1.

A FRAIL. A sort of slight basket, of rushes, or matting, particularly those wherein raisins, figs, &c., are packed. Skinner derives it from fragli, Ital. There was also frayel, and fraiau, in old French. See Roquefort. Coles, in his English Dict., sets down a frail as a certain weight of raisins, viz., about 70 pounds. So also Blount, Glossogr. See Cabas, in Cotgrave. It is here quibbled on:

A plague of figs and raisins, and all such frail commodities, we shall make nothing of them.

Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 229.

Wisely you have picked a raison out of a fraile of figges.

Lyly, Mother Bombie, iv, 2.

Three frails of sprats carried from mart to mart,

Are as much meat as these, to more use travell'd.

B. f. N. Queen of Corinth, ii, 4.

Great guns fourteen, three hundred pipes of wine, Two hundred frailes of figs and raisons fine. Mirror for Mag., p. 482.

FRAIMENT. See FRAYMENT.

†FRAITOR. · A refectory, or dininghall.

A frayter or place to eate meate in, refectorium.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 250. FRAMPOLD, spelt also FRAMPUL. FRAMPAL, &c. Vexatious, saucy, pert. Capel derives it from the custom of franc-pole, or free-pole, in some manors, by which the tenants had a right to the wood of their fence. and all that they could reach with their hatchets. This right, he adds, gave rise to many litigious suits; and hence the meaning of the word. Glossary to Sh. The fault of this derivation is, that it gives too local an origin to a general word; for the law books speak of that custom as peculiar to the manor of Writtle, in Essex. It is, however, as good as any that has been given.

Frampole fences are said by Jacob to be such as the tenants of that manor set up against their lord's demesnes; with the privilege above mentioned. Law Dict. But chief justice Brampton, when he was steward of the manor, could not satisfy himself as to the origin of the word. The Saxon has been tried, and frempul, useful, proposed; but the word is really fremful, which will not do. Francpole is nearer, and there is certainly something contumacious in setting up such fences. Ray would bring it from fram, from, in Saxon. See Todd.

He's a very jealousy man, she leads a very frempold life with him, good heart!

Mer. W. W., ii, 2. Nay, hilts I pray thee; grow not fram-pull now.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii, 4. Is Pompey grown so malapert, so frampel?

B. and Fl. Wit at see. Weapons, iii, p. 291.

FRANCII, v. Apparently for to eat, or crush with the teeth.

I saw a river stopt with stormes of winde, Wherethrough a swan, a bull, a bore did passe, Francking the fish and frie with teeth of brasse Baldwine, in Mirr. Mag., p. 408. FRANCIS, ST. Spenser mentions St. Francis's fire as a disorder: he probably means St. Anthony's fire, or erysipelas; but why he gives it to St. Francis, I have not learned. Minshew and Cotgrave make it St. Anthony's, as usual. The latter gives few St. Murcel, as another French name for it, and "feu Martial." The old English term for it was the rose. Anciently it was called sacred fire; so in modern language it has been given to saints.

saints.
All these and many evils moe haunt ire,
'The swelling splene, and frenzy raging rife,
The shaking palsey, and St. Fraunce' fire.
F. Qn., I, iv, 35.

FRANION. An idle, loose, and licentious person. Of uncertain etymo-Faineant has been conjectured, but in that the r is wanting.

Might not be found a francker francon,
Of her leawd parts to make companion.

Spens. F. Q., II, ii, 37. Spens. F. Q., II, ii, 37.

As for this ladie which he sheweth here,
Is not, I wager, Florimell at all,
But some fayre franion, fit for such a fere.

Bid., V, iii, 22.

But, my franion. I tell you this one thing,
If you disclose this, I will, &c.

Damon and Pith., O. Pl., i, 310.

This gallant, I tell you, with other lewd franciss, Such as himselfe, unthrifty companions.

Contention between Liberality and Prodigality, sign. F. tOne of the vicars of Westminster, that was a tall lusty lubber, and a stout francism, who trusted much of his strength, thought to buckle with her, and to give her the overthrow.

Life of Long Meg of Westminster, 1635.

FRANK, s. A place to fatten a boar in; Cotgrave gives franc, as the a stv. name for it in French also.

Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old 2 Hen. IV, ii, 2, How he may wracke his tythes to a higher rate, and then feed at ease, like a boare in a frank.

Lenton's Leas., Char. 15.

Also, as an adjective, well fed. See

To FRANK. To fatten boars, or any other animals. Skinner quotes Higgins for frank'd fowl, in whom alone, he says, he had found the word. To shut up in a sty.

Shut up in a say.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repay'd,

He is frank'd up for fatting for his pains.

Rich. III, i, 3.

In the stye of this most bloody boar, My son, George Stanley, is frank'd up in hold. Ibid., iv. 5. FRANKLIN, s. A freeholder or yeoman, a man above a vassal, or villain, but not a gentleman. But the usage varied.

Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it. Wint. Tale, v, 2. There is a franklin in the wilds of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold. 1 Hen. IV, ii, 1.

Provide me presently

A riding suit, no costher than would fit A franklin's housewife. Cymb., iii, 2. In the following, it seems to mean a kind of waiting gentleman, or groom of the chambers:

But entered in a spacious court they see, &c. Where them does meet a franklin faire and free, And entertaines with comely courteous glee.

Spens. P. Q., I, x, 6.

Thus low was the estimation of a franklin, in the reign of Elizabeth. In earlier times he was a personage of much more dignity, and seems to have been distinguished from a common freeholder by the greatness of his possessions. Chaucer's frankelein is evidently a very rich and luxurious gentleman; he was the chief man at the sessions, and had been sheriff, and frequently knight of the shire. See Cant. Tales, v, 333, and Mr. Tyrwhitt's note upon it.

FRANKLIN, proper name. One of the most notorious of the gang of quack astrologers, who were concerned in the poisoning of sir Thomas Overbury. He is described as "a swarthy, sallow, crook-backed fellow, as sordid in his death as pernicious in his life." He was purveyor of the poison, and was hanged with Mrs. Turner.

+FRANZIĚ. A phrensy.

RANZIE. A phrensy.

Besides such matter of judicious wit,
With quaint conceits so fitting every fancie;
As well may prove, who scornes and spights at it Shall either show their folly or their franzie,
Then let the popes buls roare bell, booke, and candle.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To FRAP. To strike. French.

Whose heart was frapped with such surpassing woe, as neither teare nor word could issue forth.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii, sign. B b 3.

Other instances have not been noted: but Spenser has affrap, an evident compound of this. See AFFRAP.

+FRAPE. The crowd; the mob.

Tis strange, this fiery frape, thought I, Should thus for moderation cry. Hudibras Redivious, vol. i, part 1, 1708. Thus laws, for want of execution.

Thid

Thus isws, for waits of cascusing. Spoil every nation's constitution, Let loose the frape to show their folly, And spurn at all that's good and holy. And where our monster of an ape, Was foud to shew his ugly shape, And to the list'ning frape, dispense The very cream and qu atessence Of envy, pride, and impudence.

Ibid., vol. i. part 5 A FRAPLER. Probably a striker, or quarreller; from frapper, French. The above use of frap makes this the more probable: also fripler, from fripier. [A blusterer; see next word.] I say to thee thou art rude, debaucht, impudent, coarse, impolish'd, a frapler, and base B. Jons. Cynth. Rev., iv, 8,

Bullokar and Coles have a frane, for a mob; but I know no other authority, and of these, the latter probably copied from the other. the preceding article.]

+FRAPLING. Blustering.

The lamentable plight of the east provinces under Valens deceived by his courtiers, and making much of these frapling lawyers and petie-loggers. Where unto is set in opposition the felicitie of former ages

Ammianus Marcellinus. 1609.

To FRAY. To frighten, or terrify.

She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray'd with a sprite: 1'il fetch her.

Tro. & Cr., iii. 2.

He that retires not at the threats of death, Is not, as are the vulgar, slightly frayed.

Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 255.

Awaite whereto their service he applies
To aide his friends, or fray his enumes.

Spens. P. Q., I, i, 38.

tHe rail'd, as fraid me; for he gave no praise, To any but my lord of Essex dayes. Donne's Poems, p. 91.

FRAYMENT, from the preceding. A fright.

Or Pan, who wyth hys sodnyne fraiments and tu-mults bringeth age over all things. Chaloner's Moria Encom., sign. C.

FREATES, (probably frets,) in a bow or arrow. Weak places, which are likely to give way.

Preates be in a shaft as well as in a bowe, and they be much like a canker, creepinge and encreasinge in those places in a bowe, which be much weaker than those places in a lowe, which be much weaker than other.

Ascham, Taxoph., p. 156.

Freates be first little pinches, the which when you perceare, pike the places about the pinches, to make them somewhat weaker, and so the pinches shall dye, and never encrease farther into freates.

Ibid.

With much more on the same sub-

FREMBD, corrupted from fremd, which, in Saxon and Gothic, signified a stranger, or an enemy, as hostis, originally, in Latin. It also signifies a stranger, in modern German. "Haud dubie operarum errore feinde legitur pro fremde, nam in Græco est ξείνοισι." Beck. Com. Philol., Lips., tom. i, p. 99.

As perjur'd cowards in adversitie

With sight of feare from friends to fremb'd doe flie.

Pembr. Arcadia, B. i, p. 87.

Plangh man a

In the visions of Pierce Ploughman a similar expression is used, though with more correct orthography:

To frend ne to fremed Fremyt is used in the same sense by Gavin Douglas. See Skinner and Junius. From the same origin is Spenser's frenne, and his phrase is evidently of the same proverbial cast as those above cited.

So now his friend is changed for a frense. Shep. Eal., April, v. 28. The original commentator on the Shepherd's Kalendar, who was probably Spenser himself, supposes it a contraction of forrene, but he is evidently mistaken. It was not necessary that Spenser, or his friend. should know the Saxon origin. may observe, that Warton conjectured this E. K. to be Edward King. Observations on Spenser, vol. i, p. 42. Some have supposed it to be E. Kerke; others his known friend, Gabriel Harvey.

FRENCH CROWN. This was a most tempting word for equivocation, as it might mean three things :- 1. The crown of a Frenchman's head; 2. A piece of French money; 3. The baldness produced by a disease, supposed to be French. Shakespeare puns upon that and dollars together:

I have purchas'd as many diseases under her roof, as come to— 2 Gent. To what, I pray? 1 Gent. Judge. 2 Gent. To three thousand dollars (or dolours) a year.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars (or dolours) a yest.

1 Gent. Ay, and more. Lucio. A French cross more.

Meas. for M., i, 2.

Some of your French crosses have no hair at all, and then you will play barefac'd. Miss. N. Dr., i, 2.

Indeed the French may lay twenty French crosses to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crosses, and to-morrow the king himself will be aligner.

Hea. F. iv. 1. Hen. V. iv. 1.

Were they but crowns of France, I cared not, For most of them their natural country rot I think possesseth; they come here to us Sopale, so lame, so lean, so ruinous. Donne, Eleg., xii, 23.

Speaking of some money he was to pay. +FRENCH-HOOD. An article of dress which appears to have been in use during a rather long period.

But this power that some of them have, is disguised geare and strange fashions. They must weare Practicols, and I cannot tall your I want I geare and strange rasmons. They must weare rrran-hoods, and I cannot tell you, I, what to call it. And when they make them readic and come to the cover-ing of their heads, they will call and say, give me my French-hood, and give me my bonet, or my cap, and so forth.

Latimer's Sermon.

so form.

His love letters of the last years of his gentlemanship are stuft with discontinuances, remitters, and uncore prists; but now being enabled to speake in proper person, he talkes of a French hood, insteade of a jointure, wages his law, and joines issue.

Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1613. It appears, however, to have gone out of fashion soon after the date of this last extract.

For these loose times, when a strict sparing food More's out of fashion then an old French kood. Herbert's Hygiasticos, 1836.

+FRESH-MAN. A novice.

I am but a fresh-man yet in France, therefore I can send you no news, but that all is here quiet, and 'us no ordinary news, that the French should be quiet. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1660.

First, if thou art a freshman, and art bent To bear loves arms, and follow Cupids tent.

Colgrave's Wits Interpreter, 1871, p. 221.

+FRESHWATER-SOLDIER. pular term for a new recruit.

Bachelier aux armes, nouveau on jeune soudard. A freshwater souldier: a young souldier: a novice: one that is trayned up to serve in the field. Nomenclator.

FRET. A narrow frith or strait of the sea; contracted from fretum, Latin, not from fretting.

An island parted from the firme land with a little fret Knoller's Hist. of Turks. 462. of the see FRETS. The points at which a string is to be stopped, in such an instrument as the lute or guitar.

I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When, with a most impatient dev'lish spirit,
Frets call you these? said she, I'll fume with them. Tam. Shr., ii, 1.

To this Hamlet alludes, when he says, "Though you can fret me, you can-not play upon me." Haml., iii, 2. Haml., iii, 2. not play upon me. Allume., 11, 2. Musician he will never be (yet I find much music in him) but he loves no frets. Hon. Wh., O. Pl., iii, 258. These means, as frets upon an instrument, Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment. Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 589.

The term is still in use with practical musicians.

+FRIAR-RUSH. A Christmas game mentioned in the Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1603.

+FRIARIES. Convents of friars. Hee like an earthquake made the abbies fall,
The fryeries, the nunneries, and all.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+FRIBBLE. A coxcomb. MIBBLE. A COXCUIIO.

A company of fribbles, enough to discredit any honest house in the world.—No, I'd have you to know, I am for none of your skip-jacks;—no, give me your persons of quality, there's somewhat to be got by them.

The Cheats, 1669.

FRICACE. A sort of medicine, probably intended to be rubbed upon the part diseased; from frico.

Applying only a warm napkin to the place, after the unction and fricace.

B. Jone. Fox., ii, 2. He calls it an oil; olio del Scoto. It is mentioned often afterwards in the same play as the fricace.

+FRIES.

'RIES.

Love voyd of faith (quoth he) is neither love

Nor yet a god, but an infernal spirit,

Which having in the foul sulphureous lake
Of burning Phicgeton kindled black fames,
Doth counterfeit therewith loves glorious light,
And so goes breathing forth his feigned fries.

Phillis of Seyros, 1655.

To FRIL. To turn back in plaits; perhaps from furl. As also the frill of a shirt.

His long mustachoes on his upper lip, like bristles, fril'd back to his neck.

Anolles, ut supr., 516. FRIM. Rich, thriving; said to be a northern word. From freom, strong, NAXOII.

Through the frim pastures, freely at his leisures.

Drayton's Moses, p. 1576. See also Polyolb., xi:i, p. 925.

FRIPLER, for fripier, the same as fripper. A broker, or pawnbroker. See Cotgrave, under Fripier, which he renders. "a fripier, or broker," &c. That it is put for a pawnbroker in the following passage, is clear, from the mention of lavender. See LAVENDER.

Is gathered up with greediness before it fall to the ground, and bought at the dearest, though they smell of the fripler's lavender half a year after.

Green's Arcadia, p. 13, in Heliconia, vol. i, or p. 167, in Cans. Lit., vol. vii.

A FRIPPER. One who sells old clothes, a broker. Taylors, frippers, brokers. Mons. D'Olive, 1606. Farewell, fripper, farewell, petty broker. Ibid.

A FRIPPERY. An old-clothes shop. Friperie, Fr.

Look, what a wardrobe here is for thee! Cal. Let it alone, thou fool, it is trash. Trin. O ho, monster; we know what belongs to a frippery. So Massinger: Temp., iv, 1.

Buter Luke, with shoes, garters, fans, and roses.

G. Here he comes, sweating all over;
He shews like a walking frippery. City Madam, i, 1.
Hast thou forsworn all thy friends it the Old Jewry?
or dost thou think us all Jews that inhabit there?
yet if thou dost, come over and but see our frippery, change an old shirt for a whole smock with us.

B. Jons. Ev. Man in his H., i, 2.

B. Jons. Ev. Man in his H., i, 3.

†FRISCOL. A curvet.

And all, my Jone, shalt thou alone,
At thy commandment have;
If thou wilt let me frizzoles vet
In place where ich doe crave.

Howeil's Arbor of Amilie, 1568.

But he is rare for frizzols; nay, what's worse,
He treads a measure like a miller's horse.

Bold's Posma, 1664, p. 136.

And saying so, he gave two or three frisides in the air with very great signs of contentment, and presently went to Durotea.

History of Don Quizzols, 1675, f. 74.

History of Don Quizote, 1675, f. 74.

+FRISK. To idle away.

The first inducing thee to shew thine abilities among the ladies, where, if not advis'd, thou art drawn in beyond a retreat, or at least to frisk away much of thy time and estate. A Cap, &c.

FRITH. A high wood. So explained in Drayton's notes to his Polyolbion. The origin is supposed to be Welch, in which language it has other senses. See Todd.

See 1 tours.

To lead the rural routs about the goodly lawns,

As over holt and heath, as thorough frith and fell.

Book zi, p. 862.

FRITH, MARY. The real name of a woman, much celebrated under the denomination of Moll, or Mall, Cutpurse. She is the heroine of the old play by Middleton, entitled the Roaring Girl; and from her fame it is more likely that she is alluded to by Butler, than Mary Carlton, whom Dr. Grev supposes to be the person, in his note on this line:

As Joan of France, or English Mall. Hud., I, ii, 368. Mary Carlton was, indeed, also famous in her day, though in a much less degree. A modern editor of Hudibras adouts Granger's idea and description of Mary Frith: "She assumed the vices and attire of both sexes, and distinguished herself as a prostitute and a procuress, a fortuneteller, a pick pocket, a thief, and a receiver of stolen goods. She had the honour of robbing no less a personage than general Fairfax, upon Hounslow Heath; for which exploit she was sent to Newgate, but she had acquired sufficient wealth in her calling to purchase her liberty. She defrauded the gallows, and died peaceably of a dropsy, in the 75th year of her age." There is a portrait of Mall. in man's attire, prefixed to her life, 12mo, 1662, under which are the following lines:

See here the presidess o' the pilfering trade, Mercury's second, Venus' only mad. Doublet and breeches, in an un'form dress, The female humorist, a kickshaw mess: Here's no attraction that your fancy greets, But if her fe...ures please not, read her feats.

Nat Field, in his play called Amends for the Ladies, has exhibited some of the merry pranks of Mall Cutpurse. Baldwyn's edit., 1819. See also Granger, vol. ii, p. 408, 8vo.

Her portrait is copied from the original woodcut, in Dodsley's Old Plays, in the title of the Roaring Girl, vol. vi, p. 1. Dr. Nash, in his notes on Hudibras, adheres to Mary Carlton. though he refers also to Granger.

+FRIZADO. Frieze cloth. See next article.

Our cottons, penistones, frisadoes, baze, Our sundry sorts of frizes, blackes and grayes. And linnen drapers but for transportion Could hardly canvase out their occupation.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

FRIZE, or FRIEZE. A sort of coarse warm cloth, probably (as Dr. Johnson suggests) made first in Friesland.

Wales was famous for this, as well as for flannel. See FLANNEL.

OF IRRITIEL. See FLANNEL.

Am I ridden with a Welch goot too? shall I here a coxcomb of frise? 'tis time I were choal'd with a piece of toasted cheese.

Mer. W. W., w. is.
But indeed my invention comes from my pate, as bird-lime does from frise, it plucks out brains and all. Othell ii. 1.

In the play of King Edw. I, printed in 1509, one of the stage directions is, "Enter Lluellin, alias prince of Wales, &c., with swords and bucklers, and frieze jerkins."

I do not know that the word is vet disused.

+FRIZEL A small curl.

†FRIZEL. A small curl.

Now under the shaddow of the eyebrowes, then amount the little frisels of a faire haire; otherwhiles within little dimples, that sweet smiles often frame, in a faire checke. The Passenger of Benesenske, 1823. Womens long haire is coma. That which busheth out, c. saries, or the bush: those which runne together in one place, leakes: those which are full of circles, curied.

Lonalius on Painting, 1898.

†FRIZLING-IRON. A curling-iron.

A frisiling yros, that women and men use about the curing of their haire, or which in old time was used to part the haire, and drawe them out in length.

Withals Dictionarie ed. 1638, p. 146.

FRO, the same as from. Used chiefly before an m, for the sake of the sound. At the end of a verse, him fro may be found, instead of from him. for the sake of a rhyme.

The sake of a my not how, convaid.

Was afterward, I know not how, convaid.

And fro me hid.

Specu. P. Q., I, ii, 34.

Far be it from your thought, and fro my will.

18id., I, iii, 38.

Still used in the phrase to and fro, and in that only.

†FRO. A frow, or woman. Dutch.
Ancilla. Chambriere, meschine. A maideservant. milkin fro. Pedisequa. Une chamberiere. A waiting maid: a young fro.

FROES, for frows, the Dutch word for women.

Buxsom as Bacchus' frees, revelling, dancing, Telling the musick's numbers with their feet. B. & Fl. Wit. at see. Weap., act v, p. 321.

+FROISE. A sort of pancake with slices of bacon in it; what the French now call an omelette au lard.

With a few slices of bacon, a froise was presenty made, and served in with great pomp and magnificence. Comicall History of Prencion, 1653. Some are so tender nosed as to small out a knave, as far as another man shall do broil'd herrings, or a bacon froise; and some again shall make no more also of telling a lye than a porter doth of a farthing content of the state o or teiting a lye than a porter doth of a farthing ca-tard. Poor Robin, 1715. To make a frayes appear like rashers of bacon.—Take of fine flower half a peck, mingle case half by its self with water and butter, and to the other aid suit wherein turnsole had been steeped, with a little of the powder of lake; and having cut them out into shoos, fix a slice of the one to a slice of the other, at your discretion; and when they are fryed geatly, or rather baked, they will deceive the most curious as to the sight of them.

Closet of Resities, 1706.

ROLICK. Joyful; gamesome. Shepheard why creepe we in this lowly vaine, As though our muse no store at all affordes, +FROLICK. Whilst others vaunt it with the frolicks trayne.

Drayton's Shepherd's Garland, 1593.

FROM. Away from: rather implying distance than contrariety, which Johnson gives as its meaning.

For any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, &c.

Hami, iii, 2.

playing, whose end, &c. Hami,
Do not believe,
That from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence.

Did you draw bonds to forfeit, sign to break? Or must we read you quite from what you speak.

B. Jons. Underrecoods, vol. vi. p. 386, Whalley.
If now the phrase of him that speaks shall flow
In sound quite from his fortune. Ibid., vol. vii, p. 173. This last is a translation of "Si dicentis erunt fortunis absona dicta.' N.B. The elegy from which the former of these two quotations is taken, stands in some editions of Donne's Works as his, and marked as Elegy 17th.

+FRONDENT. Covered with leaves. I, Phœbus tree, still frondent, flourishing, Nor bald, nor grisled, verdant as the spring various things similarly applied.

Owen's Epigrams. FRONTAL. A piece of armour put upon the forehead of a horse.

Like unto this doo they arme their horses too; about his legges they tie bootes, and cover his head with frontals of steele. Underdown's Heliodors, sign. Q 6.

FRONTIER is said anciently to have meant forehead, which seems, indeed, to be proved by the following quotation:

Then on the edges of their bolster'd hair, which standeth created round their frontiers, and hangeth over their faces.

Stubbs's Anatomy of Abuses. But this does not seem to explain the passage of Shakespeare, for the sake of which it has been adduced:

And majesty could never yet endure The moody frontier of a servant brov

1 Hen. IV, i. 3. "The moody forehead of a servant brow," is not sense. Surely it may be better interpreted, "the moody border," that is, outline, "of a servant brow." Or it may be considered as a term borrowed from fortification. in which frontier means an outwork. It will then mean the moody or threatening outwork; in which sense the word occurs in the same play:

Of pallisadoes, frontiers, parapets.

A forte not placed where it was needful might skantly be accounted for frontier.

Ibid , ii, 3.

Ibid , ii, 3. Ives's Portific.

+FRONTISPIECE. A facade, or front.

Nature, thou wert o'reen to put so mean A frontispeece to such a building.

Cartwright's Lady Errants, 1651.

†FRONTLESS. Shameless, impudent.

But thee, thou frontless man,
We follow. Chapm. Il., 159. FRONTLET. A forehead band, part of the female dress of elder times. Frontal, French. They were worn to make the forehead smooth.

Forsoth women have many lettes,
And they be masked in many nettes;
As frontlets, fyllets, partlettes, &c.
Four Ps, O. Pl., i, 64.

Hoods, frontlets, wires, cauls, curling irons, periwigs, he. Luly's Mudas. Metaphorically for look, or appearance of the forehead:

How now, daughter, what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown.

+FROOF. The handle of an augur? And as you have seen
A shipwright bore a naval beam; he oft
Thrusts at the augur's froofe; works still aloft;
And at the shank help others. Chapm. Odyst., ix.

FRORY. Frosty. The same as frore. With I. Frosty. I me same as frore.

Her up between his rugged hands he reard,
And with his frory lips full softly kist.

While the cold ysicles from his rough beard
Dropped adown upon her ysory brest.

Spens. P. Q., III, viii, 35.

Also frothy:

While she was young she us'd with tender hand
The foaming steed with froary bit to steer.

FRIFT. Tusso, ii, 45.

†FROST. "Farewell, frost," was an old proverbial phrase, intimating indifference, and not uncommon in our ancient writers. Ray gives among his proverbs, "Farewell, frost; nothing got, nor nothing lost."

Morr. Nay, and you feede this veyne, sir, fare you well.

Falk. Why, farewell, frost.

Play of Sir Thomas More, p. 52.

And so, farewell frost, my fortune naught me cost.

Mother Bombie, 1632.

To FROTE. To rub. Frotter, French. Let a man sweat once a week in a hot house, and be well rubbed and froted.

B. Jone. Ev. Man out of H., iv, 3.

Then fell downe the maid in a swoon for feare; so as nen sen sowne the maid in a swoon for feare; so as he was fain to frote hir, and put a sop into hir mouth.

Reg. Scot's Disc. of Witcher., V 1.

Come, sir, what say you extempore now to your bill of an hundred pound? a sweet debt for froating your doublets.

Middlet Trick to catch the O. One, F 8, repr., p. 196. Chaucer uses this word.

She loves excelyngly;
She turts her heare, she frotes her face,
She ide loves to be.

Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

FROTERER. Rubber, a person who rubs another; from frote. says of his offices to a gallant,
I curl his periwig, paint his cheeks, perfume his breath, I am his froterer, or rubber in a hot house.

Marston's What you will.

FROUNCE, s. A fringe, plait, or similar ornament of dress. In modern language, a flounce.

To FROUNCE. To curl, or rather to friz. as the hair is done in dressing; from froncer, to twist or wrinkle, I suspect that flounce, now used, is only a corruption of this.

Some frounce their curled heare in courtly guise, Some prancke their ruftes. Spens. P. Q., I, iv, 14. With dressing, braiding, frouncing, flow'ring. Drayl. Nymp., ii.

It is similarly used by Milton in the Penseroso, v. 123. In more antiquated language it had the signification of wrinkled, which is nearer the French original. Thus Moth, the antiquary, in the Ordinary:
His visage foul y-frounced, with glowing eyn.
O. PL, x, 309.

So, in Chaucer, frounceless is without wrinkle.

three.

Hy Phidias art thou fishes seest

Engraven feat and trim;
Put water to them, and they will

Whip, skip, frisk, frounce, and swim.

Kendall's Floures of Epigrammes, 1577.

Wayward. +FROWARD.

One day, her vanity pressing her to desire a neck-lace of bigger pearles than those she had, she resolved to make recourse to her ordinary flatteries; but something had put my master in so froward a humour, that he repuls'd her with such terms as she deserv'd.

History of Francion, 1655.

+FROWING. That renders rank. Gather not roses in a wet and frowing houre, they'll lose their sweets then, trust mee they will, sir.

Suckling's Aglaura, 1638.

+FROWISH. Rank, or rancid.

He that is ranck or frowish in savour, hircosus.

Withats' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 286.

†FROWNING-CLOTH. A frontlet? The next day I comming to the gallery, where shee was solitarily walking with her frozening cloth, as sicke lately on the sullens.

Lylie's Euphues and his England.

FROWY. A word of uncertain derivation, which seems simply to mean mossy in the two following instances. I cannot think, with Dr. Johnson, that the familiar word frowzy is in any degree a substitute for it. In this first passage it might be put for frory:

Proteus is shepheard of the seas of yore, Proteus is shepheard of the seas of yore, And hath the charge of Neptune's mighty heard, An aged sire, with head all frowy hore, And sprinckled frost upon his deawy beard.

Spens. P. Q., III, viii, 30.
But if they (the sheep) with thy goats should yede, They soon might be corrupted;
Or like not of the frowy fede (on the mountains), Or with the weeds be glutted.

Spens. Shep. Kal., July 109

Spens. Shep. Kal., July, 109. To FRUMP. To mock, or treat contemptuously. [Perhaps best expressed by, to snub.] Minshew, who is followed by Skinner and others, derives it from the Dutch, frumpelen, or krumpelen, to curl up the nose in contempt.

tHee fawneth upon them his master favoureth, and frumpeth those his mistresse frownes on.

Man in the Moone, 1609.

Man in the Moone, 1609.

Walkes all day musing in his mournfull dumpes, Whilest Love his page but priyily him framps.

The News Metamorphosis, MS. temp. Jac. I.

The fourth and last ranke is impudent, overtheart, stubborne, and withall unlearned, those I meane, who having broken loose over-soone from the grammer schoole, run to and fro in all corners of cities studying for scoffes and framping flouts, not for meet pleas to helps any came. helpe any caus helpe any cause.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1809.

†Their judges such as have learned Philistions or Esops formating acoffee or fables.

Rid. frumping scoffes or fables.

A FRUMP. A contemptuous speech, or piece of conduct.

Lucilla, not ashamed to confesse her follie, answered Lucilla, not ashamed to control Enghase, K. Hughese, K. Bild. Lov. Lady Guinever, what news with you?

Abig. Pray leave these framps, sir, and receive the letter.

B. & Fl. Scoraf. Lady, act v, p. 38.

†And blush not at the frumps of some, Ne feare at others from ne

More rich thou art in threaquest Then some in silken gowne.

Seven Sobs of a Sorrowfull Soule, 1615.
†But yet, me thinkes, he gives thee but a frampe,
In telling how thou kist a wenches runne.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Taylor's Workes, 1830.

Goe farre off from doung, let them prate and gabble as long as they will, never take pepper in the nose for their deeds or misdeeds, nor yet for their frames and filmfams, seeing one that is infamous can defame none but themselves. Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

none but themserves. Fassenger of Benerando, 1612.

†Lynus to give to me a frightfull framp,
Said that my writings savourd of the pump.

Harington's Epigrasus, 1633.

†Som of thy sons prove bastards, sordid, base.

Who having suck'd thee throw dirt in thy face;
When they have squeer'd thy nipples and chast paps,
They dash thee on the none with framps and rapps.

Cartwright's Porms, 1651.

To FRUSH. To bruise, or dash violently to pieces. Froisser, French. An uncommon word, unknown to the first commentators of Shakespeare, but fully exemplified by the latter. It was technical in some things, as in carving; and in war, to the battering of armour to pieces.

Stand, stand, thou Greek—I like thy armour well;
I'll frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it.
Tho. and Cr., v, 7.
Rinaldo's armour frush'd and hack'd they had
Oft pierced, and with blood beameared new.

Our pierced, and with blood besmeared new.

Pairf. Tasso, viii, 48.

Hector assayled Achilles, and gave him so many strokes, that he al to-frusht and brake his helme.

Cast. Destr. of Troy, O ol, she ed.

Smote him so coragiousli with his swerde, that he frush'd al his helme.

Guy of Werw., blekt high cedars are frushed with tempests, when lower shrubs are not touched with the wind.

Hinde's Fluoto Libidinose, ed. 1806.

Breaking a spear was also called frushing it:

I can bestride a bouncing gennet still, And with mine arme to-frush a sturdie lance. D. Belchier's See me and see me not.

To frush a chicken, was the same as to break up or carve a chicken; it is used in old books of cookery and carving.

To frush the feathers of an arrow, was to set them upright, which appears, from the following passage, to have been done to prepare them for use; probably to make them fly steadily:

Lord, how hastely the soldiers buckled their healmes. howe quickly the archers buckled their nealmes, how quickly the archers bente their bowes, and frushed their feathers, how readily the bilmen shoke their billes, and proved their staves.

Holissh., vol. ii, R r r 6.

+FRUSTRATELY. In vain.

Great Tuscane dames, as she !beir towns past by, Wisht her their daughter-in-law, but frustrately. Virgit, by Vicars, 1632.

+FRUTAGE. A confection of fruit.

Upon this chariot was finely and artificially devised a sumptuous covered table, decked with all sortes of exquisite delicates and dainties, of patisserie, frutages, and confections.

British Bibliographer, iv, 315.

+FRUTRY. Anything producing fruit.

He sowde and planted in his proper grange (Upon som savage stock) som frutry strange.

Du Bartas.

To FUB, or FUB OFF. To put off, to deceive. Fuppen, German. If this be the true derivation, fub is more correct than fob, which has entirely supplanted it. Shakespeare has it both ways.

DOIN Ways.

I have been fubb'd off and fubb'd off from this cay to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on.

2 Hen. IV, ii, 1.

Why Doll, why Doll, I say!—my letter fubb'd too,
And no access without I mend my manners!

B. 4 Fl. Mons. Thomas, ii, 2.

FUCUS. Paint. A Latin word, adopted by our early writers to signify the colours used by ladies, to improve their complexions.

Livia. How do I look to-day?

Bud. Excellent clear, believe it. This same fucus
Was well laid on.

Was well laid on.
Licia. Methinks, 'tis here not white.

Bud. Lend me your scarlet, lady; 'tis the sun
Hath giv'n some little taint unto the ceruse, &c.

B. Jons. Scienna, ii, 1.

Till you preferred me to your aunt, the lady, In you preserve me to your aunt, the may, I knew no ivory teeth, no caps of hair, No Mercury water, facus, or perfumes.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 412.

With all his waters, powders, facuses, To make thy lovely corps sophisticate.

B. & Fl. Woman Hater, iii, 3.

+FUDDLE. Drink.

And so, said I, we sipp'd our fuddle,
As women in the straw do caudle,
Till every man had drown'd bis noddle.

Hudibras Redivious, 1705.

+To FUDDLE. To drink hard. Ev'ry thing fuddles; then that I, Is't any reason shou'd be dry?

Well; I will be content to thirst,
But too much drink shall make me first.

Poems by Various Writers, 1711. †FUELLER. Apparently the servant whose duty it was to light fires. Vain fuellers! they think (who doth not know it)

Their lights above 't, because their walk's below it.
Wilson's Life of James 1.

FUGH. A strange spelling of the word fugue, meaning a species of musical composition.

She [Echo] is never better in her Q, than when she apes the nightingale, especially in their fughs, for then you would think them both stark mad, while they follow one another so close at the heels, and yet can never overtake each other.

Strange Metam. in Cens. Lit., vii. 286.

To fill up entirely, to To FULFIL. make full; literally, to fill full.

With massy staples, And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts. filling bolts. Tro. and Cr., Prologue.

Then Scipio (that saw his ships through-gall'd And by the foe fulfill'd with fire and blood).

Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 298.

So in our Liturgy, "That we may be fulfilled with thy grace."
†FULIGINOUS. Smoaky, or sooty.

Only such exercise as may refine, and keep the spirits active, and digest the grosser and fulginous matter, strengthens the nerves of a kingdom, or republick.

Wilson's Life of James I.

FULLAM, or FULHAM. The cant term for some kinds of false dice. There were high fullams and low fullams. Probably from being full, or loaded, with some heavy metal on one side. so as to produce a bias, which would make them come high or low, as they were wanted. It has been conjectured that they were made at Fulham, but I have seen no proof of it; nor is it very likely that gambling should have flourished in so quiet a village: nor would such a manufacture be publicly avowed.

Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd, and fullam holds.

And high and low beguile the rich and poor.

Mer. W. W., i, S. Who? he serve? hal he keeps high men and low men, he! he has a fair living at Fulham.

B. Jons. Every Man out of H., iii, 6.

The "fair living at Fulham," is evidently a mere quibble, because the man lived by these fullams.

D'Ol. How manie pronounes be there? Dig. Faith, my lord, there are more, but I have learned but three sorts: the Goade (gourd), the Fulkam, and the Stopkater-tre; which are all demonstratives, for here they be.

Mons. D'Olise, sign. F S. Sic. Give me some bales of dice. What are these? Som. Those are called high fulloms, those low fulloms.

Nobody and Somebody, sign. G S.

See Gourds. +FULL-BAGGED. Rich. Thus have I brought to end a worke of paine, I wish it may requite me with some gaine; For well I wote, the dangers where I ventered, No full-bag'd man would ever durst have entered. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

FULLMART, FULIMART, or FOU-MART. A polecat. Bewick describes the polecat under the name foumart: Chambers also acknowledges it as a provincial word for that animal. The authority of Ben Jonson is decisive. Of his personage Pol-martin, the lady

Ray's,
Was ever such a fulmart for an huisher
To a great worshipful lady, as myself!
Who, when I heard his name first Martin Polecat,
A stinking name, and not to be pronounced
In any lady's presence, without a reverence,
My very heart c'en yearn'd.
Tale of a Tub, i, 4. Skinner says he had only seen the word in Isaac Walton. The passage is this:

With gins to betray the very vermin of the earth. As namely, the fitcher, the fuliment, the ferret, the polecat, &c.

Compl. Angl., p. i, ch. 1. Hence some have supposed it the stoat, as polecat is here mentioned also; but Walton appears to have been mistaken in that point.
†FUMISH. Cross-tempered.

Office of the control to be fumish and overthwart for small causes, and to admit of no reason. Rich Cabinet Furnished with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

FUMITER. The herb fumitory, or fumaria officinalis of Linnæus; in the class diadelphia, and order hexandria. An officinal plant. Shakespeare calls it rank, because it grows freely and luxuriantly among corn, where it is a troublesome weed.

Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even now
As mad as the ver'd sea, singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank function; and furrow weeds,
With harlocks, hemlock, &c.

Lear, iv, 4. Shakespeare uses also the proper name, fumitory:

Her fallow leas,
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Hen. P, v, 2. The French name is fumeterre; the old Latin of the shops, fumus terræ. †FUMOUS. Creating steam, or wind. He must abstaine from garlicke, onions, mustard, and He must subtaine from such like fumous things.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

+FURDLE. To draw or roll up. The captaines have layd by their bastinadoes, Lieutenants put to silence their bravadoes. The colours furdled up, the drum is mute, The serjants ranks and files doth not dispute.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+FURIBUNDAL. Furious.

O Muses, may a woman poore, and blinde, A lyon-draggon, or a bull-beare binde? Ist possible for puling weach to tame The fwribundall champion of fame? G. Harney, 1693.

+FURMENTY, FURMITY, or FRU-MITY. Still a favorite dish in the north, consisting of hulled wheat boiled in milk and seasoned. It was especially a Christmas dish.

Potage ou gasteau fait de farine de fourment.

Potage ou gasteau fait de farine de fourment. Passenty pottage.

Athera. Sorbitiuncula pulticulæ liquidæ similis ex sees tennissimo polline. Gruell made of milke and wheate, fivenestie.

Christmas is come and now the smell Of roast beef does exceeding well;

With mutton pasty, and mine'd-pie, Pork, plumb-broth, veal, and fivensity;

Pig, goose, and rabbets, and strong beer, All these things are good Christmas cheer.

But yet mistake not, for I think, Good beer at Christmas time to drink, Good victuals also should take place; Good victuals also should take place; Which to the winter adds a grace. Plumb-pudding and good furmety, Fine pusty, goose, and Christmas pie. For breakfast, beer and cheese and toast, for dinner victuals boil'd and roast; At evening with good ale or beer, Conclude the night, the month, the year.

To make furmenty.—Take a quart of sweet cross, 3 or 3 sprigs of mace, and a nutneg cut in half, put it into your cream, so let it boil, then take your Frencharley or rice, being first washed clean in fair water three times and picked clean, them boil it in sweet three times and picked clean, them boil it in sweet milk till it be tender, then put it into your cream, and boil it well, and when it hath boiled a good while, take the yolks of 6 or seven eggs, beat them very well to thicken on a soft fire, boil it, and stir it, for it will quickly burn; when you think it is boiled enough, sweeten it to your tast, and so serve it in with resewater and musk-agar, in the same manner you make it with wheat. Tid., 1756.

A True Gentlewoman's Delight, 1676, p. 17. To FURNACE. To send forth fumes or smoke like a furnace.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him.

Cymb., i, 7.

Furnaceth the universall sighes and complaintes of this transposed world. Ckapman, Pref. to Shield of Honer.

Cited by Mr. Steevens. FURNIMENT. Furniture, decoration. Fornimento, Italian.

Lo where they spyde, with speedie whirling pace, One in a charet of straunge furniment. Spens. F. Q., IV, iii, $8.

To FUST. To grow fusty, musty, or Fusty and musty seem always to have been indiscriminately used, and are so still. Cotgrave has fusté, French, in the same sense; but I cannot find such a word in any French dictionary, ancient or modern.
Sure, he that made us with such large discourse
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason
To fust in us unus'd.

Haml, iv, 4

His blowen ware Of fusted hops, now lost for lack of sale.

Hall. Sat., iv. 5.

FUSTILARIAN. A cant term of contempt, a fusty stinking fellow; fusty itself is used in the same contemptuous way. See below.

Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilerian!
1'll tickle your catastrophe. 9 Hen. IV, ii, 1.

There is no probability in the conjecture of Mr. Steevens, that it is derived from fustis.

FUSTILUGS. A very fat person; so said to mean in the Exmoor dialect. Sherwood also translates it in French by "Coche, femme bien grosse;" otherwise I should have derived it from fusty and lugs, i. e., musty ears; implying a person dirty and illsavoured up to the ears.

You may daily see such fustilugs walking in the streets, like so many tuns, each moving upon two pottlepots.

Junius, 1639, cited by Todd.

FUSTY. Musty or mouldy.

Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains; 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Tro. f Cr., ii, 1.

Dirty, musty, ill-smelling: Where the dull tribune

That with the fusty plebeians hate thine honours, Shall say, against their hearts, "We thank the gods Our Rome hath such a soldier."

Coriol., i, 9.

†FUTILOUS. Idle, silly.

I received your answer to that futilous pamphlet, with your desire of my opinion touching it.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+FUTURELY. This adverb is used by Chapman, Hom. Epig., iv.

To FYLE. Contracted from to defile. See to FILE.

But few of them would fyle their handes with any labor.

North's Plut., p. 375.
These fyled hands did wipe, did wrap, did rocke, and lay ye soft.

Warner's 21b. Bugl., iii, 16, p. 73.

FYST. A corruption of foist, which was a jocular term for a windy discharge of the most offensive kind.

Marry, fyst o' your kindess. I thought as much.

Eastward Hos, O. Pl., iv, 270. Coles acknowledges it, and has to fyst, vissio; which in his Latin part he renders to fizzle. Also fysting cur; and in Sherwood's English Dictionary, subjoined to Cotgrave, fysting curs, and other offenders of the same class, are fully illustrated. This confirms the interpretation of Foisting Hound.

FYTCHOCK. A term of contempt, the same as fitchew, or polecat; which Isaac Walton calls fitchat; Topsell and others, fitch; from fiese, Dutch.

Parewel, fytchock.
B. and FL Scornf. Lady, act v, p. 350. Said to an old waiting maid, who has before been called cat, and several other contemptuous names.

G.

GABERDINE. A coarse cloak or mantle. Gavardina, Spanish. Cotgrave thus explains it: "Galleverdine (which he gives as a French word), a gaberdine, a long coat or cassock of course (i. e., coarse), and, for the most part, motley or party-coloured stuffe." Gavardina is not Italian, Gavardina is not Italian, though given as such by Skinner, and It is Spanish, and not others. gabardina; though b and v are often interchangeable, Nor is galleverdine French, that I can find, on any authority but that of Cotgrave.

Caliban's grotesque dress is also called by this name:

Alas! the storm is come again; my best way is to creep under his gabordine. Temp., ii, 2. So the dress of the banditti, in the Goblins:

plins : Under your gaberdines wear pistols all. O. Pl., x, 176.

tWith whom besides he changed a gaberdine,
Thick-lined and soft; which still he made his shift
When he would dress him 'gainst the horrid drift
Of tempest.

Chapman, Odysz., ziv, 740.

GAD, from the Saxon, gaad. A goad, or sharp point of metal.

or sharp point of machine.

And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,

Tit. Andr., iv, 1. "Upon the gad," in Lear, seems to be the same as upon the spur: Kent banished thus! and France in choler parted! And the king gone to-night! subscribed his power! Confin'd to exhibition! all this done

Upon the gad In the following passage, gad is evidently a kind of slender spear:

Their horsemen are with jacks for most part clad,
Their horses are both swift of course and strong,
They run on horseback with a slender gad,
And like a speare, but that it is more long.

Harr. Ariost., x, 78.

In a receipt which occurs in the Haven of Health, we are directed to "heat a gad of steele or iron glowing hot in the fire," and quench it in the composition. Chap. 194, p. 178. In Phillips's New World of Words, "a gad of steel" is explained to be "a small piece of steel to heat in the fire, and quench in any liquor." It is sufficiently obvious that gad-fly is composed of this word, quasi goading-fly. Probably, therefore, to gad, and gadding, originate from being on the spur, to go about.

+GAFFER. An old man. See GAMMER. They that buy must sell, or else they have a bad bargain on't, but do according to his conscience. My gaffer only said, he would inform himself as well as he could against next election, and keep a good conscience.

Dame Huddle's Letter, 1710.

GAFFLE. A part of the cross-bow used in bending it. It moved in a part called the rack.

My cross-bow in my hand, my gaffle on my rack, To bend it when I please or when I please to slack. Drayt., Muses' Elys., p. 1492.

Cotgrave renders gaffle into French by pied de biche, and bandage d'arba-The gaffle was the lever by which the bow was drawn. Coles Latinizes it by "balistæ flexor." The artificial steel spurs put upon fighting cocks are also called gaffles, or gaffs.

+GAFFLET. A steel spur placed on the leg of a cock for fighting.

There is always a continued noise amongst the spectators, in laying wagers upon every blow each cock gives; who, by the way, I must tell you, wear steel spurs, (call'd I think, gafflets) for their surer execution.

+GAG-TOOTH. A projecting tooth. The poets were ill advised that fained him to be a

The poets were ill source suar raine and leane, gag-toothed beldame.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1593.

I, here is a fellow judicio that carried the deadly stocke in his pen, whose muse was armed with a gag-tooth, and his pen possest with Hercules furyes.

The Returne from Pernasnus, 1606.

GAGE. A pledge, French. Hence the glove or gauntlet thrown down in challenges was called a gage; because, by throwing it, the challenger pledged himself to meet the person who should take it up. It is, therefore, in allusion to it as a manual ornament, that Shakespeare makes Aumerle thus speak of it:

There is my gage, the manual scal of death,
That marks thee out for hell. Rich. II, iv, 1 It is twice in the same play called honour's pawn:

If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength As to take up my honour's pawn, then stoop.

There is my honour's pawn,
Engage it to the trial if thou dar'st.

To lay to gage, means to leave in pawn : For learned Collin lays his pipes to gage, And is to fayrie gone a pilgrimage. Drayt. Sheph. Garland, p. 1393.

Ev'n so, this pattern of the worn-out age, Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage. Shakesp. Rape of Lucrece, Suppl., i, 450. To GAGE. To pledge, or put in pledge.

But my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts

Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gag'd.

That men of your nobility and pow'r Did gage themselves in an unjust behalf.

This is in general erroneously printed 'quge, as if it were an abridgement of engage; which it is not. for to gauge, or measure:

Nay, but I bar to-night; you shall not gage me By what we do to-mucht. Mar. Ves., ii, 3.

And to lay as a wager:

Against the which a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king.
I'll gage my life that strumpet, out of craft.

Marston, Dutch Consteam, 6 4.

GAIBESEEN. A sort of jocular word, in signification the same as gaylooking; "gay to be seen."

Now lykewyse what saic you to courtiers?

These minion gailoteen gentilmen.

Sir Tho. Chaloner's Morie Enc., Q.3, b.

In Spenser we have it in two words: That goodly idol, now so gay beseen, Shall doff her fleshes borrow'd fair attire. Sommet TTVIL +GAIN. Went; perhaps gained, i.e., reached.

He drew his arrow to the head, And drew it with neight and main; And strait in the twinkling of an eye, To the Frenchman's heart the arrow gain.

Ballad of Robin Hood, the noble Fisherman.

GAIN, rather arbitrarily prefixed to words, had often the force of a negative, and was merely a contraction of against, as will appear in several words here following.

To GAINCOPE. Ray gives this as a south or east country word, and explains it, "To go across a field the nearest way, to meet with something Perhaps from cutting and gain; a I find it gainful coupe, or cut. used by a quaint writer, who, perhaps, belonged to those parts.

Some indeed there have been, of a more heroical strain, who striving to gaincope these ambages, by venturing on a new discovery, have made their voyage in batte time. Joh. Robotham to the Reader, in Comenius's Janua Ling., ed. 1659.

GAINFUL has been interpreted wayward, but I find no authority for that sense, either as a provincial term, or in other authors. If it was a Staffordshire phrase, Mr. Sympson, who gave that meaning, ought to It seems rather to have said so. signify encroaching, apt to gais upon any indulgence given. This suits both the context and the analogy of composition. It has only been noticed in this passage:

You'll find him gain/ul, but be sure you curb him,
And get him fairly, if you can, t' his lodging.
B. § Pl. Pilgrim, iv, 4.

I confess I have not seen it used in this sense elsewhere. Mr. Monck Mason fancied that the ordinary sense of lucrative might answer, explaining it thus: You will find him a profitable patient, but you must curb him notwithstanding. But this by no means agrees with the general tendency of the speech. It might do. indeed, could nothing better be made of it; but I prefer the sense here given. I thought once that the abovementioned force of gain in compounds might explain it, but have given up that notion.

GAINGIVING. A misgiving, a giving against; that is, an internal feeling or prognostic of evil.

But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about But thou woulds not think now in an a new awar my heart: but it is no matter. Hor. Nay, good my lord. Haml. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gaingiving as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Haml., v, 2.

No other example has been found. To GAINSTAND, a word of similar construction. To stand against.

Love proved himself valiant, that durst, with the sword of reverent duty, gainstand the force of so many enraged desires.

Mr. Todd quotes also Knight's Tr. of Truth for it.

†But there is nothing more certaine then this, that †But there is nothing more certaine then this, that many men reposing two much trust in the strength of their bodies, and so being carclesse in gainstanding and resisting the beginnings of maladies (which their dissolute order of life hath begotten and ingendred) have bene yoked by old age before the course of their yeares did require it.

Barrongh's Method of Physick, ed. 1624.

To GAINSTRIVE, v. a. To strive against. Similarly formed.

In his strong arms he stifly him embraste,
Who, him gainstriving, nought at all prevail'd,
For all his pow'r was utterly defaste.

Spens. F. Q., II, iv. 14. The fates gainstrire us not.

Grimould, cited by Todd. Also as a neuter verb, F. Q., IV, vii, 12. GAISON. Scarce; for GEASON, Q. V.

This white falcon rare and gaison, This bird shineth so bright.

Prog. of Eliz., vol. i. Verses on the Coron. of Anne Boleyn, p. 10. Manner of going. It is here GAIT. used metaphorically, for proceeding in a business; which is uncommon.

We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbrasto suppress His further oail herein. Haml., i. 2.

To go one's gait, in country language. to pass along. Gang your gait is still used in the north of England, and in Scotland.

Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass.

Lear, iv, 6. In Midsummer Night's Dream we have to take his gate, for take his way, or to go; where it is erroneously printed gate. As Shakespeare's orthography was to be corrected, it ought to have been made uniform.

With this field-dew consecrate,
Ev'ry fairy take his gait.
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace, with sweet peace.

GALAGE. A clown's coarse shoe: from galloche, a shoe with a wooden sole, old French, which itself is supposed to be from gallica, a kind of shoe mentioned by Cicero, Philip., ii. 30, and A. Gellius, xiii, 21. If so, the word has returned to the country whence it first was taken; but I doubt much of that derivation; for, by the passages referred to in the above authors, it seems more likely that the gallica was a luxurious covering, than one so very coarse as the galloche. Perhaps the caliga, or military strong boot of the Romans, from which Caligula was named, may be a better origin for it. The word galloche is now naturalised among us for a kind of clog, worn over the shoes.

My heart-blood is nigh well from I feel, And my galage grown fast to my heel. Spens. Shep. Kal., Feb., 243. For they been like foul wagmoires overgrast, That if any galage once sticketh fast, The more to wind it out thou dost swink. The more to wind it out thou toos some.

Thou mought aye deeper and deeper sink.

Ibid., Sept., 130.

The old commentator, E. K., explains it, "A startup, or clownish shooe." Chaucer has galoche.

†A galatch or pattens which women used in time past, crepida. Withals' Dictionaris, ed. 1608, p. 211.

GALATHE. The name of Hector's horse, in the old metrical romances on the subject of the Trojan war, in which the real manners of Homer's heroes were quite disregarded.

There is a thousand Hectors in the field;
Now here he fights on Galathe his horse,
And there lacks work.

Tro. and Cr., v, 5.

The affectation of giving high-sound- +GALLEMELLA. ing names to the horses of the heroes of romance is noticed by Warton, in his observations on the Faery Queen, vol. i, p. 292; and he quotes Cervantes, whose admirable ridicule sets the matter in a clear light:

I should be glad to know, afficted madam, what is the name of that same horse? His name, answered the afficted, is not like that of Bellerophon's horse, the afflicted, is not like that of Bellerophon's horse, which was called Pegasus, nor does it resemble that which distinguished the horse of Alexander the Great, Bucephalus; nor that of Orlando Furioso, whose name was Brigliadoro; nor Bayarle, which belonged to Reynaldo de Montalvan; nor Prontino, that appertained to Rugero; nor Booles, nor Periton, the horses of the sun; nor is he called Orelia, like that steed on which the unfortunate Rodrigo, last king of the Goths, engaged in that battle where he lost his crown and life. I will lay a wager, cried Sancho, that as he is not distinguished by any of those famous names of horses so well known, so neither have they given him the name of my master's horse, Rosinsante. the name of my master's horse, Rosinante.

Don Quiz., iii, 8. Their swords and spears had also names. See MORGLAY.

+GALEOT. More properly galiot, a small ship.

A. Oh, now all begins to passe betweene the galeot, and the marriner: and well?

Passenger of Benvenuto.

GALINGALE, or GALANGALE. The aromatic root of the rush cyperus, used as a drug, or as a seasoning for dishes; from galangue, French. Galanga, in Bomare's Dict. d'Hist. "Les Indiens en assai-Naturelle. sonnent leurs alimens." It is hot. bitter, and acrid, and though formerly employed in medicine here, is now In India it is still in use as disused. a spice. There is an English species.

See Sowerby, Engl. Bot., pl. 1309.

My spice box, gentlemen,
And put in some of this, the matter's ended;
Dredge you a dish of plovers, there's the art on't;
Or in a galingale, a little does it.

B. & Fl. Bloody Brother, ii, 2. Gerard gives an account of two sorts. both foreign, p. 33.

A GALL. A sarcasm, or severe joke;

a galling stroke.

Fool. Truth's a dog that must to kennel: he must be whipp'd out, when the lady Brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me.

Lear. i, 4.

Also a sore, a place rubbed or galled: Enough, you rubbed the guiltie on the gante.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 463.

To GALL AT. Apparently, to say galling, sarcastic things to a person. I have seen you gleeking and galling at thi twice or thrice.

+GALLANTISE. Gallantry.

Gray-headed senate, and youth's gallantise. Du Bartas.

Apparently a personage in the old May games.

Solinge in the Old May gaines. Phy, Long Megg of Westminster would have been aslamed to disgrace her Sonday bonet with her Satterday witt. She knew some rules of decorus; and although she were a lustic bounsing rampe, somewhat like Gallemells or Maide Marian, yet was somewhat like Gallemella or Maide Marian, yet was she not such a roinish rannell, or such a dissolute gillian flurtes, as this.

Harvey, Pierce's Supercrogation, 1600.

GALLIAN, for Gallic, or French. word, I believe, peculiar to the following lines:

An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves A Gallian girl at home. Cymb, i, 7, GALLIARD. A lively, leaping, nimble French dance; from gaillard, gay. Commonly joined with the Spanish pavin. See PAVAN. [It is said to have been introduced into England about the year 1541.]

What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight? Sir And.
Whith I can cut a caner.
Twel. N., i, 3. What is thy excellence in a genture, and the land that I can cut a caper.

And bids you be advised, there's nought in France
That can be with a nimble galliard won. Hen. 7, 1, 2.
The end of these men is not peace.—Wee is me, they doe but dance a galliard over the mouth of hell, that seems now covered over with the greene sods of pleasure: the higher they leape, the more despersite is their lighting.

By. Hall's Works, p. 46. It is thus described by Sir J. Davies:

It is thus described by Sir J. Dav
But, for more diverse and more pleasing show,
A swift and wandring dance he did invent,
With passages uncertain, to and fro,
Yet with a certain answer and consent
To the quick music of the instrument.
Five was the number of the music's feet,
Which still the dance did with five paces meet.
A gallant dance, that lively doth bewray
A spirit and a virtue masculine,
Impatient that her house on earth should stay,
Since she herself is fiery and divine;
Oft doth she make her body upward fine,
With lofty turns and capriols in the air,
Which with the lusty tunes accordeth fair.

Poem on Dancing, St.

Which with the insty runes accorded rair.

Poom on Dancing, St. 67, 68.

†Our galliardes are so curious, that their are not for my daunsyng, for their are so full of trickes and tournes, that he whiche hath no more but the plaine sinquepace, is no better accoumpted of then a vene

Riche his Parewell to Militarie Profession, 1581. See CINQUE-PACE.

GALLIASS, or GALLEASSE. A large galley; a vessel of the same construction as a galley, but larger and heavier. Galeazza, Italian ; galleasse, French.

Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less
Than three great argustes, besides two galliasses,
And twelve tight gallies.

Tam. Shr., ii, l. According to the explanation given in Dr. Johnson's Dictionary, the masts of a galleasse were three, which could not be lowered like those in a galley; and the number of seats for rowers was thirty-two. He cites Addison's Travels:

The Venetians pretend they could act out, in case of great nocessity, thirty men of war, a hundred galleys, and ten gallesses.

GALLIGASKINS. See GALLY-GASKINS. GALLIMAWFRY. A confused heterogeneous jumble; from galimafrée, a sort of ragout or mixed hash of different meats. Menage says of this word, and galimatias, "Ils sont cousins germains, mais je ne say pas leur généalogie." Minshew, without much attention to the analogy of derivation in the French language, says, "It may come of some meats made or fried in gallies, or among gallieslaves, which use to chop livers, entrailes of beasts, guts, or such like, for their sustenance in the gallies: and sometime killed cats, &c., as myselfe have seene at sundry places beyond seas, where I have travelled; or the meat of the Gaules, which use much chopped livers, &c." He seems to have considered it as a galley maw fry, that is, a fry made for the maws or mouths in the gallies. But Mr. Lemon, whom Greek only will satisfy, adopts Skinner's hint of "alludit κώλον intestinum et ματτύα," which, he adds, comes from udrru, or µάσσω; but this is mere stuff.

They have a dance which the wenches my is a gallimentry of gambols, because they are not in t.

Winter's T., iv, 3.

Cook. They are two
That give a part of the seasoning. Poet. I conceive
The way of your galli-maufrey.

B. Jons. Neptune's Tr., vol. vi, 161.
Thus with saying, not with meat, he maketh a gallimafrey.

Alex. and Camp., O. Pl., ii, 94.

Pistol is made to use it ludicrously for a wife, perhaps implying that she was an odd mixture of different qualities:

He loves thy gallymassfry, Ford, perpend.

Mer. W. W., ii, 1. tCoblers, tinkers, fencers, none escapt them, but they mingled them all on one gallimafry of glory.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

GALLO-BELGICUS. Mercurius Gallo-Belgicus, erroneously said to be the first newspaper printed in England, but in fact a history of the times, something similar to an Annual Register. It was written in Latin, and published at Cologne, with this title: "Mercurii Gallo-belgici, sive rerum in Gallia et Belgio potissimum, Hispania quoque, Italia, Anglia, Germania. Polonia. vicinisque locis, ab anno 1588 ad Martium anni 1594 gestarum Nuncii." The first volume was printed in octavo, 1598; from which year to about 1605, it was published annually; and from thence to the time of its conclusion, which is uncertain, it appeared in half-yearly volumes. Chalmers's Life of Ruddi-The balf-vearly publication is alluded to by Earle:

He [an old college butler] doubles the pains of Gallo-belgicus, for his books go out once a quarter, and they are much in the same nature, brief notes and sums of affairs, and are out of request as soon.

Microcosmographia, § xvii, Bliss's edition, p. 50, and note. This Mercurius had a very ill fame for lying; for which reason Hall, in his description of Lavernia, or Terra Impostorum, gives him a magnificent palace there:

315

parlace there; shi hic sdes profectò elegantes Mercurius Gallo-Belgicus; nec ablinc procul cardinalis quidam historicus amplissima jecit castelli augustissimi fundamenta.

Mandus alter et idem, iv, 5. His imitator, Healde, calls the district Lyers-bury Plaine, and thus renders the passage:

Morcurius Gallobelgicus has built himself a delicate house in the country: and there is a certaine cardinall (an historian) that hath layd the foundations of a mighty and spacious eastle in these quarters.

Disco. of a New World, p. 234.

margin 88ys, Of the cardinal, the margin says, "If he doe meane Baronius, hee is not farre amisse, many suppose;" and this was probably the intention

Cleveland, in his Character of a London Diurnal, thus speaks of it: The original sinner of this kind was Dutch, Gello-belgious, the protoplast, and the modern Mercuries but Hans-en-Kelders It is often mentioned and alluded to in the plays and poems of the Shakespearian age. It should appear, by the following quotations, that it was written by a captain:

It shall be the ghost of some lying stationer, A spirit shall look as butter would not melt In's mouth. A new Mercurius Gallo-Belgicus. Cos. O there's a coplain was rare at it. Foro. No'er think of him. Foro. Ne'er think of him.
The ceptain wrote a full hand gallop, and Wasted indeed more harmless paper than Ever did laxative physick, yet will I Make you t' outscribble him, and set down what
You please, the world shall better believe you.

B. J. Fl. Fair Maid of the Inn, act iv.

Again:

of Hall.

I have another business, too,
'Cause I mean to leave Italy, and bury myself in Those nether parts, the low countries. Forc. What's that, sir?

Ped. Marry, I would fain make nine days to the week,
For the more ample benefit of the captais.
'Tis believ'd
And told for news, with as much confidence

And told for news, with as much commended as if 'twere writ in Gallo-belgious.

The Heir, O. Pl., viii, 112.

The nery nuntius, sly Mercurius,
Is stoin from heav'n to Gallo-belgicus.

Disticks on the Seven Planets, in Wits Recreations, sign. X 6.

Ben Jonson probably alluded to a certain inflation of phrase employed in that publication, and not yet disused when he wrote the Poetaster.

And if at any time you chance to meet
Some Gallo-Belgick phrase, you shall not straight
Rack your poor verse to give it entertainment,
But let it pass. Act v, sc. 3. The gazette is mentioned with it in Ben Jonson's Epigrams:

They carry in their pockets Tacitus, And the Gazette, or Gallo-Belgicus. Epig. 92. A successor of this Mercury, called Mercurius Britannicus, is mentioned in the Staple of News, of Ben Jonson, act i, sc. 5. Hence the current name of Mercuries, for newspapers.

To GALLOW. To frighten; from the Saxon agælan, or agælwan. In the corrupted form of to gally, it is still current in the west of England.

Alas, sir, are you here? things that love night
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the night,
And make them keep their caves.

Lear, iii Lear, iii, 2.

Spenser uses gallow-tree, for gallows, F. Q., II, v, 26; V, iv, 22, &c., which might well be supposed to mean tree of terror, or terrible tree, though it is usual to derive it otherwise.

GALLOWGLASSES. Heavy-armed foot soldiers of Ireland, and the western isles: the lighter armed troops were called kernes.

Jacula nimirum peditum levis armaturæ quos kernos Jacula immrum pentum ievis armature quos acrinos vocant, nec non secures et lorice ferrese peditum illorum gravioris armature, quos gallogiazios appellant.

Warei Ant. Hibern., cap. vi. The merciless Macdonnel from the western isles

Of kernes and yallow-glasses is supplied. Mach., i, 2. The duke of York is newly come from Alexand, And with a puissant and a mighty power, Of gallow-glasses, and stout kernes, Is marching hitherward in proud array.

2 Hen. FI, iv, 9.

And let the bards within that Irish isle.

To whom my muse with fiery wings shall pass,
Call back the stiff-neck'd rebels from exile,

And mollify the slaught'ring galli-glass.

Drayton, Idea xxv, p. 1269.

Of the fourth degree is a galloglasse, using a kind of

In the following passage this name is given to a race of Picts:

We ought, they said, to tame the Gallowglesse, The raging Scythian Pict, that did them spoile, If we would reape our tribute of their toile. Mirror for Mag., Sewens, p. 166.

Wide, loose +GALLY-BREECHES. breeches. The same as GALLY-GASbreecues.

KINS, Q. V.

They pull in peeces fast

Their gally-breeckes all arows.

Gaulfrido and Barnardo le Vayne, 1570.

A long barge, with

GALLY-FOIST. many oars; composed of galley and foist. The latter being made from fuste, which Cotgrave thus explains: "Fuste, f. a foist; a light gally that hath about 16 or 18 oares on a side. and two rowers to an oare."

There's an old lawer.

There's an old lawer.

Trim'd up like a gally-foist, what would he do with her? B. F. P. Wife for a Month, act v, p. 337.

Cit. He has perform'd such a matter, wench, that if I live next year I'll have him captain of the gallyfoist, or I'll want my will.

B. & Fl. Knight of Burn. Pest., act. v.

Captain of a gallyfoist was sometimes used as a contemptuous term, especially to a captain. See O. Pl., xi, 380.

Often applied specifically to the city barge in which the Lord Mayor of London goes in state to Westminster:
Rogues, hell-hounds, stentors, out of my doors, you sons of noise and tumult, begot on an ill May-day, or when the gally-foist is affoat to Westminster.

B. Jons. Epicerne, iv. 2.

He was pompously received into Loudon, with httle less than a Roman triumph;—the Lord Mayor's show was nothing to it; there wanted nothing but the galley-foist, and then all had been complete.

Letter from a Spy at Oxford, quoted on Hudibr., 111, iii, v. 310, † Mas. Yes, the next day after Simon and Jude I dare, when all your liveries go a feasting By water with your gally-foist and pot-guns, And canvas whales to Westminster.

Shirley's Honoria and Mammon, 1659. GALLY-GASKINS, or, if the derivation be right, GALLO-GASCOINS, being a kind of trowsers first worn by the Gallic Gascons, i. e., the inhabitants of Gascony, probably the seafaring people, in the ports of that country. Gascons, I doubt not, is right; but Gally seems still to want accounting for, being of too learned an origin, in this etymology, for our sailors to recur to. Perhaps they were first observed to be used on that coast by sailors (not slaves) in galleys. The simple word gaskins is used by Shakespeare:

I am resolved on two points. Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold; or if both break, your gaskins will fall.

Twol. N., i, 5. Many words, when about to become obsolete, are preserved by burlesque usage, which has been the case with this. Phillips has given it new life, by applying it to breeches, in the Splendid Shilling. It is used in the Widow, attributed to Jonson, Fletcher, and Middleton:

Beggary will prove the spunge.

24 Suit. Spunge in thy gascoyns,
Thy gally-gascoyns there.
O. Pl., xii, 293.
Of the vesture of salvation make some of us babics and apes coates, others straight trusses and divell's breeches; some gally-gascoynes, or a shipman's hose. Pierce Penilesse

The corresponding word in Cotgrave is Grequesques, on which see Menage. Coles has "Galligaskins, braccæ lazæ."

thy galligashins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury and incroaching frosts,
By time subdued, (what will not time subdue!)
An horrid chasm disclose.

Phillips.

†GALPE. To gape wide.
Next, mynd thy grave continually,
Which galpes, thee to devour.
Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1877.

GAMALIEL RATSEY. A personage mentioned by Ben Jonson, of whom the following account is taken from a note by Mr. Steevens on Love's Labour Lost: "Gamaliel Ratsey was a famous highwayman, who always robbed in a mask. I once had in my possession a pamphlet containing his life and exploits. In the title-page of it he is represented with this ugly vizor on his face." On the books of the Stationers' Company, May 2, 1605, this book is entered thus: "A book called the lyfe and death of Gamaliel Ratsey, and several of his companions who were executed at Bedford." Again: "Twoo balletts of Gamaliel Ratsey, and several of his companions who were executed at Bedford." Again: "Ratsey's Ghost, or the second part of his life, with the rest of his mad pranks," &c. Act iv, sc. 1.

He is thus introduced by Ben Jonson:

Have all thy tricks, &c. &c. Told in red letters; and a face cut for thee Worse than Gamaliel Ratsey's. Alchem., i, 1. In allusion to this frightful visor, he is called by Harvey, Gamaliel Hob-goblin. Mr. Gifford, in his note on this passage, quotes some curious Latin verses on Gamuliel.

+GAMASHES. Loose drawers worn outside the legs over the other clothing.

Daccus is all bedawb'd with golden lace. Hose, doublet, jerkin; and gamashes too.

Davies. Newsge of Folly. 1611.

GAMBESON, s. A kind of proof coat for the body. So it is explained, and rightly, by Strutt, in the Glossary to his Queen Hoo Hall; but I have not met the word in old writers. word is French, and is fully explained by Menage in Gamboison, and by Du Cange in Gambeso, who quotes this line:

Pectora tot coriis, tot gambesonibus armant.

It was a stuffed and quilted jacket, both to prevent the armour from hurting the body, and to check the progress of a weapon. Blount, I believe, was wrong in explaining it, " a long horseman's coat, that covered part of the legs; from the French gambe, or jambe, a leg." Blount's Tenures, by Beckwith, p. 77.

GAMBREL, or GAMBRIL. A stick placed by butchers between the shoulders of a sheep newly killed, to keep the carcase open, by pinioning the fore legs back.

Spied two of them hung out at a stall, with a gambrel thrust from shoulder to shoulder, like a sheep that was new flayed.

Chapm. Mons. D'Ol., act iii, end.

To GAMBRIL. To extend with a stick. in the manner above described.

Lay by your scorn and pride, they're scurvy qualities, And meet me, or I'll box you while I have you, And carry you gambril'd thither like a mutton. Fitch. A nice Valone, iv, 1.

GAME, CRIED. See AIM, TO CRY.

+GAME-GALL. A satirical retort. Shortly after this quippyng game-gall, &c.

Holinshed's Chron., 1577.

GAMES, ANCIENT. A curious list of them appears in one of Sir John Harrington's Epigrams:

I heard one make a pretty observation,
How games have in the court turn'd with the fashion.
The first game was the best, when free from crime,
The courtly gamesters all were in their prime.
The second game was post, untill with posting
They paid so fast, 'twas time to leave their bosting.
Then thirdly follow'd keaving of the maw,
A game without civility or law,
An odious game, and yet in court oft seen,
A sawcy knave to trump both king and queene.
Then follow'd lodes, hand to hand or quarter,
At which some maids so ill did keep the quarter,
That unexpected in a short abode,
They could not cleanly beare away their load.

Now noddy follow'd next, as well it might, Now soddy follow'd next, as well it might, although it should have gone before by right. At which I saw, I name not any body. One never had the knave, yet laid for soddy. The last game now in use is benkerspi, Which will be plaid at still, I stand in doubt, Until Lavolta turne the wheele of time, And make it come about agains to prime Another list is in an old book of French and English dialogues. Most of the games in both lists will be found under their names.

They played at cardes, at cent, at primeros, at trumps, at dics, at tables, at lurch, at draughts, at perforce, at pleasant, at blowing [I suppose blow-point], at queene's game, at chesses.

Brondell's French Garden, 1608, sign. P.

He afterwards gives some games, not of cards or dice, but social sports: The maydens did play at [cross] purposes, at sales, to thinks, at wonders, at states, at vertues, at answers.

GAMESTER. A kind of familiar term for a debauched person of either sex.

for a debauched persons.

Tis a catalogue

Of all the gamesters in the court and city,
Which lord lies with that lady, and what gallant Sports with that merchant's wife.

B. and Fl. False One, i, 1.

She's impudent, my lord,
And was a common gamester to the camp.

All's W., v, 3.

See also Spanish Curate, i, 1. I would endure a rough, harsh Jupiter,
Or ten such thund'ring gamesters, and refrain
To laugh at them 'till they are gone.
B. Jons. Catiline, ii, 2.

Also a jocular term of familiarity, a merry gamester, as a merry fellow:

My lord Sands.

+GAMME. To jam?

Now it fortuned that this fellow was executed on a winters afternoone towards night, and being hanged, the chaine was shorter then the halter, by reason whereof he was not strangled, but by the gamming of the chaine which could not slip close to his necke, he hanged in great torments under the jawes. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GAMMER. An old wife; correlative with gaffer, and probably made from the Saxon gemeder, commater, as gaffer from gefera, socius. The derivations from godfather and godmother, &c, seem to me much less probable. The word is abundantly exemplified in Gammer Gurton's Needle, O. Pl., vol. ii. Gaffer is still used in burlesque language.

than monkey faces, yawns, and stammers,
Delude the pious dames and gammers,
To think their mumbling guides precation
So full of heav'nly inspiration.

Hudibras Redisivus, Part 6, 1706.

+GAMMOT. A lancet.

An instrument serving to cut out the rootes of ulcers or sores: it is called the incision knife, or gammot.

Nomenclator.

To GANCH. To punish by that cruel +GAR. See GARRE.

mode practised in Turkey, of suspending a criminal on a hook by the ribs till he dies: from ganciare, to hook, Italian.

Their formes of putting to death (besides such as are common els-where) are impaling upon stakes, such-ing, which is to be let fall from on high upon hoots, and there to hang until they die by the anguish of their wounds, or more miserable famine.

Sandys's Travels, p. 62. Dr. Johnson had the word, but no instance of it; only an allusion to the mode of punishment, from a Latin poem. Mr. Todd has found it in Dryden, whom he cites.

+GANDERGLAS. Perhaps ragwort, called in some parts gandergoose, which may be a modern corruption of the older word.

Purple narcissus like the morning rayes,
Pale ganderglas, and azor culverkayes.

Lauson's Secrets of Angling, 1652.

†GANGRELL. A tall fellow.

Long herry, long homme, long comme une perch treslong. A long gasgrell: a alim: a long tall fello that hath no making to his height. Nomenclate +GANG-TEETH. Projecting teeth.

The little children were never so afrayd of hell mouth in the old plaies painted with great semptecti, staring eyes, and a foule bottle nose, as the poore devils are akared with the hel mouth of a priest.

Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1608.

In sign that this is sooth,

I bite it with my gang-tooth. Stoo kim Bayes, 1673. †GANG-TIDE. Rogation week.

At fasts-eve pass-puffee; gaug-fide gaites did also masses bring. Warner's Albione England, 1992. GANZAS. Geese, in Spanish. Put by Butler for anything wildly extravagant, because the romance of the Man in the Moon feigned that don Gonzales was carried thither by genzas, or geese.

Or geese.
They are but idle dreams and fancies,
And savour strongly of the genses.

Hadibr., II, iii, 781.

Nor of the ganzas which did soon Transport don Diego to the moon.

Cloveland on Flying. +GAPE-SEED. A burlesque expression, sufficiently explained by the following examples.

Whilst others they do make repair To Smithfield to Bartholomew Fair. To see Jack Pudding act his tricks,
Whilst cut-purse he his pocket picks;
And by that means 'tis plainly clear,
They for their gapes-seed do pay dear.

Poor Robin, 1694. This will be a busy month both with the farmers in the country, and the Harlequins and Jack-Peddings in Bartholomew Fair; and these, tho' they pretend to be thought fools, will not be the only fools there, nor to be compar'd with those who, in an eager pursuit after diversion, stand with their eyes and their mouths open, to take in a cargo of gape-seed, while some a little too nimble for them pick their pockets.

Con. But not with him by my faith, and your leave, in't we be married. Prithee Beavis, gar him wash his face; he'll scare some bodies bairus else.

Brome's Northern Lass.

GARB. An heraldic term for a sheaf of corn: "a corruption of the French word gerbe, which signifies a sheaf of any kind of corn." Porny.

Great Eusham's fertile glebe what tongue hath not extoll'd

As though to her alone belong'd the garb of gold.

Drayt. Pol., xiii, p. 923

Explained in the margin, "the sheaf." †GARBEL. Anything sifted, or from which the coarse parts have been taken. which the coarse parts have been taken.

Averdepois weight is by custome (yet confirmed also by statute), and thereby are weighed all kind of grocerie wares, physicall drugs, butter, cheese, flesh, waxe, pitch, tarre, tallow, wools, henp, flax, yron, steele, lead, and all other commodities not before named (as it seemeth,) but especially every thing which beareth the name of garbet, and whereof issueth a refuse or wast.

Dallon's Country Justics, 1620.

GARBOIL. A tumult, uproar, or commotion. Garbouille, French.

The garboils she awak'd.

Her garboils, Casar,

Her garboils, Casar,

Her garboils, Cæsar,
Made out of her impatience — &c.
Did you too much disquiet.
With Charles and with Orlando to remaine,
And them to serve, while these garboyles do last.
Ald with a pole-ax dasheth out his brains,
While he's demanding what the garboil means.

Drayt. Battle of Agin., Works, p. 77.

†GAR-CROW. A SCARC-CROW?

She tript it like a barren doe, And strutted like a gar-cross. Choyce Drollery, 1656, p. 67.

GARD. See GUARD.

A GARDEN-HOUSE, now called a summer-house. Gardens in suburbs of London, with buildings of this kind in them, were formerly much in fashion, and often used as places of clandestine meeting and intrigue. This practice is described in Stubbs's Anatomie of Abuses, and alluded to by several dramatic writers:

In the fields and suburbes of the cities, they have gardens either palled or walled round about very high, with their harbers and bowers fit for the purhigh, with their harbers and bowers fit for the purpose. And least they might be espied in these open places, they have their banquetting houses with galleries, turrets, and what not, therein sumptuously erected; wherein they may (and doubtless do) many of them play the filthy persons, &c. Stubbs, p. 57. Now, God thank you, sweet lady, if you have any friend, or garden-house, where you may employ a poor gentleman as your friend, I am yours to command in all secret service.

London Prodigal, v, 1; Suppl. to Sh., ii, 517. Poor soul, she's entic'd forth by her own sex. To be betray'd to man, who in some garden-house.

Poor soul, she's entic'd forth by her own sex. To be betray'd to man, who in some garden-house, Or remote walk, taking his lustful time, Binds darkness on her eyes, surprizes her.

Mayor of Quints, O. Pl., xi, 120.

Yet at least imitate the ancient wise citizens of this city, who used carefully to provide their wives gardens near the town, to plant, to graft in, as occasion served, only to keep them from idleness. All Fools, O. Pi., iv, 161.

Thy old wife sell and yrons to the court, Be countenanced by the dons, and wears a hood, Nay keep my garden-kouse; lie call her mother, Thee father.

B. & FR. Martial Maid, iii, 1.
This is no garden-kouse, in my conscience she went forth with no dishonest intent.

B. & Fl. Woman Hater, act ii, p. 232.

The word summer-house was, however, not unknown. See Beaumont and Fletcher's Honest Man's Fortune. act iii, p. 410.

In Londina Illustrata is a print of sir Paul Pindar's lodge, or gardennow in Half - moon - alley. Bishopsgate-street.

DISHOPS GATE-SUPECT.
If the meane while their wives are joviall;
They eate the tongues of nightingales, lambestones,
Potato pies, pick'id cysters, marrowbones,
And drinks the purest wine that they can gette;
They have their parden-house; will bee sicke;
Then comes the doctor with his clister pipe,
And makes them well; their husbands heades ake still. Play of Timon.

GARDIANCE. Defence, guarding. I got it nobly in the king's defence, and in the guar-diance of my faire queene's right. Chapman's Hum. Day's Mirth, F 8.

†GARGEL, or GARGOIL. The image on the spouts of buildings, an old architectural term.

Cargels of mena figure, telamones, atlantes, gargels of womens figure, cariatides vel statuæ mulieres.

Withat's Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 163.

But rather to be dowted whether any soch person was ever bisshop there, as ys surmysed, experyence in semblable cases latly tryed owte by Dervolgaders, Conoch, and soch other Welsch godes, antique gargels of ydolatry.

Wright's Monastic Letters, p. 208.

GARISH. Splendid, shining, magnificent. Skinner says, "Nescio an ab A. S. gearwian, præparare, apparare." Mr. Lemon wrote it gairish, that he might derive it from the Greek vaiw.

ight derive it from the Greek yate. That all the world shall be in love with night, and pay no worship to the garish sun.

Rom. and Jul., iii, 2.

What fooles are men to build a garish tomb,
Only to save the carcass whilst it rots.

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 323.

But thou canst maske in garish gauderie,
To suit a foole's farfetched liverie.

Hall's Satires, iii, 1.

There in close covert by some brook,
Where no profaner eye may look,
Hide me from day's garish eye.

Milton, Penserose, 138.

GARLAND. A name long current for a collection of ballads. Dr. Percy, in the conclusion of his Essay on the Ancient Minstrels, thus speaks of collections of this kind: "Towards the latter end of queen Elizabeth's reign, the genuine old minstrelsy seems to have been extinct, and thenceforth the ballads that were produced were wholly of the latter [i. e., more correct, but bordering on the insipid] abundance, that in the reign of James I they began to be collected into little miscellanies, under the name of garlands, and at length to be written purposely for such collections." p. xxxix. In the note on this passage, the quaint titles of many of these are enumerated, from the Pepysian and other libraries. They are in 12mo, and in black letter, viz.: 1. A Crowne Garland of Goulden Roses gathered out of England's Royall Garden, &c.; by Richard Johnson. 1612. [Bodl. Libr.] 2. The Golden Garland of Princely Delight. 3. The Garland of Good-will; by T. D. 1631. 4. The Royal Garland of Love and Delight; by T. D. &c. Robin Hood's Garland is still well

No, no, man; these are out of ballads;
She has all the Garland of Good-will by heart.

Match at Mids., O. Pl., vii, 875.

G. Oh sweet man!

Thou art the very honeycomb of honesty.

P. The Garland of Goodwill.

Ford's Broken Heart, iv. 2. Qu. whether the former line is also a title of some such collection.

+To GARLAND. To crown with a garland.

Oh Elphin, Elphin, though thou hence be gone, In spight of death yet shalt thou live for aye, Thy pocaie is garlanded with baye. Drayton's Shepherds Garland, 1593.

+GARLICK. The name of a jig or farce which seems to have been very popular at the beginning of the seventeenth century.

Player. That shows your more learning, sir. But, I pray you, is that small matter done I entrusted you for? Haddit. A small matter! You'll find it worth Meg of Westminster, although it be but a bare jig.

Player. O, lord! sir, I wish it had but half the taste

Westminster, although.

Player. O, lord | sir, I wish it had but man the player.

O lord | sir, I wish it had but man the of garlick.

Haddit. Garlick stinks to this; if it prove that you have not more.... than e'er garlick had, say I am a boaster of my own works; disgrace me on the open stage, and bob me off with ne'er a penny.

The Hog hath but his Pearl.

And for his action he eclipseth quite

The jig of garlick or the punk's delight.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+GARNARD. A granary.

A garnard to keepe corne in, granarium.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 156.

+GARNEP. A small mat.

A garnep to bee laide under the pot upon the table to save the table-cloth clean, basis.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 176.

ARNERIE. A granary.
Sir Simon Eyre, draper, major, he built Leaden Hall for a garnerie for the citie, and gave five thousand Taylor's Workes. +GARNERIE.

kind, and these came forth in such | To GARRE. To cause, or make: said to be from the Icelandic gierra. so matter did she make of nought

To stirre up strife, and garre them disagree.

Syens. F. Q., II, v, 19. Tell me, good Hobbinol, what gars thee greet.

Ibid., Ecl., 4, Apr., v, 1. It is Scotch also. See Jamieson, who, with his usual diligence, has collected the whole store of etymological knowledge or conjecture upon it.

GARRET. A court jester or fool, contemporary with Archy, in union with whom he is often mentioned.

As when salt Archy or Garret doth provoke them.

Bp. Corbet, Poems, p. 66.

Whose wit consists

In Archy's bobs, and Garret's sawcy jests.

Unpub. Posm of Heylin, quoted by Mr. Chalmers in the Poets, vol. v, p. 57.

See Archy.

GARTERS, their significance. It was the regular amorous etiquette, in the reign of Elizabeth, for a man, professing himself deeply in love, to assume certain outward marks of negligence in his dress, as if too much occupied by his passion to attend to such trifles; or driven by despondency to a forgetfulness of all outward appearance. His garters, in particular, were not to be tied up. The detail, however, will be best seen by the following passages:

Dy the following passages:

Then there is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love. — Then your hose should be ungarter'd, your honet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your ahoe untied, and every thing about you denoting a careless desolation.

As you like it, iu, Shall I defy hatbands, and tread garters and shootstrings under my feet? I must; I am now liegemen to Cupid, and have read all these informations in his book of trutter.

book of statutes

ook of statutes.

Heywood's Fair Maid of the Eschange.
I was once like thee,
A sigher, melancholy humorist,
Crosser of arms, a goer without garters,
A halband hater, and a busk-point wearer.
A pleasant Comedy how to know a g. Wife, fc.

†GARVAGE. For garbage.
Intestina. ἐντερα, ἔγκοιδια, ἐνδινα, χορδαὶ, Αυτεἰ.
ἔγκατα. Βογαιχ, les entrailles. The guts and gernuge.

GASCOYNES. The same as gaskins, or galligaskins.

Much in my gascoynes, more in my round home [r. hose].

Give you joy, air,

Of your son's gaskoyne-bride; you'll be a grandfather shortly,

To a fine crew of roaring sons and daughters.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 117.

The gascoyne bride was Moll Cutpurse, who was dressed like a man. tWhen sir Rowland Russet-coat, their dad, goes sagging everie day in his-round genecoynes of white cotton, and hath much adoo (poore pennie-father) to keepe his unthrift elbowes in reparations.

Nush, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.

GASHFUL. Horrid, frightful; for gastful, from gast. Certainly not from gash, which would not make sense in either of the passages cited by Mr. Todd.

Nor prodigal upbanding of thine eyes,
Whose gashful halls do seem to pelt the skies.
Quarles's Jonah, H 2.
Come, death, and welcome; which spoke comes in a gashful, horrid, meagre, terrible, ugly shape. Phoberoom, phoberotatom.
Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 69. Neither the eyes of a person praying, nor the bony figure of death, could be full of gashes. In the latter passage, it is evidently only one of many synonyms, accumulated for effect.

To GAST. To frighten: of the same origin as ghost, &c. Gast, Saxon.

Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fied.

Lear, ii, 1.

Also as a participle:

I made thee flie, and quickly leave thy hold, Thou never wast in all thy life so gast. Mirr. Mag., p. 120.

Aghast is well known.

To GASTER. Another form of the same word.

Either the sight of the lady has gaster'd him, or else he's drunk.

B and Fl. Wit at sev. Weapons, act ii, p. 277

B and Pl. Wit at see. Weapons, act ii, p. 277.
And with these they adrad and gaster sencelesse old women, witlesse children, &c.

Pectarat. of Popish Impost., sign. S 4.

tif they run at him with a spit red hote, they gaster him so sore, that his dame shall go her selfe, if she will, he will come no more there.

Gifford's Dialogue on Witches, 1603.

GASTNESS, for ghastliness.

Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye? Othel., v, 1. So the folios have it; the quartos read jeastures.

+GASTRIMARGISM. The love of good eating.

Be not addicted to this foule vice of gastrimargism and belly-chear, like Smyndyrides, who when he rid a suiter to Clysthenes his daughter, caried with him a thousand cooks, as many foulers, and so many fishers.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

†GATEHOUSE. The prison was usually in the strong tower over the town

The galehouse for a prison was ordain'd,
When in this land the third king Edward reign'd;
Good lodging roomes and diet it affoords,
But I had rather lye at home on boords.

Taylor's Workes, 1603.

+GATE-ROW. A lane; a street. To dwell heere in our neighbourhood or gate-row, being therto driven through very povertie.

Terence, MS. trans. 1619.

+GATHER.

I gather myselfe togyther as a man doth whan he intendeth to showe his strength, je me accessile. Palsarane.

See Ord. and Reg., p. 297. FATHERER. The man who took †GATHERER. the money at the entrance to the theatres.

Argentarius coactor in lap. vet. qui pecuniam colligit.
Receveur. A collector, gatherer, or receiver of money.
Nomenclator, 1885.
There is one Jhon Russell, that by youre apoptiment was made a gatherer with us. Collier's Alleyn Papers.

GAUDE, or GAWD. A toy, a gewgaw, a piece of festive finery; from gaudeo, Latin, though Skinner is inclined to derive it from the Dutch goud, gold. See much discussion of the etymology in Todd's Johnson.

And stoln th' impression of her fantasy, With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits, Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats.

Mids. N. Dr., i. 1.

Seems to me now

As the remembrance of an idle gand

Which in my childhood I did dote upon.

Ibid., iv, 1.

Clothed she was in a fool's coat and cap Clothed she was in a fool's coat and cap
Of rich imbroider'd silks, and in her lap
A sort of paper puppets, gauds, and toys.
Trifles scarce good enough for girls and boys.
Drayt. Moone., vol. ii, p. 476.
Love, still a baby, plays with gawdes and toys.
Drayt., Idea xxii, p. 1286.
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
I all too waston and to full of cards.

Is all too wanton, and too full of gawds,
To give me audience.

T. John. iii. 8.

See Todd's Illustr. of Chaucer, Glos-Bary.

To GAUDE. To sport, or keep festival: from the substantive.

For he was sporting in gauding with his familiars.

North's Plut., p. 563.

To jest:

Beware how they contrive their holyday talke, by waste wordes issuing forth their delicate mouths in carping, gauding, and jesting at young gentlemen.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. i, fol. 60.

Hence Warburton reads gaude in the following passage, which, it must be owned, much improves the sense of the subsequent line:

Go to a gossip's feast, and gende with me, After so long grief such nativity.

Com. of Errors, v, 1.

The original reading, however, is go with me, which being sense, the alteration, though very specious, seems too great to be made without authority. Shakespeare has gawded for adorned, as the word gaudy still signifies:

as the word gaudy still signines:

Our veil'd dames

Commit the war of white and damask in
Their nicely gauded checks, to the wanton spoil
Of Phoebus' burning kisses. Coriol., ii, 1.

GAUDERY. Finery, gaiety.

But thou can'st maske in garish gauderis.

Hall's Sat., iii, 1.

Then did I love the May flow'rs gaudery, blind to the living beauties that dispose the joyes of life.

Harringt. Nuga Astiq., ii, p. 86

†Let some debauched tutor Be procur'd, who can with specious fucuses daub over Vice, and represent it to him, trickt up with its allur-Vice, and representations in gauderies, and make him think it worthy his best endeavors.

The Unfortunate Usurper, 1663.

+GAUDY. Gay; festive.

I have good cause to set the cocke on the hope, and make gaudye chere.

Palsgrave's Acolastus, 1540.

GAUDY DAY or NIGHT. A time of festivity and rejoicing. The expression is yet fully retained in the University of Oxford.

versity of Oxford.

Come,

Let's have one other gandy night; call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls; once more

Let's mock the midnight bell. dat. & Cl., iii, 11.

A foolish utensil of state,

Which, like old plate upon a gandy day,
's brought forth to make a show, and that is all.

Goblins, O. Pl., x, 143.

Blount, in his Glossographia, speaks of a foolish derivation of the word from a judge Gaudy, said to have been the institutor of such days. But such days were held in all times, and did not want a judge to invent them.

+GAVEL, or GAVIL. A sheaf of corn. Fr.

And as fields that have been long time cloyed With catching weather, when their corn lies on the gavill heap,

Are with a constant north wind dried.

. Chapm. II., xxi.

†GAVELOCK. A kind of spear.

Thr. Donax, come thou hither into the midst of the host with thy gavelocke. Simalio, goe you forth into the left wing of the battell: and thou, Syriscus, into the right.

Terence in English, 1614.

+GAULLY. A term applied to vacant spots where nothing grows.

Baylie. I see in some meddows gaslly places, where litle or no grasse at all groweth, by reason (as I take it,) of the too long standing of the water, for such places are commonly low where the water standeth, not having vent to passe away.

Norden's Surveiors Dialogue, 1610.

GAUNT. The vulgar English spelling and pronunciation of the name of Ghent, in Flanders.

Who first the Flemings taught, whose feast is held at Gasat.

Drayt. Polyolb., xxiv, p. 1129. The fourth son of Edward III was born at that place, in 1340, and therefore was always called John of Gaunt. In the opening of the play of Richard II he is styled, Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster. In the same piece Shakespeare makes him pun abundantly on this local appellation, and the adjective gaunt, thin, bony.

Oh how that name befits my composition! Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old, &c. Ibid. The adjective hardly wants illustrating, To GEALE. To freeze, jelly, or clot; having been used by Dryden and later poets.

The city of Ghent was still called Gaunt by Heylin, in his Cosmo-graphy, 1703:

Gaunt, in Latine called Gandarum.—In this town were born John duke of Lancaster, commonly called John of Gaust, and Charles the fifth, emperor. P. 319. In Moll's Atlas Geographicus, 1713, it is changed to Ghent.

GAWK, or GOWK. A cuckoo, or a fool. Scotch, in both senses. See Jamieson, who gives good reasons, from etymology, why the latter sense was the original one. It is still current in the northern counties of England. In both places also, it is a name for an April fool. See Brand's Popul. Ant., vol. i, p. 121, 4to.

GAY, s. A print, or picture; still current in Norfolk in the same sense. It clearly has this meaning in the passage from L'Estrange, given by Todd.

Look upon precepts in emblems, as they do upon gent and pictures.

L'Estrance.

Also here:

I must needs own Jacob Tonson's ingenuity to be greater than the translators, who in the inscription to the fine gay, in the front of the book, calls it very honestly, Dryden's Virgil.

Milbourne's Notes on Dryd., p. 4.

[In the following passage it means anything gaudy.]

The time for this amorous appointment being expired, my lover came to our house, attired (1 think 1 might say tired) with a suit covered all over with very neh gold lace; for, though the king had forbid his subjects those superfluities, he, who was a stranger, took pleasure in such gayes, on purpose to be the more noted by wearing cloathes out of the common mode.

Comicall History of Francies, 1855.

†At GAZE. Staring.

The court at Whitehall, the parliament, and city, took the alarum mustering up their old fears every man standing at gaze, as if some new produce had relicated them.

Wilson's James 1.

+GAZE-HOUND.

ALE-IIOUND.

See'st thou the gase-kound! how with plance severe
From the close herd he marks the destin'd deer.

Steele's Miscellenies.

A small Venetian coin, the original price of a newspaper; whence the now current name of Gazette.

What monstrous and most painful circumstance Is here to get some three or four gazets, Some three-pence in the whole, for that 'twill come to B. Jons. Pos, ii, 1.

Since you have said the word I am content, But will not go a gazet less. Massing. Maid of Hon., iii, l.

Also Guardian, i, 1.

There seem at least a thousand or fifteene hundred people there [at St. Stephen's, Venice]; If you will have a stoole it will cost you a gazet, which is almost a penny.

Coryat, vol. ii, p. 15, regr

the simple form of to congeal. Gelo.

We found the duke my father gealds in blood. Resenger's Trag., sign. Il.
Speaking of the formation of pearls in the shell:

It forms little grains or seeds within it, which cleave to its sides, then grow hard, and geal, as it were.

Pathenia Sacra, p. 190, quoted by Todd.

GEANCE. See JAUNCE.

GEAR, or GEER. Matter, subject, or business in general; often applied to Saxon.

> But I will remedy this gear ere long, Or sell my title for a glorious grave.
>
> 2 Hen. FI, iii. 1.
>
> Will this gear ne'er be mended? Tro. & Cr., i, 1.

This latter appears to have been something of a proverbial expression, as it occurs verbatim in the old interlude of King Darius, 1565.

Here's goodly gear. Rom. & Jul., ii, 4. It must here be objected again to the modern editors of Shakespeare, that, having altered the orthography of the author, to render his language more easy to the reader, they do not give it uniformly. This word, for instance, is sometimes printed gear, and some-times geer. It ought always to be gear.

And make their welcome to them well appeare;
That to sir Calidore was easie geare.

anate o ar candore was caste geare.

Sp. P. Q., VI, iii, 6.
But this was not for a little while, nor in a gears of favour that should continue for a time, but this helde out fortic yeares together.

North's Plat., p. 178. See to COTTON.

GEASON. Rare, uncommon, unusual. Of uncertain origin, but marked in some old dictionaries, and in Ray, as an Essex word.

†Still oysters and fresh-herrings are in season, But strawberries, cherries, and green-pease are geason. Poor Robin, 1712.

GECK. A fool. Capel says, from ghezzo, Italian; but it is rather Teutonic, as Dr. Jamieson suggests.

Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest, And made the most notorious geck, and guil, That e'er invention play'd on. Theel. N., v, 1.

In the following passage it seems rather to mean a jest, or subject of ridicule:

To taint his noble heart and brain With needless jeniousy; And to become the geck and scorn

Of others' villany.

Cymb., v, 4.

In these also, cited by Mr. Steevens from the Scottish dialect, it means rather a trick :

Thocht he be suld, my joy, quhat reck? When he is gone give him ane geck, And take another by the neck.

Again:

353

AIN:
The carle that hecht sa weill to treit you,
I think sall get ane geck.
Ans veris excellent and delectabill Treatism, intituit Philotus, etc., 1603.

Dr. Jamieson has it in the sense of an object of derision, a taunt, or gibe: and derives it from the Teutonic acck. iocus.

+ĞEIRE. An old name for a vulture.

A vulture or geire, vultur.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 20.

To castrate; but anciently To GELD. used also for the operation by which females are rendered barren, and in dogs called to spay.

Thus Antigonus, in the Winter's Tale. threatens to geld his three daughters. Act ii.

This is sufficiently proved by the term, not yet obsolete, of a sow-gelder.

+GELID. Cold. Lat. gelidus.

The lukewarm blood of this dear lamb, being spilt, To rubies turn'd, whereof her posts were built; And what dropp'd down in a kind getid gore, Did turn rich sapphires, and did pave her floor.

Dut turn rich sappnires, and did pave her noor.

Quartes's Emblems
No showrs but 'twixt your lids, nor gelid snow,
But what your whiter chaster brest doth ow,
Whilst winds in chains colder your sorrow blow.

Lowelace's Lucasta, 1649.

+GELLUPE. Jelly. ELLUTE. Cerry. Jusculum coactum. Gelatine. Gelley, or gellupe. Nomenclator.

An Essex word.

The ladie heark ing to his sensefull speach,
Found nothing that he said unmeet or gesson.

Spens. F. Q., VI, iv, 37.

Such as this age, in which all good is gesson,
And all that humble is and mean, debac'd.

Spens. Visions of the World's Vensity, Stanz. 1.

Neither is that gesson, seeing for the most part it is proper to all those of sharpe capacitie.

Euphnes, sign. C 4, b.
Gascoigne's Works, sign. C 2.

†Here hangs by reason that he wanted reason.
Good men are scarce, and honest men are gesson.

Taylor's Workes, 180.

†Still oysters and fresh-herrings are in season.

Taylor's Workes, 180.

She had said before,

She had said before,

The fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gillifowers,
Which some call Nature's bastards.

Hence, in another play, after much jesting on the names of flowers, a young maiden declares against that kind:

R. You have fair roses, have you not?
J. Yes, sir, roses; but no gillifowers.
New Wonder, Anc. Dr., v, 285.

354

See GILLOFEB.

GELT. Unexplained, I think, in the following passage of Spenser. Church and Upton say that it means a castrated animal. But why should Amoret be so compared, or why should loss of wits be attributed to such an animal?

Which, when as fearfull Amoret perceived,
She staid not th' utmost end thereof to try,
But, like a ghastly gelt, whose wits are reaved,
Ban forth in hast with hideous outery.

Spens. F. Q., IV, vii, 21.

The word certainly had the meaning assigned, but it does not apply in this place.

GÉMEL. A twin, or pair of anything; from gemellus, Latin. A term used in several arts, for things arranged in pairs. Thus in heraldry, gemelles are explained, "the bearing of bars by pairs or couples in a coat of arms. Kersey.

It is by others termed a fesse between two gemels. And that is as farr from the marke as the other; for a gemel ever goeth by paires, or couples, and not to be separated.

R. Holme, Academy of Armory, &c., I, iii, 77. Drayton borrows the word from that science to signify couplets in poetry:
The quadrin doth never double; or, to use a word of heraldry, never bringeth forth genells.

Preface to Baron's Wars, vol. i, p. 85.

In the following passage it seems to be used to signify pairs of hinges:

Far under it a cave, whose entrance streight
Clos'd with a stone-wrought dore of no mean weight,
Yet from itself the genet beaten [qu. bearen?] so
That little strength could thrust it to and fro

Browne, British Past., B. ii, song 3, p. 109. All this serves to strengthen that admirable conjecture of Warburton, which Johnson so justly pronounced to be ingenious enough to deserve to be true. He proposed gemel for jewel, in the following passage; and, indeed, the context seems almost to demand it. The accusation against Warburton of coining the word, is fully exposed by the above passages.

Herm. Methinks I see these things with parted eye, When ev'ry thing seems double.

Hel. So, methinks,
And I [i. e., I also] have found Demetrius like a gemel, Mine own, and not mine own. Mids. N. Dr., iv, 1. Shakespeare might have in mind the gemel Antipholis, in his own Comedy of Errors, whom Adriana found her own, and not her own. Jewel hardly makes sense. The MS. might, perhaps, have it jemel, which would make the mistake very easy.

This is certainly the word which was also corrupted into gimmal, gimmow. gimbal, &c., as applied to double rings. See GIMMAL.

GEMINY. A pair. Gemini, Latin.

Or else you had look'd through the grate, like a sensing of baboons.

Mer. W. P., ii, 1. Probably intended as an allusion to the sign Gemini in the zodiac. O gemini, as an exclamation, is found in the 17th cent.

†O gemony! neighbour, what a blisse is This, that we have 'mongst us Ulisses? Homer a la Mode, 1666.

+GENERABLE has a second meaning. not given by Todd, viz., genial, contributory to propagation. Thou queen of heav'n, commandress of the deep, Lady of lakes, regent of woods and deer. A lamp dispelling irksome night; the source Of generable moisture.

The GENERAL. The people at large.

And even so
The general, subject to a well-wish'd king.
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondaess
Crowd to his presence.

Mess. for Mess., ü, 4. The confirmation of this true reading is owing to the sagacity of Mr. Malone, who supported it by this passage of Clarendon: "As rather to be consented to than that the general should suffer." B. v, p. 530, 8vo. It is very odd that the commentators should have puzzled themselves about the next word, subject, which is evidently put, as in common usage, for subjected, or being subject. See, if any further satisfaction be wanting, Johnson, Subject, adj., No. 2.

The general is similarly used here: For the success

For the success, Although particular, shall give a scantling Of good or bad unto the general. Two. and Cr., i, 2. That is, "Will give a small share of advantage or hurt to the people at large."

Again:

For the play, I remember, pleas'd not the millions; 'twas caviare to the general.

Haml. ii. 2. In another passage, Shakespeare has the singular expression of the general gender, for the common sort of people:

The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him.

Did, iv, 7. By some writers the generality is used in the same sense:

From whence it comes, that those tyrants who have the generality to triend, and the great ones their enemyes, are in the more safetic.

Machiavel on Livy, by E. Dacres, b. i, ch. 40.

†GENERAL. Common; public.

She's generall, she's free, she's liberall
Of hand and purse, she's open unto all,
She is no miserable hidebound wretch,
To please her friend at any time shee'l stretch; At once she can speake true and lye, or either,
And is at home, abroad, and altogether.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GENEROUS. Of noble birth or rank. The primitive sense of the word, and the first noticed by Dr. Johnson, but not illustrated by him with any examples, nor now very commonly Mr. Todd has added two quotations, one from Othello, as below.

Twice have the trumpets sounded; The generous and gravest citizens
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is entring.

Meas. for Meas., iv, 6.
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence. Othella iii S.

GENEVA WEAVER. Weavers have been celebrated for their love of psalmody, which is satisfactorily ac-See WEAVER. counted for. people of Geneva were celebrated puritans; and among them the weavers particularly excelled as psalmodists. A baboon is asked.

What can you do for the town of Genesa, sirrah?

[He holds up his hands, instead of praying.]

Con. Sure this baboon is a great puritan.

Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 487.

Who does he look like in that dress?

who does he look like in that dress?

Newc. Hum! why

Like a Genera secarer in black, who left

The loom, and entered into th' ministry,

For conscience sake.

City Match, U. Pl., ix, 370.

The persecution of Protestants in the Netherlands brought the weavers of that country into England, and these, being Calvinists, were joined by their brethren from Geneva.

+GENIAL. Cheerful; festive. (Lat.)

Whilst they on genial Couches, with golden frames supported, feast.

Breas his Descent into Hell, 1661.

+GENIO. Genius.

But by reason of humano nature, wee have daily experience, that as humours and genioes, so affections and judgement, which oftentimes is vassall to them, and every other thing else, doth vary and alter.

The Passenger of Bensenuto, 1613.

A Genoese. GENOWAIE.

Ambrose Grimani, a Genoscaie, lying in garrison in the iale and city of Chio. Grimeston's Goulart, G g 1.

GENT, for noble, genteel, of good rank.

Well worthy impe! said then the lady gent, And pupil fitt for such a tutor's hand. Spens. F. Q., I, ix, 6. He lov'd, as was his lot, a lady gent,
That him again lov'd in the least degree,
For she was proud, and of too high intent. Ibid .. St. 27.

Such a monnment, The sun through all the world sees none more gent.

Sir Tho. Herbert's Travels, p. 65.

†Through a faire forrest as I went,

Through a faire forrest as I went,
Upon a sommer's day,
I met a woodman quaint and gent,
Yet in a strange aray. England's Helicon, 1614.
†Pot. Who is't that cals?

Mo. A knight most gent.

Pol. What is your pleasure sir?

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651. +GENTILESSE. Gentility. Fr.

Her yeares advancing her to the use of reason, there was a pretty emulation among them, who should render her mistresse of most gentilesses, and teach her the most witty and sub-lie discourses, to serve her upon all occasions. History of Francios, 1655.

her upon all occasions. History of Francion, 1655. GENTLE, adj. Liberal, free; of rank to receive knighthood, whether he has it or not. Eques is thus defined by Rich. Jhones, an old herald: "A gentleman that professeth honor, vertue, and armes, or any of them. Honor and Armes, b. v, p. 2. He afterwards sets down ten qualifications which a gentleman ought to have. Briefly thus: 1. A good constitution; 2. A handsome person; 3. A bold aspect; 4. Sobriety and discretion; 5. Obedience to command; 6. Vigilance and patience; 7. Faith and loyalty; 8. Constancy and resolution; 9. Charity; 10. Good luck or fortune. It would be happy if all, who now call themselves gentlemen, were so well qualified.

Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle, and not fearful. Temp., i, S. That is, of liberal rank, and therefore old.

Clerk-like, experienc'd, which no less adorns
Our gentry, than our parents' noble names,
In [i. e., by] whose success we are gentle.
Wint. Tale, i, 2.

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate. I am as gentle as yourself, as freeborn.

B. & Fl. Love's Pilgr., ii, 1. GENTLE, s. A gentleman. Occurs frequently in the old ballads, "Listen, gentles all, to me." But Shakespeare also has it.

also has it.

Away! the gentles are at their game,
So we will to our recreation. Lose's L. L., iv, 2.

Where is my lovely bride?

How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown.

Tam. SAr., iii, 3.

See Todd.

To GENTLE, v. To make free, or place in the rank of a gentleman.

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition. Henry F, iv, 3.

†And all this raking toyle, and carke and care, Is for his clownish first borne some and heyre, Who must be gentled by his ill got pelfe; Though he, to get it, got the divell himselfe.

Tuylor's Workes, 1630.

+GENTLE-CRAFT. The craft of shoe-

And since that, one of the gentle craft, who took me infinitely for the excellent guit he had in tickling a lady's heel.

The Wizard, a Play, 1640, MS. An old ballad on the gentle-craft commences thus:

Of craft, and crafts-men, more or less, The gentle-craft I must commend;
Whose deeds declare their faithfulness, And hearty love unto their friend,
The gentle-craft in midst of strife,
Yields comfort to a careful life.

GENTLEMAN-USHER. Originally a state officer, attendant upon queens, and other persons of high rank, as, in Henry VIII, Griffith is gentlemanusher to queen Catherine; afterwards a private affectation of state, assumed by persons of distinction, or those who pretended to be so, and particularly ladies. He was then only a sort of upper servant, out of livery, whose office was to hand his lady to her coach, and to walk before her bareheaded (see BARE), though in later times she leaned upon his arm. As much as curiosity can require concerning this custom, may be found in Ben Jonson's comedy of The Devil is an Ass, where Ambler figures as gentleman-usher to lady Taile-bush; and in the Tale of a Tub, where my lady Tub is served by Martin Polecat in the same capacity, having changed his name to Pol-Martin.

To have it sound like a gentleman in an office. Act i, sc. 6. A whole length picture of this curious appendage of pride is given in Lenton's Leasures (1631), which being, as I apprehend, a scarce book, I shall insert nearly the whole of it:

insert nearly the whole of it:

A gentleman-wher is a spruce fellow, belonging to a gay lady, whose footatep in times of yore his lady followed, for he went before. But now hee is growne so familiar with her that they goe arme and arme.—
His greatest vexation is going upon aleevelesse arrands, to know whether some lady slept well last night, or how her physick work'd i' th' morning, things that savour not well with him; the reason that ofttimes hee goes but to the next taverne, and then very discreetly brings her home a tale of a tubbe. He is forced to stand bare, which would urge him to impatience, but for the hope of being covered, or rather the delight hee takes in shewing his new-crisp't hayre, which his barber hath caus'd to stand like a print hedge, in equal proportion. He hath one commendation amongst the rest (a neat carver), and will quaintly administer a trencher in due season. His wages is not much, unless his quality exceedes; but his vales are great; insonuch that he totally possessed the gentlewoman, and commands the chambermaid to starch him into the bargaine. The smallness of his legs bewrays his profession, and feeds much upon weale to encrease his calfe. His greatest case is, he may lye long in bed, and when hee's up, may call for his breakfast, and goe without it. A twelvemoseth hath almost worne out his habit, which his annual pension will scarcely supply. Yet if his lady likes the carriage of him, shee increaseth his annuity. And though shee saves it out o' th' kitchin, she! fill pher closet.

The jest about veal, bad as it is, was probably copied from the mock receipts at the end of Overbury's Characters:
For restoring gentlemen-ushers' logs.—If any sentimen-usher have the consumption in his legs, let his feede lustily upon veale, two months in the spring-time, and forbestre all manner of mutton, and hee shall increase in the calfe.

Under "all manner of mutton," LACED MUTTON is probably meant to be comprised, a. v.

The Tatler speaks of a young mercer, become a gentleman, and anxious to support the character, who complains to him.

Though I was the most pert creature in the work, when I was foreman, and could hand a woman of the first quality to her coach as well as her own gentlemen saker, I am now quite out of my way.

No. 65.

GENTRY, for gentility, complaisance.

If it will please you

To shew us so much gentry and good-will

As to expend your time with us awhile.

Haml, ii, 2.

You're not quite

Free of the gentry till y' have marr'd one man
And made another: when one fury hath Cryd quit with t'other, and your lust repair'd
What anger bath destroyd, the titles yours, Till then you do but stand for 't

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1661. The well-known and GEORGE, ST. long-established patron of England. The following injunction, from an old art of war concerning the use of his name in onsets, is curious:

Item, that all souldiers entering into battaile, assault, skirmish, or other faction of armes, shall have for their akirmish, or other faction of armes, shall have for their common cry and word, St. George, forward, or, spot them St. George, whereby the souldier is much conforted, and the enemie dismaied, by calling to minde the ancient valour of England, which with that same has so often been victorious, &c. Cited by Warton in a Note on Rick. III, act v, sc. 3.

See also O. Pl., ii, 372; iii, 20. The combat of this saint on horseback with a dragon has been very long established as a subject for sign painting:

St. George that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence.

K. Joks, ü, l. But I find an allusion to a slanderous sign at Kingston, on which St. George was represented as on foot, and flying from the attack of the dragon's tail:

To-morrow morning we shall have you look
For all your great words, like St. George at Aingston, Running a foot-back from the turious dragon,
That with her angrie tail belaburs him
For being lazie.

B. & Fl. Woman's Prize, i, 3.

This was a most disgraceful representation of the favorite saint, and, till we have it further explained, we cannot but wonder that it should have been tolerated. Some unexplained custom is also alluded to in the mention of blue coats on St. George's day. From the two passages relative to it, I think we may conclude that some festive ceremony was carried on at St. Paul's on St. George's day annually: that the court attended: that the blue coats, or attendants, of the courtiers, were employed and authorised to keep order, and drive out refractory persons; and that on this occasion it was proper for a knight to officiate as a blue coat to some personage of higher rank. The passages are these:

By Dis, I will be knight,
Wear a blue coat on great St. George's day,
And with my fellows drive you all from Faul's
For this attempt. Ram Alley, O. Pl., v, 486.
With 's coram nomine keeping greater away
Than a court blue-coat on St. George's day.
Runne and a great Cast, Epigr. 33.

More explanation, however, is certainly wanting. The legendary history of this noble English or Cappadocian knight and saint may be read in the once popular History of the Seven Champions of Christendom, compiled by Richard Johnson, in the reign of But the more authentic James I. account is in Heylin's elaborate and less marvellous History of St. George, 4to, 1633. See also Bradlev's Clavis Calendaria, vol. i, p. 307. The history is eketched in several old ballads.

+GEORGE-A-GREEN. Or George of the Green, one of the popular heroes of the old ballad poetry, not unfrequently alluded to. He is represented as holding the office of pinner, or pindar, of Wakefield, in Yorkshire, and as defeating all antagonists with the quarter-staff. R. Greene made this hero the subject of a play, which appeared in 1599.

Yet he'l be thought or seen So good as George-a-green;

And calls his blouze, his queen, And speaks in language keen.

GFR

Witts Recreations, 1654. I sometimes have known when an answer hath been I sometimes have known when an answer hath been brought enough to divide the most intimate friends, which when 'twas inquir'd into prov'd no more to the mind of the party that sent it, then George-a-Greens to the man in the moon.

A Cap, fr., p. 136.

+GEORGY.

Here he picks out and culls the men on horse-back, and by slight of hand, with wonderful celerity, dis-mounts their Georgies.

Head's Proteus Redivious, 1675. GON. Jargon; chattering.
They being all coltish and full of ragery,
And full of gergon as is a flecken pye.
Cartseright's Ordinary, 1651. +GERGON.

+GER-LAUGHTER. Coarse laughter. Use them as grave counsellors smiles, not as rude hobbinolds ger-laughters, who thinke they are never merry except they cast the house out of the windowes with extreame securitie.

Melton's Sixefold Politician, 1609.

GERMAN. A brother. Germanus, Latin. And, sluggish german, doest thy forces slake,
To aftersend his foe that him may overtake.

Spens. F. Q., I, v, 10.

So Spenser in other places: So Spenser in other places:
Which when his german saw, the stony feare
Ran to his hart, and all his sence dismayd.
F. Q., II, viii, 46.
You will have coursers for cousins, and gennets for Othello, i, 1.

+GERMAN. A master of fence very famous about the year 1600, called the German or the German fencer. He is frequently alluded to by writers of the time.

GERMAN CLOCK. The Germans, as they were the first inventors of clocks. have always been famous for the manufacture of them. But the German clocks alluded to by our early drainatists were, probably, those cheap wooden clocks, which are still imported from the same parts; the movements of which are of necessity imperfect, yet are often loaded with fantastic ornaments, and moving figures.

A woman that is like a German ciocs,
Still a repairing; ever out of frame;
And never going aright; being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right.
Lore's L. L., iii, 1.

The following is also said of woman: Being ready [i. e., drest] she consists of hundred pieces,

Being ready [i.e.,drest] she consists of hundred pieces, Much like your German clock, and near aliy'd, Both are so nice they cannot go for pride; Beside a greater fault, but too well known, They'll strike to ten, when they should stop at one.

A Mad World, O. Pl., v. 366. She takes herself asunder still when she goes to bed, into some twenty boxes; and about next day at noon is put together again, like a great German clock; and so comes forth, and rings a tedious larum to the whole house, and then is quiet again for an hour, but for her quarters.

B. Joss. Epicane, iv, 2. For my good toothless countess let us try

To win that old eremite thing, that like

An image in a German clock doth move, Not walk. Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 225.

German watches were also in use:

Here, take my German watch, hang't up in sight, That I may see her hang in English for't. Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 77. Dutch watches lay under the same imputation as German clocks, and perhaps might be only another name for the same thing. We see, in the first passage from Shakespeare, that a clock is called also a watch; and the wooden clocks are still more frequently called Dutch than German. A real watch could not well require such constant repairing:

You are not daily mending like Dutch watches, And plaistering like old walls. B. & Fl. Wit without Money, act iii, p. 810. Another comparison of a maid to a clock may be here inserted, from its relation to some above cited:

Maids are clocks,
The greatest wheel they show, goes slowest to us,
And makes us hang on tedious hopes; the lesser
Which are conceal'd, being often ovl'd with wishes,
Flee like desires, and never leave that motion
Till the tongue strikes.

[RM A N] Ibid., iv, p. 834.

GERMAN, HIGH; probably a tall German, shown for a sight.

A name which I'd tear out
From the high German's throat, if it lay lieger there
To dispatch privy slanders against me.
Rearing Girl, O. Pl., vi, 52.

See also p. 39.

I do not agree with the editor, that the same person is meant by the German "who escaped out of Woodstreet." The high German must have been some man generally known for strength or size; that the same person should also have had a very narrow escape from Wood-street, is possible to be sure, but very improbable. Perhaps the high German was the famous fencer, whose feats are thus recorded:

Since the German fencer cudgelled most of our English fencers, now about 5 noneths past.

Oucle's Almanacke, publ. 1618, p. 6.

High German may, however, be only in opposition to low German, or Dutch: as, for a long time, high German quack doctors were in repute.

GERMANE, or GERMAN, adj.; from german, a brother. Related to, allied, connected with.

Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman.

Wint. T., iv, 3. the hangman. Wint. T., iv, 3. The phrase would be more germans to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would it might be hangers till then.

Hank, v. 2. GERMIN, or rather GERMEN. A seed. or bud; from germen, Latin.

Though the treasure

Of nature's germins tumble all together
Ev'n till destruction sicken, answer me.

Mach, iv. l.

Crack nature's mends, all germins spill at once.
That make ingrateful man.

Lear, ii. 2. I know not of any other authority for this word. In the first folio of Shakespeare, it is spelt germaine in both instances.

To GERNE, v. To vawn. Sometimes written girn, and therefore taken for a corruption of grin, having the same letters; but in the following passage the wide opening of the jaws is plainly marked:

His face was ugly and his countenance sterne, That could have fray'd one with the very sight, And gaped like a gulfe, when he did gerne.

Spens. P. Q., V, xii, lk.

From the Saxon geonian, or geornean, oscitare. Yet girn, for grin, is still used in Scotch, and some other dialects

A GERNE, s. A yawn, probably, but not certainly, in this passage:

Even so the duke frowns for all this curson'd world; Oh, that gerne kills, it kills.

Ant. & Mellids, Anc. Dr., ii, 154.

GERRE. Quarrelling: evidently from the French, guerre. I have not found it, except in the following passage, and therefore consider it only as an affectation of the author:

Wherein is the cause of theyre wrangelynge and gerre, but onelve in the undiscrete election and choyse of theyre wyves.

R. Paynell, in Cens. Lit., ix, %.

GEST. "A lodging or stage for rest in a progress or journey." In the time of royal progresses, the king's stages, as we may see by the iournals of them in the herald's office, were called his gests, from the old French word giste, diversorium. Warburton. Blount, in his Glossographia, writes it gists, and explains it as above. Strype says that Craumer entreated Cecil,

To let him have the new-resolved-upon gests, from that time to the end, that he might from time to time know where the king was

Memorials of Crann., p. 283. Hence we see that the table of the gests limited not only the places, but the time of staying at each; on which depends the propriety of the following expression of Shakespeare:

When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give you my commission To let him there a month, behind the gest Winter's: To let him there a month, beautiful Winter's T., 1. 2.
Prefixed for his parting.
It (the ourt) premor'd last to the shep of a millener.
The gests are so set down, because you ride.

Decker's Match me in London.

Hammond

Mr. Todd observes, that Hammond seems to have used gesses in this Renge

2. A gest also meant an action: gestum. Undoubtedly derived, as Warton observed. Hist. Poet., iii, 18, from the popular books entitled Gesta Romanorum, and the like, which contained narratives of remarkable adventures. Whence also, with a little change of sense, the word jest might possibly be formed; being first a story, related for amusement, of some fact; and, by degrees, any kind of entertaining discourse, till it became synonymous with Other joke, and the verb to jest. derivatives were formed from it. This, at least, is full as probable as to jest, from gesticulor; since gesticulation is a very accidental and subordinate part of jesting.

And goodly gan discourse of many a noble gest.
Spens. F. Q., I, x, 15.
They were two knights of peerlesse puissance,
And famous far abroad for waritie gest.

.. *T*bid., II, ii, 16. The gests of kings, great captains, and sad wars.
What number best can fit, Homer declares.
B. Jons. Transl. of Art of P., vol. vii, 171.
The chief and principall is: the laud, honour, and glory of the immortall gods (I speake now in phrase of the Gentiles). Secondly, the worthy gests of noble princes.

Pattenham, i, 10.

3. Also gesture, or carriage of body:

Portly his person was, and much increast
Through his heroicke grace, and honourable gest.
Spens F. Q., III, ii, 24.
Him needed not instruct which way were best Himselfe to fashion likest Florimell, Ne how to speake, ne how to use his gest, For he in counterfesaunce did excell. Ibid., III, viii, 8. +GESTNING. Lodging; entertainment.

Then sayd she, Judith, now is time, go to it,
And save thy people. Nay, I will not do it.
I will, 1 will not. Go, fear not again:
Wilt thou the sacred gestning then prophane?
Not it prophane; but holier it shall stand,
When holy folke are helped by my hand.

GET-PENNY. A theatrical term for a performance that turned out very profitable. We still use the word eatch-penny, but only for things not worth the penny that they catch. Get-penny was more respectable, and probably used by tradesmen also.

But the Gunpowder Plot,-there was a get-penny ! I have presented that to an eighteen or twenty pence audience, nine times in an afternoon.

B. Jons. Barth. Fair, v, l.
When the famous fable of Whitington and his puss shall be forgotten, thou and thy acts become the posics for hospitals; when thy name shall be written upon conduits, and thy deeds play'd i'thy lifetime by the best company of actors, and be called their get-Eastward Hos, O. Pl., iv, 267. BCHMV.

GEULE-GAME. "A yew-game or geule game, gambade." Howell, Lex. +GEULE-GAME. Tetr., 1660.

To GHESSE. So Spenser writes to guess, the etymology being ghissen, Dutch. Some, therefore, have contended for this spelling.

It seemd a second Paradise I glesse, So lavishly enricht with nature's threasure. Spens. F. Q., IV, x, 23.

See Johnson and Todd in loc. Guess. however, has been too long settled to he altered.

†Phy. Madam, my innocence will plead my pardon: I conld

Not ghesse for whom my lord intended it.

The Lost Lady, a Tragy-Comedy, 1638. GHITTERN. See GITTERN.

GHOST. A dead person. Whoever was the author of the second part of Henry VI certainly meant to describe the common appearance of a corpse after a natural death, in these lines:

after a natural ucasi, in color of have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart, &c.
2 Hem. VI, iii, 3.

But, he goes on to say, the appearance of the duke of Gloucester's corpse (then before them) is quite different from one timely-parted, or dving in due course of time, as it exhibits every possible mark of violence. Mr. Malone has shown that ghost is similarly used for a dead body, in the same play from which this was taken:

Sweet father, to thy murder'd ghost I swear, Addressing the corpse before him.

Spenser has employed it to signify a person:

No knight so rude, I ween, As to doen outrage to a alceping ghost.

P. Q., II, viii, 26. Thus a person is sometimes called a soul. A similar passage occurs in Fletcher's Purple Island:

Whose leaden eyes sunk deep in swimming head, And joyless look, like some pale asky spright, Seem'd as he now were dying, or now dead.

B. vii, St. 19. To GHOST, v. To haunt as a ghost. Since Julius Casar

Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, Then saw you labouring for him. Ant. and Cleop., ii, 6.

Uncommon as this verb is, it has been found in a prose writer:

Ask not, with him in the poet, Larra hune, intemperia, insaniae, ne agitant senem? What madnesse ghosts this old man, but what madness ghosts us all? For we are ad unum omnes, all mad.

Burt. Anat. of Mel., p. 22, Introd.

AMBEUX. Boots; an old French

GIAMBEUX. word, very probably supposed by Warton to be borrowed by Spenser from Chaucer's Rime of Sir Topas, where it occurs at v. 3380. Old French, gambeux.

That a large purple streame adown their giambeux falles. P. Q., II, vi. 29.

GIANTS OF GUILDHALL. Of these sublime personages Pennant says: "Facing the entrance are two tremendous figures, by some named Gog and Magog, by Stowe an ancient Briton and Saxon. I leave to others the important decision." One of them was called Goumagog (the patron, I presume, of the Gogmagog Hills near Cambridge), and his name, divided, now serves for both: the other Corinœus, the hero and giant of Cornwall, from whom that county was named. They are thus mentioned in some old verses, printed on a broad sheet, 1660: And such stout Coronaus was, from whom Cornwal's first honor, and her name doth come. For though he sheweth not so great, nor tall In his dimensions set forth at Guildhall, Know 'tis a poet only can define A gyant's posture in a gyant's line.

And thus attended by his direful dog,
The gyant was (God bless us) Gogmageg.
British Bibliogr., iv, p. 277.

△ GIB, or a GIB CAT. A male cat. An expression exactly analogous to that of a Jack-ass, the one being formerly called Gib, or Gilbert, as commonly as the other Jack. cat is now the usual term, and for a similar reason. Tibert is said to be old French for Gilbert, and appears as the name of the cat, in the old story-book of Reynard the Fox. Chaucer, in the Romaunt of the Rose, gives "Gibbe, our cat," as the translation of "Thibert le cas," v. 6204. From Tibert, Tib also was a common name for a cat. Gibbe, our cat, is an important personage in the old play of Gammer Gurton's Needle. Sherwood's English Dictionary, subjoined to Cotgrave's, we have "A gibbe (or old male cat), Matou." It was certainly a name not bestowed upon a cat early in life, as we may be assured by the melancholy character ascribed to it, in Shakespeare's allusion. It did not mean, as some have imagined, a castrated cat, because one of the supposed offences against Gammer Gurton was the reducing Gib improperly to that state.

But ca'st thou not tell in faith. Diccon, why she froms

But ca'st thou not seu in mann, or whereat,
Hath no man stolen her ducks, or henes, or geliel Gyb her cat.

'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat or a ugg'd
1 Hen. IV, 1, 2.

bear.

For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib.
Such dear concernings hide?

But afore I will endure such another half day with him, I'll be drawn with a good gib-cat, through the great pond at home, as his uncle Hodge was

B. Jone. Barth. Pair, i. 4.

It is improperly applied to a female by Beaumont and Fletcher:

Bring out the cat-hounds, I'll make you take a tree, whore, then with my tiller bring down your gis-ship, and then have you cut'd and hung up i' the warrea.

B. and Fl. Scornful Lady, vp. 348.

Hence the anonymous editor of Mars-ton's Parasitaster (Anc. Dr., vol. ii, p. 381) argues for its meaning a spayed female cat; but all authorities are against him. Coles has "Gib. a contraction of Gilbert;" and immediately after, "a Gib-cat, catus, felis mas." Wilkins, in his Index to the Philosophical Language, has "gib (male) cat." As to gelded being used for spayed, he is right. See GELD. Nothing can be more erroneous than the explanation adopted in Cens. Lit., viii, p. 232.

Gibb'd cat, which appears in some passages, is only a foolish corruption of the right form, gib-cat:

Yes, and swell like a couple of gibb'd cats, met both by chance i' the dark, in an old garret. Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 369.

To GIBBER. Probably made from to jubber, by a common corrupt reduplication similar to fiddle-faddle, gibblegabble, shill-I-shall-I, &c.; and if so, more properly written jibber. If it were spoken with the g hard, we might be inclined to form it from the same original as gibberish; but the different sound of the first letter indicates a different root. Gibberish is conjectured by Johnson to be formed from the jargon of Geber, as an alchemist; which, considering the great prevalence of that affected science, and the early ridicule thrown on it, is not improbable. Good specimens of such jargon may be seen in Ben Jonson's Alchemist, ii, 3 & 5. Junius and Minshew refer aibberish to the jargon of the gipsies; but the deduction seems too anomalous to be

The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead Did squeak and gibber in the streets of Rome.

Haml., i, 1.

To GIBBET. To hang; usually on a gallows, but also to hang on or upon anything.

Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. 2 Hen. IV, iii, 2.

This alludes to the manner of carrying a barrel, by putting it on a sling, which is thus described by R. Holme: The slings are a strong, thick, yet short pole, not above a yard and a half long: to the middle is fixed a strong plate with a hole, in which is put a hook;—on this hook is [are] fastened two other short chains, with broad-pointed hooks, with them clasping the ends of the barrels above the heads, the barrel is lifted up, and borne by two men to any place, as is showed Chap. v, No. 146.

Acad. of Armory, B. III, chap. vii, § 121. Most people who live in London have seen the operation, in taking a barrel from the dray, which is exactly represented by Holme's figure. It is evident, that to hang or gibbet a barrel on the pole, in this manner, must be done by a quick movement, so as to attach both hooks at once.

To gibbet, in the sense of to hang on a gibbet, is still a term in common use. To jest. To GIBE. This, and other words of the same derivation, are not yet obsolete, but appear to be in imminent danger of becoming so. They have been little used since the time of Dryden, or that of the Spectator, and are put into some of the glossaries to Spenser, as requiring explanation. The derivation is supposed to be the old French gaber.

GIBERALTER seems to be used as a GIGLET-WISE. cant appellation of jocularity; but the host, who uses it, so often disfigures what he means.

Let me cling to your flanks, my nimble giberalters.

Merry Dev., O. Pl., v. 259. The name of the fortress, Gibraltar, could not then be popularly known. GIDDED, by the context should mean hunted, unless we suppose it put for giddied, made giddy by terror: In hast they runne, and mids their race they staie,

As gidded roe. Dolman in Mirr. for Mag., p. 418.

GIEFT. Gift. This singular spelling of the word in Spenser may be considered only as an expedient to make it look better as a rhyme to theft and left. Many peculiarities of this author may be traced to the same origin. Therefore these two, her eldest sons, she sent To seek for succour of this ladies gieft.

F. O., V, x, 14. +To GIG. To spin round? No wonder they'l confesse no losse of men;
For Rupert knocks 'em, till they gig agen.
They fear the giblets of his train, they fear
Even his dog, that four leg'd cavalier.

Cleaveland's Poems, 1651.

+GIGGUMBOB. Perhaps a boat.

Talthibius to the fleet do's rove
To fetch a giggumbob for Jove.
Homer's Ilias Burlesqu'd, 1722.
GIGLET, GIGLOT, or GIGLE. A wanton wench. Junius produces a number of words from the Anglo-Saxon, to which it may have affinity; as gagol, gægl, &c., all meaning lascivious; yet his editor, Lye, doubts whether it be not derived from gigge, which, he says, Chaucer has used for a mistress (Tyrwhitt has noticed it), or from giggle. It may be observed, that Sherwood has a giggle, or gigglet; and Cotgrave, under Gadrouillette, puts a minx, gigle, flirt, &c. puts a minx, gigle, jerre, well Let him speak no more: away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion.

Meas. for Meas., v, I.

Meas. for Meas., v, I.

But — with a proud, majestical, high scorn,
He answer'd thus: Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wunch. 1 Hen. IF, v, 1. Fortune is called a giglet in Cymb., iii, 1; and Jonson applies the same term to the same goddess:

And I be brought to do
A peerish giglor rites! perhaps the thought
And shame of that made Fortune turn her face. Sejanus, act v, p. 233, If this be

The recompence of striving to preserve A wanton gigglet honest, very shortly
'Twill make all mankind pandars.

Massing. Fatal Dowry, act iii.

Like a wanton.

That thou wilt gad by night in giglet-wise, Amid thine armed foes to seek thy shame. Fairf. Tasso, vi, 72.

his words, that we cannot be sure of By GIGS. A corrupt cant oath, perhaps still further depraved from by gis.

Chad a foule turne now of late, chill tell it you, by gigt.

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii. 51. Though there is no real resemblance between the colour of blood and that of gold, it is certain that to gild with blood was an expression not uncommon in the sixteenth century; and other phrases are found which have reference to the same comparison. At this we shall not be surprised, if we recollect that gold was popularly and very generally styled red. See some instances under RUDDOCK, RED.

If he do Alee I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal For it must seem their guilt. Macb., ii. 2. With similar ideas, Macbeth is afterwards made to say, Here lay Duncan, His silver skin lac'd with his golden blog Thid., sc. 8.

The poor pun, in the former passage, is not so easy to be defended as explained. If not meant for a quibble, the jingle should have been avoided. Their armours that march'd hence so silver-bright, Hither return all gill with Frenchmen's blood. K. John, ii, 2.

We have gilt our Greekish arms With blood of our own nation.

Hevroood's Iron Age, part 2d. 2. Gilt, or gilded, was also a current This sense expression for drunk. might possibly be drawn from a jocular allusion to the grand elixir, or aurum potabile of the chymists. Shake-speare, at least, has combined the two notions:

And Trinculo is reeling ripe; where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded them. Tempest, v. 1.

Beaumont and Fletcher use it also:

Duke. Is she not drunk too r

Wh. A little gilded o'er, sir. Old sack, old sack, boys.

Chances, iv, 3. The same authors compare old sack to the philosopher's stone:

Old reverend sack, which, for ought that I can read yet,
Was that philosopher's stone the wise king Ptolemeus
Did all his wonders by.

Mons. Thomas, act iii.

We find this ex-GILDED PUDDLE. pression in Shakespeare, concerning which the commentators are silent. I conceive it to be an epithet formed upon a minute observation of a common phenomenon. On all puddles where there is much mixture of urine, as in stable-yards, &c., there is formed a film, which reflects all the prismatic colours, and very principally yellow, and other tinges of a golden hue:

The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at. Ast. & Cl., i, 4
The matter of historical fact Shakespeare drew from his old friend North. who says,

And therefore it was a wonderfull example to the souldiers, to see Antonius, that was brought up in all fineness and superfluity, so easily to driake puddle scater, and to eate wild fruites and rootes.

Mater, and to cate with fruits and rootes.

North's Plut., p. 976, ed. of 15%.

†GILES'S POUND, ST. The exact site of this pound, which occupied a space of thirty feet, was the broad space where St. Giles's High-street, Tottenham Court-road, and Oxfordstreet meet. The vicinity of this spot was proverbial for its profligacy; thus, in an old song:

At Newgate steps Jack Chance was found, And bred up near St. Giles's Pound. †GILL-BURN'T-TAIL. A popular name for the ignis fatuus.

An ignis fatuus, an exhalation, and Gillion a burst taile, or Will with the wispe.

Gayton's Festivous Notes, 1654, p. 388.

Also, in p. 97.

Will with the wispe, or Gyl burnt tayle. GILL-FLIRT; from gill, and firt. Gill was a current and familiar term for a female. As in the proverb, "Every Jack must have his Gill," and, "A good Jack makes a good Gill." Ray says it ought to be written Jyll, being a familiar substitute for Julia, or Juliana. Proverbs, p. 124. Gill, however, may be safely written; for from Juliana was derived the popular name Gillian, as well as Gillet from Julietta; either of which would supply the abbreviation Gill. In Coles's "Gillian [a Dictionary we have, woman's name], Juliana." afterwards, "Gillet [a woman's name], Julietta, Ægidia." Gillian is among the maids whom E. Dromio calls for at the door, in the Comedy of Errors: Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Ginn!
Com. of B., iii, 1.

And by the right of war, like Gills,
Condemn'd to distaffs, horns, and wheels.
Hudibr., II, ii, v. 708. Flirt had the same meaning as at present. See FLIRT-GILL.

this fine that I must be displaced
By you, she cries then, good mistries Gill-flast;
Gill-flast; enraged, crys tother, Why we dirtty piece of impudence, ye ill-bred thief,
I scorn your terms, good mistries Thimble-man's wife.

Satyr against Hypocrites, 1680.

+Jac. Not one word of all this--I was a telling him, 4-Jec. Not one word of all this—I was a telling him, how some young husseys would use a reverend old gentleman to their husband; a parcel of mad wild gilfirts, that like nothing but boys and beaus, and powder and paint, and fool and feather.

The World in the Moon, 1697.

+GILLIAN OF BRENTFORD. BRENTFORD. It may be observed that Julian of Brentford's Testament, mentioned there, is not, as Nares supposed. a ballad, but a very curious tract in prose, of which there is a copy in the Bodleian Library.

Have me to bed, good sweet mistress Honeysuckle. I doubt that old hag, Gillian of Brentford, has bewitched me. Westward Hoe, 1607.

GILLOFER, or GELOFER. The old name for the whole class of carnations, pinks, and sweetwilliams; from the French girofte, which is itself corrupted from the Latin cariophullum. See an ample account of them in Lyte's Dodoens, pp. 172-175. In Langham's Garden of Health they are called galofers. See p. 281. Our modern word, gillyflower, is corrupted from this. See Stocke Gillofer, in Lyte's Dodoens, p. 168. They were called stock, from being kept both summer and winter.

Hinter and wiliter.

Here spring the goodly gelofers,
Some white, some red, in showe,
Here prettie pinkes with jagged leaves,
On rayaged rootes do growe.
The John so sweete in showe and smell
Distinct by colours twaine,
About the borders of their beds In seemlie sight remaine.

Plat's Plowers, &c., in Cens. Lit., viii, 3.

In the Winter's Tale, folio edition, it is twice written gilly-vor (act iv, sc. 4). This is a step of the progress to gilly flower, which the modern editions substitute. The John, or sweet-John, was a species of gelofer. Johnson's Gerard, p. 597, ed. 1636. See JOHN, SWEET.

+GILLORE. Plenty. See GALORE. They all with a shout made the elements ring, So soon as the office was o'er,
To leasting they went, with true merriment,
And tippled strong liquors gillore.

Ballad of Robin Hood and Little John.

GILLY-VOR. See (HILLOFER. GILT. Gold, or gilding. A common subject for a quibble, with the word guilt.

Have for the gilt of France (O guilt indeed!) Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France. Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown, Wije off the dust that hides our scepter's gilt, And make high majesty look like itself. Rick. II, ii, 1. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt.

3 Hen. VI, ii, 2.

Tho' guilt condemns, 'tis gilt must make us glad.

A Mad World, fc., O. Pl., v, 333.

I can at court,

If I would, show my gilt i' th' presence.

City Match, O. Pl., ix, 350.

+GILTS. A cant term for a class of thieves.

For that purpose he maintains as strict a correspondence with gilts and lifters as a mountebank with applauding midwives and recommending nurses; and if at any time, to keep up his credit with the rabble, he discovers anything, 'tis done by the same occult hermetic learning, heretofore profest by the renowned Moll Cutpurse.

Character of a Quack Astrologer, 1678. GIMBOL seems to be equivalent, in the following passage, to our present word gimerack. I cannot, with Skinner, derive it from engine. More probably a corruption of GIMMAL, q. v.

But whether it were that the rebell his pouder faylde him, or some gimbol or other was out of frame, &c.
Holingsh. Hist. of Ireland, G. 3, col. 2.

GIMMAL, or GEMMOW. A sort of double ring, curiously constructed. "Gimmal, annulus gemellus." Coles. Some derive it from gemellus. Also, any nicely formed machinery. gimmals are used here:

gimmals are used nere:

1 think by some odd gimmals or device
Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on,
Else they could ne'er hold out so, as they do.

1 Hen. VI, i, 2.

My acts are like the motional gymmals
Fix'd in a watch.

Fix'd in a watch.

A gimmal bit, therefore, should be a bit in which two parts or links were united, as in the gimmal ring: And in their pale dull mouths the gimmal bit Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionles

Hen. V, iv, 2. Gimmal rings certainly had links within each other. Thus, in a stage direction: diffection:

Enter Anamnestes his page, in a grave sattin sute, purple baskins, &c.—a gimmal ring with one link hanging.

Lingua, O. PL, v, 155.

Hub. Sure I should know that gimmal!

Jac. "Tis certain he.—I had forgot my ring too.

B. and Pl. Beggar's Bush, iv, 3.

Some ingenious remarks on gimmal rings occur in the Archæologia, vol. xiv, p. 7; where it is proposed to read, in Midsum. N. D., act iv, sc. 1,

And I have found Demetrius like a gimmal, Mine own, and not mine own.

If Warburton's conjecture of gemell were not almost certain, this might be adopted. The original reading, as I mentioned above, is jewel, which the last editor has endeavoured to confirm. Gimmal rings, though originally double, were by a further refinement made triple, or even more complicated: vet the name remained unchanged. So Herrick:

Thou sent'st to me a true-love knot : but I Return a ring of jimmals, to imply
Thy love had one knot, mine a triple tye.

Hesper., p. 201. The form of double, triple, and even quadruple gimmals, may be seen in the plate to Holme's Acad., b. iii, Nos. 45 and 47, where he tells us that Morgan, in his Sphere of Gentry, has spoken of "triple gimbal rings, born by the name of hawberke.' This was, evidently, because the hawberk was formed of rings linked into each other.

GIMMER, s. A gimcrack, a curious contrivance or machinery. Another corrupted form of the word gemel, or gemmel; a gemel, or double ring, being considered as an ingenious contrivance.

Who knows not how the famous Kentish idol moved her eyes and hands, by those secret gimmers which now every puppet play can imitate.

Bp. Hall, quoted by Todd.

See other instances in Todd's John-

To GIN, for to begin. Usually supposed to be a contraction of begin, but shown by Mr. Todd to be the original word, from gynnan, Saxon.

As whence the sun gins his reflexion, Shipwrecking storms, and direful thunders break. Macb., i, 2.

Alas, good man, I see thou ginst to rave.

Dray!. Sheph. Garland. So it was in the early editions; the later have Thou now beginst to rave. Workes, p. 1420. It is very common in all old writers. and is used through all the tenses, which can no longer be thought extraordinary, now it is known to have been the primitive form.

Whiting, 1638. +GIN. Given.

Generally used for a sportive or frolicksome party; probably a mere corruption of gang.

COPTUPLION OI gang.

When as a nymph, one of the merry ging, Seeing she no way could be won to sing.
Come, come, quoth she, &c.
Dr. Muser Elysium Nymph., 3, p. 1473.

But now the nymphs prefer
The shepherd ten times more,
And all the ging goes on his side;
Their minion him they make,
To him themselves they all apply,
And all his party take.

Here's such a merry ging, I could find in my heart to sail to the world's end with such company.

Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 104.

Blesse me, quoth Cloth-breeches, what a ging was heere gathered together! no doubt hell is bruke loss.

Greene's Quip, f.c., Harl. Misc., v, 40.

+GINNY. Crafty, calculated to entrap!
These fellowes with their ginny phreeses and Italiosist discourses so set after the braving thoughts of our young gentlewomen.

Nixon's Scourge of Corruption, 1615.

+GIPSISM. The circumstance of being a gipsy; gipsyism.

Are then the Sybils dead? what is become
Of the loud oracles? are the augures dumb?
Live not the Magi that so oft reveal'd
Natures intents? is gipsisms quite repal'd?
Is friar Bacon nothing but a name?
Or is all witcheraft brain'd with doctor Lamb?

Randolph's Poems, 168.

GIPTIAN, s. A gipsy. This has the appearance of being an intermediate state of the word between Egyptian and gipsy; but, perhaps, is only an attempt to approach a little nearer to the etymology.

How now, Giptian? All a-mort, knave, for want of company?

Promos and Cassandra, P. I, ii, 4. Also, in the stage direction to that scene, "Two hucksters, one woman, one like a Giptian, the rest poore

We have a Gyptian in Harrington's Ariosto, with this description:

ATIOSTO, WILL THIS UCCOLLECTION.

Rough grisly beard, eyes staring, visage wan,
All parchi, and sunneburnd, and deform'd in sight,
In fine he lookt (to make a true description)
In face like death, in culler like a Gypties.

B. xxix, st. 58.

Spenser has Gipsen:

Denser has cripters:
Certes, saud he, I mean me to disguize
In some strange habit, after uncouth wize,
Or like a pilgrim, or a lymiter,
Or like a Gipsen, or a juggeler.

Moth. Hubb 's Tale, v. 83.

To GIRD, v. act. and neut. To cut as with a switch; from gyrd, virga, Saxon. More recently, to cut or lash with wit, to reproach. Chaucer has it in the sense of cutting more severely:

Verely:
And to thise cheries two he gan to preye
To slen him, and "to girden of his head."

Monk's Tale, v. 14453. That is "to cut off his head."

We find it also in ford Surrev's Poems:

In death my lyfe I do preserve, As one through gyr's with many a wounde. Old 4to, sign. B. 2, reprint ed., p. 145. That is, "cut through." And in Romeus and Juliet:

These said her ruthlesse hand through gyrt her valiant hart. Suppl. to Sh., vol. i, p. 344. The metaphorical sense appears in the following instances:

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gold.

Sic. Be-mock the modest moon.

Coriet, i. l. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me. 2 Hen. IV, i, 2

I myself am afraid lest my wit should wax warm, and then it must needs consume some hard head, with fine and pretty jests. I am sometimes in such a vein, that for want of some dull pate to work on, I begin to gird myself.

Ales. and Campaspe, O. P., ii, 113. His life is a perpetual satyr, and he is still girding the age's vanity, when this very anger shews he too much esteems it.

Barle's Microc., Char. 6. It is used by North as if it meant to spring or bound:

But his page gave his horse such a lash with his whippe, that he made him so to gird forward, as the very points of the darts came hard by the horse tayle. Plut., p. 520.

In the usual sense of to bind round, it is from gyrdan, or gyrdel.

A GIRD, s., from the verb. A cut. a sarcasm, a stroke of satire.

I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio. Tam. Shr., v, 2.

Sweet king! (—the bishop hath a kindly gird)
For shame, my lord of Winchester, relent. 1 Hen. VI. iii. 1.

The maiden nipt thus by the nose,
Straight blusht as red as fire,
And, with his girde displeased, thus
She answer'd him in ire.

Kendal's Poems, 1577, sign. K 7.
For as I am readie to satisfie the reasonable, so I have a gird in store for the railer.

T. Lodge, Fig for Momus, Pref. tSupposing it a very vertuous thing,
To be an arrant knave in libelling.
Forsooth these screech-owles would be cal'd the wits,
Whose flashes flye abroad by girds and fits;
Who doe their mangy muses magnifie.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

RDER. A jester, or satirist: from

GIRDER. A jester, or satirist; from the above.

Why, what's a quip? Manes. We great girders call it a short saying of a sharp wit, with a bitter sense in a sweet word.

Alex. and Campasps, O. Pl., ii, 113.

Shakespeare has several times used to girdle, for to enclose or embrace. See Todd.

+GIRDLE. Phrase.

The king, knocking at the door, the maid went and opnd the door. The king asked her if Budwaies was stirring. The maid, staring him in the face, saying, What, plaine Budwaies! have you nere an M. under your girdle." Great Britans Honycombs, 1712, MS.

GIRDLER. A maker of girdles. There is a Girdler's Company in the city of London, incorporated in 1499, and confirmed in 1516. Girdlers' hall is spoken of by Stowe in Basinghall ward, p. 227, ed. 1599.

Talk with the girdler, or the milliner, He can inform you of a kind of men That first undid the profits of those trades, By bringing up the form of carrying Their Morglays in their hands.

B. A. P. H. Hen. Man's F. i. I.

B. & Fl. Hon. Man's F., i, L. The folios read milner and mill'ner. Milner meant a miller, but it should be milliner, at full length, for sense and metre. The girdlers sold sword belts, and the milliners ribands and tassels, which were not wanted when the swords were carried in the hand. GIRDLESTEAD: from girdle, and stead. The place of the girdle; that is, the waist.

18, the waist.

Excellent easily: divide yourself in two halfs, just by the girdlestead, send one half with your lady, and keep t'other to yourself. Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 242. Some short, scarsly reaching to the girdle-stead, or waste, some to the knee.

Stubbi's Anatomic of Abuses, p. 54. Why should thy sweete love-locke hang dangling downe, Kissing thy girdle steed with falling pride?

Affectionate Shepherd, 4to, 1594, sign. C 2. And in his bellies rinume was sheath'd, beneath his girdle-stead.

Chapm. Homer, p. 74. t'the reines reach from the loynes to the buttockes, and doe properly belong to the part belowe the waste, or girdle-steeds. The buttockes are that fleshly part which serveth us for the use of sitting. which serveth us for the use of sitting.

Lonalius on Painting, 1598.

GIRN. A corruption of grin; a form still used in Scotland, and in the northern counties of England.

This is at least a girn of fortune, if Wits, O. Pl., viii, 490. Not a fair smile. Accordingly we find it in Burna's Poems, who says of a rope, that

It makes guid fellows girn and gape,
Wi' chokin dread. Works, p. 107. Latimer, however, clearly employs girning for grinning, in the sense of

I have heard say, that in some places they goe with the corses girning and flearing, as though they went to a beare-baiting, which thing no doubt is naught.

See GERNE.

+GIRSE. A girth?

As sadlers for their elks haire to stuffe their sadles,
And girses, and a thousand fidle fadles.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

By GIS, GISSE, JYSSE, or JIS. oath; doubtless a corrupt abbreviation of by Jesus; but, I should imagine, rather from the word itself, than, as Dr. Ridley supposes, from the initials I. H. S. inscribed on altars, books, &c.

By Gis, and by St. Charity, Alack, and fie for shame. Alack, and fie for shame.

By gys, master, cham not sick, but yet chave a disease.

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl. ii, 51.

Lyke as many great lordes there be, who set so muche by them, as scant they can eat their meate, or byde a minute without them, by jysse, a little better than they are wont to doo, these, &c.

Praise of Folis, tr. by Chaloner, sign. G 2.

By jis, sonne, I account the cheere good which maintaineth health, and the servature shomes I finde faithfull

Esph. and his Engl., sign. C 1, b.

†I, be Gis, twold be trim wether,
And if it were not for this mist.

Mariage of Will and Wisdoms.

ISPIN. A leathern pot for licenor Haml., iv, 5.

+GISPIN. A leathern pot for liquor.

Raymond, the soldiers, mariners, and master
Lost heart and heed to rule; then up starts Jones,
Calls for six gispins, drinks them off at once. Legend of Captain Jones, 1659.

GIST. See GEST.

A gown; supposed by Skinner to be from giste. French, a bed, because some lie down in their gowns! It is used by Chaucer, and marked by Mr. Tyrwhitt as of French original. When Phœbus rose he left his golden weed,

When Phobus rose he left his golden weed, And donn'd a gite in deepest purple dy'd.

Percase my strange attire, my glittering golden gite.

Doth ethier make you marvet thus, or move you with delite. Gascoigne's Workes, sign. C 6, b. A stately nimph, a dame of heavenly kinde, Whose glittring gite so glimsed in mine eyes, As yet I note what proper kew it bare.

Gascoigne, Phylomene, Induct.

In the following passage it seems to be used metaphorically for splendour:

be used metaphorically for spaces.

As doth the day light settle in the west,

So dim is David's glory, and his gite.

David and Bethsabe, Orig. of Engl. Drama, ii. 158.

†No blasing beauty bright hath set my heart on fire.

No ticing talke, no gorgeous gyte, tormenteth my desire.

Gascoigne's Works. GITTERN, or GHITTERNE, s.

cittern. Coles (Engl. Dict.) says, a small sort of cittern. In fact, it is only a variation or corruption of cittern. The Italian was cetera (from cithara, Lat.), or chitarra, which the Spaniards made quitarra, whence our guitar. There seems to have been no material difference between these instruments, except in the carved head of the gittern, which may be considered as only an old Ben Jonson ludicrously fashion. introduces cittern and gittern as different; but possibly without accuracy, in so loose a composition:

For grant that most barbers can play o' the cittern, Is it requisite a lawyer should plead to a ghittern?

Vision of Delight, a Masque, vol. vi, p. 22.

Pision of Detagat, a masque, vol. vi, p. am.
Ply the gittern, accour the crowd.

Drayt. Nymphal., 8, p. 1512.

But as they were in the midst of those unfained ceremonies, a gitterne ill played on — made them look, &c.

Pembr. Arc., b. ii, p. 203. See CITTERNE. Also Hawkins's

Hist. Mus., vol. iv, p. 113.

GIUST. So Spenser writes joust, a tournament; from giostra, Italian. Too often corruptly written just. Too often corruptly willies.

Full jolly knight he seem'd, and faire did sitt,

As one for knightly giusts and fierce encounters fitt.

F. Q., I, i, 1.

Also in the Shepherd's Kalendar:
And sing of bloody Mars, of wars, of giusts.
October, v. 39.

So also he writes the verb to giust. †To GIVE. In the sense of to misgive. Clin. I will looke to that. But I cannot tell indeede how my minde gives me, that all is not well. Terence in English, 1614.

To give at, to attack. Since that the olde poet perceiveth he cannot withhold our poet from his endevours, and put his to silence, he goeth about by taunts to terrific him from writing. And thus he gives at him. Terence in English, 1614.

To give back, to retire.

366

The ground besprinkled was with blood, Tarquin began to faint;
For he gave back, and bore his shield So low, he did repent. Ballad of King Arthur.

To give in, to yield.

Women in shape and beauty men exceede:
Here I gire in. I doe confesse 't indeede.

The News Metamorphosis, MS, temp. Jac. I.

To wish a good To GIVE THE DAY.

Sweetly she came, and with a modest blush, Gave kim the day, and then accosted thus. Browne, Brit. Past., I, ii, p. 44.

To GIVE THE DOR, or the GLEEK. Similar expressions for to pass a jest upon. See Don. and GLEEK.

+GLACE. Perhaps a misprint for grace.

Wheare, with halter aboute my neck, or ladder set, Turne the ladder, they cride, none other glace to ret. Heywood's Spider and Pile, 1886.

GLADE. An open track in a wood, particularly made for placing nets for woodcocks.

WOOLCOCKS.

We in England are wont to make great plades through the woods, and hang nets across them; and so the woodcocks shooting through the glades, as their nature is, strike against the nets, and are entagried in them. Bradley, in his Family Dictionary, says that woodcocks are easily taken in nets spread along the forests, "or else in glades." All the old dictionaries have "to make a glade in a wood, colluco." Mr. Monck Mason very properly conjectures that we should read glade in the following passage of Beaumont and Fletcher, where the printed editions have glode, in that sense an unheard of word.

in that sellse an annual See his Remarks, p. 196.
Bless me, what thing is this? two pinnacles
Upon her pate! Is't not a glade to catch woodcochs?
Wildg. Chase, v. 4 For glade, as still used in poetry, see

Johnson. †To GLADISH. To bark. Fr. glatir.

Who from all parts with speed assembled weare About the generals tent, his will to hear:
As doth the hounds about their hunt at morne Com gladishing at hearing of his horne.

Do BLARE. To stare.

"One as melancholie as a cat," answered Mocken,
"and glared upon me as if he would have looked through me."

Man in the Moone, 1009.

through me."

†GLARE. Mire; mud.

Eight monthes the winter dures;

The glare it is so great,

As it is May before he turne

His ground to sowe his wheate.

Turberville's Ep. and Sonnettes, 166.

+GLART. Fleam.

For the party that is incombred in the breast with any kind of fleame or glart.—Take the powder of betonic, and drinke it with warme water, it voideth and purgeth the fleame wondrously, and doth away the glart or fleame.

GLASS. A looking-glass, hanging from the girdle, was long a fashionable female ornament. Stubbs speaks with coarse anger of this insignificant custom:

They must have their looking-glasses carried with them wheresoever they go; and good reason, for else how could they see the devil in them.

Anatomis of Abuses.

I would not have a lady
That wears a glass about her.

In Massinger's City Madam, act i, sc. 1, lady Rich, her daughters, and Millescent, come in with looking-glasses at their girdles.

I confess all, I reply'd,
And the glass hangs by her side,
And the girdle 'bout her waist, &c.
B. Jons. Descript. of a Lady, vol. vi, p. 376.
How his [the man's] pocket-combe
To spruce his peruke, and her [the woman's] girdle-

To order her black patches, came together.

R. Brome's New Acad., iv. p. 86.

Notwithstanding all this, nothing can be more certain than that this custom is not referred to by the speaker in the passage of Love's Labour Lost, where Dr. Johnson originally brought it forward. The princess there evidently means to call the forester her glass, for having honestly, as she chooses to say, represented her person:

Here, good my glass, take this [money] for telling true.

iv, 1.

Now "good my glass," is the same as "my good glass;" as "good my lord, or my liege," for "my good lord, or liege."

To GLASS, v. To view as in a glass.

To GLASS, v. To view as in a glass.

Then take a shield I have of diamonds bright,
And hold the same before the warrior's face,
That he may glass therein his garments light,
His wanton, soft attire, and view his case.

Rairfax, Tasso, xiv, 77.

Padd

See also Sidney, as quoted by Todd. Shakespeare seems to have used to glass, for to enclose in glass:

glass, for to enclose an grace.

As jewels in crystals for some prince to buy,
Who tendring their own worth, from whence they were glass'd,
Did point out to buy them, along as you past.
Lore's L. L., ii, 1.

GLASS, BROKEN BY POISON. It was formerly a current notion that fine glass, such as that of Venice, the only crystal glass originally made, would break if poison were put into it. To this opinion Massinger alludes:

Here crystal glasses—

this pure metal
So innocent is and faithful to the mistress,
Or master, that possesses it, that rather Than hold one drop that's venomous, of itself
It flies in pieces, and deludes the traitor.

Massing. Renogado, i, 8. Hereby was signified, that as glasse by nature holdeth no poyson—so a faythful connsellor holdeth no treason. Ferres and Porres, Dumb Show, act ii; O. Pl., i, 133. This is among the errors noticed by Brown:

Brown:

And though it be said that poyson will break a *Peniceglass, yet have we not met with any of that nature.

Were there a truth herein, it were the best preservative for princes and persons exalted to such fears;
and surely far better than divers now in use

B. vii, ch. 17.

Fine or Venice glass was first made in England in queen Elizabeth's reign. See Stowe.

GLAVE, GLEAVE, or GLAIVE. A broad sword. Glaive, old French.

Not surely arm'd in steel or iron strong, But each a glass had pendent by his side. Fairf. Tasso, i, 50.

I'll speak nothing but guns, and glaves, and staves, &c.
Lingua, O. Pl., v, 144.

It sometimes meant also a kind of halberd, such as is figured in the note to Johnson and Steevens's Shakespeare, vol. v, p. 542. This kind was, perhaps, intended in these passages:

A heavy case
When force to force is knit, and sword and glesse
In civil broil make kin and countrymen
Slaughter themselves in others.

Edw. III, O. Pl., ii, 880.

Edw. III, O. Pl., ii, 380.
With bills and glaves from prison was I led.
Churchy. Challenge, p. 44.
Spenser has employed it to signify a club:

And laying both his hands upon his glave,
With dreadful strokes let drive at him so sore
As forst hum file abacke.

P. Q., IV, vii, 28.

In St. 25, he had said that his weapon was a "craggy club."

was a "craggy club."

What irou instrument? said the advocat, it possibly might be a spade. No, sir, said the countryman, it was a glease, being unwilling to use the name of sword or whittle.

History of Francion, 1056.

To GLAVER. To flatter. Glivan,

Saxon; also Welch.

Beare not a flattering tongue to glesser anis.

Affectionate Sheph., 1594, sign. D 4.

Having a tongue as nimble as his needle, with service patches of glasering flattery to stich up, &c.

Anionso and Mellida, sign. A 3, b.

O clasering flattering.

O glasering united.

How potent art thou!

Marston's What you will, D S.

For commonly in all dissimulations
Th' excess of glasering doth the guile detect.

Mirror for Mag., p. 408.

In the following, and several other passages, it means leering, ogling; that is, flattering by looks of tenderness:

Do you hear, stiff-toe? give him warning, admonition to forsake his sawcy glasering grace, and his guggle eye.

B. Jons. Poetaster, iii, 4. eye.

B. Jons. Formas.

When grand Maccenas casts a glavering eye when graind macernas cause a gassering type

On the cold present of a poesy.

Hall's Satires, Y, 1, p. 85, repr. ed.
Hall now he glasers with his fawning snowte.

Marst. Scourge, Sat. 6th.

For shame, leave running to some satrapas, Leave glavering on him in the peopled presse; Holding him on as he through Paul's doth walke, With nodds and legs, and odd superfluous talke.

Marston's Satirce, 1, p. 137, repr. ed. thowbeit of his owne nature susptious he was, and of a base and faint heart; and smiling also after a bitter sort; yea and glavering otherwhiles upon a man to do him harme. Holland's Ammanus Marcellinus, 1609. him harme. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinsus, 1609, there this, as also your other endowments, my pen might worthily fil whole pages; but your splendent vertues can easily be their own hersulds, to lim forth their own armory; and to extoll in presence is more glavering and poetical, than true loving and pathetical. Optick Gausse of Humors, 1639.

7So expert divers call aloud, Pray mind your pockets, to the crowd; And by such subtile glav'ring means, Prevent distrust of their designs; But if your eyes a'n't quick of motion,
They'll play the rogue, that gave the caution.

Hudibras Redivirus, part. 1708.

GLAVERER. A flatterer.

These glaverers gone, myself to rest I laid.

Mirror for Mag., p. 407.

GLAZE-WORM, or GLASS-WORM. A glow-worm.

Doest thou not know that a perfect friend should be like the glace-worm, which shineth most bright in the darke?

Buphues, sign. 14.

Moufet, in his chapter de Cicindela, "Anglis gloworme, shineworme, glassworme, quasi splendes. centem vermem vocares."

GLEADE, GLEDE, or GLEED. Burning coal, flame, fire, or heat; from gled. Saxon. It is in Chaucer.

My eyes with tears against the fire striving, Whose scorching gleed my heart to cinders turneth. Drayt. Idea, 40.

Drayt. Idea, 40.

Hot burning coals doth to his motth present,
Which he to handle simply doth not stick,
This little fool, this retchless innocent,
The burning gleed with his soft tongue doth lick.
Ibid., Birth of Moses, p. 1569.

Assure yourselfe the heate is colde which in your hand you fele,
Compar'd to quick sparkes and glowing furious gleade,
As from your bewties pleasant eyne love caused to proceade.

Faire Ilium fall in burning red gledes downe.

Mirror for Mag., Sackv. Induct., p. 268.

Seemingly borrowed from lord Surrey: I saw Troia fall down in burning gledes.

Æneid, ii, v. 821.

To GLEADE. To burn; from the above. The nearer I approch, the more my flame doth gleede.

Turbers. Ovid's Epist., Q.4.

†GLEANE. Properly, a handful of corn tied together by a gleaner.

A gleans or heape of corne commonly guthered and bound by handfuls together. Withals Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 87.

GLEAVE. The same as glave, a sword. See GLAVE.

GLEDE, or GLEAD. A kite, a kind of hawk. Glida, Saxon: some suppose from his gliding motion.

The glead and swallow labouring long, effection, 'Gainst certain death, with wearied wings fall down, For want of pearch, and with the rest do drown. Syle. Du Bartas, 2d day, 1st week.

In the public version of the Bible, the glede and kite are put together, as if they were two birds; but that is an error. Deut., xiv, 13. [Compare the following, however, l thowbeit, the Saracena, whom we are never to wish either for our friends or enemiea, raunging up and downe over the countrey, whatsoever came in ther way, in a small time sopyled and destroyed, like asso ravenous gledes and kites, which if they have sped any prey from on high, quickly in their flight sautch it up, or if they seize upon it, make no long stay.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

A GLEEK. A jest, or scoff; from glig, jest, Saxon. Whence also glee. 7881, OBLOH. WHEHE HE HE AS GREEN, SEE OF HER. FI, in, 2. You feare such wanton gleeks, and ill report. May stop great states that thither would resort.

Sir J. Harringl. Epigr., in, 33. Unto whom Lucilla answered with this glicks.

Supà., k % To give the gleek, meant to pass a jest upon, to make a person appear ridiculous:

Mus. What will you give us? Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek. Rom. and Jul., iv, i. To give the minatrel, which follows, has no such meaning. Peter only means, "I will call you minstrel, and so treat you;" to which the musician replies, "Then I will give you the serving creature," as a personal retort in kind.

1 II Kittu.

By manly mart to purchase prayse,

And give his foes the gleeke.

Turbers., cited by Steevens. Dr. Johnson was mistaken, when he gave the passage from Romeo and Juliet as an example of gleek, in the sense of music. Glig certainly had that sense, and the derivative glee retains it, when we speak of catches and glees; but gleek has not been found so used.

To GLEEK. To jest, or scoff at.

Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Mids. N. Dr., iii, I.

I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentlement twice or thrice.

Hear, F., V. The more that I get her, the more she doth glest me.

Tom Tyler and his Wife, 1898.

GLEEK. A game at cards, played by three persons with 44 cards, each hand having 12, and 8 being left for the stock. It might also be formed from glig; but a game of the same name is mentioned by old French writers : "Glic est un jeu des anciens ; selon Villon et Coquillard, il signifie bonheur, hazard." Dict. du Vieux Lang. François. It is mentioned by Rabelais, in the chapter on the sports of Gargantua.

It was reckoned a very genteel game in Ben Jonson's time:

Nor play with costarmongers at munichance, tray-- But keep the gallant'st company and the best games — — Gleek and primero. Alchem., v. 4. In the scene whence the following passage comes, is a good specimen of the mode of playing.

Come, gentlemen, what's your game? Why gleck; that's your only game. Gleck let it be, for I am persuaded I shall gleck some of you—what pluy we? twelve pence gleck? Greene's Tr Quoque, O. Pl., vii, 43.

The laws of the game are given at large in a book entitled Wit's Interpreter. The account is too long to be inserted here, but the most material parts of it are those. The players must be three, neither more nor less: the deuces and trois are thrown out of the pack; each person has twelve cards dealt to him, and eight are left for the stock; seven of which may be bought by the players, the eighth is the turn-up card, which belongs to the dealer. The cards had nicknames: the ace of trumps being called Tib, the knave Tom, and the four Tiddie; each of these is paid for, to him who holds it, by the two others. There are other prizes, as a mournival (or four) of any card, according to its value, as ace, king, &c.; a gleek (or three) of any of them in proportion. Whatever the prize is, three, four, six, or eight of the stake is paid by the two other players to the holder of it. Consequently, even a small stake might run high; and farthing, halfpenny, or penny gleck, were common among private persons, being equivalent to so much a fish at other games. But some would not play less than sixpence, or a shilling; and the spendthrift in the above comedy will not condescend to play less than halfcrowns.

Many other rules are given respecting the vie, the revie, and the ruff, which they who wish to know must be referred to the book above cited; and, as games for three are rather scarce. it might be thought an object by some to revive the forgotten game of gleek; which, by those rules, may easily be See Wit's Interpreter. recovered. 1662, p. 365.

To gleek appears above as a term of play, for gaining a decisive advantage in the game. To be gleek'd is used also for the contrary. O. Pl., vii.

41.

A GLEEK, as we have seen, was a term in the above game, meaning three cards of a sort, as three aces, three kings, &c. See Wit's Interpreter, p. 367, where it is added, that a gleek of aces received four (of the stake) each, of kings three, queens two, and knaves one, from the other two players.

Sulpitia and myself, and Frinculo
With Armellina. Albumazer, O. Pl., vii. 224
You say wittily, gossip; and therefore let a protest go out against him.—A mournival of protests, or a gleek at least. B. Jone. Steple of Nece, Fourth Intermean. A mournival was four cards of a sort. See Mournival.

GLERE. Any slimy, ropy, transparent matter, like the white of an egg; properly glair, from French. ٨s applied to an egg, glair is still in use. [See GLARE.]

Let me likewise declare my facts and fall,
And eke recite what meanes this slimy glers.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 106.

I knew my life no longer could abide,
For ramnish stench, bloud, poison, slimy glere,
That in his [the monster's] body so abundant were. Ibid., p. 109.

+To GLEWE. To look eagerly; to tare.

Who gallopt on, and gloude with fell regarde,

Pronouncing threates and termes of hye disdaine.

Turberville's Tragicall Tales, 1587. GLIB. A large tuft, or bush of hair, hanging over the face, and worn particularly by the Irish. It was, in fact, the natural head of hair, completely matted together, by not being ever cut or combed. Hence it was compared to a thatch, &c.

Whom when she saw in wretched weedes disguiz'd, With heavy glib detorm'd, and meiger tace.

Spens. F. Q., IV, viii, 12.

They [the Irish] have another custome from the 24

Scythians, that is the wearing of mantles; and long glibbes, which is a thicke curied bush of haire, hanging downe over their eyes, and monstrously disguising them, which are both very bad and hurtfull.

Spenser's Fiew of Ireland, p. 365, ed. Todd.
Proud they are of long crisped bushes of heare, which they terme glibs.

Holinsh. Hist. of Irel., D 4.

It appears that this mode was also adopted by women in Ireland:

worthers moe, with her a fifteen others moe, With langing glybbes that hid their necks as tynsel shadowing snoe. Warm. Alb. Engl., v. 26, p. 127. Gainsford's Glory of England says, that those of the women were called glibbins. See Todd's Johnson.

tLike mornings clad In grieal'd frosts, ere plump-check'd Autume had Shorn the glebs golden locks, some silver hairs Mixt with his black appeard. Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

To castrate; supposed to be from making smooth, which is the effect of that operation on men.

By mine honour
I'll geld them all; fourteen they shall not see
To bring false generations: they are coherrs,
And I had rather glib myself, than they Should not produce fair issues. Winter's Tale, ii, 1.
If I come back, let me be glibb's.
St. Patrick for Ireland, by Shirley, 1640.

To alib is still said to be current in some counties in this sense; and, in the northern counties, to lib. LIB.

GLIBBERY. Slippery; from glib, smooth, slippery.

Let who will climbe ambition's glibbery rounds, Let who will climbe ambition's gibbery rounds,
And leane upon the vulgar's rotten love,
I'll not corrival him. Jack Drum's Entert., sign. B.
Have at each meal an orphan
Serv'd to your table, or a glibbery heir,
With all his lands me'ted into a mortgage.
Muse's Looking-glass, O. Pl., ix, 206.

+GLICERY. Sleek; smooth.

To walke on the seas specifies to a man, delight, but to a woman a dissolute life, for the sea is like a har-lot, a glicery face, and a broken heart. Sampson's Fow Breaker, 1636.

GLIDE, n. a., seems, in the following passage, to mean distorted, or squinting:

I think such speech becomes a king no more than glide eyes doth his face, when I think he looks on me he sees me not The Prince's Cabbala, p. 2, 12mo, 1715.

To GLIMPSE, from the substantive, glimpse. To shine or flash suddenly.

Whose glittering gite so glimsed in mine eies,
As yet I note what proper hew it bare.

Gascoigne's Works, Y 7, b.
And little glow-wormes glimpsing in the dark.

Robert E. of Huntington's Death, 1601, E 1.

+To GLISTER. To shine; to glitter. Whose vertue, valliaunce, and worthie exploites doe glister emongst the multitude as the sunne beames doe upon the cirquet of the yearth.

Ricke, his Farewell to Militarie Profession, 1581.

+GLIWERING. Glittering. Theyr crownes glywerynge bryght and orgently.

Barclay's Pifte Eglog, n. d. To GLOAT, or GLOTE. To look very intently, with affection or desire; supposed to be a corruption of gloar, which meant the same. See Todd. To gloar is still Scotch.

And with her gloomy eyes
To glote upon those stars to us that never rise.

Drayt. Polyolb., xxvi, p. 1178. It is, however, still in use.

+GLOBIRD, or GLOWBIRD. The glow-worm.

Globerde a five, ung ver que reluit de nuyt. Ver ou mousche huisante de nuit. A glowerse a gloweworme, or lightworme.

Nomenclate.

gloweworme, or lightworme. GLODE. Supposed to be put as the preterite of glide, in the following passage of Spenser:

Dassage Of Spenser.
On whom remounting, flercely forth he rode,
Like spackes of fire that from the andvill glode.

F. Q., IV, n, 23. For this use Warton finds undoubted authority in Chaucer and in Gower. See Observ. on the F. Q., vol. i, p. The interpretation is the more certain, because Spenser copied the simile, as well as the word, from Chaucer:

And forth upon his way he glose,
As sparckle out of brond. Sir Thopas, v. 3410.

Upton has strangely quoted it: And forth upon his way he rode.

Which conceals the most convincing part of the citation. Chaucer has the word also in the Squieres Tale, v. 10707.

A GLODE, probably an error of the press, for glade, in the following passage:

Bless me, what thing is this? two pinnacles
Upon her pate! is't not a glode to catch woodcorks?

B. & Fl. Wildgoose Chase, v. 4. Or glode might be a provincial pronunciation of glade. See GLADE.

GLOOM, v. n. To look gloomy, To GLOOM, v. n. melancholy, or sullen.

If either he gaspeth or gloometh.

Tom Tyler and his Wife, 1598. Also v. a. to make gloomy.

Todd quotes from Young.

A night that glooms us in the mountide ray.

Night Th., B. ii. Hence the participle glooming, for gloomy or lowering, which is the original, and probably the true reading, in the following passage:

A gloowing peace this morning with it brings.
The sun for sorrow will not shew his head.

Romes and Fal., v. $2.

His glistering armor made
A little glooming light, much like a shade.

Spens. F. Q., I, i, 14.
What devill, woman, plucke up your hart, and leve of althis gloming.

Gammer Gurt., O. Pl., ii, 48.
Whereas before ye satte all heavie and glommyng.

Chaloner's Moria Enc., A 1.

GLORIOUS. Vain, boastful. Gloriosus, Latin. This primitive sense of the word has become obsolete: Dr. Johnson cites Lord Bacon for it.

Thou shalt have strokes, and strokes, thou glorious

Till thou breath'st thinner air than that thou talk'st.

B. & Fl. Honest Man's Fortune, act iv, p. 440.

B. F. T. MOREST MEN'S FOREME, ACT IV, p. 2000. Thy tears
Express'd in sorrow for the much I suffer,
A glorious insultation, and no sign
Of pity in thee.

Masning, Unnat. Comb., iv, 1.

GLOUCESTER'S LISTENING WALL.

A wall in the cathedral church at Gloucester, famous for the same property as the whispering gallery at St. Paul's, but probably eclipsed by the superior celebrity of the latter, since the existence of the new church. Camden thus speaks of it: "Beyond the quire, in an arch of the church, there is a wall, built with so great artifice in the form of a semicircle with corners, that if one whisper very low at one end, and another lav his ear to the other end, he may easily hear every syllable distinct." Vol. i, p. 275, ed. 1722.

That you may know each whisper from Prester John Against the wind, as fresh as 'twere deliver'd Through a trunk or Gloucester's list'ning wall. Albumacar, O. Pl., vii, 141.

In a modern description of the cathedral. I find this account:

The renowned whispering place is a long gallery, extending from one side of the choir to the other, built in the form of an octogon. If a person whisper at one side, every syllable may be heard distinctly on the other side, though the passage is open in the middle, and there are large openings in the wall for a door and window. In the middle of the whispering place are these verses

Doubt not but God who sits on high Thy secret prayers can hear; When a dead wall, thus cunningly, Conveys soft whispers to the ear.

Historical Descr., publ. 1810. A view of part of its exterior may be seen in Storer's History and Antiquities of Cathedral Churches, vol. ii, Gloucest., pl. 1.

GLOVE. While the spirit of chivalry lasted, the glove of a lady worn in the helmet, as a favour, was a very honorable token; and much of the wearer's success was supposed to be derived from the virtue of the lady: whence the following boast of Henry of Monmouth, which his father remarks is "as dissolute as desperate:"

His answer was, he would unto the stews, And from the commonest creature pluck a glore, And wear it as a favour; and with that He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Rich. II. v. 8. At the battle of Agincourt, according to Drayton, all the noble youth were distinguished by such tokens:

One wore his mistress' garter, one her glore, And he a lock of his dear lady's hair, And he her colours whom he most did love; and he her colours whom he most did nove;
There was not one but did some favour wear.
Vol. i, p. 16.

We have, indeed, the same account in sober history:

One part had their plumes at whyt, another hadde them at redde, and the thyrde had them of several colours. One ware on his headpiece his ladies sleve, and another bare on hys helme the glose of his dear-lynge.

Hall's Chron., Hen. IF.

In peaceful intercourse they were worn in the hat:

O Philip, wert thou alive to see this alteration, thy men turn'd to women, thy soldiers to lovers, gloses worm in veloci caps, instead of plumes in graven hel-mets, thou wouldst either die, &c. Alex. J. Campaspe, O. Pl., ii, 131.

Lyly, as was usual, here attributes the manners of his own times to others which had no notion of them. In the decline of this fashion, it fell into the hands of coxcombical and dissolute servants :

What hast thou been?—a serving man, proud in heart and mind; that curl'd my hair, wore gloses in my cap, &c.

Lear, iii, 4. my cap, &c. He who claimed a glove thus worn, must fight for it, which was equivalent to fighting for the lady: whence they were sometimes worn as a mere token of challenge:

Of Chailenge:

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet; then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel. W. Here's my glose, give me another of thine. K. Hen. There. W. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, this is my glose, I will take thee a box on the ear. K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it. W. Thou durst as well be hang'd.

Hen. V, iv, 1.

By the use the king afterwards makes of it, we see that a glove might also be a token of enmity to him from whom it was taken.

When Alencon and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alencon, and an enemy to our person. If thou encounter any such, apprehend him. Ibid., iv, 7.

Welford, in the Scornful Lady, refusing to wear Abigail's glove as a favour, tells us, incidentally, the common price of gloves at that time, which is higher than one might have supposed:

If it have none of these, and prove no more But a bare glore of half-a-crown a pair,
Twill be but half a courtesy, I wear two always.

Act in, sc 1. Gloves were often nicely perfumed.

Autolycus offers for sale.

Glores as sweet as damask roses. Wint. Tale, iv. 3. And Mopsa soon after claims such a pair, as a promise from her lover. The continuator of Stowe tell us that "The queene [Elizabeth] had a payre of perfumed gloves, trimmed onlie with foure tuftes or roses of culler'd silke. The queene took such pleasure in those gloves, that she was pictured with those gloves upon her hands." p. 868. When the queen went to Cambridge, in 1578, the vice-chancellor "presented a paire of gloves, perfumed, and garnished with embroiderie and goldsmithes wourke, price lxs."-" It fortuned that the paper in which the gloves were folded to open; and hir majestie, behoulding the beautie of the said gloves, as in great admiration, and in token of hir thankfull acceptation of the same. held up one of her hands, and then smelling unto them, putt them half waie upon hir hands." Nich. Progr. of Eliz., vol. ii, an. 1578. Gloves of proportionable value were presented to her principal courtiers. Mr. Warton adds, that, in the year 1631, a charge occurs in the bursar's book of Trin. Coll., Oxford, "pro fumiyandis chirothecis," for perfuming gloves. It appears from the same passage, that fine perfumes were then but newly made in England, and that the sort which perfumed the queen's gloves was long called the Erle of Oxford's perfume; because Edward Vere, earl of Oxford, had brought it, with other This was in refinements, from Italy. the 15th of Elizabeth.

One gives to me perfused gloves,
The best that he can buy me,
Live where I will I have the loves
Of all that do come nigh me.
A Payre Portion for a Payre Maide. Exans's
Ballads, edit. 1810, vol. i, p. 87.

The following lines on a perfumed glove, may be added to the notices of the practice:

Thou more than most sweet glove Unto my most sweet love, Suffer me to store with kisses This empty lodging, that now misses Whiter than the kid that bare thee. Thou art soft, but that was softer, Cupid's self hath kist it ofter Than ere he did his mother's doves. Than ere he did his mother a wine, Supposing her the queen of loves That was thy mistress, best of glores! Witts Interpr., p. 311.

+GLOVE. A bribe was sometimes so called, because it used to be offered in a glove. In the following lines a glove (if not a misprint for dove), is oddly spoken of as the symbol of gentleness.

Acti of no Line by Historia of School of Schoo

To GLOUT. To look pouting or sullen; said to be from gloa, to behold, Goth. It seems to have been used sometimes for gloat, which is of the same origin. Examples have been found of its use as late as Milton and Garth: vet it is a word scarcely known at present. See Todd in loc.

+GLOUT. A sullen look; a frown. First came the poets of each land, and tooke
Their place in order, learned Virgill struck
In for the first, Ben Johnson cast a glowt,
And swore a nighty oath hee'd pluck him out.

Copie of a Letter, Je., 4to, 1641.

To interpret, or put con-To GLOZE. struction upon anything; from glose, a comment, French. Dr. Johnson says that in this sense it should be written gloss; but he was mistaken. Chaucer uses to gloze, for to interpret, and both words are genuine; the one derived from the French glose, the other from the low Latin glossa.

No woman shall succeed in Salique land, Which Salique land the French unjustly glees To be the realm of France. Hes. 7, i. 2. To be the realm of France.

And on the cause and question now in hand,
Have glor'd but superficially. Tro. # Cr., ii, 2.

Here is a matter worthy glossynge,
Of Gammer Gurton's needle losinge.

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii, 23.

Also to flatter. It seems to me, that this sense may be deduced from the other. Comments are usually made in a flattering style, extolling the merits, and extenuating the faults of the author. Skinner, however, derives it from glesan, Saxon: and Lve from glæsen, Icelandic.

> Why thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloce with all. Til. Andr., is. 4.

He that no more must say, is listen'd more Than he whom youth and ease have taught to glose. Rick II, ii, 1.—419 b.

For well he could his glosing speaches frame
To such vain uses that him best became.

Spens. F. Q., III, viii, 14.

Whom glosing Juno, 'gainst her minde, with cost did entertaine. Warner's Alb. Engl., I, 5, p. 17.

This word was used by Milton, and even later.

†I glose not, lye not, thee when I appland: None more deserveth, less desireth laud.

Owen's Epigrams, 1677.
†Every smooth tale is not to be beleeved; and every glosing tongue is not to be trusted Smith's Sermons, 1609. GLOZE, s. An interpretation; properly gloss, from glossa.

Now to plain dealing, lay these glozes by.

Love's L. L., iv. S.

Now a vengeance of his new nose, For bringing in any suche unaccustom'd gloss.

New Customs, O. Pl., i, 258.

Also flattery, in this sense, from glesan, Saxon. Mr. Todd calls it one of our oldest words.

And in extolling their beauties, they give more credite to their own glasses than men's glass. Buph. & his Engl., p. 75.

+GLUM. Sullen.

And not Athens only, but so anstere and glam a generation as those of Sparta.

Rymer on Tragedies, 1678, p. 3. But or the course was set, tyme ware away space, And Boreas breth was blacke, and glummish chill: Which caused me to seeke a warmer place, Underneath a rocke, on the other side the hill.

Golden Mirrour, 1889.

Engloutir, To GLUT. To swallow. French.

Though ev'ry drop of water swear against it, And gape at wid'st to glut him. Temp., i, 1. Milton also has glutted, for swallowed. In modern usage. See Johnson. satiety is always implied in glutting.

To GNARL. To snarl; gnyrran, Saxon.

For granting sorrow hath less pow'r to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Rich. II, i, 3.
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.

2 Hen. FI, iii, 1.

GNARLED. Knotted. Chaucer uses guarre for a hard knot; applying it metaphorically in his description of the miller.

He was short shulder'd, brode, a thikke gnarre.

Prol. to C. T., 551.

Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous both Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle.

Meas. for Meas., ii, 2

A kindred word, gnarly, is cited from an old play, entitled Antonio's Revenge, printed in 1602:

'Till, by degrees, the tough and gnarly trunk Be riv'd in sunder.

To GNARRE. To snarl, or growl; of the same origin as gnarl.

At them he gan to reare his bristles strong.

And felly guarrs.

Spens. P. Q., I, v, 34.

Hot sparks and smells, that man and beast would choke,

The gnarring porter durst not whine for doubt.

Pairf. Tasso, ly, 8. Cerberus is the object of description in both these passages. tAnd such as those will in their kennels lye,

And gaser and snarle, and grumble secretly,
But with full mouth they dare not barke or bite.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GNAT, as a term of contempt, quasi wretch, or insect!

Wretch, Or Insect:

Like a gratefull guat, he will recommend your bounty to his succeeding post-boy. Clitus's Whime., p. 118.

Which visitation they (poore gnats) may properly tearme a plague.

Ibid., p. 124.

tGNAT-SNAP. A bird, called also the fig-pecker.

The little gnat.snap (worthy princes boords),
And the greene parrat, fainer of our words,
Wait on the pluenix, and admire her tunes, And gaze themselves in her blew-golden plumes.

Du Rastas A GNOFFE. A churl, or brutish person. Coles has "gnoff, inurbanus." See also Kersey's and Bailey's Dict. Chaucer uses it; and Mr. Tyrwhitt, in his Glossary, quotes Urry as explaining it, "an old cuff, a miser:" but adds, "I know not upon what authority." Skinner has it in his older Glossary, "Gnoff, exp. avarus. credo ab A. S. gnafan, rodere, qui sc. præ avaritia etiam ossa ipsa, instar canum, arrodit."

There on a blocke my head was stricken off,
As Baptist's head for Herod, bloody graffe.

Mirror for Mag., p. 428.

Two ancient examples are cited in a comment on the Miller's Tale of Chaucer, published in London. in 1665, 12mo, which Mr. Todd has inserted in his Illustrations of Chaucer. p. 260.

GOADE, or GOURDE. A name for a sort of false dice.

Faith, my lord, there are more, but I have learned but three sorts, the goade, the Fulham, and the stop-Mons. D'Olive, F 3. kater-tre. See GOURD.

†GOADS. Men who stood by horsedealers at fairs to run up the prices by fictitious biddings, &c. Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1620.

+GO-BY-GROUND. A diminutive per-

A channon of Toledo, who was a man of a very lowe and slender stature, scoffingly ask'd a poore frier that had but one eye, what he us'd to pray for at Gods hand, affirming that it were right necessarie he pray'd unto him for another eye. Indeede sir (answered the fryer) I had need have two eyes, to discerne so pettie a gos-by-ground as you.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614. GO BY, JERONIMO. An expression made almost proverbial, by the ridicule of contemporary writers. It was originally in Kyd's play called the Spanish Tragedy, which was a sequel to that called the First Part of Jeronimo: and was the common subject of ridicule to all the poets of the time. In the original these words are spoken by Hieronimo, or Jeronimo, to himself. Finding his application to the king improper at the moment, he Hieronimo, beware; go by, go by.

See O. Pl., iii, 190.

Shakespeare has ridiculed it in the induction to the Taming of the Shrew:

No, not a denier: Go by, Jeronimy. 1ud., sc. 1. Ben Jonson, in ridicule, calls the play itself by that name:

What new book have you there? what! Goe by, Hieronymo?—I, did you ever see it acted? is't not well pen'd?—Well pen'd? I would faine see all the poets of these times pen such another play as that was.

Brery Man in his H., i, 5.

Many other passages from the same play are there produced. In another drama also we find:

drama also we mild.

But if I were as you, I'de cry "Go by, Jeronimo. go by."

Shoemaker's Holiday, 1610, C b. To satisfy curiosity to the utmost, both parts are republished in the third volume of Dodsley's Old Plays. +GOD-A-MERCY.

Dick. Heyday! say'st thou me so Kate? God-a-mercy for that girl, by the mass, and that word shall cost me the best fairing in the pedler's pack.

Newest Academy of Compliments.
A taylor is a thief, a serjeant is worse,
Who here lies dead, god-a-massy horse.
With Recreations, 1654.

+GO-DOWN. A draught.

At three go-downs Dick doffs me off a pot, The English gutter's Latine for his throat. Witts Recreations, 1654.

We have frolick rounds, We have merry go-downs, Yet nothing is done at random. Ibid.

GOD ILD, or DILD YOU. Corrupt forms of speech, commonly used instead of "God yield, or give you, some advantage." See YIELD.

How do you, sir? you are very well met; God 'ild you for your last company; 1 am very glad to see you.

As you like it, iii, 3.

Also Ibid., v, 4.

In Hamlet it is printed God'ield you, in the modern editions; but the old quarto has good dild you. Haml., So in Sir John Oldcastle: "Marry God dild you, dainty my dear." ii, 2. Shakesp., Suppl., ii, And Gammer Gurton, God dylde you, master mine.

Sylvester has it, very remarkably:
Your painted cheekes and cies,
His cake is dough, God dild you, hee will none,
Hee leaves his sute, and thus hee saith anon Du Bart., B. iv, The Decay But the phrase is often rightly spelt also. In the following passage the modern editions give it at length; but the folios of 1623 and 1632 have God-eyld:

Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble,

Mact., i, 6. Dr. Johnson supposed eyld might be a corruption of shield; but erro-neously, as yield is often found at length. We have it here also:

And the gods yield you for it.

God yelde you, Esan, with all my stomat Ant. & Cl., iv. 1.

Syr, quoth Guy, God yeelds it you.
Of this great gift you give me now.
Sir Guy of Waree, bl.l. As l.
God yeeld you, air, said the deafe man, I will walte after the rest.
Summary on Du Bartas, sign. *3 b. Chaucer has it too, Sompnour's Tale, v. 7759.

GOD PAYS. A profane, though canting expression, much used at one time by disbanded soldiers and others, who thought they had a right to live upon the public charity. Ben Jonson's 12th Epigram gives a full detail of the practice, as employed by one whom he calls lieutenant Shift, who, on every occasion, puts off his creditors with this phrase:

To every cause he meets, this voice he brays, His only answer is to all, God pays. So also in his Masque of Owls:

Whom since they have stript away,
And left him God to pay.

It occurs also, as Mr. Gifford has shown, in another old play: But there be some that bear a soldier's form,
That swear by him they never think upon;
Go swaggering up and down, from house to house,
Crying, God pays.

Lond. Prodigal, ii, S. For this play, of which Mr. Malone justly says, that one knows not which most to admire, the impudence of the printer in affixing Shakespeare's name to it, or the poet's negligence, in suffering such a piece to be imputed to him, see Suppl. to Sh., vol. ii, p. 449, &c.

P. 443, w.c., 'These feather'd fidlers sing, and lespe, and play, The begger takes delight, and God doth pay. Taylor's Works, 16⁵⁰.

+GOD-SPEED.

Ille slit her nose by this light, and she were ten ladies; twas not for nothing my husband said hee should meete her this evening at Adonis chappell; but and I come to the God-speed on't, lie tell em on't soundly.

Ile of Gulls, 1633.

+GOD-THANK YOU.

But we had spun out our longest period of time, and so with many many God thanke hers, we bad our good cheap hostesse adiew.

MS. Lansd., 213.

GOD TOFORE, or GOD BEFORE; that is, God going before, assisting, guiding, or favouring. See TOPORE. In Chaucer it is in the older form, God toforne. Rom. of the Rose, 7294. Tr. & Cress., i, 1060.

Else, God tofore, myself may live to see His tired corse lie toiling in his blood. Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 268.

God before is twice in Shakespeare's Hen. V:

For, God before,
We'll chide this dauphin at his father's door. i. 2. My army but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before, tell him we will come on.

So here, in a still fuller form:

Por in my skill his sound recoverie lies,
Doubt not thereof, if setting God before.

Mirr. for Magist., p. 543.

GOD YOU GOOD MORROW, for God give you a good morrow. An elliptical

By your leave, gentlemen, with all my heart to you, and God you good morrow. B. Jone. Bart. Fair, i. 4. So it is in the folio of 1640. Whalley's edition has merely "give you good GODDARD. A kind of cup, or goblet, made with a cover or otherwise. In the Introductio in Actum secundum, subjoined to Tancred and Gismunda, which is, in fact, an account of the dumb show preceding each act, we find this description:

Lucrece entered, attended by a maiden of honour with a covered goddard of gold, and, drawing the curtains, she offereth unto Gismunda to taste thereof. ereor. O. Pl., ii, 230.

So also:

A goddard, or an anniversary spice-bowl, Drank off by th' gossips. Gayton's Festiv. Notes, iv, 5, p. 195.

I find no certain account of the origin of the name. Godard, according to Camden, means godly the cup; and appears to have been achristening cup. The goddard was a small earthenware cup or tankard, in earlier times called a godet. Among the stores for the king's ship, The George, in 1345, is an entry for nine godettes, called "flegghes," vs. iijd.; and a large godett for the king, xijd. Stowe. speaking of "Mount Goddard-street, in Ivie-lane," says, "it was so called of the tippling there; and the goddards mounting from the tappe to the table, from the table to the mouth. and sometimes over the head."]

GOD-FATHER. The twelve men on a jury appear to have been, jocularly and commonly, called the godfathers of the prisoner.

Not I.

If you be such a one, sir, I will leave you

To your god-fathers in law. Let twelve men work.

B. Jons. Devil's an Ats. v, 5.

I had rather see him remitted to the jail, and have his twelve godrathers, good men and true, condemn him to the gallows. Muses' Looking-glass, O. Pl., ix, 251.

This phrase being already current. makes the well-known sarcasm of Gratiano more natural and easy:

In christ'ning thou shalt have two godfathers,
Had I been judge, thou should'st have had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallows, not the font.

Merch. Ven., iv, 1.

The impropriety of putting it into the mouth of a Venetian, who knew nothing of juries, was not then regarded.

tgodge. Apparently a contraction for, or corruption of, God give.

Godge you god morrow, sir. Chapman's May Day. †GODHOOD. For godhead.

Psp. Woodst thou have godhood?

I will translate this beauty to the spheres,
Where thou shalt shine the brightest star in heaven.

Heyecoed's Silver Ags, 1613.

GOD-PHERE. A godfather; literally a godly companion, from God and fere.

My god-phere was a Rabian or a Jew.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 1.

I do not recollect another example. GOD'S BLESSING. "To go out of God's blessing into the warm sun," was a proverbial phrase for quitting a better for a worse situation. Ray has it, among proverbial phrases, "Out of God's blessing into the warm sun," to which he gives as equivalent, "Ab equis ad asinos," p. 192. Howell also has it, Engl. Proverbs, p. 5, col. a, and explains it, "from good to worse."

Pray God they bring us not, when all is done, Out of God's blessing into this warm sun. Harringt. Epig., ii, 56.

The proverb is reversed here: Therefore if thou wilt follow my advice, and prosecute thine owne determination, then shalt come out of a warme sunne into God's blessing.

Euphnes, Z 3, b, letter last.

I believe Dr. Johnson was right in supposing that an allusion to this saving was meant in Hamlet, when the King says to him.

How is it that the clouds still hang on you? To which he answers,

No, my lord, I am too much i' the sun.

Haml., i. 2.

Meaning, I am unfortunate, unblessed, out of God's blessing.

GOD'S DYNES. A corrupt oath, the origin of which is obscure, and not worth inquiring.

God's dynes, I am an onion if I had not rather, &c.

Trial of Chivalry, Drama, 1605, C I.

†GOD'S GOOD. A blessing on a meal?

Let the cooke bee thy physition, and the shambles thy apothecaries shop: hee that for every qualme will take a receipt, and cannot make two meales, unlesses Galen bee his Gods good, shall bee sure to make the physition rich and himselfe a begger: his bodie will never bee without diseases, and his purse ever without money.

Lylie's Euphues and his England.

†GOD'S KICHEL, i. e., God's cake. Gads kichel, a cake given to god-children at their asking blessing. Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694.

+GOD'S MARK. A mark placed on houses as a sign of the presence of the plague.

With Lord have mercie upon us, on the dore, Which (though the words be good) doth grieve men

And o're the doore-posts fix'd a crosse of red Betokening that there death some blood hath shed.

Some with gods markes or tokens doe espie,

Those marks or tokens, shew them they must die.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+GOD'S SUNDAY. Easter Sunday.

This day is called, in many places, Goddes Sondaye: ye knowe well that it is the maner at this daye to do the fyre out of the hall, and the blacke wynter brondes, and all thynges that is foule with fume and smoke shall be done awaye, and there the fyre was shall be gayly arayed with fayre floures, and strewed with grene rysshes all aboute.

The Festival, 1511, f. 36.

GOD'S SONTIES, or SANTY. rently meant as an oath, by the health of God, "santé," but corrupted. Mr. Steevens has an excellent remark on the cause of such corruptions. which I shall not scruple to transcribe. "Perhaps it was once customary to swear by the santé; i. e., health of the Supreme Being. Oaths of such a turn are not unfrequent among our ancient writers. All, however, seem to have been so thoroughly convinced of the crime of profane swearing, that they were content to disguise their meaning by abbreviations, which were permitted silently to terminate in irremediable corruptions."

By God's sonties, 'twill be a hard way to hit.

Mer. Fen., ii, 2.

God's santie, this is a goodly book indeed; And.

Godes santy, pastyme, my playfellow; Are cited by Mr. Steevens from an old comedy, entitled. The longer thou livest the more Fool thou art, bl. lett., no date.

Gods santy, youder come friers! I know them too.

Honest Wh., O. Ph., iii. 361. It is there conjectured by Mr. Steevens, that the original form before corruption was God's sanctity, or God's saints: either of which is sufficiently probable.

+GODSWORBET

When Gillian and her gossips all are met,
And in the match of gossiping down set,
And plain mass-parson cutting bread for th' table,
To tell how fast they talk, my tongue's not able;
One tels strange news, th' other godsroorie cries,
The third shaking her head, alack replies,
She on her hens, this on her ducks do talk,
Ou thousand things at once their tongues do walk.

Witts Recreations, 1684.

GOD-WIT. This bird, which is a species of snipe (scolopax segocephala), was considered as an article of luxury in Ben Jonson's time.

Pheasant and god-wit here in London, haunting
The Globes and Mermaids! wedging in with lords
Still at the table.

B. Jons. Dev. on Ass., in S. That. "ever famous doctor in physick," as he is called in his title-page, Thomas Muffett, thus characterises this bird:

Codecits are known to be a fenny fowl, living with worms about rivers banks, and nothing sweet a wholsom, till they have been fatted at home with pure corn [which they would not eat!]; but a fat point is so fine and light meat, that noblemen (yea, and merchants too, by your leave) stick not to buy them at four nobles a dozen. Health's Improvement, p. 99. A better naturalist tells us, that this species of snipe is subject to considerable variety, both in size and plumage; but that its weight is ordinarily from seven to twelve ounces, its length fifteen or sixteen inches. Montagu's Ornithology. According to Bewick, the godwit is still "much esteemed by epicures, as a great delicacy, and selis very high." Brit. Birda, ii, 79.

+GOGMAGOGICAL. Large; monstrous. A burlesque word used by Taylor the water-poet.

RYIOT the water-poet.

Be it to all men by these presents knowne,
That lately to the world was plainely showne,
In a huge volume gogmagoticall.

Taylor's Workes, 1630

GOK'T. Stupified. Of the same origin as goky, which Skinner has, and derives from gauch, Teut., stultus, among other conjectures. It is the same as aawk: whence aawku.

Nav. look how the man stands as he were gokt! Nay, look how the man stands as no not yell. She's lost if you not haste away the party.

B. Jons. Magn. Lady, iii, 6.

These words are still current in provincial use. See Grose.

GULD, or GOLD-FLOWER. Cudweed. The anaphalium Germanicum or Gallicum of Linnæus; in English also called mothwort. See Dodoens, ch. Gerard says, "Golden mothwort lvi is called of Dioscorides Elichrusen. &c.; in English gold-floure, golden mothwort." Drayton calls it gold only:

The crimson darnel flower, the bluebottle, and gold, Which though esteem'd but weeds, yet for their dainty

And for their scent not ill, they for this purpose chuse.

Polyolb., xv, p. 946.

+GOLDEN. An adjective often used to express great value, and applied especially to medicines, as golden cordials, golden plaisters, &c.

Cordials, golden plaisters, &c.

Doctor Stevens's water, now call'd the golden cordial.
—Take a gallon of a moderate, clean, and neat spirit, and put to it a quart of canary, then bruise ginger, grains of paradice, nutmegs, cinnamon, galingal, coriander, and fennel seeds, of each three drams; rosemary, mint, pelitory, sage, marjoram, thime, chammonile, and lavender, of each a little handful; bruise the spices and herbs separate, put them into the liquor to infuse a day and a night, and distill them in an alembick. This is excellent in all pestilential diseases, helps digestion, and continues a healthful constitution of body.

The Gloset of Rarities, 1706.

The golden-plaister that healeth all bruses of vaines or sinewes, proved.—Take colosonly, pitch, rozen, and or sinewes, proved.—Take colosony, pitch, rozen, and oyle, three unces, of liquid pitch an unce, of olibanum an unce, of auri unguenti a like of each, of wine as nuch as sufficeth, and make thereof a plaister, and lay it to, and keepe it to your use.

Pathway to Health, bl. l.

GOLLS. Hands, paws; a contemptuous expression. Skinner derives it very awkwardly from wealdan, to wield, Saxon; reminding us of the common permutation of g and w. Mr. Todd proposes yuakor; but we may venture to say that the etymology is as yet unknown. As a familiar, and rather low word, it is not likely to have had a learned origin.

Fy, Mr. Constable, what golls you have! Is justice

Is justice 80 blind you cannot see to wash your hands?

B. F. Coxcomb, act i, p. 173.

Alas, how cold they are! poor golls, why dost not get thee a mufi?

18 justice 18 justice 19 justice Well said, my divine deft Horace, bring the whorson detracting slaves to the bar, make them hold up their detracting sinves to the par, make them note up than a spread golds.

B. Jons. Poetaster, v, 3.

Done; 'tis a lay; join golds ont. Witness, signor Fluello.

Hom. Wh., O. Pl., iii, 268.

Fluello.

Let me play the shepherd,

To save their throats from bleeding, and cut hers. Trap. This is the goll shall do it.

Trap. This is the goll shall do it.

Rearing Girl, O. Pl., vi, 25.

See also O. Pl., xi, 163.

I am no sooner eased of him, but Gregory Gandergoose, an alderman of Gotham, catches me by the goll, demanding if Bohemia be a great towne, and whether there bee any meate in it, and whether the last fleet of ships be arrived there.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GOM. A man, a fellow: from goma, or yuma, a man, Anglo-Saxon. Junius, in Gomman.

A scornful gom! and at the first dash too! Widow, O. Pl., xii, 245.

It has been found in Pierce Ploughman, though not in Chaucer. See Todd, whose quotations prove that modern etymologists can write as idly as any of their predecessors.

GONE. A term in archery, when the arrow was shot beyond the mark.

Eschewing short, or gone, or eyther syde wyde.

Asch. Toxoph., p. 18, repr. ed. The same term is still used in the game of bowls, when the bowl runs beyond the jack. Gone was also the old form of go:

Do thou permit the chosen ten to gone
And aid the damsel. Fairf. Tasso. v. 7.

In Chaucer it is very common.

[And the plural of the present tense.] †But if thou fayle then all things gone to wrack.

GONGARIAN. Supposed to be a corruption of Hungarian, perhaps to make a more tremendous sound

O base Gongarian wight, wilt thou the spigot wield?

Merr. W. W., i, 3. The above is said to be a parody of a bombast line in some old play. Gongarian is the reading of the oldest quarto of Shakespeare, for which the subsequent editions read Hungarian: but if it was Gongarian in the old play, that ought certainly to be preferred, for the allusion's sake. See HUNGARIAN.

GOOD. For any good, was a phrase equivalent with, on any account.

Sir Thomas Moore hearing one tell a monstrous lie, said, I would not for any good heare him say his creed, least it should seeme a lie. Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1614.

For good and all, entirely.

No, uo, no, no, no kissing at all; I'll not kiss, till I kiss you for good and all. Newest Acad. of Complements. Now though this was exceeding kind in her, yet as my good woman said to her, unless she resolved to keep me for good and all, she would do the little gentlewoman more harm than good. Fortunes of Moll Planders, 1722.

To make good upon, to retaliate or revenge.

Nny, looke not so, Cratynus, for tis I

Will make it good uppon thee by and by.

The Newe Metamorphosis, 1600, MS.

Good days, one's life.

Occidi, I am undone: my joy is past to this world: my good daies are spent: I am at deaths dore.

Terence in English, 1614.

GOOD DEED. A species of asseveration, as "in very deed," &c.; variations of the common form in deed.

Yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord. Wint. Tale, i, 2.
The second folio reads good heed, which is surely wrong, though approved by Mr. Tyrwhitt. Warburton evidently was ignorant of the old reading. Mr. Steevens says that this expression is used by Lord Surrey,
Sir John Hayward, and G. Gascoigne; but he gives no passage from any of them, and I have not found one.

GOOD DEN. Form of salutation, meaning "good even." See DEN.

†GOODING. In Mock Songs, 1675, p. 34, is an account of a feast called a gooding given on December 13th.

†GOODLICH. Conveniently, or, literally, well. Thomas earl of Kent, 1397, willed his "body to be buried as soon as it goodlich may in the abbey of Brune." See Test. Vetust., p. 139.

GOODLYHED. Beauty, goodliness; hed being the old termination equivalent to ness.

And pleased with that seeming goodlyked, Unwares the hidden hook with baite I swallowed. Spens. F. Q., III, ii, 38.

+GOOD-MORROW. Fumos vendere: to brag of many good-morrows. Withals Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 557. GOOD-NIGHTS. A species of minor poem of the ballad kind; some were also called fancies.

And sung those tunes to the over scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies, or his goodnights. 2 Hen. IV, iii, 2. It is very true, as Mr. Steevens says, that one of Gascoigne's poems, among his Flowers, is called his good-night; but that is nothing to his purpose, as it is not a ballad, but a very serious poem, in Alexandrines, directing pious meditations and prayers before going to rest. The preceding poem is his good-morrow, which is also devotional; so that this is no illustration of Falstaff's "fancies and good-nights." But Fancies we have. See that word.

GOOD YEAR. Exclamation. See GOUJERE. But good yeare is sometimes written when goujere is plainly meant. Thus:

Knavery? No, as God judge me, my lord, not guilte; The good years of all the knaverise and knaves to [too] for me. Harringt. Apol. for Aj., M 6. GOODY. A corruption of good-wife.

†GOODY. A corruption of good-wife, a popular term for matrons in the lower classes.

Paid goody Crabbin for washing the surplis and church powrch, 1s. 3d.

Accounts of the Churchwardens of Sprowston, 1689.

†GOOSE. This bird was the subject of many quaint proverbial phrases often used in the old popular writers. The goose will drink as deep as the gander, Howell, 1659, i. e. every one will consume the substance without restriction.

without restriction.

Gentlewoman, either you thought my wits very short, that a sip of wine could alter me, or else yours very sharp, to cut me off so roundly, when as I (without offence be it spoken) have heard, that as dependent the goose as the gender.

Lylic's Euphnes and his England.

It is as much pittie to see a woman weepe, as it is to see a goose goe bare-footed.

Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 579.

To stoal a goose, and give the giblets in almes.

Howell, 1659.

Well plaid for; he hath the goose by the neck, and fetch him over daintyly.

The Wisard, a Play, 1640, MS.

GOOSE. A cant term for a particular symptom in the lues venerea.

He had belike some private dealings with her, and there got a goose. Comp. I would he had got two. Webster's Cure for a Cuckold, 1661, F.

See WINCHESTER GOOSE.

A tailor's goose was, and I believe still is, a jocular name for his smoothing or pressing iron; probably from its being often roasting before the fire. Come in, taylor; here you may roast your goose.

Here is a taylour, but to tell would tyre one,
Which is most goose, hee, or his pressing iron.

Misc. Ant. Angl. in Xs. Prince, p. 50.

+GOOSEBERRY-CREAM.

To make Gooseberry-Cream.—Let your goosberries be boiled; or for want of green ones, your preserved ones will do; and when your cream is boiled up, put them in, adding small cinnamon, mace, and nutmeg; the boil them in the cream, and strain all through a cloth, and serve it up with sugar and rose-water.

Closet of Rarities, 1708.

GORBELLY, or GORBELLIED. A person having a large paunch. The conjectures on its derivation are various; gor is by Skinner supposed to be made from the Saxon gore, corruption; or gor, dung. Junius mentions that gor is an intensive particle in Welch, implying excess or magnitude; and his editor, Lye, that gior, in Icelandic, means voracious, Dr. Johnson inclines to think it a contraction of gorman, or gormand. Most of these conjectures may be traced to Menage on gourmand. To these we may add, that in the old romance language gorre meant a sow, See Roquefort.

Hang ye gorbellied knaves, are ye undone?

1 Hen. IV. ii. 2. The belching gorbelly hath well nigh killed me; I am shut out of doors finely.

O'tis an unconsciouable gorbellied volume, bigger bulked than a Dutch hoy.

Nash's Hase w. you to Soffron Walden, cit. St.

Some of your gorbellied country chuffes have cast themselves into their frieze jerkins, with great tin buttons silver'd o'r. Holiday's Technogamia, C. GORGE. To bear full gorge. This was said of a hawk when she was fullfed, and refused the lure.

No goake prevailes, shee will not yeeld to might,
No lure will cause her stoope, she beares full gorge.
T. Watson, Sonnet 47.

+GORRIL. Apparently a cant or vulgar term, the exact meaning of which is not clear.

For why, their coyn will buy the wine, And cause a running barrel;

But if you're drunk, your wits are sunk,
And gorrill'd guts will quarrel.
Sack for my Money, an old ballad.
GORSE, or GOSS. Furze; a Saxon word. It cannot properly be called obsolete, being fully retained in provincial use. Shakespeare has distinguished furze and gorse. Tollet says the latter is the same properly as whins, a lower species, growing only on wet grounds; and Minshew, in his Dictionary, at the word gorse refers the reader to whinns.

Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns. Tempest, iv, 1. With worthless gorse that yearly fruitless dies.

Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 245. Mr. Crabb has given new life to the word, by using it in one of his poems, where it will not be forgotten. See Todd.

GOSSAMER, or GOSSAMOUR; from the French gossampine, the cotton tree, which is from gossipium; proany light downy matter, such as the flying seeds of thistles and other plants. Now used not unfrequently in poetry to signify the long floating cobwebs seen in fine weather in the air. In the following passage it seems to have the original sense:

And my baths like pits

To fall into: from whence we will come forth. And roll us dry in gossamour and roses.

R. Jone Alck. ii 9.

Quilts fill'd high With gossamore and roses, cannot yield The body soft repose, the mind kept waking With anguish and affliction.

Massing. Maid of Honour, iii, 1.
Hadst thon been ought but gossomer, feathers, air, So many fathom down precipitating Thou dat shiver'd like an egg.

Lear, iv, 5. In the following lines it is certainly used either in the second or third sense; most probably the latter:

A lover may bestride the gossamour
That idles in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall.

Rom. & Jul., ii, 6. Hereit is indubitably in the third sense: By the bright tresses of my mistresse haire, Fine as Arachne's web, or gosskemere; Whose curls, when garnisht with their dressing, shew Like that thinns rapour when 'tis pearl'd with dew.

Nabbes's Hannibal & Scipio, B 2.

In one place I find it corrupted to gothsemay, but still used in the last sense: I shall unravel

The clew of my misfortunes in small threeds
Thin spun, as is the subtil gothermay.

Lady Alimony, D 2, 1659.

GOSSIB, now corrupted to gossip, properly signified a relation, or sponsor in baptism; all of whom were to each other, and to the parents, God sibs; that is, sib, or related, by means of religion. Godsibbe, Saxon. Todd has found it also in the intermediate state of Godsip. From the intimacy often subsisting between such persons, it came also to mean a familiar acquaintance.

our Christian ancestors understanding a spiritual affinity to grow between the parents, and such as undertooke for the child at baptisme, called each other by the name of Godsib, that is, of kin together through God: and the child in like manner called such his godfathers and godmothers.

One mother, when as her foolehardy child Did come too neare, and with his talants play, Half dead through feare her little babe revyl'd,

And to her goesies gan in counsell say.

Spens. F. Q., I, xii, 11.

Neighbour ape, and my gossip eke benide,
Both two sure bands in friendship to be ty'd.

Moth. Hubberd's Tale, v, 53.

As the word, in its usual form, is by no means obsolete, for other senses and examples, see Todd.

perly, therefore, cotton wool. Also GOSSIP, v. n. To act as a gossip, to stand sponsor to any one in giving a name.

With a world
Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
That blinking Cupid gossips. All's W., i, 1. See in CHRISTENDOM.

GOUJERE. The French disease; from gouge. French, a soldier's trull. Often used in exclamations, instead of the coarser word.

We must give folks leave to prate: what the goujere!

Mer. W. W., i. 4.

The quarto has good-ier.

The gosjeres shall devour mem tiesh and fell, Ere they shall make us weep. Leer, v, 3. This expression, however, soon became obscure, its origin not being generally known; and was corrupted to the good year, a very opposite form of exclamation. Even in the passage last cited, where its sense is well confirmed by the context, the folios have "the good yeeres shall devoure;" and the old quarto, "the good shall devoure;" where yeeres seem to have been dropped at the press. In Much Ado about Nothing, i, 3, the quarto reads, "what the good yere, my lord." In 2 Hen. IV, ii, 4, the quarto has, "what the good yere;" and the folio agrees in both places. So here.

And sith it never had done so before,
He marvels what the good yeare now should aile him.
Harringt. Ariost., xlii, 46.
Let her, a good yeare, weep, and sigh, and rayl.

Aminta, by Matthewes, D 4, b.

So completely was it misunderstood, that it was translated accordingly: O sir, you are as welcome as the good yeers [los buenos anos.]

Minsk. Span. Dialog. Sd., p. 18. See GOOD YEAR.

GOUNG. An old word for dung. No man shall bury any dung, or goung, within the liberties of this city, under paine of forty shilling.

Stowe's London, ed. 1633, p. 666.

GOUNG-FARMER, from the above; the same as jakes-farmer.

113. No man bury any dung, or goung, within the liberties of this city, under pain of forty shillings.

14. No goung-fermour shall carry any ordure till after nine of the clock in the night, under pain of thirteen shillings four pence.

15. No goung-fermour shall spill any ordure in the street, under pain of thirteen shillings four pence.

Calthrop's Reports, 1670.

GOURD A species of false dice.

A GOURD. A species of false dice; probably bored internally, with a cavity left, which in the fullams was filled with lead, or some heavy matter, to give a bias; and these were named in allusion to a gourd, which is scooped out. This is Capell's conjecture, and is not improbable. Other false dice were called HIGH MEN and

Low MEN. They are all alluded to in the following rant of Pistol:

Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd and fullen And high and low beguiles the rich and poor.

Mer. W. W. i. 3.

Mer. W. W., i. 3.

What false dyse use they? as dyse stopped with quicksilver and heares dyse of vauntage, fatter, gourds, to chop and change when they liste.

Asch. Taxoph., p. 50, new ed.

Nay, looke you heare, heare's one that for his bones is pretily stuft. Heres fulloms and gourds; heares tall men and low men. Nobody f. Somebody, sign. 12. And thy dry bones can reach at nothing now But gords or nine-pins; pray go fetch a trencher, go.

B. and Pl. Scornful Lady, iv, p. 341.

Mr. Sympson says, "There is no such word, that I know, as gords. Our poets must certainly have wrote coggs; i. e. hard, dry, tough pieces of wood, which are called the teeth of a mill-wheel." The absurdity of the reason given, why dry pieces of wood should be called coggs, is curious; and the whole shows how rash conjectural criticism is, when the language of the author criticised is very imperfectly understood.

GOURMANDIZE. Gluttony, greediness. Gourmandise, French.

That with fell clawes full of fierce gourmandize.

Spens. F. Q., VI, r. 34.

They make of Lacedemon (whence gourmandize, drunkennesse, luxury, dissolution, avarice, eny, and ambition were banished, as Plutarch shewth in the life of Licurgus) a disorder'd city.

Summary of Du Bartas, ii, 54.

the is the Apocripha and Apocripho of gurmandize, the keeper of lust, and the arch-type of hypocrisis.

The Passenger of Bensenuto, 1613.

Goutte, French. A drop. The English word, in this sense, must, I conceive, be pronounced like the French.

I see three sun,
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
Mach., ii, l.

Dr. Farmer, in a note on this passage, says that gouts, for drops, is frequent in old English. It is a pity that he did not give an example or two, as no one has yet been found. It is certain that, corrupted to guttes, it was very common in heraldry, as may be seen abundantly in Holme's Acad. of Arm., B. i, ch. 6. Mr. Steevens says it was used in falconry also, for the spots on a hawk.

†GOWKED. Turned gawky, or stupid. Keep. Nay, look how the man stands as he were gowk'd. The Magnetic Lady, iii, 4.

†GOWNED. Dressed in the toga. We will agains to Rome, and with the terrour

Of our approach make earthquakes in the hearts

Of her gown'd senators.

Nabbes' Hannibal and Scipio, 1687. +GOWTY. Having a swelling.

Don John de Figueros used to say: That he that evermore alleadgeth in his conversation other mens sayings, is like a govely naile, that cannot enter the wood, except an awgar make the way before.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Faucies, 1614.

GRAAL, or GRAYLE. A broad open dish, something like a terrine (or tureen, as it is commonly written). A word adopted from the old French romance language. See Roquefort. The saintgraal, or holy vessel of this kind, was supposed to have been the vessel in which the paschal lamb was placed, at our Saviour's last supper before his passion; and to have been brought to England by Joseph of Arimathea, who had sanctified it further, by receiving in it some of the sacred blood, when he prepared the body for interment.

for interment.

Hither came Joseph of Arimathy,
Who brought with him the holy grayle they any,
And preach'd the truth, but since it greatly did decay.

Spens. F. Q., 11, x, 53.

This sacred relic remained in England for one or two generations, and then, I know not how, was missing, and became the great object of research to knights-errant of all nations. In the Historie of Prince Arthur, we find sir Galahad destined to achieve that great adventure, to whom, says the legend, it was described miraculously by the Saviour himself: "This is, said hee, the holy dish wherein I eate the lambe, on Sher-Thursday-therefore thou must goe hence, and beare with thee this holy vessell." Part iii, ch. 101.

When Merlin, the magician, prepared the round table at Carduel, he left a vacant place for the Saint Graal. This is related in the old romance of Merlin. A further account of the adventures to which it gave occasion, is contained in the old French or Latin romauce. the full title of which is, "L'Histoire ou le Roman du Saint Gréal, qui est le fondement et le premier de la Table Ronde; lequel traite de plusieurs matiers recréatives, ensemble la queste du dict Saint Gréal, faite par Lancelot, Galaad, Boort, et Perceval, qui est le dernier livre de la Table Ronde; translaté du Latin en rime Françoise, et de rime en prose." It appears that this romance was first written in Latin verse, towards the end of the twelfth century; was translated into Latin prose in the thirteenth, and finally into French prose by Gualtier Map, or Mapes. It was first printed in French prose in 1516, in two volumes folio, and afterwards in 1523: but both editions are so rare, that this is accounted the scarcest of all the romances of the Round Table. In Dunlop's valuable History of Fiction, vol. i, p. 221, is given an abstract of this curious romance of superstition, which is followed by those others which pursued the subject of the quest of the Saint Graal; namely, Perceval, Lancelot du Lac, Meliadus, Tristan, Ysaie le Triste, Arthur, and some others. Barbazan has given an extract from the Sangreal in French verse: and T. Warton found a fragment of a metrical English version of 40,000 lines in English, by Thomas Lonelich : so, at least, he is quoted by Mr. Dunlop, but I have not been able to find the passage.

From the similarity of the words Saint Gréal and sang réel, much confusion has been made by authors; as if the real blood of Christ was the object of the quest, not the vessel which had contained it. T. Warton himself was under this mistake, when he wrote the first volume of his Observations on Spenser, p. 49: but corrected it afterwards, vol. ii, p. 287. Even Rabelais appears to have confounded these matters, where he says, "Là aussi nous dist estre ung flasque de sang gréal, chose divine, et à peu de gents congnue." L. v. ch. 10. Where also his annotator falls into the same error; though he adds, "Saint graal, autre relique, est un plat precieux." But we have not yet done with this marvellous relic. It appeared at Genoa. in 1101, as a present from Baldwin, king of Jerusalem, having been found at the capture of Cæsarea. At Genoa it was kept, in spite of our claims through Joseph of Arimathea, and there venerated and shown, as a most sacred relic, by the name of sacro catino; till the self-appointed king of Italy, Buonaparte, transported it to the Imperial Library at Paris. It is of a singular shape, hexagonal, three French inches in height, and twelve in diameter. It was long supposed to be formed of a single emerald, by miracle also; but is now ascertained to be of a greenish glass, but probably antique. See an account of it, by M. Millin, the antiquary, in the Esprit des Journaux, Avril, 1807, pp. 139-Whether it is now restored to Genoa, or remains at Paris, I have not been able to ascertain. There is an account of it, with a figure, in some descriptions of Genoa, and particularly in one which I have, entitled, "Description des Beautés de Gènes, et de ses Environs." Genoa, 1781. M. Millin quotes a Genoese work, which gives a pretended history of it, from the very time of our Lord's last passover; and he refers to a figure of it, published in the Magazin Encyclopédique, probably of the same year, 1807. It was deposited in the Cabinet of Antiques, in the Imperial Library, Nov. 20, 1806, by order of the then emperor.

+GRACE. Past grace, i. e., devoid of Nikil pudet. He shames not. He is past grace. He blusheth not. He is nothing ashamed, or thers no shame in him.

Terence in English, 1614. GRACE AT MEAT was often said in metre, in the time of Shakespeare, &c. I think thou never wast where grace was said. No? a dozen times at least. What, in metre?

Meas. for Meas., i, 2.

In the play of Timon, there is an instance of a metrical grace said by Apemantus. Act i, sc. 2.

Dr. Johnson says that metrical graces are to be found in the Primers; but I have not met any that contained them.

GRACE, TO TAKE HEART GRACE. To take courage from in-Azalgence. So, at least, I conceive the phrase should be written and interpreted, though it is disfigured in the following passage:

And with that she drinking delivered me the glasse, I now taking heart at grasse to see her so gamesome, as merilie as I could, pledged her in this manner.

Euph. and his Engl., H, 2 b. Those who use it so, seem to have derived it from a borse, or some other animal, thriving and growing strong at grass.

I find it in this form elsewhere:

But being strong, and also stoutly man'd,
Ev'n by our losses they oate keart of grasse,
And we declining saw what fortune was.

*Higins in Mirr. Mag., p. 480.

†Then spake Achilles swift of pace,
Fear not (quoth he), take keart of grace,
What e're thou hast to say, be't best or Worst, speake it out, thou son of Thestor.

*Homer a la Mode, 1665.

*Slic. These feelish puling sighs.

†Slic. These foolish puling sighs Are good for nothing, but to endanger buttons. Take heart of grace, man.

Continuity of the property o

See HEART OF GRACE.

GRACIOUS. Graceful, or beautiful.

There was not such a gracious creature born.

K. John, iii, 4 From the sequel of the speech, it appears that, having only seen him so gracious, Constance expected not to recognise her son again, when disfigured by grief. In her next speech she says,

She Says,
Grief—remembers me of all his gracious parts. Ibid.
And more wealth than faults.—Why that word makes the faults gracious.
Two Grat. For., iii. l.
Do you know Dr. Plaisterface? By this curd, be' the most exquisite in forging of veins, sprightening of eyes, &c., that ever made an old lady gracious by torch-light.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 46. See also O. Pl., v, 126.

Mr. Todd cites bishop Hurd for it; but that passage relates not to external beauty, but elegance of language. Mr. Malone's explanation of "my gracious silence," in Coriolanus, ii, 1, is certainly right; it means, "my beautiful silence," or "my silent beauty."

+GRACIOUS STREET. The old name for Gracechurch-street, before the Fire of London.

1650-1. 18 Februar.
Laid out at the 3 Tunns in Gratious street with the master & wardens of the Bricklayers Company, about the takinge of one & another's work by the great, ijs. ixd. Books of the Carpenters' Company, London.

+GRAFFE. To graft, used also as a noun, a graft.

And graffes of such a stocke are very geason in these days.

Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

Thou every where doest graffe such golden peace.

And yet in warres such graffes of grudge do gro. Ibid. GRAILE. Gravel, small pebbles. Dr. Johnson derives it from gréle, hail, French.

French.
And lying down upon the sandy graile,
Dronk of the streame as cleure as christall glas.

Spens. F. Q. I, vii, 6. Its meaning is not so clear in the following lines:

Nor yet the delight, that comes to the sight, To see how it [the alc] flowers and mantles in grails. Ritson's Songs, ii, p. 64, ed. Park. Mr. Park conjectures that it means. "in small particles;" but this is not quite satisfactory.

GRAILE, or GRAYLE. Corrupted from gradual. Gradualis. Latin. An ecclesiastical book, used in the Romish church, containing certain parts of the service of the mass, the hymns called gradules, or graduals, &c. Every parish church was to have "a legend, an antiphouarve, a grayle, and a psalter." Const. Eccles. It ought to contain, "The office for sprinkling holy water, the beginnings of the masses, the offices of kyrie, the gloria in excelsis, the gradales, or what is gradually sung after the epistles," &c. Gutch. Coll. Curive., ii, 166.

In Skelton we find:

The peacock so proud,

That is, says Warton, "He shall sing the grayle.

That is, says Warton, "He shall sing that part of the service which is called the grayle, or graduale." He adds, "Among the furniture given to the chapel of Trin. Coll. Oxon. by the founder, mention is made of four grayles of parchment lyned with gold." Observations on Fairy Queen, vol. ii, p. 289.

+GRAINEL. Apparently a granary. In harvest time (their toyle may best be seene in paths where they their cariage bring between), Their youth they send to gather-in the store, Their sick and old at home do keep the skore, And over grainels great they take the charge, Olt turning corne within a chamber large (When it is dight) least it do sprout or seed, Or come againe, or weevels in it breed. Du Bartas GRAMERCY. Many thanks, much obliged; a form of returning thanks, contracted from grand merci, Fr. In the second volume of Lacombe's Dict.

du Vieux Langage, we find it in the form of gramaci, which he explains grand merci. This is among the words in the Supplement. Grand mercy occurs at length in Chaucer's Cant. Tales.

God bless your worship.—Gramercy, wouldst thou ought with me?

Mer. Ven., ii, 9.

with me?

Be it so, Titus; and gramercy too.

Titus Andr., act i, last line. See Hawkins's Origin of the Drama, vol. iii, p. 269.

Gramercy horse was also a very common exclamation, and proverbial; not only when a horse was really in question, but even on other occasions, in allusion to that original use: as here:

He's gon. Gramarcy horse!
Wilson's Inconstant Ladie, p. 45, first printed, Oxon., 1814. No mention had there been made of anything more than horse-play, and coltish tricks of men. So also gramercy charm, in the following lines:

But though the shield brake not, gramercy charms, Yet underneath the shield it stound his arme. Harringt. Ariosto, xxxvi, 54.

Gramercy charme, means, thanks to the charm that secured it. too the phrase of getting anything for gramercy, which meant getting it for thanks, or for nothing.

Paying very lytle for them, yea mooste commonlye getting them for gramercy.

Robinson's More's Utopia, N S.

Thus, a thing not worth gramercy, means not worth thanks: No ladies lead such lives. M. Some few upon necessity, perhaps, but that's not worth grammercy.

Jovial Crew, O. Pl., x, 412.

It appears sometimes in the plural form:

Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.

Tam. of Shr., i, 1. Chaucer has it in the original form: Grand mercy, lord, God thank it you (quod she) That ye han saved me my children dere.

Clerke's Tale, 8964. GRAND-GUARD. A piece of armour for a knight on horseback.

Arc. You care not for a grand-guard?
Pal. No, we will use no horses, I perceive
You would fain be at that fight.

Two Noble K., iii, 6. I cannot find it explained in Grose on Ancient Armour; nor in that treasury of lost notices, Holme's Academy. It should be in the MS. continuation, but is not.

It was probably a gorget, or something like it, made to hang over the body-arms, and easily put on or off.

since we find it separately carried, with the helmet. &c.

The one bare his helmet, the second his gran-guard.

Holinsh., p. 820, as cited by Steevens.

Heywood seems to have used guard alone, in the same sense:

His sword, spurs, armour, guard, pavilion. Iron Age. †GRANDSIRE. In thesense of long-lived —long enough to be a grandfather.

Yet had their pleasure not a grand-sire life. Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638, p. 85. GRAPLE, for grapple, which, as a substantive, means any strong hook by which things are seized and held, as ships to each other in boarding. See Todd in Grapple.

Ambition outsearcheth to glorie the greece,
The stair to estate, the graple of grace.

Mirr. for Mag., p. 84.

That is, "the strong hold upon favour." +GRASHING. Gnashing the teeth.

No chillyng cold, no scaldyng heate, No grashyng chaps of monsters greate. Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577.

†GRASS. To turn to grass, to dismiss. Licurgus did a law in Sparta make. That all men might their barren wives forsake; And by the same law it ordained was, Wives might unable husbands turne to grasse. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+GRATERS.

Some in Smithfield burnt their old coaches (and I wish they had all beene so well bestowed), washing boules, and beetles went to wracke, old graters and stooles were turn'd to ashes, mouse-traps and tinder boxes came to light.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GRATILLITY. Supposed to be put for gratuity, in a burlesque passage of Twelfth Night. See IMPETICOS.

†GRATUITO. A gratuity.

Ster. Sonne, is this the gentleman that selles us the living?

Im. Fy, father, thou must not call it selling, thou must say, is this the gentleman that must have the gratsito?

Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

RAVE MAURICE. The customary

GRAVE MAURICE. title given to prince Maurice of Nassau in England; grave being a German title of nobility, as landgrave, margrave, palsgrave, &c. Minshew says, "A grave, a nobleman of the low countries, B. grave, graef; L. comes, regulus, præfectus." Again, under Greve: "Grave, or greve (gravius, præpositus), is a word of power and authoritie, signifying as much as dominus, or præfectus, and in the low Dutch country they call graves." There is still in Whitechapel, or was very lately, an alehouse, styled The Old Grave Maurice, the sign of which was the head of that prince.

Upon St. Thomas's day, the palsgrave and graw Massrice were elected knights of the garter, and the 27th of December the palsgrave was betrothed to the lady Elizabeth. On Sunday the 7th of February, the palsgrave in person was installed knight of the garter at Windsor, and at the same time was grave Massric installed by his deputy count Lodoweck of Nassas.

installed by his deputy count Lodoweck of Nassan.

Baker's Chronicls, an. 1612.

Holpe the king to a subject that may live to take grave Maurice prisoner, and that was more good to the state than a thousand such as you are ever like to do.

B. J. Fl. Love's Cure, i, 2 (said by a Spaniard.) You may then discourse how honourably your grave used you; (observe that you call grave Maurice your grave).

Decker, Gul's Hornb., ch. v.

The note of Mr. Seward on the passage from Love's Cure, is very entertaining, and a curious specimen of that gentleman's editorial talents. He prints it "grave Maurice," in the text, and thus annotates upon it: "Grave is printed in the last editions with a great letter, and in italics, as if it were a proper name; whereas it is an epithet only, and characteristic of prince Maurice of Nassau, who, after performing great actions against the Spaniards, is said to have dy'd of grief, on account of the siege of Breda." Thus, grave Maurice meant melancholy Maurice!! However grave he might be, this note, I think, would make him smile!

To GRAVE. To bury.

Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound, And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Bick. II, iii, 2.

Do you damn others, and let this damn you, And ditches grave you all.

Tim. of Ath., iv. 3.

Cinders, think'st thou, mind this, or graved ghosts?

Lord Surrey, 4th As.

GRAVES. Sometimes written for greaves, as here:

The taishes, cuishes, and the graves, staff, peacel, baises all. Warner's Alb. Engl., xii, ch. 69.

Hence this has been supported, as the true reading, in the following lines of Shakespeare:

Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood, Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine To a loud trumpet and a point of war.

2 Hen. IF, iv, l.

This is the reading of the folios. Warburton and Capell would read glaires, or swords; but, as it is not easy to determine whether books bear more resemblance to greaves, or to swords, the point cannot easily be settled.

the point cannot easily be settled. GRAY. A badger. In Ray's Dictionariolum we have, "A badger, brock or gray, melis, taxus."

Twas not thy sport to chase a silly hare, Stagge, bucke, foxe, wild-cat, or the imping grey, But armies, marquesses, graves, counts, dukes, kings, Archdutchesses and such heroicke things.

R. Markham in Cens. Lit., ix, 257.

Why he calls it the limping gray, see in BADGER.

To pitch the bar, to throw the weighty sledge, To dance with Phillis all the holiday; To hunt, by day the fox, by night the gray. Poems by A. W., in Davison, repr. 1816, vol. ii, p. 69.

To GREASE IN THE FIST. To bribe. Did you not grease the sealers of Leadenhall throughly in the fiste, they would never be sealed, but turned away.

Greene's Quip, f.c., Harl. Misc., v, 411. Dryden has used grease in the same sense, without adding the fist. See Todd.

Slic. We have got
One that will doe more good with's tongue that way
Than that uxorious showre that came from heaven,

Than that uxorious showre that came from neaven, But you must oyle it first.

Cred. I understand you.

Greaze him i' th' fist you meane; there's just ten peeces,

Tis but an earnest: if he bring't about,

I'le make those then a hundred.

Hear. Thinke it done.

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

Hear. Thinke it done. Cartierigar's trainary, 1001.

†GREAT. By the great, wholesale.
Gentlemen, I am sure you have heard of a ridiculous asse, that manie yeares since sold lyes by the great.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592.
Though usury be bad, "iis understood,
Compared with extortion, it seemes good.
One by retaile, and th' other by the great,
Iugrose the profits of the whole worlds sweat. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+GREAT. Notorious.

The fact is great.

Tourneur's Revengers Tragadie, 1608.

A GREAVE, or GREVE, s. A tree, bough, grove. Skinner. From græf, a grove, Saxon. It evidently means a tree in the following passage:

Then is it best, said he, that ye doe leave Your treasure here in some security, Either fast closed in some hollow greave, or buried in the ground from jeopardy.

Spens. F. Q., III, x, 42.

Mr. Todd explains it groove in that place.

Also a bough:

Also a bougn:
Yet when there haps a honey fall,
We'll lick the syrup't leaves;
And tell the bees, that theirs is gall
To that upon the greaves.

Drayt. Quest of Cynthia, it, 626.
As we behold a swarning cast of bees
In a swoln cluster to sonic branch to cleave;
Thus do they hang in branches on the trees,
Pressing each plant, and loading ev'ry greare.

Drayt. Birth of Mosses, iv, 1587.

A grove:

Net when she fied into that covert greeze,
He her not finding, both them thus nigh dead did leave.

Spens. F. Q., VI, ii, 43. GREE. Kindness, satisfaction; from gré, French. gre, French.

To her makes present of his service seene,
Which she accepts with thanks and goodly gree.

Spens. F. Q., 1, +, 16.
Beceive in gree these tears, O Lord most grood.

Pairf. Tasso, iii, 8.

There soon as he can kise his hand in gree, Or with good grace bow it below the knee Hall's Sat., iv. 2.

Yet take in gree whatever do befall.

Drayt. Ed., 5, vol. iv, p. 1411. [Here perhaps it stands for degree.]

†Injurious Cuba, ill it fits thy gree
To wrong a stranger with discurtesie Orlando Purioso, 1594.

tIf wee, quoth he, might see the houre, Of that sweet state which never ends Our heavenly gree might have the power
To make our parents as deere friends.

Bagland's Helicon, 1614.

To 'GREE. An abbreviation for agree.

The moe the stronger, if they 'gree in one.

Perces P Porces, O. Pl., i, 117.

And doe not see how much they must defalke
Of their accounts, to make them gree with ours.

Deniel, Philosas, p. 195.

GREECE. A hart, capon, &c., of Greece, meant a fat one; it seems, therefore, that it should be of grease, from graisse, French: and so Percy explains it:

Then went they down into a laund, These noble archers thre;
Eche of them slew a hart of greece,
The best that they could see.
Song of Adam Bell, P. 111, v. 29; Percy's Rel., i, 174.

A hart of greece is mentioned in a popular rhyme commemorative of the following tradition. In 1333 or 4, it is said, a hart was run from Whinfield park, in Westmoreland, to Red Kirk, in Scotland, and back again. dog and hart both died of fatigue near a tree in the park, now called Hartshorn Tree, on each side of a wall, which the hart leaped by his last effort of strength. The dog's name was Hercules, as appears by the rhyme, which is this simple one:

Hercules kill'd hart of greece,
And hart of greece kill'd Hercules.
See Clarke's Survey of the Lakes, B. i, ch. 1. That author vouches for the truth of the story.

Whether some punning connection did not originally subsist between this, and taking "heart (or hart) of grace," I do not venture to pronounce. At the coronation feast of Elizabeth of York, queen of Henry VII, among other dishes, were "capons of high greece." Ives's Select Papers.

†Which of you can kill a buck? Or, who can kill a doe? Or who can kill a hart of Greece Five hundred foot him fro? Will Scarlet he did kill a buck, And Midge he did kill a doe; And Little John kill'd a hart of Greece Five hundred foot him fro.

Ballad of Robin Hood and the Curtal Fryar.

GREEK. As merry as a Greek. Prov. The Greeks were proverbially spoken of by the Romans, as fond of good living and free potations; and they used the term græcari, for to indulge in these articles. Hence we also took the name of a Greek for a jovial fellow, which ignorance has since corrupted into grig; saving "as merry as a grig," instead of "as a Greek." I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris. Then she's a merry Greek indeed. Tro. and Cress., i, 2.

Again:

A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks Go home, and tell the merry Greeks that sent you, Ilium shall burn, &c. B. and Pl. Woman's Prize, ii, 2. Drunkards, says Prynne, are called Open, liberall, or free housekeepers, merry Greeks, and such like stiles and titles. Healthes Sicknesse, fol. B 2, b.

We read, however, of one who was A true Trojan, and a mad merry grig, though no Greek.

Barn. Journ. (1820), i, p. 54.

Inexperienced, unskilful; applied to such a person as is still termed a green-horn, or in the universities a fresh-man. How green you are, and fresh in this old world.

K. John, iii, 4.
Besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all these requisites in him that folly and green minds look Othell., ii, 1. after.

Thus also,

GREENLY. Unskilfully.

And we have done but greenly,

Haml., iv, 5. In hugger-mugger to inter him. Ham +GREEN-EVER. For evergreen. But, the heav'ns feel not fates impartiall rigour; Years add not to their stature nor their vigour; Use wears them not; but their green-ever age Du Bartas. Is all in all still like their pupillage.

GREEN-GOOSE FAIR, or GOOSE-FAIR. A fair still held at Stratfordle-Bow, near London, on Thursday in Whitsun week, and so named because green, or young geese, were a favorite article of festivity at it.

And march in a tawney coat, with one sleeve, to goosefair. I advancy consistency, by good fair. At Islington, and green-goose fair, and sip a zealous glass of wine. Glapthorne's Wit in a Constable. The twenty third this month of May, fair

A fair at Bow is kept that day; There geese by heaps do go to wrack,
Who scarce have feathers on their back.

Poor Robin's Almanack, M.

oor Robin's Almanack, May, 1689. Much coarse description of the fair is added. The 23d was Thursday in Whitsun week, that year.

+GREEN-MEN. Savages; wild men. A dance of four swans. To them enter five areen men upon which the swans take wing and fly up into the heavens. The green men dance; which concludes the act.

The World in the Moon, an Opera, 1897. GREENSLEEVES. An old popular ballad; and, by the manner in which it is usually mentioned, evidently of the amorous kind. It was entered on the books of the Stationers' Company. in Sept., 1580. Mr. Ellis published a ballad of Greensleeves, from an old miscellany of the date of 1584, near the time of the above entry. Specim., iii, p. 327. Sir J. Hawkins recovered the tune, which is in his Appendix. The song begins thus: No. 21.

Greenslesses was all my joy,
Greenslesses was my delight,
Greenslesses was my hart of gold,
And who but lady Greenslesses.

This burden is repeated after every verse. But, assuredly, there was a song of Greensleeves still older; for the title of this is, "A new courtly Sonnet of the Lady Greensleeves, to the new tune of Greensleeves."

But they do no more adhere, and keep place together, than the hundredth pealm to the tune of green-sleves.

Mer. W. W., ii. Let the sky rain potatoes, let it thunder to the tune of green-sleves, hall kissing comfits, and snow cringoes, let there come a tempest of provocation.

eringoes, let there come will shelter here.

Shall we seek virtue in a setin gown,
Embroider'd virtue? Faith in a curl'd feather?

And set our credits to the tune of greensieese?

B. and Fl. Loyal Shi, iii. 2.

"" we dance in

The tune was still a country dance in Prior's time:

Of S Ullie:
Old Madge bewitch'd at sixty-one
Calls for greenslesses, and jumping Joan.
Alma, Canto M. The character of lady Greensleeves, I fear, is rather suspicious; for green was a colour long assumed by loose When two ladies are to be equipped for that service, it is said, Ursula, take them in, open thy wardrobe, and fit then to their calling. Green govern, crimson petticetts:

green women, my lord mayor's green women! guests o' the game, true bred.

B. Jons. Barth. Pair, iv. 5. Afterwards the same kind of guests are called "the green gamesters that come here." Act v, sc. 3.

The favorite ballad of "Old Kingsborough, of the Isle of Sky," beginning "Green sleeves, and pudding pies," appears to have been only a "Green sleeves, and pudding Jacobite parody of the older song; of which, perhaps, the burden was similar. Boswell's Journal, p. 319.

+GREEN-YARD. The Green-yard was a portion of the old gardens of Leadenhall, in London.

With that one of the officers went and took the forhorse by the head in order to drive the waggon to be green yard, which is a prison for all waggons, cut, and coaches, for all them that transgress against the citty laws. Great Britans Hongonshe, 1712, 185. GREESE, or GREEZE. See GRICE.

GREESINGS. Steps; from the same origin as grice. When Christ refused to perform a miracle, to descend from the pinnacle of the temple, Latimer gives this reason for it:

It is no time now to shew any miracles; there is another way to goe downe, by greesings.

Sermons, fol. 72 b.

See GRICE.

To GREET. To cry out, to make lamentation. See Greit, in Todd.

tation. See Greit, in Todd.

Tell me, good Hobbinol, what gars thee greet?

Spens. Shep. Kal., Apr., l. l.

Dare I profane so irreligious be
To greet, or grieve her sweet euthanasy.

B. Jons. Underwoods, vol. vii, p. 30, Whalley.

Say, shepherd's boy, what makes thee greet so sore?

Brydge's Excerpte Tudoriana, p. 41.

†Hold. Mine uncle will be right wood I fear me. But I'll ne're greet for that, sir, while I have your love.

+GREET. A greeting.
O then, sweet sonne, I'd ne're disjoyn'd have been
From thy sweet greets, nor have endur'd t' have seen
Mezentius proud, my bloudy borderer,
Such vaunts and villanies 'bout me t' inferre.

Firgil, by Ficars, 1632.

+GREFT. Grafted.

REFT. Gratecu.

Of those, are twelve in that rich girdle greft,

Which God gave nature for her new-years-gift.

Du Bartas.

GREGORIAN. A species of wig, or head of false hair. "A cap of hair: so called from one Gregory, a barber in the Strand, that first made them in England." Blount's Glossographia. Aubrey says that this "Gregorie, the famous peruque-maker, was buryed at St. Clement's Danes church," near the west door, with an inscription in rhyme. Letters from the Bodleian, vol. ii, p. 360. Cotgrave, under Perruque, has, "A periwig, a Gregorian." We find there that perruque originally meant "a tuft of hair." A wig was une fausse perruque.

Some think that thou dost use that new found knack,

Some think that thou dost use that new found knack, Excusable to such as hayre do lack, A quaint Gregorian to thy head to bind.

Who pulling a little downe his Gregorian, which was displac't a little by hastic taking off his bever, sharpning his peake, and crecting his distended mouchatos, proceeded in this answere.

Howard Ghost Ac. 1658, p. 46.

Honest Ghost, &c., 1658, p. 46. Coles' Dict. has, "A Gregorian [a cap of hair], capillamentum."

He cannot be a cuckold that weares a Gregorian, for a perriwige will never fitt such a head.

Gesta Grayorum, Part ii, 65; Nick. Progr., vol. ii. 4You weare hats to defend the sunne, not to cover shorne locks, caules to adorne the head, not Gregorians to warme idle braines.

He will be the Womanich Man 1630.

Hat vir. or the Womanish Man, 1620.

GRESCO. A game at cards.

One of them was my prentice, Mr. Quicksilver here; and, when he had two years to serve, kept his whore and his hunting nag; would play his hundred pounds at gresco or primero, as familiarly (and all o' my purse) as any bright piece of crimson on 'em all.

Eastward Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 273.

GRESHAM. A pretended astrologer, one of the associates of the infamous Mrs. Turner, who would probably have been hanged with her, had he not fortunately had a bad constitution, which carried him off before things came to that extremity. Wilson calls him "a rotten engine." He is mentioned with Bretnor, Foreman, and other wretched impostors. See BRETNOR.

GRESSES, more commonly JESSES, of a hawk. The straps of leather buckled about the legs, to which was fastened the leash, or thong, by which she was held for fear of escape. See JESSES. And you the eagles, soar ye ne'er so high,
I have the gresses that will pull ye down.

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 345.

GRESSOP. Used by Skelton for a Grass is said to be grasshopper. called gress in the north.

Lord how he would pry After the butterfly; Lord how he would hop After the gressop. Skelton on Ph. Sparr., p. 219.

+GREVES. Griefs.

The Scottes allured with desyre of gayn, and for no malice that they bare to kyng Henry, but some what desirous to be revenged of their olde greves, came to the erle with greate compaygnie.

Hall's Union, 1548; Hen. IV, fol. 20.

+GREVES. Branches. See GREAVE. Mee thought that I was walking in a parke, Amyd the wooddes, among the plesaunt leaves,
Where many was the bird did sweetly carpe
Emong the thornes, the bushes, and the greves.
Thyan. Pride and Lowliness.

GREW seems to be put for the Greek term γρῦ; i. e., any trifling or very worthless matter.

Foole that I am, that with my dogges speak grew! Come neere, good Mastix, it is now tway score Of yeares (alas) since I good Mastix kner Pembr. Arcad., ii, p. 224.

GREWND, for greyhound. Grew, for grey, is said to be the pronunciation in Lincolnshire.

But Rodomont, as though he had had wings,
Quite ore the dike like to a greend he springs.

Harringt. Ariosto, xiv, 108.

Look how a greend that finds a sturdie bore

Amid the field far straying from the heard,
Doth runne about, behind him and before,

Because of his sharp tusks he is afcard Ibid., xxiv. 52.

See also xx, 94.

388 GRI

GRICE The most common mode of spelling a word which is written also greece, greese, greeze, grieze, grize, grise, &c.; and seems to be made from gressus, or contracted from degrees. It signified a step, or a flight of steps.

That's a degree to love. That's a degree to love.

No not a grice, for 'tis a vulgar proof
That very oft' we pity enemies. Twelf. N., iii, 1.

Who in a spreading ascent, upon several grices, help to beautify the sides.

B. Jons. Ent. at K. James's Coronation.

See also his Masque of Love Restored. Certain skaffolds of borde, with grices or steppes one above another.

above another.

William Thomas's History of Italy, 1561, H 2.

Where, on several greeces, sate the foure cardinal vertues.

Decker's Entertainment of James I, H 3. This is certainly the true reading in the following passage:

They stand a griese
Above the reach of report. Two Noble Kins., ii, 1. Where the old copies absurdly read

Ambition outsearcheth to glorie the greece,

The stair to estate, the graple of grace.

Mirr. for Mag., Rudocke, p. 84.

Sometimes it is written greese: As we go up towards the hall there are three or foure paire of staires, whereof one paire is passing faire, consisting of very many greeses. Coryat, vol. i, p. 31. Or grise:

And lay a sentence
Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.
Othelic
So are they all, for ev'ry grize of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below.
Tim. of Ath., Othello, i, 3. Tim. of Ath., iv, 3. A grice meant a pig also. Coles has, "A grice, porcellus, nefrens, aper." See also Skinner.

To GRIDE. To cut, or prick. Gridare, Ital.

Then through his thigh the mortal steele did gryde.

Spens. P. Q., II, viii, 36.

Last with his goad amongst them he doth go,
And some of them he grideth in the haunches,
Some in the flanks, that prickt their very paunches.

Drayt. Mooncalf, vol. ii, p. 512.

Milton also has used it.

GRIDELIN. A sort of colour composed of white and red. Kersey and Gris de lin, French. See Johnson. Bover's Dict.

And his love, Lord help us, fudes like my gredaline petticont. Parson's Wedding, O. Pl., xi, 412.

Dryden has used the word in his Fables. See Johnson.

GRIEFFULL, or GRIEFULL. Melancholy; compounded of grief and full. Which when she sees, with ghastly grieffull cies, Her heart does quake, and deadly pallid hew Benumbes her cheekes. Spens. F. Q., VI, viii, 40. Church says, "This, if I mistake not, is a compound word of his own." He did mistake, for it is used by other writers as early:

Alas, my lord, what griefull thing is this, That of your brother you can thinke so il!? Ferrex and Porres, O. Pl., i, 136.

Again: Again: The wiser sort hold down their griefull heads. Ibid., p. 130.

+GRIFFE. A graft, or setting. Perceiving he was of a very good mature, and wel given, and that he was a good griffe to be set in a better ground, &c.

Plutarck, 1573.

+GRILY. Hideous. MS. Vocab., 1551. GRIMALKIN, q. d. Grey malkin, a name for a fiend, supposed to resemble a grev cat.

Grimalkin's a hell-cat, the devil may choke her.

Ballad of Alley Croker. 2. A cat: still common in burlesque style.

Grimalkin to domestic vermin sworn
An everlasting foc. Phillips, Spl. Skilling.

†GRIMASK. A show of monkey tricks? Und. No more of your grimasks, good Mr. Noaks. Noak. And why so, sir? Und. Because I have consider'd better, and since 'tis resolv'd, we shall have a prologue to our farce, here is one shall give it wis the farce way exactly.

The Womens Computed, 1671.

†GRIN. A snare. Cotgrave has, "Lags, a snare, ginne, or grinne."

Young gallants nimbly flock about the gates, And in their hands boare speares with iron plates, Their nets, gins, grins, troops of Massylian sparks, Kennels of senting hounds with loud-month'd bert formal Ar France 18 Virgil, by Vicers, 1632

GRINCOMES. A kind of cant term for the venereal disease.

You must know, sir, in a nohleman 'tis abusive; so, in him the serpigo, in a knight the grincouse, in a gentleman the Neapolitan scabb, and in a serving man or artificer the plaine pox.

Jones's Adresta, 1635, C. 2.

I had a receipt for the grincomes in his own hand.

Family of Lose, 1608, B L.

You may see

His handy work by my flat face; no bridge

Left to support my organ, if I had one.

The comfort is, I am now secure from the griscoses,

I can lose nothing that way.

Mass. Guardian, act iv, p. 83.

+GRINDING-HOUSE. The house of correction.

C. Why should not I know? the fellow is worthy to be put into the grinding-house.

Terence in English, 1614.

GRINDLE-TAIL. Like trundle-tail; meaning, I presume, curling tail. Possibly from a grindle-stone, or grindstone, which is round.

Their horns are plaguy strong, they pash does palaces;

They toss our little habitations
Like whelps, like grindle-tails, with their beds upward. B. & Fl. Island Princess, act v, p. 356 Trindle-tail might possibly be istended.

389

+GRINDSTONE. To tie your nose to the grindstone, Howell, 1659, i. e., to be very strict over you.

GRIP. Strength, power of griping or seizing violently.

Let those weak birds that want wherewith to fight, Submit to those that are of grip and might.

Drawton's Owl. vol. iv. 1322.

A GRIPE, or GRYPE. A griffin: from γρύψ, gryphus; but more frequently put for a vulture.

Like a white hind under the grypes sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 506.

Sk. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 506.
The hellish prince adjudge my dampned ghost
To Tantales thirste, or proude 1xion's wheele,
Or cruel grips to gnaw my growing harte.

Ferrex and Porrex, O. Pl., i, 124.
Where Titius hath his lot

To feed the grips that gnaws his growing heart.

Taxcred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 196.

A gripe doth Titius' liver tear, His greedy hungry gorge to fill.

Parad. of D. Des., n. 33.
The gnawing gripes of irksome thought,
Consumes my heart with Titius grief.

1bid.

In the latter passage it might be equivocal, if it did not follow the other in the same short poem.

In all these examples, except the first, it clearly signifies vulture, not griffin. Sir Philip Sidney has the same:

Upon whose breast a fiercer gripe doth tire, Than did on him who first stole down the fire. Astroph., 8. 14.

Also a sort of boat:

Because they fear'd the departure of some of the small boates, as gripes, and such like.

Danet's Commines, D d 2.

Griffin or vulture's GRIPE'S EGG. egg; a technical name for one of the vessels used in alchemy, as pelican was for another.

Let the water in glass E be felter'd, And put into the gripe's egg. Lute him well, And leave him clos'd in bulneo. Alch., ii. 3.

+GRIPER. A boat-man? See GRIPE. There be also certaine colliers that bring coles to London by water in barges, and they be called gripers.

Greene's-Discovery of Coosnage, 1591.

+GRIPPED. Grasped; laid hold of.

The one his pyke-staff gripped fast,
They feared for its skaith.

Robin Hood, i, 106.

GRIPPLE, or GRIPLE. Avaricious, grasping; from to gripe.

He gnasht his teeth to see Those heapes of gold which griple covetyze.

Spens. F. Q., I, iv, 31

When griple patrons turn their sturdie steele
To wax, when they the golden flame to feele.

Hall, Satires, v. 1.

And so his gripple avarice he serve, What recks this rank hind if his country starve? But the gripple wretch who will bestow nothing on his poor brother for God's sake, is evidently an infidel, having nome at all, or very heathenish conceits of God.

Berrow, Sermon, Psalm cxii, 9. Mrs. Cooper, not understanding this word, has joined it with the name of Edell, as if it made a compound name .

GRO

For Grippel-Edell to himself her kingdom sought to So she prints it, instead of "grippell Edell." as it stands in Warner's Albion, B. iv, ch. 20. I observe with regret, that this error is exactly copied (as well as some others) in Mr. Bliss's valuable edition of Wood's Athense, with the additional fault of making it Grippil. Vol. i, col. 768.

Haking it Grappes.

If it be covetous, for gripple gaine
To sell the heavens, the earth, yea God himselfe,
To dispossesse kings from their lawfull raigne,
To cramme his coffers with unlawfull pelfe.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†These gripple muck-rakers bad as leeve part with their bloud as their goods. Dent's Pathway, p. 91.

†He askt the price with greedy sense, She, gripple wench, said eighteen pence.

Wit and Drollery, 1682, p. 213.

GRIPLE, s., for gripe, or grasp.

Ne ever Artegall his griple strong
For any thinge would slacke, but still upon him hong.

Spens. F. Q., V, ii, 14.

GRISPING appears to be put for the closing; but I have not met with the word elsewhere.

Rested upon the side of a survey of the grisping of the evening.

Buph. Engl., sign. C 1. Rested upon the side of a silver streame, even almost "An officer of the GROOM-PORTER. royal household, whose business is to see the king's lodging furnished with tables, chairs, stools, and firing; as also to provide cards, dice, &c., and to decide disputes arising at cards, dice, bowling, &c." Chamb. Dict. Formerly he was allowed to keep an open gambling table at Christmas.

He will win you

By irresistible luck, within this fortnight

Enough to buy a barony. They will set him

Upmost at the groomporter's all the Christmas,
And for the whole year through, at every place

Where there is play.

D. Where find you that statute, sir?

D'Am. Why be judged by the groom-porter.

D. The groom-porter?

D'Am. Ay, madam, must not they judge of all

The gamings of the court?

Chapm. Busing D'Amb., Anc. Dr., iii, p. 249.

He is said to have succeeded to the office of the master of the revels, then disused. George I and II played hazard in public on certain days, groom-porter. by the attended Archæol., xviii, p. 317.

This abuse was not removed till the reign of George III. It is mentioned, as still existing, in one of lady Mary W. Montague's Eclogues:

300

At the groom-porter's batter'd bullies play.

Thursday, Ect. 4; Dodsley's Collect., i, 107.

†Mir. But stil there wanted fool and fortune to't; he does not play at the groom porters for it; nor do the drudgery of some worn out lady.

the drudgery of some worn out lady.

Mrs. Behrs Founger Brother, 1696.

†This. You have no reason to complain; all the young fellows that come out of France, pay tribute to you, as certainly as to the groom-porter; I wonder Keepwell is never told of it.

Selley's Bellamira, 1687.

*Titlem: 80 guineas to compound a judgment confess'd at the groom-porters for a 100. The Beaus Catechism, 1703.

+GROOVING.

Had a great pain in the head, and could take no rest, and was taken in the manner of an ague with a pain in the head, and grooving in the back, first cold and then hot.

Brian's Piuse-Prophet, 1655, p. 46.

+GROSSE-HEADED. Thick-headed. Though they were afterwardes defaced, when the whole church was whited at the instance of a certaine grosse-headed church-warden, who had no more judge-ment in painting then a goose. Lomatius on Painting, 1598.

†GROTESCO. A grotesque.
Who askt the banes 'twixt these discolour'd mates? A strange grotesco this, the Church and States. Cleaveland's Poems, 1691.

†GROVET. A little grove.

Which was the pendant of a hill to life, with divers boscages and grovets upon the steepe or hanging grounds thereof.

grounds thereol. The Masque of the Inner Temple and Grayes Inne, 1612.

GROUND. An old musical term for an air or musical subject, on which variations and divisions were to be made: the variations being called the descant.

And that none in th' assembly there was found
That would t' ambitious descant give a ground.

Daniel, Civ. Wars, vii, 64.

So in Richard III:

For on that ground I'll make a holy descant.

O but the ground itself is naught, from whence Thou canst not relish out a good division. Lingua, O. Pl., v, 119.

See DESCANT.

The GROUND. The pit at the theatres was formerly so called, because the spectators in that part actually stood on the ground, without benches, or other accommodations; and, as they stood below the level of the stage, Ben Jonson says of them,

The under-standing gentlemen of the ground here ask'd my judgment.

Barth. Fair, Ind. In the Case is alter'd, and other places, he sneers at their "grounded judgments, and grounded capacities.

GROUNDLING, from the former. spectator in that part of the theatre, whose places were also called groundstands.

Besides, sir, all our galleries and ground-stands are furnished, and the groundlings within the yard grow infinitely unruly.

Lady Alimony, act i, sc. l.

In the same play a caution is given to the manager of the stage, that

The stage curtains be artificially drawn, and so coverty shrouded, that the squint-eyed groundling may not list

Shakespeare, in the well-known directions to the players, speaks of ranters, whose object was

To split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb show and noise.

Hand, iii, 2. The price paid by these gentry for admission was then only a penny: Tut, give me the penny, give me the penny, I care not for the gentlemen, I—let me have a good ground.

B. Jons. Case is allor'd, i, l.

That is, as we should say, a good pit. But it is plain that the pit was not then the place of critics.

Hanmer speaks of the fish called a groundling: but the names have no connection, except in being both derived from ground.

+GROUNDLING. A small fish. Apua cobitis. ἀφύη κωβίτις, Athenseo. A fishe breeding of abundance of raine: a groundling.

+GROUNDLY. Profoundly; thoroughly. After ye had read and groundely pondered the contents of my letters than to you addressed, your graced did summewhat marvaile that I have founde so good faithe in the Frenshe king.

State Papers, 162.

+GROUND-ROOM. A room on the ground, not floored?

The innkeeper introduced him into a grownd room, expressing a great deale of joy in so luckily meeting with his old friend.

Great Britans Honycombe, 1712, MS. +GROUNDSIL. The threshold. The time the groundsils of great Troy were layd:

The time the groundsils of great Troy were myn. Was Lacedemon built (by computation), In Athens Erichthonius king was made, And Danaus ruler ore the Argive nation.

Heywood, Trois Britanica, 1809.

Le sueil de l'huis. The groundsell or foote poste of a Romenciate.

Nomenciate.

+GROUNDSWELIE. The old name of the plant groundsell.

Take four handfuls of groundswellie, and stamps it small in a morter, and put thereto three spoonefuls of vinegar, and three spoonefuls of bay-salt, grind them altogether.

Pathway of Health, bl. 1. +GROUT-HEAD. A thick-head, or dunce. For there you may see many a greedy grout-head, Without or wit, or sence, almost without-head, Held and esteem'd a man whose zeale is fervent.

Those foure D. signific nothing else but that four thousand times you are a grout-keaded gull.

The Passonger of Bensenute, 1612.

GROWTNOL, quasi, growty noddle, i. e., dunce. A word, I suspect, coined by Decker, who is hardly sound authority for the usage of a word, unless supported by collateral examples.

Ī

The excellency whereof I know will be so great, that growthols and momes will in swarms fly buzzing about thee.

Gul's Hornb. Proæm., p. 33, repr. See MOME.

+GRUBBING-AXE. Apparently what

We now call a pick.
Houe fourchue. A delving toole with two teeth, wherewith the earth is opened in such places as the plough cannot pearse: some call it a grubbing aze.

GRUDGING, s., from to grudge, in the obsolete sense of to feel compunction. See Todd, 4. Grudge. Thus certain feelings of hunger are called orudoings of the stomach; and we find "grudging stomachs" in 1 Hen. VI, iv. 1.

Thus it is used for a feeling, or inclination:

It is my birth-day,
And I'd do it betimes, I feel a *gradging*Of bounty, and I would not long lie failow.

B. Jons. Stapts of News, i, 2. And yet I have a grudging to your grace still.

B. & Fl. Hum. Lieut., v, 3.

Or a symptom:

Not much unhealthy: Only a little gradging of an ague Which cannot last. B. and Pl. Loyal Subject, ii, 1.

A prophetic intimation:

Now have I A kind of grudging of a beating on me,
I fear my hot fit. Honest Man's Fortune, v, p. 455. +GRUM. Sour; surly.

M. SOUF; Surry.

It pities me to th' heart to see
That the great Jupiter should be
So out of humour, and so grum.

Cotton's Works, 1734, p. 155.

+GRUMEL-SEED, or GROMEL-SEED. Seed of Gromwell.

The altars every where now smoking be With beanstalks, savine, laurel, rosemary, Their cakes of grummell-seed they did prefer, And pails of milk in sacrifice to her. Then hymn of praise they all devoutly sung
In those Palilia for increase of young.

Browne's Britannia's Pastorals.

GRUNTING CHEAT. In the beggars' cant language, a pig.

I have not thought it worth while, in general, to introduce the terms of this mock language, as they are never used without a glossary subjoined; and certainly they are little worthy of being recorded.

GRUTCH, v. and s. Mr. Todd has properly shown, against his venerable predecessor, that this is the more ancient and original form of the word which is now used, grudge. See his edition of Johnson.

GUARDS. Trimmings, facings, or other haps from the idea of their defending the substance of the cloth in those Nay mock not, mock not; the body of your discourse is sometimes guarded with fragments; and the guards are but slightly basted on neither. Much Ado, iii, 4. Oh rhimes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose.

Love's L. L., iv. 3.

Not properly gold or silver lace, though sometimes so applied:

The cloaks, doublets, &c., were guarded with velvet guards, or else laced with coatly lace.

And who reads Plutarches eyther historic or philosophie, shall find he trimmeth both their garments with guardes of poesie. Sir Ph. Sidney, Dif. of Poesie, 523.

A plaine pair of cloth-breeches, without either welts or gards.

Greene's Quip, &c., Harl. Misc., v, 398. Guards stand for ornaments in general, or by synecdoche, for dress, in the following passage:

owing passage:
Oh'tis the cunning livery of hell.
The damned'st body to invest and cover

Meas. for Meas., iii, 1. In princely guards. Meas. for Meas., iii, 1.

Black guard had no relation to ornament, and will be found properly explained in its place.

The meaning of guard, in the following passage, has been doubted:

I stay but for my guard;—on to the field:
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste.

Hen. V, iv, 2.

Shakespeare doubtless had Holinshed in his eye, as he usually had in his Histories:

The duke of Brabant, when his standard was not come, caused a banner to be taken from a trumpet, and fastened upon a spear, the which he commanded to be borne before him instead of a standard. P. 554. The poet here attributes this action to the constable of France. The quard he waited for was probably his bodyguard, among whom, as the standardbearer would be most easily missed, he resolved to repair the loss, as he says. So Mr. Malone interprets it, and I think rightly, as it retains the usual military sense of guard.

To GUARD. To ornament with guards or facings; from the preceding.

To be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a title that was rich before. K. John, iv, 2.
Give him a livery
More guarded than his fellows. Property foot, ii, 2. More guarded than his fellows. Mer. of Von., ii, 2. You are in good case since you came to court, fool; what, guarded, guarded! Yes, faith, even as footmen and bawds wear velvet, not for an ornament or honour, and bawds wear versus, but for a badge of drudgery.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 36.

The guarded robe is used by Massinger for the Laticlavian robe of the Roman senators:

The most censorious of our Roman gentry, UARDS. Trimmings, facings, or other ornaments applied upon a dress; perO thou that all things seest, Fautour of Chrysa, whose fair hand doth guardfully dispose Celestial Cilla, governing in all power Tenedos.

Chapm. II., i, 441.

392

+GUBBIN. A paring.

The fish-mongers would quickly goe to wrack, The lacke of this seed would be their great lack, And being now rich, and in good reputation, They would have neither hall nor corporation. And all that they could buy, or sell, or barter,
Would scarce be worth a gubbin once a quarter.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

GUDGEON. A gudgeon being the bait for many of the larger fish, to swallow a gudgeon was sometimes used for to be caught or deceived: as.

But in my mind if you be a fish, you are either an eele, which as soone as one hath holde on her taile, will slippe out of his hande, or else a minnowe which will bee nibbling at every bait, but never biting; but what fish so ever you be, you have made both mee and Philautus to smallow a gudgeon.

Buph., K 3, b. The phrase was not uncommon. See other examples quoted by Todd.

More commonly the allusion is rather made to the easiness with which the gudgeon itself is caught. Thus Shakespeare:

But fish not with this melancholy bait For this fool's gudgeon, this opinio

Mer. of Ven., i, 3. A sharper, or low-lived person; doubtless from the French gueux.

Diligent search was made all thereabout,
But my ingenious gue had got him ont.

Honest Ghost, p. 232.

Said of a sharper who had taken a purse. Seemingly, in the following, used as a term of familiar endearment, as rogue often is:

None clse she would aumnot To hold her chat, or in her coach to sit; I was her ingle, gus, her sparrow bill, And, in a word, my ladies what you will.

16id., p. 139.

Not having met with this word in any other writer, I am inclined to suspect that it may be an affectation of the author, who, it is now thought, is ascertained to have been Richard Brathwaite.

+GUELPHS and GIBELLINES had become popular terms for things very hostile or contradictory to each other.

Fr. Mostre or contradictory to each other. Sir Merl. My honest country couz, when wilt thou understand the Guelphs and the Gibelius; and learn to talk treason o' this side the law?

Mrs. Behn's Founger Brother, 1696.

Though indeede they rather resembling monsters of sundry kinds, their heads Guelfe, and their legs gibelline, and they never speake, but their words be as buites upon hookes, or twigges limed.

The Passenger of Beneenato, 1612.

IERDON, French. A reward: need

GUERDON, French. A reward; used by Milton, and still introduced occasionally in poetry.

Death in guerdon of her wrongs, Gives her fame which never dies

Much Ado, v. 3. Guerdon, O sweet guerdon! better than remuneration eleven pence farthing better!

Love's L. L., 11, Love's L. L. II. l. Shakespeare, in this latter passage, and the scene in which it is introduced. has dramatised a story then current, and told also by a contemporary writer, of a man who, when going to leave a friend's house, said to one of the servants, "Holde thee, here is a remuneration for thy paynes; which the servant receiving, gave him utterly for it (besides his paynes) thankes, for it was but a three farthings peece; and I holde thankes for the same a small price, howsoever the market goes." And of another, who said to the same servant, "Hold thee, here is a querdon for thy deserts: now the servant payde no deerer for the querdon than he did for the remuneration; though the querdon was eleven pence farthing better, for it was a shilling, and the other but a three farthinges. The above passage, from a pamphlet entitled, "A Health to the Gentlemanly Profession of Serving-men, or the Serving-man's Comfort," pr. 1598, was pointed out to Mr. Steevens by Dr. Farmer. See Malone's Suppl. to Shakesp., i, p. 110, and his edition, in the note on Love's L. L. It has been inquired, whether the poet copied from the pamphleteer, or he from the poet? Possibly, neither was the case, but each writer made use of a story then fresh in circulation, and in some degree popular.

He hearkned and did stay from further harmes, To gayne such goodly guerdon as she spake.

Spens. F. Q., I, vii, lk.

Used also for retribution of evil: To beare such guerdon of their traiterous fact, As may be both due vengeance to themselves, And holsome terror to posteritie.

Ferrez and Porres, O. Pl., i, 153.

To GUERDON. To recompense; made from the substantive.

My lord protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts 2 Hen. FI, i, 4

Speak on, I'll guerdon thee, whate'er it be.

Spanish Tragedy, O. Pl., iii, 131.

Obtains from him who does high heav'n command,
In a short time, to guerdon all, a son.

Panshaw's Lusiad, iil, st. M.

In a bad sense also:

And I am guerdon'd at the last with shame. 3 Hen. VI, 11, 8. 393 GUI

†GUEST-CHAMBER. A chamber for

Why, Rafe, sayd I, thou knowest where she lyeth in the guest chamber, and what wilt thou give me if I turne thee in to her?

Greene's Newes both from Heaven and Hell, 1593.

+GUESTIVE. Pertaining to a guest. For all such guests as there seek guestive fare.
Chuoman's Odys., xvi.

+GUEST-MEAL. A dinner party.

Convivium. συμπόσιον, σύνδειπνον, Lysiæ. Convive. A banket: an eating and drinking together: a ghest meals. Nomenclator, 1585.

+GUEST-ROOM. The same as guestchamber.

But this I say, there was but one guest-roome,
Hangd with a pentice cloath spoke age enough.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638, p. 131.

GUIDON, s. A small flag, or standard; attributed, in the following passage, to a troop of archers; but properly of horse.

of horse.

The guidon, according to Markham, is inferior to the standard, being the first colour any commander of horse can let fly in the field. It was generally of damask, fringed, and usually three feet in breadth near the staff, lessening by degrees towards the bottom, where it was by a slit divided into two peaks. It was originally borne by the dragoons, and might be charged with the armorial bearings of the owner.

Grose's Milit. Anliq., vol. ii, p. 258.

Moretes, thou this day shalt lead the horse, Take thou the cornet; Turnus, thou the archers, Be thine the quidon.

Be thine the guidon.

Be thine the guidon. Four Prentices of L., O. Pl., vi, $39.

The king of England's self, and his renowned son,
Under his guydon marcht, as private soldiers there.

Drayl. Polyole, xviii, p. 1007.

Again:

Leading six thousand horse, let his brave guydon fly.

1bid., p. 1010.

It is originally a French term, and defined by Cotgrave, "a standard, ensigne, or banner"-" also he that bears it.

Dearts It.

And upon an edict or proclamation made, that the morning next following they should all meet in the open plaine field, the prince beeing come forth with greater port and pompe than usually, mounted up to the tribunall, environed about with ensignes, as well the maine eagle standards, as banners and graidors, as also guarded with whole squadrons of armed colorts.

Hallowitz, deminings, Maccellings 1809.

as also guarued with whole squadrons of armed conorts.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1809.

†The residewe of the common people could neyther see Perkyn nor yet the standards nor guydekomes of their capteynes.

Hall, Henry VII, fol. 47.

GUIDRESSE. A female guide; made, by analogy of derivation, as from guider.

Fortune herselfe the guidresse of all worldly chances. Chaloner's Moriæ Encom., P 4.

To GUIE, for to guide.

GUIE, for to guice.

Eight hundred horse, from Champain come, he guice.

Fairf. Tasso, 1, 49.

And with this band late herds and flocks that gui'd,

Now kings and realms he threaten'd and defy d.

1bid., 63.

A writhen staff his steps unstable guies, Which serv'd his feeble members to uphold +GUILT-PLATS. Plots of gold.

Up with the day, the sun thou welcomst then,
Sportat in the guilt-plats of his beames,
And all these merry dayes mak'st merry men,
Thy selfe, and melancholy streames.

Lovelace's Lucasta, 1649.

GUINEA-HEN. A cant term for a prostitute.

Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-ken, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Othello, i. S. Iago applies this term to Desdemona, to make Roderigo think lightly of his passion.

Yonder's the cock o' the game About to tread you guinea-hen, they're billing.

Albertus Wallenstein, 1640.

UINEVER, properly GENEVRA. Queen to king Arthur. Of her gal-GUINEVER. lantries the old ballads and metrical romances exhibit rather a scandalous chronicle. See Percy's Reliques. iii. 340. Hence her name was made proverbial among our old dramatists.

So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench.

Love's L. L., iv, 1. wench.

Here's a Paris supports that Helen; there's a lady

Guinever bears up that sir Launcelot.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 20.

See also O. Pl., ix, 87.

Her declared lover was sir Launcelot of the Lake, of whose amours with her, the following account is borrowed from Mr. Dunlop's History of Fiction, where it is drawn, rather more at large, from the romance of Lancelot du Lac:

du Lac:

The history of Arthur receives a singular colouring from the amours of his queen with Lancelot. On his first appearance, he makes a strong impression on the heart of Genera. It is for her sake that the young knight lays whole cargoes of tributary crowns at the feet of her husband.—In compliment to Genera he attacks and defeats king Gallehaut, who becomes his chief confidant, and brings about the first stolen interview between his friend and Genera. When Arthur, deceived by the artifices of a woman, who insisted that she was the real Genera, repudiates his queen, leaving her at liberty to indulge without restraint her passion for Lancelot, the knight is not satisfied; he deems it necessary for the dignty is not satisfied; he deems it necessary for the dignity of his mistress, that she should be restored to the of his mistress, that she should be restored to the throne of Britain; and that, protected in her reputation by the sword of her lover, she ahould pass her life in reputable adultery. Hence a great number of his exploits are single combats, undertaken in defence of the innocence of his mistress, in which his success is usually greater than he deserved from the justice of his cause.

Vol. i, p. 237.

At length the intrigue is discovered by the fairy Morgain (or Morgana), the sister of Arthur; but, after the death of the king, "Genevra, as if she thought pleasure only gratifying while criminal, withdraws to a convent."

GUINQUENNIUM, properly quinquennium. The space of five years. Whether the gipsy was intended to corrupt this Latin word, or the printers played the gipsy, is uncertain; the meaning is clear, and Mr. Gifford has printed it quinquennium: but Whalley hesitated.

394

Though for seven years together he was very carefully carried at his mother's back—yet looks he as if he never saw his guinquensium.

B. Jons. Gipnics Metamorph., 1st Part,

GULCH. s. A glutton; and, to GULCH. v., to swallow greedily; words made from each other, but in what order is not so clear. See Todd, who quotes the verb from Turbervile. Skinner has gulchin, which he considers as gulekin, parvus gulo. But the word seems rather intensive than diminutive, and is applied to very fat persons. The coarseness of the sound was, I fancy, intended to mark the coarseness of the person so designated. Coles Latinizes it by ventricosus. Sherwood renders it in French by galaffre, glutton, and similar words; among others, by ventre à la poulaine, which Cotgrave explains by "a gulching, or huge bellie; a bellie as big as a tunne."

Come, we must have you turn fidler again, slave; get a base violin at your back, and march in a tawney coat, with one sleeve, to goose fair; then you'll know us, you'll see us then, you will, gulch, you will.

B. Jons. Poetaster, iii, 4.

Mr. Gifford prints it "base viol," which is probably right, but is not in the old copies.

You muddy guick, dar'st look me in the face, While mine eyes sparkle with revengeful fire? Lingua, O. Pl., v, 232.

Said to Crapula, who is just after called, "fat bawson." The passage is there erroneously printed as prose. GULES. The heraldic term for the colour red; from the French gueules, which word is itself derived from the barbarous Latin, gulæ, signifying furs dyed red, and worn as ornaments of dress. "Horreant et murium rubricatas pelliculas, quas gulas vocant, manibus circumdare sacratis." S. Bern. Epist., 42, c. 2. So also the Annal. Benedict., p. 460: "Delicatioris etiam vestitûs nulla canonicis cura, ita ut gulas, quibus nunc ardet clerus, penitus nescirent." See Du Cange, Gloss., in Gula. Shakespeare has once used it for red, as if a common term:

Follow thy drum,
With man's blood paint the ground; gules, gules.
Timon of A, iv, 3.
So also Beaumont and Fletcher:
Let's march to rest, and set in gules, like suns.

In another passage, however, Shake-speare marks its relation to heraldry: Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now he is total gules.

Haml, ii, 2.

To GULE. An awkward verb, made from the above.

Old Herube's reverend locks

Be gul'd in slaughter. Heyw. Iron Age, Part 3.

GULF, for the stomach or paunch. In this sense, possibly formed from gulp.
Witches' mummy; maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt sea shark. Mach., iv, l.
In the following it clearly means inside or belly:

I'de have some round preferment, corpulent dignity, That bears some breadth and compasse in the guift on't. Middl. Game at Chesse, act iii, sign. E.3, k.

AGULL. A dupe, or fool; from to gull, which is thought to be derived from guiller, old French. To gull is not so much disused as the substantive; and even that can hardly be termed obsolete.

When sharpers were considered as bird-catchers, a gull was their proper prey. See D'Israeli's Curios. of Lit., vol. iii, p. 84.

prey. Sec. Lit., vol. iii, p. 84.
Yon gull Malvolio is turnod heathen, a very renegate.
Treet. Night, ii, 2.
What would you do, you peremptory gull?
B. Jons. corry Man in his H., i, 2.

B. Jons. every Men in his H., i, 1. A double allusion is introduced in the next passage to the bird called a gull, and to the sense here given:

and to the sense here given:
For I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing.
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix.
Timon of A., ii, l.
In the dramatis personne to the play of Every Man in his Humour, master Stephen is styled a country gull, and master Matthew the town gull, which is equivalent to the dupe of each place.

Also for a cheat or imposition:
I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it.
But a gull is most completely defined by J. D. (supposed to be Sir John Davies), in an epigram on the subject, about 1598:

Of a Gull.

Oft in my laughing rimes I name a gull, But this new terms will many questions breede; Therefore at first I will expresse at full, Who is a true and perfect gull indeed.

A gull is he, who feares a velvet gowne,
And when a wench is brave, cares not speake to her;

her;
A gull is he which traverseth the towne,
And is for marriage knowne a common wooer.
A gull is he, who while he proudly weares
A sulver-hilted rapier by his side,
Indures the lyes and knockes about the eares,
While in his sheath his sleeping sword doth bide.
A gull is he which weares good hansome cloathes,
And stands in presence stroaking up his hayre;
And filles up his unperfect speech with oathes,
But speakes not one wise word throughout the yeare.

But to define a gull in termes precise,

A gull is he which seemes and is not wise.

Oxid's El. by C. M. and Epig. by J. D., also Censura Liter., viii, 123.

This is exactly what the French term un fat; a fellow assuming to be something, without sense to support him.

+To GULL. Explained as formed from Lat. gula, and meaning to swallow.

This brave flood, that strengthens and adorns Your city with his silver gulfs, to whom so many bulls lour zeal hath offer'd, which blind zeal his sacred current aulls.

With casting chariots and horse quick to his pray'dfor aid.

Shall nothing profit. Chapm. Il., xxi, 130. Perhaps in the following passage it means to give the colour of gules to.

Achilles durst not looke on Hector when He guld his silver armes in Greekish bloud; Homer that lov'd him more then other men, Gave him such hart, that he gainst Hector stood. Heywood's Trois Britanics, 1609.

+GULLERY. Cheating; swindling.

Neverthelesse, whosoever will but looke into the lying legend of golden gullery, there they shall finde that the poore seduced ignorant Romanists doe imitate all the idolatrous fornication of the heathen pagans and infidels.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. Lis. Upon you both, so, so, so, so, how greedily their inventions like bugies follow the sent of their owne gullery, yet these are no fooles, God forbid, not they.

Ite of Gulls, 1633.

Lit. What more gulleries yet? they have cosenu mue of my daughters, I hope they will cheate me of my wife too: have you any more of these tricks to shew, ha?

Marmyon's Fine Companion, 1633.

+GULLET. A gutter; a sink. As for example, in old time at the streits or guilet Caudine, when the Roman legions were in Samnium put to the yoke.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+GULL-FINCH. A person easily deceived.

Pooles past and present and to come, they say, To thee in generall must all give way;
Apulcius asse, nor Mida's lolling eares,
No feliowship with thee (brave corist) beares.
For 'tis concluded 'mongst the wizards all, To make thee master of Gul-finches hall.

¿Taylor's Workes, 1630. A person, gene-+GULL-GROPER. rally an old usurer, who lent money to a gallant at an ordinary who had been unfortunate in play. Dekker devotes a chapter to this character in his Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1620. According to him, "the gul-groper is commonly an old mony-monger, who having travaild through all the follyes of the world in his youth, knowes them well, and shunnes them in his age, his whole felicitie being to fill his bags with golde and silver.

GULLIGUT, a burlesque word. devourer, one of capacious paunch. More serious derivations have been given; but is it not, probably, from gully; to mark a person whose maw was like a sink, or gully, into which all sorts of things went down? Coles evidently thought so, for he writes it, "gullygut;" and Burton says much to this purpose, "An insatiable paunch is a pernicious sink." Anat. Mel .. p. 72.

Nothing behinde in number with the invincible Spanish armada, though they were not such Gargantuan boysterous guiligate as they.

Nath's Lesten St., Harl. Misc., vi, 149.

+GULLOWING. Greedy.

O thou devouring and gullowing paunch of a glutton.

Terence, MS. trans., 1619.

GUM-GOLS. A compound of gum and golls. I suppose clammy hands.

Do the lords bow, and the regarded scarlets
Kiss the gum-gols, and cry, We are your servants?

B. 4. Fl. Philaster, v, 4.

GUMM'D VELVET. Velvet and taffeta were sometimes stiffened with gum. to make them sit better; but the consequence was, that the stuff, being thus hardened, quickly rubbed and fretted itself out.

I have remov'd Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gumm'd velvet. 1 Hen. II, ii, 2.
1'll come among you, ye goatish blooded toderers, as gum into taffeta, to fret, to fret.

Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 17.

So of a young woman it is said, She's a dainty piece of stuff—smooth and soft as new satin; she was never gummed yet, boy, nor fretted.

B. J. Pl. Woman Hat., iv, 2.

+GUNDALOES. Gondolas. Pepys, in his Diary, 1661, mentions seeing two gundaloes on the Thames.

GUNSTONES. Balls of stone used in heavy artillery before the introduction of iron shot.

And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gunstones; and his soul Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance That shall fly with them.

That I could shoot mine eyes at him like gensions!

B. Jons. Volpone, v. 8. About seaven of the clocke marched forward the light peeces of ordnance, with stone and powder.

Holinsk., p. 947.

GURMOND. A glutton; from the French, gourmand.

And surely, let Seneca say what hee please, it might very well be that his famous gurmond [Apicius] turned his course unto this country.

Heald's Disc. of New. W., B. i, ch. 5.

The word occurs often afterwards.

GURNET, or GURNARD. A fish of the piper kind, of which there are several species: the gray, the red, the streaked, &c.; all, as well as the piper itself, comprised under the genus trigla of Linnæus. It was probably thought a very bad and vulgar dish when soused, or pickled; hence, sous'd gurnet was a common term of reproach.

reproach.

If I be not asham'd of my soldiers, I am a sous'd gurnet.

Thou shalt sit at the upper end, punk |--punk | you sous'd gurnet!

Out, you sous'd gurnet, you wool-fist! begone, I say,
and bid the players dispatch, and come quickly.

Wity Beguiled, Prol., Origin of Dr., iii, 394.

To GUST. To taste: seldom used:

from gust, subst.
Sicilia is a—so-forth. 'Tis far gone
When I shall gust it last. Winter's T., i, 2.

†GUSTFULL. Tasteful; pleasant.
We find that a stumble makes one take firmer footing, and the base suds which vice useth to leave behind it makes vertue afterward far more gustfull; no know-ledg is like that of contraries. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

"Guttlings, bellie gods, +GUTLING. gulones." Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 291.

+GUT-PUDDING. A sausage.

Farcimen. Varro. Intestinum concisa minutim carne similive fartura oppletum. &AAAs. Boudin, saucisse, ou andouille. A gut pudding. Nomenclator.

+GUT-VEXER. A fiddler.

Peace, variets, scoundrels! Get out of my sight, you unlucky gut-vexers. The Wizard, a Play, 1640, MS.

To GYBE, for to GIBE, q.v.; so also the substantive. Both are erroneously so spelt sometimes, in the modern editions of Shakespeare; hence, in Fluellin's Welch pronunciation, gypes.

He was full of jests, and gypes, and knaveries, and mocks.

Hen. V, iv, 7. Hen. V, iv, 7.

GYMMAL. See GIMMAL.

GYRE. A circle; from gyrus, Latin. A word at present very little, if at all, in use; formerly very common. It is found in the writings of Dryden.

In gambols and lascivious gyres Their time they still bestow.

Drayt. Muses' Elys., p. 1447.

And then down stooping with an hundred gires, His feet he fixed on mount Cephalon. Lingula, O. PL, v, 140.

When there might be giv'n

All earth to matter, with the gyre of heav'n.

Browns's Brit. Past., ii, 4, p. 127.

To GYRE. To turn round; from the substantive.

Which from their proper orbs not go,

396

Which from their proper cross not go,
Whether they gyre swift or slow.

Drayt. Ecl., 2, p. 1390. GYVES, or GIVES. Fetters. A word little used, but hardly obsolete, at least in poetry.

If you will take upon you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyres. Meas, for Meas, 17, 2 Lay chain'd in gires, fuat fetter'd in his bolts.

Tancred and Gismunda, O. Pl., ii, 213.

It occurs very often in the Two Noble Kinsmen, and is there always gives.

To GYVE. To fetter; from the noun. I will gype thee in thine own courtship.

H.

+HA. Often used as an abbreviation of have, and sometimes printed ha'.

And I may have my will, ile neither ha poore scholler nor souldier about the court. Day's Ile of Gulls, 1633. Wid. For me, sister! ha' you found out a wife to me? ha' you? pray speak, ha' you?

Brome's Northern Lan.

HABBE OR NABBE. Have or have not. hit or miss, at a venture; quasi, have or n'ave, i. e., have not; as nill for will not.

The citizens in their rage imagining that every post in the churche had bin one of their souldyers, shot habbe or nabbe, at random.

Holinshod, Hist. of Ireland, F 2, col. 2.

Hab-nab is the same, which Blount and Skinner derive rightly from the Saxon habban to have, and nabban, not to have; as, 'Tis hab-nab whether he will gain his point or not. Glossogr.

With that he circles draws and squares, With cyphers, satral characters, Then looks 'em o'er to understand 'em, Although set down kab-nab, at random. Hudibr., II, iii, 987.

I put it

I put it

Ev'n to your worship's bitterment, hab nab;
I shall have a chance o' the dice for't I hope,
Let them e'en run.

B. Jons. Tale of a Thei iv, I.
As they came in by hab, nab, so will I bring them in a reckoning at six and at sevens.

Heywood, cited by Todd. Hob or nob, now only used convivially to ask a person whether he will have a glass of wine or not, is most evidently a corruption of this; in proof of which Shakespeare has used it to mark an alternative of another kind: And his inconsement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulcher; hob, nob is his word; give't or take't.

Tweelf. N., iii. 4.

The derivation which Dr. Johnson has adopted, of hap ne hap, is mentioned by Skinner, but is inferior to the But nothing can be more ridiculous than the derivation which Grose offered, and another author adopted, from the hob of the chimney, &c. Mr. Todd has given these explanations under Hab-nab, and Hobnob; but there is no doubt that originally they were distinct words, with or between them. Ray has erroneously mentioned hab-nab among arbitrary or rhyming reduplications. Prov., p. 272, 3d ed.

+HABERDASH. Pedlar's merchandise.

They turne out ther trashe, And shew ther haberdashe.

Used also as a verb, to deal or traffic. What mean dull souls, in this high measure To haberdash

In earth's base wares, whose greatest treasure
Is dross and trash.

Quarles's Emblems. HABERDINE. That kind of cod which is usually salted. Habordéan. French.

And warn him not to cast his wanton eyne
On grosser bacon, and sait kaberdine.
Hall's Satires, IV, iv, p. 68.
†His dayntie fare is turned to a hungry feast of dogs and cats, or kaberdine and poore John, at the most.
Nash, Piercs Penilesse, 1892.

HABERGEON, or HAUBERGON. breast-plate of mail, or of close steel. Haubergeon, French, from the German, hals, the neck, and bergen, to cover; whence the low Latin halsberga, &c. See Du Cange.

Soit stands in the fourth edition (1749), and probably in the first. The second (1624) has it, "And halbert some," as quoted by Johnson, which spoils the sense, for And is not wanted; and certainly the men could not donn, or put on halberts, for defensive armour, which was the matter in question. Beckwith, in his edition of Blount's Tenures, seems to confound this with the hacqueton. See p. 92.

+HABILIMENTED. Dressed.

I there a chimney-sweepers wife have seene, Habilimented like the diamond queene. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

+HABITUAL. Hanal.

Care. Nay by this hand, 'tis given out, that you are great schollers, and are skild in all the kabitwall arts, and know their coherences, and that you are a kind of astrologers, observers of times and seasons, and for making of matches, beyond all the gallants in the kingdome.

Marmyon, Fine Companion, 1635.

HABLE, and HABILITY. So Spenser writes able and ability; as from habile, French. See F. Q., I, xi, 19, and VI. iii. 7.

To HACK. To cut or chop. The appropriate term for chopping off the spurs of a knight, when he was to be degraded. Nothing else can be made of it in the following puzzling speech:
What—sir Alice Ford! these knights will hack, and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentility.

Merr. W. W., i. S.
One lady had said she might be knighted, alluding to her offered connection with Falstaff; the other, not yet knowing her meaning, says, "What, a female knight!—These knights will degrade such unqualified pretenders." This was the sense put to it by Capell and Johnson. The other conjectures, though from great men too, seem very forced and improbable.

HACKIN. A large sort of sauvage, being a part of the cheer provided for Christmas festivities; from to hack, or chop; hackstock being still a chopping block. in the Scottish dialect. See Jamieson. The hackin must be boiled by day break, or else two young men must take the maiden by the arms, and run her round the market place.

Aubrey MSS.

+HACKNEY-COACHES, are said to have first come into use at the beginning of the reign of Charles I.

ning of the reign of Charles I.

Our historiographers of the city of London relate, that it was in this same year 1626 that any hackney coaches first began to ply in London streets (or rather at first stood ready at the inns, to be called for as they were wanted); and they were at this time only twenty in number. They in ten years time were increased so much in number that king Charles (anno 1635) thought it worth his while to issue an order of council for restraining the said increase.

Anderson's Origin of Commerce ii on Anderson's Origin of Commerce, ii, 20.

HACKNEY-MAN'S WAND. Probably a rider's switch. A hackney-man is explained by Minshew, "one who letteth horses to hire."

First, to spread your circle upon the ground, with little conjuring cremony (as I'll have an Aschnyman's scand silver'd o'er o' purpose for you).

Puricas, iii, 6, Suppl. to 8h., ii, 594.

To the noble company of cordwainers, the worshipfull company of sadlers and woodmongers; to the worthy, honest and laudable company of watermen; and to the sacred societie of hackney-men; and finally, to as many as are grieved and unjustly impoverished, and molested with the worlds running on wheeles.___

molested with the worlds running on wheeles.

Taylor's Workes.

The world runs on wheeles. The kackney-men, who were wont to have furnished travellers in all places, with fitting and serviceable horses for any journey, (by the multitude of coaches) are undone by the dozens, and the whole common-wealth most abominadozens, and the whole common-wealth most abomina-bly jaded, that in many places a man had as good to ride upon a woodden post, as to poast it upon one of those hunger-stary'd hirelings; which enormity can be imputed to nothing, but the coaches intrusion, is the hackneymans confusion.

Ibid.

HACKSTER. See HAXTER.

†HACKSTER. A swaggerer; a ruffian.

Abbras, the name of a terrible gyant in the old romants; whence, Cs fier Abbras; this kill-cow, skar-crow, bugbeare, swashbuckler, horrible hackster. Cotarane.

HACQUETON. A stuffed jacket without sleeves, made of cloth or leather. and worn between the shirt and the armour. See Church's note on the following passage of Spenser: in which, however, it seems to mean armour, or some part of it.

Which heving quite as under, further way
It made, and on his hacqueton did light,
The which dividing with importune sway
It seiz'd in his right side, and there the dint did stay.
F. Q. II, viii, 38.

Chaucer describes these things exactly in their order. The knight puts on first a shirt:

And next his shirt an haketon. And ovir than an habergeon,
For percing of his herte.
And ovir that a fine hauberke, Was all iwrought of Jewes werke, Full strong it was of plate. And ovir that his cote armoure.

Rime of Sir Thopas, v. 13790, ed. Tyrwh. If the hauberk had not been of strong plate, it could not have supported the "Jewes werke" wrought in it. suspect Jewes werke to mean jewellery, as the Jews were dealers in all rich things. Mr. Tyrwhitt has a different conjecture. See his note.

HAD-I-WIST, that is, Had I known. A common exclamation of those who repented of anything unadvisedly un-"Had-I-wist it would dertaken. have turned out so!"

And cause him, when he had his purpose mist, To crie with late repentance, Had-I-wist.

Harr. Ariosto, ix, 85.
Most miserable man! whom wicked fate

Most miserable man! whom wicked fate
Hath brought to court, to sue for had-y-wist.

Spens. Moth. Hub. Tale, v. 893.
But, out alas, I wretch too late did sorrowe my amys, Unless lord Promos graunt me grace, in vayne is had-y-wist. Promos f Cassandra, act ii, sc. 2.

Sometimes used much like a substantive, in the sense of repentance: His pallid feares, his sorrows, his affrightings, His late-wisht had-I-wists, remorcefull bitings. Browns, Brit. Past., 1, ii, p. 57. For when they shift to sit in hautie throse, With hope to rule the sceptre as they list, Ther's no regard nor feare of had-I-wist. Mirr. for Magist., Fitellius, p. 160. In the Paradise of Dayntie Devises, is a poem, entitled, "Beware of kad-Iwyst." It begins, wyst.' It begins,

Beware of had-larget, whose fine bringes care and smart.

†Knowledge preventeth a mischiefe before it come, when had-wais sees it not, till it is past and gone, puts on the helmet after the head is broken, and shut
the stable doors when the steed is stolne.

Bick Cabinet furnished with Varietie of Recellent Discriptions, 1616.

†List lordings, list (if you have lust to list), I write not here a tale of had-I-wist; But you shall heare of travels, and relation Descriptions of strange (yet English) fashions.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

†On Walter Moon.

TUN Watter moon.

Here lyes Wat Moon, that great tobaccouist,
Who dy'd too soon for lack of had-I-wist.

Witts Recreations, 1654.

HADE. Apparently a high pasture. I see no probable origin for it but the Saxon had, or head.

And on the lower leas, as on the higher kades,
The dainty clover grows, of grass the only silk.

Drayt. Pol., xiii, p. 934.

+To HAFT. To put off.

With these pernitions words iterated continually unto him, he grew enkindled, and without any farther hafting or holding off, delivered up all that was demaunded. Holdand's Ammianus Marcellinus, 160.

HAGGARD. A hawk not manned, or trained to obedience: a wild hawk. Hagard, French.

If I do prove her kaggard,— —I'd whistle her off. Othello, iii, $.

I know her spirits are as coy and wild

As kaggards of the rock. Much Ado, iii, 1. Much of the knowledge of falconry is comprised in the following allegory: My faulcon now is sharp, and passing empty.

And 'till she stoop she must not be fall-gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.

Another way I have to man my *Leggerd,
To make her come, and know her keeper's call;
That is, to watch her, as we watch those kites That is, to watch her, as we watch those kives
That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient.
Slie eat no meat to-day, nor more shall eat;
Last night she slept not, and to-night she shall not.
Tam. Skr., iv. 1. What, have you not brought this young wild haggard to the lure yet? City Night-cap, O. Pl., xi, 327.

HAGS. Haws or brambles.

This said, he led me over holts and kags,
Through thorns and bushes scant my legs I drew.
Fairf. Tasso, viii, 41.

+HAIGHT. The exclamation used to urge an animal forward.

Urge an animal forward.

A sillie frier came to a doctor of Toledo, and told him that hee thought he had incur'd irregularitie for saying to his asse by the way as he accompaned certains prisoners to execution: Haight, beast, and on a God's name; supposing that by reason thereof he had so much the sooner brought the poore prisoners to their ends. To whume the doctor answered: In reparation of that irregularitie, you must seeke out the said use againe, and as often as you saide then unto him height beast, or on a God's name, so often say unto him now, Hoe, beast, faire and softly, a God's name.

Copley's Wits, Fits, and Fancies, 1814

JIAIL-FELLOW. An expression of intimacy. To be hail-fellow with any one. to be on such a footing as to greet him with hail-fellow at meeting. Still used occasionally, though not in serious writing.

Now man, that erst haile-fellow was with beast,
Woxe on to weene himselfe a god at least.

Hall's Satires, III, i, p. 40.

In the following passage, hail appears corrupted into hay.

†Putting't on's trencher, to't doth fall. truting't on's trencher, to't doth fall, Say'ng: now I hope I've pleas'd you all. The cookes too, having done, were set At table hay fellow well met; The meanest scullion had like cheere With the sufficient'st man sate there.

Homer a la Mode, 1665. +To HAILSE. To greet, to embrace. And therewith I turned me to Raphaell, and when we hadde kayleeds thone thother and hadde spoken thies comen wordes, that he customably spoken.

More's Utopia, 1551.

What we now call +HAIL-SHOT.

grape-shot.
When showring kaile-shot from the storming heav'n, Nor blustering gusts by Æols belching driven, Could hold me backe, then off I searcht and sought. And found, and unto you the purchase brought.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

HAIR. The grain, texture, or quality of anything. A metaphorical expression, derived, as it seems, from the qualities of furs.

The quality and keir of our attempt

Brooks no division.

1 Hes. IV. iv. 1. Drouds no division.

A lady of my hair cannot want pitying.

B. & Fl. Nice Falour, act i, p. 311.

†A fellow of your hairs is very fitt

To be a secretaries follower.

Play of Sir Thomas More. Hence, against the hair, is against the grain, or contrary to the nature of anything. See Ray's Proverbs, p. 194.

P. 194.
If you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions.
Mer. W. W., ii, 3.
He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair.
Tro. and Cress., i, 2.

Books in women's hands are as much against DOURS IN WOMEN S HANGS are as much against The keir, methinks, as to see men wear stomachers, Or night-railes. Mayor of Quinb., O. Pl., xi, 122. Notwithstanding, I will go against the hairs in all things, so I may please thee in anie thing.

Exph. 4 his Engl., A a 1.

From some vague notion, that abundance of hair denoted a lack of brains, arose an odd proverb, noticed by Ray, p. 180; thus, "Bush natural, more hair than wit." Shakespeare has an allusion to it:

Item, she hath more hair than wit. Two Gent., iii, 1. Now is the old proverb really performed, More hair than wit. See also Decker's Satiromastix, quoted by Steevens.

HAIR, DYED. It was customary, in the time of Shakespeare, &c., to dye the hair, in order to improve its colour.

If any have kairs of her owne natural growing, which is not faire ynough, then they will die it in divers collours.

Stubbs's Anatomic of Abuses.

Benedict therefore requires, as one of the perfections of his imaginary wife, that "her hair shall be of what colour it please God." Much Ado, ii, 3.

HAIR, FALSE. Much worn by ladies at the same period.

at the same periou.
So are those crisped, analy, golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,
The skull that bred them in the sepulchre.

Mer. of Ven., iii, 2,

Mer. of Ven., iii, 2.

Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head,
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.

Skakesp., Sonnet 68.

Nay more than this, they'll any thing endure,
And with large sums they stick not to procure
Hair from the dead, yea, and the most unclean;
To help their pride they nothing will disdain.

Drayt. Moone., vol. ii, p. 489.

There have seldom, I fancy, been times when this was not done, in cases of necessity; but, by the above and similar passages, it seems to have been at that time considered as a new practice.

HAIR OF A HORSE. It was a current notion formerly, that a horsehair dropped into corrupted water would soon become an animal.

A horse-hairs laid in a pale full of the like water, will A horse-hairs laid in a pair full of the like water, will in a short time stirre, and become a living creature.

Much is breeding,
Which, like the courses's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison.

Ant. & Cl., i, 2.

+HAIR-LACE. A band for the hair.

A haire-lace, fascia crinalis vel texta.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 217.

HAIRY CHILD. A female child was shown as a sight, about the beginning or middle of the seventeenth century, whose body was almost entirely covered with hair, which was pretended to be accounted for in the manner mentioned in the following passage: Tis thought the heiry child that's shewn about. Came by the mother's thinking on the picture Of St. John Baptist in his camel's coat.

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 940. We have here a curious list of sights:

The birds
Brought from Peru, the Asiry weach, the camel,
The elephant, dromedaries, or Windsor castle,
The woman with dead fiesh, or she that washes,
Threads needles, dresses her children, plays O' th' virginals with her feet

City Match, O. Pl., iz, 817.

HALCYON, or KING'S FISHER. It! was a currently received opinion, that the body of this bird, hung up so as to move freely, would always turn its breast to the wind. Brown thus opens his chapter upon the subject:

That a kings-fisher hanged by the bill sheweth in what quarter the wind is, by an occult and secret propriety, converting the brest to that point of the horizon from whence the wind doth blow, is a received opinion and very strange; introducing natural weathercocks, and extending magnetical positions as far as animal natures. A conceit supported chiefly by present practice, yet not made out by reason or experience.

Valg. Err., III, x.

He then proceeds to reason against it, and to show that it failed entirely in his experiments; yet, in the conclusion, he expresses a doubt whether the fault might not be in the mode of suspension:

Hauging it by the bill, whereas we should do it by the back, that by the bill it might point out the quarters of the wind. For so hut Kircherus de-scribed the orbis and the sea swallow.

This is certainly the method pointed out in some of the subsequent quotations; but we may venture to affirm, that one method would be no more successful than the other, unless it were so contrived that the bill. or tail, should act mechanically as the vane; whereas they were hung in rooms, not actually exposed to the

Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With ev'ry gale and vary of their masters. Lear, ii, 2.
But how now stands the wind? But how now stands the wind?
Into what corner peers my haleyon's bill?
Ha! to the east? Yes: see how stand the vanes!
East and by south. Jeo of Halta, O. Pl., viif, 307.
Or as a haleyon, with her turning brest,
Demonstrates wind from wind, and east from west.
Storer's Poom on the Life, F.c., of Cardinal Wolsey, 1599, cited by Mr. Steevens.

HALE, s. Health, safety. Hæl, Saxon. Eftsoones, all heedlesse of his dearest hale, Full greedily into the heard he thrust. Sp. Astrophel, ver. 103.

In the following passage hales seems to be put for horse-litter, or something of the sort:

And to avoyde the fixe, and suche dangerous dis-cases as doth many times chaunce to souldiours by reason of lying upon the ground and uncovered, and lykewyse to horses for lacke of hales.

Letter of I. B., 1572, in Cons. Lit., vii, 240.

+HALF. To the halves, one half.

Perturbations, that purge to the halves, tire nature, and molest the body to no purpose.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., part ii, sect. 2.

HALF-CAPS. Half bows, slight salutations with the cap.

And so, intending other serious matters, After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,

With certain helf-ceps, and cold morning nois,
They froze me into allence. Timos of A, ii, 2.
HALF-FACED. Showing only half the face, the rest being concealed.

Whose hopeful colours
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ—invitis nubibus. George Pyeboard? honest George? why cam'st thos in half-fac'd, muffled so?

Purilan, iii, 6, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 591. Said also of a face drawn in profile. Half-fac'd groats were those which had the king's face in profile; whereas the more valuable pieces generally represented the front face, till the reign of Henry VII.

reign of Henry vil.

Because he hath a half face, like my father,

With that half face would he have all my land:

A half-fac'd groat, five hundred pounds a year!

K. John, i.l.

In the first two of the above lines. half face contemptuously alludes to a thin, meagre face, half formed, as it were. In the following, the diminutiveness of the coin seems alone to be pointed out:

You half-fac'd groat! you thick-cheek'd chitty-face! Rob. E. of Huntington, 160. Falstaff ridicules Shadow for his thin face, with the same contemptuous epithet:

This same half-faced fellow. Shadow—he presents at mark to the enemy; the foeman may, with as great aim, level at the edge of a pen-knife.

2 Hes. IV, iii, 1.

I am inclined to think, that no more than a contemptuous idea of something imperfect is meant by half-faced, in the famous rant of Hotspur:

But out upon this half-faced fellowship!
1 Hen. IV, i. 3. It has been supposed to allude to the half-facing of a dress; but that seems too minute. Here also it means merely imperfect:

With all other odd ends of your half-faced English.

Nash's Apol. for P. Peniless HALF-KIRTLE. A common dress of courtesans; seems to have been a short-skirted loose-bodied gown; but not a bed-gown, though they might also be worn.

You filthy famish'd correctioner! if you be not swinged.
I'll forswear half-kirtles. 2 Hen. 17, v, & HALF-PENNY. "To have his hand on his half-penny," is a proverbial phrase for being attentive to the object of interest, or what is called the mainchance; but it is also used for being attentive to any particular object. It is quibbled on by Lyly, who seems to have introduced a boy called Halfepenie for that ingenious purpose:

Ri. Dromio, looke heere, now is my hand on my halfe-peny. Half. Thou liest, thou hast not a farthing to lay thy hands on. I am none of thine.

Mother Bombie, ii. 1. But the blinde [deafe] man, having his hand on another half-penny, said, What is that you say, sir? Hath the clocke strucken?

Notes on Du Bartas, To the Reader, 2d page.

HALFENDEALE. One half: said to be a Chauccrian word.

That now the humid night was farforth spent,
And hevenly lamps were halfendeale ybrent.

Spens. F. Q., 111, ix, 53.

+HALF-PIKE. A particular exercise with the pike.

Jer. Well, ile trie one course with thee at the halfe pike, and then goe,—come draw thy pike.

Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

HALIDOM. Holiness, faith, sanctity. Haligdome, Saxon. Holy, with the termination dome : as kingdom, Christendom, &c. Holy dame is not the true origin.

B Origin.

By my hallidom, I was fast asleep.

Two Gent. of Fer., iv, 2.

Now, on my faith and holy-dom, we are Beholden to your worship.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 6.

Now sure, and by my hallidome, quoth he,
Ye a great master are in your degree.

Spens. M. Hub., 545.

+HALKARD. A person of low degree. A halkard or of low degree, proletarius.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 268.

A HALL, A HALL. An exclamation commonly used to make room in a crowd, for any particular purpose, as we now say a ring, a ring

Come, musicians, play.

A hall | a hall | give room, and foot it, girls. Rom. & Jul., i, 5.

And help with your call For a hall! a hall! Stand up to the wall, Both good men and tall.

B. Jons. Masque of Gipsics Metam., vi, 110, Whalley.
Then cry a hall! a hall!
Tis merry in Tottenham-hall when beards wag all.

Ibid., Tale of a Tub, v, 9. ome for the spheres, the orbs celestiall

Marshall! as kall there! Pray you, sir, make roome For us poor knights who in the fag-end come. Parthenia's Passions, in Brathwaite'. iia's Passions, in Brathwaite's Honest Ghost, p. 293.

It seems also to have been used to call people together to attend a spectacle, or ceremony. Thus, in the Widow's Tears, Argus comes in, and cries a hall ! a hall ! in order to call the servants together, when there is only one person besides himself on the

A hall! a hall! who's without, there? [Enter two or three with cushions.] Come on; y'are proper grooms, are ye not? slight, I think y'are all bridegrooms, ye take your pleasures so; a company of dormice. The honours are upon coming, and the room not ready.

O. Pl., vi, 185.

401

A hall | a hall | let all the deadly sins

Come in, and here accuse me. Herod. & Antip.

†HALL-DAY. A court day. An hall day: a court day: a day of pleading, as in terme time at Westminster hall, &c. Nomenclator, 1585.

HALLOWMAS. The mass or feastday of All-hallows, that is All Saints. Shakespeare alludes to a custom relative to this day, some traces of which are said to be still preserved in Staffordshire: where, on All Saints' day, the poor people go from parish to parish a souling, as they call it, that is, begging, in a certain lamentable tone. for a kind of cakes called soul-cakes, and singing a song which they call the souler's song. Several of these terms clearly point out the condition of this benevolence, which was, that the beggars should pray for the souls of the giver's departed friends, on the ensuing day, Nov. 2, which was the feast of All Souls.

Tenset Of Att. Soutes.

To watch like one that fears robbing; to speak pulling, like a beggar at Hallon-mas. Two Gent. of V., ii, 1. My wife to France; from whence, set forth in pomp, She cume adorned hither, like aweet May, Sent back like Hallon-mas, or about'at of day.

Rick. II, v, 1.

I am convinced that I have seen hallows, for saints, separately used, but have not marked the reference.

HALSE. Neck; a Saxon word, which seems to have remained longer in use in the phrase of hanging by the halse, than in any other. It occurs in Chaucer. Cant. Tales, 4493 and 10253, and a verb made from it, to halse, to embrace, is used by him and Gavin Douglas, in the glossary to whose Virgil it is explained.

A theevisher knave is not on live, more filching no more false,

Many a truer man than he hase hanged up by the halse. Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii, 64. Hence, probably, halter, for halster, as being applied to the neck.

To HALSE, or HAULSE. To embrace, or hang on the neck, is used by Spenser also:

Denser also: Instead of strokes, each other kissed glad And lovely Laulst*, from feare of treason free. P. Q., IV, fii, 49.

†C. What say you?

See also to ENHALSE, for to clasp round the neck.

+HALSIER. A barge-drawer.

A LIGITUM. A DURGE-UTAWET.

Heleiarius, Mart, qui navim adverso amme trahit fune ducturio. Qui tire un bateau. An halirer, or he which haleth and draweth a ship or barge alongst the river by a rope: also he that draweth up burthens and packes into the ship.

Nomenclator, 1585.

+HALTER-MEN. Hangmen.

But it is an ill wind that blows no man to good, for haller-men and ballet-makers were not better set aworke this many a day.

Concrited Letters Newly Layd Open, or A most excellent Bundle of New Wit, 4to, 1638.

HALTERSACK. A term of reproach, Minshew equivalent to hang-dog. writes it haltersick, and explains it, "One whom the gallows groans for." Coles has "One halter-sick, nebulo egregius." Holioke also has sick.

If he were my son, I would hang him up by the heels, and flea him, and salt him, whoreson kalter-sack!

B. and Fl. Kn. of Burning Pestle, i, p. 376.

Away, you kalter-sack, you.

Ibid., King and no K., act ii.

Thy beginning was knap-sack, and thy ending will be halter-sack.

Ibid., Four Plays in One, Pl. 1st. Here Mr. Seward also conjectured These conjectures may halter-sick. be right; but, from the incongruity of calling a person halter-sick, before the halter has approached him, I rather think that halter-sack meant. that the person so called was doomed to hang upon a halter, like a sack.

+HAMKIN. "A kind of pudding made upon the bones of a shoulder of mutton." Dunton's Ladies Dictionary.

+HANCED. Intoxicated (apparently). I sweare by these contents and all that is herein con-I sweare by these contents and all that is herein contained, that by the courteous favour of these gentlemen, I doe finde my selfe sufficiently hanced, and that henceforth I shall acknowledge it; and that whensever I shall offer to bee hanced againe, I shall arme my selfe with the craft of a fox, the manners of a hogge, the wisdome of an asse, mixt with the civility of a beare. This was the forme of the oath, which as neare as I can shall bee performed on my part; and here is to bee noted that the first word a nurse or a mother doth teach her children, if they bee mules, is drinke, or beere; so that most of them are transformed to harrels, firkings, and kinderking always fraight to barrels, firkings, and kinderkins, alwayes fraight with Hamburge beere. Taylor's Workes.

+HAND, was prefixed to names of animals in the sense of tame; as hand-wolf, i. e., a tame wolf.
Do not mock me;

Though I am tame, and bred up with my wrongs, Which are my foster-brothers, I may leap, Like a hand-rolf, into my natural wildness, And do an outrage.

B. and Fl. Maid's Tragedy.

HAND, AT ANY HAND. Phrase, for at any rate, at all events.

Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound:
All books of love; see that at any hand. Tam. of Shr., i. 2. Sometimes in any hand:

O, for the love of laughter, linder not the humour of his design; let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

All's well, fe, in t.

So also of all hands:

We cannot cross the cause why we were born, Therefore, of all hands, we must be forsworn. Lore's L. L., iv, 3.

Of his hands was a phrase equivalent to of his inches, or of his size: a hand being the measure of four inches. "As tall a man of his hands," &c., was a phrase used, most likely, for the sake of a jocular equivocation in the word tall, which meant either bold or high:

Ay, forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his heads in any is between this and his head; he hath fought with a warrener.

Merry W.W., i. And I'll swear to the prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but know thou art not all fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it: and I wall thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Winter's T, v, 3.

Ay, and he's a tall fellow, and a man of his hands, too Wily Beg., Origin of Drama, iii, 349. So I conceive it should be pointed. The explanations given in the note to the Winter's Tale seem to be erroneous +HAND. Out of hand, immediately, at once. Actuellement. Presently, quickly, speedily, out of head, without delay, or attendance for.

P. May be turne her away
D. Yes, out of hand.

Terence in English 1614

Quoth he, young villain, blush for shame,
Why do you silent stand?
What have you done to your step-dame?
Come, tell me out of hand.
The Pryar and the Boy, First Pat.
As soon as bold Bobin did him capy,
He thought the same sport he would make;
Therefore out of hand he bid him to stand,
And thus unto him he spake.

Ballad of Robin Hood and the Laure, hand the hand is to be in practice.

To have the hand in, to be in practise.

But I'le love on, Since I begun,

To th' purpose, now my hand is in. Cotgrave's Wits Interpreter, 1671, p. 107. Jo. Haines's Petition to King Charles the Seed at Windsor.

at Winstor.

From me poet Haines,
That when I was at Windsor,
My hand was then in, sir,
And I pleas'd then, with my fanciful brains, But my muse is grown so costive since then, sir.
That for want of good wine, I fear I shall never ples ou again, sir.

To hold hands together, to be united. Curtesie and charitie doe commonly hold hands tog-ther; for though an enemie have beene malicious, reby a curtous man hee shall be remitted upon the less submission. Rick Cabinet furnished with Varietie of Excellent Discriptions, 1616.

†HANDBINDERS. Fetters. Menotes, liens à lier les mains, fers à enferrer les mains. Maniels, or handbinders. +IIANDER.

A handle or loop? The word occurs twice.

One seeing a jugge without a kander, and willing to breake a jeast on it, said that the jugge had beene in the pillary.

Gratic Ludentes, 1638, p. 156.

HANDFAST. Hold, custody, confinement.

ment.
If that shepherd be not in kand-fast, let him fly.
Wint. T., iv, 3.

Connection, or union with:

Should leave the handfast that he had of grace.

To tall into a woman's ensy arms.

B. F. Wom. Hater, cited by Todd.

To HANDFAST. To betroth, to bind by vows of duty. For examples to this verb, and the kindred words, and full illustration of them, see Todd's edition of Johnson's Dictionary. Bale, Coverdale, Ben Jonson, archbishop Sancroft, and others, are there quoted. Etymology, handfæstan, Saxon.

HANDFUL. The measure of a hand. or four inches.

Here stalks me by a proud and spangled sir, That looks three handfuls higher than his foretop. B. Jons. Cynthia's Rev., iii, 4. I'll send me fellows of a handful high

I'll send me fellows of a sassiful mig.
Into the cloisters where the nuns frequent.

Merry Dev., O. Pl., v, 271.

That is, sprites.

They did gird themselves so high that the distance betwing their shoulders and their girdle seemed to be but a little handfull. Coryat, vol. i, p. 89. Used also for a span, which some estimate at nine inches, as in the height of Goliath:

Goliah, nam'd of Gath. The only champion that Philistia hath.
This huge Colossus, than six cubits height
More by a kandful.

Drayt. Dav. & Goliak, vol. iv, p. 1630. Viz., "Six cubits and a span." 1 Sum., xvii, 4.

+IIAND-GUN. A musket.

A remedy for burning, or scalding, or any hurt with an hand-guame. Pathway of Health, bl. l.

+HANDKERCHER. A handkerchief. Ha, his handkercher !

Thou'rt lib'ral to thy father even in death,
Leav'st him a legacie to dric his tears,
Which are too slow; they should create a deluge.
Chapman's Resenge for Honour, 1654.

†HANDSOMENESS. Good favour.

He will not look with any handsomeness Upon a woman. B. & Fl. Wit without Money, act i. A goodly woman,
And to her handsomeness she bears her state

Ibid.

Reserved and great. +HANDSTROKES. Blows given hand to hand in fighting.

Batailler, combattre, venir à la main, livrer la bataille. To encounter: to joyne battell: to be in akirmish: to To encounter: to joyne natten: to be in animan: to be at handstroke.

A band of ten soldiours under one captaine and tent, and are called manipulus, because the... handstrokes in fighting goe all together.

+HAND-TIMBER. Small wood.

Shear sheep at the moon's increase: fell hand-timber from the full to the change. Fell frith, copies, and from the run to the fuel at the first quarter.

Husbandman's Practice, 1664.

†IIANDWIIILE. A short interval.

Thou semste, quoth the spider, a costerde-monger; Conscience every handwhile thou doste cry. Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1856.

+HAND-WORM.

All the world is in comparison for greatnesse to the heavens, as a hand-norme or a nit may be compared to the world.

Taylor's Workes.

+HANDY-BLOWS. Engagement hand to hand.

The great number of our enemies froze me with fear, and great number of our ensuies froze me with fear, and made me, not without reason, to tremble in thinking what might be the successe of so unequal a combat, yet I was ashamed to go and hide my self, and though those enemies which could not come to kandy-blows, shot arrows at us with which I might have been lurt.

Hymen's Preiudia, 1668.

HANES. I presume, inns or caravansaries.

At their death, they usually give legacies for the release of prisoners, the freeing of bond-slaves, repairing of bridges, building of hance for the relief of travellers.

Sandys' True, p. 57. Perhaps a Turkish word.

+HANG LAG, i. e., let the one who remains behind be hanged.

Colig. Fly, gentlemen, fly! O, if you had seen That tall fellow how he thwacks fidlers, you would Fly with expedition; have ye a mind to have your fidles Broke about your pates?

Fidler. Not we! we thank ye.

Colig. Hang lug, hang lag. The Villain, 1663.

HANGBY. A hanger-on, a dependent. They do slander him. Hang them, a pair of railing hang-bies. B. and P. Honest Mair's Fort., iv. 2. Enter none but the ladies and their hangbyes; welcom beauties and your kind shadows.

beauties and your kind shadows.

B. Jons. Cynth. Rev., v, 3.

What are they [polite exercises] else but the varnish of that picture of gentry, whose substance consists in the lines and colours of true vertue; but the hangbyes of that royall court, which the soule keepes in a generous heart.

Hall, Quo vadis, p. 42.

HANGERS. The part of a sword-belt in which the weapon was suspended.

Sir, French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so; three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy.

Haml., v, 2.

Osrick, affecting fine speech, calls these hangers carriages; which Hamlet ridicules, and begs that, till cannon are worn by the side, they may not be called carriages, but hangers.

Thou shalt give my boy that girdle and hangers, when thou hast worn them a little more.

B. Jons. Poetaster, iii, 4.

You know my state; I sell no perspectives, Scarfs, gloves, nor hangers, nor put my trust in shoc-ties.

B. and Fl. Scornf. L., ii.

Bobadil uses it in the singular; and it appears there, and elsewhere, that they were fringed and ornamented with various colours:

I happened to enter into some discourse of a hanger, which, I assure you, both for fashion and workmanship, was the most peremptory beautiful and enti-man-like; yet he condemned and cried it down, for the most pied and ridiculous he ever saw.

Esery M. is kis H. i, 4. +HANGERS. Pot-hooks.

To hang as the pots doe uppon their kangers.

Withal' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 186. +HANGMAN. This word was used as a term of familiarity, and occurs in this sense in Shakespeare.

He hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bowstring, and the little hangman dure not shoot. M. A. about N., iii, S. How dost thou, Tom? and how doth Ned? quoth he; That honest, merry kangman, how doth he?

Heywood, 1st part of Ed. IV, v, 8.

K. A tie, or hold.
Therefore the Lord commands, I say.

Therefore the Lord commands, I say,
That you his ministers obey;
For if you side for love or money,
With crowns that have so oft undone ye,
The dev'l will get a hank upon ye.
Hudibras Redivieus, part vi, 1706
The other, by making use of some certain personal things, which may keep a hank upon such censuring persons, as cannot otherways, a gad, in nature, be hindred from being too free with their tongues.

The Rekarsal, 1672.

The Rehearsal, 1672.

Med. Let me alone, I have her on a hank-you must know there was a merchant in the city, that gave me two guineas a time fee, whom I cou'd have kept at least a fortnight longer, and she unknown to me, gave him some sage-posset drink, and the man recover'd in a day and half, but I threatn'd her with the college, for pretending to give physick, and brought her upon her knees—hark'e nurse.

HANS EN KELDER. A Dutch phrase, signifying literally Jack in the cellar, but jocularly used for an unborn iufant, and so adopted in English. Coles inserts it in his Latin Dictionary, "Hanse in kelder, infans in utero."

The original sinner in this kind was Dutch; Galliobe'gicus, the Protoplast; and the moderne Mercuries, but hans-en-kelders. The countesse of Zealand was brought to bed of an almanack; as many children as brought to obe of an amanana, as and dayes in the yeare.

Cleaveland's Character of a London Diurnall, 1647.

Next beg I to present my duty
To pregnant sister in prime beauty,
Whom [who] well I deem, (ere few months elder)
Will take out hans from pretty kelder.

Lovelace, p. 63, repr.

Lovelace, p. 63, repr. †The sun wears midnight; day is beetle-brow'd, And lightning is in kelder of a cloud.

Cleaveland's Works. +HANSE. The lintel or upper part of a door-frame.

Supercilium, Vitru. quod ipsis ostiorum untipagmentis sub ipso superliminari imponitur. ὁφοῦς. The kanse ot a doore.

Nomenclator, 1585.

+HANSEL. Properly, the first money received for the sale of goods, which was considered as fortunate or unfortunate to the seller, according to circumstances, whence the word was commonly used in a figurative sense.

With which wofull tidings being sore astonical, as if it were the first kansell and beginning of evils comming toward him.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. He joyous of these good kansels and overtures to conquest and victorie.

Being thus after a ridiculous manner lifted up to this degree, in disgrace (as it were) and morkerie of all honours, and by way of servile flatterie having made a speech unto the authors of this benefit and advancement of his, yea, and promised unto them great ricks and dignities for this kansell and first truits (as a were) of his empire.

The world is so hard that we find little trade, Although we have all things to please every maid; Come, pretty fair maids, then, and make no delay, But give me your kansel, and pack me away.

The Pedlar's Lamentation, an old ballal.

Fortune.

And to the encreasing of his good keps, he intercepted, &c. Anolles' Hist. of the Turks, 1610.

+To HAP. To clothe.

For whic shoulds he desyre moe? [i. e. garment] seing if he had them, he should not be better hep! or covered from colde, nother in his apparell any white the cumiver. covered from counce, More's Utopas, 1331.

Now whilst old hoary winter mounts the stage, Prepare yourselves i' th' combat to engage; Hap well your backs, and well your bellies all, Then drink part of a flask, and fear no ill.

Poor Robin, 174.

HAPPILY. Corruptly used for haply.

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which kappily foreknowing may avoid. Haml, i.l. The following has been given as an example, but is doubtful:

Prythre, good Griffith, tell me how he dy'd;
If well, he stepp'd before me kappily
For my example.

Hen. VIII, iv, 2.

But this is perfectly clear: But kappily that gentleman had business His face betrays my judgement, if he be Not much in progress.

Queen of Arragon, O. Pl., is, 440.

And this also:

Ah, foolish Christians I are you, kappilie, Those teeth which Cadmus did to curth co Panshaw's Lusied vil &

See Johnson, 4, Happily. HAPPY MAN BE HIS DOLE. See DOLE.

HARBINGER. A forerunner; an officer in the royal household, whose duty was to allot and mark the lodgings of all the king's attendants in a progress. From the word harborough, or harbergh, a lodging. Harbinger is still a common word in poetry. The practices of the old harbingers are here the subject of allusion:

If the to reason nor spare room for any.

Love's karbinger hath chalk'd upon my heart,

And with a coal writ on my brain, for Plavia,

This house is wholly taken up for Plavia.

Albamaz, O. Pl., vii. If.

It appears that this custom was still in force in Charles the Second's reign:

On the removal of the court to pass the summer at Winchester, bishop Ken's house, which he held in the right of his prebend, was marked by the Asringer for the use of Mrs. Eleanor Gwyn; but he refused in grant her admittance, and she was forced to seek for lodgings in another place. Hawkin's Life of By. Le.

HARBOROUGH. Harbour, station shelter. Hereberga, Saxon.

Ah pleasant karborough of my heart's thought! Ah sweet delight, the quick'ner of my soul! Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 22.

Leave me those hills where harbrough nis to see, Nor holly bush, nor brere, nor winding ditch. Spens. Shep. Kal., June, 19. Your honourable hulks have put into harborough; Your honourable hulks nave pur they'll take in fresh water here. Merry Dev., O. Pl., v, 258.

Also written herborough, which is nearer to the etymology:

Like the German lord, when he went out of Newgate into the cart, took order to have his arms set up in his last kerborough (i. e. the cart).

B. Jons. Discoveries, vol. vii. 76.

The place, or covert, +HARBOUR. where the hart or hind lay. The harbourer was an officer whose business it was to trace the stray hart to his covert in the forest.

+HARD HOLD, with. Stiffly.

Bataille ferme. A hot skirmish or battell, wherein both sides stand to it with hard hold. Nomenclator. †HARDHEADS.

If found many guests of dyvers factions, some outlaws of England, some of Scotland, some neighbours thereout at cards, some for ale, some for placks and hardhedds. Letter dated Jan. 12th, 1570.

HARDIMENT. Courage, or acts of courage.

He did confound the best part of an hour In changing hardiment with great Glendower.

1 Hen. IV, i, 3.

But, full of fire and greedy hardiment,
The youthful knight could not for ought be staid.

Spens. F. Q., I, i, 14.

IIARDYHED. Hardihood, hardiness.

Spenser. Only an antiquated form of the word.

A HARE was esteemed a melancholy animal, probably from her solitary sitting in her form. It was an inseparable consequence of that notion. in the fanciful physics of the time, that its flesh should be supposed to engender melancholy. It was not only in England that the hare had this character. La Fontaine says, in one of his Fables, Dans un profond ennui ce lievre se plongeoit, Cet animal est triste, et la crainte le ronge. Lav. ii, Fable 14.

Afterwards of the same hare, Le mélancolique animal

Prince Henry tells Falstaff that he is as melancholy as a hare. 1 Hen. IV,

Yes, and like your melancholy hare,
Feed after midnight. White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 302.
The melancholy hare is form'd in brukes and briers.
Drayt. Polyolb., Song ii p 690.
The eyght thinge is hare fleshe, which likewise engendreth melancholy bloudde, as Rasis sayeth in the place afore; alegate this flesh engendreth more arelancholy than any other, as Galen saythe.

Paynel's Reg. San. Salerai, p. 23.

This was not quite forgotten in Swift's time. In his Polite Conversation, lady Answerall, being asked to eat hare, replies, "No, madam, they say 'tis melancholy meat." Dialog. 2.

A hare crossing a person's way was supposed to disorder his senses. When a clown is giving himself very fantastical airs, it is said to him.

Why, Pompey, prithee let me speake to him!
I'll lay my lite some kars has cross d him.

B. J. Fl. Wit at sev. Weap., ii, p. 276.

But the strangest opinion about hares was, that they annually changed their sex, which yet was countenanced by respectable ancient authorities, and not denied by sir Thomas Brown with so much decision as might be expected. Fletcher has alluded to it. which for a poet was allowable:

Snakes that east your coats for new, Camelions that alter hue, Hares that yearly sexes change.

Paithf. Shep., iii, 1.

Butler has not overlooked it, for a comic allusion:

Men wives their sexes change like hares.

Hudibr., II, ii, v. 706. Brown handles the subject in his Vulgar Errors, III, 17.

The hare was vulgarly supposed to be so fearful that it never closed its eyes, even in sleep. Chapman has drawn from this notion a fine epithet in his Epicedium on the death of prince Henry:]

Relentless Rigor, and Confusion faint,
Frantic Distemper, and hare-eyed Unrest,
And short-breathed Thirst, with ever-burning breast. The bone of a hare's foot was considered to be a remedy against the

Will drive away the cramp whenas it doth wring.

Will drive away the cramp whenas it doth wring.

Withals Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 215.

To HARE. The same as to hurry, to harass, or scare.

HARASS, OF SCARC.
If the name of men or beasts, what do you do?

Hare the poor fellow out of his five wits

And seven acuses.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii, 3.

Then did the dogs run, and fight with one another at fair teeth, which should have the lardons; by this means they left me, and I left them also bustling with and hairing one another.

Declar Rabel., B. ii, ch. 14.

HARECOPPE apparently is used for hare-brain; being composed of hare, and coppe, the top of anything. Other conjectures have been made, but this has most probability. See COP.

A merry karecoppe 'tis, and a pleasant companion, A right courtier, and can provide for one. Damos and Pithias, O. Pl., 1, 223.

406

+HARE-PIPE. An instrument for catching hares.

If any lay man, not having in lands 40s, per ann., or if any priest or clerk, not having x.l. living per an. shal have or keep my hound, greyhound, or other shal have or keep any hound, greyhound, or other dog for to hunt, or any terets, hays, harepipes, cords, nets, or other engins, to take or destroy deere, hare, conies, or other gentlemens game, and shall be thereof convicted at the sess, of the peace, every such offender shall be imprisoned for one whole yeare.

Dalton's Countrey Justice, 1620.

+HARLAKENE. The old English form of the Italian word harlequin.

Serv. Sir, heres a Italian harlaken come to offer a play to your lordship.

play to your lordship.

Tratels of Three English Brothers, 1607.

I can compare my lord and his friend to nothing in the world so fitly as to a couple of water buckets, for whil'st hope winds the one up, dispaire plunges the other down, whil'st I, like a harlakene in an Italian commedy, stand making faces at both their follies.

Ite of Gulls, 1633.

HARLOCK. A plant, supposed to be mentioned by Shakespeare in the following passage, where the old reading was har-dock. But the one name is no more to be found in the old botanists than the other. there is no choice; but the passage from Drayton turns the scale.

Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds, With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers.

It is mentioned by him again:

The honey-suckle, the harlocke,
The lilly, and the lady-smocke.

Here, however, it figures among flowers.

Mr. Todd conjectures, not improbably, that harlock may be a corruption of charlock, which is the wild mustard, a very common weed in fields.

HARNESS. Armour. Harnois, French.

Ring the alarum bell; blow, wind! come, wrack! At least we'll die with harness on our back Macb., v, 5.

Thus when she had the virgin all array'd,
Another harnesse which did hang thereby
About herselfe she dight, that the yong mayd

She might in equal armes accompany.

Spens. P. Q., 111, iii, 61.

First, he that with his harners himself doth wall about That scarce is left a hole through which he may pepe

Such bond-men to their harneis to fight are nothing mete.

Asch. Toxoph., p. 71, repr. ed.

To HARNESS. To dress in arms.

This apish and unmannerly approach, This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel.

K. John. v. 2. Harness'd masque means armed mas-

A HARRINGTON. A farthing; because lord Harrington obtained from James I a patent for making brass farthings. A figure of one of these pieces is given in Mr. Gifford's ed. of Jonson, vol. v, p. 45.

Or JOHNUL, VOI. V, P. 43.
Yes, sir, it's east to penny halfpenny farthing.
O' the back side there you may see it, read;
I will not bate a Harrington o' the sur.
B. Jons. Dentlis an An, ii, l.

B. Jons. Deliver and the cannot so dispose by legacy
As they shall be a Harrington the better for't.

Ibid., Magn. Lady. ii, 6.

See also, act. iv, sc. 8. I have lost four or five friends, and not gotten the value of one Harrington,
Sir H. Wotton's Letters, p. 558.

Drunken Barnaby mentions this coin. on his arrival at the town of that name .

Thence to Harrington, be it spoken,

For name-sake I gave a token To a beggar that did crave it, &c. Part iii, p. 83. In the new edition of Barnabee (1820) it is erroneously called a town token. Vol. i, p. 24.

How Barnaby got to Harrington, which is beyond Kettering in Northamptonshire, in his way from Huntingdon to Sawtry, is not very clear. He must have reeled very widely. The Harrington in Lincolnshire is still more out of his way. But he confesses such errors at the end of his book.

HARRISH. Harsh. An old way of writing the word.

To whom the verie shining force of excellent verte, though in a very harrish subject, had wrought a kind of reverence in them.

Pembr. Arc., p. 431.

A corruption of herald (here-hault).

By this parchment, gentlemen, I have been so toled among the harrofs youder, (at the herald's office) on will not believe. They speak the strangest language, and give a man the hardest terms for his money, tast and give a man the hardest terms for his money, test ever you knew. B. Jons. Ev. Man out of H., act is. The first red herring that was broiled in Adam and Eve's kitchen, do I fetch my pedigree from, by the harrot's book.

1 Bid., Ev. Man in his H., i, 3. 45ir, when the battaile was pitched, and appointed to be foughten, nere unto this windmill, and the senses geven by the harottes of arms

Bulleyn's Dialogue, 1564. HARROW. An exclamation of sorrow or alarm; is doubtless of the same origin with the Norman haro, and probably the Irish arrah. Tyrwhitt derived it from two Icelandic words, har, high or loud, and op, clamour; which, he thought, were once common to all the Scandinavian nations. Cant. Tales, note on 3286. Du Cange has both hare and haroep, but makes no attempt at the etymology. The old conjectures concerning the calling on Harold, or Rollo (IIa Raoul), have been rejected by our best critics, yet are retained by Roquefort.

Harrow now, out, and well away! he cryde.

Spens. F. Q., II, vi, 43.

Harrow! alas I swelt here as I go.

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 248.

To HARROW. To vex or plunder; the same as to HARRY, infra, and merely a corruption of it. The history of our Lord's descent to hell was a favorite legend with our ancestors, and the phrase applied to it was, regularly, that he harrowed or harwed hell; that is, plundered or stripped it; as, by virtue of his cross, he released Adam, and many of his sons: the authority for which was the false gospel of Nicodemus. Spenser has twice used the expression in that way: And he that harrowed hell, with heavie stowre.

F. Q., I, x, 40.

Also, in his Sonnets, he says, addressing Christ,

And having harrow'd hell, didst bring away
Captivity thence captive.

Sonnet 68. Chaucer had used the same expression, Cant. Tales, v. 3512; and Mr. Tyrwhitt, in his note on that passage, gives two other instances. The latter, from the Chester Whitsun Playes, MS. Harl, 2013, is very curious. The cooks' company were to represent the descent to hell, and are thus addressed:

You cookes with your carriage see thou you doe well In pagent sett out the harrowing of hell.

Sir Eglamoure of Artoys too, like Chaucer's carpenter, is said to have sworn "by him that harowed hell."

To HARRY. To harass, vex, or torment; also to pull rudely. From harier, old Norman French, of the same meaning.

Indeed he is so, I repent me much
Indeed he is so, I repent me much
Inta I so karry'd him.

Ant. and Cleo., iii, 3.
Then, with a face more impudent than his vizard,
He karry'd her amidst a nest of pandars.

Recenger's Trag., O. Pl., iv, 328.
When I have karried him thus two or three years.

Mass. New Way to p., ii, 1.

Which all do wish in limbo harried.

Which all do wish in limbo harried.

Marst. Sat., i, 1, p. 140.

With like fortitude also, over against Valeria, our souldiors in manner of a tempestuous whirlewind, carrying and harrying the riches of the barbarians, wasted whatsoever stood in their way.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

*†Old-*HARRY. A term formerly applied satirically to Henry the Eighth. HARRY GROAT. The groats coined in the reign of Henry VIII were so called, and had several distinctions; as, the old Harry groat, the gunhole groat, the first and second gunstone groat, &c. The old Harry groat is that which has the head of the king, with a long face and long hair. Hewit on Coins, p. 69. See the note to the following passage:

A piece of antiquity, sir; 'tis English coin; and if you will needs know, 'tis an old Harry groat.

Antiquary, O. Pl., x, 43.

HART OF GREECE. See GREECE. HART OF TEN. A hart past his sixth vear was so termed, as having ten branches on his horns. See Manwood's Forest Laws, 4to, 1598, p. 28. Also Scott's Lady of the Lake, p. 177, note, where antlers is an error. The antlers are the short brow horns, not the branched horns.

the branched norms.

Madam, I trow he be. B. Jons. Sad Shep., i, 3.

A great, large deer!

Rob. What head? John. Forked, a hart of ten.

1bid., i, 6.

So a deer of ten:

He will make you royal sport, he is a deer

Of ten at least. Mass. Emp. of the East, iv, 1.

†HARTHELED. Apparently the same as wattled.

A hartheled wall, or ratheled with hasill rods, wands, or such other, paries craticius.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 162.

+HARVEST EARS.

Thine cares be on pilgrimage, or in the wildernes, as they say commonly, thou hast on thy kareest cares. vestra: percgrimantur aures.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p 46.

A fish-basket; put also for HASKE. the constellation Pisces.

CONSTEHRATION A INSUES.

And Phoebus, weary of his yearly task,
Ystablisht hath his steeds in lowly lay,
And taken up his ynne in fishes haske.

Spens. Ecl. Nov., v. 14.

Explained by E. K., who has been supposed to be Spenser himself, "The sunne raygned, that is, in the signe Pisces all November: a haske is a wicker ped, wherein they use to carrie fish." Davison uses the same phrase:

The joyfull sunne, whom cloudy winter's spight Had shut from us in watry fishes haske, Returnes againe.

Poems, 1611, p. 38. Ash defines it, anything made of rushes or wicker, and derives it from the German; but I have not seen it, except in this application to the sign Pisces, and Phillips explains it accordingly. But still, when we have explained the word haske, we must be allowed to wonder at Spenser's astronomy, putting the sun into Pisces in November, instead of February. The Summary of Dubartas says, "The water-bearer, or Aquarius, as also the fishes, for the humiditie of the season, in the moneths of January and February." P. 165.

HASLET. The principal entrails of a hog. Johnson has this word, but without an example.

There was not a hog killed within three parishes of him, whereof he had not some part of the kaslet and puddings.

Ozell's Rabelais, B. iii, ch. 41.

The term, however, is not obsolete. and is sometimes called harslet. See Domestic Cookery, p. 91.

+HASTING. An early fig.

Ficus præcox. Figue hastive. A rathe fig ripened before the time: an hasting.

Nomenclator.

+HAT. To give the hat, to salute. I could no otherwise take it amiss, said I, than as I I could no otherwise take it amiss, and 1, than as 1 thought it implied a further familiarity, and that you cannot expect should be borne by any man of honour; however, sir, said I. I spoke only to my wife; I said nothing to you, but gare you my hat as I passed you. History of Colonel Jack, 1723.

To HATCH. To engrave, or mark with lines; from hacher, French. strokes of the graver on a plate are still called hatchings.

And such again

As venerable Nestor hatch'd in silver. Tro. & Cr., i, 8.
Thy hair is fine as gold, thy chin is hatch'd With silver.

To which your worth is wedded, your profession

Hatch'd in, and made one piece, in such a peril.

B. and FT. Thierry and Th., act ii, p. 145.

Also for stained:

When thine own bloody sword cried out against thee, Hatch'd in the life of him. Ib., Cust. of C., act v, p. 90.

Humorous Licut., i, 1

His weapon hatch'd in blood, all these attending
When he shall make their fortunes.

Humorous Licut., i, 1

It is here used loosely, perhaps for coloured or stained:

A rymer is a fellow whose face is hatcht all over with impudence, and should hee bee hang'd or pilloried, 'tis armed for it. Overbury, Char., O 7. In the Honest Ghost we have it written ach't, but with the same meaning:

High-swelling crimes, which rightly understood, Might stage a rubrick story, ack't in blood. Verses to the State Censor.

See under GILT, that word also applied to the stain of blood.

+HATE-LIGHT. Obnoxious to light.

So that the duke my father nere had ken Of my encloystring in this hate-light den. Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638 +HATHER. Heather.

Heath is the generall or common name, whereof there is owne kind, called hather, the other ling.

Nord-n's Surveiors Dialogue, 1610.

+HATTERING. Dangerous.

408

Castles for lades, and for carpet knights,
Unmercifully spoyld at feasting fights,
Where hattering bullets are fine sugged pluns,
No feare of roaring guns, or thundring druns,
Taylor's Market, 150.

+HAVE. Have at all, a desperate risk. A phrase taken from the practice of Her dearest knight, whom she so just may call, What with his debts, and what with hope at all, what with his debts, and what with here at all, Lay hidden like a swage in his den,

For feare of bayliffes, sergeants, marshals men.
Good Nesses and Bad Nesses, 1822.
Were not you better helpe away with some of it?
But you will starve yourselfe, that when y' are rotten,
One have at all of mine may set it flying.

One have at all of mine may set it flying.
And I will have your bones cut into dice.
And make you guilty of the spending of it.
Rendolph's Muses Looking-Glasse, 1613.
Then have at all, the passe is got,
For coming off, oh name it not;
Who would not die upon the spot!

Cleaneland's Posms, 1651.

The celebrated duke of Buckingham is said to have written on the Monument, in chalk, the following lines:

Here stand I. e Lord knows why: But if I fall Have at ye all.

To have towards any one, to pledge him in drinking. The following is a curious picture of one of the forms of drinking:

Phil. The battle by all means.

Sir Strike up the battle then. Think your selves all in service now, and do as I do.

[They take their pots in their left hand.

Take your bowes gent, and make a stand.

Right! Taw your shatts now, and noch 'em.

[They take their cups in their right hands to fil.

Very good! now smooth your feathers.

[They blow of the fresh.

[They blow off the froth.

Well done! Present, and take aym. Well dolle! Freent, and take aya Here's to thee, Leocrates. Leoc. Have towards thee, Philotas. Phil. To thee, Archippus. Arch. Here, Mulops. Mol. Have at you, fidlers.

Cartwright's Royall Stave, 1651. +HAVER, n. s. One who has.

A princes favour is a precious thing. Yet it doth many unto ruine bring; Because the kasers of it proudly use it,
And (to their owne ambitious ends) abuse it.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

HAUGHT. Proud; from haut, French. The same as haughty.

No lord of thine, thou kaught insulting man, Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title.

K. Rick. II. iv. l. O full of danger is the duke of Gloster,

And the queen's sons and brothers haught and prost. This haught resolve becomes your majesty.

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 366.

Also high:

Pompey, that second Mars, whose kanght renows, And noble deeds, were greater than his fortunes. Cornelia, O. Pl., ii, 881

And then his con age kauskt Desyr'd of forreine formen to be known.

Spens. F. Q., I, vi, 29. In the following passage it is spelt like the French original:

Lucifer More hant of heart was not before his fall, Than was this proud and pompous cardinall.

Mirror for Mag., p. 322. Spense: has also hault, which is only a more antiquated form of the French word; and even the l is pronounced: Or through support of count nance proud and kenit, To wrong the weaker oft falles in his owne assault. F. Q., VI, ii, 23.

Thus also here:

And with courage hault And with courage was.

We did intend the city to assault.

Mirror for Mag., p. 474.

HAVING, s. Fortune, or possessions; often used in this manner by Shakespeare and his contemporaries.

The gentleman is of no having, he kept company with the wild prince and Poins. Mer. W. W., iii, 2. It is plain by the context, that his poverty is here alluded to, though Dr. Johnson seems once to have thought otherwise.

Great prediction
Of noble having, and of royal hope. Mach., i, 8.

Of notic saving, and of royal nope. Macs., 1, 8.

Often used in the plural also:

But par'd my present savings to bestow
My bounties upon you. Hes. VIII, iii, 2.

Lie in a water-bearer's house! a gentleman of his savings!

Bu Jons. Every M. in his H., i, 4.

One of your savings, and yet cark and care!

Muses' Looking Glass, O. Fl., ix, 206.

In Scotch it means manners or behaviour. See Jamieson. But there seems to be no proper English example of that sense.

'HAVIOUR, for behaviour. Very frequently used by Shakespeare.

With the same Assion that your passion bears,
Goes on my master's grief.
Twelf. N., iii, 4. With the same Asylow time your Goes on my master's grief.
Put thyself

Into a haviour of less fear. Cymb., iii, 4.
Used by Spenser also, see Todd. This dropping the first syllable of a word was more common formerly than now.

+HAUME-LEGGED. Bandy-legged. That is kaume-legged, legges turned outward, as some say, that both a paire of left legges, valgus.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p 286.

HAW. A yard, or enclosure; originally haugh.

St. Mary Bothaw—hath the addition of Boathhaw, or Boathaw, of neare adjoining to an Ase, or yarde, wherein, of old time boates were made, and landed from Downgate to be mended. Store, London, p. 181.

HAWBERK. A coat of mail, or of solid armour, supposed to have been larger than the habergeon. Chaucer, we see, has made a knight put it on over the habergeon. See in HABERGEON.

Godfrey arose; that day he laid aside
His kaubers strong, he wont to combat in,
And donn'd a breast-plate fair, of proof untried,
Such one as foot-men use, light, easy, thin.
Fairf. Tasso, xi, 20.

His friends, therefore, thought him half unarmed. Gray seems to have considered it as regularly of mail: "Helm, nor hauberk's twisted mail."

HAWK; Between hawk and buzzard. Prov. Meaning, perhaps, originally, between two equally dangerous enemies, a hawk and a kite. It is now chiefly used to express mere doubt. The hawk is teachable, the buzzard is not; whence the French put them together in a proverb thus: "You cannot make a hawk of a buzzard." "D'une buse on ne sauroit faire un épervier." Matinées Senon., No. 223.

HAWKER. Originally, perhaps, one who carried about hawks for sale, though obsolete in that sense, by the disuse of the thing. Minshew says. "The appellation seemeth to grow from their uncertain wandering, like those that with haukes seeke their game, where they can find it;" but this is less probable. In confirmation of the former derivation, cadger, which means also a hawker, is derived from cadge, a round hoop of wood on which they carried their hawks for aale. See Bailey, also CADGE. Johnson derives it from hock, a German word for a salesman.

A hawker meant also, as may be supposed, one who used hawks, as a hunter means one who hunts.

HAWKING, s. The diversion of catching game with hawks. This was an amusement to which our ancestors were so much attached, that the allusions to it in their writings are perpetual. These will be best understood by turning to the several terms horrowed from that sport, and introduced into their dialogues or other writings. Under HAGGARD I have given a long continued allegory on the subject of hawking, from Shakespeare. I shall here insert another, from Beaumont and Fletcher. both, it appears how generally familiar the terms and practices of hawking were at that time, which is all that requires to be shown under this word.

Now thou com'st near the nature of a woman. Hang these tame-hearted eyasses, that no sooner See the lure out, and hear their husband's hollow, But cry like kites upon 'em; the free haggard (Which is that woman that hath wing, and knows it, Spirit and plume) will make an hundred checks Spirit and piume) will make an nundred checks
To shew her freedom, sail in ev'ry air
And look out ev'ry pleasure, not regarding Luve nor quarry, 'till her pitch command
What she desires, making her founder'd keeper
Be glad to fing out trains, and golden ones,
To take her down again. Woman's Prize, i, 2, p. 181. The prevalence of inclosures has made hawking almost impossible, in most parts of England.

HAXTER, s. A hacknied person; for hackster, as it is sometimes written. From hack. See Todd in Hackster.

For to bring an old haster to the exercise of devotion, is to bring an old bird to sing prick-song in a cage.

Clitus's [i. e. Brathwait's] Whimsies, p. 61. Vowing, like a desperate hazter, that he has express command to seize upon all our properties.

Lady Alimony, i, 1.

HAY. Originally a hedge; from huie, Also a kind of net to catch French. rabbits, chiefly by inclosing their holes as with a hedge.

A connie-catcher is one who robs warrens, and conniegrounds, pitching his kaies before their holes. Minshero

Nor none, I trowe, that had a wit so badde,
To set his kay for conneys ore riveres.

Wyatt, Ep. to Poynet.

So Sylvester:

Th' amazed game, amain,
Runs heer and there; but if they scape away
From hounds, staves kill them, if from staves, the hay.
Du Bartas, p. 4, Day 3, Week 2. Ben Jonson says,

O, I lookt for this, The kay's a pitching. Alchem., act ii. Meaning, the snare is preparing. He resumes the allusion afterwards, calling the sharper Ferret, and saying of his prey, Mammon, "are you bolted?" as was said of rabbits when they left their holes.

+HAY-BORN.

She lead us through the malt-house

She lead us and the state of the kay-born.

Thence to the kay-born.

Bold's Poems, 1864, p. 115. HAYDIGYES. A sort of rural dance. most variously spelt, probably from the uncertainty of the etymology.

Floods, mountains, vallies, woods, each vacant lies, Of nymphs that by them danc'd their haydigyes. Browne, Brit. Past., 11, ii, p. 41. Spenser writes it heydeguyes:

And light foot nymphs can chace the lingring night With keydeguyes, and trimly trodden traces. Sh. Kal., Jone, v. 98

Drayton uses hy-day-gies:

410

And whilst the nimble Cambrian rills Dance hy-day-gies among the hills.

Polyolb., S. v. Argum.

Perhaps he supposed it derived from hey-day guise, as some others have done. Another time he has it hydegy, in the singular:

While some the rings of bells, and some the bagpipes

Dance many a merry round, and many a hydegy.

Polyols., XXV, p. 1162.

In Percy's Reliques we find it written, according to the conjectural etymology, hey-day-guise; but in the glossary he suggests that it should be one word.

One Word.

By wells and rills and meadowes greene,
We nightly dance our key-day-gense.

Pairy's Song, vol. iii.

There is much probability that the hay, as a dance, was only an abbreviation of this, though a very early one, as we find it in authors equally

I will play on the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the key.

Love's L. L., v, l. Loor's L. L. v. 1.

So it is spelt in the folio, and by sir J. Davies:

He taught them rounds, and winding keys to tread. In Heywood's Woman killed with Kindness, it is hay, at least in the reprint, for I have not seen the old

COPY:

Jen. No; we'll have the hunting of the fox.

Jack. The kay, the kay, there's nothing like the kay.

O. Pl., vii, p. 268.

See Todd in Heydeguy.

HAYLES. The abbey of Hayles, now Hales, in Gloucestershire, was long famous for a pretended relic of some blood contained in a phial, which, like that of St. Januarius, was supposed to have the property of deciding on the merits of the inspecting visitor. This was done, like that, by a miraculous vanishing of the blood, if the person was unworthy to see it. On the dissolution of the monastery, it was discovered to be "an unctuous gumme, coloured, which in the glasse apperyd to be a glistenynge red resemblyng partlie the color of blood. and owte of the glasse apparaunte glystering velow colour like ambre or basse gold." Certific. of Visitors. They reported also, that it was inclosed in a crystal bottle, one side of which was rather opaque, to favour | +HEAD. Have at your head, i. e., away the deception.

e deception.
At Ridybone, and at the blood of Hayles,
Where pilgrymes paynes ryght much avayles.
Four Ps. O. Pl., i, 74. And therefore vow'st some solemn pigrimage
To holy Hayles, or Patrick's purgatory.

Drayt., Ect. 6, p. 1412.

The site of the monastery belongs at present to C. H. Tracey, esq., of Toddington, to whom it descended from the viscounts Tracey, which title became extinct in 1797. Of the buildings little now remains, except part of the entrance tower and of a cloister.

To HAYLSAY. To greet, to say hail! [To embrace; see HALSE.]

And therwyth I turned me to Baphaell, and when we had hayls-de thone thother, and hadde spoken thies comen wordes, that be customably spoken, &c.

Mores Utopia, by Robinson, B 4, 1551.

HAYWARD. The keeper of the cattle or common herd of a parish or village; from hay, a hedge, and ward; because a chief part of his business was to see that the beasts did not break down or browze the hedges. "Hayward, custos agri." Coles' Dict. The shepheards and haywards assemblies and meetings, when they kept their cattel and heards.

Puttenh. Art of Engl. Poetry, p. 30.

Like several other disused words, it still remains in use as a surname.

HEAD, prov. To give one's head for washing. This very odd proverb is used both by Beaumout and Fletcher and by Butler, and seems to imply, to yield tamely and without resistance, to give up your head as if it was only to be washed. I do not find it in Ray.

I'm resolv'd. 1 Cit. And so am I, and forty more good fellows,
That will not give their heads for the weathing, I take it.

Cupid's Revenge, iv, 3.

So talks Orsin in Hudibras:

For my part it shall ne'er be said, For my pure to success my head, I for the washing gave my head, Nor did I turn my back for fear. Hud., I, iii, 255.

Sometimes it is the beard for the washing. A description of Exeter, quoted by Dr. Nash, says of the parson of St. Thomas, that "he was a stout man, who would not give his head for the polling, nor his beard for the washing." Thus, it seems only to mean that he would not be imposed upon.

for a cuckold.

Not if you stay at home, and warme my bed; But if you leave me, have at your head. Gough's Strange Discovery, 1640.

To take one in the head, to occur to his mind.

Now, it tooke him in the head, and incensed was his desires (seeing Gaule new quieted) to set first upon Constantius. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. To run on head, to incite.

Thirdlie, to set cocke on hope, and run on keads.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

To do on head, to act rashly. Abruptum ingenium, a rashe brayne that dooeth all thinges on kead.

Eliotes Dictionarie, 1559. thinges on head.

To fly at the head, to attack.
Fellow servant, I can very hardly refraine my selfe, but that I must needes flee at the head of him. The ill shapen knave besides all other things commeth to flout and laugh us to scorne. Terence in Eng., 1614.

To eat one's head off, said of an animal, to cost more than its worth in feeding.

A Spending my money, and feasting my lawyers;
1 have nade an end of a waggon load of cheese, and five good guineas I brought to town with me, besides my mare has caten her head off at the Ax in Aldermanbury: Zooks, wou'd I had gin the best tit in my team I'd ne'er seen London.

The Country Farmer's Calechism, 1708.

+HEADLING. Headlong.

Abire pessum, to ren kedlynge, to come to a mischiefe.

Eluctes Dictionarie. 1559.

HEADSMAN. An executioner, when a person is to be beheaded.

Come, keadsman, off with his head. All's W., iv, 3.

Just as before the Academan one condemned.

Who doth in life his death anticipate,
And now upon the block his neck extend,
For the fear'd stroke which must dispatch him straight.

Fanshaw's Laurad, iii, 40. Dryden has used it (see Johnson), but it seems no longer current.

+HEAM. A horse-collar.

Tomices. Pulvilli lana pilisve farti, quibus veterinorum colla muniuntur ne obladantur. Horse keames, or horse collars.

+HEART. Used sometimes as an exclamation.

Jer. Heart! you would not unhorse Hercules for her father. Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631. Hearts of oak, very stout hearts, great courage.

But here is a doozen of yonkers that have kearts of But here is a doozen on your coake at four escore yeares.

Old Meg of Herefordshire, 1609.

Poor heart, a common expression for an object of commiseration.

Mean. If you will know it then, he is in love.

Jan. I pitty him indeed, poore heart: with whom?

Carteright's Ordinary, 1651.

Poor heart, I pity thee. Before thou come to half my years thou wilt forget to love half so truly.

Brome's Northern Lass.

HEART OF GRACE. To take heart of | HEAT, part. grace; originally, we may suppose, to be encouraged by indulgence, favour, or impunity.

He came within the eastle wall to-day,
His absence gave him so much keart of grace,
Where had my husband been but in the way, but in the way,

Harr driest xxi. 39. He durst not, &c. Harr. Ariost., x
These comfortable words Rogero spake,
With that his warlike looke and manly show,

Did cause her heart of grace forthwith to take.

Take heart of grace, man.
Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 205. Some have supposed it to be more properly heart at grass, as if it alluded to a horse becoming hearty at grass. So Lyly, Rise, therefore, Euphues, and take heart at grasse, younger thou shalt never bee, plucke up thy stomacke.

Seeing she would take no warning on a day to k heart at grasse, and belabourd her well with a cudgel.

Tartlon's News out of Purgatory, p. 24. The other form is more common, and perhaps preferable. See GRACE, HEART OF.

HEART is used, by Shakespeare and others, for the very essence of anything, the utmost of it possible; the heart being the most essential part.

t.

Like a right gypsy hath, at fast and loose,

Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.

Ant. and Cl., iv, 10.

He out-goes
The very keart of kindness. Tim
This is a solemn rite Timon of A., i, 1.

They owe bloom'd May, and the Athenians pay it
To th' heart of ceremony. Two Noble Kinsm., iii, 1. Heart of heart occurs also for the most vital recess of the heart, in Tr. and Cr., iv, 5, and Haml., iii, 2.

HEART-BREAKER, s. A jocular name for that kind of pendent curl which was called a love-lock. See LOCK.

+To HEARTEN. To give heart to.

Now hearten their affairs enew'd. Chapm. Il., i, 444. With health renew'd. +HEARTENER. An encourager; one who gives heart.

Browne's Brit. Pastorals, i, l.

Browne's Brit. Pastorals, i, l.

+HEARTLESS. Disheartened. Chapm. Il., xv, 296.

+HEART-QUAKES. Tremblings of the heart.

It did the Grecians good to see; but heart-quakes shook the joints Of all the Trojans. Chapm. Il., vii, 187.

+HEARTSEASE. Consolation.

Which was a great comfort and heartsease unto the cities of Asia. Sir T. North's Plutarch, p. 423.

Sometimes improperly used for heated.

ed for neutres.

And fury ever boils more high and strong,

Heat with ambition, than revenge of wrong.

B Jons. Separas, iii.

Yet as a herdesse in a summer's day.

Heat with the glorious sun's all-purging ray.

Browne's Bril. Past., ii, 3, p. 73. Mr. Todd has very rightly shown, that the word occurs in this sense in the authorised version of the Bible, Dan. iii, 19; which makes it probable that it was in current use when that version was made, and perhaps was pronounced het, which may be found in Chaucer. In the modern editions of the Bible, heated has been

[To set in a heat, to make augry.] tS. I will not heare one word: I shall set thesis a tacitly substituted for heat.

To HEAT, v. To run a heat, as in a race.

You may ride us With one soft kiss a thousand furlougs, ere Wint. T., i, 2. With spur we heat an acre.

With HEAVE AND HOW seems to mean, with interest, or, perhaps, with force, implying such an exertion as makes a person cry ho! for ho it seems to have been pronounced, by the rhyme:

The silent soule yet cries for vengeance just Unto the mighty God and to his saints.
Who, though they seem in punishing but slow,
Yet pay they home at last with keers and keer.

Harr. Ariost., xxxvii, 89.

†HEAVEN. A place of entertainment in Old Palace Yard. It is called by Butler, "false Heaven at the end of the hall."

HEBENON. Ebony, the juice of which was supposed to be a deadly poison. Spenser uses "heben wood," for ebony. F. Q., I, vii, 37. And Minshew, as well as Cotgrave, acknowledges the same orthography.

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole With juice of cursed kebenon in a vial.

It is, in the following lines, distinctly put as a poison, and one of the worst sort:

In few, the blood of Hydra Lerne's bane, The juice of hebon, and Cocytus' breath, And all the poisons of the Styrian pool. Jew of Matta, O. Pl., viii, 385.

It has been conjectured, that it is put in the former passage for henbane, but such a transposition of letters is very improbable; and it is still more | HEFT, s. Heaving, reaching; from to so, that two authors should coincide in using it. Shakespeare, it is true, has elsewhere the word ebony; but uniformity in spelling did not belong to his days. The old quarto also has hebona, which less favours the change. Mr. Douce is of the same opinion, and refers to Batman's translation of Barthol. de Propr., ch. 52, where it is called ebeno in English.

413

HECCO. The green woodpecker, picus viridis. whose note is often compared to laughing, and who certainly has a very sharp bill.

The crow is digging at his breast amain,
The sharp-neb'd keeco stabbing at his brain.

Drayt. Onl, p. 1294. He calls it "the laughing hecco." Polyolb., xiii, p. 915. Two modern authors, Mrs. Dorset and Mrs. C. Smith, have called the same bird the yaffil, which the former confesses to be a provincial name, but thinks very expressive of the noise it continually makes. She also quotes Hurdis, as speaking of the laughing of the same bird:

The golden woodpecker, who, like the fool, Laughs loud at nothing. See her notes on the Peacock at Home. Mrs. Dorset's words are, "and the yaffil laughs loud." Mrs. Smith's,

And long and loud
The yaffil laughs from aspen gray.
From the mention of laughing, they must certainly all mean the same bird which Drayton calls hecco. The same bird has also been called HICKWAY, which is not very remote from hecco.

†HEDGE-PEAK. A species of hip.
The fields of corne doth yeeld him straw and bread,
To feed and lodge, and hat to hide his head;
And in the strad of cut-throat slaughtering shambles.
Each hedge allowes him berryes from the brambles.
The bulk sse, hedg-peake, hips, and hawes, and sloes,
Attend his appetite where o'r he goes.

The log's Worker, 1630.

If judge it is with men as it is with plants: take one that blossoms too soon, 't will starve a sloe or hedgecke.

Howard, Man of Newmarkst, 1678.

†HEELS. At the hard heels, close upon his heels.

Sirah! Robin! we were best look that your devil can answer the stealing of this same cup, for the vintner's boy follows at the hard heels.

Marlowe's Tragedy of Doctor Faustus.

To cool the heels, to wait.

Who forthwith comitted my little hot furie to the stockes, where we will leave him to cools his hockes, whilst we take a further view of the faire. Bartholomew Fairs, 1641. heave.

But if one present
Th' abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts.
Winter's T., ii, 1.

Hence tender-hefted, in Lear, is explained heaved, or agitated by tender-

No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse, Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness. Used also for a weight, as being heaved with difficulty:

But if a part of heav'n's huge sphere
Thou chuse thy pondrous Aeft to bear.

Gorges's Lucan. How shall my prince and uncle now sustain (Depriv'd of so good helpe) so great a keft?

Harr. Ariost., xliii, 164.

Also, for need, as giving occasion for the greatest exertion; or, as is still vulgarly said, "a dead lift."

We friendship faire and concord did despise,
And far appart from us we wisdom left,
Forsook each other at the greatest keft.

Mirror for Magist. R. Forres, p. 750.
†As if t'outrun desire,

Each nimble stroke quick as ethereal fire,
When wing'd by motion, [cfl.], yet with a keft
So full of dauger, most behind them left
Their bloody marks, which in this fatal strife
Seem'd like the open'd salliports of life.

Chamberlayse's Pharonnids, 1659.

HEGGE. Sometimes used for hag. See Minshew's Dictionary, and Cooper's Thesaurus, in the word Larva. See in Mirr. for Mag., p. 323. HEILD, ON THE. Qu. On the wane? His purse is on the heild, and only fortic shillings hath he behinds to try his fortune with at the cardes, in the presence. Nash's Lent. St., Harl. Misc., vi, 144.

HEIR, applied to a female; heiresa is now more usual.

What lady is that same?
The keir of Alençon, Rosaline her name.

Love's L. L., ii, 1.

His revenues long since Encreas'd by marrying with a rich &sir, Call'd madam Violante.

Call'd madam Violante.

B. & Fl. Span. Curate, i, 1.

Appoint to carry hence so rich an Acir,

And be so slack! 'sfoot it doth move my patience;

Would any man that is not void of sense

Not have watch'd night by night for such a prize?

Hog lost his Pearl, O. Pl., vi, 390. Here the heir was Maria.

HELL was used, as a sort of jocular term, for an obscure dungeon in a prison. Thus a catchpole is described as being

A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot One that before the judgement carries poor souls to kell.

Com. of E., iv, 2.

In Wood street's hole, or counter's kell. Counter-rat, a Poem, 1658.

The hell was something worse than Mad., i, 1.

Heaven, Hell, and Purgatory, were names given to three ale-houses near Westminster hall; whence, among the mortifications prescribed by a pretended conjurer, the dupe (Dapper) is told that

IIe must not break his fast
In Heaven and Hell, B. Jons. Alch., v, 2. Whalley says the two former existed in his time. The third was mentioned in a grant of the first year of Henry VII. seen by Mr. Gifford. See him in loc. There was likewise a place commonly so called under the Exchequer chamber, where the king's debtors were confined till they had paid the uttermost farthing. Steevens. The same was, and perhaps is, the term for a tailor's secret repository of stolen cloth.

†That fellowes pocket is like a tailors hell, it eats up part of every mans due; its an executioner, and makes away more innocent petitions in one yeere, then a red-headed hangman cut ropes in an age.

Day's Ite of Gulls, 1633.
†When taylors forget to throw cabbage in kell,
And shorten their bills, that all may be well.
Newest Academy of Compliments.

To HELL has been thought to be used by Spenser for an older word, to hele, in the sense of to cover :

Else would the waters overflow the lands, And fire devoure the ayre, and kell them quight.

F. Q., IV, x, 35.

But this explanation is by no means satisfactory; for fire devouring the air would not cover the water; nor is it very clear what is the antecedent to them. See QUIGHT.

†HELL-DARK. Pitch-dark.

To guide the ship in the kell-darke night, when we could not see any shore. Hakluyt's Voyages, 1598. HELLY, adj. Hellish.

So also in Mirr. for Mag., p. 455. See Todd.

These monster swarmes, his holiness and his helly crue have scraped and raked together out of old, doating heathen historigraphers.

Declar. of Popish Impost., S 4.

†HELM. A handle.

A great axe first she gave, that two ways cut, In which a fair well-polish't kelm was put, That from an olive-bough received his frame.

Chapm. Odys., v. +HELPLESS. Unaiding; not giving help.

Yet since the gods have been Helpless forceseers of my plagues. Chapm. R., vi, S85.

the hole. See Gifford on Mass. City | +HEMATITE. More commonly known as the bloodstone.

The onix, topar, jaspar, hematite,
The sable jet, the tutch, and chrysolite;
All these considred as they are indeed,
Are but vaine toyes that doe mans fancy feed.

Taylor's Works, 1830.

HEMINGE, JOHN. A favorite actor of tragedy in Shakespeare's time, and joint editor of his works with Condel, in folio, 1623, seven years after the author's death. His son William was a dramatic author of some fame. See Proleg. to Sh., vol. iii, pp. 232 and 284, ed. 1813.

+HEMPEN-SQUINCY. Hanging.

Hear you, tutour, Shall not we be suspected for the murder, And choke with a kempen squincy.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646.

+HEN.

He is thy own, wench; and therefore, ken of the gene, when you have scrapt a fortune out of this dunghill you'll not envy mee, I hope, a little of it.

The Wizerd, a Play, 1640, MS.

HENCE, v. Sylvester has unwarrantably made a verb of to hence, in the sense of to go away.

Heerwith the angell kenc't, and bent his flight
Tow'rds our sad citie, which then deeply sigh't.

Passarclus, p. 675.

I am not aware of any other instauce. HENCHMAN. A page or attendant. Etymologists have been puzzled to find the origin of this once common word; and their attempts may be seen in Todd's Johnson. To me the simple etymology of judge Blackstone seems the most probable: huunchman, from following the haunch of his mas-Bishop Percy also made the same conjecture in a note on the Northumberland Household Book. Hence it is applied to boy as well as man, hench-boy, or haunch-boy. Shakespeare speaks of "the haunch of winter," for the latter end of it. 2 Hen. IV, iv, 4. They who derive it from hengest, a horse, do not seem to have considered that it is most commonly used for a foot attendant or page. Mr. Douce, however, thinks otherwise, and he has certainly found mounted henshmen in Chaucer. See Illustrat., vol. i, 189. Still this only affects the etymology; for it seems clear that they became pages afterwards. Minshew says expressly, that "it is used for a man who goes on foot attending upon a man of honour, or great worship."

I do but beg a little changeling boy
To be my henchman. Mitt. N. Dr., ii, 2.
He whose phrases are as neatly decked as my lord mayor's hensmen. Jack Drum's Entertainm., B 4. They were excepted from the operation of the statute 4 Edw. IV, cap. 5, concerning excess of apparel:

Provided also, that henchmen, heralds, pursuivants, sword-bearers to mayors, messengers, and ministrels, nor none of them, nor players in their interludes, shall not be comprised within this statute.

Hench-bou was not uncommon:

How could they Affect these filthy harbingers of hell,
These proctors of Belzebub, Luciter's kench-bous? Muses' Looking Gl., O. Pl., ix, 187.

Sir, I will match my lord-mayor's horse, make jockeys Of his kench-boys, and run 'em through Cheapside. Wits, O. Pl., viii, 420.

Thus, to set the hench boys on horseback, was to change the nature of their service. In one of Milton's MS. copies of the Ode on a Solemn Music. he had called the cherubim "Heav'n's henshmen," which, with very good taste, he afterwards expunged.

Todd's Milton, vol. vii, p. 57. To HEND, or to HENT. To seize, take, or hold; from the Saxon hendan, or hentan.

As if that it she would in pieces rend, Or reave it out of the hand that did it hend. Spens. F. Q., V, xi, 27.

Chaucer uses to hente, or henten; and it is used in a song inserted by Shakespeare:

'e : Jog on, jog on the foot-path way, And merrily kent the stile a. Wint. Tale, iv, 3. Mr. Steevens had said, in a note on Measure for Measure, that the verb was to hend. This he retracts in one on the above passage; but it appears that both forms are established on sufficient authority. Hent was certainly used as the preterite, which is all that the citations in the latter note HERBARS. Herbs. Probably peculiar establish.

Told men whose watchful eyes no slumber kent, What stores of hours thest-guilty night had spent.

Browne, Brit. Past., II, 1, p. 29.

The little babe up in his arms he kent. Spens. F. Q., II, ii, 1. Moth, in the Ordinary, uses to hent, in imitation of Chaucer. O. Pl., x, 309.

HENT was also the participle. Seized, taken. &c.

Twice have the trumpets sounded, The generous and gravest citizens The duke is entering.

The duke is entering.

Meas. for M., iv, 6.

Great labour hast thou fondly hent in hand. Spens. P. Q., 111, vii, 61.

HENT, s., is evidently put for hold or opportunity.

Up sword, and know thou a more horrid heat;
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage.

Haml., iii, 3.

The conjecture of hent, for hint, in Othello, i, 3. "Upon this hint I spake," though supported by the old quarto, seems neither necessary nor probable. It is perfect sense as it is. It might indeed be explained in the other way.

+HEPPECÉ. "Cheese made of mares milk." Dunton's Ladies Dictionary.

HERALDRY. That this art was much more fashionable formerly than at present, is well known; but it is rather extraordinary that it should have been made the subject of a sonnet. The conceits in it are rather far-fetched, but some of them not anpoetical:

dipoctical:

Heraulds at armes doe three perfections quote,
To wit, most faire, most ritch, most glittering;
So when those three concurre within one thing,
Needes must that thing of honor be a note.

Lately I did behold a ritch, faire coate,
Which wished fortune to mine eyes did bring,
A lordly coate, yet worthy of a king,
In which one might all these perfections note.
A field of lyllies, roses proper bare,
Two starres in chiefe, the creat was waves of gold,
How glift'ring 'twas, might by the starres apneare.

How glitt'ring 'twas, might by the starres appeare,
The lilies made it faire for to behold. And ritch it was, as by the gold appeareth, But happy he that in his armes it weareth Constable, Decad. I, Sonn. 10.

From what book of heraldry the poet took his three perfections, fair, rich, and glittering, I have not been fortunate enough to discover.

+HERBALL. Consisting of herbs; vegetable.

To conclude, thou calling of me to that kerball dinner and leane repast.

Passenger of Bensenuto, 1612. and leane repast.

to Spenser, as Mr. Todd also has observed.

The roofe hereof was arched over head,
And deckt with flowers and herbars daintily.

Spens. F. Q., II, ix, 46.

HERB-GRACE. See Rus. HERDESSE for shepherdess.

Yet as a kerdesse in a summer's day, Ict as a Acraesse in a summer's day,
Heat with the glorious sun's all-purging ray,
In the calme evening (leaving her faire flocke)
Betakes herself unto a froth-girt rocke.

Browne, Brit. Past., II, 3, p. 73. A similar word has been found in Chancer, viz., hierdesse.

HERE'S NO, this, or that (whatever the object may be). An ironical exclamation, implying that there is a great abundance of it. Warburton suggested this interpretation of the fol-lowing passage, which was doubted at first, but has since been fully confirmed:

Sir Walter Blunt! there's honour for you: kere's no sanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too.

Now what a thing it is to be an ass!

Here's no fond jet! The old man hath found their guilt, &c.

Here was no subtle derice to get a wench!

This chanon has a brave pate of his own.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii, 3.

T. Here's no grous faltery!

Will she swallow this? G. You see she does, and glibly.

Massinger's City Madam, i, 1.

Here's no notable gullery!

See also O. Pl., i, 201, xi, 127, and vi, 109. The instances might easily be multiplied, to a prodigious extent; so that the point is now beyond all doubt.

Allied to this ironical phrase is that of here's much, to signify, on the contrary, the absence of anything; as, How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here's much Orlando! As you like it, iv, 3. Thus Brainworm, sending Old Knowell on a false scent, in pursuit of his son, says to him, "I, sir, there you shall have him;" and, as soon as he is out of hearing, adds, Yes! invisible. Much wench, or much son!

B. Jons. Every M. in his H., iv, 6. See Much, as an ironical exclamation for not ut all. +IIERISH. Harsh, rough. See HARRISH. They teare their kerisk mantels grey.

Gaulfrido and Barnardo le Vayne, 1570.

HERNSHAW, HERON-SHAW, HERNSHEW. The bird called a heron or hern. Johnson had interpreted it a heronry, supposing it made from hern and shaw; but the quotations abundantly prove that it meant only the bird.

As when a cast of falcons make their flight,
At an hernshew, that lyes aloft on wing.

Spens. F. Q., VI, vii, 9.

Minerva's hernshew, and her owl.

B. Jons. Masque of Augurs, vol. vi, p. 133.
As they were entring on their way, Minerva did pre-

A hernshaw, consecrate to her; which they could ill discerne

Through sable night, but by her clange, they knew it was a herne. Chapman's Homer, R., x, p. 136.

So have wee seene a hawke cast off at an herou-sher, So have wee seene a hawke cast off at an heron-star, to looke and file a quite other way.

And leaving me to stalk here in my trowsers Like a tame hern-see for you.

I bid., Staple of News, i. 1.

Than that aky-acaling pike of Tenerifie,
Upon whose tops the herneshere bred her young.

Browns, Brit. Past., II, 5, p. 18.

"To know a hawk from a hernshaw, was certainly the original form of the proverb, in which the latter word is since corrupted into handsaw. But the corruption had taken place before the time of Shakespeare; and therefore sir Thomas Hanmer's alteration of it in Hamlet, ii. 2. was superfluous. It is handsaw in Ray's Proverbs, p. 196. The hawk and the hernshaw appear together in the above quotation from Spenser, which illustrates the real origin of the proverb; meaning, wise enough at least to know the hawk from its game.

HEROD, KING. In the old moralities and mysteries, this personage was always represented as a tyrant of a very violent temper, using the most exaggerated language. Hence the expression,

It out-kerods Herod. Heal iii L He is therefore mentioned as the most daring person that can be thought of by Alexas, when he tells Cleopatra, Good majesty! Herod of Jenry dare not look upon you

But when you are well pleas'd.

Ant. f Cleop., iii, 3.

He is also introduced proverbially by Mrs. Page:

What a Herod of Jewry is this !

Merry W. W. E, 1. The fierceness of Herod is well illustrated in Mr. Steevens's note on the passage of Hamlet, from the Chester Whitsun Plays, Harl. MSS., 1013, where he is made to rant most unreasonably on the subject of his own person and valour.

therring-pond. A popular name for the sea.

The many thousands English, Scotch, and Irish mariners, who now yearly fish for you, would hardly seek work abroad, if a fishery afforded 'em full employment at home; and 'tis odds but a finer cousty, cheaper and better food and raiment, wholesomer st, easier rents and taxes, will tempt many of your countrymen to cross the kerring-pond.

England's Path to Wealth, YEL

HERSALL, for rehearsal.

With this sad kersall of his heavy stresse, The warlike damzell was empassion'd sore. Spens. P. Q., III, zi, is HERSE. Apparently for that which is rehearsed; the same as HERSAL. Spenser's Pastoral of November, where "O heavy herse," and "O happie herse," form the two burdens of a funeral ditty, the commentator, E. K., explains it, "the solemn obsequie in funerals." In the Faery Queen, a lovesick princess attending public prayers, is said to be inattentive to the prayers,

For the faire damsell from the holy kerse

Her love-sicke hart to other thoughts did steale.

III. ii. 48.

Which, as Warton observed, seems to mean, from the matter then rehearsed, and he couples it with the hersall above cited. Obs. on F. Q., ii, p.

I have found it once used for a dead body:

Bold Archas pierses
Through the mid-hoast, and strewes his way with herses. Heyw. Britaines Troy, iii, 86.

To honour or worship; from herian, Saxon. Spenser twice uses this word, and explains it so himself, or his friend:

Tho' wouldest thou learn to carol of love, And kery with hymns thy lasses glove.

Spens. Skp. Kal., Feb., v. 61.

Thenot, now nis the time of merry-make,
Nor Pan to kerie, nor with love to play.

Free from the world's vile and inconstant qualms,
And kerry Pan with orizons and aims.

Drayt. Bel., 7, p. 1418. The' wouldcat thou learn to carol of love.

See also p. 1133.

†With holy verses keryed I her glove.

Drayton's Skepkerds Garland.

†Heryed and hallowed be thy sacred name.

Ibid.

HEST, more usually behest. A command. Hæst, Saxon.

and. Hæst, Naxum.

O my father,
I have broke your hest to say so. Temp., iii, 1.

Now made forget their former cruell mood,
T' obey their rider's hest, as seemed good.

Spens. P. Q., 1V, iii, 39.

Such untamed and unyelding pride

As will not bende unto your noble kestes.

Perrex & Porrex, O. Pl., i, 135.

The king prays pardon of his cruel kest.

O. Pl., ii, 163.

HESTERN, of yesterday. Hesternus, Latin.

So if a chronicler should misreport exploytes that were enterprised but hestern day.

Holinsh. Hist. of Irel., H 5, col. 2.

+HET. Used as the pret. t. of the verb to heat.

Her blushing het her chamber; she looked out, And all the air she purpled round about.

Marlowe and Chapman's Museus, p. 53.

HETHER, adv. Rather, as it seems, in the following passage:

I will kether spend the time in exhorting you to wake ready against that day, and to prepare your-solves, then [than] curiously to recite or expoun I the signes thereof.

Latimer, Serm., fol. 245, b.

HEYDEGUIES. See HAYDIGYES.

+7b HEYNE. To deck?

And on the turfic table with the best
Of lambs in all their flocke shall keyne the feast.

The Shepheard's Holiday, 1651.

+HICHCOCK. A simpleton.

Among whom this hickocke missed his rapier; at which all the company were in a maze; he besides his wits, for he had borrowed it of a speciall friend of his, and swore he had rather spend 20 nobles.

Jests of George Peele, n. d.

+HICHEL. An implement for dressing flax. "A hichel, hamus vel pecten, Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 138, "the maker of linnen cloth with his instruments, and that pertaineth."

+HICKET. To hiccough. The 1655 ed. of Shirley's Gentleman of Venice, iii, 4, has this verb, which Gifford, v. 53, erroneously considers a misread-+HICKET, or HICKOT. The hiccough. Le hocquet, ou sanglot. The hickot, or yering.

Of yelking or hicket.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1694.

HICK-SCORNER. See HYCKE-SCORNER. HICK-WAY, or HICK-WALL. One of the old popular names for a woodpecker. See HECCO.

Pecker. See HELUU.
And 'tis this same herb, your hick-ways, alias woodpeckers, use, when with some mighty ax any one stops up the hole of their nests, which they industriously dig and make in the trunk of some study tree.

Ozell's Rabelais, IV, ch. 62.

HIDDER AND SHIDDER. A strange rustic form, explained in the original notes to mean he and she: but whence derived does not appear.

For had his wesand been a little widder,
He would have devoured both hidder and shidder.
Spens. Shop. Kal., Sept., 210.
IIDDIE. Answers here to Virgil's +HIDDIB.

arduus. The kiddie horse standing within our town,

Hath armed men disgorg'd; fire up and down Sinon triumphant throws. Virgil, by Vicars, 1632. HIDE FOX AND ALL AFTER. by sir Thomas Hanmer to be the name of a sport among children, which must doubtless be the same as hide and seek, whoop and hide, &c.; but no instance is brought of the expression, except that of the following passage, which occasioned the remark: G. A thing, my lord! H. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. Haml., iv, 2. Hide and seek is certainly alluded to in Decker's Satiromastix, as quoted by Mr. Steevens, where it is said, HIGHT. A participle of the Anglo-"Cries all hid, as boys do." But it throws no light on the fox.

418

HIDE-PARK, now written Hyde-park, was a place of fashionable resort for coaches, as early as the year 1625.

Alas, what is it to his scene to kno How many coaches in Hide-park did show
Last spring.

B. Joss. Staple of News, Prologue for the Stage.

It is also mentioned by Ludlow:

This day was more observed for people going a maying, than for divers years past. Great resort to Hydepark; many hundreds of rich coaches, and gailants in attire, but most shameful powdered haired men, and painted, spotted women.

Memoirs, May 1, 1654. painted, spotted women.

It has long been written as if connected with the family of lord Clarendon: but it has been in the Crown from the time of Henry VIII. could the name refer to a hide of land. which is estimated at 120 acres. whereas this park is supposed to contain 620.

HIERONIMO, or JERONIMO. principal character in an old play by Thomas Kyd, entitled The Spanish Tragedy, or Hieronimo is mad again. See Go BY. JERONIMO.

+HIGH-GERMAN. Our early dramas make frequent mention of a High German (a huge animal) about the town, who seems to have been "a master of fence," or common challenger. See GERMAN, HIGH.

HIGH MEN. False dice, so loaded as to come always high numbers. See Fullam. Low men, of course, were the contrary, and produced low throws.

Your high And low men are but trifles; your pois'd dye,
That's ballasted with quicksilver or gold,
Is gross to this. Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 238.
Then play thou for a pound or for a pin,
High men or low men still are foisted in.

Higs men or tow men still are rousted in.

Harringt. Epig., i, 79.

Item, to my son Mat Flowerdale I bequeath two balo of false dice, videlicet, high men and low men, fullons, stop-cater-traics, and other bones of function.

London Prodigal, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 456.

In later times these had attained the name of high runners and low ruiners:

Shadwell is of opinion, that your bully, with his box and his false dice, is an honester fellow than the rhetorical author, who makes use of his tropes and figures, which are his high and his low runners, to cheat us at once of our money and of our intellectuals.

J. Denni's Letters, vol. ii, p. 407.

HIGH-PALMED. See PALMED and PALM.

Saxon verb hatan, to call. Used in a very peculiar way for some of the passive tenses, without the addition of the auxiliary am, or was, or their several persons. Dr. Johnson erroneously asserts, that it was used only in the preterite. See Tyrwhitt's note on Chaucer, v. 1016. For, am called:

The wizard smil'd and answer'd in some part,
Easy it is to satisfy thy will;
Ismen I kight, call'd an inchanter great,
Such skill have I in magic's secret teat. ret feat.
Fairf. Tasse, 1, 19.

Was called:

Full carefully he kept them day and night, In fairest fields, and Astrophel he hight. Highteth appears to have been sometimes used, but still with a passive signification:

This goeth aright; how highteth she, say you.

Ordinary, O. PL, x, 235.

As a participle, called:

Among the rest a good old woman was,

Hight mother Hubbard, who did far surpas

The rest in honest mirth that seem'd her well.

Spens. Moth. Hub. Tale. 33. It is sometimes used for, the man called, as in the following passage:
Wretch that he was into this land to bring
The Saxons, with high! Hengist, their talse king.
Niccu's Winter Nights, Mirror for Mag., p. 661.
It is employed by Shakespeare only in burlesque passages, as Love's L. L., i, l, and Mids. N. Dr., v, 1; and in this manner it is still occasionally introduced.

Spenser uses it in many other senses. For committed:

Yet charge of them was to a porter hight.

F. Q. Lir, 6.

Granted:

Yet so much favour she to him hath kight
Above the rest.

Ibid., 1V, viii, 51. Above the rest. Mentioned:

But reade you, sir, sith ye my name have hight,
What is your owne, that I mote you requite.
Phid, IV, vi. 4

Commanded, or directed:
But the sad steele seiz'd not where it was hight
Uppon the childe, but somewhat short did fall.

Given:

iven:
Her virtue was the downe that did delight,
What better downe can to a dame be high!
Ibid., V, iv. !!

+HIGLY-PIGLY,or HIGLETY-PIGL® Mixed together in confusion. In the older writers the spelling of this popular phrase is very uncertain.

No numerous a force did rally Before Troy town, then, in that vally, Then, just as neighbors highy piglie, Let then beaste graze, but then can quickie,

419

Knowing the care marke of their own, Spy 'em from ev'ry one's i' th town.

Homer a la Mode, 1665. Homer a la Mode, 1665.

Ra. Troth, sir, highe te pigle te among my neighbours.

Some better, some worse. Yet, tho' I snay't, that shou'dn't saay't. Tha as well belov'd as ony poor fellow't th' parish? Wit of a Woman, 1705.

HIGRE, or HYGRA. 'The name for the violent and tumultuous influx of the tide into the mouth of the Severn. and for similar effects in other rivers. It is spelt also aigre, eagre, eger. The derivation is as uncertain as the orthography. Mr. Todd tries the Runic and the Saxon; but I cannot find any authority for his Saxon word. Drvden has used eagre, as a general word for such a tide, occasioned by the narrowness of the channel, and the steepness of the banks; called also the bore of the Severn. For the etymology, I fear we cannot venture to go to the Greek υγρός. It is probably of Saxon origin. Drayton thus describes its effects:

Until they be imbrac'd In Sabrin's sovercign arms; with whose tumultuous

Shut up in narrower bounds the kigre wildly raves;
And frights the straggling flocks, the neighbouring shores to fly,

Afar as from the main it comes with hideous cry, And on the angry front the curled foam doth bring, The billows 'gainst the banks when fiercely it doth fling,

Hurls up the slimy ooze, and makes the scaly brood
Leap madding to the land affrighted from the flood;
O'erturns the toiling barge, whose steersman does not land.

And thrust her furrowing beak into her ireful panch.

Polyula., Song 7.

Chatterton, acquainted with this local phenomenon, has made it the subject of a simile:

As when the hygra of the Severne roars
And thunders ugsom on the sandes below,
The cleambe [noise] rebounds to Wedecester's shore,
And sweeps the black sand round its horie prowe.
Second Battle of Hastings, 691.

See also ver. 326 of the same.

In Drayton is this marginal note, upon a simile subjoined to the lines cited above: "A simile expressing the boar or higre." The name higra is spoken of by William of Malmsbury in the following passage, and the phenomenon described:

the phenomenon described:

In eo quotidianus aquarum furor, quod utrum voragiaem vel vertigiaem undarum dicam nescio; fundo ab imo verrens arenas et conglobans in cumulum cum impetu venit, nec ultra quam ad pontem pertendit; nonnunquam etiam ripas transcendit, et magna vi parte terras circuita victor regreditur; infelix navis si quam à latere attigerit. Nautæ certè gnari cum vident illam higram (sic enim Anglicè vocant) venire, navem olivetiunt, et per medium secuntes violentium ejus elidunt.

De Pontif., lib. iv, p. 283

In this last circumstance we see that Drayton exactly agrees with this writer. Drayton has applied the same name to the tide in the Yorkshire Ouse or Humber:

For when my higre comes, I make my either shore Even tremble with the sound, that I afar do send. Polyolb., xxviii, p. 1206.

See also Eger, in Todd.

[Taylor the water-poet gives the following description of the same phenomenon as observed on the coast of Lincolnshire:]

tAnd there in three houres space and little more, We row'd to Boston from the Norfolke shore; We row'd to Boston from the Norfolke shore; Which by report of people that dwell there, Is six and twenty mile, or very neere. Is six and twenty mile, or very neere. The way unknowne, and we no pilot had, Flats, sands and sloales, and tydes all raging mad, Which sands our passage many times denide, And put us sometimes three or foure miles wide. Besides the flood runs there with such great force, That I imagine it out-runnes a horse; And with a head some 4 foot high that rores, It on the sodaine swels and beats the shores. It tunnibed us a ground upon the sands, And all that we could doe with wit, or hands, Could not resist it, but we were in doubt It would have beaten our boates bottome out. It hath lesse mercy then beare, wolfe, or tyger, And in those countries it is called the syger. We much were unarquainted with those fashions, And much it troubled us with sundry passions; We thought the shore we never should recover, And look'd still when our boat would tumble over. But He that made all with his word of might, Brought us to Boston, where we lodg'd all night.

HILD, for held, for the sake of a rhyme. This kind of licence was very frequently taken by Spenser, and other contemporaries of Shakespeare.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flow'r,
But chide rough winter that the flow'r hath kill'd;
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
La worth plane. Oles if not haid.

Is worthy blame. O let it not be kild Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd With men's abuses, Shakesp. Rape of Lucrece, Suppl., i, 545. HILDEBRAND. The family name of pope Gregory the Seventh, so blackened by Fox, and other writers against the Romish Church, that his name became proverbial in this country for violence and mischief. In an old abridgment of Fox's Martyrs, by a Dr. Bright, printed 1589, I find him thus described: "This Hildebrand was a most wicked and reprobate monster, a sorcerer, a necromancer, an old companion of Silvester, Theophilactus, and Laurentius, conjurers." Page 136. Any name of reproach being thought fair to such a character, Shakespeare has made Falstaff call him Turk:

Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have HINCH-PINCH. See Warburton's note on the passage: Lead him a prisoner to the lady too.

Sn. W.rrant ye, though he were Gog or Hildebrand.

Wite, O. Pl., viii, 502.

A HILDING, s. A base, low, menial wretch; derived by some from hinderling, a Devonshire word, signifying degenerate; by others, from the Saxon (see Todd's Johnson). Perhaps, after all, no more originally than a corruption of hireling, or hindling, diminutive of kind; which the following passage seems a little to confirm:

A base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent!
Cymb., ii, 8. In apposition with another substantive, as peasant is occasionally used: Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lacqueys, and our peasants,
Who, in unnecessary action, swarm
About our squares of battle, were enough
To purge this field of such a kilding foe. Hen. V, iv, 2.

For a coward:

If your lordship find him not a kilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Ait's Well, iii, 6. more in your respect. It was applied to women, as well as men:

For shame, thou hilding of a devilish spirit. Tam. Shr., ii, 1. But now I see this one is one too much. But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a rurse in having her;
Out on her, hilding! Rom. and Jul., ii, 5.
This is that scornful piece, that scurry hilding,
That gave her promise faithfully she would be here,
Cicely, the sempster's daughter. Two Noble K., iii, 5.
Dost thou dispute with me? Alexander, carry the prating hilding forth.
B. F. F. Coxcomb, act iv, p. 216 (spoken of Viola).

+ HILLISH. Vast; as large as hills.

The wounded whale casts from his killish jawes
Bivers of waters, mixt with purple gore.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

HILTS. A familiar term for cudgels; the basket hilt, for the defence of the hand, being the most permanent part of them; the sticks might be changed at pleasure.

Petch the kitts; fellow Juniper, wilt thou play? Jun. I cannot resolve you: 'tie as I am fitted with the ingenuity, quantity, or quality of the cudgel.

B. Jons. Case is altered, ii, 7.

Martino, who is sent, certainly brings the cudgels, not the baskets only: "Enter Martino, with the cudgels." Falstaff either calls his broad sword hilts, or he means to swear by the hilts, as Owen Glendower by the cross of his Welch hook:

Seven, by these kills, I am a villain else.

1 Hon. IV, ii, 4. Hilts were frequently used in the plural, though said of one weapon.

The name of an old Christmas game, mentioned with others in the following passage.

Others in the following passage. Your puffe, your crosse-puffe, your expuffe, your inpuffe uppon the face of a tender infant, are fitting complements for hymch pynch, and lasyk nol, coale under candlesticke, friar Rush, and wopenny hoe. Which are more civilly acted, and will lesse foule soyle, and lothsome indecorum, then you spattring and greasing tricks upon the puore infant.

Declaration of Popish Impostures, 1633.

+HINDBERRY. The raspberry.

Morum rubi Idmi. Framboises. A raspis berrie or Nomenclator, 186.

HING, for hang, in the same manner as hild for held. A variation for the sake of rhyme. See HILD.

That fear, death, terror, and amazement bring;
With ugly paws some trample on the green,
Some gnaw the snakes that on their shoulders king.

Heav'n in thy palm this day the balance bings, Which makes kings gods, or men more great than kings.

Damb Knight, O. Pl., iv, 628. There are traces of this form in the Scottish dialect. See the Glossary to Gavin Douglas's Virgil.

+HINGELS. Hinges.

Item, for the kingels of those doores, iij.s.

MS. Accounts of Stockton, Norfolk, 1659. A suggestion; used also by Shakespeare for a cause or subject.

Alack, for pity!

I, not remembring how I cried on's then, (Steeress, for out,)

Will cry it o'er again; it is a hint That wrings mine eyes to 't.
For our escape Temp . i. 2.

For our escape
Is much beyond our loss; our sint of woe
Is common; every day, some sailor's wife,
The master of some merchant, and the merchant Have just our theme of woe. It may, however, mean there, slight touch or memento.

Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle,
Rough quarties, rocks, and hills whose heads tosch heav'n,
It was my kint to speak.

Othello, i. $.

In this passage the old quarto reads hent; the second quarto, hint. It seems most probable that the right reading is hint. See HENT.

To have on the hip. To have at HIP. This phrase an entire advantage. seems to have originated from hunting, because, when the animal pursued is seized upon the hip, it is finally disabled from flight. In some of his notes on Shakespeare, Dr. Johnson says, that it is taken from the art of wrestling; which is not without appearance of probability, because, when a wrestler can throw his adversary across his own hip, he gives him the severest of all falls, technically termed a cross-buttock: but it will be seen, in the following passages, that the allusion is carried on with evident reference to the other origin:

evident reference to the sign of the kip,
If I can catch him once upon the kip,
I will feed fat the uncient grudge I bear him.
Merch. of V., i, 3. The hound who has caught a deer by the hip, may feed himself fat on his flesh; but this has nothing to do with a wrestler.

ith a wrestler.

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,

I'll kase our Michael Cassio on the kip.

Othello, ii, 1.

Though this passage is greatly corrupted, its allusion to hunting cannot be overlooked. As to the text. the oldest quarto reads the first line.

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I crush. Warburton conjectured "poor brach." sagaciously, and in exact conformity to the whole tenour of the passage. See Brach. He also proposed cherish for crush, almost as happily; for certainly the general sense is, "If this hound, Roderigo, whose merit is his quick hunting, is staunch also, and will hold, I shall have my game on the hip." The present reading, trash, departs from this sense, and neither substitutes one so good, nor is itself fully established, as being legitimately used in that sense. It is derived from the reading of the folio, which is.

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trace: Which seems to be more corrupt than the reading of the quarto. Warburton's conjectures at least make good sense of the whole, which is some advantage:

If this poor brach of Venice, whom I cherish For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip.

Cherish may not have been the very word of Shakespeare, but something to that effect is surely required. The chief objection is, that brach is seldom used, except for a female; but if that be thought valid, trash may stand, as a word of general con-

Dr. Johnson, in his Dictionary, corrected the opinion given in his notes to Shakespeare, and derived the expression from hunting.

The meaning of the word in the following passage is not clear.

†The Græcians them commande that dwelt by kip In villages, to make no spare of wine.

Mirour for Magistrates, 1587.

HIPPOCRAS. A medicated drink, composed usually of red wine, but sometimes white, with the addition of sugar and spices. Some would derive it from δπό, and κεράννυμι, to mix: but Menage observes, that as the apothecaries call it vinum Hippocraticum, he is convinced that it is derived from Hippocrates, as being originally composed by medical skill. It is not improbable, that, as Mr. Theobald observes, in a note on the Scornful Lady (p. 286), it was called Hippocras, from the circumstance of its being strained; the woollen bag used for that purpose being called, by the apothecaries, Hippocrates's It was a very favorite beverage, and usually given at weddings.

R. Stay, what's best to drink a mornings?

R. Joocras, sir, for my mistress, if I fetch it, is most dear to her.

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 283. dear to hel.

Honest wa., U. r.i., III, 200.

Drank to your health, whole nights, in Hippocras,

Upon my knees, with more religion

Than e'er I said my pray'rs, which heav'n forgive me.

Antiquary, O. Pl., x, 28.

In old books are many receipts for the composition of Hippocras, of which the following is one:

which the following is one:

Take of cinamon 2 oz. of ginger \(\frac{1}{2}\) and oz. of grains a \(\frac{1}{2}\) of un oz., punne [pound] them grosse, and put them into a pottle of good claret or white wine, with half a pound of sugar; let all steep togy-ther, a night at the least, close covered in some bottle of glasse, pewter, or stone; and when you would occupy it, cast a thinne linnen cloath or a picce of a boulter over the mouth of the bottle, and let so much run through as you will drink at that time, keeping the rest close, for so it will keep both the spirit, odor, and virtue of the wine and spices. And if you would make but a quart, then take but half the spices aforesnid.

Haven of Health, Ch. 228, p. 264.

Ry a pottle is meant two quarts. See

By a pottle is meant two quarts. See POTTLE. See also Strutt's View of Manners, &c., vol. iii, p. 74.

Manners, &c., vol. 111, p. /4.

†To make Hypocrass the best way.—Take 5 ounces of aqua vitæ, 2 ounces of pepper, and 2 of ginger, of cloves and grains of paradice each 2 ounces, ambergrease three grains, and of must two grains, infuse them 24 hours in a glass bottle on pretty warm embers, and when your occasion requires to use it, put a pound of sugar into a quart of wine or cyder, dasolve it well, and then drop 3 or 4 drops of the infusion into it, and they will make it taste richly.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

†The wind blows cold the weather's raw,

The beggars now do skulk in straw,

Whilst those whose means are somewhat higher,

Do warm ther moses by a fire.

Do warm their noses by a fire. Sack, Hippoer s now, and burnt brandy, Are drinks as warm and good as can be;

But if thy purse won't reach so high, With ale and beer that want supply.

Poor Robin, 1696.

+IIIRDES. See Hurds.

HIREN. A corruption of the name of Irene, the fair Greek, first broached, perhaps, by G. Peele, in his play of The Turkish Mahomet and Hiren the fair Greek. In this play, which does not appear to have been published, was probably the hemistich so often alluded to by subsequent dramatists, "Have we not Hiren here?"

And therefore, while we have Hiren here, speak my little dish-washers. Decker, Satirom., Or. Dr., iii, 173. What ominous news can Polymetes daunt.

What ominous news can Polymetes daunt?
Have we not Hiren here?
Law Tricks, 1608.
Stoot, lend me some money. Hast thou not Hyren here?
Eastward Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 218.

Pistol, in his rants, twice brings in the same words, but apparently meaning to give his sword the name of Hiren:

Down, down, dogs, down faitors! Have we not Hiren here? 2 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

And soon after,

Die men like does, give crowns like pins, Have we not Hiren here? Ibid.

Mrs. Quickly, with admirable simplicity, supposes him to ask for a woman, and replies, "O my word, captain, we have no such here; what the goujere, do you think I would deny her?" Ibid.

In another old play, on the Clown saying, "We have Hiren here," the Cook and he dispute whether it was Hiren or Siren. Massing. Old Law, iv. 1.

Mr. Douce, by extraordinary chance, picked up an old rapier, with the very motto of Pistol's sword upon it, in French:

Si fortune me tourmente, L'espérance me contente.

See his Illustr. of Shakesp., i, p. 453, where he has given a woodcut of it.

HIS, pron. It was commonly supposed, during the imperfect state of English grammar, that the pronoun his was the legitimate formative of the genitive case of nouns, and that the s, with an apostrophe, was only a substitute for that word. Modern grammarians, struck with the absurdity of supposing the same abbreviation to stand for his, her, and their (as the s is subjoined also to feminine and plural nouns), have recurred to the Saxon, where is, or es, formed the genitives; which fully accounts for the abbreviation. See Lowth's Gram., p. 25; Johnson's, prefixed to his Dict.; and Tyrwhitt's Essay on the Language and Versif. of Chaucer, in his edition of the Cant. Tales, vol. iv, p. 31. But the other opinion was formerly general, and traces of it are found from the time of Shakespeare, and even earlier, to that of Addison. Ben Jonson says expressly, in his English Grammar.

To the genitive cases of all nouns denoting a possessor, is added s with an apostrophe, thereby to avoid the gross syntax of the pronoun siz joining with a nous; as the emperor's court, the general's sclour; not the emperor his court, &c.

Chap xiii, ed. Whalley, vol. vii, p. 50.

This form, as is well known, occurs once at least in the Liturgy; namely, in the prayer for all sorts and conditions of men, which concludes, "and this we beg, for Jesus Christ his sake."

Shakespeare has written according to the notion of his time:

Vincentio his son, brought up in Florence, It shall become to, &c. Tam. Shr., i, l. Once in a sea-light 'gainst the duke his gallies I did some service.

Treefith N., in, & In the following, he seems to have accumulated the two methods:

Madam, an if my brother had my shape, And I had his, sir Robert's Ais, like him.

Unless the true reading were "sir Robert his." Inaccurate speaker still occasionally use a double form, as sir Robert's 's, which may account for the accumulation in Shakespeare, whether by himself or his publishers. Spenser has written his, and made it form his verse in a peculiar manner:

This knight too late, his manhood and his might I did assay.

F. Q., IV, i. St. For "this knight's manhood and might." By aid of this supposed syntax, his blood, his wounds, &c., were sometimes used for God's blood, &c., omitting the sacred name, which should be the antecedent:

Nay by Godde's harte, if I might doe what I list, Not one of them all that should scape my fist. His nayles! I would plague them one way or another. New Castome, U. Pl., i, 271.

And again:

And trust, by his woundes! Avarice, some agayse in to trie.

And. His blood ! I would I might have once scene that chance +HITCHER. A sort of boat-hook.

And when they could not cause him to rise, one of them tooke a hitcher, or long boate-hooke, and hitch'd in the sicke mans breeches, drawing him backward. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

HO, s. Originally a call, from the interrection ho! afterward rather like a stop or limit, in the two phrases, out of all ho, for out of all bounds: and there's no ho with him, that is, he is not to be restrained. Both seem deducible, in some degree, from the notion of calling in or restraining a sporting dog, or perhaps a hawk, with a call, or ho; or so calling to a person at a distance, or going away.

Oh, aye; a plague on 'em, there's no ko with them, they are madder than March hares. Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 853.

See also 382.

Because, forsooth, some odd poet, or some such fan-tastic fellows make much on him, there's no ho with him; the vile dandiprat will overlook the proudest of his acquaintance. Lingua, O. P. L., v, 172. For he once loved the fair maid of Fresingfield out of For ne once loved the fair maid of Fresingfield out of all hoe. Green's Freye Bacos, $\frac{2}{2}\cdots, \text{G S.}$

†Would not my lord make a rare player? oh, he would upholde a companie beyond all hoe, better then Mason among the kings players!

Play of Sir Thomas More.

So also, OUT OF ALL CRY, which see. There's no ho with him; but once hartned thus, he will needes be a man of warre.

Nash's Lenten St., Harl. Misc., vi, p. 160.

If they gather together, and make a muster, there is no hoe with them A Strange Metam., cited Cens. Lit., vii, 287. The phrase was retained even by Swift, in the jocular strain of his familiar

When your tongue runs, there's no hoe with you, pray.

Journ. to Stella, Let. 20. †And as the medley grew hote, such a sound there was of shields, such a clattering noyse also, as well of was of shields, such a clattering noyse also, as well of the men themselves as their weapons, making a dolefull din, as among whome there was now no hoe nor stay at all of their hands, that all the fields were covered over with bloud and slaine bodies lying along.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.
†Inexplebile dollum: hee hath no hoe with him.

Withat's Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 560.
†Phil. Must we still thus be check'd? we live not what a kine but a nedgagone, he's insufferable

tPhil. Must we still thus be check'd? we live not under a king, but a predagogue: hee's insufferable.

Leo. Troth he's so proud now he must be kill'd to make a supper for the immortall canniballs, that there's no ho with him.

Carteright's Royall Slave, 1651.

HO, HO. An established dramatic exclamation, given to the devil, whenever he made his appearance on the stage; and attributed to him when he was supposed to appear in reality. But Diccon, Diccon, did not the devil cry ko, ko?

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii, 34.

Ho, ko, quoth the devyll, we are well pleased,
What is his name thou wouldst have eased.

Four Ps. O. Pl., i, 88.

Ben Jonson's comedy of the Devil is an Ass, begins with a long ho, ho, from Satan himself. Robin Goodfellow, a clown who often personates the devil, to scare his neighbours, in the old play of Wily Beguiled, speaks thus of his enterprise:

Tush! fear not the dodge; I'll rather put on my flushing red nose, and my flaming face, and come wrap'd in a call's skin, and cry ko, ko; I'll fray the scholar, I warrunt thee. Origin of Dr., iii, 319. In that work it is indeed printed bo, bo. which alteration Mr. Hawkins made, I presume, from not being acquainted with the customary interiections of the fiend. In Mr. Reed's notes to the Old Plays, it is cited ho. ho, which is probably right; but I have never had an opportunity of seeing the original play.

HOAR, or HOARY. Used sometimes for mouldy, because mouldiness gives a white appearance.

R. What hast hou found? M. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pye, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

Rom. and Mal., ii, 4. Many of Chaucer's words are become as it were vinew'd and hoarie with over long lying.

Bream. to Specht, on his Chaucer.

Lest, starke with rest, they finew'd waxe and hoare.

Mirror for Mag., p. 417.

To HOAR. To become white or mouldy, or to make anything so.

Hoar the flamen That scolds against the quality of flesh, And not believes himself. Timon of Alk., iv, 3. When it koars ere it be spent.

Rom. and Jul., loc. cit.

Devote to mouldy customs of hoar'd eld.

Marston's What you will, B 4. +To HOAST. To take up one's abode with any one; to have him for one's host. See Host.

Abound with fishes, pray Hyperion
Tabandon soon his liquid mansion,
If he expect, in his prefixt career, If he expect, in his prenxi causes,
To koast with you a month in every yeer.

Du Bartas.

HOB. A frequent name, in old times, among the common people, particularly in the country. It is sometimes used, therefore, to signify a countryman; and hob-goblin meant perhaps, originally, no more than clown-goblin, or bumpkin-goblin. Coriolanus, curiously enough, finds this name among the citizens of Rome:

Why in this wolvish gown should I stand here,
To beg of Hob, and Dick, that do appear
Their needless vouches.

Coriol., ii, 3. The country gnuffs [i. e., gnoffs] Hob, Dick, and Hick, With staves and clouted shoon.

Old Proph., cited by Steevens.

Hence the farce of Hob in the Well. in much later times, to denote the clown in the well.

Hob was also used as a substitute for hob-goblin:

From elves, hobs, and fairies, That trouble our dairies, From fire-drakes, and fiends,

From fire-drakes, and fields,
And such as the devil sends,
Defend us, good heaven!
B. and Pl. Mons. Thom., iv, 6.
For proof, take Merlin father'd by an hob,
Because he was said to be the son of a demon.

Many of the countrey kobs, who had gotten an estate liable to a fine, took it first as a jeast, and thereupon made no appearance, but their purses afterwards paid fur it in good earnest. This project alone bringing into the exchequer no less then a hundred thousand pound. pound Select Lives of English Worthics.

HOB-GOBLIN. See Puck.

+HOB-IN-THE-HALL. The name of an old game.

Sailor. Faith, to tell your honour the truth, we were at hob-in-the-hall, and whilst my brother and I were quarrelling about a cast, he slunk by us. Wycherley, Plain-dealer, 1677.

HOB-NOB. See HABBE NABBE.

HOBBIDIDANCE, HOBERDIor One of Shakespeare's DANCE. fiends, taken from the history of the Jesuits' impostures. See FLIBBERTI-GIBBET.

Hobbididance, prince of dumbness. Lear, iv. 1. +HOBBY. A species of hawk.

For this understand, that my friends are unwilling that I should match so low, not knowing that love thinketh the juniper sirubbe to been she high as the tall oakes, or the nightingales laies to be more precious then the estridges feathers, or the larke that breedeth in the ground to be better then the kobby that mounteth to the clouds.

Lylie's Euphues.

HOBBY-HORSE. A small horse; also a personage belonging to the ancient morris dance, when complete, and made, as Mr. Bayes's troops are on the stage, by the figure of a horse fastened round the waist of a man, his own legs going through the body of the horse, and enabling him to walk, but concealed by a long footcloth; while false legs appeared where those of the man should be, at the sides of the horse. The hobby-horse is represented by figure 5 of the plate subjoined to 1 Hen. IV, in Steevens's Shakespeare of 1778, and the subsequent editions, and illustrated by Mr. Tollet's remarks. Latterly the hobby-horse was frequently omitted, which appears to have occasioned a popular ballad, in which was this line, or burden:

For O. for O. the hobby-horse is forest.

Which is quoted in Love's L. L.. iii. 1. and Haml., iii, 2.

Tother hobby-korse, I perceive, is not forgotten.

Greene's Tu Quoque, O. 11., vii, V.
But see, the kobby-korse is forgot.
Fool it must be your lot,
To supply his want with faces,
And other buffoon graces.

B. Jons. Entert. of the Queen, Fr., at Althore, vol. v, p. 211, ed. Whalley.

This had become almost a proverbial expression:

EXPITESSIOII;

Cf. Answer me, hobbihorse, which way crost he you saw enow? Jen. Who do you speake to, sir? We have forgot the hobbihorse.

Druc's Dutch. of Suff., C 4 h.

The Puritans, who were declared enemies of all sports and games, seem to have been particularly inveterate against the poor hobby-horse. The following may be taken as a specimen of their eloquence against him:

The beast is an unseemly and a lewd beast, And got at Rome by the pope's coach horses, His mother was the mare of ignorance.

B. J. Pl. Woman Pleas'd, 1.

Where is much more to the same The forgetting the hobbyeffect. horse is there also introduced:

Shall th' hobby-horse be forgot then? The hopeful hobby-horse, shall be lie founder'd? And the mode of carrying the horse is alluded to:

Take up your horse again, and girth him to you, And girth him handsomely, good neighbour Bomby. Many tricks were expected of the dancer who acted the hobby-horse, and some of a juggling nature as pretending to stick daggers in his nose, (perhaps a false one,) which is represented in the print from Mr. Tollet's window. Sogliardo, in Every Man out of his Humour, boasts of an excellent hobby-horse, in which his father and himself were famous for dancing:

HOBELER, or HOBBLER. A term for a sort of light horseman, from their riding on hobbies, or small horses. See Chamb. Dict. and Du Cange.

Hee that might dispende tenne pounde should furnish hymselfe, or fynde a demiliaunce, or a light horsessa, if I shall so tearme him, beeyng then called a hobeler with a launce.

Holingh... vol. ii. K k 3.

See Stat. 18 Eliz., iii, 12.

I cannot conjecture in what sense hobler is intended to be used in the following speech, unless it means a lame or hobbling thing. He speaks of his ill success as a fiddler :

Marry, sir, you see I go wet shod and dry mouthed, for yet could I never get new shoes or good drink: rather than I'll lead this life, I'll throw my fiddle into the leads for a hobier. Lyly's Mother Bombie, v, 3. It was French also. Roquefort says. " Hobeler, cavalier qui monte un cheval Ecossois, qu'on nommoit anciennement hobin;" which Coles also testifies, by rendering it, "Velites olim in Gallia merentes." It appears, therefore, that the origin is Scotch, not Irish.

†HOBIDY-BOOBY. A popular term of contempt.

His legs are distorted so many several ways that he looks like a hobidy booby, prop'd up with a couple of crooked hillets.

Man's Treachery to Woman, 1790.

†HOBY, or HOBBY. A small horse; a nag. Hobbies were strong active horses, of rather a small size, and are reported to be originally natives of Ireland. It is pretended that they were so much liked and used that the word became a proverbial expression for anything of which people are extremely fond.

+HOCAS-POCAS, was the usual old spelling of a well-known phrase.

If I do not think women were got with riddling, whip me! Hooss, Pocas, here you shall have me, and there you shall have me. Bandolph's Jealous Lovers, 1646. On Hooss Pocas.

Mere Hocas lyes with his tricks and his knocks, Whom death hath made sure as a juglers box; Who many hath cozen'd by his leiger-demain, Is presto convey'd and here underlain.
Thus Hocas he's here, and here he is not, While death plaid the Hocas, and brought him to th'
yot. Witts Recreations, 1654.

+HOCKAMORE. A sort of liquor.

I did but innocently regale myself t'other day, amongst other choice female friends, at my lady Goodfellow's, with a glass or two of hockamors, The Richmond Heiress, 1693.

HOCK-TIDE. An annual festival, which commenced the fifteenth day after Easter. That it was long observed, and that gatherings, or collections of money, were then made, is certain, from the churchwardens' accounts of various parishes; but its origin has been much disputed by historians and autiquaries. As it was a moveable feast, depending upon Easter, it could not be the commemoration of any fixed event, as some have pretended. The whole discussion, which is much too long for this place, may be seen in Brand's Pop. Antiq., vol. i, pp. 156 -165, 4to ed. On the authority of Mr. Bryant, who combated its historical origin, it has been derived from hoch, high, German.

Whatever was the origin of hock, it was applied also to another feast, that of harvest-home; and Herrick has a short poem, entitled the Hock-Cart. or Harvest-Home, where he savs.

Harvest-Home, where some the harvest swains and wenches bound
For joy, to see the hock-cart crown'd.

Hesperides, p. 114. This hock-tide is still observed in Suffolk, Cambridge, and the neighbouring counties, under the corrupted names of hawkey, hockey, or horkey; in which last form, a copious description of the festival, as observed in Suffolk, is given in the New Monthly Magazine, for November, 1820, pp. 492-198. See also Todd's Johnson. in Hockey, or Hawkey. Dr. Clarke has mentioned it in his Travels. Bloomfield, though a Suffolk lad, does not venture on the provincial name, but celebrates harvest-home in common English. See his Summer, v. 287. To HOCUS, v. To cheat, to impose upon; from hocus-pocus, the jargon of pretended conjurers; the origin of which, after various attempts, seems to be rightly drawn from the Italian jugglers, who said Ochus Bochus, in reference to a famous magician of those names. Verelii Epit. Hist. Suio-Goth. See Todd, in Hocus-pocus.

The mercer cries, was ever man so hocuse's! however I have enough to maintain me here.

Art of Wheedling, p. 323.

One of the greatest pieces of legerdemain, with which jugglers hocus the vulgar.

Natson, quoted by Todd. L'Estrange has hocus-pocussing, at length. Mr. Malone considered the modern word hoar, as made from this; and, indeed, between hocuss'd and hoaxt there is hardly any difference, and I prefer this derivation to those that are more learned. See Todd, in Hocus. It is a strong confirmation of this origin, that hoax is not a word handed dow a to us from our ancestors. but very lately introduced, by persons who might have retained hocus, a word hardly obsolete, but could know nothing of Saxon, or the books in Lambeth Library.

HOD

A ludicrous term of HODDY-PEKE. reproach, generally equivalent to fool; perhaps originally synonymous with hodmandod, or snail. It is remarkable that Bacon enumerates hodmandod. or dodman, among fish that cast their shells; what he means is doubtful.

Art here again, thou hoddyp-ke?

Gammer Gurlon, O. Pl., ii, 45.

What, ye brainsicke fooles, ye hoddy-peakes, ye doddy poules, doe ye believe him? are ye seduced also?

Latim. Serm., fol. 44, b.

Who, under her husband's that hoddy-peke's mose, must have all the destilling dew of his delicate rose.

Nash's Anatomic of Absurdities, B.

It seems, in the latter place, to mean cuckold, of which the horned snail might be thought a fit emblem.

†They counte peace to be cause of ydelnes, and that it maketh men hodipskes and cowardes. Christopherson, Exh. ag. Rebel., 1554.

HODDY-POULE. Thick head, dunderhead; the same as DODDIPOLE.
Whereat I much wonder.

How such a hoddy poule
So boldly dare controlle,
And so malapertly withstand The kynges owne hand.

Skelton, Why come ye not to Court?

HOFUL, and HOFULLY. See Todd. I have not met with the words.

"You have brought your +HOGS. hoggs to a fair market," Howell, 1659, said ironically of any one who has made any mismanagement of his affairs.

That the glory given me, for having played my part the best of all the actors, who were some of them of the rudest sort of the people of Paris, and according to the instructions of our regent (who had in him no more humanity than a hoggard) had every one of them a fair handkerchief in his hand for want of a more gracefull posture. Comicall History of Francion, 1655.

+HOGGING-SHIRTS. Charles II, in his disguise after his escape from Worcester, "had an old coarse shirt, patched both at the neck and hands, of that very coarse sort which, in that country, go by the name of hoggingshirts.

HOGH. A hill; from the Dutch. place near Plymouth was so called, which Camden terms the haw.

That well can witness yet unto this day The western hogh, besprinkled with the gore
Of mighty Goernot.
Seens. P. O., II. x. 10. Drayton speaks of it also:

All doubtful to which part the victory would go, Upon that lofty place at Plinmouth call'd the hos, Those mighty wrestlers met. Polyo's, song i, p. 668.

+HOG-LICE. Woodlice.

And if the worms, called wood-lice, or hog-lice, be seen in great quantities together, it is a token that it will rain shortly after. Husbandman's Practice, 1673.

+HOGLING.

Yet I am sory for the qualitie of som of your news, that sir Robert Mansell being now in the Mediterra-nean with a considerable navall strength of ours against the Moors, to do the Spaniard a pleasure, marque Spinola should in a hagling way, change his master for the time, and taking commission from the emperour, becom his servant for invading the Palatinat.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

Literally, a high flavour, +HO-GO. from the French haut-gout. Generally used rather in burlesque.

And why not say a word or two
Of she that's just? witnesse all who

Of she that's just? witnesse all who Have ever been at thy ko-go.

Choyce Drollery, 1656, p. 34.

A bad husband is an inconsiderate piece of sottisket-travagance; for though he consist of several ill ingredients, yet still good fellowship is the cause size yearon, and gives him the ko-go.

Twelve Ingenious Characters, 1666.

HOGREL. The rustic name for a sheep of two years old.

And to the temples first they hast, and seeke
By sacrifice for grace, with hogrels of two years.

Surrey, Firg., B. iv, l. 73.

At one year they are hogs. +HOGSDON CASK. Over a Hogsdon cask signifies here in a very hurried and unceremonious manner, but we cannot explain the phrase any further.

This poor and kitchinglike to come to doweright and plain terms of love; you true ladies abhor it, fie upon it, upon one meeting, or over a Hogsdon cask, to chap up a match.

The Wieard, a Play, 1640, MS.

HOG'S-NORTON. A village in Oxfordshire, north-east of Chipping Norton, which Ray says was properly called Hoch Norton, but is now Hook Norton, or Hoke Norton. Camden says, that the clownishness of the inhabitants occasioned it to be popularly called Hog's Norton, and Ray has a proverb of that meaning:

You were born at Hog's Norton. Equivalent to saying, you are a clown. The old saying, that the pigs play on the organ there, was probably a continuation of the joke, calling the inhabitants pigs, who had probably an organ in their church. Ray, is another place, will have Pig, or Pigs, the name of a man who played the organs (see p. 206), and there inadvertently transfers it to the Hoke Norton of Leicestershire. But see ORGANS.

URGANS.

But the great work in which I mean to glory
Is in the raising a cathedral church;
It shall be at Hog's Norton, with a pair
Of stately organs; more than pity 'twere
The pigs should lose their skill for want of practice.

Rand. Muses' Looking Glass, O. Pl., ix, 212.
If thou bestowst any curtesie on mee, and I do not requite it, then call mee cut, and say I was brought up at Hogge Norton, where pigaes play on the organs.

Nash's Apol. of Pierce Penilesse, K 4.

HOIDEN. Mr. Gifford has suggested, that hoiden seems to be used for a leveret in the following passage. It clearly appears to be a hunting term for some kind of game:

You mean to make a hoiden or a hare o' me, to hunt counter thus, and make these doubles.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii, 6.

+HOIGH. On the hoigh, eagerly, riot-

Ously.

During the time whilst he and I were conferring of these matters, we came to the butchers shambles, there comes running upon the hoigh together to meete me, all the hucksters, fishmongers, butchers, cookes, puddingwrights, sellers of fresh fish, who both before I brake, as also after I became bankrout, I had beene handfall unto and am all offen still. beneficiall unto, and am all often still. Terence in English, 1614.

To HOIT. To indulge in riotous and noisy mirth. We still speak of a hoity-toity person.

He sings and koits and revels among his drunken com-panions.

B. J. Pl. Kn. of B. Pest. panions.

B. & Fl. Kn. of
We shall have such a koyling here anon,

We shall have such a hoyting here anon, You'll wonder at it.

Webst. Thracian Wonder, ii, 1, repr., p. 31.

For questionlesse the court is not a place for children, a school for infants, nor a market-place for boyes, hoytings, and knaveries, but a place of vertue, wisedone, and prudence. Passenger of Bensenato, 1613.

+HOKY-CAKE. A seed-cake.

Bocke Monday, and the wake in summer, shrovings, the wakefull ketches on Christmas eve, the holy, or seed cake, these he yearely keepes; yet holdes them

no reliques of popery

New and Choise Characters, 1615.

Harvest is done, therefore, wife, make

For harvest men a hoaky cake.

Poor Robin, 1719. +HOLBORN was the high road from Newgate to Tyburn, by which, therefore, condemned malefactors were carried publicly to be hanged. It is, therefore, often a subject of allusion in the old popular writers.

Item, he loves to ride when he is weary, yet at certaine times he holds it ominous to ride up Holborne.

Harry White's Humour, 1659.

HOLD. To cry hold ! when persons were fighting, was, according to the old military laws, an authoritative way of separating them. This is shown by the following passage, produced by Mr. Tollet: it declares it to be a capital offence.

Whosover shall strike stroke at his adversary, either in the heat or otherwise, if a third do cry kold, to the intent to part them. Bellay's Instructions for the Wars, transl. 1589.

If they fought in lists, the general only could part them. Ioid. This well illustrates the following passage of Shakespeare:

Nor heav'n peep through the blanket of the dark To cry hold! hold! Mach. Hold was also the word of yielding. See Macb., v, 7.

[To take hold, a term in hunting.] tWhen a hart is past his sixt years, he is generally to be called a hart of tenn, and afterwards according to the increase of his head, whether he be crocked paimed, or crowned. When he breaketh heard, and draweth to the thickets, or coverts, the foresters and woodmen do say, he laketh his hold.

Managood's Lauses of the Forrest, 1598.

The HOLE. One of the meanest apartments in the Counter prison, in Woodstreet, was so called; as a still worse room had the name of Hell.

room had the name of Hell.

But if e'er we clutch him again, the Counter shall charm him. Rav. The kole rot him.

Puritan, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 590.

In Wood street's kole, or Poultry's hell.

Counter-rat, a Poem.

Next from the stocks, the kole, and little-ease, Sad places, which kind nature do displease,

And from the rattling of the keeper's keys,

Libera nos, Domine.

Walks of Hogsdon, with the Humours of Wood

Street ('ompter, a Concely, 1657.

From the feather bed in the master's side, or the flock bed in the knight's ward, to the straw bed in the kole.

Miseries of Inf. Marr., O. Pl., v, 48. See also O. Pl., iv. 284.

Here it is said of the Poultry Compter. Perhaps the term was common to many prisons. We still hear of the condemned hole in Newgate. See Fennor's Compter's Commonwealth, 4to, 1617.

HOLIDAME. By some supposed to be for Holy Dame, Our Lady, the Virgin Mary; but see HALIDAM.

Mary; Out occ and Mary; Now, by my kolidame, here comes Katharina.

Tam. of Shr., v, 3.

+HOLLAND CHEESE. Dutch cheese has been imported into this country from a rather early period.

By fire in Cheapside, since amulets and bracelets And lovelocks were in use, the price of sprats, Jerusalem Artichocks, and Holland cheese, Is very much increased. The Citye Match, 1639, p. 10.

HOLLOWMAS. The feast of All-hallows, or All Saints; that is, the first of November. See Hallowmas.

She came adorn'd hither like sweetest May Sent back like hollownes, or short'st of d Rich. II, v, 1.

a river.

Then as the kolmes, two sturdy umpires met Betwirt the quarling Welsh and English tydes, In equal distance each from other set, As both removed from faire Severnes sides.

Zouche's Dove, 1613. HOLPE, and HOLPEN. The old pre terite and participle of to help. Sir Robert never holp to make this leg. K. John, i, 1.

Thou art my warrior,

I holp to frame thee. He, remembring his mercy, hath holpen his servant Israel.

Magnificat, Prayer-Book transl. Shakespeare often uses the preterite incorrectly for the participle:

You have kolp to ravish your own daughters, and To melt the city leads upon your pates. Cor., iv, 6. The following phrase is yet occasionally used in low life:

A man is well holp up, that trusts to you.

Com. of Brr., iv, 1. †HOLSTER. The holsters or pistol-cases of a horse's saddle were often used to conceal articles of value, in carrying them from place to place. This night come about £100 from Brampton by carrier to me, in kolsters, trom my father, which made me laugh.

Pepps' Diary, 1661.

HOLT. A wood. Saxon. Sometimes

a high wood.

a high wood.

Or as the wind in holts and shady greaves,
A murmur makes among the boughs and leaves.

Fairf. Tusso, iii, 6.

About the rivers, vallies, holts, and crags,
Among the ozyers, and the waving flags.

Browne, Brit. Past., II, ii, p. 56.

As over holt and heath, as thorough irith and fell.

Drayt. Polyolb., xi, p. 862.

Bishop Percy says, sometimes it signifies a hill; but in the passage he quotes from Turbervile it clearly means no more than a high wood:

Ye that frequent the hilles
And highest holtes of all. Glossary to Reliques, vol. i. The other passage is not decisive.

Mr. Ellis says, and I believe rightly, that holts properly meant woody hills. Specim., vol. ii, p. 33.

In the following passage it seems to be corruptly used instead of hold, for the sake of rhyming to bolt:

But sooner shall th' Almighties thunderbolt Strike me down to the cave tenchrious,
The lowest land, and damned spirits' holt,
Than, &c. Solimus, Emp. of the Turks, A 4.

+HOME. To pay home, to press hard upon another in combat.

Acre meo me lacessis, thou gevest me scoffe for scoffe, or as we saie, thou paiest me home. Elyet, 1559. To touch home, to give a mortal wound.

Saz. Not any, Austria; neither toucht I thee.

Aust. Somebody toucht me home; vaine world farewell, bying I fall on my dead Lucibell.

The Tragedy of Hoffman.

+HOLM. A small island, especially in | HOMELING. A native of any place, and resident there: indiaena.

And resident there: ratigena.*
So that within a whyle they began to molest the homelings (for so I finde the word indigens to be Englished in an old booke that I have, wherein advantings).

*Now, there were two legions in garrison for defeace of this citie, to wit, Prima Flavia, and Prima Parthica, besides many homelings and natural! inhabitanta, together with auxiliarie horsemen.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus 1609.

HONEST AS THE SKIN BETWEEN HIS BROWS, prov. An odd proverbial saying, used by Shakespeare and others. Where the force of the comparison lies, it is not easy to perceive. The skin between the brows certainly cannot be made subservient to dissimulation, as the other features may; but this seems too refined.

An old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were, but in faith honcest, as the skin between his brows.

Much Ado, iii, 5.

It shall be justified to thy husband's faish, now: tou shalt be as konesht as the skin between his kornsh la.

B. Jons. Bart. Psir, iv, 5.

B. Jons. Bart. Fair, iv, b.

I am as true, I wold thou knew, as skin between thy browers.

Gammer Garston, O. Pl., ii, 61.

I am as koneet as the skin that is Between thy brows.

Constable. What skin between my brows?

What skin, thou knave? I am a Christian;
And what is more a constable! What skin?

Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 308.

In the following passage the same comparison is applied to magnanimity:

Punt. Is he n.agnanimous? Gent. As the shis between your brows, sir.

B. Jons. Ev. Man out of his H., ii, 2.

But this seems to be mere burlesque. To HONEST. To do honour to.

Sir Amorous! you have very much konested my ledging with your presence. B. Jons. Silent Fomes. Surely, you should please God, benefit your country, and konest your own name.

and honest your own name.

Ascham, Scholemaster, Pref., xvii, ed. Upt.

†That it is a grosse flattering of tyred crucity to konest it with the title of clemency. That to cate much at other men's cost, and little at his owne, is the wholesomest and most nourishing diet, both is the wholesomers ---court and country.

Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1615.

HONESTY, for credit or reputation.

When sir Thos. More was at the place of executios, he said to the hangman, "I promise thee that thou shalt never have konestic in the stryking of my head, my necke is so short."

Hall's Chron., p. 256. This remarkable speech is exactly copied by the author of the old drama of Damon and Pithias:

Come Gronno, doo thine office now, why is thy colour so dead?

My neck is so short, that thou wilt never have homestive in striking of this head.

O. Pl., i. 241.

+HONEY. To sell honey for a halfpenny, to rate at a vile price.

Thou that in thy dialogues solds! hunnie for a half-praie, and the choysest writers extant for cues a peece. Nash, Picroe Penilesse, 1892.

To HONEY. To sweeten or delight, coax or flatter. Shakespeare has been thought licentious in converting substantives into verbs, and the contrary; but it will appear in this work that this interchange was much authorised by the custom of his time: Can'st thou not koney me with fluent speach. And even adore my toplesse villainy?

Antonio and Mellida, A 4.

O unpecrable! invention rare!

Thou god of policy, it honies me. Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 66.

Was ever rascal koncy'd so with poison?

Bastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 246. Shakespeare has made it a neuter verb, and used it contemptuously for courting; i. e., calling each other honey:

Stew'd in corruption; honeying and making love Stew'd in corruption; Roneying and making love Over the nasty sty. Hanl., iii, 4. †Clo. A pretious villaine: a good villaine too. Well if he be no worse; that is doe worse, And Roney me in my death-stinging thoughts, I will preferre him. Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

+HONEYCOMB was used as a term of endearment.

Darlynge, a wanton terme used in veneriall speach, as be these: honycombe, pyggisnye, swetchert, true love. Huloet's Abcedarium, 1552.

A bee. The French +HONEY-FLY. mouche-à-miel.

Up, up, ye princes | prince and people, rise,
And run to schoole among the hony-fice. Du Bartas.

+HONEY-MOON. A first period of prosperity or of enjoyment.

I was there entertained as well by the great friends my father made, as by mine owne forwardnesse, where it being now but koney-moone, I endeavoured †HONEY-RORE. The dew of honey.

She ceast; and with her snowie arms most white
About the neck she clasps him soft and light. He seems to shrink, she clings and toyes the more; He on a sudden felt loves honey-rore Soak in, and wonted flames to heat his heart,

And to o'resprend his bones and every part.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1639. HONEYSTALKS. Clover flowers, which contain a sweet juice. It is common for cattle to overcharge themselves with clover and die.

With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honeystales to sheep.

Tit. Andr., iv, 4.

HOODMAN-BLIND. The childish

sport now called blind-man's buff. What devil was't
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind! Haml., iii, 4.

Come, boy, and make me this same growing love, Troubled with stitches and the cough o' the lungs, That wept his eyes out when he was a child And ever since bath shot at Audman-blind, & Merry Dev. of Edm., O. Pl., v, 263.
Why should I play at hoodman-blind?
Wise Woman of Hoged:n.

HOOD-WINK, e. Drayton has this HOOVES. Used for the plural of hoof.

word, which must mean the same as hoodman-blind.

By moonshine many a night do give each other chase At hood-wink, barley-break, &c.

Polyolb., xxx, p. 1225.

By HOOK OR CROOK. By one in-atrument or another. Warton observes, that it has been falsely derived from two lawyers in Charles the First's time, judge Hooke and judge Crooke; but he shows that it is twice used by Spenser, and occurs also in Skelton. Observ. on Spenser, vol. ii, p. 235. See Todd.

Vol. 11, p. 233. See Logg.

†Nor wyll suffer this boke

By hooke no by crooke

Prynted for to be. Skelton, Colin Clout.

†Thereafter all that mucky pelfe he tooke,

The spoile of peoples evil gotten good.

The which her sire had scrap't by hooke and crooke,

And burning all to ashes pour'd it down the brooke.

Sameser. P. O. V. ii. 27.

Spenser, P. Q., V. ii, S7.

Likewise to get, to pill and poll by hooke and cruoke so much, as that, &c.

Holland's Suctomius.

HOOP. A name for a quart pot; such pots being anciently made with staves, bound together with hoops, as barrels are.

The Englishman's healths, his koops, cana, half-cans, &c.

Decker's Gul's Horab., p. 28.

I believe koopes in quart pots were invented, that every man should take his koops, and no more.

Nash's Pierce Penilesse.

They were usually three in number to such a pot; hence one of Jack Cade's popular reformations was to increase their number:

The three-hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felouy to drink small beer. 2 Hen. FI, iv, 3.
Will not this explain cock-a-hoop better than the other derivations? A person is cock-a-hoop, or in high spirits, who has been keeping up the hoop, or pot, at his head.

+HOOP-RINGS.

But, I pray you, nothing
From the poor country villagers?

Pan. Very little;

Hoop-rings and childrens whistles, and some forty

Or fifty dozen of gilt-spoons, that's all.

Cartwright's Lady Brrant, 1651.

IOOP-SLEEVES. Wide capacious +HOOP-SLEEVES. sleeves.

His heraldry gives him place before the minister, because the law was before the gospell. Next terms he walkes his hoopsleese gowne to the hall; there it proclaimes him.

Overbury's New and Choise Characters, 1615. +HOOPER'S-HIDE. A name for the game of blind-man's buff.

But Robbin finding him silly,
Most friendly took him aside,
The while that his wife with Willy
Was playing at kooper's hide.
The Winchester Wedding, an old ballad.

The furious genets seem, in their career,
To make an earthquake with their thundring hooses.

Faushaw's Lusiad, vi, 64. +HOPS. As thick as hops, appears to have been an old phrase which is not easily accounted for if the cultivation of hops in England be as recent as generally supposed.

generally supposed.

The news of thee shall fill the barbers shops, And at the bake-houses. as thicke as kops
The tatling women as they mold their bread
Shall with their dough thy fourfold praises knead.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

O famous Coriat, hadst thou come againe, Thou wouldst have told us newes, direct and plaine. Inou woulds have told us newes, direct and plaine, Of tygers, elephants, and antelops, And thousand other things as thicks as hops, Of men with long ta les, faced like to hounds, Of oysters, one whose fish weigh'd forty pounds. Ibid.

+HOP-OF-MY-THUMB. A term of contempt, but it does not appear necessarily to imply diminutiveness. Sophos? a kop of my thumb, a wretch, a wretch! Should Sophos meet us there accompany'd with some champion, With whom 'twere any credit to encounter, Were he as stout as Hercules himself. Then would I buckle with them hand to hand.

Wily Beguiled.
Plaine friend kop of my thum, know you who we are?
The Taming of a Shrew, 1694.

PDANCE A G.... 1

HOPDANCE. A fieud mentioned by Shakespeare's Edgar, when personating mad Tom. See FLIBBERTI-GIBBET.

Hopdanes cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Lear, iii, 6.

HOP-HARLOT. A coarse coverlet. evidently corrupted from hap-harlot: from to hap, in the sense of to wrap. A burlesque kind of compound, similar to that by which a stout wrapping coat, or cloke, is sometimes called a wrap-rascal. In both cases, the thing itself is meant to be ridiculed, by appropriating it to such wearers. It is variously noticed in old dictionaries, and absurdly enough by some etymologists, as may be seen in Todd's Johnson. Dag swain, which occurs with it, seems a similar compound.

Covered only with a sheet, under coverlets made of dag-swain, or hop-harlots.

Harrison, Pref. to Holinsk., ch. 12. HOPE, for mere expectation, as spero is sometimes used in Latin, and έλπίζω in Greek.

FICE III Groun.

By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's kopes.

1 Hon. IV, i, 2.

So also the verb:

I cannot kope Casar and Antony shall well greet together. Ant. ana Cl., ii, 1. This use of the word was not, however, common; and Puttenham. relating of the Tanner of Tanworth that he said "I hope I shall be hanged to-morrow," calls it "an ill shapen terme."

Whereat the king laughed a good, not only to see the tunner's vaine feare, but also to heare his ill shapea terme.

Art of Poesie, B. iii, ch. 22. This reading, however, is not found in the ballad, as now extant; there it stands thus: A coller, a coller, the tanner he savd. I trowe it will breed sorrowe: After a coller cometh a halter.

I trove I shall be hang'd to-morrow.

Percy's Rel., ii, p. 92. The HOPE, on the Bankside in Surrey, one of the London theatres, in the reign of James the First, at which Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair was acted, as appears by the following passage in the induction to that play:

Articles of agreement indented, between the specta-tors or hearers, at the Hope, on the Bankside, in the county of Surry, on the one party; and the author of Bartholomew Pair, in the said place and county, on the other party, the one and thirtieth day of October 1614, &c. Induct. to Barth. Pair. The Hope, however, was not one of the regular theatres, but, as well as the Swan and the Rose (also on the Bankside), was chiefly used as a bear-garden. Why Jonson produced his play there, I know not; but he speaks very contemptuously of the place:

Though the fair be not kept in the same region that some here perhaps would have it, yet think that the author hath therein observed a special decorus; the place being as dirty as Smithfield, and as stinking every whit. every whit.

+HOPPER. A wild swan.

A hopper or wilde swan, onocrotalus.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 24.

HOPSHACKLES. What these were, By the context, we can only guess. in the following passage, where only I have found it, they appear to be some kind of shackles imposed upon the loser of a race, by the judges of the contest.

Such runners, as commonly they shove and shoulder to stand foremost, yet in the end they come behisd others, and deserve but the hopshackles, if the masters of the game be right judges.

Asch. Scholemaster, p. 166, ed. Upt. +HORN-FAIR. A fair formerly held at Charlton in Kent, and frequently alluded to in the popular writers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. See Cuckold's-Point.

When men, without cloatis, go naked and barc, And cuckolds forget to march to Horn-fair; When an old face shall please as well as a new, Wives, husbands, and lovers will ever be true.

Newest Acad. of Compliments.

Now in small time comes on Horn-fair, Your horns and ladles now prepare; While some that go to see the sport, Come home with broken noddles for't

Come home with broken noddles for t. Poor Robin, 1730.

Now weddings are in season, and may be had without a licence, if you cause sufficient notice to be given; but before that is done, both partys ought to be agreed, and be well satisfied that they love one another; for if the woman love not the man as well as he loves her, it will be but half a wedding, and as he loves her, it will be but half a wedding, and perhaps the worst half too; for in that case, although she may consent to take water with him at Union-stairs to be married, yet she may afterwards fall down and land him at Cuckold's-point, and make him take his next night's lodging at Horn-fair, with a breakfast after it that may ride upon his crop as long as he lives, or at least as long as they both live together.

Poor Robin, 1733.

HORN-THUMB. nick-name for This quaint term a pick-pocket. has been well illustrated by Mr. Gifford, from whose edition of Ben Jonson the following illustrations of it are taken. It alludes to an old expedient of pick-pockets, or cutpurses, who were said to place a case or thimble of horn on their thumbs, to resist the edge of their knife, in the act of cutting purses.

I mean a child of the norn-man.

Bart. Fair, act ii, p. 413.
But cosin, bicause to that office ye may not come.

Frequent your exercises:—a horne on your thumbe,
A quick eye, a sharp knight.

Cambiaes, O. Pl.
We also give for our arms three whetstones in guies, with no difference, and upon our create, a left hand, with a horne upon the thumbe, and a knife in the hande.

Moral Dialogue, by W. Bulleyn. I mean a child of the korn-thumb, a babe of booty, boy, a cut-purse.

Bart. Fair, act ii, p. 413,

HOROLOGE. A clock; from the Latin horologium.

He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle. Othello, ii. S. The cock, the country horologe, that rings
The chearful warning to the sun's awake, Missing the dawning scantles in his wings,
And to his roost doth sadly him betake. Drayton's Moses, B. ii, p. 1594.

HORSE-COURSER, properly HORSE-SCOURSER. A horse-dealer. See Scourse. Equorum mango. Coles. Junius was wrong in deriving it from the Scotch word cose; it is from the English word scorse, to exchange, and means literally a horse-changer. Hence Coles has also See Scorse. horse-coursing, equorum permutatio. Abr. Fleming thus defines it: "Mango equorum, a horse scorser; he that buyeth horses, and putteth them away again by chopping and changing." Nomencl., p. 514, a.

horse-courser in Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, and that described in Overbury's Characters (51), are evidently horse-dealers, and nothing else. From Whalley's note on Barth. Fair, act iii, sc. 4, it appears that the word was familiar to him in this sense. though now quite disused. Johnson, who instances the word from Wiseman and L'Estrange.

He that lights upon a horse, in this place [Smithfield], from an old horse-courses, sound both in wind and from an old horse-courser, sound both in wind and limb, may light of an honest wife in the stews.

D. Lupton's Loudon, Harl. Misc., ix, p. 317. Their provender, though divers horse-coursers, that live by sale of horse, do feed them with sodden rie, or beanemeals sod, pampering them up, that they may be the fairer to the cie; yet it is not good foode to labour with B. Googe on Husbandry, B. iii, 120, b. HORSELEECH; from leech, in the sense of surgeon. A horse-doctor or

Or if the horseleach would adventure to minister a or it the Adviscious would adventure to minister a potion to a sicke patient, in that her hath knowledge to give a drench to a diseased horse, he would make himself an asse.

Euphuse, Epist. Ded., A. 2, h. HORSE-LOAVES, and HORSE-BREAD.

A peculiar sort of bread, made for feeding horses. It appears to have been formerly much more common than at present to give bread to horses: for which reason we often read of horse-loaves, &c. The receipts for making these loaves are given in Thus in various books on hunting. G. Markham's book on the hunting-hOrse:

The next food, which is somewhat stronger and better is bread thus made: take two bushels of good clean beans and one bushel of wheat, and grind them together; then, through a fine range, bolt out the quantity of two pecks of pure meal, and bake it in two or three loaves by itself; and the rest sift through a meal sive, and knead it with water, and good store of barne, and so bake it in great loaves, and with the courser bread feed your horse in his rest, and with the finer against the days of sore labour.

Book i. n. 52.

Book i, p. 52. Another receipt is in the Gentleman's Recreation, on the hunting-horse, p. 49, which is also made of one part wheat and two parts beans, and directed to be made into "great household peck loaves - to avoid crust." So also the Northumberland Household Book.

This kind of food is particularly recommended to strengthen the animal, which effect is still attributed to common bread:

On that I were in my out-tub, with a horse-loof. Something to hearten me B. and Fl. Night Walker, v, 1. Latimer shows how common it was so to feed horses:

For when a man rideth by the way, and commeth to his inne, and giveth to the hostler his horse to walk, and so himself sitteth at the table and maketh good cherre, and forgetteth his horse, the hostler cometh and saith, Sir, how much bread shall I give your horse?

Serm., fol. 153, b.

These loaves, being large, became a jocular measure for the height of any very diminutive person:

Her face was wan, a lean and writhel'd skin, Her stature scant three horse-loaves did exceed. Harringt. Ariosto, vil, 62.

Minshew defines the word dwarf to mean "a dandiprat or elfe, no higher than three horse-loaves." So also Cotgrave, in Nain. Ryebread is said to be given now to horses in Flanders. Cens. Lit., x. p. 369.

tLastly for horse-bread, that three korse-loses be sold by the baker for a penie, xiiii.d. for xij. and every loafe to weigh the full weight.

Dalton's Countrey Justice, 1620.

+HORSE-NIGHTCAP. A bundle of Acres-night-cap for their labour.

Penniles Parliament of Threed-bare Poets, 1608.

HORT-YARD. A garden, now softened to orchard; from ortgeard, Saxon. which itself is put for wyrtgeard, a place for herbs.

The kort-yard entering, admires the fair And pleasant fruits. Sandys, cited Sandys, cited by Todd. HOSE. Breeches, or stockings, or both in one. Chausses, French. In French. distinguished into high hose and low hose: haut de chausses, and bas de chausses (as here, Upper and ne-THER STOCKS, which see); the present word bas being only a contraction of the above. Hose are most probably derived from the Saxon hosa, though the Welch is nearly the same, and even the French not remote.

In the following quotations hose evidently mean breeches, or the whole lower garment:

And youthful still in your doublet and kose, this raw rheumatick day.

Merry W. W., iii, 1.
Their points being broken—down fell their kose 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4.

O, rhimes are guards on wanton Cupid's kose,
Disfigure not his alop.

Love's L. L., iv, 3. Slop is indeed an emendation of Theobald's, but is indubitably right. Trunk hose were the round swelling breeches, such as are ridiculed in the following passage:

Nay you are stronge men, els you could not beare these britches. W Are these such great haw? in the goodman collier, you see with your nose. By mine honestie I have but one liming in one hose, but 7 els of rug.

432

Again:
These are no loss, but water bourets. I tell the playing Good for none but suche as have no buttockes.

Dyd you ever see two suche little Robin rudduckes
So laden with breeches? chill say no more lest I offende:

Who invented these monsters first, did it to a godly ende.

To have a male readie to put in other folke's stuffe.

Damon and Pithias. O. Pl., i. 219.

A male is a trunk.

A Mate: Is a Truin.

Sometimes I have seene Tarlton play the clowne, and use no other breeches than such sloppes or slivings, as now many gentlemen weare; they are almost capable of a bushell of wheate, and if they bee of sacke-cloth they woulde serve to carrie mawlt to the of sacke-cion they women serve to carrie man to so mill. This absurde, clownish, and unseemly attire only by custome now is not misliked, but rather approved. Wright's Passions of the Minde, 1601, in Cons. Lit., ix, 173.

To make one's heart sink into his hose, to terrify him. 1 tWhen I was hurte, then twenty more of those, I made the Romaynes harts to take their hose. Mirour for Magistrates, 1867.

To HOST, from the substantive an host. To take up abode, to lodge.

Go bear it to the Centaur, where we kost. Com. of Er., i, 9. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you Where you shall bost.

Also, to encounter with armies. In this sense Milton and Phillips have used it. See Johnson. An hosting pace, therefore, in Holinshed, means a fit pace for an onset in battle: The prince of Wales was ready in the field with hys people,—and advanced forward with them towards his enimies, an kosting pace.

Vol. ii, N n 3.

[Also to receive the sacrament.]

tHe fell sick and like to die, whereupon he was shriven and would have been hosted, and he durs not for fear of casting. Scogiu's Jests, p. 27.

HOSTRY. An inn; from host. And now 'tis at home in mine hostry.

Marlow's Fanstus, F 4, b.

Dryden has used it, but it seems to be now obsolete. See Johnson.

be now obsolete. See Johnson.

Also for a lodging in general:
Only these marishes and myric bogs,
In which the fearful ewifee do build their bowres,
Yeeld me an hostry 'mongst the croaking frogs,
And harbour here in safety from those ravenous degiSpens. F. Q., V. v. 3.
†And yet at Lent assiss samo Iom. 1621, sir James Ley delivered in his charge, that imes were hosteris, by the common law, and that every man might ered and keepe an inne or an hosterie, so as they wer probl homines, men of good conversation, fame, asd report, and dwelling in meet places.
†Nor are the men only expert herein, but the wames and mands also, in their common hostries.

#Hostell's Fimiliar Letters, 1650.

[OT. Called: used passively as the HOT. Called; used passively as the preterite of to hight.

Whylome before that cursed dragon got That happy land, and all with unocent blood
Defyld those sacred waves, it rightly hot
The well of lite.

Spens. F. Q., I, xi, 20.

So also hote:

And after him another knight that some Sir Brienor, so sore that none him life behote. Ibid., IV, iv, 40.

Also for the past participle or preterite of to hit:

A viper smitten or hot with a reed is astonied.

Scot's Discovery of Witchcraft, S 8. +НОТСИРОТСИ.

Rec. Nav, that splaine in Littleton, for if that fee-simple and the fee taile be put together, it is called hotch-polch; now this word hotch-polch in English is a oudding, for in such a pudding is not comonly one pudding, for in such a pudding is not thing only, but one thing with another.

Returne from Pernassus, 1606.

+HOT-COCKLES. An old game, practised especially at Christmas, in which one person knelt down hoodwinked, and being struck behind, was to guess who inflicted the blow. It is often alluded to. To sit upon hot-cockles seems to mean here to be very impatient.

patient.

Hee laughs and kicks like Chrysippus, when hee saw an asse eat figs; and sits upon hot-cockles till it be blaz'd abroad, and withal intreats his neighbors to make bonefires for his good hap and causeth all the bels of the parish to ring forth the peal of his owne fame.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

Sir Dot. What? why, here has been the great devil, and all the little devils, at hot-cockles; and Belzebub and his dam at barly-break. World in the Moon, 1697.

The Poets Hot Cockles.

Thus poets passing time away,
Like children at hot-cockles play;
All strike by turn, and Will is strook,
(And he hies down that writes a book);
Have at thee, Will, for now I come,
Spread thy hand faire upon thy bomb,
For thy mutch insolence, bold bard,
And little sense, I strike thus hard.
Whose hand was that? 'twas Jaspar Mayne;
Nay, there you're out, lie down again.

Whose hand was that r two sapar and Nay, there you're out, lie down again. With Gondibert, preface and all, See where the doctor comes to man! The author's hand, 'twill make him real, No, Will lies still and does not feel; That books so light, 'tis all one whether You strike with that, or with a feather. But room for one new come to town,
That strikes so hard he'll knock him down.
The hand he knows, since it the place Has toucht more tender then his face; Important sheriff, now thou lyst down, We'll kiss thy hands, and clap our own

Certaine Verses written by severall of the Author's friends, to be re-printed with the Second Edition of Gondibert, 1653, p. 23.

A HOT-HOUSE. A bagnio; from the hot baths there used. They were of no better fame in early times than at present. See B. Jons. Epigrams, B. i, Ep. 7.

Whose house, sir, was, as they say, pluck'd down in the suburbs, and now she professes a hot-house, which is, I think, a very ill house too.

Meas. for M., ii, 1.

Besides, sir, you shall never need to go to a kot-house, you shall sweat there [at court] with courting your mistress, or losing your money at primero, as well as in all the stoves in Sweden.

B. Jons. Every Man out of his H., iv, 8
Marry, it will cost me much sweat; I were better go to exteen hot-houses.

Puritan, iii, 6; Suppl. to Sh., ii, 598.

Minshew renders hot-house by raporarium, &c., and refers to Stew and Stove. [See Hummums.] +HOTIES.

Tuese holy titles of bishop and priest are now grown odious among such poor sciolists who scarce know the heties of things, because they saver of antiquity.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

†HOT-SHOTS appear to have been a class of soldiers, perhaps skirmishers. class of soldiers, perhaps skirmishers. In the resreward comes captaine Crab, lieutenant Lobster, (whose catching clawes alwayes puts me in minde of a sergeant) the blushing prawne, the well-armed oyster, the scollep, the wilke, the mussell, cockle, and the perewinkle; these are hot-shots, veneriall provocators, fishy in substance, and fleshly in operation.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. When those inferior princes houses are guarded with hungry halberdiers, and revvrend rusty bil-men, with a brace or two of hot-shots; so that their pallaces are more like prisons, then the free and noble courts of commanding potentates.

1bid.

HOTSPUR, adj. and s. Warm, vehement; or as an appellation for a person of vehement and warm disposition, and therefore given to the famous Harry Percy. A very violent rider makes his spurs hot in the sides of his horse. This is evidently the allusion. In the following passage it has the general sense, as well as that of a conventional name:

of a conventional name:
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot,
It hath th' excuse of youth, and heat of blood;
And an adopted name of privilege,—
An harebrain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.

1 Hen. IF, v, 3.

After Percy is killed, it is said, in allusion to his surname, that his sour is cold:

He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's open was cold.

2 Hen. IV, i, 1.

And directly after, Ha-again, Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Tiid. Of Hotspur, cold-spur! Spenser uses it as an adjective:
The hot-spurre youth, so scorning to be crost.
F. Q., IV, i, 35.

Harvey as a substantive: Cormorants and drones, dunces, and hypocriticall hotenures. Gabr. Harv. Four Letters. E 4. b. Stanyhurst, in his translation of four books of Virgil:

To couch not mounting of master vanquisher host-

Where vanquisher hoatspur is the version of victoris heri.

Wars are begun by hairbrained dissolute captains, parasitical fawners, unquiet hotspurs, and restless innovators.

Burton, cited by Johnson.

Upton, reversing the truth, derives the general term from Percy's surname. But why should he have been so called if the term had no previous meaning?

HOTSPURRED, participial adjective, Vehement. from the above.

To draw Mars like a young Hippolytas with an effeminate countenance, or Venus like that hotspurred Harpslice in Virgil, this proceedeth from a senseless judgement. Peacham, cited by Johnson. Philemon's friends then make a king again, A hot-spurr'd youth height Hylas.

Chalthill, Thealma & Clearchus, p. 41.

HOT I' THE SPUR is also used to signify being very hotly earnest upon any point.

Speed, an you be so hot o' th' spur, my business
Is but breath, and your design, it seems, rides post.

Shirley, Doubtf. Heir, act v, p. 62.

To HOVE, for to hover. Skinner notices the use of this word, and it was used by the earlier writers, Gower, &c. See Todd.

Seek with my plaints to match that mournful dove; Ne joy of ought that under heav'n doth hope Spenser, Sonnet 88. Can comfort me. Metaphorically, for to lurk near a place, as to hover is also used:

He far away espide
A couple, seeming well to be his twaine,
Which hoved close under a forest side,
As if they lay in wait, or els themselves did hide.

[bid., F. Q., III. x, 20.

+HOUNDSDITCH was formerly inhabited chiefly by pawnbrokers. thony Munday speaks of the "unconscionable booking usurers, a base kind of vermin, who had crept into Houndsditch."

A fish-wife with a pawne doth money seeke, Hee two pence takes for twelve pence every weeke; Which makes me aske my selfe a question plaine, And to my selfe I answer make againe: Was Houndsditch Houndsditch call'd, can any tell, Before the broakers in that street did dwell? Before the broakers in that street and awen.
No sure it was not, it hath got that name
From them, and since that time they thither came;
And well it now may called be Houndsdick,
For there are hounds will give a vengeance twich.

Taylor's Workes, 1830.

+HOUR. In a good hour, a phrase derived from the French.

One asked a plaine fellow whether he could tyle or no? hee answered: Yea, in a good hours be it spoken, I have tyl'd in London. Copley's Wits, Fits, and Pancies, 1614.

+To HOUSE. To enter a house, to go home.

Follow this fair lady wherever she doth go, And where she houses, come and let me know. The Strand Garland, n. d.

HOUSEL. The eucharist, or sacrament of the Lord's Supper; from husel, or husl, Saxon, which has been deduced from hostiola, Latin.

And therfore he wryteth unto the Corynthies, that of the holy konesyll, the sacrament of the aver, he had shewed them the matter and the manner by mouth.

Sir Thomas More's Works, p. 180. mouth.

SIF TROMAGE MOTES IN OTES, p. 190.

Now will we open unto you, through God's grace, of the holy houselt, which ye shoulde now goe unto.

Saxon Homily, publ. by Archb. Parker.

Also the act of taking the sacrament, perhaps as the viaticum:

Likewise in kowsell, and receiving the sacrament.

Chalener's Morie Rucon... T 1 b.

To HOUSEL. To administer the sacrament to any one; huslian, Saxon.

The king and queene descended, and before the high aulter they wer both houseled, with one host deried between them. Thomas the apostle's hand, that was in Christ's ade, would never go into his tomb, but always lay with-out; which hand had such vertue in it, that if the out; which hand had such vertue in it, that if the priest, when he goes to mass, put a branch of a viss into his hand, the branch putteth forth grapes, and by that time that the gospel be said, the grapes bear ripe, and he takes the grapes and wringeth them into the chalice, and with that wine konselleth the people. Legend, quoted by Patr. on Ross. Dev., p. 17.

Particularly, to give it as the viaticum to dying persons:

Also children were christned and men houseled and annoyled through all the land. Holinshed, vol. ii, No. Thou wert not houseled, neither did the bells ring Blessed peales, nor towie thy funeral knell. Hoffman, a Tragedy, sign. I.

In profane allusion, to prepare for any journey, as the giving of the viaticum implied preparing men for their final journey:

May zealous smiths
So house! all our hackneys, that they may feel Compunction in their feet, and tire at Highgate.
B. J. Pl. Wit without Money, ii, 1, p. 36. Mr. Seward's note on this passage will show how reluctantly he admitted this very improper allusion: which, however, was certainly, I fear, intended by the author.

Houses. +HOUSING.

Wherefore the bastard purveyed another mean to annoy and greve the sayde citie sore, and therefore ordernyd a great fellowshipe to set fyre upon the bridge, and to brene the housyngs upon the bridge, and through therby to make them an open with into the sayd citie. Arrival of King Edward IV, p. 3. Also, coverings.

You may give them also heasy and raisins after the same manner. Be sure you cover them with ware housings of straw, and feed 'em with care, and they'll reward your pains bountifully.

Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

HOUSLING, part. adj. (from the above words). Sacred, or rather sacremental, being to celebrate a marriage, as Mr. Todd has properly observed, after Upton.

His owne two hands, for such a turne most fit,
The housing fire did kindle and provide,
(And holy water thereon sprinckled wide)
At which the bushy tende a groun did light.

Spens. P. Q., L. xii, F.

+HOUX. The houghs, or ham-strings. But as the prince, setting spurres to his horse, roll HOW 435 HUD with full carrier among the most dangerous skir-mishes, out went our light armed companies, and charging them behind, layd at the hour and back-parts as well of the beasts as the Persians themselves, and all to-cut and hacked them.

Ammianus Mascellinus 1609

+HOWBALL. A simpleton.

The worst of them no howball, ue no foole.

Thynne, Deb. betw. Pride and Lowliness. HOW-DEE. A greeting; How do ye?

Every man courts the walks of Spartan stone, And wearies his how dey' simply till noone. Pletcher's Poems, p. 7.

Such was thy suddain kow-dee and fare Such thy return the angels scarce could tell

Thy miss. Fletcher,
How. His neatness consists most diversly, sin Fletcher, p. 216. zione. His neatness consists most diversly, sir. Not only in the decent wearing of those cloaths and clean linnen, pruning his hair, ruffling his boots, or ordring his shoc-tyes; these are poor expressions, a journeyman barber will do't. But to do his office neatly, his garb, his pace, his postures, his comes on and his comes off, his complements, his visits.

comes off, ins compressions.

Sgw. His Howdees.

How. In which a protound judgment would be Brome's Northern Lass. puzzel'd.

HOWLE-GLASSE. See OWL-GLASS.

HOWLET, diminutive of owl, with an aspirate prefixed. An owl. Still used in the northern counties.

Lizard's leg and kowlet's wing Mach., iv, 1.
Keep a fool in a play, to tell the multitude of a gentle faith that you were caught in a wilderness, and thou may'st be taken for some far-country korlet.

Bird in a Cage, 0. Pl., viii, 221.

Often joined with Mades 2.

Often joined with Madge, &c., as Madae-howlet.

What townes are laide waste? what fields lye untilled? what goodly houses are turn'd to the habitations of howlets, dawes, and hobgoblins.

†So that the neighouring owls will follow
The howlet, that they hear but hollow.

Hudibras Redicious, part 7, 1706.

+HOWNDS. A sea-term.

This 13 at night, it blew so hard at west-south-west, that one of their great gallions bore over-boord the head of her maine mast, close under the howards, not being able to hoyst up her maine sayle, she was forced to steere alongst with her fore-saile, fore-top-saile, her sprit-saile, and brizzer, the wind being at west-south-west, they steered away south and by east. Taylor's Workes, 1620

†To HOWT. To hoot.

The people poyuted at her for a murtherer, yonge children howled at her as a strumpet.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592

To HOX. To cut the hamstrings; corrupted from to hough, which is pronounced hock, and means the same.

Both from hoh, a heel, Saxon. If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward, Which Acres housesty behind, restraining From course required. Winter's T., i, 2. Recovering his feet, with his faulchion hard the hinder legs of the mare whereon the sultan rid.

Rwolles Hist. of Turks, p. 87.

Methought his hose were cut and drawn out with parsicy; I thrust my hand into my pocket for a knife, thinking to koz him, and so awaked.

Lyly's Mother Bombie, iii, 4. HOYLES. Some mode of shooting arrows for trial of skill.

At long-buts, short, and hoyles, each one could cleave Drayton, Polyolb., xxvi, p. 1175.

To HOYT, or HOIT. To make a riotous noise. Hence hoity-toity, and, perhaps, hoyden.
We shall have such a hoyling here anon,
You'll wonder at it.

Webster and Rowley, Thracian Wonder, act ii,
Anc. Dr., vi, 31.

He has undone me and himself and his children, and there he lives at home, and sings and hoits, and revels among his drunken companions.

B. and Fl. Kn. of B. Pestle, iv, 1.

Mr. Todd explains it, to dance, which this passage seems to confirm: Could do

The vaulter's somersalts, or us'd to woo With hoiting gambols. Perhaps we should rather say, that it means to use riotous mirth, whether in voice or action.

To HUCK. To bargain, to deal as a buckster.

Now is the time (time is a god) to strike our love good

Now is the time (time is a god) to strike which lucke, Long since I cheapen'd it, nor is my comming now to Aucke. Warner's Alb. Engl., v, 26, p. 129.
A near, and hard, and Aucking chapman shall never buy good fiesh. Hales, quoted by Todd.
Albeit I know it is reason their doe allowe me, and soc I thought you had contracted with them in England, yet is it noe reason for me to stand Aucking with them for myself; beside I looke for the same answere their doe make for other principall officers serving under me, which you say they must pay, and their say the Letter of the Earl of Leicester, 1586.

+HUCKLE-BONES. The hip-bones.

[UCKLE-BONES. The nip-bones.

You must go about to let the sicke lie in such a fashion, that he may lie upright, and have the joynts of his huckle-bones hie verie high.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1634.

His huckle-bones on either side
Between 'em did his rudder hide;
So that his bob-tail could appear
To none, except they stood i' th' rear.

Hudibras Redivieus, 1707.

+HUCKLER. The name of a dance. Then about ten or eleven o'clock, a maske of noble-men, knights, gentlemen, and courtiers, affore the king, in the middle round, in the garden. Some speeches: of the rest, dancing the kuckter, Tom Bedlo, and the Ashton's Diary, 1617. n Justice of Peace.

HUD, for to hood. Albumazar, O. Pl., vii, 179. See BRAIL.

HUDDER-MOTHER. See HUGGER-MUGGER.

HUDDLE, . A term of contempt applied to old, decrepid persons, probably from having their clothes awkwardly huddled about them; or from being bent with age so that their figure appears all huddle and confusion.

I care not, it was sport enough for me to see these

I care not, it was spore enough for me to see these old huddles hit home.

Lyly's Alex. & Camp., O. Pl., ii, 128.

Thou half a man, half a goat, all a beast, how does they young wife, old huddle! Malcontent, O. Pl., iv, 19.

These old huddles, having overcharged their gorge with fancie, account all honest recreation mere follie, and having taken a surfet of delight, seem now to savour it with despight.

Euphucs, C 3, b.

+HUDDLE. A confused heap.

I was obliged to go a little out of ny way, to see the famous Stone-henge, one of the wonders of England, and which none of their authors know what to make of; it is a great skudde of large stones, placed in a circular form; some of them thirty foot high, and some laid a-cross on the tops of others.

Journey through England, 1724.

As an adj., heaped confusedly.

A suddain, haddle, indigested thought
Rowls in my brain—tis the safest method-

The Revengeful Queen, 1698

Hushed up. +HUDLED-UP.

The matter was hudled up, and little spoken of it.

Wilson's Life of James I. 1653, p. 285.

+To HUFF.

Wilson's Lye of various of the HUFF. To swagger.

The smell is the senting bawd, that huffs and snuffs up and downe, and hath the game alwayes in the Taylor's Workes, 1630. winde.
One asked a haffing gallant why hee had not a l-oking-glasse in his chamber; he answered, he durat not, because hee was often angry, and then he look'd so terribly that he was fearefull to looke upon himselfe.

Flourd. Iniquity aboundeth, though pure zeal Teach, preach, huffs, puffe, and snuffe at it, yet still, Still it aboundeth.

Randolph's Muses Looking-Glasse, 1643.
And the same threats and menaces of the palatine and the same threats and menaces of the palatine being carry'd to the marshal de Tonneure, notwith-standing all his former encomiums, Oh! quo he, the palatine's a young prince; give him leave to haff and ding for his living; words break no bones: when all's done, 'tis the coach wheel, not the fly that raises the e, this the coach wheel, not the fly that raises the the thin the flow of the

A cant term for strong ale; from inducing people to set their caps in a bold and huffing style.

To quench the soutching heat of our parched throtes, with the best nippitatum in this town, which is commonly called Aufcap, it will make a man looke as though he had seene the devill, and quickely move him to call his own father hoorson.

him to call his own father hoorson. Fulcot? Art of Flattery, H 3. There's one thing more I had almost forgot, And this is it, of ale-houses, and innes. Wine-marchants, vintners, brewers, who much wins By others losing, I say more or lesse who sale of history liquor doe professe.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

, Also, a swaggerer.]

†But 'tis a maxime mortals cannot hinder, The doughty deeds of Wakefields huffe-cap pinder Are not so pleasant as the faire Aurora, when Nimed rudely plaid on his bandora. Ibid.

†Prethee tell me true, was not this haff-cap once the Indian emperour, and at another time did not he can himself Maximine!

Clifford's Notes upon Dryden, 1687. A swaggerer. +HUFFER.

Welcome mask-teazer, peevish gamster, kuffer; All fools, but politicians, we can suffer. Vertue Betray'd, 1682.

+HUFFRING. Swaggering, from huf-for; or perhaps a misprint for huffing.

And all before it will be overborn,
Before its blustring blasts file to the shores
With mightle Arfring, puffing, rumbling roares.
Virgit, by Vicers, 1632.

A fierce, bullying HUFF-SNUFF. person; from huff and snuff, both denoting anger. See SNUFF.

themothing singer. See GNUTY.
Those roaring hectors, free-booters, desperadoes, and bullying helf-sneafs, for the most part like those whom Tacitus stiles, "hospitibus tantum metuendi."

Ozell's Rabelais, vol. iv, Pref., xxii.
[UFTY. A swagger. Hence hafty-

+HUFTY.

tufty.
Cut their meat after an Italian fashion, weare their hat and feather after a Germaine hufty.

Melton, p. 52.

Master Wyldgoose, it is not your highe tuftic cas make mee afraid of your bigge lookes. Breton's Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters, 1837.

+HUGEOUSLY. For hugely; very greatly. A favorite word in the 17th century.

century.

Catch. To satisfie you
In that point, we will sing a song of his.

And. Let's ha't; I love these ballads hugeonsly.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

In HUGGER-MUGGER. In secrecy. or concealment. For the various derivations, see Todd. But I am inclined to think that they are all erroneous, and that the different spellings are founded on similar mistakes; while the word was really formed from hug, or hugger, by a common mode of burlesque reduplication. Steevens found to hugger, for to lurk about. The phrase in hugger-mugger is now obsolete; the word is used, if at all, as an adjective, as, huggermugger doings; or an adverb, as, it was all carried on hugger-mugger.

And we have done but greenly
In hugger-mugger to inter him.
And how quaintly he died, like a politician, in huggermugger.

Revenger's Trag., O. P., iv, 36. See also O. Pl., viii, 48.

Nee also U. II., vill, 20.

One word, sir Quintilian, in hugger-mugger.

Satiromastis, Orig. of Dr., iii, 123.

For most that most things knew,
In hugger-mugger utter'd what they durst.

Mirror for Mag., p. 457.

So these perhaps might sometimes have some tarter conversation in hugger mugger.

Corpat, Crud., ii, p. 251, rp.

In old books, I do not find the phrase in any other form; but the commonness of it in that usage strongly proves the rashness of some editors of Shakespeare, who thought proper to change

Ascham writes it hudder-mother, probably from some assumed notion of its etymology:

It lurkes not in corners, and hudder-mother.

Tokophilus, p. 19, 19 Huggle-duggle is used in somewhat the same sense.

†To the tune of the New-England psalm, huggle duggle, ho ho ho, the devil he laught aloud. Rump Songs.

HUGY, or HUGIE, for huge.

Could not that happy hour
Once, once have hapt, in which these sugis frames
With death by fall might have oppressed me.

Ferres and Porres, O. Pl., i, 139.

A strong turret, compact of stone and rock,

Hugy without, but horrible within.

Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii. 218.

Tancred and litem., O. Pl., 11, 215.
And round about were portraid heere and there
The kagie hosts, Darius and his power,
His kings, princes, his peeres, and all his flower.
Sackv. Mirr. Mag., p. 266.
Wherewith they threw up stones of kagie waights into the ayre.

Knolles, Hist. of Turks, p. 584.

Dryden has used this word. Todd.

HUKE, or HUIK. A kind of mantle or cloke worn in Spain and the Low Countries. Huque, French; huca, low Latin. See Minshew.

As we were thus in conference, there came one that seemed to be a messenger in a rich huke.

Bacon's New Atalantis.

Johnson has this instance; I find the word also in the Muses' Recreation:

Heralds with kukes, hearing full hie, Cryd largesse, largesse, chevaliers tres hardy.

Defiance to K. Arthur, &c.

But it is more correctly given in Percy's Reliques, where the former line runs, runs, And heraults in kewkes, hooting on high. Vol. iii, p. 28, That edition is said to be composed of the best readings in three different copies.

[Used sometimes as a verb, to cloak.]

[Used sometimes as a verb, to cloak.] †And yet I will not let it alone, but throw some light vaile of spotlesse pretended well-meaning over it, to kake and mask it from publicke shame and obloquy.

Eing's Halfs-pennyworth of Wit, 1613, ded. †The women there are no fashion-mongers, but they keepe in their degrees one continual habit, as the richer sort doe weare a kaicke, which is a robe of cloth or stuffe plated, and the upper part of it is gathered and sowed together in the forme of an English pothed, with a tassell on the top, and so put upon the head, and the garment goes over her ruffe and face if she please, and so downe to the ground, so that a man may meet his owne wife, and perhaps not know her from another woman.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. †Huke, a Dutch attire, covering the head, face, and all the body.

Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694. †The German virgins, when they prepared to give meeting to their betrothed, and so to proceed to the conjugal ceremony, put on a streight or plain garment, such a one as they in some places call a kuk, and over that a cloak without spot or stain, bearing a garland. that a cloak without spot or stain, bearing a garland woven of vervain.

HULK. A ship, particularly a heavy one. Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep Tro. and Cress., ii, 8.

Tro. and Cress., it, 5.

As when the mast of some well-timber'd halks.
Is with the blast of some outrageous storme
Blown down, it shakes the bottom of the bulke.

Spens. F. Q., V, xi, 29.

A shell; a cover.

Folliculi vel retrimenta uvarum, Le marc.

The hulkes, Aulles, or skinnes of grapes, when their moisture is crushed and pressed out. Nomenclator. Gluma, Varro... La paille qui couvre le grain. The hulke or Aul wherin the corne lieth. Ibid.

+To HULL. To shell.

O HULL. To shell.

Also cucumber seed chewed, or if it be hulled and beaten, and drunke with water, it helpeth greatly against thirst engendred through heate of the stomach.

Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

Against the wind.—Take cummin-seed, and steep them in a sack 24 hours, dry them by the fire, and hull them, then take fennel seed, carraway seed, and annise seed, beat all these together, and take every morning half a spoonful in broth or beer fasting.

The Countess of Kent's Choice Manual, 1076.

HILL To Quest by the officer of

To HULL. To float, by the effect of the waves on the mere hull, or body of a vessel.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Vio. No, good swabber, I am to Aull here a little longer.

Twelfth N., i, 5. Thus kulling in

The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer

Hen. FIII, ii, 4.

That all these mischiefs kull with flagging sail.

Noble Soldier, 1634.

These are thing

That will not strike their topsails to a foist,

And let a man of war, an argosy,

Hull, and cry cockles.

B. and Fl. Philaster, v, 4.

+HULL CHEESE. A cant name for a eart of ela Hull cheese, is much like a loafe out of a brewers basket, it is composed of two simples, mault and water, in one compound, and is cousin germane to the mightiest ale in England. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

A sort of strong liquor. Mr. Gifford thinks it was a mixture of ale or beer, and spirits.

Car.man Are got into the yellow starch, and chimney sweepers To their tobacco, and strong waters, Asse, Meath, and Obarni. B. Jons. Devil is an Ass., i, 1. Lord, what should I ail?

What a cold I have over my stomach; would I all some him.

B. and Pl. Wildgoose Chars, ii, 3. Notwithstanding the multiplicity of wines, yet there be stills and limbecks going, swetting out aqua vites and strong waters, deriving their names from cinnamon, balm, and aniseed, such as stomach-water, humm, &c.

Heywood's Drunkard, p. 48, cited by Gifford. It is introduced in the Beggar's Bush, ii, 1, among terms of the cant language, which, probably, was its origin.

HUM-GLASSES. Small glasses, used particularly for drinking hum, as now liqueur-glasses; which proves the strength of the compound, whatever it was.

They say that Canary sack must dance again To the apothecary's, and be sold For physic in hum-glasses and thimbles.

Shirley's Wedding, ii. HUMBLE-BEE. A well-known insect. Mr. Todd has found humblinge in Chaucer, in the sense of humming, or rumbling, from which the word may well originate. See BUMBLE-BEE; where the strange mistake of supposing it to have no sting is noticed. It is the apis lapidaria of Linnæus; and among its genuine characters is this: "sting of the females and neuters pungent, and concealed within the abdomen." Donovan, Insects, pl. 385. Dr. Shaw thus concludes his account of the apis lapidaria:

It may not be improper to add, that the bees of this It may not be improper to and, that the bees of this division in the genus, are popularly known by the title of humble-bees, and some authors inconversant in natural history, have most erroneously imagines them, in consequence of the above name, to be destitute of a sting.

Naturalist's Misc., plate 454.

It is for the sake of this elucidation, and the reference to Chaucer, that this article is here introduced.

HUMBLESSE, for humbleness. quently used by Spenser, who had it from Chaucer.

+HUMMING. Strong, applied to maltliquors.

But if you chuse a little drink,
A glass of wine or humming beer,
The heart and spirit for to cheer,
Baulk not the cause, but venture in,
To take a glass ere you begin. Poor Robin, 1735.
I, in return, present you with what is commonly called the compliments of the season, i. e., That it may be your good luck to have good hasbands, good wives, faithful servants, good masters and mistresses; wives, faithful servants, good masters and mistresses; and every one of you good plenty of the roast beef of Old England, good plumb puddings, good mmming* strong beer, good fires, and good company to sit by them; and a thousand other valuable blessings, besides kickshaws, &c., during all this merry season of cold weather.

Poor Robin*, 1764.

+HUMMUMS. An eastern name for sweating-baths.

The Ammunus (or sweatingplaces) are many, resplendent in the azure pargetting and tyling wherewith they are ceruleated.

Horbert's Travels, 1638. They were introduced into England soon after this date, and are mentioned not unfrequently in the writers of the There were hummums 17th cent. of this description in Covent-garden, the site of which is now occupied by hotels which retain the name.

Ay, and thee and I, if we do not reform, Sax, I'm affraid shall sweat in those everlasting hummums with him.

Mountfort, Greenwick Park, 1691.

Q. What's your place of worship?

A. The hummums.

A. I no summar.

Q. And what's your devotion there?

A. To sweat for the relicts of an old clap, and cup for the sake of complexion. The Beaus Catechism, 1703.

The use, or rather the HUMOUR. abuse, of this word, in the time of Shakespeare and Jonson, was excessive; what are properly called the manners, in real or fictitious character, being then denominated the humours. But it was applied on all occasions, with little either of judgment or wit: every coxcomb had it in his mouth. and every particularity which he could affect was termed his humour. Shakespeare has abundantly ridiculed it in the foolish character of Nym: and Jonson has given it a serious attack in the induction to his play of Every Man out of his Humour, the very title of which, as well as that of Every Man in his Humour, bears witness to the popularity of the term. Jonson says that he introduces the subject To give these ignorant, well-spoken days Some taste of their abuse of this word has

This, it is answered, cannot but be acceptable.

Chiefly to such as have the happiness Daily to see how the poor innocent word. Is rack'd and tortur'd.

He then proceeds to a long and serious definition of the word, which, with good deal of logical affectation, he rightly deduces from the original sense, moisture. To understand this definition, we must go back to the conjectural and fanciful philosophy that prevailed when the senses of many of our words were fixed. The disposition of every man was supposed to arise from four principal humours, or fluids, in his body; and, consequently, that which was prevalent in any one, might be called his particular humour. Blood, phlegm, choler, and melancholy, were the four humours; the two latter being not so properly different fluids, as one fluid, bile, in two different states; common bile, χολή, choler, and black bile, μελαγxolia. From these fluids were supposed to arise the four principal temperaments, or mental humours; the sanguine, phlegmatic, choleric, and melancholic: the fluids themselves being more remotely referred to the four elements. Their connection is thus stated by Howell:

And it must be so while the starrs poure different influres upon us, but especially while the Anality within us have a symbolization with the four classics, who are in restlesse conflict among themselfs the shall have the mastery, as the Anasors do in us for a predominancy.

Party of Beasts, p. 80.

See ELEMENTS.

This doctrine was that of the schools, derived from the Greek physicians. Having gravely settled the use of the term, which in the introduction to a comedy is curious enough, Jonson proceeds to the abuse of it:

But that a rook, by wearing a py'd feather, The cable hat-band, or the three-pil'd ruff, A yard of shoe-tye, or the Switzer's knot On his French garters, should affect a smoor*, O, it is more than most ridiculous! Every M. out of his H., Ind.

To which is replied:

He speaks pure truth; now, if an idiot Have but an apish or fantastic strain, It is his Aumour.

Shakespeare's attack upon it is made in a pleasanter way, and so much the more effectual, as, in such cases, the Horatian maxim is most true, that ridicule is better than reproof. The following may serve as a specimen:

And this is true: I like not the Aumour of lying; he hath wrong'd me in some Aumours: I should have borne the Aumour'd letter to her; but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife, there's the short and the long, &c.—Adieu, I love not the Aumour of bread and cheese; and there's the Aumour of it.

On which curious harangue, the page exclaims.

The humour of it! here a fellow frights humour out of its wits.

Merry W. W., ii, 1.

Shakespeare gives us here the key to his strange character of Nym, which was evidently meant to exemplify the absurd abuse of that word. Nym also affects sententious brevity of speech, which was another prevalent folly, and is attributed to him in Hen. V, iii, 2. Without these particular objects, the character would have been, perhaps, too absurd. Pistol also should be considered not as a mere imaginary character, but as a fellow whose head is crammed with fragments of plays, and intended by the author as a vehicle for his ridicule of many absurd and bombastic passages in those of his predecessors.

Jonson has also a jocular attack upon humour:

Aumour:

Cob. Nay, I have my rheum, and can be angry as well as another, sir. Cash. Thy rheum, Cob? thy humour; thou mistak'st. Cob. Humour? mack, I think it be so indeed; what is that humour? some rare thing, I warrant. Cash. Marry, I'll tell thee, Cob; it is a gentlemanlike monster, bred in the special gallantry of our time, by affectation, and fed by folly. Cob. How! must it be fed? Cash. O, aye, humour is nothing if it be not fed. Didst thou never hear of that? it is a common phrase, feed my humour!

Exery Man in his H, iii, 4.

This is comic; except that Cob's mistake of rheum, for humour, is out of all probability: it is far beyond the learning of Cob's station or character. to know that either rheum or humour meant moisture, and consequently to confound them; the very blunder supposes too much knowledge. In noticing the phrase, feed my humour, Jonson meant also to ridicule the inconsistency it conveyed of feeding a That the term humours moisture. was substituted for that of manners. he also notices:

No clime breeds better matter for your whore, Bawd, squire, impostor, many persons more, Whose manners, now call'd knowns, feed the stage Prologue to the Alchemist.

HUMOROUS. Moist, humid.

JMUROUS. MUSIC, MARKET Come, he hath hid himself among those trees
To be consorted with the kumorous night.

Rom. and Jul., ii, 1.

Other writers use it in the same manner. Thus Niccols, in Winter's Nights:

The Aumorous night was waxed old, still silence hush'd each thing.

Mirror for Mag., p. 558. Chapman, in his Homer, B. ii, and Drayton, in his Polyolbion, apply this epithet to night. Drayton also to fogs:

The kumorous fogs deprive us of his light.

Baron's Wars, B. i. St. 47. Humorous was also used for capricious, as humoursome now is; in allusion to the use of humour, above noticed:

As humorous as winter, and as sudden As flaws congealed in the spring of day

2 Hen. IV, iv, 4. The duke is Aumorous, what he is indeed, More suits you to conceive than me to speak of.

As you l. it. i. 2. Thus the Humorous Lieutenant of Beamont and Fletcher, who gives a name to one of their plays, is capricious and self-willed, not droll. See Pye's Sketches, p. 88.

You know that women oft' are kumorous. You know that women of are numerous.

Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 137.

Love's service is much like our humorous lords.

All Fools, O. Pl., iv, 120.

DUKE. See DUKE HUMPHREY, HUMPHREY.

+To HUNCH. To give a punch; to shove.

C. I have much adoe to hold myselfe, but that I must needes stroke thy head: come thou hither, Syrus. I will doe the some good turne for this thou hast done without any hunching.

Torence in English, 1614. He had you with a beck, a snort, nay, o'ny conscience thou wou'dst not give him time to speak, but kunck'd him on the side like a full acorn'd boar cryd Oh: and mounted. Lee, Princess of Clere, 1899.

As when he drinkes out all the totall summe, Gave it the stile of supernagullum; And when he quading doth his entrailes wash, Tis call'd a Aunch, a thrust, a whiffe, a flash; And when carousing makes his wits to faile, They say he hath a rattle at his taile.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

HUNGARIAN. A cant term, probably formed in double allusion to the freebooters of Hungary, that once infested the continent of Europe. and to the word hungry.

Away, I have knights and colonels at my house, and must tend the Aungarians.

Merry Dev. of Edm., O. Pl., v, 267.

This is said by an innkeeper, who probably was meant to speak of hungry guests. Afterwards he gives it us in the other sense:

Come, ye Hungarian pilchers, [for filchers] we are once more come under the zona torrida of the forest.

once more come under the zona torrida of the forest.

Hid., p. 285.

The middle aile [of St Paul's] is much frequented at noon with a company of hungarians, not walking so much for recreation as need.

Lupton's London, Harl. Misc., ix, 314.

Hungarian is the reading of the folio edition of Shakespeare, where the original quarto has Gongarian. Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 3. The latter is thought to be the right reading. See GONGARIAN.

+To HUNGER. To starve.

At last the prince to Zeland came hymselfe
To hunger Middleburgh, or make it yeeld.

Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

+HUNGERBANED. Bitten with hunger, starved. Whereby it cometh to passe that the people depart out of church full of musicke and harmonie, but yet hungerban d and fasting, as touching heavenly foode and doctrine.

Northbrooke, Treatise against Dicing, 1577.

+HUNGER-BITTEN. Starved.

Here also be two verie notorious rivers, Oxus and Maxers, which the tigres, when they bee kunger-bitten, swin over sometimes, and at unwares do much mischief in the parts bordering upon them.

Ammionus Marcellinus, 1609.

Ammianus Marcellinus, 100s.

And this food failing, they were forc'd to eat

The crums and scraps of refuse bread and meat,
And with their hands to break (all hungerbit)

The sacred food, for other use more fit.

Virgil, by Ficars, 1632.

+HUNGERLIN. A sort of short furred robe, so named from having been derived from Hungary.

A letter or epistic, should be short-coated, and closely coucled; a hungerlin becomes a letter more hansomly then a gown.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+HUNKS. A term of contempt, applied especially to a miser.

I, I will peace it, if I catch the hunkes.

Historic of Albino and Bellama, 1638.

To HUNT COUNTER. To hunt the wrong way, to trace the scent backwards.

When the hounds or beagles hunt it by the heel, we say they hunt counter. Gentl. Recr., 8vo ed., p. 16.
To hunt by the heel must be to go towards the heel instead of the toe of the game, i. e., backwards. hunt counter, retrò legere vestigia." Coles' Lat. Dict.

Coles' Lat. Dict.

You mean to make a hoiden or a hare
O' me, t' hunt counter thus, and make these doubles.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub. ii, &
A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry toot

com. of Err., iv, 3.

This is contradictory, as to hunting, for to draw dry foot, is to pursue rightly in one way; to hunt counter, is to go the wrong way; but it is a quibble upon a bailiff, as hunting for the Counter, or Compter prison.

How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O, this is consider, you false Danish dogs. Heml., iv, 5.
And trulie, answered Euphues, you are worse made for a hound than a hunter, for you mar your sent with carren, before you start your game, which maketh you kunt often counter. Euph. Engl., A a l. It seems to be an error to join the two words into one, as if to make a name, in this passage:

You kunt-counter, hence | avaunt | Falstaff means rather to tell the man that he is on a wrong scent: "You are hunting counter;" that is, the wrong way. In the old quartos the words are disjoined accordingly: You hunt counter, hence ! avaunt! 2 Hen. IV, i, 2.

We see, by the passage in Hamlet, that hunting counter was used with latitude for taking a false trail, and not strictly confined to going the wrong way

A HUNT'S-UP. A noise made to rouse a person in a morning; originally a tune played to wake the sportsmen, and call them together, the purport of which was, The hunt is up ! which was the subject of hunting ballads also.

In Puttenham's Art of English Poesy it is said, that one Gray grew into good estimation with Henry the Eighth and the duke of Somerset, "for making certaine merry ballades, whereof one chiefly was, the hunte u up, the hunte is up." D 2, b. Such ballads are still extant. Mr. Douce gives one, which, perhaps, is the original. Illustr. of Sh., vol. ii, p. 192. Another is very short, but not very moral:

The kunt is up, the kunt is up, And now it is almost day; And he that's a-bed with another man's wife, It's time to get him away. Acad. of Compl.

In a third, referred to by Mr. Steevens. it is spiritualised. The expression was common.

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.

Rom. and Jul., iii, 5.

I love no chamber-musick; but a drum
To give me hunts-up. Four Prestices, O. Pl., vi, 473.
Rowland, for shame, awake thy drowsy muse,
Time plays the hunt's-up to thy sleepy head.
Drayt. Ect., iii, p. 1892.

No sooner doth the earth her flowery bosom brave, At such time as the year brings on the :leasant spring, But hunts-up to the morn the feather'd sylvans sing.

Drayt. Pol., xiii, p. 914.

+A HUNTER'S MASS. A short mass. said in great haste, for hunters who were eager to start for the chase: hence used as a phrase for any hurried proceeding.

A frier that was vesting himselfe to masse, a gentle-man pray'd him to say a kunter's masse (meaning a briefe masse); with that the frier tooke his missall and man pray u into to say it and to say it and to briefe masse); with that the frier tooke his missall and turn'd it all over leafe by leafe, continuing so doing a good while, which the gentleman thinking long, at last said unto him. I pray you, father, dispatch; methinkes you are very long a registring your missal? Why, sir, answered the frier, you bespake a hunders' masse, and in sooth I can finde no such masse in all my booke. Copley's Wits, Pits, and Funcies, 1614. And this farre only I touch, that, when the conjured spirit appeares, which will not be while after many circumstances, long prayers, and much muttering and murmurings of the conjurers, like a papist prieste despatching a kuntting masse—how soone. I say, he appeares.

+HUNT-SPEAR. A hunting spear.

Sister, see, see Ascanius in his pomp, Bearing his hunt-spear bravely in his hand.

Dido Queen of Carthage, 1594.

HURDEN. Made of tow, or such coarse materials.

materials.

What from the kurden smock, with lockram upper bodies, and hempen sheets, to wear and sleep in holland.

R. Brome's New Acad., iii, p. 47.

†Then hee [king Charles] returning to his chamber, sitting down by the fier side, we pulled of his shoes and stockings, and washed his feet, which were most sadly galled, and then pulled of likewaies his apparell and shirt, which was of kurden cloth, and put him one of Mr. Huddleston's, and other apparell of ours.

Account of K. Charles's except from Worcester.

†For sh.'s as good a toothless dame,
As mumbleth on brown bread;
Where thou shalt lie in kurden sheets,

Where thou shalt lie in Aurden sheets, Upon a fresh straw bed.

King Alfred and the Shepherd. HURDS. Another name for tow.

Now that part [of the flax] which is utmost, and next to the pill or rind, is called tow or hards,

Holland's Pliny, vol. ii, p. 4.

tyor I have harde olde hauswyres saye, that better is Marche hardes, than Apryll flaxe, the reason appereth.

Fitzherbert's Husbandry.

To shrug. +To HURKLE.

Another sadly fixing his eies on the ground, and kurcking with his head to his sholders, foolishly imagind, that Atlas being funt, and weary of his burthen, would shortly let the heavens fall upon his head, and break his crag.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

†HURLEBAT. A weapon, apparently a sort of dart or javelin.

a sort of dart or javelin.

Aclis, aclidis, a kynde of weapon, used in olde tyme, as it wer an harlebatte.

Biotes Dictionarie, 1559.

Hurlebats having pikes of yron in the eud, aclides.

Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 317.

Laying about him as if they had beene fighting at hurlebats.

Holland's Ammianus Marcel., 1609.

URLEWIND. Whirlwind; possibly

HURLEWIND.

the original word.

And as oft-times upon some fearfull clap
Of thunder, straight a hurlewind doth arise
And lift the waves aloft, from Thetys' lap
Ev'n iu a moment up into the skyes.

Harringt. Arjost...

Harringt. Ariost., zlv, 69.
Like scatter'd down by howing Eurus blown,
By rapid kurksinds from his mansion thrown.

Sandys, cited by Todi. HURLY. A noise, or tumult: from hurler, French; also hurlu-burlu.
That with the hurly death itself awakes.

Methinks I see this Aurly all on foot.

John iii A Hurlu-burlu, which is not in the common French dictionaries, is in the latest editions of the dictionary of the Academy, both as substantive and adjective. Explained "étourdi."

adjective. Explained "etourdi," thy happe if in this Aurly burle with prince or king he met. A Hall's Hower, p. 18, 1801.
th Aurly burly went through the house, and one comes and whispers the lady with the newes.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.
tWell, they fall out, they go together by the cares, and such a Aurly burly is in the roome, that passes. Isid.
To HURRE. To growl or snarl like a dog.

B is the dog's letter, and kurretk in the sound.

B. Jons. Engl. Gr.

HURRICANO. Used for a water-spout. Ouragan, French.

Not the dreadful spout
Which shipmen do the Aurricano call.
Constring'd in mass by the simighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent.
You caterate In his descent.
You cataracts, and hurricanes, spont
Till you have drench'd our steeples.
And down the show'r impetuously doth fall,
As that which men the hurricane call,

Drayt. Mooncalf, p. 494. Menage says that ouragan is an Indian word.

I find it written herocane in one pas-Sage:

Such as would have made their party good against all assailants, had they not been dispersed and weakened by violent tempests; besides the unexpected Aerocome, which dashed all the endeavours of the best pilots. Lady Alimony, iv, 1.

+HURRY-WHORE. A contemptuous name for a common prostitute.

And I doe wish with all my heart, that the superfluous number of all our hyreling hackney carryknaves, and harry-whores, with their makers and maintainers were there, where they might never want continual imployment.

Taylor's Workes, 1830. imployment. HURST.

A wood. Saxon and low It occurs in many names of places, either singly or in composition, implying that the situation was once woody: as Hurst in Berks, Gloucestershire, Kent, Lincoln, Sussex. &c. Also Hawkhurst, Speldhurst, Wad-Crowhurst, and hurst, Penshurst. many other similar names.

From each rising hurst
Where many a goodly oak had carefully been nurst.
Drayt. Polyolo., ii, p. 689. For further discussion of the etymology, which, however, seems unnecessary, see Todd's Johnson.

To HURTLE, v. n. To clash together.

Heurter, French. Gray has used it.

In which Auriling,

From miserable alumber I awak'd.

Together hartled both their steeds, and brake
Each other's neck.

Fairf. Tasso, vi, 41.

To make a sound like clashing:

The noise of battle kurtled in the air.

Jul. Cas., ii, 2.

To skirmish:

Now kurtling round, advantage for to take.

Spens. F. Q., IV. iv, 29.

Also actively, to brandish: His harmfull club he gan to kurtle hye.

Thid., II, vii, 42.

†HURTLE, s. A pimple? Upon whose palmes such warts and hartells rise, As may in poulder grate a nutmegge thick. Silkewormes and their Flies, 1599.

HUSBAND, for husbandman, farmer.

For Ausband's life is labourous and hard.

Spens. Mold. Hubb. Tale, 266.

That feeds the Ausband's neat each winter's day.

Browns, Brit. Past., I, 3, p. 61. Johnson has cited it from Dryden also, with whom many words lingered that are since obsolete.

HUSHER, or HUISHER. An usher, or gentleman usher. Huissier, French.

A gentle kusker, Vanitie by name,
Made rowme, and passage for them did prepare.

Spens. P. Q., I, iv, 13.

But more for care of the security,
My kwisher hath her now in his grave charge.
B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 6.

And throughout that play. +HUSHTNESS. Silence.

A generall Auskinses hath the world possest,
And all the tower surpriz'd with golden dreames,
Alone king Jupiter abandons rest,
Still wishing for Apolloes golden beames.

Heywood's Troja Britanica, 1609.

To cover with a husk. +To HUSK.

Like Jupiter huskt in a female skin.

Historie of Albino and Bellama, 1638. +To HUZZ. To hum.

Murmure. A murmuring: a mumbling in the mouth: a muttering: an humming or kuzzing noise.

Nomenclator.

HYCKE-SCORNER. The title of an old morality, or allegorical drama, printed by Wynken de Worde, and reprinted in Hawkins's Origin of the English Drama, vol. i, p. 69. Hyckescorner is there represented "as a libertine returned from travel, who, agreeably to his name, scoffs at religion." Percy Anc. Ballade, i, p.132. But whether the term were taken from the drama, or the name of the play from a term already current, we play from a term aiready current, we find it used as a general name. Zeno beeyng outright all together a stoique, used to call Socrates the scoffer or the Hicke-scorner of the cites of Athens. Usuall's Agophith. of Eresmus, 1864, Fredere, sign. xxy, b. tSophistrie dooeth no helpe, use, ne service to doing in publique affaires or bearing offices in a common weale, whiche publique offices who so is a suiter to have, it behoveth the same not to plaie Hicke shower with insolubles and with idle knackes of sophisticacions, but rather to frame and facion himself to the manure and condicions of memory and to heat of sche maners and condicions of menne, and to bee of soche sort as other men be. I find hick used for a man, in cant language, in an old song:

That not one kick spares.

And again:

442

That can bulk any hick.

Acad. of Compl., ed. 1713, p. 204.

Used by Shakespeare only, A HYEN.

I believe, for hyena. 1 will laugh like a Ayon, and that when thou art disposed to sleep.

As you like it, iv, 1.—243, a HYREN, for hiren. Sylvester uses it to signify a seducing woman.

Of charming sin the deep-inchaunting syrens,
The snares of virtue, valour-softening hyrens.
Dw B., Week ii, Day 2, part 3.

See HIREN.

I & J.

I was commonly said and written, in the time of Shakespeare, for aye; which afforded great scope and temptation for punning, as may be seen in the following passages:

But what said she' did she nod? Sp. 1. Pro. Nod
I' why that's noddy, &c. Two Gent. Ver., i, 1.
And at these people with their Ps and No's.
Panak. Lus., iv, 14.

Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I. And that bare vowel I shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice.
I am not I, if there be such an I. Rom. f Jul., iii, 2. This is very lamentable, in a passage that should rather have been pathetic. In the same strain Drayton has a whole sonnet, which carries the absurdity still further; it is, however, curious:

Nothing but No and I, and I and No,
How falls it out so strangely you reply?
I tell you, fair, I'll not be answer'd so
With this affirming No, denying I.

I say, I love; you slightly answer, I:

1 say, you love; you peule me out a No:

I say, die; you echo me with I:

Save me, I cry; you sigh me out a No.

Must woe and I have nought but No and I:

No I am I, if I no more can have;

Answer no more, with silence make reply,

And let me take myself what I do crave:

Let No and I with Lord on the act. I say, I love; you slightly answer, I: Let No and I, with I and you be so; Then answer No and I, and I and No. Line the tenth is nearly the same as the fourth cited from Shakespeare. As when the disagreeing commons throw About their house their clamorous I or No Herrick, p. 860.

In the modern editions of Shakespeare, I is generally changed to aye; but in Whallev's Ben Jonson the single vowel is retained, which the reader should recollect, or he will sometimes take it for the pronoun.

I, the pronoun, was sometimes repeated in colloquial use, as the French subjoin moi : Je n'aime pas cela, moi; "I like not such a thing, I." Some instances of it occur in Shakespeare. and many other writers.

I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure. I. 3 Hen. IV. ii. 4.

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Rom. J. Jul., iii, 1.

You light is not day-light, I know it, I.

Ibid. Ironically:

Tam an ass, II and yet I kept the stage in master Tarleton's time. Induct. to B. Jons. Barth. Fair. I am none of those common pedants, I. That cannot speak without propterea quod. Edward II, O. Pl., ii, 849.

For my disport I rode on hunting, I.

Mirr. Mag., p. 53.

I per se, as A PER SE, &c. : I by itself: If then your I agreement want, I to your I must answer No.

Therefore leave off your spelling plea, And let my I be I per se. Wit's Interp., p. 116. +JABISH. Perhaps a misprint for jadish. To discourse him seriously is to read the ethics to a monkey, or make an oration to Caligula's horse, whence you can only expect a wee-hee or jabish spurn. Twelve Ingenious Characters, 1686.

JACK, s. A horseman's defensive upper garment, quilted and covered with strong leather. It is usually interpreted a coat of mail, but some of the following quotations seem to prove otherwise. A kind of pitcher made of leather was similarly called a black jack, even in my memory.

pack, even in my memory.

I have half a score jades that draw my beer carts; and every jade shall bear a knave, and every knave shall wear a jack, and every jack shall have a skull, and every skull shall shew a spear, and every spear shall kill a foe at Ficket Field.

First P. of Sir J. Olde., Suppl. to Sh., ii, 297.

The bill-men come to blows, that, by their cruel thweeks.

thwack, ly strew'd with male and shreds of tatter'd jacks. Drayt. Polyolb., xxii, p. 1062. Their armour [in England] is not unlike unto that which in other countries they use, as corslets, Almaine rivets, shirts of male, jackes quilted, and covered over with leather, fustian, or canvas, over thick plates of yron that are sowed to the same

Their horsemen are with jacks for most part clad.

Harr. Ariost., x, 73.

The following, however, is an instance of iack used for a coat of mail:

Nor lay aside their jacks of gymold mail.

Edw. III, i, 3, in Capell's Prolus. Unless the original copy had "jacks, or gymold," which seems to me most probable.

+But with the trusty bow,
And jacks well quilted with soft wool, they came to Troy.

Chapm. II., iii. [To be on the jack of any one, to attack him violently, evidently in allusion to the preceding word.]

†Te ulciscar, I will be revenged on thee: I will sit on thy skirts: I will be upon your jacks for it. Terence in English, 1614.

Terence in English, 1614.

† And our armie, joyning with the prince's, wee made a gallant body; which made him sneake to his quarters at Openhan. And, as often as he stur'd, wee were on his jack.

A. Wilson's Autobiography.

† My lord lay in Morton College; and, as he was going to parliament one morning on foot, a man in a faire and civill outward habit mett him, and jossel'd him. And, though I was at that time behind his lordship, I saw it not; for, if I had, I should have been upon his jack.

Ibid.

+JACK-A-LANTERN. The ignis fatuus.

I am an evening dark as night, Jack-with-the-lantern, bring a light. The Slighted Maid, p. 48. A stuffed puppet, JACK-A-LENT. dressed in rags, &c., which was thrown at throughout Lent, as cocks were on Shrove Tuesday.

Thou cam'st but half a thing into the world, And wast made up of patches, parings, shreds; Thou, that when last thou wert put out of service, Travell'd to Hamstead Heath on an Ash Wednesday, Where the didst stand aix weeks the Jack of Lent,
For boys to hurl three throws a penny at thee,
To make thee a purse. B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv. 3. Six weeks are again mentioned as the duration of a Jack of Lent, in the following passage:

Nsy, you old Jack-a-Lont, six weeks and upwards, though you be our captain's father you cannot stay there.
Pour Prentices, O. Pl., vi. 478. By which is meant, that the old man is come to the utmost extent of his utility and existence.

ULTITY AND EXISTENCE.

The very children in the street do adore me; for if a boy that is throwing at his Jack-a-Lent chance to hit me on the shins, why, I say nothing but The quoque, amile, and forgive the child.

Greene's The Quoque, O. Pl., vii, 92.

If I forfeit,
Make me a Jack o' Lent, and break my shins
For untagg'd points and compters.

B. J. R. Woman's Prize, iv, 8.

Jack-a-Lent occurs twice in the Merry Wives of Windsor; once merely as a jocular appellation, iii, 3, and once as a butt, or object of satire and attack.

Breton introduces the name of this personage with an allusion to a wellknown proverb:

The puffing fat that shewes the pesant's feede,
Proves Jack a Lent was never gentleman.

Honour of Valour, 1605. Taylor the water-poet has a tract entitled, "Jacke a Lent, his Beginning and Entertainment: with the mad Prankes of his Gentleman-usher, Shrove-Tuesday," &c. See Works, p. 113.

JACK-AN-APES. A monkey, or ape; from Jack and ape. In this sense it has been long disused, though common enough still, as addressed to an impertinent and contemptible coxcomb

This performed, and the horse and jack-an-apes for a jigge, they had sport enough that day for nothing.

Gayton, Fest. Notes, p. 272.

Like a come aloft jacanapes. Sheldon, cited by Todd.

Notwithstanding the attempts of Ritson and others to derive it from Jack Napes, a person never heard of, I have no doubt that the real derivation is Jack and ape, as Johnson gave it. Mr. Todd does not appear to have observed, that in the instance which I have copied from him, it simply means an ape. See Come ALOFT.

That which would make a jackanapes a monkey, if he could get it, a tayle.

Isle of Gulls, ii, 1. Massinger coined the word Jane-anapes, as a jocular counterpart to Jack-an-apes. Bondm., iii, 2.

JACK OF THE CLOCK, or CLOCK-HOUSE. A figure made in old public clocks to strike the bell on the outside; of the same kind as those formerly at St. Dunstan's church in Fleet-street. Jack, being the most familiar appellative, was frequently bestowed upon whatever bore the form, or seemed to do the work, of a man or servant. Thus, roasting jacks were so named from performing the office of a man, who acted as turnspit, before that office devolved upon dogs. Jack and Gill were, indeed, familiar representatives of the two sexes in low life; as in the proverb, "Every Jack must have his Gill;" and, "A good Jack makes a good Gill." Ray, Prov., p. 124. So jack alone:

So jack fione:
Since every jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a jack.

Bick. III, 1,3.

But my time
Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,
While I stand fooling here, his jack o' the clock Rich. II, v, b.

K. Rick. Well, but what's o'clock?
Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.
K. Rick. Well, let it strike.
Buck. Why let it strike?
K. Rick. Because that, like a jack, thou keep'st the Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

Betwirt thy begging and my meditation.

Rick. III, iv, 2.

Skirm. How now, creatures, what's o'clock?

Pre. Why, do you take us to be jacks o' th' clock Acuse?

Prairies. Suppl. to Sh., ii, 573.

How's the night, boy? Draw. Faith, sir, 'tis very Uber. Faith, sir, you lie. Is this your jack i' th' clock-house?

elock-house; air? B. F. M. Corcomb, act i, p. 167.
But, howsover, if Powles jacks be once up with their cllowes, and quarelling to strike eleven, as soon as ever the clock has parted them, and ended the fray with his hammer, let not the duke's gallery conteyes you any longer.

Decker's Gul's Hornbook, 1609.
By the above it appears that the jacks at St. Paul's struck only the quarters.

Decker, in another pamphlet, tells us of a fraternity of sharpers who called themselves Jackes of the clock-

There is another fraternitie of wandring pilgrims, who merrily call themselves Jackes of the clock-house. He then describes that piece of mechanism particularly:

The jacke of a clock-house goes upon acrews, and his office is to do nothing but strike, so does this noise (for they walke up and down like follers) travalle with motions, and whatever their motions get them is called Lantern and Candlelight, or the Belman's Second Night Walk, &c.

See Noise.

He scrapes you just such a leg, in answering you, a jack o' th' clock-house agoing about to strike.

Flecknot's Enigmat. Char., p. 76.

Cotgrave, in the article Fretillon, introduces it as a general term for a diminutive or paltry fellow:

A little nimble dwarfe or hop-on-my-thumbe; a jacky of the clock-howse; a little busie-body, medler, jackstickler; one that has an oare in every man's boat, or his hand in every man's dish.

Minute-jacks, in Timon of Athens, have been supposed to mean the same thing; but jacks that struck hours or quarters could hardly be so called. QUARTERS COULD manuary and minute-jacks.

Timon, iii, 6.

Probably jacks are there only equivalent to fellows, as in Richard III: " silken, sly, insinuating jacks." It will then mean "fellows who watch the proper minutes to offer their Jack, as shown above, was a common appellative for every person or thing familiarly, or rather contemptuously, spoken of.

Katherine calls her music-master a twangling jack. Tam. of Shr., ii, 1; and so elsewhere.

The clock-house evidently means that part of the steeple, &c., which contains the clock.

+JACK-IN-A-BOX. 1. A thief who deceived tradesmen by substituting empty boxes for others full of money. This Jacke.in-a-boxe, or this divell in mans shape, wearing (like a player on a stage) good cloathes on his backe, comes to a goldsmith stull, to a drapers, a habberdashers, or into any other shoppe, where he knowes good store of silver faces are to be seen.

Dekker, English Villanies, 1639.

2. A kind of fire-work described in White's Artificial Fireworks. 1708.

p. 17.

3. In the following passage it perhaps means a child's toy, such are still in

USC.

As I was thus walking my rounds, up comes a brother of the quill, belonging to the office, who no sooner made his entrance amongst the equitable fraternity, but up started every one in his seat, like a Jack in a box, crying out Legit aut non Legit; To which they answerd themselves, Non legit, my lord.

The Informal Wandersr, 1702.

+JACK-A-DANDY. A pert fellow.

Bea. I'll throw him into the dock, rather than he shall succeed Jack O Dandy. Come, sir, all shall be well again. Fear not.

Brome's Northern Lass.

Bea. I'll throw man shall succeed Jack O Dandy. Come, sir, an aman shall succeed Jack O Dandy. Come, sir, an aman shall succeed Jack O Dandy. Brome's Northern Lass.

My love is blithe and bucksome,
And sweet and fine as can be,
Fresh and gay as the flowers in May,
And lookes like Jack-a-dandy.

Wit and Drollery, 1682, p. 342.

San. Nor any where else, where he was not to be found; if you had look'd for him where he was, 'twas ten to one but you had met with him.

Jacin. I had, Jackadandy;'
The Mistake, a Comedy, 1706.

+JACK-ON-BOTH-SIDES. A popular name for a neutral.

Reader, John Newter, who erst plaid The Jack on both sides, here is laid. Witts Recreations, 1654.

+JACK-OUT-OF-DOORS. A houseless

Neque pessimus neque primus: not altogether Jack out of doores, and yet no gentleman. Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 569.

+JACK-OUT-OF-OFFICE appears to have been used, in derision, for one who was no longer a jack-in-office.

For liberalitie, who was wont to be a principall officer . . . is tourned Jacks out of affice, and others appointed to have the custodie. Riche his Farewell to Militarie Profession, 1581.

+Hanging-JACK. A jack for cooking.
I met Spicer in Lincoln's Inn court, buying of a hanging-jack to roast biids upon.

Pepys' Diary, Feb. 4th, 1660.

+JACK-BRAG, or JACK-BRAGGER. A boaster.

Jacke Bragger and his fellow, a vaunter, a cracker, &c. Withals' Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 263. +JACK-MEDDLER. A busybody.

A Jacke-medler, or busic-body in everie mans matter, ardelio. Withale Dictionarie, ed. 1608, p. 263. +JACK-PUDDING. Α showman's buffoon.

445

It tell you. I had as leave stand among the rabble, to see a jack-pudding eat a custard, as trouble myself to see a play.

Shadwell, Sullen Lovers, 1670.
Now's the only time for fools and fiddlers, and indeed all sorts of people that have nothing to do; for now the company who are the people with the continue to the control of the con an sorts of people that have mothing to do; for may trifle away their time amongst drolls and Jack-puddings, and their money in nuts, toys, and gingerbread.

Poor Robin, 1740.

To line one's jacket, to +JACKET. drink deeply.

Il s'accoustre bien. He stuffes himselfe soundly, hee lines his jacket throughly with liquor.

A JACOB'S STAFF. A pilgrim's staff; either from the frequent pilgrimages to St. James of Compostella, or because the Apostle St. James was usually represented with one.

As he had traveil'd many a sommer's day
Through boyling sands of Arabic and Ynd;
And in his hand a Jacob's staffs to stay
His weary limbs upon. Spens. F. Q., I, vi. 32.

Also an astronomical instrument, called likewise a cross-staff; from its resemblance to the other:

semblance to the other:

Resolve that with your Jacob's staff.

Hudibr., II, iii, 785.

tWhereupon the poore prognosticator was readic to runne himselfe through with his Jacobs staffs.

Nash, Pierce Penitesse, 1592.

tHis life is upright, for he is alwaics looking upward, yet dares beleeve nothing above prissums smolile, for 'tis out of the reach of his Jacobs staffs.

Ousriver's New and Choise Characters, 1615.

tAur. Then He tell you. There was once an astrologer brought mad before me, the circulations of the heavens had turn'd his braines round, he had very strange fits, he would ever be staring, and gazing, and yet his eyes were so weak, they could not looke up without a staffe.

Spr. A Jacobs staffs you meane?

Marmyon's Fine Compassion, 1633.

tWho having known both of the land and sky, More than fam'd Archimide, or Ptolomy, Would further press, and like a palmer went, With Jacobs staff, beyond the firmament.

With Recreations, 1654.

COB'S STONE. The stone which

JACOB'S STONE. The stone which was brought from Scone by Edward I, reputed among the Scots to have been the very stone which supported Jacob's head at Luz; and regarded by them as the palladium of the monarchy. See Hume, an. 1296. It is still enclosed in the coronation chair.

If I survive England's inheritance,
Or ever live to sit on Jacob's stons,
Thy love shall with my crown be hereditary.
Heyecod's Royal K., fc., Anc. Dr., vi, 227.
For a fuller history of this stone, see the accounts of Westminster Abbey, and these Latin verses, which are, or were, inscribed upon the chair itself: Si quid habent veri vel chronica cana, fidesve, Clauditur hac cathedra nobilis ecce lapis,

Ad caput eximins Jacob quondam patriarcha
Quem posuit, cernens numina mira poli, &c.
COBITE. This word seems to be JACOBITE. used for Jacobin, or white friar.

To see poor sucklings welcom'd to the light, With searing irons of some soure Jacobite. Hall, Sat., iv. 7.

+To JADE. To weary. Apparently a new word in lord Bacon's time.

For it is a dull thing to tire, and, as we now say, to jade anything too far.

JADRY. The properties of a bad or vicious horse; from jade, which in its primitive sense, as applied to a horse, is growing into disuse, though Pope has so applied it, which may keep it alive a little; but the usage is in general transferred to the metaphorical sense, as applied to a woman.

Seeks all foul means
Of boisterous and rough jadry, to disseat
His lord, that kept it bravely. Two Noble Kinsm., v, 4. JAKES. A necessary-house, or privy. A term now almost forgotten, though used by Dryden and Swift. Johnson. Hence the quibbling title of sir John Harrington's tract, "The Metamorphosis of Ajax," by which he meant the improvement of a jakes. See AJAX.

Its etymology is uncertain, unless we accept the very bad pun of sir John, who derives it (in jest indeed) from an old man who, at such a place, cried out age akes, age akes, meaning that age causes aches; whence some who heard him called the place age akes, or a jakes. Prologue to Ajax.

The delicacy of queen Elizabeth was much offended with him for publishing that book, which is now esteemed by collectors such a prize. Jakes was sometimes written iaxe, which made the punning allusion the more easy.

Solomon, a Jew, fell into a iaze at Tewkesbury on a Saturday.

Camden's Remains, p. 307. Saturday.

JAKES-FARMER. One who cleanses the jakes, jocularly called a goldfinder.

Nay we are all signiors here in Spain, from the jakes-farmer to the grandee, or adelantado.

B. & Pl. Love's Cure, ii, 1.

Not accorning scallions, coblers, colliers,

Jakes-farmers, fidlers, ostlers, oysterers. Sylvester's Tobacco Batter'd, Works, p. 575, a.

The chamber stinkes worse all the yeere long, than a jakes-farmer's clothes doth at twelve a clock at night.

Fennow on the Compter, in Censura Lit., 2, p 3/2.

Called in Stowe a goung-fermour. London, ed. 1633, p. 666. See GOUNG. +JAMSEÝ.

Then have they nether-stockes to those gai hosen, not of cloth (the never so fine), for that is thought to base, but of jamesy, worsted, crewell, silke, thred, and such like.

Stubbs, Anatomic of Abuse.

A JANE. A small coin of Genoa, or Janua; according to Skinner, "Exp. Halfpence of Janua, potius Genova, q. d. nummus Genuensis vel Januenais." Supposed to be the same as the galley halfpence mentioned by Stowe.

Because I could not give her many a Jane.

Spens. F. Q., III, vii, 58. Chaucer more than once speaks of a Jane in this sense. See Warton on Spenser, vol. i, p. 245.

+JANIVEER. An old form of January. Fr. Janvier.

Time sure hath wheel'd about his yeare, December meeting Janiveere.

Cleaveland, Char. of London Diurnall, 1647.

To JAPE. To play, or jest.

Nay jepe not hym, he is no smal fole.

Skelton, p. 336.

It was used also in an indecent sense: Now have ye other victous manners of speech, but sometimes and in some cases tolerable, and chiefly to the intent to moore laughter and to make sport, or ogive it some prety strange grace; and is when we use such wordes as may be drawen to a foule and unshamefast sence, as one that should say to a young woman, I pray you let me jape with you. Yes, and though it were not so directly spoken, the very sounding of the word were not commendable, as he that in the presence of ladies would nase this common meaning. the presence of ladies would use this common pro-

Jape with me, but hurt me not, Bourde with me, but shame me not.

For it may be taken in another perverser sense by that sorte of persons that heure it, in whose cares so such matter ought almost to be called in memory.

Puttenh. Art of English Poesie, B. iii, ch. 23.

A JAPE. A jest. The D. A just.

I durst aventure wel the price of my best cap.

That when the end is knowen, all will turne to a just.

Gammer Gurton, O. Pl., ii, 68.

The pill'ring pastime of a crue of apes.

Sporting themselves with their conceited justes.

Coryal, Verses prefered, [k 7, b.]

To JAR. To tick as a clock.

My thoughts are minutes, and, with aighs, they just Their watches, to mine eyes, the outward watch; Whereto my finger, fike a dial's point, Is pointing still, in cleaning them from tears.

Rich. II. v. b. The above is the reading of the second folio, and is sense without alteration or laborious explication: the reading of the old quartos serves as the best comment, which is,

They jar
Their watches on unto mine eyes, &c.

The meaning is, "They tick their periods on, to my eyes, which represent the outward watch;" watch signifying, as Dr. Johnson observed, in the first place a portion of time, and in the second the face of the clock.

The bells tolling, the owls shricking, the toads croaking, the minutes jarring and the clock striking twelve.

Spanish Tragedy, O. Pl., iii, 199.

A JAR, from the above, a beat or stroke; the ticking made by the pallets of the pendulum in a clock.

Yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord.

Wint. Wint. Tale, i. 2.

Wool combed but not spun +JARSEY. into yarn.

By no meanes therefore is the present practice to be borne, which daily carrieth away of the finest sorts of wools ready combed into jarsies for worke, which they pack up as bales of cloth. Golden Fleece, 1857.

JAVEL. A worthless fellow. Javelle in French means a sheaf of corn, and also a faggot of brush wood, or other worthless materials; and therefore might be applied to such fellows as Shakespeare calls "rash bavin wits."

The term that these two javels
Should render up a reckoning of their travels
Unto their master. Spens. Moth. Hubb. T., v. 309.
To preach by halfes is to be worse than those tongueholly javels.

That cite good words, but shift off works and discipline by cavells. Alb. Engl., B. viii, ch. 39, p. 192.

He called the fellow ribbald, villayn, jasell, back-biter, &c.

Robinson's Utopia, 1551, E 3.

To JAUNCE. To ride hard; from jancer, old French, to work a horse violently.

NOIGHLLY.

And yet I bear a burden like an ass.

Spur-gall'd, and tir'd, by jamacing Bolingbroke.

Rich. II, v, 5.

A JAUNCE was also used for a jaunt, the derivation of which is supposed to be the same. For, "What a jaunt have I had' (Rom. & Jul., ii, 5), the quartos read, "What a jaunce have I had." The same is meant by geance

in the following passage:

Vaith, would I had a few more grances on't!

An' you say the word, send me to Jericho,
Out-cept a man were a post-horse, I ha' not known
The like on't.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, ii, 4. The word is purposely misspelt, to mark the dialect of the speaker; as vaith for faith, &c.

To JAW. To devour, to take within the jaws.

le jaws.
I reck not if the wolves would jaw me, so
He had this file; what if I hollow'd for him?
Two Noble Kinsm., iii, 2 I do not know that this word was ever so employed by any other author. | IDLE WORMS. Worms bred from idle-

It seems to be only a harsh metaphor. hazarded in this place.

JAWSAND, adj. Apparently, a corruption of joysome or jocund.

F. Will you be merry then and jawsand? R. As merry as the cuckows of the spring.

Ford, Sun's Darl., iii, 1.

The old edition has jawfand.

A JAY. Used for a loose woman, probably from the gay plumage of that bird. Warburton remarks, that putta in Italian has also both these senses. Go to, then ;-we'll use this unwholesome humidity. Go to, then;—we'll use this unwholesome numuity, this gross watry pumpion;—we'll teach him to know turtles from jays!

Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him.

Cymb., iii, 4.

ICE-BROOK. Supposed to mean cold or icy brook.

OF ICY DIOOK.

I have another weapon in this chamber;
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.

Othell., v, 3. The reading of the old quarto is isebrooke's, which the folio changed to ice brookes; whence Pope made Ebro's, and was followed by Capell. Mr. Steevens is of opinion that icebrook's is right; and proves from Martial, that the brook or rivulet so used, is the Salo, now Xalon, near Bilbilis, in Celtiberia.

ICELAND DOGS. Shaggy, sharp-eared, white dogs, much imported formerly as favorites for ladies, &c.

Pish for thee, Iceland dog, thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland.

Hen. V, ii, 1.

But if I had brought little dogs from Iceland, or fine glasses from Venice, &c.

Swelnam's Arraignment of Women, Preface.

We have sholts or curs dallie brought out of Iseland.

Holinsh. Descr. of Brit., p. 231.

Written also corruptly Isling, and Island:

Hang hair like hemp, or like the Isling curs,
For never powder, nor the crisping iron
Shall touch these dangling locks.

B. F. R. Queen of Corinth, iv, 1.
So I might have my belly-full of that
Her Island cur refuses.

Massing. Pict., v, 1.
Our water-dogs and Islands here are shorn,
White hair of women here so much is worn.

Drayton's Mooncalf, p. 489.

These dogs are particularly described by A. Fleming, in his translation of Caius de Canibus:

Use and custome hath intertained other dogges of an outlandishe kinde, but a few, and the same beying of a pretty bygnesse; I meane Isoland dogges, curied and rough all over, which by reason of the length of their heare make showe neither of face nor of body. And yet these curres forsoothe, because they are so strange, are greatly set by, esteemed, taken up, and made of, many times in the roome of the spaniell gentle or comforter.

Of English Dogges, 5c., 1576.

ness. It was supposed, and the notion was probably encouraged for the sake of promoting female industry, that when maidens were idle, worms bred in their fingers.

Keep thy hands in thy muff, and warm the idle
Worms in thy fingers' ends.

B. & Fl. Woman Hater, iii, 1.

Her waggoner, a small grev-coated guat, Not half so big as a round little sorm, Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid. Rom and Jul., i. 4.

[To be sick of the idles, to be lazy.]
Hodie nullam lineam duxi: I have beene sicke of the idles to day. Withals' Dictionary, ed. 1634, p. 558.

†JEBERD. To jeopard. Heywood, 1556. +JELOUX. An old form of spelling iealous.

Th' have made me jeloux of a god, no god.
I'll make them jeloux, I will wed (abroad)
A people (yet) no people; and their brest Shall split, for spight, to see the nations blest. Du Rartas.

+JENESTRAY.

Phi. You forget his cover'd dishes Prin. 1011 lorget his cover a disness of jene-strayes, and marmalade of lips, Perfun'd by breath sweet as the beanes first blossomes.

Suckling's Aglaura, 1638.

JENERT'S BANK. The following passage is probably corrupt. It has been conjectured that there was a bank called Jenert's, so famous as to be proverbial for security; but it remains to be shown that any country-bank existed in the seventeenth century; much more that they were so common as for one to be famous above the rest. A better reading seems to be wanted:

How now, my old Jenert's bank, my horse,
My castle, tie in Waltham all night, and
Not under the canopy of your host Blague's house?

Merry Devil of Elm., O. Pl., v, 300. Can it be a misprint, for Ermen's bank, or the old Roman road passing through Edmonton, which might have been written Irmint's? Horse is not much more intelligible, as applied here. Should it not be house? speaking of his house as his †JENNET. A small Spanish horse.

This tryal, Camilla, must be sifted to narrow points, lest in accking to try your lover like a jennet, you try him like a jade.

Lylie's Euphnes. To JEOBARD. Sometimes written for to jeopard; probably from ignorance of the etymology. Yet I dare jeobard my cappe to fortie shillings, thou shalt have but a colde suite.

Ulp. Faluel's Art of Flattery, H 3.

To jeopard, itself, is not much in use.

All the examples given in Todd's Johnson, are of the seventeenth century, or earlier.

JEOBERTIE, for jeopardy, in like man-

If you foil me, of which there is small jeobertie, I will send word to set them all at libertie. Harr. Ariosto. XXXV. 44.

To JEOPARD. To hazard or endanger. Not in use now.

INOU IN USE DOW.

He was a prince right hardie and adventerous, not fearing to jeopard his person in place of danger.

Holinsh, vol. i, 1.3 col. 1.

I am compelled against my minde and will (as Pompey the Great was) to jeopard the libertie of our country, to the hazard of a battel. North's Plut. Bratus, p. 1072.

The forefrontes or frontiers of the ii. corners, what wythe fordys and shelves, and what with rockes, be very jeoperdous and daungerous. More's Utopia, 1851.

DE ALLI CON.

JER-FAULCON, or GERFAULCON. A large and fine sort of hawk, said to come originally from the north; therefore by some called the Iceland Gyrofalco, low Latin; gerfaulk, or gerfaut, French. Latham is abundant in its praise:

A bird stately, brave, and beautifull to behold in the eye and judgement of man, more strong and powerfull than any other used hawk, and many of them very bold, couragious, valiant, and very venturous, next to the slight-faulcon, of whose worthiness I have already sufficiently discoursed. Latham, B. i, ch. 18. The Gentleman's Recreation is almost equally strong in its commendation; o. 48 of the Treatise on Hawks. The following description of a contest of one of these birds with a heron, may be thought interesting:

If any once thought interesting:

I saw once a jerfalcon let file at an heron, and observed with what clamour the heron entertained the sight and approach of the hawke, and with what winding shift hee strave to get above her, labouring even by bemuting his enemies feathers to make her flagge-winged, and so escape; but when at last they magg-winged, and so except; out when it has use must needs come to an encounter, resuming course out of necessity, hee turned face against her, and striking the hawke through the gorge with his bill, fell down edeal together with his dead enemie. Arthur Warwick's Meditations, part ii, p. 80.

JERICHO seems to be used, in the following instance, as a general term for a place of concealment or banishment. If so, it explains the common phrase of wishing a person at Jericko, without sending them so far as Palestine.

Who would to curbe such insolence, I know, Who would use the stay in Jericko
Bid such young boyes to stay in Jericko
Untill their beards were growne, their wits more staid.

Heyw. Hierarchie, B. iv, p. 208.

JERONIMO. See HIERONIMO. It is censured with Titus Andronicus in

the following passage:
He that will swear Jeronimo or Andronicus are the best plays yet, shall pass unexcepted at here, as a man whose judgement shews it is constant, and hath stood still these five and twenty or thirty years. Though it be an ignorance, it is a virtuous and staid ignorance. B. Jons. Induct. to Barth. Fair.

JESSES. The short straps of leather, but sometimes of silk, which went round the legs of a hawk, in which were fixed the varvels, or little rings of silver, and to these the leash, or long strap which the falconer twisted round his hand; from gect, or get, the same in old French; or geste. a bandage in general. In a passage of Heywood's Woman kill'd with Kindness, gets and gesses are distinguished:

So, seize her gets, her gesses, and her bells.

O. Pi., vii, 20s.

If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind
Olkello, iii, 3. I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wine To prey at fortune.

Othello, iii, 3. That, like an hauke, which feeling herself freed, From bels and jesses which did let her flight, Him seem'd his feet did fly, and in their speed delight.

Spens. P. Q., VI, iv, 19.

In the old play of Edw. II it is printed gresses by mistake:

printed gresses by informed in high,
Soar ye ne'er so high,
I have the gresses [jesses] that will pull you down.
O. Pl., ii, 345. A hawk he esteems the true burden of nobility, and and to have his fist gloved with his jesses.

Earle's Microcosm., § xviii, p. 54; Bliss's edition.

To JEST. To act any feigned part in a mask or interlude, &c.

As gentle and as jocund as to jest Go I to fight. Rick. II, i, 3,

A JEST. A mask, pageant, or interlude.

But where is old Hieronimo our marshal? He promis'd us, in honour of our guest,
To grace our banquet with some pompous jest.

Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 138.

On which immediately follows the mask, which satisfies the king as the fulfilment of the promise. It seems to be applied to actions in general, real or fictitious. See GEST. Jest is sometimes written for gest:

There [in Homer] may the jestes of many a knight be rea

Patroclus, Pyrrhus, Ajax, Diomed.

Jasper Heywood, in Cens. Lit., ix, 393.

To JET. To strut, or walk proudly; to throw the body about in walking.

Jetter, French.

O peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him; how he jets under his advanc'd plumes!

Twelfis Night, ii, 5.

Not Pelopa' shoulder whiter than her hands,

Not Felops' snouleer writer taan ner nanas,
Nor snowie swans that jet on Inca's sands.

Browne, Br. Past., II, iii, p. 95.
Of those that prank it with their plumes,
And jet it with their choice perfumes.

Herrick's Noble Numbers, p. 44.

†JEWLEPS.

And, Midas like, he jets it in the court. Edw. II. O. Pl., ii, 340. See also O. Pl., iii, 390. It is used in the following passage for to rejoice, exult, or be proud:

The orders I did set,
They were obey'd with joy, which made me jet.
Mirr. for Magist., Queen Helena, p. 202.

[To encroach insultingly upon.]

†Insulting tyranny begins to jet Upon the innocent and aweless throne. Rick. 117. ii. 4. †It is hard when Englishmens pacience must be thus jetted on by straungers, and they not dare to revendge their owne wrongs. Play of Sir Thomas More.

A JETTER. A strutter; from the preceding.

So were ye better, What shulde a begger be a jetter!

Four Ps, O. Pl., i, 94.

+JEWS' EARS. Funguses or excrescences of the elder-tree, called auriculæ Judæ in Latin, and therefore it is probably a corruption of Judas's ears. Judas was supposed to have hanged himself on an elder-

They that have any pains or swellings in the throat, let them take Jews-cars (which is to be had at the apothecaries), and lay it to steep in ale a whole night, and let the party drink a good draught thereof every day once or twice. Lupton's Thousand Notable Things.

JEW'S EYE. This phrase does not require explanation, but its origin may be worth remarking. The extortions to which the Jews were subject in the thirteenth century, and the periods both before and after. exposed them to the most tyrannical and cruel mutilations, if they refused to pay the sums demanded of them. "King John," says Hume, "once demanded 10,000 marks from a Jew of Bristol, and on his refusal, ordered one of his teeth to be drawn every day, till he should consent. The Jew lost seven teeth, and then paid the sum required of him." Chap. xii, A.D. 1272. The threat of losing an eye would have a still more powerful effect. Hence the high value of a Jew's eye. The allusion was familiar in the time of Shakespeare:

There will come a Christian by Will be worth a Jewess' eye. Mer. Ven., ii, 5. The fine black eye of the Jew does not seem sufficiently to account for the saying.

Fore'd from their beds, By feaverish powers rude fits, whose heat, not all The jewleps of their tears, though some drops fail. Chamberlayne's Pharonnida, 1659.

JEWSE, s. If not put for joist, I know not what it is. I have met with it only in these lines:

From the walls down went
The English troopes, and to the gates did passe,
Where th' iron barres in sunder they did rent, Beate downe the posts, and all the jewses brent.

Nice. Engl. El., Mirr. for Mag., p. 866.

The old dictionaries give jewise for a gallows, which in Chaucer is also used for the word punishment; but the passage here cited refers to the gates of Cadiz, when stormed by the English.

IGNOMY, for ignominy, occurs very commonly.

Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph. I Hen. IV, v, 4.
Hence, broker, lacquey!—ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!
Tro. and Cr., v, 3.

Tro. and Cr., v, 3.

Oh wherefore stain you vertue and renowne
With such foule tearmes of ignomy and shame?
Trag. Com. of Weakest goes to the Wall, H 2, b.
His ignomy and bitter shame in fine shall be more great. Thos. Preston's Cambyses, bl. let., A 2.
The one of which doth bring eternal fame,
The other ignomic and dastard shame.

Mirr. for Magistr., p. 765.

It occurs also in Titus Andronicus. IGNOTE. Unknown. A mere pedantic Latinism, properly noticed by Todd.

†All good (rewards layd by) shal stil increase
For love of her, and villany decease;
Naught be ignote, not so much out of feare
Of being punisht, as offending her.
Lovelace's Lucasta, 1649, p. 72.

A JIG meant anciently not only a merry dance, but merriment and humour in writing, and particularly a ballad. Thus, when Polonius objects to the Player's speech, Hamlet sarcastically observes.

He's for a jigg, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Haml., ii, 2.

He does not mean a dance (which these players did not undertake), but ludicrous dialogue, or a ballad.

In the following passage it means a trick or sport; and the desire of Mr. Sympson to change it into juggle, shows that he had but imperfectly learned the language of his authors:

This innovation? is't not a fine jigg?
A precious cunning in the late Protector,
To shuffle a new prince into the state. To shuffle a new prince into one sauce.

B. & Fl. or Shirley, Coron., v, 1.

And therefore came it, that the fleering Scots.

To England's high disgrace, have made this jig:

Edw. II, O. Pl., ii, 353. In the Harleian collection of old ballads are many under the title of jigs; as, "A Northern Jige, called Daintie, come thou to me;" "A merry new Jigge, or the pleasant Wooing betwixt Kit and Pegge;" &c. So in the Fatal Contract, by Hemmings:

We'll hear your jigg;—
How is your ballad titled? Act iv. se. 4.

Thus:

A small matter! you'll find it worth Meg of West-minster, although it be but a bare jig. Hog hath lost, fe., O Pl., vi, SSS. It appears, in the scene, that this nig was a ballad.

t Looke to it, you hooksellers and stationers, and let not your shops be infected with such goose gyblets, or stinking gurbadge, as the jygs of newsmongers. Nash, Pierce Peniksse, 1892.

+JIGGALORUM. A trifle.

I see my inferiours in the gifts of learning, wisedome, and understanding, torment the print daily with lighter trifles and jiggalorums than my russet hermit is. King's Halfe-pennyworth of Wit, 1613, ded.

JIG-MAKER. A writer of ballads, or humorous poems.

humorous poems.

Oph. You are merry, my lord. Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord. Ham. O! your only jig-maker!

Ham!, iii, 2.

If you have this strange monster honesty in your belly, why so jig-makers and chroniclers shall pick something out of you. Hon. WA., O. Pl., iii, 25A. O Giacopo! Petrarch was a dunce, Dante a jig-maker, Sannazar a goose, and Ariosto a puck-fist to me. Ford's Love's Sacrifice, ii, l.

+JIM-JAM. A gimcrack.

A thousand jymjams and toyes have they in therr chambers.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592

JIMMAL. See GIMMAL.

By JIS. See G18.

To ILD, for to yield. See GOD ILD

ILL MAY-DAY, i. e., Evil May-day. The 1st of May, 1517, when the apprentices of London rose against the privileged foreigners, whose advantages in trade had occasioned great jealousy. Much mischief was done before the rioters were quelled, and fourteen or fifteen apprentices were afterwards executed. See a ballad on the subject in Evans's Collection, vol. iii, p. 76, 2d ed. Ben Jonson mentions it:

Rogues, hell-hounds, Stentors, out of my doors, 700 sons of noise and tumult, begot on an ill May-de, of when the galley-foist is affort to Westminster!

The ballad begins, Peruse the stories of this land,
And with advisement mark the same,
And you shall justly understand
How ill May-day first got the name.
This use of the word ill is now obsolete; but it lasted much later than the times to which this work refers. Even in queen Anne's time some writers used the expression of an ill man, for a bad man. See Pennant's London, p. 587, 8vo ed.

+ILLS.

Three ills come from the north, a cold wind, a shrinking cloth, and a dissembling man.

Howell, 1659.

+ILL-PART. Ill-conditioned?

King John, that ill-part personage.

Death of R. Earle of Huntington, 1601.

LLUDE. To deceive.

HODE. To deceive.

Homer doth tell in his aboundant verse,
The long laborious travailes of the man,
And of his lady too he doth reherse,
How shee illudes with all the art she can
Th' ungratefull love which other lords began.

Daties's Orchestra, 1596.

Used as a noun. +ILLUSORY.

To trust this traitor upon oath is to trust a divell uppon his religion. To trust him uppon pledges, is a meare illusorve, for what piety is there among them that can tye them to rule of honestie for it selfe, who are onely bound to their owne sensualities, and respect onely private utility. Letter of Qu. Elic., 1599.

ILLUSTRATE, adj. Illustrious.

Else why did I, of such illustrate race,
Obscure his vertuous deeds with my disgrace?

Mirr. for Mag., p. 705.

Like Jove-borne Perseus, that illustrate knight.

Ibid., Engl. Eliz., p. 870.

+IMAGER. A painter.

Now this more peer-les learned imager, Life to his lovely picture to confer, Did not extract out of the elements

A certain secret chymik quint-essence. Du Bartas.

IMAGINOUS. Full of imagination.

As the stuffe
Prepar'd for arras pictures, is no picture
Till it be form'd, and man hath cast the beames
Of his imaginous faucie thorough it.
Byron's Conspiracy, by Chapman, E 2.
TIMDASE

To degrade. +To IMBASE. Imbased him from lordlines unto a kitchin drudge.
Warner's Albions England, 1592.

The foam that comes IMBOSH, 8. from a hunted deer, apparently a corrupt and arbitrary formation from to imboss.

For though he should keep the very middle of the stream, yet will that, with the help of the wind, lodge part of the stream and imbost that comes from him on the bank, it may be a quarter of a mile lower, which hath deceived many.

Gentleman's Recreat., 8vo, p. 73.

+To IMBOSK. To hide in the bushes. And said as much to his lord, requesting him to depart presently from thence, and imbook himself in the mountain, which was very neer. History of Don Quisole, 1675, f. 46.

IMBOSSED, the same as embossed. Blown and fatigued by being hunted.

See EMBOSSED. But we have almost imboss'd him, we shall see his fall to-night.

But being then imbost, the noble stately deer When he hath gotten ground, the kennel cast arrear, Doth beat the brooks, &c. Drayt. Polyolb., xiii, p. 917.

It was applied also to dogs:

Brach Merriman,—the poor cur is imbost; And couple Clowder with the deep mouth'd brach. Tam. of Shr. Ind.

It has been thought that the first brach in these lines is corrupt, and that some verb should be substituted: but connected speech is not necessary in such field directions.

IMBROCCATA, s. A thrust over the arm in fencing; an Italian term, adopted by the fashionable pupils of CARANZA and Saviolo.

But if your enemic bee cunning and skilfull, never stand about giving any foine or imbroccata, but this thrust or storcata alone, neither it also, unlesse you thrust or storcate acone, and be sure to hit him.

Saciolo's Practise of the Duello, 1595, H 1. We have a pretty ample list of these terms in the following passage:

Then we have our stocatos, imbrocatas, mandritas, puintas, and puinta-reversas; our stramisons, passatas, carricadas, amazzas, and incartatas. Microcosmus. O. Pl., ix. 122.

Some of these, however, are corrupted; the true terms, with their explanations, may be seen in the above-cited translation of Saviolo.

+To IMBROTHER. For embroider.

One cloke of velvett, with a cape imbrothered with gold, pearles, and redd stones, and one roabe of cloth of golde.

Alley Papers, 1590.

IMMEDIACY, s. Immediate representation; the deriving a character directly from another, so as to stand exactly in his place. A word, as far as is known, peculiar to the following passage:

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother. Regan. That's as we list to grace

Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded, Ere you had spoke so far. He led our pow'rs, Bore the commission of my place and per The which immediacy may well stand up And call itself your brother. Lear, v, S. It is evident from the context, that supremacy is not the right interpre-

IMMOMENT, adj. Not momentous, unimportant; another Shakespearian word (απαξ λεγομένον), which John. son justly calls barbarous, because not formed according to the analogy of our language.

That I some lady trifles had reserv'd, Ant. & Cl., v, 2. Immoment toys.

Ant. & Cl., v, 2.

+IMMUNDICITY. Uncleanness. Lat. They blame errours, give good instruction, still sleepe in their owne immunidicities, and so not speaking from the heart, they speake nothing.

Passenger of Bencennto, 1619.

IMMURE, s. Enclosure of wall, fortification.

And their vow is made
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps. Tro. & Cr., Prol.

From the verb to immure, which was formerly common, and is still in use. IMP, s. A graft or shoot inserted into a tree, or any young shoot or sucker. Welch or Danish. Hence a young offspring in general; also a feather inserted into a wing; and, lastly, a small or inferior devil: in which last sense alone it is not obsolete.

She'll tell you, what you call virginitie
Is fitly lik'ned to a barren tree,
Which, when the gardner on it pains bestows
To grafic an impe thereon, in time it growes
To such perfection, that it yearly brings
As goodly fruit as any tree that springs.

Browns, Brit. Past., I, ii, p. 47.

Poor Doridon, the impe
Thom nature seem'd to have selected forth

Whom nature seem'd to have selected forth
To be ingraffed on some stocke of worth. Ibid., p. 59.
Like th' ancient trunk of some disbranched tree,
Which Eols' rage hath to confusion brought,
Disarm'd of all those imps that sprung from me,
Unprofitable stock, I serve for nought.

Darius, a Trag., 1603.
And thou, most dreaded impe of highest Jove,
Faire Venus' son.

Spens. F. Q., Ind. to B. I.

Lord Cromwell, in his last letter to Henry VIII, prays for the imp, his son; but Shakespeare uses it only in jocular and burlesque passages, which is the natural course of a word growing obsolete. See Love's L. L., i, 2, v, 2; 2 Hen. IV, v, 5; Hen. V, iv, 1.

To IMP. To insert a new feather into the wing or tail of a hawk, in the place of a broken one. Often used Turbervile has a metaphorically. whole chapter on "The way and manner how to ympe a hawke's feather, howsoever it be broken or broosed."

broosec.
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing.
Rick. II, ii, 1. And then, with chaste discourse, as we return'd Imp feathers to the broken wings of time.

Mass. Great Duke of Plo., i, l.
They will laugh as much, to see a swallow fly with a white feather imp'd in her tail.

white feather imp's in ner ian.

Jovial Crew, O. Pl., x, 351.

Imping a feather to make me flie, where thou oughtest rather to cut my wing for feare of soaring.

Emph. Engl., E 1, b.

IMPAIR, s. Diminution; also disgrace, which is diminution of character. A load stone-receives in longer time impair. Browns. That is, lasts longer unimpaired.

Go to, thon dost well, but pocket it (the bribe) for all that; 'tis no impair to thee, the greatest do's.

Widow's Tears, O. Pl., vi, 171.

IMPAIR, adj. Unequal, unworthy. Impar, Latin. For what he has he gives, what thinks, he shows, Yet gives he not 'till judgement guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath.

Tro. 3. Cr., iv, 5.

Nor is it more impaire to an honest and absolute man, &c.

Chapm. Preface to Shield of Homer.

To IMPALE. To encircle, as with a pale. Until my mishap'd trunk that bears this head,
Be round impaled with a glorious crown.

S. Hen. FI, iii, 2.

In the former of these lines some transposition is certainly necessary, like that proposed by sir Thomas Hanmer or Mr. Steevens, to make the head impaled, and not the trunk.

Did I impale him with the regal crown? Ibid, iii, 3.
Tear off the crown that yet empales his temples.

Heywood's Rape of Lucreee.
Shoots not the laurel that impal'd their brows
Into a tree, to shadow their blest marble.

Randolph's Jealous Lovers, iv, 8.

Randolph's Jealous
Beneath this loftie hill shot up on high,
A pleasant parke impaled round doth lie

Mirror for Magis., p. 776. To IMPARLE. To speak or debate; from imparlance, a law term. Parler, French.

To treat of truce, and to imparie of peace.

Hughes's Arthur, a Trag., B 4. Hughes's ATIANT, a ring., a --And straight the two generals imparied together.
North's Pint., p. 33.

IMPARTIAL. Used sometimes in the sense of partial; im being made intensive instead of negative. partial was sometimes used for impartial; in which case, im compounded with it would have its usual See PARTIAL.

force. See FARLIAGE.
Come, cousin Angelo,
In this I will be impartial; be you judge
Meas for M., v, l. Of your own cause. Theobald, not knowing this usage, proposed to read partial:

TOPOSEG TO TERM proressor.
You are imperial, and we do appeal
From you to judges more indifferent.
Swetnam, the Woman Hater.
Cruel, unjust, imperial! destinies,
Why to this day have you preserved my life?
Romeo and Juliet, 4to ed. of 1597.

Instead of impartial, in its proper and modern sense, unpartial was very often used; yet the very same writers used impartial also, in the modern

Thus Shakespeare: Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears; Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir, &c. Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood Should nothing privilege him, nor partializes Th' unstooping firmness of my upright soil.

Rick. II, i, 1. To an impartial man, with whom nor threats
Nor prayers shall e'er prevail; for I must steer
An even course.

Massing. Bondman, i. $ So also Jonson.

IMPARTMENT, s. The act of imperting, communication.

It beckons you to go away with it, As if it some impartment did desire To you alone.

IMPASTED. Incrusted, formed into a paste: a word not so much disused as never in use, which may be said also of the preceding.

Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets. Haml., ii. 2.

+To IMPATRONIZE. A law term, to take possession as by inheritance.

take possession as by inheritance.

And although he travelled by all his best wayes to make them of Aragon suspected of a desire to impatronize themselves of that estate, as though they did assume a title by the auncient right of the testament of Philip.

Fenton's Guicciardin, 1599. His father Lewis . . did impatronize himselfe upon the duchie of Burgondie and earldome of Artoys. Did.

To IMPEACH, v. To stop or hinder.

Empêcher, French. This is the primitive sense of the word.

There was no barre to stop, nor foe him to impeach.

Spens. F. Q., I, viii, 34. Some editions have empeach, which is

His sons did impeach his journey to the Holy Land, and vexed him all the days of his life. Davies, cited by Todd.

With other examples.

IMPEACH, s., for impeachment, trial, or accusation Why what an intricate impeach is this! Com. of Err., v, 1.

Johnson cites this passage in his Dictionary, as giving the sense of hinderance or impediment: but he seems not to have recollected that the Duke who speaks is trying a cause, and speaks of it as such. Mr. Todd has not observed it.

IMPEACHMENT, s. Hinderance, obstruction.

But could be willing to walk on to Calais
Without impeachment.

Hen. V, iii, 6. In this sense of these words, empeach would certainly be preferable, as marking the etymology.

IMPERIE, s., the same as empery.

Government. Imperium.

So also he can not wel indure in his hert, an other to be joyned with hym in imperie or governance.

Taverner's Adagies, 1653, I 1.

IMPERSE'VERANT, adj. Strongly persevering, the im being augmentative. It must be accented on se, the antepenultima, according to the analogy of that time, when persever, and perséverance, were constantly so accented. And more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this impersoverant thing loves him in my despight.

Cyms., iv, 1.

A word purposely IMPETICOS, v. corrupted, as well as gratillity in the same sentence, for the sake of gross burlesque.

I did impetices thy gratillity. Twelfth N., ii, 3. For this the modern editors read, "I did impetticoat thy gratuity;" which, perhaps, is the meaning of it.

To IMPLEACH, v. To intertwine; from pleach.

And lo, behold, these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
I have received from many a several fair.
Sh. Lover's Compl., Malone, Suppl., i, 753. See PLEACH.

To IMPLY. To fold up. Implico.

The which his tail uptyes
In many folds, and mortall sting implyes.

Spens. P. Q., I, iv, 31.

And Phoebus, flying so most shamefull sight,
His blushing face in foggy cloud implyes,
And hydes for shame.

Ibid., vi, 6.

To entangle:

To entangle:
Striving to loose the knott that fast him tyes,
Himself in streighter bandes too rash implyes.

Ibid., xi, 23.

To IMPONE. To lay down, or lay as a stake or wager. Impono. An affected word, introduced by Shakespeare in ridicule.

Against the which he hath impon'd, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards.

Haml., v, 2.

IMPORTABLE, adj. Intolerable, insupportable; accented by Spenser on the first syllable.

So both att once him charge on either syde
With hideous strokes, and importable powre.

Spens. F. Q., II, viii, 35.
For the majesty of thy glory cannot be borne, and thine angry threatening towards sinners is importable.

Prayer of Manasses Apocrypha.

The tempest would be importable if it beat siways upon him from all sides. Life of Firmin, cited by Todd. Who shows also that it was a Chaucerian word.

IMPORTANCE, e. Importunity. Emporter, French.

Maria writ The letter at sir Toby's great importance.

At our importance hither is he come,
To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf.

X. John, ii, 1. Twel. N., v. 1.

Mr. Todd says that this use is peculiar to Shakespeare; and in truth no other instances have been found. Yet the use of IMPORTANT by Spenser, as exemplified below, approaches very near to it.

IMPORTANT, adj. Importunate, violent. Emportant, French.

And with important courage him assail'd. Spens. P. Q., II, vi, 29.
Whom I made lord of me and all I had
At your important latter whom I made lord of me and all I had

At your important letters. Com. of Err., v, 1.
Now his important blood will nought deny
That she'll demand.
If the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in every thing.

Much Ado, ii, 1.

It is clear that Shakespeare had no doubt about these words, as he used them so often IMPORTLESS, adj. Not important, of no serious import. An unusual word.

We less expect That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lins.

Tro. and Cress., i, 8.

IMPORTUNACY, s. Importunity. It is odd enough, that it was accented on the antepenultima, though importune, both verb and adjective, had the accent on the penultima.

Art thou not ashamed Art thou not asnameu
To wrong him with thy importunacy?
Two Gent., iv, 2. Your importunacy cease 'till after dinner. Timon of A., ii, 2.

The confluence Of suitors, then their importunacies.

B. Jons. Sejanus, act iii, p. 200.

To IMP'ORTUNE, v. In the sense of to import, or imply.
But the sage wisard telles (as he has redd)
That it importunes death, and dolefull dreryhed.

Spens. F. Q., 111, i, 16.

IMPOSE, s. Imposition, command. Peculiar to this passage.

According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come, to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.
Two Gent., iv, 3.

+IMPOSTUROUS. Having the nature of an imposture.

She in the mean time fains the passions Of a great believed woman, counterfets
Their passions and their qualms, and verily All Rome held this for no imposterous stuff.

Webster's A. and V., 1654.

IMPRESE, IMPRESA, or IMPRESS. A device on a shield, &c. sense the latter word is accented on the first syllable; but imprese, which is more common in old writers, on the last. In Camden's Remains is a chapter on impreses, which begins with the following definition:

An imprese (as the Italians call it) is a device in An impress (as the Italians call it) is a device in picture, with his motto, or word, borne by noble and learned personages, to notifie some particular conceit of their owne; as emblemes—do propound some general instruction to all.

Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign, Save men's opinions and my living blood.

Rich. II, iii, 1.

It is imprese in the early editions.

The fit impresa's for inflam'd desire. Whose smoky plain a chalk'd impress fill'd,
A bug fast seal'd; his word, "Much better sav'd than spill'd."

Fletch. Purple Is., viii, 29.

In the above passage the final e of imprese must be pronounced, to make the verse complete.

Rome, the lady citty, with her imprese, "Orbis in urbe."

Clisus's Whimzies, p. 150.

In the sense of pressure, Shakespeare had accented it differently:

This weak impress of love is as a figure This weak impress of love is as a figure Treuched in ice.
Two Gent., iii, 3.

†My former fruites were lovely ladies three,
Now of three lords to talke is Londons glee.
Their shields ymprez'd with gilt copertiments,
That for his ympreze gives queene Junoes bird.

Three Lords of London, 1590.

To IMPROVE, v. To reprove or refute; as from improbo, Latin.

refute; as from improod, Latin.

None of the phisitions, that have any judgement, improveth [these medicines], but they approve them to be good.

Though the prophet Jeremy was unjustly accused, yet doth not that improve any thing that I have said.

Whitgift, cited by Johnson. the dear'd

The said the king, sometimes you know I have dear'd

The said the prophet Jeremy was the said.

You would improve his negligence, too oft to case retir'd. Chapm. Il., x, 108.

+IMPUNELY. With impunity.

Thou sinns't impunely, but thy fore-man paid
Thy pennance with his head; 'twas burn'd, 'tis said.

Occes's Epigrams Englished, 1677.

IN-AND-IN. A gambling game, played by three persons with four dice, each person having a box. It was the usual diversion at ordinaries, and places of inferior resort. It is described in the Compleat Gamester (ed. 1680, p. 117), too much at length to be here copied; but it appears that in was, when there was a doublet, or two dice alike out of the four; in and in when there were either two doublets, or all four dice alike, which swept all the stake. The same book gives ingenious directions for cheating at it, with false dice or boxes. How favorable it was to the players, after the fees claimed for the box, may be seen by the following

I have seen three persons sit down at twelve-pensy in and in, and each draw forty shillings a piece; and in little more than two hours, the box has had three pounds of the money, and all the three gamesters have been losers, and laughed at for their indiscretion. Nicker Nicked, Harl. Misc., ii, 110, Park's edit. Thus the house made the chief, and, in this instance, the whole profit.

He is a merchant still, adventurer
At in and in.
B. Jons. New Inn, iii, l. In and Inn Medlay is made the name of a character in the Tale of a Tub, by the same author, who is a cooper and a headborough, probably to imply that he encouraged such games, though in office. He, however, gives another account of it himself, which appears to be meant only as a butlesque exposure of his vanity:

Indeed there is a woundy luck in names, sirs, And a maine mystery, an' a mun knew where To vind it. My god-sire's name, I'll tell you, Was In-and-im Shittle, and a weaver he was, And it did fit his craft; for so his shittle Went is and in still; this way, and then that way. And he nam'd me In-and-im Mellay, which serves A joiner's craft, because that we do lay Things in and in, in our work.

Act iv, sc. 5 In the Chances, i, 4, it has only a punning allusion to this game.

IN FEW, or IN A FEW, for, in short. in a few words.

In A few Worus.

In few, his death (whose spirit lent a fire Ev'n to the dullest peasant in his camp)
Being bruited ouce, took fire and heat away, &c.
2 Hen. IV, i, 1.

But in a few, Signor Hortensio, thus it stands with me.

Tam. of Skr., i, 2. Warburton, not understanding the phrase, attempted to correct the latter passage; it has, however, been used by Milton, Dryden, and Pope. See Johnson in Few, 2.

IN PLACE. Present, in company, here.

If any hardier than the rest in place
But offer head. &c. Daniel, Civ. Wars, ii, 11. If any hardier thus the sees in fractions the desired for Daniel, Civ. Wars, ii, 11. See, as I wish'd, lord Promos is is place;

Now in my sute God graunt I may find grace.

Promos and Cass., Part 1, act iii, sc. 2.

INAIDABLE, a. Incapable of receiving

The congregated doctors have concluded That labouring art can never answer nature. From her inaidable estate. All's W., ii, 1.

That is, "In consequence of her desperate condition." The word is rather unusual than obsolete.

INAQUATE and INAQUATION. Technical terms in theology, used by Gardiner and Cranmer, but never adopted. See Todd's Johnson.

+INAUSPICATE. Ill-fortuned.

With me come burn these ships inauspicate;
For I Cassandra's ghost in sleep saw late.

Virgil, by Vicars, 1632,

+INBORN. Aboriginal.

Some have affirmed, that the people first scene in these regions were aborigines, [In-borne, homelings, home-bred. Mary. Note.] called Celter, after the name home-bren. mary. 10000, of an amiable king.

Helland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609. And being by true measengers advertised, that the barbarians were alreadie possessed of the hills, which on everie side with winding in and out mounted up nioft, and were passable for none but the inhorse inhabitants that knew the wayes verie well. Ibid.

INCAPABLE, a. Unconscious, not having any comprehension of circumstance.

Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her own distress. Haml., iv. 7. As one incapable of her own distress.

INCARDINATE, a. Incarnate. Whether an unusual word, or an intended blunder of the speaker, sir Andrew Ague-cheek, is not quite clear.

The count's gentleman, one Cesario; we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinate.

Twelfth Night, v, 1.

To INCARNARDINE, or INCARNA-To make red, or of a DINE. v. carnation colour. See CARNARDINE.

No, this my hand will rather
The multitudinous sens incarnardine,
Macb., ii, 2.

Though it is not exactly to the purpose of the present word, I cannot forbear remarking that, in the third line, Shakespeare surely meant only "making the green sea red." The other interpretation, which implies its making "the green [sea] one entire red," seems to me ridiculously The punctuation harsh and forced. of the folios supports the more natural construction.

Others write it incarnadine:

One shall enspirer thine eyes, another shall Impearl thy teeth, a third thy white and small Hand shall be snow, a fourth incarnadine Thy rosic check. Careo's Poems, 1651, F 7.

The word was, for a time, thought peculiar to Shakespeare; but Lovelace is also quoted as using incarnadine as an adjective. See Todd.

To INCENSE, v., more properly IN-To put sense into, to in-SENSE. struct, inform. A provincial expression still quite current in Staffordshire, and probably Warwickshire, whence we may suppose Shakespeare had it.

> Think you, my lord, thus made product,
> Was not incensed by his subtle mother,
> To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
> Rick. III, iii, 2. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

He does not mean provoked, for the child had shown no anger; but instructed, schooled.

Indeed, this day, Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Insent'd the lords o' the council that he is (For so I know he is, they know he is,) A most arch heretick, a pestilence That doth infect the land.

That doth infect the land.

This doth infect the land.

Who in the night overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John, your brother, inscread me to alander the lady liero.

Much Ado, v, 1.

Minshew has the definition of to move, or instigate, under Incense; but that does not quite meet the provincial usage here noticed, which is simply to inform.

INCH, s. An Erse word for an island; still current in Scotland, in the appellatives of several small islands: as Inch Keith, Inch Kenneth. &c.

'Till he disbursed at St. Colmes' inch, Ten thousand dollars to our general us

Mach., i. 2. The place mentioned is now called Inch-comb, or Inch Colm. The first folio of Shakespeare spells it unch. In the second, it is changed to Colmes' hill, probably because the editors did not understand the other. Shakespeare follows Holinshed. as USUAL:

The Danes that escaped and got once to their ships, obtained of Macbeth for a great sum of gold, that such of their friends as were slaine, might be buried in Saint Colmes' inch. In memory whereof many old sepultures are yet in the said inch, graven with the arms of the Danes.

After passing the ferry of Craig Ward, the river becomes narrower; and there are some beautiful slands, which are called inches.

R. Allos, cited by Jamieson.

Dr. Jamieson shows that the word exists in all the kindred dialects. Welch, Cornish, Breton, Irish, and Gaelic, with a few trivial changes.

INCH-MEAL, adv. By inch-meal, by pieces of an inch long at a time; as we say piece-meal, a piece at a time. See also DROP-MEAL and LIMB-MEAL.

All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prospero fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease.
Temp. ii. 9

INCH-PIN, s. The sweetbread of a deer.

deer.

Although I gave them

All the sweet morsels call'd tongue, cars, and doucets.

R. What, and the inch-pin? M. Yes.

B. Jons. Sad Shep., i, 6. We find it explained, among hunting terms, by Randle Holme: Inch-pin, are the sweet-breds, or sweet gut in the deer.

Academy, B. II, ch. ix, p. 188.

+INCHOATELY. As to the beginning. NCHOATELI. As to the organization.

Chri. I was in body there, but not in mind,
So that my sin is but incheately perfect,
And I, though in a fault, did not offend.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

To cut in. Incido, To INCISE, v.

Let others carve the rest, it shall suffice

I on thy grave this epitaph incise.

Carew's Poems, G 3, ed. 1651. Carrece Forms, u. 5, eq. 1051.

Nor had it yet to any, had not stone
And stocks discover d it, been ever known;
Which (for on them he us'd his plaints t' incise)
By chance presented it to Sylvia's eyes.

Sir E. Sherburne, cited by Todd.

INCISION. This word appears to have had some meaning, in a kind of proverbial use, which has not yet been rightly traced. Warburton says, to make incision meant to make one understand: but no proof of this appears. Mr. Steevens conjectured, that in the following passage it was something equivalent to the vulgar phrase of cutting for the simples, which implies improving a bad understanding. But the two passages from Beaumont and Fletcher have vet received no illustration.

God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee! thou art raw.

As you l. it, iii, 3. Then down on's marrow-bones; O excellent king—Thus he begins,—Thou light and life of creatures, Angel-ey'd king, vouchsafe at length thy favour; And so proceeds to incision what think you of this sorrow?

B. S. H. Humorous Lieut., iv, 3.

Mr. Weber satisfied himself that here it had reference to the custom of stabbing the arms, as illustrated above in DAGGERED ARMS: which is, indeed, possible, as the Lieutenant is described as ridiculously in love with the King. He, says the same character.

Is really in love with the king most dotingly, And swears Adonis was a devil to him.

This was the effect of a magical philtre; but no such interpretation will suit the next quotation :

Come, strike up then; and say "The Merchant's Daughter."

We'll bear the burthen. Proceed to incision, fidler.

B. & Fl. Mons. Thomas, iii, 3. The meaning apparently implied in the latter of these passages, is that of proceeding to action. Can it have been a phrase borrowed from surgery?

To INCLIP. To embrace. See CLIP. Perhaps an arbitrary compound.

Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips, Is thine if thou wilt have it. Ant. & Cl., ii, 7. To INCLUDE, for to conclude. To close, or shut up. Close, Of Shue up.

Come, let us go; we will include all jars

With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Two Gentl. of Fer., v. 4.

+INCONSTANCE. For inconstancy.

Since of her cage inconstance kept the kayes.

Gascoigne's Works, 1567.

INCONTINENT, adverbially, for incontinently, and that for suddenly, immediately.

And put on sullen black incontinent. Bick. II, v, 6. Unto the place they come incontinent.

Spens. P. Q., I. vi. E. That doth make
Her cold chill sweat break forth incontinent
From her weak limbs.

Tancred and Gism., O. Pl., ii, 189. It occurs frequently in Spenser, Fairfax, and others. The French use incontinent in the same manner.

theror. Passe thee before, Ile come incontinent.

Returns from Pernassus, 1808.

INCONY, a. Sweet, pretty, delicate.

The derivation is not clearly made out; the best derivation seems to be from the northern word canny, or conny, meaning pretty. The in will then be intensive, and equivalent to very. It has generally something of burlesque in it:

My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!

Love's L. L., iii, 1.
O my troth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar

When it comes so smoothly off. Ibid., iv, 1. O super-dainty chanon! vicar inconey. B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, iv, 1. Love me little love me love the truncity rumble.

Love me little, love me long; let musick rumble While I in thy incony lap do tumble.

Sew of Malta, O. Pl., viii, 878.
But it makes you have, oh, a most inconie bodie.

But it makes you have, oh, a most inconic bodie.

Imp. No, no, no, no, by St. Marke, the waste is not long enough.

Blut Matter Constable, C S.

Farewell Dr. Doddy,

In minde and in body

An excellent noddy:
A coxcomb incony,
But that he wants money,
To give legem pone. Dr. Doddipol, C 4.
O I have sport inconcy, i' faith.

Two Angry Wom. of Abingd.

INCORPSED. Incorporated, forming one body; from in and corps. No other example having been found, it is at present supposed to be a licence of the author:

He grew unto his scat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorpy'd and deminatur'd
With the brave beast.

Haml., iv, 7.

+INCULKE. To inculcate.

Pride and covetousnesse by corrupt blast blowne, Into my hart inculked, by fancie fonde.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.
To INDENT. To bargain, or make agreement; from indenture.

Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears?

I Hen. IV, i, 3.

And with the Irish bands he first indents,
To spoil their lodgings and to burn their tents.

Harringt. Ariost., xvi, 35.

Indent with beauty how far to extend,
Set down desire a limit, where to end.

Drayt. Heroic Epistles, p. 259.

Drayt. Heroic Epistles, p. 259.

INDENT, s. An indentation, or bending inwards.

It shall not wind with such a deep indent.

1 Hen. IF, iii, 1.

To INDEW, properly INDUE. To put on, or wear. Induo, Latin.

Some fitt for reasonable sowles t' indew.
Some made for beasts, some made for birds to weare.

Spens. P. Q., III. vi, 35.

INDEX. A summary of the chapters annexed to a book. It has been properly remarked, that, from the following passages of Shakespeare, it is plain that this was most commonly prefixed, as indeed we find it in the publications of that time; but then it is seldom an alphabetical list, such as we now call an index, but a mere table of contents.

For by the way I'll sort occasion
As index to the story we late talk'd of.
Rick. III, ii, 2.

This was meant to be preparatory to the particulars of the story at large.

To the success,

For the success,

Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexe, although small pricks
To their subséquent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

To and Cress., i, 8.

Sometimes, perhaps, it also meant a preparatory sketch, in dumb show, prefixed to the act of a play, as exemplified in that of Ferrex and Porrex, &c.

Ay me, what act
That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
Haml., iii, 4.
An index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts.
Othell., ii, 1.

An index to a pageant was, probably, a painted emblem carried before it. A written explanation of what it was to exhibit could hardly be flattering, so far, at least, as to make the event unexpected, which seems implied here:

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen,
The presentation of but what I was,
The flattering index of a direful pageant.
Rich. III. iv. 4.

The painted cloth hung up before a booth, where a pageant was to be exhibited, might, perhaps, be its index. †INDIAN DRUG. A term for tobacco, used as far back as by Taylor the water-poet.

And by the meanes of what he swil'd and gul'd,
Hee look'd like one that was three quarters mul'd.
His breath compounded of strong English beere,
And th' Indian drug would suffer none come neere.

Taylor's Works, 1630.

†INDICH. To throw into a ditch.

One was cast dead into the Thames at Stanes, and drawne with a boat and a rope downe some part of the river, and dragged to shore and indicked.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.
INDIFFERENCY. Impartiality. See INDIFFERENT.

The world, who of itself is poised well,
Made to run even, upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile, drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency.

K. John, ii, 3.

So long as with indifferencie the goddes did use their might.

North's Plut., p. 591.

INDIFFERENT, a. Impartial. In the Liturgy we pray that the magistrates may truly and indifferently minister justice; yet as to common usage this sense is certainly obsolete, though not so marked by Johnson.

Rorn out of your dominions, having here
No judge indifferent. Hen. VI.
Here have I cause in men just blame to find,
That in their proper praise too partiall bee,
And not indifferent to woman kind. Hon. VIII. ii. 4.

Spens. F. Q., III, ii, 1. The instances are very common.

The garters of an indifferent knit, in the Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, which some explain not different, and some different, seem only to mean ordinary, or tolerable; a very common sense of the word, and used even in the following passage, which has been quoted to support another meaning:

As the indifferent children of the earth. Haml., ii, 2. That is, as the ordinary, common children, or men in general.

Tolerably. +INDIFFERENTLY.

But I am com to my self indifferently well since, I thank God for it, and you cannot imagin how much the sight of you, much more your society, would revive me.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

INDIGEST, verbal adj., for indigested, disorderly.

To make of monsters, and things indigest, Such cherubines as your sweet self resemble.

Sk. Sonnet. 114.

Also used licentiously for a substantive :

Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born To set a form upon that indigest Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

K. John, v. 7. In Dr. Johnson's own Dictionary this was incorrectly quoted, as an example of the adjective. Mr. Todd has removed the error, but not noticed the substantive.

INDIGN, a. Unworthy. Latin. As condign.

COMULY:

And all indign and base adversities

Make head against my estimation. Othello, i, 3.

Sith she herself was of his grace indigne.

Spens. F. Q., IV, i, 30. Othello, i, 3.

Mr. Todd has shown that the word was used by Chaucer.

INDIRECTION, s. That which is not atraight or direct.

By indirections flud directions out. Haml., ii, 1. This was probably intended as a pedantic and affected phrase, being given to Polonius, whose talk is of that kind; but Shakespeare seriously uses it for indirect or crooked moral conduct, dishonesty.

Than wring From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash By any indirection. Jul. Ces., iv. 3.

Also in King John:
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures; as fire cools fire.

+INDIVID. An individual.

Why want none tasting, touching? 'cause of these That th' individ, this guards the species. Owen's Boiarams, 1677.

+INDOCT. Unlearned.

Sick stomachs much receive, not much concect; So thou know'st much, I know, yet art indoct. Owen's Epigrams, 1677.

INDUCTION, s. Introduction, beginning; from induco, Latin. The introductory part of a play or poem was called the induction, when detached from the piece itself; it was a sort of prologue in a detached scene, but was used sometimes when there was also a prologue. Thus the part of Sly the tinker, &c., forms the Induction to the Taming of the Shrew; and Master Sackville's Induction, in the Mirror for Magistrates, is famous. also simply, for a beginning:

SO SIMPLY, 101 a 0051111119.

These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

1 Hen. IV, iii, 1.

A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France. Rich. III, iv, 4. Induction was very acutely conjectured for instruction by Warburton, in this passage of Othelio:

Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some induction.

Act iv, sc. 1. That is, "anything leading to it;" but it cannot be said that the change is absolutely necessary.

Wid. Is this all your business with me?

Pycb. No, lady, 'is but the induction to it.

Puritan, Suppl. to Sh., ii, 568.

The deeds of noble York, I not recite, &c.

Th' induction to my story shall begin, Where the sixth Henry's Edward timelesse fell. Mirror for Mag., p. 753.

Inductions were going out of fashion when the Woman Hater of Beaumont and Fletcher was produced, which was in 1607; for the prologue begins

Gentlemen, inductions are out of date, and a prologue in verse is as stale as a black velvet clock and a bay garland; therefore you shall have it in plain prose.

To INDUE, in one instance, seems to be put for to inure.

And mermaid-like, as hile they bore her up; Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes, As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indued.

Unto that element. The common mistake of using indue for endow, is properly noticed by Mr.

+INDUEMENTS. Endowments.

They gathered what a one he was like to prove, as if they land throughly perused the old bookes, the read-ing whereof declareth by bodily signess the physiog-nomic or inward inducments of the mind. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+INDURATE. Obstinate; hardened. And if he persever with indurate minde the space of twoo yeares. Holinshed's Chron., 1577.

To INFAME. To defame, or report evil of.

Yet bicause he was cruell by nature—he was infamed by writers.

Holinsk., vol. i, f 8. by writers. Holinsa., vol. 1, 1 o. Straungers knowen to be infamed for usurie, aimonie, and other heinous vices. Ibid., vol. ii, T 5.

Milton has used it. See Johnson.

To INFAMONIZE. A mock word, deduced from the former, and given to the pedantical character Armado.

thou infamonize me among potentates? thou die. Love's L. L., v, 2. shalt die.

+INFAMOUS. Ignoble.

Is it not pity, I should lose my life
By such a bloody and infamous streake?
Byron's Tragedy.

INFANT. Used sometimes, as child, for a knight. See CHILD.

To whom the infant thus: Faire sir, &c.

Spens. F. Q., 11, viii, 56. The infant in question was prince Arthur, who had just been fighting a most desperate battle. So also Ri-

This said, the noble infant stood a space Confused, speechlesse. Fairf. Tasso, xvi, 34. Mr. Todd says it is put in the Spanish sense, for prince; but I prefer Warburton's explanation. See on F. Q., VI. viii. 56.

Knight itself is from the Saxon cniht, which is defined a boy, a scholar, a soldier. See Benson's Glossary. Dr. Percy further observes, that "his folio MS. affords several other ballads wherein the word child occurs as a title, but in none of these it signifies prince." Arg. to Child Waters, Rel., vol. iii, p. 54. Infant was the same, as well as varlet, damoiseau, and bachelier; as Warburton rightly said. INFANTRY. Jocularly used for children; a collection of infants. Hangs all his school with his sharp sentences,

And o'er the execution place hath painted
Time whipt, as terror to the infantry.

Ben Jons. Masque of Time Vindicated, vol. vi, p. 142. To stuff or crowd in. To INFARCE.

See to FARCE. My facts infarst my life with many a flaw. Mirro, for Mag., Caligula, p. 145. t Whiche [i. e. the tale ensuing] some what abridging the same we have here injursed. Holinshed, 1577.

INFATIGABLE. Indefatigable, unwearied. The old dictionaries have it.

wearied. The old dictionaries nave it.

There makes his sword his way, there laboreth
Th' infatigable hand that never ceas'd.

Daniel, Works, p. 167; Civil Wars of Engl.

INFECT, part. adj., for infected.

And in the imitation of these twain,
(Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice) many are infect.

Tro. and Cress., i, 3.

The states did thinke, that with some filthic gaine The Spanish peeres us captains had infect.

Gascoigne's Works, k 5.

To INFERRE. To bring in, to cause. Infero, Latin.

One day inferres that folle

Whereof so many yeares of yore were free.

Arthur, a Trag., F 4, b.

Determined by common acorde, to inferre ware upon the Romaines.

Palace of Pleasure, B 2, b. the Romaines.
INFEST, adj.

FEST, adj. Annoying, troublesome. But with fierce fury, and with force infect, Upon him ran. Spens. F. Q., VI, iv, 5. For they are infect enemies unto the noble facultie of flattery. Ulpian Fulseel's Art of Flattery, M 1, b. †That whereas toward others he was so infect and cruell. Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

+INFESTIVE. Is not uncommonly used in the same sense.

INFORM, adj. Without regular form, shapeless.

Bleak craggs, and naked hills, And the whole prospect so inform and rude.

Cotton, cited by Todd.

+To INFORM. Is frequently used by old writers in the sense of to make, form, or embody.

Who first of petrifaction wast informed.

Chapman's Hom. Hymn to Apollo.

ORTUNATE. This word was used INFORTUNATE. sometimes for unfortunate. It occurs twice in Shakespeare; viz., K. John, ii, 1, and 2 Hen. VI, iv, 9. Dr. Johnson has given an example from lord Bacon's works.

INFRACT, adj. Unbroken, or unbreakable. One sense of the Latin infractus. O how straight and infract is this line of life !

Gascoigne's Supposes, C 1.
Had I a brazen throat, a voice infract,
A thousand tongues, and rarest words refin'd.

Bagl. Blics, Mirr. Mag., p. 765.
INGALLY. To condemn to the

+To INGALLY. galleys.

gatteys. Two tellows were adjudg'd to die, and yet at last through much entreaty it pleas'd the judge in favour of life to ingally them for seaven yeares; the hangman seeing that, stept in and besought the judge to rid him of his office and appoint some other in his place. Being ask'd wherefore, he answered, because you burre me of my right.

Copicy's Wils, Fits, and Funcies, 1614.

INGATE. Entrance, beginning; from in and gate.

Therein resembling Janus auncient,
Which hath in charge the input of the yeare.
Spens. P. Q., IV, x, 12.

Also Ruines of Time, v. 47. Spenser See Todd's used it also in prose. Johnson.

+INGENDERER. Used in a contempfucus sense.

This is one of your lazie, liquerous, lascivious, feme-nine ingenderers; more wavering then a wethercocke, more wanton than an ape, more wicked then an inf-dell, the very sinke of sensuality and poole of putri-faction.

Man in the Moone, 1869.

Inction. Man in the Moone, 1669.

INGENE, or INGINE. Genius, wit.

Sejanus labours to marry Livia, and worketh (with all his ingine) to remove Tiberius from the knowledge of public business.

A tyrant carst, but now his fell ingine

His graver age did somewhat mitigate

Fairf. Tasso, i, 83. So it was in the edition of 1600; in Bill's edition it is altered.

You say well, witty Mr. In-and-in, How long ha' you studied ingine? Med. Since I first Join'd or did inlay wit, some vorty year.

B. Jons. Tale of a Tub, v, 2.

If thy master, or any man here, be angry with thee,
I shall suspect his ingine while I know him for't.

B. Jons. Every Man in his H., v, 3.

Written also engine:

Made most of their workes by translation out of the Latine and French toung, and few or none of their owne engine.

Puttenham, B. ii, ch. 8. The corrupt word ingeniver, which, to the great torment of critics, has crept into a passage of Othello, comes nearer to ingene than anything else. In the folios it stands.

He has atchieved a maid
That paragons description and wilde fame;
One that excels the quirkes of blazoning pens,
And, in the essentiall vesture of creation,
Does tire the ingeniver.

Othello, Mr. Malone conjectured that it stood in the author's copy,

Does tire the ingene ever. Which is probable, but not quite satisfactory, as it makes no very perfect sense. Capell makes it, "Doth tire the inventer." The reading of the quartos is very different, but has been adopted in the modern editions.

as being, at least, intelligible:
And in the essential vesture of creation
Doth bear all excellency.

The one reading cannot have been made from the other; and if the folio has any authority, it can only be explained as above. To "tire the ingene," must mean, to fatigue the mind or genius in attempting to do it justice; the subject being the excellence of Desdemona. I suspect that neither reading came from the poet.

To INGENIATE. To contrive, to manage ingeniously.

Did Nature (for this good) ingeniate
To shew in thee the glory of her best;
Framing thine eye, the starre of thy ill fate,
Making thy face the foe to spoyle the rest?

Daniel, Compl. of Rosamond, p. 139.
The charge of this great state
And kingdom, to my faith committed is,
And I must all I can ingeniate
To answer for the same.

Ibid. Funerall Poem, p. 22. +INGENIOSITY. Ingenuity; wit. The like straine of wit was in Lucian and Julian, whose very images are to bee had in high repute, for their ingeniosity, but to be spurnd at for their grand impiety.

Optick Glasse of Humors, 1639.

INGENIOUS, and INGENUITY. Used formerly for ingenuous and ingenuousness, and still sometimes confounded by the ignorant or careless.

A right ingenious spirit, veil'd merely with the vanity of youth and wildness. Match at Mids., O. Pl., vii, 592. Deal ingeniously, sweet lady; have you no more gold in your breeches? Bird in a Cage, O. Pl., viii, 243.

+INGENITE. Inborn.

So what you impart
Comes not from others principles, or art,
But is ingenite all, and still your owne.
Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

†INGENY. Genius. See INGENE.

Yet maugre fate, thy pregnant ingeny
Revives thy dust, and dreads no victory.

Cartwright's Poems, 1651.

INGINOUS, or ENGINOUS, has been explained witty, or artful; but see the next example. For that's the mark of all their inginous drifts

To wound my patience, howsoe'er they seem To aim at other objects. B. Jons. Cynth. Res., iii, 2. The modern alteration to ingenious destroys the verse. Also, contrived as engines; meaning pieces of artillery; which sense, I suspect, belongs to it in the former passage also, from the mention of aim.

the mention of white Sure, petards,

Sure, petards,

To blow us up. Let. Some inginous strong words.

B. Jons. New Iss., ii, 6.

B. Jons. New Iss., iii, 6. INGLE, or ENGLE, s. Originally signified a male favorite of the most detestable kind. Minshew explains it fully by its synonymes in other languages, and adds: "Vox est Hispanica, et significat, Lat. inguen." Ozell, who quotes him, says further: "The Spaniards spell it yngle, which with them means nothing else but the groin, not a bardash." Note on Rabelais. B. i, ch. 2. Minshew says, much in favour of the Germans of his time, "Hoc autem vitium apud Germanos, cum sit incognitum, merito et appellatione destituitur in eorundem lingua." I fear it is not so now. I cannot but think Mr. Gifford mistaken, in saying that enable and ingle were different words, except as to spelling; but it is clear that ingle came to be used for a mere intimate, as in the passage of Massinger, where he makes the distinction.

Coming as we do
From's quondam patrons, his dear ingles now.
Massing. City Madam, iv, 1. Thus Asinius, in Decker's Satiromastix, calls Horace continually his ingle (or ningle, which is the same, being only an abbreviation of mine ingle), meaning to call him merely his dear friend:

I never saw mine ingle so dashed in my life before. Liever saw mine ingle so unsated in my tite before.

Origin of Dr., vol. iii, p. 118.

Call me your love, your ingle, your cousin, or so; but sister at no hand.

Honest Wh., O. Pl., iii, 260. Fynes Morrison gives the following proverbial lines on Rome, with his own translation of them:

Roma vale, vidi, satis est vidisse; revertar Cum leno, mœchus, scurra, cinædus ero.

Rome farewell, I have thee seene, well for me, Rome farewell, I have thee section was And then I will returne againe to thee, When lecher, jester, ingle, bawd, I'll be.

Ilinerary*, P. iii, p. 52.

See Enghle, where it is shown that the boys of the theatre were frequently so called; which is more likely than anything else to have brought the word into common use, and to have abolished the first meaning.

To INGLE, from the above. To wheedle or coax. Or CORX.

Oh, if I wist this old priest would not stick to me, by Jove I would ingle this old serving man.

First Part of Sir John Olde., Suppl. to Sh., ii, 292. Thy little brethren, which, like fairy sprights, Oft' skipt into our chamber those sweet nights, And kiss'd, and ingled on thy father's knee, Were brib'd next day to tell what they did see.

Donne, Eleg., iv. Then they deal underhand with us, and we must ingle with our husbands abed.

ingle with our husbands abed. Roaring Girl, O. Pl., vi, 89.

To INGRAVE. To bury; from in and grave. See ENGRAVE, which is the same.

The heavy chardge that nature byndes me to
I have perform'd; ingrev'd my brother is:
I woulde to God (to case my ceaseless wo)
My wretched bones intombed were with his.

Promos and Cassand., 6, O. Pl., i, 56.

At last they came where all his warry store
The flood in one deep channel did ingrase.

Pairf, Tasso, xx, 8.

Or els so glorious tombe how could my youth have or veta so giorous tomos now count my yours craved,

As in one self same vaults with thee haply to be ingraced. Romens & Juliet, Suppl. to Sh., i, 338.

My body now, which once I decked brave,

(From whence it came) unto the earth I give;

I wish no pomp, the same for to ingrave.

Whetstone on G. Gascoigne, Chalm. Poets, ii, p. 463.

†That both our shipps, goods, lives, and people, might

Bee in the sea ingrav'd, and swallowed up.

11 Ileywood's Challenge for Beauty, 1636.

†INGREDIENCE. Entrance; walking

D. After whom orderly the ladies past,
The temple they perfume with frankincense,
Thus praying sadly, at ingredience.
Virgil, by Vicars, 1632.

+INGRUM. Apparently a mere corruption of ignorant, similar to Dogberry's vagrom for vagrant.

berry's vagrom for vagrant.

Pray take my fellow Ralph; he has a psalm-book;
I am an ingrum man.

B. J. Pl. Wit without M., v.
Physitian thou wouldst say, said the other. Truly, said the fellow, I am no scholler, but altogether unrude, and very ingrum, and I have here my wives water in a potle pot, beseeching your mastership to cast it.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

INHABITABLE. Uninhabitable: not from to inhabit, but from in, negative (for un), and habitable.

F MR), MILL RESERVED.

Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Wherever Englishman durst set his foot.

Bich. II, i, 1.

And pour d on some inhabitable place,
Where the hot sun and slime breeds nought but monsters.

B. Jons. Catiline, v, 1. Where the hot sun anu sum.

Monsters.

B. Jons. Catiline, v. 1.

And in such wise they were fro their way in a place inhabitable, that thei wist not what to thinke.

Guy of Warwick, 4to, bl. lett., Q 8.

Lest that thy bewty make this stately towne Inhabitable, like the burning zone,

With sweet reflections of thy lovely face.

Old Taming of Shr., 6, O. Pl., i, 203.

INHABITED, in like manner for uninhabited. Inhabité, French.

Others, in imitation of some valiant knights, have frequented desarts and inhabited provinces, echoing frequented desarts and inhabited provinces, echoing in every place their own vanities.

Rrathwait's Survey of Histories.

Posterity henceforth lose the name of blessing And leave th' earth inhabited, to purchase heav'n.

B. J. Fl. Thierry J. Theod., iii, 1.

Seward changed it to uninhabited, which, according to modern language, would be necessary for the sense. Here, however, it required only explaining, not altering.

To INHERIT. This word is used by Shakespeare in the sense of to possess, or obtain, merely, without any reference to the strict notion of inheritance. This, or else nothing will inherit her. Two Gent., iii, 2.

It must be great, that can inherit us So much as of a thought of ill in him. Rick. II. i. 1.

To INHIBIT. To prohibit or forbid.

Besides virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. a ene canon. All's Well, i. 1.

A practiser
Of arts inhibited, and out of warrant.
Othello, i, S. In the following passage inhabit is the reading of the old editions, which is evident nonsense. Mr. Pope changed it to inhibit, and the emendation appears indubitable. The meaning is, "If I tremble and forbid the meeting."

Or, be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword,
If trembling I inhibit, then protest me
The baby of a girl.
INHOOP'D, part. Inclosed in a hoop. The passage where this word occurs. has been the subject of many conjectures. These are not, perhaps, worth relating, since it appears now to be made out, that cocks or quails were sometimes made to fight within a broad hoop, to keep them from quitting each other. Mr. Douce has actually found a Chinese print, in which two birds are so represented. See his Illustrations, vol. ii, p. 86. The passage where the word occurs is this. Antony, speaking of the superiority of Cæsar's fortunes to his own, savs.

If we draw lots, he speeds; His cocks do win the battle still of mine, When it is all to nought; and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds.

Ant. & Cleop., ii, 3. The substance of this is from North's Plutarch, as well as much more of the same drama; but the inhooped is the addition of our poet. No trace of such a mode of fighting has been found, except in J. Davies's Epigrams, quoted by Dr. Farmer, where it is said that Cocking in hoopes is now all the play.

Yet R. Holmes, who gives a list of terms and customs used in cockfighting, has no mention of hoops. See his Acad. of Armory, B. ii, ch. 11. Nor is any trace of the hoops to be found in any book on cock-fighting. If this custom of fighting cocks within hoops could be thoroughly proved, it would also afford the best explanation of the phrase cock-a-hoop; the cock perching on the hoop, in an exulting manner, either before or after the battle. This would give exactly the right idea; but I fear our proofs are not sufficient.

+INION. An onion.

Your case in lawe is not worth an inion.

Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556. INIQUITY. One name of the Vice, who was the established buffoon in the old Moralities, and other imperfect dramas. He had the name sometimes of one vice, sometimes of another, but most commonly of Iniquity, or vice itself. He was grotesquely dressed in a cap with ass's ears, a long coat, and a dagger of lath; and one of his chief employments was to make sport with the devil, leaping on his back and belabouring him with his dagger of lath, till he made him roar. devil, however, always carried him off in the end. The morality of which representation clearly was, that sin. which has the wit and courage to make very merry with the devil, and is allowed by him to take great liberties, must finally become his prev. This is the regular end also of Punch, in the puppet-shows, who, as Dr. Johnson rightly observed, is the legitimate successor of the old Iniquity; or rather is the old Vice himself transposed from living to wooden actors. His successors on the stage were the fools and clowns, who so long continued to supply his place, in making sport for the common people. Harlequin is another scion from the same stock.

The following passages plainly prove that this character might be filled by any particular vice or sin personified, or by the general representation of sin, under the name of Iniquity, which was anciently most common and regular:

And lend me but a rice to carry with me, To practise there with any playfellow. Satan. What vice! What kind wouldst thou have it of? Or Covetousness, or lady Vanity, Or old Iniquity. Iniquity then appears.

What is he calls upon me, and would seem to lack a Ere his words be half spoken I am with him in a trice; Here, there, and every where, as the cat is with the

Here, there, and every wasse, mice:
True vetus iniquilas. B. Jons. Devil is an Au., i, l.
Mirth. How like you the vice in the play? Expectations. Which is he? M. Three or four: Old Covtoonness, the sordid penny-boy, the money-bawd, who is a flesh-bawd too, they say. Tattle. But here is never a flend to carry him away. Besides, he has never a wooden dagger! I would not give a rush for a vice that has not a wooden dagger to anny at every body he meets. Mirth. That was the old way, goesp, when Iniquity came in, like Hokov Pokos, in a jugger's jerkin, with false skirts, like the knave of clubs.

B. Jons. Staple of News, 2d Interment.

vice. Covetousness: then follows that of Prodigality, and his lady Pecunia. In the old play of Cambises, Ambidexter is expressly called the Vice, and represents the vice of Fraud, as he says himself.

My name is Ambidexter, I signifie one
That with both hands can finely play.
Orig. of Drama, i, 262.
Fraud, covetousness, and vanity, the vices enumerated by Ben Jonson in the first quotation, were the most common. Vanity is even used for the Vice occasionally. See VANITY. Shakespeare gives us the Vice, Iniquity, and vanity, together, where prince Henry calls Falstaff

That reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that vanity in years. 1 Hen. IV, ii, 4. By the formal vice in the following passage, we may now understand that Shakespeare meant the regular Vice, according to the form of the old dramas, which I believe no commentator has before explained:

Thus like the formal vice, iniquity,
I moralize, two meanings in one word.

Rich. II, iii, 1.

In the same manner he has a formal man, for a complete man, one regularly made. See FORMAL. For this reason the Vice is called old Iniquity, in a passage above cited, and here also:

Sage above cites, and in the fit of miming, gets th' opinion of a wit.

B. Jons. Epigr., 115.

He had before said of the subject of his epigram, that he was

No vicious person, but the vice
About the town, and known too, at that price. Ibid. See VICE.

To INJURY, v., for to injure.

Wherefore those that are in authoritie, yea and princes themselves ought to take great heed how they injurie any man by word or deed, and whom they injurie, &c. Danet's Comines, L S.

+INKHORN. It was the custom for persons much employed in writing to carry ink, pens, &c., in a horn which could be attached to the person.

Attamentarium. Cornet a enere. An inkpot, inkbotle, or inkhorne.

Nomenclator, 1585. botle, or inkhorne.

botle, or inkhorne.

Long-coated, at his side

Muckinder and inckhorne tied.

Armin, Nest of Ninnies, 1608.

Lose not your bookes, inkhorne, or pens,

Nor girdle, garter, hat or band;

Let shooes be ty'd, pin shirt-band close,

Keepe well your points at any hand.

Coote's English Schoolemaster, 1632.

INKHORNE TERMS. Studied expressions, that savour of the inkhorn. very favorite expression, for a time. I know them that think rhetoric to stand wholly upon dark words; and he that can catch an inkhorne term by the tail, they count him to be a fine Englishman by the tail, they count him to be a fine Englishman and a good rhetorician.

Wilson's Art of Rhet., in Cens. Lit., ii, p. 2.

And to use an ynkhorne terme, or a strange word.

Gasc., edit. 1575, Ep. iv, a.

Is not this better farre

Than respice and precor, and such inkhorne tearmes As are intolerable in a common-wealth

The Weakest goes to the W., sign, E 1, b. In another place Gascoigne explains it: Epithetes and adjectives as smell of the inkhorne.

See also Hart's Orthogr., f. 21.

One author has changed it to inckepot termes :

To use many metaphors, poetical phrases in prose, or incke-pot termes, smelleth of affectation.

Wright's Passions of the Mind, in Cens. Liter., ix, p. 175.

Wright's Passions of the Mind, in Cens. Liter., ix, p. 175.
This is the cause of so many unlearned gentlemen, whych (as some say) they understand not the ynkehorne terms that are lately crept into our language.

Institucion of a Gentleman, 1568.
The had they terme of inkhorne, ne of penne,
But plaine in speache, which gladly I espied.

Thynne's Debate between Pride and Loweliness.
And write so humerous dogmaticall,
To please my lord and lady What-d'ee-call,
With inkehorne tearns stiffe quilted and bumbasted,
And (though not understood) yet are well tasted.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.
TWherfore I mervaile how our English tongue hath erackt its credit, that it may not borrow of the Latine tWherfore I mervaile how our English tongue hath crackt its credit, that it may not borrow of the Latine as wel as other tongues; and if it have broken, it is but of late, for it is not unknowen to all men how many wordes we have fetcht from thence within these few yeeres, which, if they should be all counted inkpot tearmes, I know not how we should speak anie thing without blacking our mouths with linke.

The Civile Conversation of M. Stephen Guazzo, by Pettie, 1888.

INKHORNISM. A word apparently coined by Hall, from the preceding phrase. [Nares is wrong; an example of the word has been quoted from Wilson's Rhetorike, fol. 82, printed in 1553.7

In mightiest inkhornisms he can thither wrest.

Satires, i, 8. INKHORN-MATE. from the same allusion. A bookish or scribbling man.

And ere that we will suffer such a prince, So kind a father of the common-weal, To be disgraced by an ink-horn mate, We, and our wives and children, all will fight.

Alluding to the bishop of Winchester. +INLACED. Interlaced.

Thou there wouldst carve thy name, inlaced with Th' inhumane title which proclaims thee stil To be Amyntas the young hunter, and to love An enemy profest. Phillis of Scyros, 1655.

INN, s. For a house or lodging in Used particularly in the phrase "to take up his inn." See TAKE ONE'S EASE.

Now had the glorious sunne tane up his inne, And all the lamps of heav'n inlightened bin. Browns, Brit. Past., I, iii, p. 63.

Which good fellowes will sone take a man by the sleve, and cause him to take up his inne, some with beggary, &c.

Ascham. Tozoph., p. 47, n. ed.
When Jove-born Phoebus' fierie steeds about the world had bin,

And, wearied with their yearly taske, had taken up their inne

Far in the south. Mirror for Mag., p. 555. Some of them alreadie have gotten readic passage and taken up their innes in the greatest marchauntes parlers. Holisuked, 1877. parlers.

Now, quoth Robin Hood, I'll to Scarborough,

It seems to be a very fine day: He took up his inn, at a widow woman's house,

Hard by the waters gray.

Robin Hood, the noble Fisherman.

To INN. To lodge.

Inn any where : continuance maketh hell. Dr. Donne.

It is used also for to house corn:

Late harvest of corne, so that the same was scarcely inned at S. Andrew's tide. Stowe's Annals, L S.

The latter sense is hardly obsolete. See Johnson.

this is a busic month with the farmers in the country inning of their corn, and thereof cometh profit; a busic month with the pick pockets at Bartholomew-fair, and thereof cometh hanging.

Poor Robin, 1707.

INNS-A-COURT. This odd corruption of inns of court is by no means an erratum, where it is found, but was the current mode of speaking and writing at the time.

Much desired in England by ladies, inns a court gentlemen, and others. Wil's Interpr., p. 27, 1655. A young innes a court gentleman is an infant newly crept from the cradle of learning to the court of liberty. Lenton's Leasures, 1631, Char. 29.

INNATED, part. adj. Inborn, innate. This seems to have been originally the more common form.

In the true regard of those innated virtues, and fair parts, which so strive to express themselves in you, I am resolved to entertain you to the best of my

I am resolved to entertain you to the best of my unworthy power.

B. Jons. Every Man out of his H., ii, S. O save me, thou innated bashfulness!

Makeontent, O. Pl., iv, 101.

Till love of life, and feare of being forc't, Vanquisht th'innated valour of his minde.

Daniel, Civil Wars, B. ii, p. 60.

Their countenances labouring to smother an innated aweetnes and chearefulnes.

aweetnes and chearefulnes.

Decker's Entertainment of James I, 1604, E 4.

†Sure I am, that God takes my part in resisting and writing against these crying crimes, and I am perswaded that your majestie hath an ismated Christian hatred of them.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

INNATIVE, adj. Innate, originally implanted. [Chapm., Il., iv, 524, uses the word as applied to the roots of a tree.]

And look how lyons close kept, fed by hand, Lose quite th' innative fire of spirit and greatnesse. That lyons free breathe.

Revenge of Bussy D'Ambois, D 3. An INNOCENT, s. An idiot; as being naturally incapable of sin.

There be three kinds of fools, mark this note, gentle-

There or the comment of the comment

So far from what she was, so childiably, So silhly, as if she were a fool, An innocent.

Two Nob. Kinsm., iv, 1. Again, if you be a cuckold, and know it not, you are an innocent; if you know it and endure it, a true martyr.

Basticard Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 299. Do you think you had married some innocent out of the hospital, that would stand with her hands thus, and a playse mouth, and look upon you.

B. Joss. Epicame, iii, 4.

†INNOCENT, s. An innocent person. Beare witnesse I die an innocent.

Gough's Strange Discovery, 1640. +INNORMITY. A word used in the true "Tragedie of Richard the Third" to signify not being within the legal age to reign. P. 11.
But say, Lodwicke, who hath the king made protector

During the innormitie of the young prince.

INSANE ROOT. A root causing insanity; conjectured to mean hemlock. Were such things here, as we do speak about? Or have we eaten of the insene root

That takes the reason prisoner? This auotation would not prove much, without the corroborating passage from Ben Jonson: They lay hold upon thy senses

As thou hadst snufft up kemlock. Sejanus, act iii.

Where afterwards it is rather represented as deadly than intoxicating. Ît is not improbable, as Mr. Malone observes, that Shakespeare had rather a general notion of some root which would produce that effect, than of anything precise. In general, the root of hemlock is not considered as the operative part.

This particular property of deceiving the sight with imaginary visions is attributed to hemlock, in the following passage adduced by Mr. Steevens:

You gar'd against the sun, and so blemished your sight; or else you have eaten of the roots of hemisel; that makes men's eyes conceit sussen objects.

Greene's Never too late, 1816.

INSANIE, s. Madness; an affected word, coined for the pedant Holo-

This is abhominable (which he would call abominable) it insinuateth me of insense.

Lone's L. L. v. 1. Love's L. L., v, 1.

To INSCONCE. To fortify, to inclose with security; the same as to ensconce. From sconce, a fortification. See Ensconce.

An you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and insconce it too, or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. Com. of Mrr., fi, fi.

Look an he have not inscens himself in a wooden castle.

Match at Midn., O. Pl., vii, 386.

I'll beard and brave thee in thy proper towne,
And here inskones myself despite of thee.

Danter's Orlando, B 3.

To INSCROLL. To write in a scroll.

Had you been as wise as bold. Had you been as wise as ooid,
Young in limb, in judgement old,
Your answer had not been isscroff'd,
Fare you well, your suit is cold.

Merch. of Fes., ii, 7.

Dr. Johnson would read, "This answer." instead of "Your answer:" which might, indeed, be better, but does not seem important. He supposes, not improbably, that the contractions y' and y', for this and your, might be confounded.

To INSCULP. To carve or engrave, on any solid substance.

They have in England
A coin that bears the figure of an angel,
Stamped in gold; but that insculpt upon.
But here an angel in a golden bed
Lies all within.

Merch. of Ven., ii, 7. Insculp'd upon, means cut or carv'd on the outside of the gold. And what's the crown of all, a glorious name

And what's the crown of all, a glorious name Insculp'd on pyramids to posterity.

Matsing. Bashful Lover, iv, 1.
Engraven more lyvely in his minde, than any forme may be insculped upon metall or marble.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. ii, 8 4.

INSEPARATE, part adj. Not to be separated, or rather, that ought not to be separated; that is, the vows of lovers. Within my soul there doth commence a fight Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate Divides far wider than the sky and carth.

Tro. and Cr., v, 3.

+INSERTED.

I met with a resary or beads of inserted people, sorrowful and unfortunate, and I did for them that which my religion exacts.

History of Don Quizote, 1675, f. 73.

†INSESSION. A term in medicine.

Also ointments, baths, inssessions, foments, and other such like medicines made of things having restrictive vertue, do profit. Barrough's Method of Physick, 1624.

To INSHELL. To contain within a shell. A word, I believe, peculiar to Shakespeare.

Sinkespeare.
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world,
Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome.
Coriol., iv, 6.

To INSHIP. To put into a ship; we now say to ship.

Where inskipp'd Commit them to the fortune of the se

1 Hen. VI, v, 1. When she was thus inshipp'd, and woefully Had cast her eyes about. Daniel, cited by Todd.

To INSINEW. To strengthen as with sinews, to join firmly.

All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action.

2 Hen. IV, iv, 1. INSISTURE, s. Regularity, or perhaps station. A word not found but in this place.

The heavins themselves, the planets, and this centre, Observe degree, priority, and place, Insisture, course, proportion, season, form, Office, and custom, all in line of order.

Tro. and Cress., i, 3.

INSTANCE, s. Motive, cause. The instances that second marriage move, Are base respects of thrift and not of love

. Haml., iii, 3. Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance.

Rick. III, iii, 3

In the following singular passage it seems to mean proof, example: Instance, O instance! Strong as Pluto's gates, Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:

Cressia is mine, then with the bonds of heaven; Instance, O instance! strong as heav'n itself; The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd.

Tro. and Cress., v, 2.

Used also for information; and, in fact, with great laxity, by Shakespeare.

To INSTILE. To give a name, style, or title to; we now say to style.

Be thou alone the rectress of this isle,
With all the titles I can thee instile.

With all the titles I can thee instile.

Drayt. Leg. of Matilda, p. 563.

Gladness shall clothe the earth, we will instile
The face of things an universal smile.

Crashaw's Porm, republ. ed., p. 73.

†Salt, builders, husbandmen, and starres that shine,
(Inflamed with the light which is divine)
And with these names, within that booke compil'd,
They with the stile of shephcards are instil'd.

Tsylor's Works, 1630.

†Thy verse is nameless, though not worthless, while Others their worthless verse with names instile.

Oven's Epigrams in English, 1677.

STITUTE, part. adi. Instituted

INSTITUTE, part. adj. Instituted, taught, educated.

Thei have but few laws. For to a people so instruct and institute, very few do suffice.

Robinson's Utopia, Q b.

INSTRUCT, for instructed: in the above passage. †INSUDATE. Accompanied with sweat-

And such great victories attain'd but seild,
Though with more labours, and insudate toyles.

Heywood's Trois Pritanics, 1609.

†INSULTATION. Insulting exultation. NSULTATION. INSULTING CAUSESSON.

He does not think his body yields a more spreading shadow after a victory, than before; and when he looks upon his enemy's dead body, 'tis with a kind of noble heaviness, not insultation.

Overbury's Characters.

INSUIT. For suit or request.

And, in fine,
Her insuit coming with her modern grace
Subdu'd me to her rate. ⊿il's W., v, 8.

INSUPPRESSIVE, adj., for insuppres-Not to be suppressed. See sible. IVE.

But do not stain The even virtue of our enterprize, Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our apirits. Jul. Cas., ii, 1. Mr. Todd has found this word in Young.

30

INT seems to be put for a species of sharper. A cant term, I presume.

Flankt were my troups with bolts, bauds, punks, and panders, pimps, nips, and ints, prinados, &c.

Honest Ghost, p. 231.

In that place it seems to have had another initial letter; but the same author, I believe [R. Braithwaite], distinctly writes it int, in Clitus's Whimzies, where he has nearly the same:

His nipps, ints, bungs, and prinados.

Page 12. To INTEND. To protend or stretch

With sharp intended sting so rude him smott, That to the earth him drove as striken dead. Spens. F. Q., I, xi, 38.

To attend to, or be intent upon: When you please You may intend those royal exercises

Suiting your birth and greatness.

Massing. Emp of the Bast, i, 1.

Massing. Dmp of one Lean. Why do you stop me?

Lean. That you may intend me.

The time has blest us both: love bids us use it.

B. J. Fl. Spanish Curate, iii, 4.

See also O. Pl., vi, 541. Milton used this sense. See Johnson.

Also to pretend:

Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;
Speak, and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion.

Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend
That all is done in reasonable and of her. Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend That all is done in reverend care of her.

Pope reads "I'll pretend," which is only an explanation of the other.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed Intending weariness with heavy spright.

Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 480.

In the following passage it has been falsely explained "attending to;" it certainly means pretending, affecting, to denote the falseness of the persons applied to:

And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps, and cold-moving nods,
They froze me into silence. Timon of Athens, ii, 2 †Soe that I will now, after Munday, intend your busines carefully, that the company shall aknowledg themselfs bound to you, I doubt not.
Letter in Alleyn Papers, 1613.

Intend is used by Chapman, Il. x, 455, for portend.

INTENDIMENT, s. Understanding, knowledge.

For shee of hearbes had great intendiment Spens. F. Q., III, v. 32.
So is the man that wants intendiment.

Ibid., Tears of Muses, v, 144.

INTENDMENT, s. Intention, design.

And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak, And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sh. Venus and Adonic, Suppl., i. 414. I came hither to acquaint you withal; that cither you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into.

We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot.

I, spying his intendment, discharg'd my petronel in his bosom. B. Jons. Every Man in his H., iii, l. INTENIBLE, a. Incorrectly used by Shakespeare for unable to hold; it should properly mean not to be held, as we now use untenable.

I know I love in vain, strive against hope,
Yet in this captious and intenible sieve
I still pour in the waters of my love.
And lack not to lose still.

All's Well, i, S. And lack not to lose still.

+INTENT. To accuse, charge with. They were her errors, whilst she intented Browne.

Verses prefixed to Brown's Pastorals.

+INTENSIVE. Earnest, intense. Herenpon Salomon said, kisse me with the kisse of thy mouth, to note the intensive desire of the soule. Passenger of Benzenuto, 1612.

+INTENTION. Intensity of observation, the old sense of the word.

INTENTION, s. Attention; according to the analogy of all these words. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass.

Merry W. W., i. 3.

INTENTIVE, and INTENTIVELY, for attentive, and attentively.

To bring forth more objects
Worthy their serious and intentive eyes.
B. Jons. Every Man ont of his H., Induct.
All with intentive car,

Converted to the enemies' tents.

Chapman's Iliad, B. 10.

Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentirely.

For our ships know th' expressed minds of men;
And will so most intentirely retain

Their scopes appointed, that they never erre.

Ckapman's Odyssey, B. 8.
†But the Turkes, intentire to that they had before determined.

Knolles Hist. of Turks, 1003.

INTENTOS. Blount, in his Glossographia, has thought it worth while to give A goose intentos, as a Lancashire phrase for a goose on the sixteenth Sunday after Pentecost; that is, on our seventeenth after Trinity; which, it seems, was the original goose-day, and not Michaelmas day. His explanation of its origin is similar to that of LEGEM PONE, having a reference to the service of the day; because, in the collect for that Sunday, are the words, "bonis operibus jugitur præstet esse intentos ;" which, he says, the people understood to be something of in ten toes, which they applied to the goose. A good illustration, at least, of the edifying nature of Latin prayers to the people. This origin has been attempted to be refuted, but is most probably right. See Brand's Pop. Ant., i, 394, 4to ed. INTERCOMBAT, s. Fighting together.

The combat granted and the day assign'd,
They both in order of the field appeare,
Most richly furnish'd in all martiall kinde,
And at the point of intercombat were.

Daniel, Civil Wars, B. i, 68.

INTERDEAL, s. Traffic, intercourse: dealing between different persons.

The Gaulish speech is the very British, the which was very generally used here in all Brittaine,—and is yet retained of the Welshmen, Cornishmen, and Brittaines of France; though time working the alteration of all things, and the trading and interdeals with other nations round about have changed and greatly altered the dialect thereof.

Spenser on Ireland, p. 355, Todd's ed. To INTERESS. Certainly the original form of to interest; from intéresser, French. It has been suggested, with great probability, that the t may have acceded to this and some other words. from a mistake of the preterite for the present tense. Thus, interess'd, or interess't, was declined again, and became interested; graffed, or graff't, became grafted. So drown'd is also declined, by inaccurate speakers, and made drownded.

ade arounaeu.

To whose young love
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Lear, i, l. But that the dear republick,

Our sacred laws, and just authority,
Are interess'd therein, 1 should be silent.

B. Jons. Sejanus, iii, 1, p. 86.

The word is found in this form, as late as in Dryden's preface to his translation of the Æneid. See John-

INTERESSE, s. Interest.

But wote thou this thou hardy Titanesse, That not the worth of any living wight May challenge ought in heaven's interesse. Spens. F. Q., Canto vi of Book VII, St. 33.

So also Halifax's Misc., cited by Todd. INTEREST OF MONEY. The rate of interest has been gradually decreasing in this country in proportion to the increase of specie, and has been regulated by law, from time to time, as circumstances required or allowed. The statute of 37 Henry VIII, ch. 9, confined it to ten per cent., and so did the 13 Eliz., c. 8. By 21 Jac. I, c. 17, legal interest was reduced to eight per cent.; which, being mentioned as quite recent in the Staple of News, marks the date of that play:

My goddess, bright Pecunia,
Altho' your grace be fall'n, of two i' the hundred,
In vulgar estimation, yet am I
Your grace's servant still.

B. Jons. Stap. of News, ii, 1.

In the third scene of the same act it is more fully alluded to: but in the Magnetick Lady, ten per cent. is spoken of as the usual rate:

There's threescore thousand got in fourteen year, After the usual rate of ten i' the hundred.

. Act ii. sc. 6. John a Coombe, therefore, who is censured as an usurer, took only the legal interest of his time, according to the epitaph.

Ten in the hundred lies here engrav'd.

The subsequent reductions of interest were, to six per cent., 12 Car. II, c. 13; and to five, 12 Ann, St. 2, c. 16.

We may here observe, that the epitaph above cited was long attributed to Shakespeare by Rowe and others, but is now considered as belonging to Richard Brathwaite, in whose Remains (published 1618) it occurs as his. There are proofs sufficient that it could not be Shakespeare's. See vol. i. p. 80, ed. 1813. Variations are found in all the copies of it, but the most remarkable is in Aubrey's, who makes Combe exact twelve per cent., when ten only was legal.

Ten in the hundred the devill allowes.
But Combes will have twelve, he sweares and vowes;
If any one askes who lies in this tombe.
Hoh [probably Ho Ho] quoth the devill, tis my John a Combe. Letters from the Bodl., vol. iii, p. 538.

INTERGATORY, s. Interrogatory: apparently the original word.

apparently the Original word.

Let us go in,

And charge us there upon intergatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so; the first intergatory, &c.

Merch. of Ven., v. 1.

Slight, he has me upon intergatories: may, my mother shall know how you use inc.

B. Jons. Cynth. Rev., iv, 4. The modern editions have interrogatories; but the folio of 1616 reads it as above. In the following passage, also, intergatory makes the verse perfect, and therefore was probably the word written, though not authorized by any edition; for Mr. Tyrwhitt was mistaken in saying that it is so in the first folio.

But, nor the time, nor piace,
Will serve our long intergatories; see,
Cymb., v, 5. Poshámus, &c. This instance has also been adduced by Mr. Reed:

Then you must answer To these intergatories. Brome's Novella, ii, 1.

INTERMEAN, s. Something coming between two other parts; an invention, as it seems, of Ben Jonson, who, in his play of the Staple of News, has an Induction, which is a conversation of Prologue with four ladies called gossips, Mirth, Tattle, Expectation, and Censure; between each act, he continues the discourses of the same Prologue interlocutors. excepted. under the title of the first, second, third, and fourth intermean. intermeans are intended to anticipate all objections to the piece, and to answer them; which is done with much wit, and much reference to the older imperfect dramas, which the vulgar still admired.

+INTERMEDDLE. To mix up with. Veritie is perfect, when it is not intermedied with falshood.

Devil Conjur'd, 1596.

To INTERMELL. To intermeddle. Johnson had quoted this word from Spenser, but erroneously, as Todd has noticed; but he has found it as a neuter verb in Marston, and a passive participle from it in bishop Fisher. The passage of the former is,

To bite, to gnaw, and boldly intermell
With sacred things, in which thou dost excell.

Scourge of Villanie, iii, 9. To INTERMETE, v. To intermeddle also; a word more ancient than the time of the writer, but given to the character of an antiquary, as characteristic.

Why intermete, of what thou hast to done? The Ordinary, O. Pl., x, 261. This interpretation, however, has been doubted, and the word is not otherwise exemplified.

In the following example it seems to mean to intermix.]

+Upon her cheekes the lillie and the rose
Did intermeet wyth equall change of hew, &c.

Gascoigne's Works, 1587.

INTERPARLE, s. A parley, conversation.

And therefore doth an interparte exhort.

Dan. Civ. Wars, ii, 23. To interrupt. †To Interpell. No more now, for I am interpell'd by many businesses.

Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

+To INTERPREASE. To press in between.

On th' Ithacensian sees Or cliffy Samian, I may interprease Waylay, and take lieve. Chapm. Odys., iv.

+INTERRUPTION. A term for a prorogation of Parliament, used in the seventeenth century.

+INTERTEX. To intertwine. Latin. Green leaves of burdocks and ivic intertexed and woven together. History of Don Quixote, 1675, f. 18.

+To INTERVERT. To turn anything from its right purpose.

And the other againe in a great chafe and griefe hereat, promised. That hee also shortly would give information, that Palladius being sent as an upright and uncorrupt notarie, had interverted and conveyed all the souldiers donative to his owne proper gaine.

Holland's Ammianus Marcellinus, 1609.

INTHRONIZATE, part, adj.

In the feast of all saintes, the archbishop—was is-thronizate at Canterburie. Holinsk., vol. ii, V 5, col. 2. IMTHRO'NIZED. The same; and always accented on the antepenul-tima, as probably the former word was also.

also.

Make me despise this transitory pomp,

And sit for aye inthronized in heav'n.

Edu: II, O. Pl., ii, 893. So it ought to be printed evidently, for the verse; and so it is in the original edition, quarto, 1598.

For the high gods inthronized above,
From their clear mansions plainly do behold
All that frail man doth in this grosser mould.

Drayt. Man in the Moon, p. 1326.

He was inthronized in all solempaities, in receiving his kingly ornaments, &c. Holinsh., vol. i, A 6.

†INTIRED. Wholly devoted?

And was to her intir'd. Heywood's English Tree., 1633.

INTITULED, part. Having a title in anything a claim upon it anything, a claim upon it.

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field.
Sh. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 476.
So I take entitled to be also used, in his 37th sonnet:

Butitled in thy parts do crowned sit. i. e., having a claim or title to thy parts.

To INTREAT. (Dr. Johnson spells it entreat, yet intreat is more prevalent. See ENTREAT.) To treat, to behave well or ill to a person.

Speak truth and be intreated courteously.

B. Jons. Case is Alter'd, act iii, vol. vii, p. 359. Hence to use the time, to pass it:

My lord, we must intreat the time alone.

Rom. & Jul., iv. 1.

INTREAT, s. Intreaty.

And, at my lovely Tamora's intreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Til. Andr. i. 2

And either purchase justice by intrests,

And either purchase justice by intreats,
Or tire them all with my revenging threats.

Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 179.
But I, with all intreats, might not prevail.

Robert E. of Hustington, 1601, D 4.
Hath sent his commends to you, with a kind intreat that you would not be discontented for his long absence.

Westward for Smelts, B 4. The late editor of Ford's plays altered intreaties, which was in the copy, to intreats, in the following passage, for the sake of the verse; but he does not seem to have been aware that it was so common among Ford's contemporaries.

A word from you

May win her more than my intreats or frowns.

Ford's Love's Sacrifice, i, 1.

The alteration is doubtless right. †To the scornefull, I owe you so much as an hypocriticall intreat, or a dissembled curtesic.

Heywood's Great Britaines Troy, 1609.

[Also, a treatment, medicinally.]
A good intreat for wounds.—Take betony, pimpernell, and vervaine, of each a handfull, boile them in a pottell of very good white wine, &c. Pathway of Health, bl. 1.

+INTREATAUNCE. Entreaty.

For he made such meanes and shyfte, what by in-treataunce and what by importune sute, that he gotte lycence.

More's Utopia, 1551.

+1NTREATMENT. Treaty; negotiation. Declaring the cause of theyr commyng, the whiche in effect was for intreatement of peace . betwitte the two realmes.

Holinshed, 1577.

Treatment: as to in-INTREATY. .. treat, above.

Praying him not to take in ill part his intreaty and hard imprysonment, for that he durst none other. Palace of Pleas., vol. ii, O o 7.

INTRENCHANT, adj. Not permanently divisible, not retaining any mark of division. It seems an incorrect usage, and we have no other example of it.

As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air With thy keen sword impress. Shakespeare has elsewhere called the air invulnerable, speaking of the ghost in Hamlet. See Johnson on this word. Trenchant means cutting; intrenchant, therefore, ought to be not cutting.

+INTRINSECALL. Internal.

How far God hath given Satan power to do good, for the blinding of evill men, or what intrinsecal opera-tions he found out, I cannot now dispute.

A. Witson's Autobiography.

Also used as a n. s.

For myself, my dear Phil, because I love you so dearly well, I will display my very intrinsscalls to you in this point, when I examine the motions of my heart. Howell's Familiar Letters, 1650.

INTRINSICATE, or INTRINSECATE, adj. Intricate. Johnson thinks it formed corruptly between intricate and intrinsecal; Theobald from intrinsecus, or the Italian intrinsecursi.

trinsecus, or the Italian intrinsecurs.

Come, thou morial wretch,

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie.

Ant. and Cleo., v, 2.
Yet there are certain puntilios, or (as I may more nakedly insinuate them) certain intrinsecute strukes and wards, to which your activity is not yet amounted.

B. Jons. Cyth. Rev., v, 2.

Like rats oft bite the holy cords in twain,
Too intrinsecute t' unloose, sooth every passion.

Lear, ii, 2.

Lear, ii. 2. The folio here reads intrince; the quartos, still more corruptly, in- \bar{t} rench.

INTUSE. s. A bruise or contusion; from intusus. Latin. Peculiar to Spenser.

The flesh therewith she suppled and did steepe
T abate all spasme, and soke the swelling bruze;
And after having searcht the intuse deepe,
She with her scarf did bind the wound from cold to Spens. F. Q., III, v. 33.

To INVASSAL. To enslave: from in and vassal.

Whilst I myself was free
From that intolerable misery
Whereto affection now intessels me.
Daniel, Queen's Arcadia, ii, 1, p. 339.

INVECT, for inveigh. Fool that I am, thus to invect against her.

B. and Pl., Faithful Pr., iii, 3.

INVECTIVELY, adv. Abusively; from invective used as an adjective. Thus most inrectively he pierceth through The body of the country, city, court.

As vou like it, ii, 1. To INVENT. To meet with casually.

Far off he wonders what them makes so glad;
Or Bacchus' merry fruit they did issent,
Or Cybele's frantic rites have made them mad.
Spens. F. Q., I, vi. 15.
And vowed never to returne againe,
Till him alive or dead she did issent. Ibid., III, v. 10.

INVESTMENT, s. Dress, habit, outward appearance.

Whose white investments figure innocence. 2 Hen. IV. iv. 1. Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers, Not of that dye which their investments show.

INVIERD, part. Apparently for environed.

Unnatural beseege, woe me unhappie,
To have escapt the danger of my locs,
And to be ten times worse invier'd by friends.

Edward III, 1896, D1 b.

+INVIRTUED. Endowed with virtue. Apolloes sonne by certaine proofe now finds
Th' invertued hearbes have gainst such poyson power.

Heywood, Troia Britanics, 1609.

+INVICTIVE. Incapable of being conquered; if not an error for vindictive.

If thou wouldst kisse and kill, imbrace and stabbe, Then thou shouldst live, for my issuicties braine Hath cast a glorious prospect of revenge. Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631.

To INVOCATE. To invoke. Henry the Fifth, thy ghost I invocate. 1 Hen. FI, i, 1. Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost. Rich. III, i, 2.

Milton has used this word. See Johnson.

INWARD, adi. Intimate, closely connected in acquaintance or friendship.

Who knows the lord protector's mind herein? Who is most inward with the noble duke?

Come, we must be inward, thou and I all one.

Mulcontent. O. Pl., iv. 77.

I love him,
And by my troth would fain be inward with him.
B. and Fl. Island Princess, act i, p. 276.
He will be very inward with a man to fish some bad out of him, and make his slanders hereafter more authentic, when it is said a friend reported it.

Earle's Micr., xxiv, p. 72. Bliss.
Basilius told her that had occasion, by one verie inward with him, to know in part the discourse of his life.

Pembr. Arcad., b. 56.

Pembr. Arcad., p. 55. An INWARD, s. An intimate acquaintance. Sir, I was an impard of his: a shy [qy. sly?] fellow was the duke.

Meas. for M., iii, 2.

The inward, the inside:

Wherefore break that sigh

Cymb., iii, 4. From the inward of thee? In the plural, entrails; which continued longer in use. The thought whereof Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards.

Othello, ii, 1.

INWARDNESS, s. Intimacy, attach-

And though you know my inwardness and love Is very much unto the prince and Claudio. laudio. Much Ado, iv. 1.

Mr. Todd supplies also an example from Bourgchier's Letters to Archbishop Usher, 1629.

To INWHEEL. To encircle: because a wheel is round.

Wilce: 18 Iounu.

Heaven's grace inwheel ye,

And all good thoughts and prayers dwell about ye.

B. and Fl. Pilgrim, i, 2. Many words of this class are merely arbitrary compounds, and might be multiplied to a great extent; but as they require no explanation, the labour would be superfluous.

To INWOOD, v. To go into a wood; a word cited only from sir Philip Sidney, and probably hazarded by him from the common analogy of composition.

He got out of the river and inwooded himself, so as the ladies lost the marking his sportfulness.

Sidney, cited by Johnson.

JOBBERNOULE. Thick-head, blockhead; from jobbe, dull, in Flemish, and cnol, a head, Saxon. Used as an appellative of reproach.

His guts are in his brains, huge jobbernoule, His guts are in his brains, huge jobbernoule, Right gurnet's head, the rest without all soule. Marst. Salires, II, vi, p. 200.

Thou simple animal, thou jobbernole, Thy basons, when that once they hang on pole, Are helmets strait.

Gayton, Pestiv. Noles, 1v, 11, p. 200.

No, miller, miller, dustipoul,
I'll clapper-claw thy jobbernoul. Grim, O. Pl., xi, 241.

No remedy in courts of Pauls, [pron. poles]
In common pleas, or in the rouls,
For jouling of your jobbernouls together.

Counterscuffle, Dryd. Misc., 12mo, iii, 340. Gauton. Festiv. Notes. iv. 17. p. 260.

JOHN-A-DREAMS. A name apparently coined to suit a dreaming stupid character; quasi, "dreaming John."

Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing.

The state of the state Haml., ii. 2.

By the manner in which this personage is there introduced, he seems to have been a well-known character: we find, however, nothing concerning him, nor anything nearer to his name than that of John-a-droynes, a clownish servant who is mentioned by Nash in his Have with you to Saffron Walden, &c., 1596; and the same is given to a clown in the old play of Promos and Cassandra, Part II, act iv, sc. 2. In an old translation of part of Homer, [Hall's Homer, 1581, Il. ii], the dream called up by Jupiter is styled, Johndreaming god. See Steeven's note on Hamlet, l. c.

JOHN DORY. A very popular old song, or catch, preserved in Deuteromelia, a book printed in 1609 as a sequel to Pammelia, a similar collection of roundelays and catches. It is reprinted in Ritson's Ancient Songs, p. 163, in Hawkins's History of Music, &c. John Dory appears, by the song, to have been a French piratical captain of a privateer, whose downfall is there recited. He is conquered by Nicholl, a Cornish man. It begins thus:

As it fell on a holiday,
And upon a holy tide-a,
John Dory bought him an ambling nag
To Paris for to ride-a.

This stanza is almost repeated by Bishop Corbett, in his poem called A Journey to France, p. 129. It is alluded to by Fletcher in the Chances. also in the Knight of the Burning Pestle, and elsewhere.

Being as worthy to sit, On an ambling tit, As thy predecessor Dory. Denh. Ballad on Sir John Mennis, Works, p. 74.

The tune, too, was in favour as a county dance:

Hunger is the greatest pain he [the fiddler] takes, except a broken head sometimes, and labouring John Dorye.

Microcome, p. 170. Bliss's edition.

†Where I'll tell you (while none mind us)
We throw th' house quite out at windows;
Nought makes them or me ought sorry,
They dance lively with John Dory:
Holy brethren with their poet
Sing, nor care they much who know it.

Drunkes Reseaby.

Drunken Barnabu. †Then viscount Slego telleth a long storie Of the supplie, as if hee sung John Dorie.

Kerry Pastorals.

+JOHN-A-NOAKES, seems to have been a popular name for a simple clown.

Then have I attended five or six houres (like John-a-Noakes) for nothing, for my cheating sharke having neither money nor honesty, hath never come at mee, but tooke some other paire of stayres, and in the same fashion coozened another water-man for his boat-hire.

Taylor's Workes, 1630. boat-hire. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

John a Nokes was driving his cart toward Croydon, and by the way fell saleepe therein. Meane time a good fellow came by and stole away his two horses, and went faire away with them. In the end he awaking and missing them, said, Either I am John a Nokes, or I am not John a Nokes. If I am John a Nokes then have I lost two horses, and if I be not John a Nokes, then have I found a cart.

Copley's Wits, Fils, and Fancies, 1614.

+JOHN-HOLD-MY-STAFF. servient person; a parasite.

And here it is the fortune of a man to be married to a woman of so peevish and domineering a temper that she will wear the breeches and the cap too: so that the poor fop at home is like John-Hold-my-staff; she must rule, govern, insult, brawl, &c.

Fifteen Comforts of Matrimony, n. d.

JOHN, SWEET. A flower of the pink kind. Sweet johns and sweet williams are given by Gerard as different species of armeria. The former are divided into white, and red and white; the latter are spoken of in this passage, after speaking of gelofers and pinks:

The john, so sweete in showe and smell, Distincte by colours twaine.

About the borders of their beds In seemelie sight remaine. Plat's Flowers, in Cens. Lit., viii, p. 8.

See Johnson's Gerard (1636), p. 597. The name of Sweet Williams still The johns, according to the cut in Gerard, are not so closely clustered. See also GILLOFER.

+JOINED-WORK. An old term for wainscoting.

Opere intestino vestire parietes. Lambrisser. To cover wals with wainscot or joyned worke. Nomenclator. JOINT-RING. Probably a ring with joints in it. Othello, iv. 3. See GIMMAL.

JOINT-STOOL, prov. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool! odd proverb seems to have been intended as a ridiculous instance of making an offence worse by a foolish and improbable apology; or, perhaps, merely as a pert reply, when a person was setting forth himself, and saving who or what he was. The fool uses it in King Lear, in the following manner:

F. Come hither, mistress, is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

P. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear, iii, 6. Where, possibly, poor Lear, in his insanity, was intended literally to mistake a joint-stool for his daughter. It is alluded to also by Kate, in the Taming of the Shrew, who, when Petruchio asks her what she means by a moveable? replies, "a jointstool." Tam. Shr., ii, 1. Ray has it among his Proverbs, p. 202, but without any explanation. It occurs also in Lyly's Mother Bombie, act iv, sc. 2.

JOINTRESS. s. One who holds a jointure.

Our queen Imperial jointress of this warlike state. Haml., i, 9. JORNET, s. Apparently a kind of cloak.

Constables, the one halfe—in bright harnesse, some over gilt, and every one a jornet of scarlet thereupon, and his henchman following him.

Stowe's London, 1590, p. 75.

+To JOSSEL. The old manner of spelling jostle.

The weight of business lying on him, might make him incounter him with some miscarriages through youth and ignorance (great imployments often meeting with envy, and jossels them in the way. Wilson's James I.

JOUISANCE, Enjoyment: 8. written by Spenser jovysaunce. It is one of the antiquated words which that poet particularly introduces into his pastorals; judging properly that old words are retained in provincial dialects much longer than in polished speech.

CCII.
To see those folks make jorysaunce,
Made my heart after the pipe to daunce.
Shep. Kal., May, v, 25.

He uses it again in November, v. 2.

Cheeke-dimpling laughter crowne my very soule With jouisance.

Marst. Sal., Ill, xi, p. 224.

DURING, s. Swearing. Perhaps a coined word, from juro, Latin. JOURÍNG, s. I pray that Lord that did you hither send,
You may your cursings, swearings, jourings end.
R. H. (Rob. Hayman's) Quodlibets, 4to, 1638. JOURNAL, adj. (the same as diurnal).

Daily; from journal, French. Daily; from journal, French.

Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting
To the under generation. Meas. for M., iv, 3.
Stick to your journal course, the breach of custom
Is breach of all.

And his faint steedes watred in ocean deepe, whiles from their journal! labours they did rest.

Spens. P. Q., I, xi, 31.

JOURNEY, s. A battle, or day of battle: from the French journée, which is used in the same sense.

But of all his jorneis he made, being generall over the armie of the Athenians, the jorney of Cherronesus was best thought of and esteemed.

was best thought of and esteemed.

North's Plut., p. 179.

Mette with him, and there slew him, to the great disturbance and stay of the whole journey.

Holinaked, vol. i, Z 7.

Belonging to Jupiter; JOVIAL, a. from Jove.

His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh; The brawns of Hercules; but his Jovial face. Cymb., iv. 2.

And afterwards Jupiter save. Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth. Ibid., v. 4. So in Heywood's Rape of Lucrece:

Thou Josial hand, hold up thy scepter high.

And in his Golden Age, where Jupiter is spoken of:

All that stand Sink in the weight of his high Jovial hand.

Sink in the weight of his high Jovial hand.

+JOWL. The jaw.

He might be an oxe for his joule, a bull for his necke, a cow for his belly, and a calle for his wit, I make no question.

Man in the Moone, 1609.

For drinking healths, and being churched so.

They checke by jowle may with each other goe.

Excelents, Knawe of Sp. f. D.

Besides, a woman need not be asham'd to sit jig by jowle with the best of the parish, and who dare say, Black is her eye.

The Checke, 1862.

To JOY, for to enjoy.

JOY, for to enjoy.

And let her joy her raven-colour'd love.
Only the use of armes, which most I joy,
And fitteth most for noble swayne to know.

Spens. F. Q., VI, ii, 33.
There in perpetual, sweet, and flowring spring,
She lives at ease, and joys her lord at will.

You loyal ladies, doo you think in faith,
That highest honour joyes most sweet content.

Brandon's Octasia, A 6, b.

†Though by the dukes allowance I am her priviledg'd attendant, yet such is the devilishnes of Dametas, that I cannot joy so much accesse as to confer with her.

Re of Gulls, 1633. The of Gulle, 1633.

JOYANCE, s. Enjoyment. Which gave him hopes, and did him halfe persuade, That he in time her joyance should obtaine.

Spens. P. Q., VI, xi, 7.

Also rejoicing:

Also rejoicing:
And made great joyance that it should be so.

There with great joyance, and with gladsome glee,
Of faire Pmana I received were.

Spens. F. Q., IV, viii, 59.

IPOCRAS. See HIPPOCRAS.

IRISH. A game differing very slightly from backgammon. It is described in the Compleat Gamester, 1680, p. 109. Under Backgammon, we are told that this difference consists in the doublets, "which at this game is plaid fourfold, which makes a quicker dispatch of the game than Īrish." P. 110.

Yet, Prue, 'tis well; play out your game at irish, sir; who wins? Mistr. O. The trial is when she comes to bearing. The inconstancy of irish filly represents the changeablenesse of human occurrences, since it ever stands on fickle that one malignant throw can quite raine a never so well built game. Hall's Hore Vacies, p. 149. 'A marchants wife, a quicke gamester at irish (especially when she came to bearing of men), that she would seldome misse entring. Taylor's Workes, 1630.

To IRK. Used impersonally in it irks, that is, it is painful or troublesome; from yrk, work, Icelandic. word, though not yet forgotten, has ceased to be current in common use. and seems to have been preserved in memory, chiefly by being known in schools as the translation of tædet.

And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools, Being native burghers of this desert city, Should in their own confines, with forked heads, Have their round haunches gor'd. As you like it, ii, 3.
Yet an he had kind words

Twould never irke 'un.

B. Jone. Tale of a Tub, ii, b.

But it was formerly used also as a personal verb for to hate, or be tired with:

with:
The Grekes chieftaines all irled with the war
Wherein they wasted had so many years
Surrey's 2d Encis, l. 18.
This ugly fault no tyrant lives but irles.
Mirr. Mag., p. 456.

IRKSOME, adj. Generally used in an active sense, giving pain or weariness; formerly sometimes passively, made sorrowful, sad, or wearied.

Dull wearines of former ngus,
Having yrockt asleep his irkesome spright.
Spens. P. Q., I, i, 55.
Yrkesome of life, and too long lingring night.
Ibid., I, ii, 4.

IRP, or IRPE, s. A word twice used by Ben Jonson, once as an adjective, and once as a substantive, but in both ways without a clear meaning; nor does its origin very readily appear.

Adjective:

If reguardant, then maintain your station brisk and irps, shew the supple motion of your pliant body, &c.

Cynth. Rev., in, 5.

Substantive:

From Spanish sbrugs, French faces, smirks, irps, and all affected humours, good Mercury defend us.

1bid., act v, Palinode.

IRRECURABLE, a. Incurable: to recure was commonly used for to cure. See RECURE.

Is forced to sustayne a most grevous and irrecurable fail.

Ulp. Fulw. Art of Flattery, F 2, b.

IRREGULOUS, a. Out of rule, disorderly; found only hitherto in the following passage:

Conspir'd with that irregulous devil Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord. Cymb., iv, 2. Some have proposed th' irreligious. To IRRUGATE. To wrinkle; from irrugo, Latin.

That the swelling of their body might not irrugate and wrinckle their faces.

Palace of Pleasure, vol. i, F 4.

IT PASSES. See Pass. ITALY. In the time of Shakespeare. Italy was the chief place whence England derived and copied the refinements of fashion. Forks and toothpicks were among the conveniences imported thence by travellers. See those articles. Shakespeare. with an inaccuracy common to all the writers of his time, and therefore doubtless thought allowable, attributes the same imitation to the age of Richard the Second, when it had not vet commenced:

Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy, apish nation,
Limps after in base imitation. Rick. II, ii, 1. One fashion, however, the natural good disposition of our people prevented them from borrowing, that of poisoning, which is alluded to once or twice in Cymbeline:

That drug-damn'd Italy hath outcrafted him. What false Italian What false Italian
(As poisonous tongued as kanded) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing?

ITALIANATE, part adj. Italianized; applied to fantastic affectation of fashions borrowed from Italy, as noticed above.

Fantastic complement stalks up and down,
Trickt in outlandiah fethers; all his words,
His lookes, his oathes, are all ridiculous,
All apish, childish, and Halianate.

Marlow's Old Fortunatus, Anc. Dr., iii, p. 150.

But quoted by Capell as from the Shoemaker a Gentleman, a comedy, published 1638; probably stolen from Marlow's, which was printed in

I am Englishe borne, and I have English thoughts; not a devill incarnate because I am Italianate, but hating the pride of Italic because I know their peevishnes. Greene's Notable Discoverie of Coosnage.

hating the pride of italic occause a know such peevishnes. Greene's Notable Discoverie of Coosnage. And finally all Italionate conveyances, as to kill a man, and then mourne for him, &c.

Nash, Pierce Penilesse, 1592. Thon art an Italian, poore Philautus, as much misliked for the vice of thy country, as she marvelled at for the vertue of hers: and with no lesse shame doest thou heare, how if any Englishman be infected with any misdemeanor, they say with one mouth, hee is Italienated; so odious is that nation to this, that the very man is no less hated for the name, than the country for the manners.

Lyly's Euphuse.

+To ITERATE. To repeat.

Whose empty wombe continuall murmur yeilds, And iterates againe each word it heares.

Heywood's Troia Britanica, 1609.

+ITERATE, adj. Repeated.

Wherefore we proclaim the said Frederick count Palatine, &c., guilty of high treason and iterate proscription, and of all the penalties which by law and custom are depending thereon. Wilson's James I.

JUDAS COLOUR. Red colour, of hair or beard. It was a current opinion. that Judas Iscariot had red hair and beard; probably for no better reason than that the colour was thought ugly, and the dislike of it was of course much increased by this opinion. Thiers, in his Histoire des Perruques, gives this as one of the reasons for wearing wigs: "Les rousseaux portèrent des perruques, pour cacher la couleur de leurs cheveux, qui sont en horreur à tout le monde, parce que Judas, à ce qu'on prétend, étoit rousseau." Page 22. The representations so common in tapestry, made these images familiar tapestry, made these images familiar to all ranks of people.

Ros. His hair is of the dissembling colour. Cel. Something browner than Indas's. As you like it, iii, 4. O let them be worse, worse; stretch thine art, And let their beards be of Judy's own colour.

Spanish Trag., O. Pl., iii, 198. What has he given her? what is it, gossip? a fair high standing cup, and two great 'postle spoons, one of them gilt. Sure that was Indas with the red brard. Middleton's Chaste Maid of Cheanids. 1830. Middleton's Chaste Maid of Cheapside, 1620.

Dryden has it in his play of Ambovna:

Receive me to your bosom; by this beard, I will never deceive you. Beam. I do not like his oath, there's treachery in that Judas-colour'd beard.

Dryden also, in a fit of anger, described Jacob Tonson With two left legs, and Judas-coloured hair.

Scott's Life of Dryd., p. 890. As Tonson is in the same attack described as "freckled fair," there can be no doubt that Judas' hair was always supposed to be red.

A red beard was considered as an infallible token of a vile disposition:

Why, cannot you lie, and swear, and pawn your soul for sixpence?——You have a carrot colourd beard, and that never fails; and your worship's face is a prognostication of preferment.

Shirley's Doubtful Heir, act v, p. 63.

It has been conjectured, that the odium attached to red hair originated, in England, from the aversion there felt to the red-haired Danes: which may or may not be true. Crine ruber was always a reproach to a man, though the golden locks of ladies have been so much admired. See CAIN COLOURED.

JUDICIOUS, a. Apparently for judicial; in regular process of judgment.

His last offences to us
Shall have judicious hearing.
Thor yet expect that her best industrie
Could raise her up unto the last degree
Of grace and favour, with judicious men, Of grace and favour, with phaterons men,
Who know the failings of my erring pen.
Phillis of Scyros, 1655.

+JUG-BITTEN. Drunk.

For when any of them are wounded, pot-shot, jug-bittes, or cup-shaken, so that they have lost all rea-sonable faculties of the minde, and in a manner are so mad, that they dare speake felony, whistle treason, and call any magnifico a mungrell.

Taylor's Workes, 1630.

†JUMBALS. A sort of sweetmeats. "Jumbals, certain sweetmeats." Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary. They are still, we believe, made in some parts

The best jumbals.—Take half a pound of white sugar, and as much fine flower, beat up the whites of two new lay'd eggs, and mix it with them, blanch a pound of almonds, and beat them well with half a pound of of almonds, and beat them well with hair a pound of sweet butter, and two spoonfuls of rose-water; to all these well mixed, put half a pint of cream, mould them into a paste, and make them into what form you please, rowl them in fine beaten white sugar, and bake them in a gentle oven.

Accomplish'd Pemale Instructor. An Italian coin, value six-A JULIO. pence; still, or lately, current in Italy by the same name. See Guthries' Table.

He spent there in six months Twelve thousand ducats, and (to my knowledge)

Tweive thousand ducats, and (to my knowledge).

Receiv'd in dowry with you not one julio.

White Devil, O. Pl., vi, 294.

†What sayest thou man? there is no religion in the world, but onely for forme; take here, and pay him, and give him this Julio over and above, to hang himself over the party of the p selfe, and so in Gods name let's be gone.

Passenger of Benvenuto, 1612.

JUMENT, s. Cattle of all kinds, or even a beast in general. Jumentum, In French, jument has become restricted to mean only a mare. Burton gives it as the translation of pecudes:

Formidolosum dictu, non esu modo, Quas herbas pecudes non edunt, homines edunt. Plaut. And tis a fearful thing for to report,
That men should feed on such a kinde of meat,
Which very juments would refuse to cat.

Anat. of Melanch., p. 69.

In another place the words rendered juments are brutis animalibus. P. 42. Sir Thomas Brown, whom Mr. Todd quotes, includes oxen, as well as horses and asses, among juments.

tI'd rather be his jument than his mistress.

Cartwright's Siedge, 1651.

†Those goodly juments of the guard would fight
(As they cat beef) after six stone a day.

Cartwright's Ordinary, 1651.

+JUMP-COAT. A close fitting vest. King Charles II, after his escape from Worcester, disguised himself "in a green cloth jump coat, threadbare, even to the threads being worn white. A. By'r lady, nothing but a drugget jump and a caster, a russet-gown for my wife Susan, a New Testament for the biggest lad, add three or four catechizes to give away in the country; here's the ladies catechize for the parsons wife.

The Country Formers Catechism, 1708. Tell me, prithee, Terpole, what long winded brother in a short jump coat did preach to day.

Cupid Stripp'd, 1708.

JUMP, adv. Exactly.

And bring him jump where he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife.

Others In Hamlet, act i, sc. 1, the old quarto reads, "jump at this dead hour;" which in the folios is changed to "just at this same hour."

Yon is a youth, whom how can I oreslip,
Since he so jumpe doth in my mashes hit.

Marston's Satires, iii, p. 147
And therefore the Greeks call it periergia, we call it over-labor, jumpe with the original.

Puttenham, Art of Poesie, p. 216

Sometimes, but more rarely, it is used as an adjective, meaning exact or suit able:

Acrostichs and telestichs on jump names. B. Jons. Exect. on Vulcan, vi, p. 406 He said the musike best thilke powers pleas'd

Was jumpe concord betweene our wit and will.

Pembr. Arcad., L. iii, p. 89?

Where not to be even jump

As they are here, were to be strangers.

B. & Fl. Two Noble Kinsm., i, ?

To JUMP WITH. To agree with, suit or resemble.

I will not chuse what many men desire, Because I will not jump with common spirits, And rank me with the barbarous multitude.

Mer. of Ven., ii, i
Well Hal, well: and in some sort it jumps with m humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can te 1 Hen. IV, i, !

you. Good wits may jump; but let me tell you, Eiron,
Your friend must steal them if he have them.

Muser Looking Glass, O. Pl., ix, 23.

"Wits jump" is still used as a pro verbial phrase.

This story jump'd just with my dream to night. With patience hear me, and if what I say Shall sump with reason, then you'll pardon me. Grim Collier, f.c., O. Pl., xi, 22 Or, without with, to agree:

Then wonders how your two opinions should jump in that man. Earle's Microc., § 66, p. 177, Bliss's ed. +JUMPISH. Dull; stupid?

All these things may well be said unto me, that be commonly spoken against a foole, as to be called a blockpate, a dulhead, an asse, a jumpich set; but none of these can be spoken against him, for his follie goes ust 111m, 1-2r his follie goes Terence in English, 1614 beyond all these JUMPLY. Suitably.

from.

Tet the affaires of this countrey, or at least my meeting so jumply with them, makes me absahed with the strangenesse of it.

Pem. Ar., L. v, p. 450. +JUNIPER. It was formerly supposed that the wood of juniper, when once lighted, would remain on fire a whole year if covered with its own ashes. Hence Ben Jonson, in the Alchemist (i, 3), talks of the the "coal of juniper" which the tobacconist kept for his customers to light their pipes

JUNKET, or JUNCATE. A sweet meat. or a dainty. Giuncata, Italian. Mr. Todd derives cheese-cake from this; but it is formed, much more simply. from cheese and cake; a cake made of a curd something like cheese.

You know there wants no junkets at the feast. Tam. of Shr., iii. 2. And making straight to the tall forest near,

Of the sweet flesh would have his junkets there.

Drayt. Mooncalf, p. 505.

The verb to junket is growing obsolete very fast, if it be not so alreadv. JUNT, s. A loose woman. Explained by the context only, for the word does not occur elsewhere. Daintily abused! you're put a just upon me;—a com-mon strumpet. Middleton, Trick to catch, fc., v, 1. +JUP. A petticoat; the lower part of the gown. Fr. jupe.

This play of ours, just like some vest or jup,
Worn twice or thrice, was carefully laid up.
Flecknoe's Epigrams, 1670.

+JURRE, v. To jostle. n. s. a shock, or blow.

Betweene these rockes that thus open asunder, and Betweene these rockes that thus open asunder, and intro one against another so often, if a fowle should happen to flye, by no swiftnesse of wing could she possibly escape and get away, but be crushed to death. Holland's damminance Marcellinus, 1609. Ensnared the yron front that it beareth out before (and in truth it resembleth a rammes head) with long ropes on either side, and so held it fast, that by returning backe againe it should not gather new strength, nor be able with thicke jurves and pushes, forcibly to strike the walls to any purpose. Line.

+JUSSEL. "A minced dish of several meats." Dunton's Ladies' Dictionary. JUSTICER, s. An administerer of justice. It appears that the justices of the peace were once technically called justicers.

O, give me cord, or knife, or poison, Some upright justicer! Cym This shews you are above, You justicers, that these our nether crimes Cym., v, 6.

You justicers, that these our new So speedily can venge!

Besides, the now ripe wrath (defer'd 'till now)

Of that sure and unfaying justicer,

That never suffers wrong so long to growe.

Daniel, Civ. Wars, v. 49.

How to my wish it falls out that thou hast the place of a justicer upon them. Eastw. Hoe, O. Pl., iv, 268.

JUTTY, s. A projecting or over-hanging part of a building.

part of a building.

No julty, frieze,
Buttress, or coigne of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendant bed, and procreant cradle.

Mact., i, 6. To JUTTY. To overhang; from to jut

As doth a galled rock

O'erhang, and jutty his confounded base.

Hen. V. iii. 1. A JUVENAL. A youth; from juvenie.

LACIII.

A most acute juvenal, voluble, and free of grace.

Love's L. L., iii, 1.

The juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not vet fledged.

2 Hen. IF, 1, 2. The pure not, we prove that the pure not yet fledged.

What wouldst? I am one of his juvenals.

Westward Hoe, 1607.

But thou, my pretty juvenall—must lick it up for a restorative.

Art of Jugling, &c., 1612.

The termination ive in English, regularly and properly gives an active signification to adjectives; as ivus, in Latin, and if, in French. Thus, active is that which acts, formative that which forms, repulsive that which repulses, &c.; but this analogy is not always preserved by our early writers, who occasionally give a passive sense to adjectives in ive. Thus,

tives in suc. 1 mus,
The protractive trials of great Jove;
Tro. and Cress., i, 3. mean the protracted trials; but, in the very next line, persistive is used for that which persists.

What seems more extraordinary, -ing, the termination of the active participle. is sometimes so used:

And ever let his usercalling crime Have time to wail th' abusing of his time. Sk. Rape of Lucr., Suppl., i, 533. For unrecalled, or unrecallable.

IVY-BUSH. The bush hung out at taverns was an ivy-bush, in which there appears a trace of classical allusion, as the ivy was always sacred to Bacchus; perhaps continued from Heathen times. "Vino vendibili suspenså hederå non est opus," is the Latin form of the proverb.

Things of greatest profit are set forth with least price.
Where the wine is neat there needeth no inic-back.

Duphace, A S.

The proverb is, "Good wine needs no bush;" but does not express what kind of bush might be wanted.

For the poore fisherman that was warned he should not fish, yet did at his doore make nets, and the olde vintener of Venice that was forbidden to sell wine, did notwithstanding hang out an ivie-bush.

Emphases and his Engl., A 4.

1 hang no ivie out to sell my wine,
The nectar of good wits will sell it selfe.

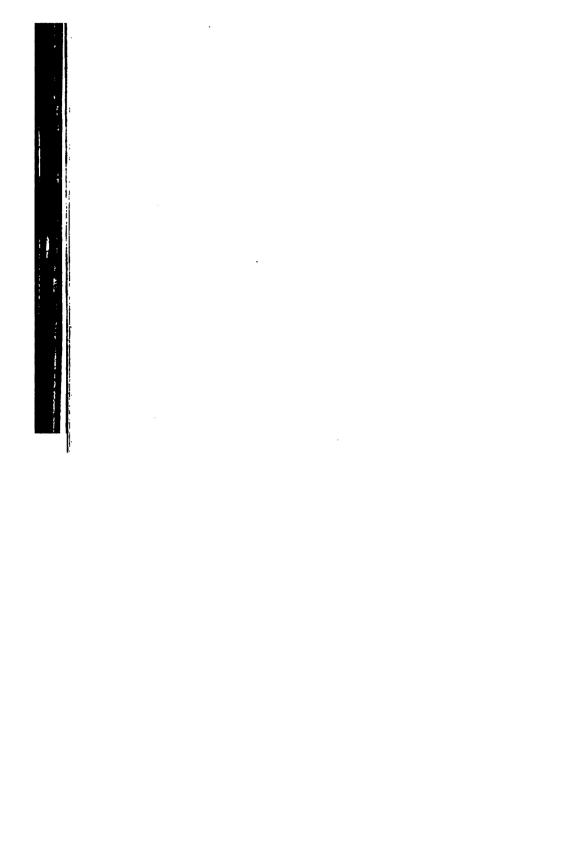

B. Allot, Engl. Parn. Sonn. To the Reader.

This good wine I present needs no ivy-bush.

Notes on Dn Bartes, 1621. To the Render An owl in an ivy-bush perhaps denoted originally the union of wisdom or prudence with conviviality; as, "be merry and wise." It is, however, true, that a bush or tod of ivy was usually supposed to be the favorite residence of an owl. See Todd.

END OF VOLUME 1.

	•

